

10 Nf

THE
FIRST PART
OF THE INSTITUTES
OF THE
LAWS OF ENGLAND.

OR, A
COMMENTARY upon LITTLETON.

Not the NAME of the AUTHOR only, but of the LAW itself.

Quid te vana juvant miseræ ludibria chartæ?
Hoc lege, quod possis dicere jure meum est.

Major hæreditas venit unicuique nostrum à jure et legibus, quàm à parentibus.

MART.
CICERO.

Hæc ego grandævus posui tibi, candide lector,
Authore EDUARDO COKE, MILITE.

THE THIRTEENTH EDITION,
REVISED AND CORRECTED.

WITH THE ADDITION OF NOTES and REFERENCES,

FROM THE BEGINNING TO FOLIO 195 INCLUSIVE,

By FRANCIS HARGRAVE, Esq. of Lincoln's-Inn.

AND FROM FOLIO 196 TO THE END,

With the PREFACE and INDEX to the NOTES,

By CHARLES BUTLER, Esq. of Lincoln's-Inn.

AND

An ANALYSIS of LITTLETON,

Written by an Unknown Hand in 1658-9, but never before published.

L O N D O N:

PRINTED BY T. WRIGHT,

For E. BROOKE, (Successor to Messrs. Worrall and Tovey), BELL-YARD, near TEMPLE-BAR.

M,DCC,LXXXVIII.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE EDWARD, LORD THURLOW, BARON THURLOW OF ASHFIELD, IN THE COUNTY OF SUFFOLK, LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR
OF GREAT - BRITAIN, THIS WORK IS,
WITH HIS LORDSHIP'S PERMISSION, RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED.

THE EDITOR'S ADDRESS to the PUBLIC.

THE very high and advanced price at which the twelfth edition of Sir Edward Coke's First Institute, or Commentary upon Littleton, has been sold for a long time past, is a proof, that a new edition is now wanted in order to supply the public demand. This of itself may be thought a sufficient reason for offering a new edition; but another, and more cogent motive concurs in inducing to such a proposal; for notwithstanding the advantages which may have been given to the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth editions, there still remains an ample field for further improvements. It is not intended, by this observation, in the least to derogate from the merit of those three editions; of which the tenth and eleventh are particularly thought by some to deserve commendation, as well on account of the care and industry exerted in correcting the errors of former impressions, as on account of the knowledge and judgement shewn in the additional notes and references. But a work like Sir Edward Coke's Commentary, so crowded with references to other books and authorities, will ever leave room for corrections; and being written on a subject so dependant, as the law necessarily is, on the opinions of the time present, and so frequently undergoing changes by acts of the legislature, will continually call for additions. These considerations may suffice to evince the propriety of attempting a new edition; but something further is requisite to recommend that now offered to the public; and therefore the editor will explain the plan, on which he proposes to conduct it.

Littleton's Tenures and Sir Edward Coke's Commentary will be printed from the second edition, that being generally esteemed the most correct one of the Commentary; but it will be occasionally compared with the first and other editions; all of which have been procured for that purpose. Also the text of Littleton will be collated with the Roban edition, which was that preferred by Sir Edward Coke, and a still earlier one by Letton and Mechlinia, which was printed in the life-time of Littleton, or within a year after his death, and has never yet been made use of in any edition of the Commentary. For the use of these two most curious and scarce editions of Littleton, the editor is indebted to the kindness of one, whose name he should think it an honour to be at liberty to mention. The editor is also provided with the curious editions of Littleton by Pynson and Redman, which are the next in date to the Roban edition. He is possessed too of an edition in 1534 by Rastell, and of most of the other editions of Littleton, which are very numerous; but these latter, not being of so great authority, will seldom be consulted. It is proper to add, that the editor proposes to give the various readings of four or five of the earliest editions of Littleton, which has never been attempted before. But no various readings will be given, except where they appear to the editor substantially to affect the sense of the author*; and therefore the reader will not find any in the first section; the difference of the several editions, so far as regards that section, being apparently quite immaterial. As to references, those in the first, second, and other editions of Sir Edward Coke's Commentary before the tenth, having been made by Sir Edward Coke himself, will be wholly retained, with such corrections only of apparent mistakes as shall occur to the editor. Many of the additional references in the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth editions will also be retained; it being intended only to omit such as the editor shall discover to be plainly foreign to the purpose. The editor is aware, that even some of Sir Edward Coke's own references have been complained of as not pertinent; which, when the prodigious number of them, and the great variety of public and private affairs which commanded his attention through life, are considered, may be accounted for, without any great reflection on his care and accuracy. But the editor would deem it a presumption in him to omit any part of the original work; though, in respect to the references, such a liberty is in very numerous instances taken in the twelfth edition†; and besides, he would by no means be understood to engage for an examination of every reference with the book cited, which is a task far greater than his other avocations will allow him to engage in‡. Further, it is proposed by the editor, to give some additional references, particularly to the Reports published since the twelfth edition; and some notes; but he avoids promising a great number of either, lest he should undertake more than he may hereafter be able to accomplish. However, in order to make amends for the smallness of the number of new notes and references||, great care shall be taken in the choice of them; and they

* This may seem not quite consistent with sometimes giving the word Nota as a various reading; but the reason of it is, that Littleton is thought by Sir Edward Coke to use the word Nota in a sense peculiarly significant. See Co. Litt. 22. a.—The various readings of Littleton, taken from the edition by Letton and Mechlinia, will be distinguished by L. and M. those from the Roban edition by Rob. those from Pynson's edition by P. and those from Redman's edition by Red. and if a reading should be taken from any other edition, it will be particularly mentioned. In Redman's edition there are references to cases in some of the more ancient Year Books, which it was once intended to have given as part of the various readings from Redman; but on re-consideration, they do not appear of sufficient consequence to be taken notice of.

† The editor has not yet found such a liberty taken in any edition, except the twelfth; but in that the omission of lord Coke's references is very frequent indeed, and he doubts whether many pages can be found without instances of it. In several pages he finds twenty or thirty references omitted, and in some forty or fifty. The truth of this will appear by examining fol. 4. b. and 5. a. of the twelfth edition with the same folios in any preceding one. The editor would not be so early in making this observation, if it was not with a view to shew, how unaccountable it is, that notwithstanding this suppression of a great part of the authorities, on which Lord Coke founds his opinions, the twelfth edition should sell for six pounds, whilst the price of some of the more early editions, though they contain the whole of the original work, and therefore are infinitely more valuable, is scarce as many shillings.

‡ It is necessary to mention this, lest the continuation of those mistaken references by lord Coke, which are to be found in all the former editions, should be imputed to the inattention of the editor of the present edition, and as a negligence not consistent with his engagements to the public. The editor may add, that many of the mistakes are of such a kind, that to correct them, and to refer to the books or authorities intended, would exceed his utmost diligence and power.

|| At first the editor doubted, whether it would be in his power to give the time necessary for writing many notes and references; but this first number of the work, he hopes, will convince his readers, how anxious he is to furnish a great number; and he will exert himself to the utmost in order to continue the work on the same enlarged plan. Having engaged in the undertaking, he is resolved at all events to make great sacrifices, rather than suffer it to languish in his hands.

THE EDITOR'S ADDRESS TO THE PUBLIC.

shall be so expressed, as clearly to shew whether they tend to confirm, to question, to contradict, or to illustrate the doctrine advanced in the text; a distinction very requisite for the convenience and information of the reader, though in new editions of law-books too frequently neglected. In the eleventh and twelfth editions, the new references are not distinguished from Sir Edward Coke's; but in this present edition it is thought proper to acquaint the reader, which belong to him, and which to his respective editors; and for that purpose, the additional references taken from the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth, editions will be inclosed between parentheses; and those, with the notes by the editor of this edition, with the various readings of Littleton, will be referred to by figures, and placed at the bottom of the page. Such a discrimination is a justice due to those from whom the references proceed, particularly to Sir Edward Coke; and, at the same time, must be a satisfaction to the reader.—The eleventh and twelfth editions contain some notes and additions, shewing the alterations in the laws since the time of Sir Edward Coke, which were printed separately at the end of the work. This has been found inconvenient; and therefore, in the present edition, they will be placed in the margin of the book where they respectively apply; except such of them as the editor shall find improper to be retained, or such as shall consist of extracts from acts of parliament, which, being too long for marginal insertion, will be omitted; and it is hoped, that the omission of those extracts will not be disapproved of, as a short reference to the statutes themselves, with an intimation that they have altered the law, will be substituted, which will equally answer the purpose of apprizing the reader*.—In all the former editions, the French text of Littleton's Tenures, and the whole of Sir Edward Coke's Commentary, were printed in the black letter; but in this edition only Roman and Italic letters will be used, which, it is presumed, will be both an agreeable and useful alteration in the printing; the black letter being generally deemed less pleasing, and more fatiguing to the sight, than either of the others.—In respect to the Index to the First Institute, it is at present intended, that it shall be the same as in the eleventh and twelfth editions; the editor thinking that having already undertaken so much, it would be imprudent to pledge himself still further, by entering into any engagement for making additions to the Index.

To the ninth and subsequent editions were added Sir Edward Coke's Readings on the Statute of Fines, and on Bail and Mainprize; to the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth was added his Copyholder; and to the two latter the Treatise of the Old Tenures was also added. All these tracts will be given in the present edition; but with this difference, that the Reading on the Statute of Fines, will be in English, and the Treatise of Old Tenures, instead of being in French only, will be accompanied with the Old English translation, as printed at the end of the first edition of the Terms of the Law. The original French of the Old Tenures is continued on account of the great antiquity of the book; but in the printing, the black letter will not be used.

Besides Sir Edward Coke's Tracts and the Old Tenures, the present edition will have an Analysis of Littleton, from a manuscript, dated 1658-9, which has never yet been printed. This Analysis is a methodical summary of Littleton, containing, not only a general view of the whole work, but also a particular one of each chapter. It accidentally fell into the hands of the editor. He is not informed who was the author; but it appears to him to be judiciously and ingeniously executed, and worthy of publication; and he hopes that it will not be deemed an improper addition, more especially as it will neither occasion the suppression of any other matter, or increase the price of the work to the purchasers.

To the whole will be prefixed a new Preface, by the editor of the present edition. In this Preface, he proposes, in the first place, to consider the merit of Littleton's Tenures and Sir Edward Coke's Commentary, and to point out the excellencies of each; in the next place, to give a particular account of the several editions of both; and lastly, to explain how this will differ from the former editions.

Such is the edition of Sir Edward Coke's First Institute, now submitted as a candidate for the public favour and encouragement; nor shall any exertion within the power of the editor be wanting to deserve them. He foresees that great pains and labour will be necessary to the effecting a due performance of his engagements, and that little fame can be expected from the most successful execution of an undertaking so humble as scarce to exceed that of a mere editor. But still he looks forward with pleasure. His veneration for the names of Littleton and Coke; his admiration of their writings; his persuasion that an attentive contemplation of them, by the improvement it must produce, will be its own reward; and his zeal to be instrumental in exhibiting them to the public eye, pure, genuine, and undisguised, and with as many advantages as a faithful and industrious editor can bestow: these were the considerations which chiefly prompted him to commence the undertaking; and these, he trusts, will continue to animate him till it is completed. If by perseverance and an unremitting ardor, the editor should succeed in his endeavours, he will then have the pleasing satisfaction of reflecting, that his labours have been useful, instructive, and agreeable to himself, and, at the same time, not wholly unprofitable or unacceptable to the community †.

FRA. HARGRAVE.

* The notes added in the 11th and 12th editions, exclusive of extracts from acts of parliament, are so few, that all put together scarce amount to so much as the additional matter given by the editor of the present edition in his first number; and he is now doubtful, whether he shall retain any of them in their original form. However, if he should, they shall be distinguished in the manner above mentioned.

† From some late circumstances there is reason to apprehend, that the editor's situation in respect to the work he has undertaken is greatly misunderstood. The entire conduct of the edition is intrusted to him; but he is not the proprietor of it; nor is he personally interested in the loss or profits which may attend the publication. His engagements to the proprietors of the edition are of a very limited kind. Those he has entered into with the public are very extensive. For the former engagements, a benefit, which was offered without any application on his part, is secured to him, independently of the event of the publication; but he can truly say, that it was the least of the considerations which induced him to undertake the work, and that he would still cheerfully renounce it, if by so doing he could render the work more valuable to the public. For his latter engagements he desires no other reward, than the approbation of those, for whose benefit his labours are intended.—The editor finds, that several respectable persons have expressed surprize at publishing the work by Numbers. This mode of publication, though in itself not liable to any great exception, has, by the abuse of it, become rather disreputable in the appearance; and therefore when it was first proposed to the Editor by the Proprietors of the Edition, he objected to it. But on considering the great and immediate expences incident to their undertaking, and the other reasons urged by them, they were found too cogent to be resisted; and the editor was the more easily induced to acquiesce, because he found the proprietors most ready to put themselves to every expence, which he recommended, for the purpose of rendering the work more acceptable to the public.

A D D R E S S

F R O M

MR. H A R G R A V E,

ANNOUNCING HIS RELINQUISHMENT OF THIS WORK, &c.

MR. HARGRAVE, the editor of so much of the NEW EDITION of COKE UPON LITTLETON as has been published, at length finds his relinquishment of the undertaking in an unfinished state quite unavoidable. Numerous and severe are the sacrifices, which he has heretofore made in order to accomplish the original proposals in their fullest extent. To this moment he feels the effect of those sacrifices; nor is he likely ever to conquer wholly the disadvantage already incurred from them. But it might be improper and disgusting to enter into particulars upon this head, which in its nature is too personal to the editor to be interesting to others. He will therefore be content with generally declaring, that his situation is become such, as to render him unequal to any longer sustaining the weight of those labors, which he has ever found incident to the work upon the extended plan of annotation adopted by him from the commencement of the edition, though certainly not belonging to it from the very limited professions and terms originally held out to the Public. It is from personal considerations, and in his own defence, that he thus adverts to having passed the bounds of the first undertaking in the actual execution: because, as he feels himself open to censure, from those indisposed to yield to indulgent construction, for having done LESS than he promised, he too plainly sees the necessity of striving to soften such censure by the recollection of his having also done MORE. In truth, had he not rashly exceeded the limits first prescribed, by wandering into the wide field of annotation, it is most probable, that the WHOLE of the edition would have been finished long ago, and consequently that the editor would not now have to mortify himself by apologizing for executing only ONE HALF of it*. This to be sure is the most favourable point of view for the editor; its tendency being to shew, that his excess of zeal to render the edition VALUABLE has been one cause of his finally leaving it IMPERFECT. If it shall be thought proper by others kindly to receive the editor's apology in this form, it will qualify his unhappiness at the painful and trying moment of separation from a very favorite work before its advancement into maturity. Should a less indulgent construction be applied to the editor, it will deeply wound feelings already enough exercised; but from a consciousness of being open to some degree of exception for what rigid observers may stile an indefeasible abandonment of a work so long promised to be completed, he must in that case kiss the rod, and submit himself to the severity of animadversion with a patient humility.

It is no small consolation to Mr. Hargrave to accompany this recital of his failure in the edition, with information of its having fallen into the hands of a professional gentleman † of such a description, as to warrant expecting from him a quick and able execution of the remainder of the undertaking. As Mr. Hargrave understands, his successor is prompted to engage in the work by an extreme partiality for it, and from having been in the habit of studying and annotating on the COKE UPON LITTLETON. He also possesses the important advantage of having long practised in the conveyancing line; to which, as Mr. Hargrave can speak from his own experience as a barrister in that branch of the law, a familiarity with the law of real property, and consequently with the writings of LITTLETON and COKE, is peculiarly essential. These and other considerations claim from Mr. Hargrave much beyond a hope, that the depending edition of COKE UPON LITTLETON will gain considerably by change of the editor; and that the new adventurer in this arduous undertaking will stamp the remainder of the edition with much greater value than could be reached by any efforts however vigorous from the original editor,

F R A. H A R G R A V E.

Boswell-Court, 18 Jan. 1785.

* The COKE upon LITTLETON, exclusive of the Preface and Index, consists of 393 folios or 786 pages. Mr. HARGRAVE has proceeded in the new edition and actually published to the end of folio 190 or page 380, which is exactly 13 folios short of one half of the work.

† CHARLES BUTLER, of Lincoln's-Inn, Esquire.

IN the original proposals for printing this work, it was mentioned to be then intended to include in it Lord COKE's Compleat Copyholder, and the other Tracts which had been printed with some of the latter editions of the COKE UPON LITTLETON: It has, however, on further consideration been thought adviseable to omit them, as having no immediate connection with this work; as also to avoid an unnecessary addition to the bulk and expence of the present volume. The insertion of them in this place, was apprehended to be the less necessary, a separate collection of them being already published in an octavo volume.

P R E F A C E

T O T H E

P R E S E N T E D I T I O N.

THE reputation of LITTLETON'S TREATISE on TENURES is too well established, to require any mention of the praises which the most respectable writers of our country have bestowed on it. No work on our laws has been more warmly or generally applauded by them. But some foreign writers have spoken of it in very different terms. At the head of these is Hottoman, who, in his Treatise "De Verbis feudalibus," thus expresses himself: "Stephanus Pasquierius excellenti vir ingenio, et inter Parisienses causidicos dicendi facultate præstans, libellum mihi Anglicanum Littletonium dedit, quo Feudorum Anglicorum Jura exponuntur, ita inconditè, absurdè, et inconcinne scriptum, ut facilè appareat, verissimum esse, quod Polydorus Virgilius, in Anglicâ Historiâ, de Jure Anglicano testatus est, stultitiam in eo libro, cum malitiâ, et calumniandi studio, certare." This passage from Hottoman is cited without any disapprobation in the 6th edition of Struvius's Bibliotheca Juris Selecta; but in the 8th edition of that work (Jenæ 1756) it is qualified by the words "singularia sed parum apta sunt, quæ Franciscus Hottomanus profert, &c." Gatzert, in his "Commentatio Juris exotici Historico-Literaria de Jure communi Angliæ," (Gottingen 1765) gives the following account of Littleton and his works: "Æqualis huic, tempore, æt doctrinâ, famâ et meritis longe superior fuit, immortalitatem nominis apud posteros, si quis unquam merito consecutus, Thomas Littleton; a quo juris studium inchoant hodie Angli, plane ut suum olim, ab edicto Prætoris et XII Tabulis, Romani. Hic igitur Ictus, ab solutis disciplinis academicis, jura patria mox cum plausu in Interiори Templo Londinensi, quæ paulo ante ibidem didicerat, aliquantum temporis professus, ab Henrico VI. ad officium primo judicandi in curia Palatii vocatus est. Advocati deinde ac procuratoris regii (king's serjeant) muneri a° 1455 admotus, judexque porro ambulatorius factus provincialis, (justice of assizes) et tandem inter judicantes communium placitorum curiæ a° 1466 ab Edoardo IV. relatus, dignus habitus est, qui multum ampliori, quam solebat, stipendio ordinisque adeo Balnei honoribus a° 1475 donaretur. Vivere desit a° 1533 *.—Unicum librum scripsit, sed qui plurimum loco est, si spectas eruditionem et argumentum. In eo excussit doctrinam juris patrii difficillimam, gravissimam, usuque quotidiano maxime commendabilem; qualia nempe, et quotuplicia sint feuda Angliæ, quænam eorum jura, obligationes, præstationes atque servitia. In usus quidem Richardi filii, et aliorum quorundam ad explicanda illis capita aliquot opusculi DE TENURIS ab incerto auctore Edoardi III. ævo conscripti. Gallice primo fuit compositus, mox Gallice deinde sapius et Anglice, mox vero Gallice et Latine, typis excusus. Viginti quinque servitiorum feudalium genera statuit, quæ tribus libris, in quos omne opus dispergitur, persecutus est. Titulum hunc esse voluit OF TENURES. In anno editionis originariæ a Cokio qui a° 1533 ponit dissentiunt, eamque circa a° 1477 non diu post inventam typographiæ artem prodiisse, valde vero similiter statuunt Biographi Brit. vol. V. qui cum Nicolsono, p. 233. late etiam de argumento imprimis, et divisione libri agunt. Editio duodecima 1738 lucem vidit. Cokius in præfatione sui ad Littletonum Commentarii, de quo mox disseram, inter plura quæ auctorem concernunt ejusque opus, XV. Ictos nominis magni alios appellat, qui eodem tempore floruerunt. Exhibet præterea imaginem Littletonianam. Cæterum liber ob methodi brevitatem, argumentandi subtilitatem, atque dictorum ordinem, laudem omnino meretur; sed nec minus fatendum est, adeo sæpissime obscuritati bonum hominem studuisse, ut ænigmata legum maluisse, quam præcepta, tradere videatur. Multa jam immutata esse, plura inveterata atque obsoleta, non urgeo. Interim communis Ictorum Anglorum hæc vox est perfectissimum et absolutissimum hoc opus esse ex omnibus quæ unquam in ulla scientia humana scripta sint quæ unquam proferre potuerit hominis ingenium; non intelligere qui culpent. Ita parum abest, quin credant, falli eum fuisse nescium!"

General observations
on Littleton's Tenures.

The English reader will probably be surprised at these accounts of Littleton. Hottoman has the reputation of great learning, and elegant writing; but he has been blamed very generally for the contemptuous language with which he speaks, even of the writers of his own civil law.

* This is a strange mistake, as Littleton died in 1482.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

Gravina, while he mentions his endowments, both natural and acquired, with admiration; censures his abuse of other judicial writers with great severity. Speaking of him, he says, "Non modo in Accursianis et Bartolinis interpretibus reprehendendis, sed in ipso Triboniano perpetuo exagitando, collectam totâ vitâ opinionem verecundiæ atque modellæ, prorsus amisit." Grav. lib. 1. § 179.

Cujas also was supposed to allude to him in a passage of his works, where having occasion to mention the writers who find fault with the disposition and arrangement of the civil law, he says, "Quam illi sunt imperitissimi! nam neque quid ars sit sciunt; neque artem digestorum aut principia certa juris ulla perceperunt unquam; suaves tamen ad rideandi materiam."

But Hottoman's general disposition to abuse, is not the only circumstance by which his virulent censure of Littleton may be accounted for. Full of the doctrines of the feudal laws of his own country, he might expect to find doctrines of a similar nature in Littleton, without adverting that the greatest part of Littleton's work treats of the subordinate and practical part of the laws of England, which, like that of every other country, is in a great degree peculiar to itself, and bears but a remote analogy to those of other countries. It is allowed, that the feudal polity of the different countries of Europe, is derived from the same origin; that there is a marked similitude in their principal institutions; and a singular uniformity in the history of their rise, perfection, decline, and fall. But the more we go from a general view of their constitutions and governments, to their particular laws and customs, the less this similitude and uniformity are discoverable.

Thus the history of every country, where the feudal laws have prevailed, while it presents us, on the one hand, with an account of the many restraints imposed by them upon alienation, and of the many methods which have been taken to make property unalienable, presents us, on the other, with an account of the different arts which have been used to elude these restraints, and to make property free. This is as observable in the law of England, as it is in the law of any other country.

But the mode by which it has been effected in England, is peculiar to England. In other countries, where a liberty of alienation has been introduced, it has rested on a kind of compromise with the lord, by paying him a certain fine; and a kind of compromise with the relations of the feudatory, by allowing them a right of redemption, commonly called the "jus retractus." But the steps by which a free alienation of property has obtained ground in England are very different. In England an unlimited freedom of aliening socage and military land was soon allowed; the practice of sub-infeudation was soon abolished; the alienation of lands was restrained by the introduction of conditional fees, and afterwards by the introduction of estates tail; entails from their first establishment were greatly discountenanced by the courts of justice, and they were eluded by the doctrines of discontinuance and warranty. In the course of time, a fine was made a bar to the claims of the issue in tail, and a common recovery to the claims both of the issue and of those in remainder and reversion. Most of these circumstances are peculiar to the History of England: hence an English reader, who opens the writings of the foreign feudists, with an expectation of finding there something applicable to the practical parts of the law of his own country, respecting the alienation of landed property, will be greatly disappointed. He will find the most positive prohibition of aliening the fee without the consent of the lord: he will find very nice and subtle disquisitions of what amounts to an alienation: he will find that, in some countries, the lord's consent still continues a favour, that in others it is a right, which the tenant may claim on rendering a certain fine. In short, he will find the works of foreign feudists filled with accounts of the "jus retractus," or "droit de rachat," the "retraite lignager," and the "droit des lods et des ventes;" but he will hardly find the words, or any thing equivalent to the words, conditional fee, estate tail, discontinuance, warranty, fine, or recovery, in the sense in which we use them.

The same may be observed on the doctrine of conditions. According to the strict principles of the feudal law, no conditions could be annexed to a fief, except the implied conditions to which every fief was subject, from the obligation of service on the part of the tenant, and the obligation of protection on the part of the lord. Every fief to which any express or conventional condition was annexed, was, from that very circumstance, ranked among improper fiefs. But fiefs in England were at all times susceptible of every kind of condition.

It would be easy to pursue these observations through the subsequent chapters of Littleton's Treatise. Even if we consider the subject on a more extensive scale, we shall find some circumstances peculiar to the English law, which must necessarily occasion a very essential and marked difference between the constitution and forms of the government of England and the constitution and forms of the government of other countries. Such are the universal conversion of allodial lands into fiefs; the total abolition of sub-infeudation; the freedom of alienation of estates in fee-simple; and the limited and dependant situation of our nobility when contrasted with the situation of the high nobility of foreign countries: all these are peculiar in a great measure to our laws. It follows, that our writers must be silent on many of the topics which fill the immense volumes of foreign feudists: and they, from the same circumstance, must be equally silent on many of the subjects which are discussed by our writers. That this is so, will appear to every person conversant with the ancient writers on our laws, who will give a cursory look at the writers on the feudal laws of other countries. Nothing in this respect can be more

* The title of this work is, "Oceanus Juris, five Tractatus Tractatum Juris universi, duce et auspice Gregorio 13. in unum congesti, a Fr. Ziletti." There are two editions of this work, both printed at Venice; the first in 1548, the second in 1584. The first edition is in 16 tomes, generally bound in 12 volumes; the second is in 15 tomes, generally bound in 29 volumes. The arrangement of this work is greatly admired; but it is not a work in great request, even in those countries which are governed by the civil law.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

different than those parts of the writings of Bracton, Britton, Fleta, Littleton, sir Edward Coke, and sir William Blackstone, which treat of landed property, and the books of the fiefs, Cujas's Commentary upon them, the various treatises on feudal matters collected in the 10th and 11th volumes of the "Tractatus Tractatum *," Du Moulin's Commentarii in priores tres Titulos Consuetudinis Parisiensis †, or the more modern treatises of Monsieur Germain Antoine Guyot ‡, and Monsieur Hervé §.

These observations are offered with a view to account for the contemptuous manner in which the two foreign writers, cited above, speak of Littleton. They may also account, in some measure, for a circumstance which has been a matter of some surprize, the total silence of sir Edward Coke on the general doctrine of fiefs. It is obvious, how extremely desirous his lordship is upon every occasion to give the reasons of the doctrines laid down by him; and what forced, and sometimes even puerile reasons, he assigns for them: yet though so much of our law is supposed to depend upon feudal principles, he never once mentions the feudal law.

"I do marvel many times, says sir Henry Spelman, that my lord Coke, adorning our law with so many flowers of antiquity and foreign learning, hath not (as I suppose) turned aside into this field, i. e. feudal learning, from whence so many roots of our law have, of old, been taken and transplanted. I wish some worthy would read them diligently, and shew the several heads from whence those of ours are taken. They beyond the seas are not only diligent, but very curious in this kind; but we are all for profit and 'luerando pane,' taking what we find at market, without enquiring whence it came." But this complaint is open to observation.

There is no doubt but our laws respecting landed property are susceptible of great illustration from a recurrence to the general history and principles of the feudal law. This is evident from the writings of lord chief baron Gilbert, particularly his treatise of Tenures, in which he has very successfully explained, by feudal principles, several of the leading points of the doctrines laid down in the works of Littleton and sir Edward Coke, and shewn the real grounds of several of their distinctions, which otherwise appear to be merely arbitrary. By this he has reduced them to a degree of system, of which till then they did not appear susceptible. His treatise, therefore, cannot be too much recommended to every person who wishes to make himself a complete master of the extensive and various learning contained in the works of those writers. The same may be said of the writings of sir William Blackstone. Much useful information may be derived also from other writers on these subjects.

But the reader, whose aim is to qualify himself for the practice of his profession, cannot be advised to extend his researches upon those subjects very far. The points of feudal learning, which serve to explain or illustrate the jurisprudence of England, are few in number, and may be found in the authors we have mentioned.

It is not impossible but further enquiries might lead to other interesting discoveries. But the knowledge absolutely necessary for every person to possess who is to practise the law with credit to himself and advantage to his clients, is of so very abstruse a nature, and comprehends such a variety of different matters, that the utmost time, which the compass of a life allows for the study, is not more than sufficient for the acquisition of that branch of knowledge only; still less will it allow him to enter upon the immense field of foreign feudality. It were greatly to be wished that some gentleman, possessed of sufficient time, talents, and assiduity, would dedicate them to this study. Those who have read the late doctor GILBERT STEWART's "View of Society in Europe, in its Progress from Rudeness to Refinement," will lament that he did not pursue his enquiries on this subject. From such a writer, a work on this subject might be expected, at once entertaining, interesting, and instructive; but such a work is not to be expected from a practising lawyer. Whatever may be the energies of his mind, his industry, his application and activity, he will soon feel, that to gain an accurate and extensive knowledge of the law, as it is practised in our courts of justice, requires them all. Thus, on the one hand, the student will find an advantage in some degree of research into feudal learning; on the other, he will feel it necessary to bound his researches, and to leave, before he has made any great progress in them, the Book of Fiefs, and its commentators, for Littleton's Tenures and sir Edward Coke's Commentary.

If it were proper to enter into a further defence of Littleton, it might be done, by observing, that it must be a matter of great doubt, whether Hottoman ever saw, or Gatzert more than saw, the work they so severely censure. Hottoman, if he had read it, might think it inelegant and absurd; but he could not think it malicious, or indicative of a disposition to slander. Gatzert says Littleton specifies twenty-five kinds of feudal services. It is probable, that by services he meant tenures: if he did, it is obvious that he confounded those chapters of Littleton which

* This is usually the first treatise printed in the general collection of his works. An abridgement of it was published in 1773 by Mr. Henrion de Pansey, under the title of "Traité des Fiefs de Du Moulin, Analyté et Conferé avec les autres Feudistes."

† The title of his work is, "Traité des Matieres Feodales, tant pour le Pays Coutumier que pour celuy du Droit écrit, avec des Observations. Par Germain Antoine Guyot. Paris, 1738, and Ann. Suiv. 7 vol. in 4to."

§ "Theorie des Matieres Feodales et Censuelles, ou l'on developpe la Chaine de ces Matieres, dans un Ordre et sous un Aspect, qui en facilitent l'intelligence, y repandent de nouvelles Lumieres, et menent a des Definitions neuves des Contrats de Fiefs, & de Cens. Par Monsieur Hervé. 1785. Paris. 6 vol. in 8vo." The first volume of this work contains an historical account of the rise, progress, and present state of Fiefs in France. In 1756, Monsieur Bouquet published one volume of a work entitled, "Le Droit Public de la France." In his preface to it he promised to continue and complete it in two more volumes, but he is since dead, without having published any part of the continuation; a circumstance greatly to be regretted by the lovers of this kind of learning, as the first volume is executed in a most masterly manner. The English reader will perhaps find it the most interesting and instructive work that has yet appeared on the subject in the French language. If the reader wishes to pursue his researches on the subject, he will find some assistance from a small work printed at Francfort in 1779, entitled, "Joannes Adamsi Nappii Historia Juris Scientiæ Romanæ Feodalis Privatæ ac Publicæ, 1 vol. 8vo."

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

treat of the nature of the feudal estate, with those chapters which treat of the nature of the feudal tenure: in every other sense the word Services, applied in this manner to Littleton's work, is without a meaning.—Besides, he mentions Latin editions of Littleton, when no edition in that language ever appeared.

In fact, were it not for the general observations to which they naturally give rise, neither the criticism of Hottoman nor that of Gatzert would have been noticed.

When doctor Cowell, in his Law Dictionary, cited the passage in question from Hottoman, it raised universal indignation, and he expunged it from the later editions of his book. It certainly was unjust to impute it as a crime to doctor Cowell, that he inserted this citation in his work; but the manner in which it was received is a striking proof of the high estimation in which Littleton's Treatise was held.

General observations
on Sir Edward Coke's Commentary.

The reputation of SIR EDWARD COKE'S COMMENTARY is not inferior to that of the work which is the subject of it. It is objected to it, that it is defective in method. But it should be observed, that a want of method was, in some respects; inseparable from the nature of the undertaking. During a long life of intense and unremitting application to the study of the laws of England, Sir Edward Coke had treasured up an immensity of the most valuable common-law learning. This he wished to present to the public, and chose that mode of doing it, in which, without being obliged to dwell on those doctrines of the law which other authors might explain equally well, he might produce that profound and recondite learning which he felt himself to possess above all others. In adopting this plan, he appears to have judged rationally, and consequently ought not to be censured for a circumstance inseparable from it.

It must be allowed, that the style of Sir Edward Coke is strongly tinged with the quaintness of the times in which he wrote; but it is accurate, expressive, and clear. That it is sometimes difficult to comprehend his meaning, is owing, generally speaking, to the abstruseness of his subject, not to the obscurity of his language.—It has also been objected to him, that the authorities he cites do not in many places come up to the doctrines they are brought to support. There appears to be some ground for this observation. Yet it should not be forgot, that the uncommon depth of his learning, and acuteness of his mind, might enable him to discover connections and consequences which escape a common observer.

It is sometimes said, that the perusal of his Commentary is now become useless, as many of the doctrines of law which his writings explain are become obsolete; and that every thing useful in him may be found more systematically and agreeably arranged in modern writers. It must be acknowledged, that when he treats of those parts of the law which have been altered since his time, his Commentary partakes, in a certain degree, of the obsolescence of the subjects to which it is applied; but even where this is the case, it does not often happen that the doctrines laid down by him do not serve to illustrate other parts of the law which are still in force. Thus,—there is no doubt but the cases which now come before the courts of equity, and the principles upon which they are determined, are extremely different in their nature from those which are the subject of Sir Edward Coke's researches. Yet the great personages who have presided in those courts, have frequently resorted to the doctrines laid down by Sir Edward Coke, to form, explain, and illustrate their decrees. Hence, though portions charged upon real estates, for the benefit of younger children, were not known in Littleton's time, and not much known in the time of Sir Edward Coke; yet on the points which arise respecting the vesting and payment of portions, no writings in the law are more frequently or more successfully applied to than Sir Edward Coke's Commentary on Littleton's Chapter of Conditions. It may also be observed, that notwithstanding the general tenor of the present business of our courts, cases must frequently occur which depend upon the most abstruse and intricate parts of the ancient law. Thus the case of Jacob v. Wheate led to the discussion of escheats and uses as they stood before the statute of Henry VIII. and the case of Taylor v. Horde turned on the learning of disseins.

But the most advantageous and, perhaps, the most proper point of view in which the merit and ability of Sir Edward Coke's writings can be placed, is by considering him as the centre of modern and ancient law.—The modern system of law may be supposed to have taken its rise at the end of the reign of King Henry VII. and to have assumed something of a regular form about the latter end of the reign of King Charles II. The principal features of this alteration are, perhaps, the introduction of recoveries; conveyances to uses; the testamentary disposition by wills; the abolition of military tenures; the statute of frauds and perjuries; the establishment of a regular system of equitable jurisdiction; the discontinuance of real actions; and the mode of trying titles to landed property by ejectment. There is no doubt, but that, during the above period, a material alteration was effected in the jurisprudence of this country: but this alteration has been effected, not so much by superseding, as by giving a new direction to the principles of the old law, and applying them to new subjects. Hence a knowledge of ancient legal learning is absolutely necessary to a modern lawyer. Now Sir Edward Coke's Commentary upon Littleton is an immense repository of every thing that is most interesting or useful in the legal learning of ancient times. Were it not for his writings, we should still have to search for it in the voluminous and chaotic compilation of cases contained in the Year-books; or in the dry, though valuable Abridgements of Statham, Fitzherbert, Brooke, and Rolle. Every person, who has attempted, must be sensible how very difficult and disgusting it is, to pursue a regular investigation of any point of law through those works. The writings of Sir Edward Coke have considerably abridged, if not entirely taken away, the necessity of this labour.

But

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

But his writings are not only a repository of ancient learning; they also contain the outlines of the principal doctrines of modern law and equity. On the one hand, he delineates and explains the ancient system of law, as it stood at the accession of the Tudor line; on the other, he points out the leading circumstances of the innovations which then began to take place. He shews the different restraints which our ancestors imposed on the alienation of landed property, the methods by which they were eluded, and the various modifications which property received after the free alienation of it was allowed. He shews, how the notorious and public transfer of property by livery of seisin was superseded, by the secret and refined mode of transferring it, introduced in consequence of the statute of uses. We may trace in his works the beginning of the disuse of real actions; the tendency in the nation to convert the military into socage tenures; and the outlines of almost every other point of modern jurisprudence. Thus his writings stand between, and connect the ancient and modern parts of the law, and by shewing their mutual relation and dependency, discover the many ways by which they resolve into, explain, and illustrate one another.

It has not yet been settled, and perhaps cannot now be settled, with any degree of precision, when the first EDITION of LITTLETON's work was printed. Sir Edward Coke's mistakes respecting the Rohan edition, are pointed out in the note taken from the 12th edition to that part of his Preface. Doctor Middleton, in his Account of Printing in England, conjectures the edition by J. Lettou and W. Machlinia, to have been printed in 1481, and that it is the first edition. This makes the printing of the book to have been within six or seven years after Caxton's introduction of the art into England, and within twenty-four years after the first invention of it. Dr. Middleton's conjecture is supported by the concurrent circumstance of the time when those printers appear to have been in partnership; and no other edition bears evidence of a prior title to antiquity. Another edition of nearly equal pretensions to precedence with the Lettou and Machlinia edition, has lately appeared from the library of the late William Bayntun, esq. It has remained hitherto undescribed, and was probably unknown to all who have undertaken to notice the several editions of this work. At the end it is said to be printed by Machlinia alone, then living near Fleet-bridge; from which, and other circumstances, it is clearly distinguishable from the former edition. The letter used in printing it is less rude, and more like the modern English black letter, than the letter used in the joint edition of Lettou and Machlinia, and the abbreviations are much less numerous. These circumstances afford some, though but a faint ground to suppose it posterior in date to the former. Mr. Hargrave has both these editions. In 1766, Mons. Houard, an Avocat in the Parliament of Normandy, and Conseiller Echevin of the town of Dieppe, published at Rouen in two volumes, the text of Littleton, with a French interpretation, notes, a glossary, and Pieces justificatives. Many editions of Littleton in French and in English only have been published in small octavo, twelves, sixteens, and twenty-fours. They are all of them very inaccurate. The French edition in 1585 is the first in which the sections are numbered. An edition in French and English, in double columns, with a table of the principal matters, was printed in duodecimo in 1671. Considering the universal estimation in which Littleton's work is held, and that it generally is the first work put into a student's hand, it is very singular, that since the editions by Lettou and Machlinia, and the Rohan edition, no correct edition of it without the Commentary has yet been published. The reader will hear with pleasure, that Mr. Hargrave has it in contemplation to favour the public with such an edition, and to print it in such a manner as will make it a typographical curiosity.

Account of the editions of Littleton without the Commentary.

The first EDITION of SIR EDWARD COKE's COMMENTARY upon Littleton was published in his life-time, in 1628: it is very incorrect. The second edition was printed in 1629, and is supposed to have been revised by the author. The subsequent editions, to the eighth inclusively, seem to have been printed from the second, without much variation. The ninth edition includes Sir Edward Coke's Reading on Fines, and his Treatise on Bail and Mainprize. To the tenth edition are added, the Complete Copyholder, with many references. In the eleventh edition the book intitled the Olde Tenures is inserted. At the end, both of the edition of Littleton by Lettou and Machlinia, and of that by Machlinia only, Littleton's work is called the "Tenores Novelli," to distinguish it (it is presumed) from the Treatise of Olde Tenures. The eleventh edition has also several notes and additions, tending principally to shew the alteration of the law since the time of Littleton and his commentator. The twelfth and last edition was published in 1738. Some observations upon it may be found in Mr. Hargrave's Address to the Public on his undertaking the present edition. An abridgement of Sir Edward Coke's Commentary was published in 1714, by Mr. Serjeant Hawkins; short but pointed observations are occasionally introduced in it, to explain the principles of the old law, and the alterations made in it by subsequent statutes.

Editions of Littleton with Sir Edw. Coke's Commentary.

Mr. Hargrave began the PRESENT EDITION, by publishing it in Numbers. Soon after his publication of the First Number, he was favored with Lord chief justice Hale's manuscript notes. By an advertisement prefixed to the Second Number, he informed the public that they were very numerous, as far as the Chapter of Knight Service; that there were few on the subsequent parts of the work; that for the communication of them, he was indebted to the liberal spirit of a noble lord*, who, he observed, had ever distinguished himself

Present edition.

* The present Earl of Hardwicke.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

himself as a zealous encourager of undertakings having the least tendency to promote science and learning; that in the original, some of the notes were in Latin, but most of them in Law-French; and that it was thought most convenient to give the latter in a literal English translation. Upon the publication of the Second Number, Mr. Hargrave received from sir William Jones an account of some few various readings from two English manuscripts of Littleton's Tenures. By an advertisement prefixed to the Third Number he informed the public, that both of these manuscripts were in the public library at Cambridge, being marked D d 11. 60. and M m 52.; that the first was written on vellum, and was imperfect at the beginning, and in the Chapter of Warranty; and that the second, which seemed to be the most valuable, was written on paper, and had only one leaf torn, and that its antiquity appeared from the following note in the first page:

Iste liber emptus fuit in cæmeterio Sti. Pauli

London, 27th die Julii, anno regis E. 4ti. 20mo. 10s. 6d.

that this date shewed that the manuscript was of Littleton's time, July 20 E. 4. being in 1481, which was the year before Littleton's death; that in referring to the manuscripts, that in vellum would be distinguished by Vell. MS. and that in paper by Paper MS. With these assistances Mr. Hargrave completed that part of the edition which is executed by him. He then relinquished the work, and, by an Advertisement (which immediately precedes this Preface) he informed the public of it, and of the present editor's undertaking to continue the work.

Soon after the publication of this Advertisement, the present editor, through the obliging interference of John Holliday, esq. of Lincoln's-Inn, with the executors of the will of the late sir Thomas Parker, was favoured with a copy of the notes of lord chancellor Nottingham and lord Hale upon this work. The following account is given of them in a note in sir Thomas Parker's own hand-writing:

"The notes to this book, in my hand-writing (except one note in folio 26. b. and some modern cases), were transcribed from a copy of the lord chancellor Nottingham's manuscript notes, in the margin of his lord Coke's Commentary upon Littleton, which copy was made for the use of his son Heneage Finch, esq. solicitor-general, afterwards earl of Aylesford, and is now in the possession of the honourable Mr. Legge, to whose favour I am indebted for these notes.

"The notes in a different hand-writing were transcribed from a copy of lord chief-justice Hale's MSS. notes in the margin of Coke upon Littleton, presented by lord Hale to the father of Philip Gybbon, esq. which copy was made for the use of the honourable Charles Yorke, esq. his Majesty's solicitor-general. The book in which the notes are in the hand-writing of lord Hale, is now in the possession of Mr. Gybbon; and the book from which these notes were transcribed by the favour of Mr. Yorke, is now in his possession.

"T. PARKER, 1758."

Under these circumstances the THIRTEENTH EDITION has been completed in its form.

When it became generally known that Mr. Hargrave had relinquished the work, the present editor engaged in it; but he did not engage in it while there was the slightest probability of its being undertaken by any other person: and even then, he would not have engaged in it, if by doing so he incurred any obligation of completing Mr. Hargrave's undertaking in all its parts. He thought, an imperfect execution of the remaining part of the work would be more agreeable to the public than none; that to present them with the remaining part of the text of Littleton and his Commentator, with some references and some notes, would be an acceptable offering to them. No other person appeared with any, and the present editor's performance does not prevent the exertions of any future adventurer.

LINCOLN'S-INN, }
Nov. 4, 1787. }

CHARLES BUTLER.

DE O, PATRIÆ, TIBI,

Proœmium.

OUR author, a gentleman of an ancient and a fair-descended family de Littleton, took his name of a town so called, as that famous chief-justice sir John de Markham, and divers of our profession, and others, have done.

The name and degree of our author.

Thomas de Littleton, lord of Frankley, had issue Elizabeth his only child, and did bear the arms of his ancestors, viz. argent a chevron between three escalop-shells fable. The bearing hereof is very ancient and honourable; for the senators of Rome did wear bracelets of escalop-shells about their arms, and the knights of the honourable order of St. Michael in France do wear a collar of gold in the form of escalop-shells at this day. Hereof much more might be said, but it belongs unto others.

His arms.

Instituted by Lewis the Eleventh, king of France, 9. E. 4. 1469.

With this Elizabeth married Thomas Westcote, esquire, the king's servant in court, a gentleman anciently descended, who bare argent, a bend between two cotises fable, a bordure engrayled gules, bezanty.

Thomas Westcote.

But she being fair, and of a noble spirit, and having large possessions and inheritance from her ancestors de Littleton, and from her mother, the daughter and heir of Richard de Quatermains, and other her ancestors (ready means in time to work her own desire), resolved to continue the honour of her name (as did the daughter and heir of Charleton, with one of the sons of Knightly, and divers others), and therefore prudently, whilst it was in her own power, provided by Westcote's assent before marriage, that her issue inheritable should be called by the name of de Littleton. These two had issue four sons, Thomas, Nicholas, Edmund, and Guy, and four daughters.

Thomas the eldest was our author, who bare his father's christian-name Thomas, and his mother's surname de Littleton, and the arms de Littleton also; and so doth his posterity bear both name and arms to this day.

Our author bore his mother's surname.

Camden, in his Britannia, saith thus: Thomas Littleton, alias Westcote, the famous lawyer, to whose Treatise of Tenures the students of the common law are no less beholden, than the civilians to Justinian's Institutes.

Camden.
"The just shall flourish like the palm-tree, and spread abroad like the cedar in Libanus." Psal. xcii. 11.

The dignity of this fair-descended family de Littleton hath grown up together and spread itself abroad by matches, with many other ancient and honourable families, to many worthy and fruitful branches, whose posterity flourish at this day, and quartereth many fair coats, and [*] enjoyeth fruitful and opulent inheritances thereby.

[*] The best kind of quartering of arms.

He was of the Inner-Temple, and read learnedly upon the statute of W. 2. De donis conditionalibus, which we have. He was afterward called ad statum

T H E P R E F A C E.

King's serjeant, Rot.
Pat. 33. H. 6. part 1.
m. 16.
Mich. 34. H. 8. fol. 3. a.
Judge of the Common Pleas, Rot. Pat.
6. E. 4. part 1. m. 15.

Knight of the Bath,
15. E. 4.

When he wrote this book.
14. E. 4. tit. Garranty 5.

Litt. Sect. 692. 729 &
740.

The deceases of his contemporaries.
[a] He died 27. H. 6.
[b] He died 39. H. 6.
[c] Died 11. E. 4.
[d] Died 16. H. 7.
[e] Died 7. E. 4.
[f] Overlived our author.
[g] Survived him also.
[h] Died 23. H. 6.
[i] Survived our author.
[k] Died 33. H. 6.
[l] Died 18. H. 6.
[m] Died 20. H. 6.
[n] Removed 1. E. 4.
[o] Removed 8. E. 4.
[p] Died 21. E. 4.

Queen Elizabeth.

Inner-Temple.
Clifford's-Inn.
Lion's-Inn.

et grad' servientis ad legem, and was steward of the court of the Marshalsey of the king's household, and for his worthiness was made by king H. 6. his serjeant, and rode justice of assise the Northern Circuit, which places he held under king E. 4. until he, in the sixth year of his reign, constituted him one of the judges of the court of common pleas, and then rode Northamptonshire Circuit. The same king, in the 15th year of his reign, with the prince, and other nobles and gentlemen of ancient blood, honoured him with the knight-hood of the Bath.

He compiled this book when he was judge, after the fourteenth year of the reign of king E. 4. but the certain time we cannot yet attain unto, but (as we conceive) it was not long before his death, because it wanted his last hand; "for that tenant by elegit, statute-merchant, and staple, were in the table of "the first printed book, and yet he never wrote of them *".

Our author, in composing this work, had great furtherance in that he flourished in the time of many famous and expert sages of the law. [a] Sir Richard Newton, [b] sir John Prisot, [c] sir Robert Danby, [d] sir Thomas Brian, [e] sir Pierce Arden, [f] sir Richard Choke, [g] Walter Moyle, [h] William Paston, [i] Robert Danvers, [k] William Ascough, and other justices of the court of common pleas: and of the king's-bench, [l] sir John June, [m] sir John Hody, [n] sir John Fortescue, [o] sir John Markham, [p] sir Thomas Billing, and other excellent men flourished in his time.

And of worldly blessings I account it not the least, that in the beginning of my study of the laws of this realm, the courts of justice, both of equity and of law, were furnished with men of excellent judgment, gravity, and wisdom. As in the chancery, sir Nicholas Bacon, and after him sir Thomas Bromley. In the exchequer-chamber, the lord Burghley, lord high treasurer of England, and sir Walter Mildmay, chancellor of the exchequer. In the king's bench, sir Christopher Wray, and after him sir John Popham. In the common pleas, sir James Dyer, and after him sir Edmund Anderson. In the court of exchequer, sir Edward Saunders, after him sir John Jeffery, and after him sir Roger Manwood, men famous (amongst many others) in their several places, and flourished, and were all honoured and preferred by that thrice noble and virtuous queen Elizabeth of ever blessed memory. Of these reverend judges, and others their associates, I must ingenuously confess, that in her reign I learned many things, which in these Institutes I have published: and of this queen I may say, that as the rose is the queen of flowers, and smelleth more sweetly when it is plucked from the branch, so I may say and justify, that she by just desert was the queen of queens, and of kings also, for religion, piety, magnanimity, and justice; who now by remembrance thereof, since Almighty God gathered her to himself, is of greater honour and renown than when she was living in this world. You cannot question what rose I mean; for take the red or the white, she was not only by royal descent and inherent birth-right, but by royal beauty also, heir to both.

And though we wish by our labours (which are but cunabula legis, the cradles of the law) delight and profit to all the students of the law, in their beginning of their study (to whom the First Part of the Institutes is intended), yet principally to my loving friends, the students of the honourable and worthy societies of the Inner-Temple, and Clifford's-Inn, and of Lion's-Inn also, where I was some time reader. And yet of them more particularly to

* That Littleton did intend to write of those tenancies, is plain from the 291st and 324th Sections; but it may be justly questioned whether the fact alledged by my lord Coke, to support his opinion, be true; because in the copy of the Rohan edition, now in Lincoln's-Inn Library, and in that at this time in the bookseller's custody, the Table mentions nothing concerning these tenancies; nor does it seem probable that there ever was any other Table, both the Copies appearing on the nicest examination to be complete. Note to 11th edit.—See also Note on Sect. 241. of the present edit.

T H E P R E F A C E.

such as have been of that famous university of Cambridge, alma mea mater. And to my much-honoured and beloved allies and friends of the county of Norfolk, my dear and native country; and to Suffolk, where I passed my middle age; and of Buckinghamshire, where in my old age I live. In which counties, we, out of former collections, compiled these Institutes. But now return we again to our author.

He married with Johan, one of the daughters and coheirs of William Burley, of Broomcroft-castle, in the county of Salop, a gentleman of ancient descent, and bare the arms of his family, argent, a fess checkie or and azure, upon a lion rampant sable, armed gules; and by her had three sons, fir William, Richard the lawyer, and Thomas.

His marriage.

His issue.

In his life-time, he, as a loving father and a wise man, provided matches for these three sons, in virtuous and ancient families, that is to say, for his son fir William, Ellen, daughter and coheir of Thomas Welsh esquire, who by her had issue Johan his only child, married to fir John Aston of Tixal, knight: and for the second wife of fir William, Mary the daughter of William Whittington esquire, whose posterity in Worcestershire flourish to this day. For Richard Littleton his second son, to whom he gave good possessions of inheritance, Alice, daughter and heir of William Winsbury of Pilleton-Hall in the county of Stafford esquire, whose posterity prosper in Staffordshire to this day. And for Thomas his third son, to whom he gave good possessions of inheritance, Anne, daughter and heir of John Botreaux esquire, whose posterity in Shropshire continue prosperously to this day. Thus advanced he his posterity, and his posterity, by imitation of his virtues, have honoured him.

The re-establishment of his posterity, by the matches of his three sons with virtue and good blood.

He gave possessions of inheritance to his younger sons for their better advancement.

He made his last will and testament the 22d day of August, in the twenty-first year of the reign of king Edward the fourth, whereof he made his three sons, a parson, a vicar, and a servant of his, executors; and constituted supervisor thereof, his true and faithful friend, John Alcock, doctor of law, of the famous university of Cambridge, then bishop of Worcester; a man of singular piety, devotion, chastity, temperance, and holiness of life; who amongst other of his pious and charitable works, founded Jesus College in Cambridge; a fit and a fast friend to our honourable and vertuous judge.

His last will.

His executors, his supervisor.

He left this life in his great and good age, on the 23d day of the month of August, in the said twenty-first year of the reign of king Edward the fourth: for it is observed for a special blessing of Almighty God, that few or none of that profession die intestatus et improles, without will, and without child; which last will was proved the 8th of November following, in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, for that he had bona notabilia in divers diocesses. But yet our author liveth still in ore omnium jurisprudentium.

His age.
His departure.

Littleton is named in 1. H. 7. and 21. H. 7. Some do hold, that it is no error either in the reporter or printer; but that it was Richard the son of our author, who in those days professed the law, and had read upon the statute of W. 2. quia multi per malitiam, and * unto whom his father dedicated his book: and this Richard died at Pilleton-Hall in Staffordshire, in 9. H. 8.

1. H. 7. fol. 27.
21. H. 7. fol. 32. b.

W. 2. cap. 11.
[*] See Littleton, Sect. 749.

The body of our author is honourably interred in the cathedral church of Worcester, under a fair tomb of marble, with his statue or portraiture upon it, together with his own match, and the matches of some of his ancestors, and with a memorial of his principal titles; and out of the mouth of his statue proceedeth this prayer, Fili Dei miserere mei, which he himself caused to be made and finished in his life-time, and remaineth to this day. His wife Johan, lady Littleton, survived him, and left a great inheritance of her father, and Ellen her mother, daughter and heir of John Grendon esquire, and other her ancestors, to fir William Littleton her son.

His sepulchre.

This

T H E P R E F A C E.

When this work was published.

T. N. B. 212. C.

Note.

When this work was first imprinted.

His picture.

The figure of his mind.

This work was not published in print, either by our author himself, or Richard his son, or any other, until after the deceases both of our author and of Richard his son. For I find it not cited in any book or report, before sir Anthony Fitzherbert cited him in his Natura Brevium; who published that book of his Natura Brevium in 26. H. 8. Which work of our author, in respect of the excellency thereof, by all probability should have been cited in the reports of the reigns of E. 5. R. 3. H. 7. or H. 8. or by St. Jermyn in his book of the Doctor and Student†, which he published in the three and twentieth year of H. 8. if in those days our author's book had been printed. And yet you shall observe, that time doth ever give greater authority to works and writings that are of great and profound learning, than at the first they had. The first impression that I find of our author's book was at Roan in France, by William de Tailier (for that it was written in French) ad instantiam Richardi Pynson, at the instance of Richard Pynson, the printer of King H. 8. before the said book of Natura Brevium was published; and therefore upon these and other things that we have seen, we are of opinion, that it was first printed about the four and twentieth year of the reign of king H. 8. since which time he had been commonly cited, and (as he deserves) more and more highly esteemed *.

He that is desirous to see his picture, may in the churches of Frankley and Hales-Owen, see the grave and reverend countenance of our author, the outward man; but he hath left this book, as a figure of that higher and nobler part, that is, of the excellent and rare endowments of his mind, especially in the profound knowledge of the fundamental laws of this realm. He that diligently reads this his excellent work, shall behold the child and figure of his mind, which the more often he beholds in the visual line, and

* This opinion of my lord Coke's, concerning the time of the first impression of Littleton's Tenures, although it hath been followed by sir William Dugdale, in his Origines Juridicæ, and by bishop Nicholson, in his Historical Library, is certainly erroneous; for it appears by two copies now in the bookseller's custody, that they were printed twice at London in the year 1528, once by Richard Pynson, and again by Robert Redmayne; and that was the nineteenth year of the reign of H. 8. To determine certainly when the Rohan edition was published, is almost impossible; and before any conjectures can be offered on that subject, 'twill be necessary to consider how conclusive the arguments his lordship draws from our author's not being cited as authority in the books he mentions may be: it either proves what his lordship uses it for, or else that Littleton's authority was not then so well established as 'tis now (for which he gives us here a very good reason): and that this last is true, the aforesaid editions do sufficiently evince, for their titles and conclusions run thus: "Littleton's Tenures, newly and most truly corrected." And in the end, Expliciunt tenores Littletoni cum alterationibus eorum et additionibus novis, necnon cum aliis non minus utilioribus: Nay, these very additions are incorporated into the book itself, nor are they distinguished by any mark from the Original. The weakness of this argument will further appear, if it should be applied to the discovering the time my lord Coke's Commentary on Littleton was first published, for this was not cited as authority for some time after its publication. The old editions abovementioned. Pynson's and Le Talleur's name, and the manner Littleton is printed in at Rohan, seem to be the only means of discovering what we seek. From those editions we may collect, not only that the Rohan impression is older than the year 1528, but also by what occurs in the beginning and end of them, that there had been other impressions of our author. From Pynson's name at the end of the Rohan edition, it may be concluded that he would not have engaged his friend William Le Talleur to have printed Littleton at Rohan, had he ever before printed any books in French; and that he printed an Abridgment of the Statutes, part of which is in French, in the year 1499, appears by one of those books now in the same person's custody. Statham's Abridgment has his name to it, but there is no date, yet it being printed with the same types, and in the same manner, Littleton was at Rohan, and as it is a larger book, it is highly probable 'twas printed some time after the publication of Littleton's Tenures, and that Pynson's success in the lesser undertaking induced him to venture on the greater; which in those days was the work of two or three years. William Le Talleur printed a Chronicle of the Duchy of Normandy, as appears by his name and cypher at the end thereof, and the date in the beginning in the year 1487. The book itself is printed without any title-page, initial letter of the chapters, number of the leaves or year, and in a character much resembling writing, and with such abbreviations as are used in manuscripts: all which 'tis well known to those who have seen many old books, are undoubted proofs of a book's being printed when that art was in its infancy. Upon the whole it may certainly be concluded, that the book was printed some years before 1487; because the abovementioned Chronicle, which hath not such marks of antiquity, was printed in that year; and from what has been observed concerning the manner 'tis printed in, it will be thought by those who are versed in ancient books, to have been published ten years before that time. Note to the 11th Edition.

† This book appears to have been first published by J. Russell, 1623. Ames.

T H E P R E F A C E.

well observes him, the more shall he justly admire the judgment of our author, and increase his own. This only is desired, that he had written of other parts of law, and especially of the rules of good pleading, (the heart-string of the common law) wherein he excelled: for of him might the saying of our English poet be verified:

Thereto he could indite and maken a thing;

Chauter.

There was no wight could pinch at his writing:

So far from exception, as none could pinch at it. This skill of good pleading, he highly in this work commended to his son, and under his name to all other students sons of his law. He was learned also in that art, which is so necessary to a compleat lawyer; I mean of logick, as you shall perceive by reading of these Institutes, wherein are observed his syllogisms, inductions, and other arguments; and his definitions, descriptions, divisions, etymologies, derivations, significations, and the like. Certain it is, that when a great learned man (who is long in making) dieth, much learning dieth with him.

Good pleading.

Logick.

Seneca.

That which we have formerly written, that this book is the ornament of the common law, and the most perfect and absolute work that ever was written in any humane science; and in another place, that which I affirmed and took upon me to maintain against all opposites whatsoever, that it is a work of as absolute perfection in its kind, and as free from error, as any book that I have known to be written of any humane learning, shall to the diligent and observing reader of these Institutes be made manifest, and we by them (which is but a Commentary upon him) be deemed to have fully satisfied that, which we in former times have so confidently affirmed and assumed. His greatest commendation, because it is of greatest profit to us, is, that by this excellent work, which he had studiously learned of others, he faithfully taught all the professors of the law in succeeding ages. The victory is not great to overthrow his opposites, for there never was any learned man in the law, that understood our author, but concurred with me in his commendation: Habet enim justam venerationem quicquid excellit; for whatsoever excelleth hath just honour due to it. Such as in words have endeavoured to offer him disgrace, never understood him, and therefore we leave them in their ignorance, and wish that by these our labours they may know the truth and be converted. But herein we will proceed no further, for, Stultum est absurdas opiniones accuratius refellere. It is meer folly to confute absurd opinions with too much curiosity.

The commendation of his work.

Cicero.

Aristotle.

And albeit our author in his Three Books cites not many authorities, yet he holdeth no opinion in any of them, but is proved and approved by these two faithful witnesses in matter of law, authority and reason. Certain it is, when he raiseth any question, and sheweth the reason on both sides, the latter opinion is his own, and is consonant to law. We have known many of his cases drawn in question, but never could find any judgment given against any of them, which we cannot affirm of any other book or edition of our law. In the reign of our late sovereign lord king James of famous and ever blessed memory, it came in question upon a demurrer in law, Whether the release to one trespasser should be available or no to his companion? Sir Henry Hobart, that honourable judge and great sage of the law, and those reverend and learned judges, Warburton, Winch, and Nichols, his companions, gave judgment according to the opinion of our author, and openly said, that they owed so great reverence to Littleton, as they would not have his case disputed or questioned: and the like you may find in this Part of the Institutes. Thus much (though not so much as his due) have we spoken of him; both to set out his life, because he is our author, and for the imitation of him by others of our profession.

Note.

Mich. 3. Jac. in communi banc. inter
Cock & Ilmour.

T H E P R E F A C E

What is endeavoured by these Institutes.

We have in these Institutes endeavoured to open the true sense of every of his particular cases, and the extent of every of the same, either in express words, or by implication; and where any of them are altered by any latter act of parliament to observe the same, and wherein the alteration consisteth. Certain it is, that there is never a period, nor (for the most part) a word, nor an &c. but affordeth excellent matter of learning. But the module of a preface cannot express the observations that are made in this work, of the deep judgment and notable invention of our author. We have by comparison of the late and modern impressions with the original print, vindicated our author from two injuries: First, from divers corruptions in the late and modern prints, and restored our author to his own: Secondly, from all additions and encroachments upon him, that nothing might appear in his work but his own *.

The benefit of these Institutes.

Our hope is, that the young student, who heretofore meeting at the first, and wrestling with as difficult terms and matter, as in many years after, was at the first discouraged as many have been, may, by reading these Institutes, have the difficulty and darkness both of the matter, and of the terms and words of art in the beginning of his study, facilitated and explained unto him, to the end he may proceed in his study chearfully and with delight; and therefore I have termed them Institutes, because my desire is, they should institute and instruct the studious, and guide him in a ready way to the knowledge of the national laws of England.

Wherefore called Institutes.

Wherefore published in English.

This Part we have (and not without precedent) published in English, for that they are an introduction to the knowledge of the national law of the realm; a work necessary, and yet heretofore not undertaken by any, albeit in all other professions there are the like. We have left our author to speak his own language, and have translated him into English, to the end that any of the nobility or gentry of this realm, or of any other estate or profession whatsoever, that will be pleased to read him and these Institutes, may understand the language wherein they are written.

Regula.

36. E. 3. cap. 5.

I cannot conjecture that the general communicating of these laws in the English tongue can work any inconvenience, but introduce great profit, seeing that Ignorantia juris non excusat, Ignorance of the law excuseth not. And herein I am justified by the wisdom of a parliament; the words whereof be, " That the laws and customs of this realm the rather should be reasonably perceived and known, and better understood by the tongue used in this realm, and by so much every man might the better govern himself without offending of the law, and the better keep, save and defend his heritage and possessions. And in divers regions and countries, where the king, the nobles, and other of the said realm have been, good governance and full right is done to every man, because that the laws and customs be learned and used in the tongue of the country : " as more at large by the said act, and the purview thereof may appear : Et neminem oportet esse sapientorem legibus, No man ought to be wiser than the law.

Regula.

Our author's kind of French.

And true it is that our books of reports and statutes in ancient times were written in such French as in those times was commonly spoken and written by the French themselves. But this kind of French that our author hath used, is most commonly written and read, and very rarely spoken, and therefore cannot be either pure, or well pronounced. Yet the change thereof (having been so long customary) should be without any profit, but not without great danger and difficulty: for so many ancient terms and words drawn from that legal French, are grown to be vocabula artis, vocables of art, so apt and significant to express the true sense of the laws, and are so woven in the laws themselves, as it is in a manner impossible to change them, neither ought legal terms to be changed.

* See the additions to this new edition, No. 74 and 81. Note to the 11th edit.

T H E P R E F A C E.

In school divinity, and amongst the glossographers and interpreters of the civil and canon laws, in logick, and in other liberal sciences, you shall meet with a whole army of words, which cannot defend themselves in bello grammaticali, in the grammatical war, and yet are more significant, compendious, and effectual to express the true sense of the matter, than if they were expressed in pure Latin. 36. E. 3. ub. supr.

This work we have called "The First Part of the Institutes," for two causes : First, for that our author is the first book that our student taketh in hand : Secondly, for that there are some other Parts of Institutes not yet published, (viz.) The Second Part, being a Commentary upon the statute of Magna Charta, Westm. 1. and other old statutes. The Third Part treateth of criminal causes and pleas of the crown : which Three Parts we have, by the goodness of Almighty God, already finished. The Fourth Part we have purposed to be of the jurisdiction of courts : but hereof we have only collected some materials towards the raising of so great and honourable a building. We have by the goodness and assistance of Almighty God, brought this twelfth work to an end : in the eleven books of our Reports we have related the opinions and judgments of others ; but herein we have set down our own. Wherefore called the First Part.

Before I entered into any of these Parts of our Institutes, I acknowledging mine own weakness and want of judgment to undertake so great works, directed my humble suit and prayer to the Author of all goodness and wisdom, out of the Book of Wisdom ; Pater & Deus misericordiae, da mihi sedium tuarum assitricem sapientiam, mitte eam de Caelis sanctis tuis & a sede magnitudinis tuae, ut tecum sit & tecum laboret, ut sciam quid acceptum sit apud te ! " Oh Father " and God of mercy, give me Wisdom, the assistant of thy seats ! Oh send " her out of the holy heavens, and from the seat of thy greatness, that she " may be present with me, and labour with me, that I may know what is pleasing unto thee." Amen. Lib. Sap. cap. ix. vers. 4. 10.

Our author hath divided his whole work into Three Books. In his First he hath divided estates in lands and tenements, in this manner : for res per divisionem melius aperiuntur. Bracton,

T H E P R E F A C E .

A Figure of the Division of Possessions.

[*] See the first remark to the Preface.

*Regula.
Inevitable est parte una perspecta, tota re non cognita, de ea judicare.*

Our author dealt only with the estates and terms above said: somewhat we shall speak of estates by force of certain statutes, as of statute-merchant, statute-staple, and elegit, (whereof our author intended to have written) [*] and likewise to executors to whom lands are devised for payment of debts, and the like.

I shall desire, that the learned reader will not conceive any opinion against any part of this painful and large volume, until he shall have advisedly read over the whole, and diligently searched out, and well considered of the several authorities, proofs and reasons which we have cited and set down for warrant and confirmation of our opinions throughout this whole work.

Mine advice to the student is, that before he read any part of our Commentaries upon any Section, that first he read again and again our author himself in that Section, and do his best endeavours, first of himself, and then by conference with others, (which is the life of study) to understand it, and then to read our Commentary thereupon, and no more at any one time than he is able with a delight to bear away, and after to meditate thereon, which is the life of reading. But of this argument we have for the better direction of our student in his study, spoken in our Epistle to our First Book of Reports.

And albeit the reader shall not at any one day (do what he can) reach to the meaning of our author, or of our Commentaries, yet let him no way discourage himself, but proceed; for on some other day, in some other place, that doubt will be cleared. Our labours herein are drawn out to this great volume, for that our author is twice repeated, once in French, and again in English.

ANALYSIS

OF

LITTLETON.

FEBRUARY 21, 1658-9.

Synopsis totius Littleton Analyticè.

Littleton's TENURES may be di- vided into two parts, scilicet,	Titles of	Land of freehold	Estates of	Inheritance	By the common law, as Fee Simple Book I. Chap. 1.
					By statute, as	Fee Taile	-	2.
						Fee Taile after possibility of issue extinct	-	3.
					Freehold by	The act of law : tenant	By the Curtesy	-	4.
							In Dower	-	5.
						Agreement between party and party ; as Tenant for Life		-	6.
					Certain qualifica- tions of estates by	other acci- dents tend- ing to	Reason of mixture with other possessions, scil. by	1	Descent, Parcenary, Book III. Ch. 1, 2.
								2	Purchase, Jointenancy	-	3.
								3	Both, Tenancy in Common	-	4.
Ratifying of estates by the act of	Parties	Intituled by right, by	strengthens the estate already established, as	Remitter			12.
				Warranty			13.
The de- struction of estates by	Discontinuances of a right	Continuance of a wrong ; the	adding a surer and better title thereunto, as	Release			8.
				Interested in the possession, as Attornment			10.
The de- struction of estates by	Discontinuances of a right	Continuance of a wrong ; the	adding a surer and better title thereunto, as	Confirmation			9.
				Interested in the possession, as Attornment			10.
The de- struction of estates by	Discontinuances of a right	Continuance of a wrong ; the	adding a surer and better title thereunto, as	Attornment			10.
				Interested in the possession, as Attornment	10.
The de- struction of estates by	Discontinuances of a right	Continuance of a wrong ; the	adding a surer and better title thereunto, as	Attornment	10.
				Interested in the possession, as Attornment	10.
Chattell,	Tenures, scil. the ser- vices which are as it were the bond be- twixt the lord and te- nant whereby lands are held to	Reall. Personall.	Certain, Tenant for years	-	-	-	-	I.	7.
				Uncertain, Tenant at will	-	-	-	-	-	8, 9, 10.
				The King only, as	Grand Serjeanty	-	-	-	-	-	II.	9.
						Petit Serjeanty	-	-	-	-	-	9.
				Spiritual, Frankalmoigne	-	-	-	-	-	-	6.
				Other lords also of these tenements, which are	Temporal, to be performed by their	Bodies	Homage	not continued in the line	-	-	1.
									continued in the line of the lord and tenant, called Homage Auncestrell	7.
				Fealty	-	-	-	2.
Goods	generally throughout the realm	Socage	-		5.
		Rents	-	12.
Both these tenants bring	Fees	Esuage	-	3.
			Knights Service	-	4.
Bond Villenage	-	-	-	11.

Fee Simple. Lib. 1. Cap. 1.

Fee Taile. Lib. 1. Cap. 2.

Tenant in Taile after Possibility of Issue extinct. Lib. 1. Cap. 3.

Is when lands are given in special taile, and one of the donors or the man or woman of whose body the issue in taile is limited to proceed dieth, there being no issue in taile in life, then the surviving donee is thus called, because there is no possibility left of having issue inheritable to the land, §. 32, 33, 34.

Tenant by the Curtesy of England. Lib. 1. Cap. 4.

Is when one taketh a feme inheritrix to wife, in whose right he was seised of lands, and by whom he hath or hath had issue born alive, which by possibility might inherit those lands after her death, for he is tenant by the curtesy of England, §. 35. The reason of the denomination, scil. because used in no other country but in England, §. 55.

Dower. Lib. 1. Cap. 5.

Tenant for Term of Life. Lib. 1. Cap. 6.

Tenant for Years. Lib. 1. Cap. 7.

Note the	Name of this estate, viz.	When one leaseth lands to another for a term of years, the lessee is thus called, 58. So if the lease be but for half a year, or a quarter, for there is no other terms to term him, 67.
	How it passeth from the lessor to the lessee.	1 The lessee may enter when he will by force of his lease, by or without deed; and livery is not necessary, unless where freehold passeth in possession or remainder [then it is], 59, 60. Unless it be in exchanges, where if the lands be in one county it is good by parol, 62, 63. Note in exchanges, { That the estate of the exchanges must be equal [not the value] 64, 65. That in both their deeds mention must be made of the exchange, 65.
	Nature of it,	2 How many liveries there needs [when necessary], scil. but one in every county, if it be made in the name of all in the same county, 61. At what time it taketh effect, scil. at the time prefixed, although the lessor die before the day; and yet the death of the feoffor is a countermand of a letter of attorney to deliver seisin, 66.
	What inconveniencies this estate is tied unto.	1 To pay the rent reserved, else may the lessor distrain or bring an action of debt; but if the lessor were not seised at the time of the lease, the lessor may plead in barre, if it be not by indenture, 58. 2 He must amove his household stuff, and come before his lease expire, or else after the lessor may take them, 68. 3 The lessee for years is bound to repair the house, 71. 4 Liable to a writ of waste if he commit any, 67.

Tenant at Will. Lib. 1. Cap. 8.

Note the	Divers sorts of this estate; for it is created either	Expressly; as when one letteth lands to hold at his will; and it is called so, because there is no certainty of the estate but only at will, 68. If therefore it be granted to the lessee and his heirs at will, this word (heirs) is void, 82. Yet if the lessor determine his will, the lessee shall have convenient time to carry away his corn and household stuff, as well as executors for the goods of their testator, 68, 69. By implication; as when one having a deed of feoffment made unto him, and entereth before livery, 70.
	Necessary appendances to this estate. For	The services reserved, { They shall not do fealty, 84. They must pay the rent reserved, else may the lessor distrain or bring an action of debt, 72. The things he is not bound to, reparations, yet is punishable for voluntary waste, as well as a bailee for goods lent him, 71.

Tenant at Will according to Custom. Lib. 1. Cap. 9, 10.

Note the	Diversity of this estate; for it is by	Copy of court roll, 73. and so called, because the tenants have no other evidence but of their lord's court roll, 75. And it is when one holdeth land at the will of the lord; and although they have inheritance, yet if the lord oust them they have no remedy, but by petition, 77. according to the custom of the manor, 73.
		The verge; which differeth from the former only in the use of the white rod in their surrenders, 78.
	Condition of it; in regard of	The quality of it is a base tenure, for they have no freehold by course of common law, 81; although by custom they may have estates of inheritance, 81, 82.
		The circumstance
		In passing it from a man, which is by surrender; for if he alien by deed, it is a forfeiture, 74. And this Surrender is
		Into the hands of the lord, to the use of him who should have it by some custom, 78.
		Into the hands of the bailiff or issue, or of two honest men of the same lordship, and they to present it at the next court, 79. And generally all such customs not repugnant to reason are allowable, 80.
		In continuing of it being paid by Sink, which must be by plaint in their lord's court, 76.
		Sustentation of their houses by reparation, 83.
		Service, scil. such a tenant must do fealty, 84. 132.

Homage. Lib. 2. Cap. 1.

Homage.	The nature of this service ; scil. it is the most honourable a tenant can do to his lord, 85.
	The persons which should	Make it. They must have a greater estate than for life ; for no tenant for life can take or do homage ; therefore one entitled to be tenant per curtesy during the life of his wife shall do homage ; after her death not, 90.
		Take it ; none but the lord himself, 92.
	The perform- ance of it ; where note	The manner how it must be done. viz. the tenant be bare-headed, kneel on both knees, and hold both his hands between the hands of his lord, and shall say, if he hold	Of him only, " I become your man," &c. unless he be a man of religion, or some sole, and they shall leave out these words, 85, 86, 87.
Of more lords, he shall say in the end, " saving my faith which I owe unto my sovereign lord the king and other lords," &c. 89.
	The service itself.	The times how often it shall be done, viz.	One tender, if the lord refuse, excuseth the tenant of being distrained for it, until his lord demand it again, and it be denied, 150, 151.
			Once doing of it excuseth him for his life against any that comes in by descent ; but not against him that recovers by any title, 148, 149.

Fealty. Lib. 2. Cap. 2.

Fealty.	{	What manner of service this is.	{	Fealty, in English, is as much as fidelitas in Latin, 91.
		It is incident to all tenures but frankalmoigne, 131.
	{	How long it is to be performed ; where note	{	The persons which should	Make it ; scil. for life or years, but not tenant at will, 93. 132.
					Take it ; the steward or bailiff of the lord's court, 92.
The forms of it, 88. 91. 94.

Efcuage. Lib. 2. Cap. 3.

Knights Service. Lib. 2. Cap. 4.

Socage. Lib. 2. Cap. 5.

Socage.	The tenure itself; where note	The divers sorts thereof.	Where one holdeth lands by certain service for all manner of services, as homage and rent, or homage and fealty, or homage, fealty, and rent, 117. By fealty only, if the lord refuse no other service, 118. 130. 131. By escuage certain, 120. to pay a sum certain for guarding a castle, 121. and generally, by any service which is not knights service, 118.
		The denomination socagium , or servitia socæ ; the name whereof remaineth, although for the most part the manner of the service by mutual consent be altered into an annual rent, 119.
	The incidents appertaining	To the lord of whom the lands are holden, relief after the death of such a tenant: where note	How much must be paid for relief, scil. the value of a whole year's rent to the lord, 126. 128. When to be paid, scil. immediately, or else the lord may distrain for it, unless the services be of that quality that they cannot be gotten but at some certain time of the year, 127. 129.
		To the gardian in socage.	Ward: for if such tenant die, his heirs within the age of 14 years, his prochein amy , to whom the inheritance cannot come shall always have such heir in ward until he be 14 years of age; but he must account for the profit, the reasonable expences deducted, and so must any other that taketh upon him as gardian; but account will not lie against executors but for the profits after the age of 14 years. Quære , whether it shall be brought against him for profits after 14 as gardian or bailiff, 123. 124. 125. Marriage doth not of right belong to the gardian; but if he do marry his ward, he must account for it, 123.

Frankalmoigne. Lib. 2. Cap. 6.

Frankalmoigne.	The commencement of this tenure.	To whom lands may be so given to be holden, scil. to a man of the holy church, or to be a special corporation, 133. 134. By whom. By the king only, unless it be by prescription, or else before the statute of quia emptores terrarum , an. 18. Ed. 140.
		How long, scil. so long as the privy continueth; for if	The tenancy to be alienated by tenant in frankalmoigne, or that the reversion cometh to another than the donor and his heirs, this tenure is determined, 139. 141.
	The continuance thereof.	In what manner; where note	What service the tenant must do, scil. no terrene service, or other service certain, for then he is called tenant by divine service, 137; but in conscience he ought to make prayers for, &c. but is not compellable otherwise than by complaint to the ordinary visitor, 135. 136. 138. What advantage this tenure hath, scil. it draweth to it acquittal, 142.

Homage Auncestell. Lib. 2. Cap. 7.

Homage Auncestell.	When it shall be called homage auncestell, scil. when it hath continued in the lineal descent of lord and tenant without alienation, 143. 147. and it may be either in socage or knights service tenure, 152.
	How it differeth from other services, scil. in	Acquittal, 144. Warranty, if the lord then being hath received homage of the tenant or his ancestors, else may the lord disclaim, 143. 145. And upon disclaimer the feignory is extinct, and the tenant shall hold of the lord next paramount, therefore an abbot or prior may not disclaime, 146.

Grand Serjeantie. Lib. 2. Cap. 8.

Grand Serjeantie.	The service wherein.	The several kinds thereof.	When one holdeth of the king to do some special service to the king (for the most part within the realm), 155. in proper person, 153. or by some other, 157. When one holdeth of the king by cornage, 156.
		The nature of it.	Called grand serjeanty, quasi magnum servitium : it can be held of none but the king, 154. 156.
	The incidents thereto.	Ward, 158.
		Marriage, 107, 108. Relief, which is the value of the land for a year, ultra reprises , 154.

Petit Serjeantie. Lib. 2. Cap. 9.

This is to render some small thing touching the war, as bow, arrow, &c. 159. which although it be focage in effect, 160, yet it can be held of none but of the king, 161.

Burgage. Lib. 2. Cap. 10.

Villinage. Lib. 2. Cap. 11.

Rents. Lib. 2. Cap. 12.

Parceners. Lib. 3. Cap. 1. and 2.

Joyntenants. Lib. 3. Cap. 3.

Tenants in Common. Lib. 3. Cap. 4.

Estates upon Condition. Lib. 3. Cap. 5.

Estates upon Condition. Lib. 3. Cap. 5. Continued.

Estates upon Condition. Lib. 3. Cap. 6. and 7. Continued.

Descents. Cap. 6.

Continual Claim. Cap. 7.

Confirmation. Lib. 3. Cap. 9.

Attornment. Lib. 3. Cap. 10.

Discontinuance. Lib. 3. Cap. 11.

Remitter. Lib. 3. Cap. 12.

Warranty. Lib. 3. Cap. 13.

- Warranty. {
- The several kinds of it; which are,
 - Lineal. where a man maketh a feoffment with warranty, and this descends to his son: the cause of which name is not for the lineal descent of it, but because the land should have lineally descended if such warranty had not been, 703. 706. 715. The like is of the feoffment of the mother with warranty, 713, 714.
 - Collateral. This is where he that maketh the warranty is collateral to the title; and he upon whom the warranty descendeth cannot convey the same land from the warranty, 705. 717; as
 - If the father disseise the son, and after make a feoffment with warranty, 704.
 - If a man be disseised of lands in fee, and have issue two sons, the youngest releaseth with warranty, this is collateral to the eldest, 707, 708.
 - If the disseisee were of lands in taile, the warranty of the uncle is collateral, 719. And so if a man have three sons, and entail his land to the eldest, with remainder to the second, &c. and the eldest doth discontinue with warranty, 716. 719. As it is of sons, so it is of daughters, 710.
 - Commencing by disseisin; as if the father, &c. being lessee for years, or at will, of his sons, make a feoffment with warranty, 698. or if he be jointenant with his son, and make a feoffment of all the warranty, 700. So if guardian in socage or chivalry make feoffment, 699. So if a disseisee immediately make a feoffment over with warranty, 702. or if one make a feoffment of the house of A.B. with warranty to barretors of the country, for fear of whom A. B. departeth the house, 701.
 - The quality of it.
 - What words will make a warranty, viz. Warrantizo only, 733.
 - What effect a warranty is of, viz. to bar or rebutt, &c. Vide A. infra.

A. What effect a warranty is of, viz. to bar or rebutt, &c.; where note,

- What warranties do bar, viz.
 - Lineal, for lands in fee, but not in fee tail without affets, 712.
 - Collateral barreth both, but in cases especially provided, 712. as by the Stat. of Gloucester the warranty of the tenant by the curtesy barreth not without affets, although it be by fine levied by the husband only, 724. 728, 729, 730, 731, 732. But tenant in dower or for life are not within the statute's compass, 725. yet if such warranty descend upon an infant, he shall not be barred, 726.
 - Commencing by disseisin doth never bar, 697.
- Whom they bar, viz. none but those upon whom they do descend; therefore they must needs attach in the ancestor, and the warranty by devise barreth not, 734. and warranty doth descend always upon the heir, therefore it never descends upon the brother of the half-blood, 717. nor where the blood is corrupted, 745. 746, 747, at the common law; not by custom, as borough English, or gavelkind, 718. 735, 736.
- How long they bar, viz. until
 - The estate whereunto they be annexed be
 - At an end, 738.
 - Defeated, 741, 742, 743, 744.
 - The warranty be released, and he on whom the warranty doth descend hath the release to shew, 748.

Services by which all Lands and Tenements are held.

Services by which all lands and tenements are held, are either

Free; which are called tenures in socage; and are Spiritual.

In frankalmoigne; which is, where a religious house or person having capacity to take the grant of lands holds by prescription, or by grant before 18 h.d. 1. of any common person and his heirs, or by grant of the last time of the king and his heirs in eleemosynam liberam, without any certain service limited.

Incidents:

No fealty, no distress.

Acquittal by the lord against all lords paramount, for the not doing of which a writ of mesne lies.

It may be changed into a simple tenancy by fealty,

When the lord of the land is not heir to the donor.

If the tenant grant over to a secular person.

For divine service; when a religious house or person enabled to take any lands in grant holds of his lord lands by any certain divine service to be done.

Incidents:

Fealty to the lord.

Distress by the lord.

Temporal.

Proper to the king, petit serjeanty; which is, where one holds of the king himself, to render at some certain time some piece of armour or other thing touching the war.

Fealty only; where one holds per fidelitatem tantum; and it is incident to Every estate or term, so that it be certain.

Every service but tenure in frankalmoigne.

Every attornment and change of heir.

Homage; a service to be done to the lord himself by the tenant in fee simple, fee tail in his own or another's right once in his life, for which the lord cannot distrain after refusal, till the lord require it, and the tenant refuse. It is

Ordinary; which is to be done sometimes in the life of the tenant, upon legal recovery of lands held to the recoverer.

Common to the king with the subject; and are either,

Simple

Ancestrel; where the homage hath continued time out of memory of man in the blood of the lord and tenant.

Incidents:

Warranty; which binds the lord after the homage received to warranty.

Acquittal; to acquit the tenant of any service paramount.

Compound *.

Bond services are either

Knight's service; and it draws unto it ward, marriage, and relief.

Proper to the king only, grand serjeanty; as to carry his banner, or do some corporal and honourable service,

With escuage; which always draws to it homage, which draws to it fealty.

Without escuage

Common to the king with others:

Special castleguard, by the corporal guarding of a castle or other place, with or without escuage.

Common escuage, uncertain.

Villinage; which binds one and the issue of his body and estate to the will of another; and a villain is Regardant to a manor.

In gros,

By the confession of the villain himself in a court of record, which binds him and his issue after.

By prescription; that the lord and his ancestors have been seised of the villain and his ancestors by grant of the lord who had him as regardant to his manor.

Every villain may be enfranchised

By his lord.

By himself †.

* For which Vide A. subsequent page.

† For which also Vide B. subsequent page.

Services by which all Lands and Tenements are held. Continued.

END OF THE ANALYSIS.

THE
F I R S T P A R T
OF THE
I N S T I T U T E S
OF THE
L A W S OF E N G L A N D.

Chap. I.

Fee simple.

Se^{ct}. I.

*T*enant en fee simple est celuy, que ad terres ou tenements a tener a luy et a ses beires a tous jours. Et est appel en Latin, feodum simplex, quia feodum idem est quod hæreditas (1), et simplex idem est quod legitimum vel purum. Et sic feodum simplex idem est quod hæreditas legitima, vel hæreditas pura. Car si home voile purchaser terres ou tenements en fee simple, il covient de aver ceux parolx en son purchase, A aver et tener a luy et a ses beires; car ceux parolx (ses beires) sont lestate denheritance. Car si home

*T*enant in fee simple is he, which hath lands or tenements to hold to him and his heires for ever. And it is called in Latin, feodum simplex, for feodum is the same that inheritance is, and simplex is as much as to say, lawfull or pure. And so feodum simplex signifies a lawfull or pure inheritance. For if a man would purchase lands or tenements in fee simple, it behooveth him to have these words in his purchase, To have and to hold to him and to his heires; for these words (his heires) make the estate of inheritance. For if a man pur-

*T*enant, in Latin tenens, is derived of the verbe teneo, and hath in the law five significations. 1. It signifies the estate of the land, as when the tenant in a præcipe of land, pleads, quod non tenet, &c. this is as much as to say, that he hath not seisin of the freehold of the land in question. And in this sense doth our author take it in this place: and therefore he saith, tenant in fee simple is he which hath lands to hold to him and his heires. 2. It signifieth the tenure or the service whereby the lands and tenements be holden; and in this sense it is said in the writ of right, quæ clamat tenere de te per liberum servitium, &c. And in this signification he is called a tenant or holder; because all the lands and tenements in England, in the hands of subjects, are holden mediately or immediately of

Vide Se^{ct}. 85.

8. H. 7. 10. 18. E. 3. 35.

24. E. 3. 65. 66. 44. E. 3. 5.

48. E. 3. 9.

(2 Inst. 501.)

(4 Inst. 192.)

(1) Sir Thomas Smith and Dr. Cowell find fault with Littleton for this explanation of fee; but without the least reason. Though fee, in its general acceptation, signifies land holden, as distinguished from land allodial; yet in our law, it is most frequently used in a particular sense, to denote the quantity of estate in land, which is always the sense of the word when we say, that one is tenant or seised in fee. Therefore Littleton is not merely justified in writing, that fee is the same as inheritance; for if in describing who is tenant in fee simple, he had explained the word otherwise, he would have misled the student. The censure of Littleton would have been spared, if the difference between attempting to give the etymology of fee and its general sense, and professing only to explain a particular use of the word, had been attended to. See Smith's Commonwealth of Engl. b. 3. c. 10. Cow. Interp. verbum Fee, and Wright's Ten. 149. In this last book Littleton is well defended. Lord Coke's Comment on fee is very full to the same purpose. See Post. 1. b.

Lib. 1. Cap. 1. Of Fee simple. Sect. 1.

(12. Co. 9. Case of Stanneries.)

Mir. des Justic. c. 1. sect. 3.
Customs de Normandy. cap. 28.

Leff. de 16. R. 2. cap. 5.
14. El. Dy. 313. a. 1. Co. 47. in Alton Woods case.
(Cro. Cha. 82.)

Bract. lib. 1. cap. 2.

of the king (1). For in the law of England we have not properly, allodium, that is, any subjects land that is not holden; unless you will take allodium for ex solido, as it is often taken in the Booke of Domesday (2): and tenants in fee simple are there called alodarii or alodarii. And he is called a tenant, because he holdeth of some superior lord by some service. And therefore the king in this sense cannot be said to be a (3) tenant, because he hath no superior but God Almighty; prædium domini regis est directum dominium, cuius nullus auctor est, nisi Deus. And as Bracton saith, Omnis quidem sub eo, et ipse sub nullo, nisi tantum sub Deo. The possessions of the king are called sacra patrimonialia, and dominica coronæ regis. But though a subject hath not properly directum, yet hath he utile dominium. Of these tenants our author speaketh in his second booke. 3. Also tenere signifieth performance, as in the writ of covenant, quod teneat conventionem, that is, that he hold or performe his covenant. 4. And likewise it signifieth to be bound, as it is said in every common obligation, teneri et firmiter obligari. Lastly, It signifieth to deeme or judge, as in 38. E. 3. c. 4. It shall be holden for none (that is) judged or deemed for none, and so we commonly say, it is holden in our bookes. And these severall significations doe properly belong to our tenant in fee simple. For he hath the estate of the land, he holdeth the land of some superiour lord, and is to performe the services due, and thereunto he is bounden by doome and judgement of law. Of the severall estates of land our author treateth in his first booke, and beginneth with fee simple, because all other estates and interests are derived out of the same.

purchase terres per ceux parolx, A aver et tener a luy a tous jours; ou per tiels parols, A aver et tener a luy et a ses assignes a tous jours: en ceux deux cases il ny ad estate forsque pur terme de vie, pur ceo que il fault ceux parols (ses heires) les queux parolx tantselement font lestate denheritance en tous seoffments et grants.

chafe lands by these words, To have and to hold to him for ever; or by these words, To have and to hold to him and his assignes for ever: in these two cases he hath but an estate for term of life, for that there lacke these words (his heires) which words onely make an estate of inheritance in all seoffments and grants.

Brit. fo. 83. 207. 208. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5. & lib. 3. cap. 8. Bract. lib. 4. 263. (4 Inst. 202.)
Domesday. Mir. des Just. cap. 2. sect. 15. 17. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 5. 6. 7. Brit. cap. 34. fo. 89. Flet. lib. 3. cap. 2. 8. & 9. & lib. 5. cap. 5. [4] Bract. fo. 263. & 207. Pl. Com. in Walf. cal. 7. H. 4. 46. 8. H. 4. 15. 18. H. 8. 3. b. 27. Aff. 33. 18. Aff. 5. 18. Ed. 3. 46. 24. E. 3. 28. 9. Ed. 4. 18. 16. H. 7. 4. 10. E. 3. Account 56. 22. R. 2. Disc. 50. 12. Ed. 4. 3. 15. E. 4. 8. Dy. 8. El. 232. 253. 12. H. 8. 3. 4. H. 7. 2. The Case of a person which hath a qualified fee, see in the title of Desc.
• Vide Sect. 4.
[b] Bract. lib. 4. fo. 263. Flet. lib. 5. cap. 5. Brit. fo. 205. 207. [c] 2. Aff. p. 4. 12. Aff. 38. 12. E. 3. tit. Hors de son fee. 28. 28. Aff. 41. 7. H. 4. 30. 2. H. 6. 1. (9 Co. 20. & 34. b. 2. Inst. 296. Cro. Jam. 127. Hob. 108. Doctr. Plac. 132. 216.)

Fee simple. Fee (4) commeth of the French fief, (i. e.) prædium beneficium, and legally signifieth inheritance, as our author himselfe hereafter expoundeth it. And simple is added, for that it is descendible to his heires generally, that is, simply, without restraint to the heires of his body, or the like. Feodum est quod quis tenet ex quacunque causâ, sive sit tenementum, sive redditus, &c. In Domesday it is called feodum. [a] Of fee simple, it is commonly holden, that there be three kinds, viz. fee simple absolute, fee simple conditionall, and fee simple qualified or base fee (5). But the more genuine and apt division, were to divide fee, that is, inheritance, into three parts, viz. simple or absolute, conditionall, and qualified or base. For this word (simple) properly excludeth both conditions and limitations, that defeat or abridge the fee. • Hereby it appeareth, that fee in our legall understanding signifieth, that the land belongs to us and our heires, in respect whereof the owner is said to be seised in fee, and in this sense the king is said to be seised in fee. [b] It is also taken as it is holden of another by service, and that belongeth onely to the subject; Item dicitur feodum alio modo ejus qui alium seoffat, et quod quis tenet ab alio, ut si sit qui dicat, talis tenet de me tot feoda per servitium militare. And Fleta saith, Poterit unus tenere in feodo quoad servitia, sicut dominus capitalis, et non in dominico; alius in feodo et dominico, et non in servitio, sicut libere tenens alicujus. [c] And therefore if a stranger claim a feignory, and disteine and avow for the service, the tenant may plead, that the tenancy is extra feodum, &c. of him (that is) out of the feignory, or not holden of him that claimeth it; but he cannot plead extra feodum, &c. unless he take the tenancy, that is, the state of the land upon him. Of fee in the first sense our author treateth in this first booke; and as it is taken in the second sense in his second booke: and of the third you shall read in our author, Sect. 13. 643. 644. 645. and plentifully in our books quoted in the margin.

Terres ou tenements. Here it is to be observed, that a man may have a fee simple in three kinds of hereditaments, (6) viz. reall, personall, and mixt: Reall, as lands and tenements, whereof our author here speaketh. Personall, as king Edward the first in the thirteenth yeare of his raigne, concessit Edmundo fratri suo charissimo, quod ipse et hæredes sui habeant, ad requisitionem suam, in Cancellariâ nostrâ et hæredum nostrorum, justiciarios

Rot. pat. 13 E. 1.

(1) Same doctrine, 50. Aff. pl. 1. post. 65. Plowd. 498. The origin and principle of this doctrine is well explained in Wright's Ten. 58. and 2. Blackst. Comm. 48. ed. 5. See also Wright's Ten. 137. and Mad. Baron. Anglic. 25.

(2) See Post. 5. a. For particulars concerning Domesday Book, see the books cited in Wright's Ten. 56. in note p. and also an Account of Domesday Book, and an Account of Danegeld, both printed by order of the Antiq. Soc. in 1756.

(3) For examples and consequences of this doctrine, see Dy. 154. Plowd. 212. Post. 16. a. 6. Co. 5. b. Finch fol. ed. 7. 2. Ro. Abr. 513. 514. post. 2. b. n. 4.

(4) For the derivation of the word Fee, see Wright's Ten. 3. and the books there cited.

(5) See the same division of fee in 10. Co. 97. b. 2. Inst. 96. Vaugh. 273. 2. L. Raym. 1148. and for instances of a qualified fee, see post. 27. Plowd. 557. 10. Co. 97. 7. E. 4. 12. a. Cro. Ch. 430. Hardr. 147.

(6) For the extent of the word hereditament, and the difference between that and tenement, see post. 6. a.

ciarios ad placita forestarum, quas idem frater noster habet ex dono domini regis Henrici patris nostri, secundum assis. forestæ tenend', &c. In this case the grantee and his heirs had a personall inheritance in making of a request to have letters patents of commission to have justices assigned to him to heare and determine of the pleas of the forrests, and concerneth neither lands or tenements. And so it is if an annuity be granted to a man and his heirs, it is a fee simple personall; (1) et sic de similibus. And lastly hereditaments mixt both of the realty and personalty. As the abbot of Whitbye in the county of Yorke having a forrest of the gift of William of Percie founder of that abby, and by the charters of king John and of other his progenitors, king Henry the third did grant abbati et conventui de Whitbye, quod ipsi et eorum successores in perpetuum habeant viridarios suos proprios de libertate sua de Whitbye eligend' de cetero in pleno com. Eborum, prout moris est, ad responsiones et presentationes faciend' de transgressionibus, quas amodo fieri continget de venatione intra metas forestæ suæ de Whitbye, quam habent ex donatione Willi. de Percy et Alani de Percy filii ejus, et redditione et concessione domini Johannis quondam regis Angliæ patris nostri, et confirmatione nostrâ, coram justiciariis nostris itinerantibus ad placita forestæ in partibus illis et non alibi, sicut viridarii forestæ nostræ hujusmodi responsiones et presentationes, facere debent, et consueverunt. Et si contingat aliquos forinsecos, qui non sunt de libertate predictorum abbatis et conventus, transgressionem facere de venatione intra metas forestæ predictæ, quos predicti viridarii attachiare non possunt, volumus et concedimus pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quod hujusmodi transgressores per justiciarios forestæ nostræ ultra Trentam attachientur, ad presentationem viridariorum predictæ. ad respondendum inde coram justiciariis nostris itinerantibus ad placita forestæ nostræ in partibus illis, cum ibid. ad placitandum venerint prout secundum assisam et consuetudinem forestæ nostræ fuerint faciend'. Which charter was pleaded upon the claime made by the abbot of Whitbye, before Willoughby, Hungerford, and Hanbury, justices in eire in the forrest of Pickering, which eire began anno 8. E. 3. And these before them were allowed. And when the king createth an earl of such a county or other place, to hold that dignity to him and his heirs, this dignity is personall and also concerneth lands and tenements. (2) But of this matter more shall be said in the next Chapter, Sect. 14. and 15.

(4. Inst. 314. Cro. Ja. 155.)

Ro. Pat. an. 47. H. 3.
Itun. Pickering. 8. E. 3.
Ro. 42.

(7. Co. 33.)

Et est appel en Latin feodum simplex, quia feodum idem est, quod hæreditas. Here Littleton himselfe teacheth the signification of feodum, according to that which hath been said, which only is to be applied to fee simple pure and absolute. And this and all his other interpretations of words and etimologies throughout all his three bookes (wherein the studious reader will observe many) are perspicuous, and ever per notoria et nunquam ignotum per ignotius, and are most necessary, for ignoratis terminis ignoratur et ars.

Bracl. lib. 4. cap. 9. fo. 263.
Britt. cap. 32. & 79.
For interpretation of words and etymologies, vid. Sect. 9. 18. 95.
116. 119. 135. 154. 164. 174.
184. 186. 194. 204. 234. 267.
268. 332. 337. 424. 520. 592.
645. 689. 733.

Simplex idem est quod legitimum vel purum, hereof he treateth onely in this place. And Littleton saith well, that simplex idem est quod purum. Simplex enim dicitur quia sine plicis; et purum dicitur, quod est merum solum sine additione. Simplex donatio et pura est, ubi nulla addita est conditio sive modus; simplex enim datur, quod nullo additamento datur.

Bracl. lib. 2. cap. 39. fo. 92.
62. b. lib. 4. cap. 28.
Fleta lib. 3. cap. 8.
Bracl. lib. 2. cap. 5. &c.
Britt. cap. 34.

Hæreditas legitima vel hæreditas pura. And therefore it is well said, quod donationum alia simplex et pura, quæ, nullo jure civili vel naturali cogente, nullo precedente metu vel interveniente, ex mera gratuitâque liberalitate donantis procedit, et ubi nullo casu vellet donator ad se reverti quod dedit; alia sub modo conditione vel ob causam, in quibus casibus non propriè fit donatio, cum donator id ad se reverti velit, sed quædam potius feodalis dimissio; alia absoluta et larga; alia stricta et coarctata, sicut certis heredibus, quibusdam a successione exclusis, &c. And therefore seeing fee simple is hæreditas legitima vel pura, it plainly confirmeth, that the division of fee is by his authority rather to be divided as is aforesaid than fee simple. And he saith well in the disjunctive legitima vel pura, for every fee simple is not legitimum. For a disseisor, abator, intruder, usurper, &c. have a fee simple, but it is not a lawfull fee. So as every man, that hath a fee simple, hath it either by right or by wrong. If by right, then he hath it either by purchase or descent. If by wrong, then either by disseisin, intrusion, abatement, usurpation, (3) &c. In this Chapter he treateth onely of a lawfull fee simple, and divideth the same as is aforesaid.

Fleta lib. 3. ca. 3. Plowd. 58. b.

Car si home purchase. Persons capable of purchase are of two sorts, persons naturall created of God, as I. S. I. N. &c. and persons incorporate or politique created by the policy of man; (and therefore they are called bodies politique) and these be of two sorts, viz. either sole, or aggregate of many: againe aggregate of many, either of all persons capable, or of one person capable, and the rest incapable or dead in law, as in the Chapter of Discontinuance, Sect. 655. shall be shewed. Some men have capacitie to purchase, but not abilitie to hold. Some capacity to purchase and abilitie to hold or not to hold, at the election of them or others. Some capacitie to take and to hold. Some neither capacitie to take nor to hold. And some specially disabled to take some particular thing.

Persons capable of purchase.

Who have ability to grant. Vide
Sect. 57.

If an alien Christian or infidel purchase houses, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to him and

11. Eliz. Dier. 283.
11. H. 4. 20. & 26.
7. E. 4. 29.
(1. Ro. Abr. 194.)

(1) An annuity of inheritance is held to be forfeitable for treason as an hereditament, 7. Co. 34. b. Yet being only personal, it is not an hereditament within the statute of mortmain of the 7. E. 1. st. 2. nor is it intailable within the statute de donis. See post. 2. a. b. & 20. a.

(2) Therefore such dignity has been adjudged to be intailable within the statute de donis. See post. 20. a.

(3) For the difference between such estates by wrong, see post. 277. a. and that they cannot be said to be by purchase, see post. 3. b. & 18. b.

Lib. 1. Cap. 1. Of Fee simple. Sect. 1.

32. H. 6. 23. Pl. Com. 483.

5. Mar. Br. tit. Denizen. 22.

Pasch. 29. Eliz. in Sir James Crofts case.

49. Aff. pl. 2. 49. E. 3. 11.

(5. Co. 52. b.)

Magna Charta. cap. 36.

7. E. 1. stat. 2. de religiosis.

W. 2. 13. E. 1. cap. 33.

15. R. 2. cap. 5.

23. H. 8. cap. 10.

39. El. cap. 5.

23. H. 3. Aff. 426.

29. Aff. p. 17. Brit. fo. 32.

Fleta lib. 3. cap. 4. & 5.

19. E. 2. tit. Vil. 34.

29. E. 3. Ibid. 13. 21. E. 3. 5.

4. H. 6. 9. 19. H. 6. 63. 65.

3. E. 4. 14. 19. E. 3. Mortm. 8.

34. H. 6. 37. 19. H. 6. 63.

(Plowd. 502. a.)

7. E. 4. 14.

* Pl. Com. 193. in Wroteffeye's case.

1. e. statut. de Religiosis.

7. E. 1. stat. 2.

(Cro. Ja. 320. 1. Ro. Abr. 731.)

43. Aff. p. 23.

Braet. lib. 2. fo. 12. & 32.

and his heires, albeit he can have no heires, yet he is of capacite to take a fee simple (1) but not to hold (2). For upon an office found the king shall have it by his prerogative (3), of whom soever the land is holden (4). And so it is if the alien doth purchase land and die, the law doth cast the freehold and inheritance upon the king (5). If an alien purchase any estate of freehold in houses, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, the king upon office found shall have them. If an alien be made denizen and purchase lands, and die without issue, the lord of the fee shall have the escheat and not the king. But as to a lease for yeares, there is a diversitie betwene a lease for yeares of a house for the habitation of a merchant stranger being an alien, whose king is in league with ours, and a lease for yeares of lands, meadows, pastures, woods, and the like. For if he take a lease for yeares of lands, meadows, &c. upon office found, the king shall have it (6). But of a house for habitation he may take a lease for yeares as incident to commerce, for without habitation he cannot merchandize or trade (7). But if he depart, or relinquish the realme, the king shall have the lease. So it is if he die possessed thereof, neither his executors or administrators shall have it, but the king: (8) for he had it only for habitation as necessary to his trade or traffique, and not for the benefit of his executor or administrator. But if the alien be no merchant, then the king shall have the lease for yeares, albeit it were for his habitation (9), and so it is if he be an alienemie. And all this was resolved by the judges assembled together for that purpose in the case of sir James Croft, Pasch. 29. of the raigne of queene Elizabeth. Also if a man commit felony, and after purchase lands, and after is attainted, he had capacite to purchase but not to hold it, for in that case the lord of the fee shall have the escheat (10): and if a man be attainted of felony, yet he hath capacity to purchase to him and to his heires, albeit he can have no heire; but he cannot hold it, for in that case the king shall have it by his prerogative, and not the lord of the fee; for a man attainted hath no capacite to purchase (being a man civilliter mortuus) but onely for the benefit of the king, no more than the alien-née hath. If any sole corporation or aggregate of many, either ecclesiastical or temporall (for the words of the statute be si quis religiosus vel alius) purchase lands or tenements in fee, they have capacity to take but not to retaine (unless they have a sufficient licence in that (11) behalfe); for within the yeare after the alienation the next lord of the fee may enter, and if he doe not then the next immediate lord from time to time to have half a yeare, and for default of all the mesne lords then the king to have the land so aliened for ever, which is to be understood of such inheritances as may be holden. But of such inheritances as are not holden, as villeines, rents-charges, commons, and the like, the king shall have them presently by a favourable interpretation of the statute. An annuity graunted to them is not mortmaine, because it chargeth the person only. Some have said that it is called mortmaine manus mortua, quia possessio eorum est immortalis, manus pro possessione, et mortua pro immortalis, and the rather for that by the laws and statutes of the realme all ecclesiastical persons are restrained to alien. * Others say it is called manus mortua per antiphrasin, because bodies politique and corporate never die. Others say that it is called mortmaine by resemblance to the holding of a man's hand that is ready to die, for that he then holdeth he letteth not goe till he be dead. These and such others are framed out of wit and invention; but the true cause of the name, and the meaning thereof, was taken from the effects, as it is expressed in the statute itself, per quod quæ servitia ex hujusmodi feodis debentur, et quæ ad defensionem regni ab initio provisæ fuerunt indebitè subtrahuntur, et capitales domini eschaetas suas amittunt, so as the lands were said to come to dead hands as to the lords; for that by alienation in mortmaine, they lost wholly their escheats, and in effect their knights services for the defence of the realme, wards, marriages, relieves, and the like, and therefore was called a dead hand, for that a dead hand yeeldeth no service.

I passe over villeins or bondmen, who have power to purchase lands, but not to retyne them against their lords, because you shall reade at large of them in their proper place in the Chapter of Villenage.

An infant or minor (whom we call any that is under the age of 21 yeares) hath, without consent of any other, capacity to purchase; for it is intended for his benefit, and at his full age he may either agree thereunto, and perfect it, or without any cause to be alledged waive or disagree to the purchase, and so may his heires after him if he agreed not thereunto after his full age.

A man of non sane memory may without the consent of any other, purchase lands, but he himselfe (12) cannot waive it; but if he die in his madnesse, or after his memory recover, without agreement thereunto, his heire may waive and disagree to the state, without any cause shewed; and so of an idiot. But if the man of non sane memory recover his memory, and agree unto it, it is unavoidable.

If an abbot purchase lands to him and his successors without the consent of his convent, he himselfe cannot waive it; but his successor may upon just cause shewed, as if a greater rent were reserved thereupon than the value of the land, or the like; but he cannot waive it unless it be upon just cause, et sic de similibus, prælati ecclesiæ suæ conditionem meliorare possunt, deteriorare nequunt. And in another place he saith, Est enim ecclesiæ ejusdem conditionis, quæ fungitur vice minoris.

But

(1) Therefore on a covenant to stand seized, an use will arise for an alien. Godb. 275. But by act of law, as by descent, he cannot even take for the benefit of the king. 7. Co. Calvin's Case, 25. a. Post. 31. b. and 1. Ventr. 417. See in Dy. 283. b. the case of a feoffment to an alien and another to uses. — (2) If the purchase is made with the king's licence, it seems that he may hold. See 14. H. 4. 20. How the law is, where an alien purchases in the name of a trustee, see King and Holland, Styl. 20. &c. All. 14. and 1. Ro. Abr. 194. See also 13. G. 3. c. 14. which enables aliens to lend money on land, &c. in the West Indies. — (3) But not before office, except in case of the alien's death. Adj. 5. Co. 52. b. Before office, recovery by an alien tenant in tail will bar remainders. Adj. Gouldsb. 102. 4. Leon. 84. — (4) If an alien purchases a copyhold, it is said, that it shall escheat to the lord. Dy. 2. b. in marg. but see 1. Mod. 17. and All. 14. — (5) See in Plowd. 229. several cases, in which, for a like reason, the king is intitled without office. — (6) Accord. 7. Co. Calvin's Case. Dy. 2. b. in marg. — (7) But 32. H. 8. c. 16. f. 13. makes void all leases of houses or shops to an alien being an artificer or handicraftsman. This law, however contrary it may seem to good policy and the spirit of commerce, still remains unrepealed; but in favour of aliens, it has been construed very stricly. See 1. Sid. 309. 1. Saund. 7. 2. Show. 135. 3. Mod. 94. 3. Salk. 29. In the latter book a lease to an alien artificer is said to be forfeitable to the king at common law; but for this extraordinary doctrine no authority is cited. As to the capacity of aliens to take personal chattels, see 2. Ro. Rep. 93. — (8) Contra 1. And. 25. N. Bendl. 36. See in Cro. Cha. 8. a case where administration to an intestate alien was granted to his nephews and nieces, who were also aliens, and part of the estate consisted of leases for yeares. — (9) If this be the common law, ought not its severity to be corrected by the legislature? To deny the right of taking a house for habitation, to aliens not being merchants, is like forbidding all other foreigners to come and reside here. See 7. Co. Calvin's case, 17. a. where lord Coke seems to express himself without distinguishing between aliens being merchants and other aliens. — (10) Tenant in tail is guilty of murder, and before conviction levies a fine. It was a question, whether the fine should bar the issue for the lord's benefit; and the court inclined to think that it should; but no judgment was given. 1. Willf. 2. Part 220. — (11) As to this, see post. 98. 20. — (12) Fitzherbert argues strongly, that a noncompos may plead his disability to avoid his own acts as well as an infant. Fitz. Nat. Br. 202. See post. 247. a. & b. much curious learning on the subject, and also 2. Blackst. Com. ed. 5. p. 291. where the progress of the opinions on this subject is critically stated.

But no simile holds in every thing, according to the ancient saying, Nullum simile quatuor pedibus currit. [a] An hermaphrodite may purchase according to that sexe which prevaieth. A feme covert cannot take any thing of the gift of her husband (1), but is of capacity to purchase of others without the consent of her husband. And of this opinion was Littleton in our books, and in this book, Sec. 677. but her husband may disagree thereunto, and devest the whole estate; but if he neither agree nor disagree, the purchase is (2) good; but after his death, albeit her husband agreed thereunto, yet she may without any cause to be alledged waive the same, and so may her heires also, if after the decease of her husband she herselfe agreed not thereunto.

[b] A wife (uxor) is a good name of purchase, without a Christian name; and so it is, if a Christian name be added and mistaken, as Em for Emelyn, &c. for utile per inutile non vitiatur. But the queene, the comfort of the king of England, is an exempt person from the king by the common law, and is of ability and capacity to purchase and grant without the king. Of which see more at large, Sec. 200.

[c] The parishioners or inhabitants, or probi homines of Dale (3), or the church-wardens are not capable to purchase lands; but goods they are, unlesse it were in ancient time when such grants were allowed (4).

[d] An ancient grant by the lord to the commoners in such a waste, that a way leading to their common should not be streightened, was good; but otherwise it is of such a grant at this day. [e] And so in ancient time a grant made to a lord, et hominibus suis, tam liberis quam nativis, or the like, was good; but they are not of capacity to purchase by such a name at this day. But yet at this day if the king grant to a man to have the goods and chattels de hominibus suis, or de tenentibus suis, or de residuis infra feodum, &c. it is good; for there they are not named as purchasers or takers, but for another man's benefit, who hath capacity to purchase or take.

[f] And regularly it is requisite, that the purchaser be named by the name of baptism and his surname, and that speciall heed be taken to the name of baptism, for that a man cannot have two names of baptism as he may have divers surnames (5). [g] And it is not safe in writs, pleadings, grants, &c. to translate surnames into Latin. As if the surname of one be Fitzwilliam, or Williamson, if he translate him to Filius Willi, if in truth his father had any other Christian name than William, the writ, &c. shall abate; for Fitzwilliam or Williamson is his surname, whatsoever Christian name his father had, therefore the lawyer never translates surnames. And yet in some cases, though the name of baptism be mistaken, (as in the case before put of the wife) the grant is good.

So it is if lands be given to Robert earl of Pembroke, where his name is Henry, to George bishop of Norwich, where his name is John, and so of an abbot, &c. for in these and the like cases there can be but one of that dignity or name. And therefore such a grant is good, albeit the name of baptism be mistaken. If by licence lands be given to the deane and chapter of the holy and individed Trinity of Norwich, this is good, although the deane be not named by his proper name, if there were a deane at the time of the grant, but in pleading he must shew his proper name. And so on the other side, if the deane and chapter make a lease without naming the deane by his proper name, the lease is good, if there were a deane at the time of the (6) lease; but in pleading, the proper name of the deane must be shewed; and so is the booke of the 18. E. 4. to be intended; for the same judges in 13. E. 4. held the grant good to a maior, aldermen, and commonalty, albeit the maior was not named by his proper name, but in pleading it must be shewed, as is there also holden (7). If a man be baptized by the name of Thomas, and after at his confirmation by the bishop he is named John, he may purchase by the name of his confirmation. And this was the case of sir Francis Gawdie, late chiefe justice of the court of common-pleas, whose name of baptism was Thomas, and his name of confirmation Francis; and that name of Francis, by the advice of all the judges, in anno 36. H. 8. he did beare, and after used in all his purchases and grants (8). [h] And this doth agree with our ancient books, where it is holden that a man may have divers names at divers times, but not divers Christian names. And the court said, that it may be that a woman was baptized by the name of Anable, and 40 years after she was confirmed by the name of Douce, and then her name was changed, and after she was to be named Douce, and that all purchases, &c. made by her name of baptism before her confirmation remain good, a matter not much in use, nor requisite to be put in ure, but necessary to be knowne. [i] But purchases are good in many cases by a knowne name, or by a certaine description of the person without either surname, or name of baptism, as uxori I. S. as hath been said, or primo genito filio, or secundo genito filio, &c. or filio natu minimo I. S. or seniori puero, or omnibus filiis or filiabus I. S. or omnibus liberis seu exitibus of I. S. or to the right heires of I. S.

[k] But if a man do infranchise a villein, cum tota sequela sua, that is not sufficient to infranchise his children borne before, for the incertainty of the sequela. [l] But regularly in writs, the demandant or tenant is to be named by his Christian name and surname, unlesse it be in cases of some corporations or bodies politique (9).

[a] 1. H. 7. 16. 7. H. 4. 17. 18. H. 6. 8. 39. E. 3. 30. 15. E. 4. fol. 1. b. 27. H. 8. 24. (Hob. 204. 5. Co. 119. b.)

[b] A name of purchase. 2. H. 4. 25. 1. H. 5. 8. 46. E. 3. 22. 12. Aff. 18. 30. E. 3. 18. 1. Aff. 11. 11. H. 4. 33. 9. E. 4. 49. 13. E. 3. Elloppel. 231. F. N. B. 97. a.

[c] 12. H. 7. 8. 37. H. 6. 30. 10. H. 4. 3. b. (4. Inst. 297.)

[d] 32. E. 3. barre 261. (Hob. 86. 6. Co. 59.)

[e] 33. E. 3. grant 83. 18. E. 3. 50. 12. Aff. 35. 14. H. 6. 12. 34. Aff. p. 11. 40. Aff. p. 21.

[f] Braet. lib. 4. tract. 1. ca. 20. Britton fol. 121. 122. 3. E. 3. 78. 25. E. 3. 43. 26. Aff. 61. 30. Aff. 16. 46. E. 3. 22. 39. E. 3. 17. 3. H. 6. 25. 19. H. 6. 2. 30. H. 6. 1. 34. H. 6. 19. 11. H. 4. 27. 9. E. 4. 29. 5. E. 4. 46. 65. 14. H. 7. 11. 20. Eliz. Dier. 259. 8. E. 3. 436. 20. E. 3. 25. 1. H. 4. 5. 3. H. 6. 26. 19. H. 6. 2. 34. H. 6. 19. 5. E. 4. 55. 27. H. 8. 11. 1. H. 5. 5. 18. E. 3. 32. 27. E. 3. 85. 8. E. 3. 427. 7. H. 6. 29. 9. H. 5. 9.

[g] 40. E. 3. 22. Fitzwilliam. 24. E. 3. 64. Fitzjohn. 39. E. 3. 24. Fitzrobert. 27. E. 3. 85. tit. grant. 67. 18. E. 3. 23. 24. 18. E. 4. 8. b. 14. H. 7. 31. 32. 13. E. 4. 8. 5. E. 3. Vouch. 179. 37. E. 3. 85. where the proper name is mistaken. (6. Co. 65. 10. Co. 132. b. Hob. 32. 2. Ro. Abr. 44. Mo. 232.)

[h] 22. R. 2. briefe 936. 12. R. 2. feffments 58. 9. E. 3. 14. 46. E. 3. 21. 3. H. 6. 26. 34. H. 6. 19. 1. H. 7. 29. 5. E. 2. briefe 741. 14. H. 7. 11.

[i] 17. E. 3. 29. 18. E. 3. 59. 30. E. 3. 18. 11. H. 4. 84. Pl. Com. 525. 21. R. 2. devise. 41. E. 3. 19. 15. E. 3. Counter-pla. de vouch. 43. 35. Aff. 13. 37. H. 6. 30. 11. E. 4. 2. 7. H. 4. 5. 40. E. 3. 9. 37. H. 8. Bro. Nolsme 40.

[k] 15. H. 7. 14. [l] 8. E. 3. 437. 29. E. 2. 44. 19. E. 4. 11. 21. E. 4. 19. 7. H. 6. 29.

A bas-

(1) Adjudged acc. in Chancery. 2. Vern. 385. and 3. Atk. 72. But the doctrine must be understood with various limitations.—1. Though the husband cannot convey to the wife immediately, yet he may give to a trustee for her benefit, and the gift will be good. Therefore he may convey land to her by way of use, as by encossing or covenanting with another to stand seized, or surrendering a copyhold estate, to her use. See post. 112. a. 4. Co. 29.—2. According to some books, by custom of a particular place, as of York, the wife may take by immediate conveyance from the husband. Fitz. Prescription 61. Bro. Custom. 56.—3. The husband may give to his wife by last will; because such gift cannot take effect till his death, when the coverture is determined. Post. sect. 168.—4. It seems, that a donatio mortis causa by husband to wife may be good; because that is in the nature of a legacy. 1. P. Wms. 441. How the wife may give her separate personal property to her husband, see 2. Vef. 669.

(2) Acc. post. 336. a.

(3) See in Dy. 100. the case of a grant by the crown probi hominibus de Iffington, rendering a rent.

(4) Acc. as to churchwardens, Finch's Law, 8vo. ed. 178. See Keilw. 32. a. But by 9. Geo. 1. c. 7. they are enabled to purchase a workhouse for the poor; and by custom, in some places, as in London, the parson and churchwardens are a corporation to purchase lands. Cro. Jam. 532.

(5) See Cro. El. 2. 27. 222. 328. Cro. Jam. 558.

(6) But not otherwise, Post. 264. a. See 21. Ed. 4. 15. 16.

(7) See 1. Leon. 307. Dy. 86.

(8) Acc. 2. Ro. Abr. 135. A.

(9) As to naming of persons in writs and pleadings, see Thelo. Dig. Br. Orig. lib. 3. and 6. and the title Abatement in Com. Dig.

Lib. i. Cap. i. Of Fee simple. Sect. 1.

[a] 39. E. 3. 11. 24.
17. E. 3. 42.
85. Aff. 13. 41. E. 3. 19.

Vide Sect. 118.

[b] So it was resolved M. 38. &
39. Eliz. in Bre. de errore forland in Portington in com. Salop.
(S. C. Cro. Eliz. 509.
Noy 35. Mo. 430.
2. Ro. Abr. 43. 44.)
[c] 39. E. 3. 11. 24.
35. Aff. 13.
41. E. 3. 19. 17. E. 3. 42.
(6. Co. 66.)

[d] 5. E. 4. tit. office & officer.
Bro. 48.
Vinter's case. 5. Mar. Dier. fo.
150. b. & Scrogg's case. (Hob. 148.)

(Cro. Jam. 17.)

[e] M. 40. & 41. Eliz. in the King's bench between Scamler & Walters.
(Contra March 43. S. C. W. Jo.
310. Cro. Car. 279. 555.)
[f] 11. Co. 2. in Auditor Curle's case.
(5. & 6. F. 6. c. 15. & post. 231. a.)
Vide Sect. 378.
1. H. 7. 31.
(Post. 7. b. 29. b.)
[g] Bract. lib. 5. fo. 421.
415. Britt. cap. 22. 39.
Fleta lib. 6. cap. 41.
1. E. 3. 9. 44. E. 3. 4.
3. H. 6. 24. 21. R. 2. judgment
263. 7. H. 4. 2.
14. H. 8. 16.
Doct. & Stud. 141.
P. Com. fo. 47. Brit. cap. 33.

(Post. 76. a.)

[h] 27. Eliz. cap. 4.
13. Eliz. cap. 5.
3. Co. 8. 82. 83. Twine's case.
5. Co. 60. Gooche's case.
6. Co. 72. Burrell's case.
11. Co. 71. Pafch. 12. Ja. inter Jones
pl. and Sir Rich. Groobham def.
in ejectione firme in evidence at Jurie.

[i] Hil. 18. E. 3. coram rege in thesaur.
[k] 37. H. 8. cap. 6.
13. Eliz. cap. 8.
5. Co. 60. Burton's case. Eodem
lib. 7. Clifton's case.
(Lutw. 271.)

[a] A bastard having gotten a name by reputation may purchase by his reputed or knowne name to him and his heires, although he can have no heir but of his body. A man makes a lease to B. for life, remainder to the eldest issue male of B. and the heires males of his body. B. hath issue a bastard son, he shall not take the remainder, because in law he is not his issue, for qui ex damnato coitu nascuntur inter liberos non computantur. And as Littleton saith, a bastard is quasi nullius filius, and can have no name of reputation as soone as he is borne. [b] So it is if a man make a lease for life to B. the remainder to the eldest issue male of B. to be begotten of the body of Jane S. whether the same issue be legitimate or illegitimate, B. hath issue a bastard on the body of Jane S. this sonne or issue shall not take the remainder; for (as it hath been said) by the name of issue, if there had been no other words he could not take, and (as it hath been also said) a bastard cannot take, but after he hath gained a name by reputation, (1) that he is the sonne of B. & c. [c] And therefore he can take no remainder limited before he be born; but after he be borne, and that he hath gained by time a reputation to be knowne by the name of a son, then a remainder to be limited to him by the name of the son of his reputed father is good. But if he cannot take the remainder by the name of issue at the time when he is borne, he shall never take it. And so it seemeth, and for the same cause, if after the birth of the issue, B. had married Jane S. so as he became bastard eigne, and had a possibility to inherit, yet he shall not take the remainder.

Persons deformed, having human shape (2), idiots, mad men, lepers, deafe, dumbe, and blinde, minors, and all other reasonable creatures have power to purchase and retaine lands or tenements. [d] But the common law doth disable some men to take any estate in some particular things: as if an office either of the grant of the king or subject which concerns the administration, proceeding, or execution of justice, or the king's revenue, or the commonwealth, or the interest, benefit, or safetie of the subject, or the like; if these, or any of them be granted to a man that is unexpert, and hath no skill and science to exercise and execute the same, the grant is meerly (3) void, and the partie disabled by law, and incapable to take the same, pro commodo regis et populi; for onely men of skill, knowledge, and ability to exercise the same are capable of the same to serve the king and his people. [e] An infant or minor is not capable of an office of stewardship of the court of a manor, either in possession or reversion (4). [f] No man though never so skilful and expert, is capable of a judiciall office in reversion, (5) but must expect untill it fall in possession. And see Sect. 378. where bargaining or giving of money; or any manner of reward, & c. for offices there mentioned, shall make such a purchaser incapable thereof, which is worthy to be knowne, but more worthy to be put in due execution.

Some are capable of certain things for some special purpose, but not to use or exercise such things themselves. As the king is capable of an office, not to use but to grant, & c. (6)

A monster borne within lawfull matrimonie, that hath not human shape, cannot purchase; much lesse retaine any thing. [g] The same law is de professis et mortuis seculo, for they are civiles mortui (7), whereof you shall read at large in his proper place, Sect. 200.

Purchase, in Latin perquisitum, of the verbe perquirere. Littleton describeth it in the end of this Chapter in this manner, Item, purchase est appel le possession de terres ou tenements, que home ad per son fait, ou per son agreement, a quel possession il ne avient per title de discent de nul de ses ancestres ou de ses cosens mes p r son fait dems. So as I take it, a purchase is to be taken, when one cometh to lands by conveyance or title, and that disseisins, abatements, intrusions, usurpations, and such like estates gained by wrong, are not said in law purchases (8), but oppressions and injuries.

Note, that purchasers of lands, tenements, leases, and hereditaments, for good and valuable consideration, shall avoid all former fraudulent and covinous conveyances, estates, grants, charges and limitations of uses, of or out of the same, [b] by a statute made since Littleton wrote (9), whereof you may plainly and plentifully read in my Reports, to which I will add this case. I. C. had a lease of certaine lands for 60 yeares, if he lived so long, and forged a lease for 90 yeares absolutely, and he by indenture reciting the forged lease for valuable consideration bargained and sold the forged lease and all his interest in the land to R. G. It seemed to me that R. G. was no purchaser within the statute of 27. Eliz. for he contracted not for the true and lawfull interest, for that was not knowne to him, for then perhaps he would not have dealt for it, and the visible and knowne tearme was forged, and although by general words the true interest passed, notwithstanding he gave no valuable consideration nor contracted for it. And of this opinion were all the judges in Serjeant's Inne in Fleetstreet.

[i] In ancient time when a man made a fraudulent feoffment it was said, quod posuit terram illam in brigam, where brigam doth signifie wrangle, contention, or intricacy, for fraud is the mother of them all. [k] And on the other side, purchases, estates, and contracts may be avoided since Littleton wrote by certaine acts of parliament against usurie above ten in the hundred, in such manner and forme as by those acts is provided, which statutes are well expounded in my books of Reports, which may be read there. To them that lend money my caveat is, that neither

(1) The severall reports of the case, cited by lord Coke in the margin, differ very much. According to Noy and Moore, it was held by all but Popham, that the remainder was good, though the bastard was not born till after creating it; and Roll represents the case as if the opinion had been for the remainder. But Croke agrees with lord Coke, and writes that a majority of the judges held the remainder void; though indeed it appears by his report, that the party at length claiming as lawful issue, it became unnecessary to decide what would be the effect of a remainder to an unborn bastard. The only modern case I meet with on the subject is one, in which lord chancellor Macclesfield inclined against such a remainder, even though to a child en ventre sa mere. 1. P. Wms. 329. However, the doctrine doth not seem fully settled. If the objection against the limitation to a bastard not in esse is uncertainty of description, it must certainly fail where he is described by the mother only; and even where the father is named, it may sometimes be possible to ascertain him also sufficiently, as well where the limitation precedes, as where it follows the bastard's birth. See Bro. Grant. 17. 2. Ro. Abr. 43. 44. But if the objection is a policy of law, which, for the encouragement of marriage, creates a disability of providing for illegitimate children before they are born; then lord Coke's doctrine is true in its full extent: See Cro. Eliz. 510. Which of these is the true principle of objection, is left to the judgement of the learned reader.—(2) Who ought to be deemed such, see post. 7. b. 25. b.—(3) See Acc. Godb. 391. Hard. 130. Scrogg's case, cited by lord Coke in the margin, is in Dy. 175.—(4) Acc. Scamler's case and 1. Ro. Abr. 731. J. and Cro. Eliz. 636. But the case in March 43 is contra; and there Mr. Justice Jones affirms, that Scamler's case was also contra. However, in Cro. Cha. 556. lord Coke's doctrine seems admitted where the office is not granted so as to be exercisable by a deputy.—(5) Acc. 11. Co. 4. a. W. Jo. 264. 2. Lev. 245. and Caf. temp. Talb. 99. but contra where it has been the usage so to grant. W. Jo. 511. Hardr. 257. 2. Ventr. 188. and it is said that the king may so grant without any usage. March 42. 4. Mod. 280. Dy. 295.—(6) See as to this Plowd. 381.—(7) But it seems, that this doctrine is now become inapplicable; for there is no longer any legal establishment for professed persons in England, and our law never took notice of foreign professions. See post. 132. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 43. C. Wright's Ten. 28. 1. Saik. 162.—(8) Accord. ante 2. b. and post. 18. b.—(9) For cases of fraudulent gifts before the 13. Eliz. c. 5. see Dy. 294. b. and 295. a.

neither directly nor indirectly, by art, or cunning invention, they take above ten (1) in the hundred, for they that seeke by sleight to creepe out of these statutes, will deceive themselves, and repent in the end.

Purchase terres. Littleton here and in many other places putteth lands but for an example; for his rule extendeth to signiories, rents, advowsons, commons, estovers, and other hereditaments of what kind or nature soever. Lands and other things to be purchased.

Terre, Terra, Land, in the legall signification comprehendeth any ground, soile or earth whatsoever, as meadowes, pastures, woods, moores, waters, marishes, furlies and heath. Terra est nomen generalissimum, et comprehendit omnes species terræ; but properly, terra dicitur a terendo quia vomere teritur; and anciently it was written with a single r, and in that sense it includeth whatsoever may be plowed, and is all one with arvum ab arando. It legally includeth also all castles, houses, and other buildings: for castles, houses, &c. consist upon two things, viz. land or ground, as the foundation or structure thereupon, so as passing the land or ground, the structure or building thereupon passeth therewith. * Land is anciently called Fletb, but land builded is more worthy than other land, because it is for the habitation of man, and in that respect hath the precedency to be demanded in the first place in a (2) præcipe, as hereafter shall be said. And therefore this element of the earth is preferred before the other elements, first and principally, because it is for the habitation and resting-place of man; for man cannot rest in any of the other elements, neither in the water, ayre or fire. For as the heavens are the habitation of Almighty God, so the earth hath he appointed as the suburbs of heaven to be the habitation of man; Cælum cæli domino, terram autem dedit filiis hominum. All the whole heavens are the Lord's, the earth hath he given to the children of men. Besides, every thing as it serveth more immediately or more meerly for the food and use of man (as shall be said hereafter) hath the precedent dignity before any other. And this doth the earth, for out of the earth commeth man's food, and bread that strengthens man's heart, confirmat cor hominis, and wine that gladdeth the heart of man, and oyle that makes him a cheerful countenance. And therefore terra olim Ops mater dicta est, quia omnia hac opus habebant ad vivendum. And the divine agreeth herewith, for he saith, Patriam tibi et nutrivem, et matrem, et mensam, et domum posuit terram Deus, sed et sepulchrum tibi hanc eandem dedit. Also the waters that yeeld fish for the food and sustenance of man are not by that name demandable in a præcipe, [3] but the land whereupon the water floweth or standeth is demandable (as for example) viginti acras terra aquâ coopertas: and besides the earth doth furnish man with many other necessities for his use, as it is replenished with hidden treasures, namely with gold, silver, brasse, iron, tynne, lease, and other metals, and also with great varietie of precious stones, and many other things for profit, ornament, and pleasure. And lastly, the earth hath in law a great extent upwards, not only of water, as hath been said, but of ayre and all other things even up to heaven; for cujus est solum ejus est usque ad cælum, as is holden 14. H. 8. fo. 12. 22. H. 6. 59. 10. E. 4. 14. Registrum origin. and in other bookes.

And albeit land, whereof our author here speaketh, be the most firme and fixed inheritance, and therefore it is called solum, quia est solidum, and fee simple the most highest and absolute estate that a man can have; yet may the same at severall times be moveable, sometime in one person, and alternis vicibus in another, nay sometime in one place, and sometime in another. As for example, if there be 80 acres of meadow which have bene used time out of mind of man, to be divided betweene certaine persons, and that a certaine number of acres appertaine to every of these persons, as for example, to A. 13 acres, to be yearly assigned and lotted out, so as sometime the 13 acres lie in one place, and sometime in another, and so of the rest: A. hath a moveable fee simple in 13 acres, and may be parcell of his mannor, albeit they have no certaine place, but yearly set out in severall places, so as the number only is certaine, and the particular acres or place wherein they lie alter the yeare uncertaine. And so it was adjudged in the King's-Bench upon an especiall verdict (4).

If a partition be made betweene two coparceners of one and the selfe-same land, that the one shall have the land from Easter untill Lammas to her and to her heires, and the other shall have it from Lammas till Easter to her and her heires, or the one shall have it the first yeare, and the other the second year alternis vicibus, &c. there it is one selfe-same land wherein two persons have severall inheritances at severall times. So it is if two coparceners have two severall manors by descent, and they make partition, that the one shall have the one mannor for a year, and the other the other mannor for the same yeare, and after that yeare, then she that had the one mannor shall have the other, et sic alternis vicibus for ever; and albeit the mannors be severall, yet are they certaine, and therefore stronger than Bridgewater's case, so as this doth make a division of states of inheritances of lands, viz. certaine or unmoveable, whereof Littleton here speaketh, and uncertaine and moveable, whereof these three cases for examples have bene put. Wherein it is to be noted, that the possession is not onely severall, but the inheritance also.

Pl. Com. 168. b. and 170. a. and 151. 4. Co. 87. b. Lutterel's case. 4. E. 3. 161. and 6. E. 3. 283. 8. E. 3. 377. Temps E. 1. Bricie 811. 28. H. 8. Dyer 47.

* Tr. 7. E. 3. coram Rege Northampton. in Thesaur.

Psal. 115. 16.

Psal. 104. 15.

Chrysost. hom. 30.

(Plowd. 313.)

Vid. Sect. 59. where in this case livery shall be made. (Post. 48. b. 7. Co. 5.)

Vide Sect. 648. how these 13 acres may be charged.

(1. Ro. Abr. 829. Cro. Eliz. 421.) Hill. 34. Eliz. Ret. 489. in trans. inter Weldon & Bridgewater in Banco Regis. Temps E. 1. tit. partition. 21. F. N. B. 62. J. Vide 1. Co. 87. per Walmsh. F. N. B. 62. K. (Post. 167. a. 7. Co. 5.)

Vide Sect. 114. where advowsons, &c. may be appendant and in gros.

It

(1) Since Sir Edward Coke's time; the rate of interest has been gradually reduced to 5 per cent. See 21. Ja. 1. c. 17. 12. Cha. 2. c. 13. and 12. Ann. stat. 2. c. 16. But a greater rate of interest is still allowable in Ireland and our Plantations. It has been doubted whether the 12. Ann. did not extend to money lent on lands in Ireland or our Plantations, where the mortgage is executed in Great Britain; but the 14. Geo. 3. c. 79. declares all such securities made previously to that act to be valid, notwithstanding the 12. Ann. where the interest is not more than the established rate of the particular place; and that all future securities of a like kind shall also be valid, where the interest is not more than 6 per cent. It is impossible in the compass of a note to cite the numerous cases on the statutes of usury. One of the most remarkable for the great learning and variety of the arguments is that of the earl of Chesterfield and Janssen. 1 Atk. 301. and 2 Vef. 325.

(2) Acc. Fitzh. Nat. Br. 2. C. Post. 4. b. and 4. Co. 39. a.

(3) Acc. Yelv. 143. See post. 4. b.

(4) S. C. Mo. 302.

By what names, &c. lands, &c. shall passe.

[a] Vide Sect. 289. (Post. 186. b. Contra 1. Ventr. 393.)

14. H. 8. 6. 4. H. 7. 3. 10. H. 7. 24. 11. H. 7. 21. 14. H. 7.

4. 6. 21. H. 7. 36. 37. 9. H. 6. 52. 37. H. 6. 35. 22. E. 4. barre

116. 11. H. 4. 90. 18. E. 3. Execution 56. 4. E. 3. 48. 8. E. 3.

13. 9. Aff. p. 12. 58. E. 3. 24.

[b] Bract. fo. 222. 17. E. 3. 75. 39. H. 6. 38. 11. Eliz. Dy. 285.

(4. Leon. 43. Post. 47. 2. Cro. Cha. 362. Noy. 54.)

[c] Pasch. 12. Ja. inter Dock- wray & Points in evidence al

Jury in Banke le Roy.

[d] Vide Sect. 279. Bract. fo. 208. 40. E. 3. 45. Pl. Com. 154.

10. H. 7. 24. 28. 7. H. 7. 13. 18. H. 6. 29. 34. H. 6. 43. 20.

11. 6. 4. 18. E. 4. 4. 4. E. 3. 48. 1. E. 3. 4. 32. E. 3. Scir.

fac. 100. 22. E. 4. barre 116. 12. H. 3. Aff. 427. 34. Aff. 11.

13. E. 3. tit. entrie. 57. 20. E. 3. Briefe 685. W. 2. c. 24.

(2. Ro. Abr. 2.)

[e] Tr. 11. R. 9. in tresp. nient imprimee ne abridg. 11. H. 7. 4.

[f] 7. E. 3. 342. 5. Aff. 9. 10. 7. Aff. 9.

[g] 45. E. 3. tit. feoffments et fauts. 90. 14. H. 8. 6. Pl. Com. 541. b. F. N. B. 8. 12. E. 3.

Dower 90.

[h] Aff. p. 12. 9. E. 3. 443. 466. Domestday. 7. R. 1. int. fines in Theaur. (1. Sid. 16.)

[i] Int. Inquisit. apud Launcest. Anno 6. E. 1. in Theaur. Mich.

1. H. 5. coram Rege. Rot. 3. in Theaur.

[k] Tr. 7. Eliz. in banco regis. 5. Co. 11. Ives case. 14. H. 8. 1.

46. E. 3. 22. 28. H. 8. Dyer. 19. 32. H. 8. Bro. reservat. 39. 7. E.

6. Dyer. 79.

* Glanvil. lib. 8. cap. 3.

[l] Domestday Regilt. F. N. B. 2.

[m] 8. E. 2. Waff. 111. 7. Aff. 18. 11. Aff. p. 13. 41. E. 3. Waff. 82.

+ Hill. 14. E. 3. coram Rege Lanc. in Theaur.

* Inter inquisit. apud Lanc. in com. Cornubie coram Jullie. Aud. anno 6. E. 1. in Theaur. the B. of Excester's case.

[n] Domestday.

[o] Camden 460. 151.

[p] Pasch. 41. E. 3. coram Rege in Theaur.

[q] Hill. 13. E. 2. Lanc. coram Rege in Theaur. Camden Brit.

247. Rot. Par. 18. E. 1. 8. Eveque de Carlisle's case.

[r] Pl. Com. 169. a. 4. E. 2. Briefe 792. 793. 3. E. 3. 86.

4. E. 4. 1. 27. H. 8. 12.

[s] 20. Aff. pl. 9.

[t] Pl. Com. 169. a. 13. E. 3. Briefe 241. 33. E. 3. Entrie 80.

[u] Domestday. F. N. B. 2. Regilt.

It is also necessary to be seene by what names lands shall passe. [a] If a man hath 20 acres of land, and by deed granteth to another and his heires vesturam terræ, and maketh livery of fei-

fin secundum formam cartæ, the land itselfe shall not passe (1), because he hath a particular right in the land, for thereby he shall not have the houses, timber-trees, mines and other reall things parcell of the inheritance, but he shall have the vesture of the land, (that is) the corne, grasse, underwood, swepage, and the like, and he shall have an action of trespass, quare clausum fre-

git. [b] The same law, if a man grant herbagium terræ, he hath a like particular right in the land, and shall have an action quare clausum fregit, but by grant thereof and liverie made, the foile shall not passe, as is aforesaid. [c] If a man lett to B. the herbage of his woods, and after grant all his lands in the tenure, possession, or occupation of B. the woods shall passe, for

B. hath a particular possession and occupation, which is sufficient in this case, and so it was resolved. [d] So if a man be seised of a river, and by deed doe grant seperalem piscariam in the same, and maketh livery of feisin secundum formam cartæ, the foile doth not passe (2) nor the water; for the grantor may take water there, and if the river become dry he may take the benefit of the foile, for there passed to the grantee but a particular right, and the livery being made secundum formam cartæ cannot enlarge the grant. [e] For the same reason, if a man grant aquam suam, the foile shall not passe, but the pischary (3) within the water passeth there- with. And land covered with water shall be demanded by the name of so many acres aquâ (4) coopertas, whereby it appeareth that they are distinct things. [f] So if a man grant to another to dig turves in his land, and to carry them at his will and pleasure, the land shall not passe, because but part of the profit is given, for trees, mines, &c. shall not passe. [g] But if a man seised of lands in fee by his deed granteth to another the profit of those lands, to have and to hold to him and his heires, and maketh livery secundum formam cartæ, the whole land itselfe doth passe; for what is the land but the profits thereof, for thereby vesture, herbage, trees, mines, and all whatsoever parcell of that land doth passe (5).

[h] By the grant of the boillourie of salt, it is said that the foile shall passe, for it is the whole profit of the foile. And this is called salina, of the French word salure for a salt pit, and you may read de salina in Domestday, and selda signifieth the same thing; [i] and where you shall reade in records de lacerta in profunditate aque falsæ, there lacerta signifieth a fathom. A man

seised of divers acres of wood grants to another omnes boscos suos, all his woods; not onely the woods growing upon the land passe, but the land itselfe, and by the same name shall be recovered in a præcipe; for boscus doth not onely include the trees, but the land also whereupon they grow. [k] The same law if a man in that case grant omnes boscos suos crescentes, &c. yet the land

itselfe shall passe, as it hath bene (6) adjudged. Fraxinetum signifieth a wood, or ground that is woodie. [l] If a man hath a wood of elder trees containing 20 acres, and granteth to another

20 acras alneti (with an n not a v) the wood of elders, and the foile thereof shall passe, but no other kinde of woods shall passe by that name. Alnetum est ubi alni arbores crescunt †. And sellings are taken for elders. [m] Salicetum doth signifie a wood of willowes, ubi salices crescunt. These trees in our bookes are called sawces. * Selda is a wood of fallows, willows, or withies.

A brackie ground is called filecetum, ubi filices crescunt. A wood of ashes is called fraxinetum, ubi fraxini crescunt, and passeth by that name; and lupulicetum, where hoppes grow; and arundinetum, where reeds grow. Some say that dene or denne, whereof dene cometh, is properly a valley or dale. Dene filvæ, and the like, [n] as drofden, or drufden, or druden, signifieth a thicker of wood in a valley; for druf or drn signifieth a thicket of wood, and is often mention- ed in Domestday. And sometime dene or denna signifieth, as villa and denne, a towne.

[o] Cope signifieth a hill, and so doth larve, as stanlarve is saxens collis. [p] Howe also signifieth a hill. And hope combe and flow are valleys, and so doth clough. And dunum or duna signifieth a hill or higher ground; and therefore commonly the townes that end in dun, have hills or higher grounds in them, which we call downs. It cometh of the old French word dun.

[q] In our Latin a wood is called boscus. Grava signifieth a little wood, in old deeds, and bierf or burst a wood, and so doth holt and shawe. Twaite signifieth a wood grubbed up, and turned to arable. Stetbe or stede betokeneth properly a banke of a river, and many times a place, as flowe doth, and wie a place upon the sea-shore or upon a river. Lea or ley signifieth pasture.

[r] If a man doth grant all his pastures, pasturas, the land itselfe employed to the feeding of beasts doth passe, and also such pastures or feedings as he hath in another man's foile. Lefwes or leswes is a Saxon word, and signifieth pastures. [s] Between pastura and pasenum, the legall difference is, that pastura in one signification containeth the ground itselfe called pasture, and by that name is to be demanded. Pasenum, feeding, is wheresoever cattell are fed, of what nature soever the ground is, and cannot be demanded in a præcipe by that name.

[t] If a man grant omnia prata sua, all his meadowes, the land itselfe of that kinde passeth, et dicitur pratum quasi paratum, because it groweth sponte without manurance. [u] A man grants omnes brueras suas, the foile where heath doth grow passeth, and may be demanded by that name

in

(1) Contra Keilw. 118. and Palm. 174. Also in 1. Ventr. 393. it is argued by North attorney-general, that vesture of land means all the profits. But 4. Leo. 43. and Ow. 37. are with sir Edward Coke. Indeed his interpretation is conformable to the use of the word in some ancient deeds, and seems warranted by 4. E. 1. st. 1. c. 4. and 13. E. 1. st. 2. c. 25. f. 10. It also appears most agreeable to the derivation of the word, which is from vestio. See Cow. Interpret. ed. 1727. voc. vestura and vesture. Note, the difference taken in Palm. 175. between vesturam terræ, primam vesturam terræ, and primam vesturam terræ from one quarter to another; and between such grants by the king, and those by a subject. As to prescribing for sola vestura, see post. 122. a.

(2) Acc. post. 122. a. but see contra by lord ch. j. Holt, in 2. Salk. 637. The truth is, that the authorities on this subject are very numerous, and seem contradictory. Some agree with sir Edward Coke; according to others, one having a several fishery must be owner of the soil; and again some hold, that a several fishery and the soil may be in different persons, but that they shall be presumed to be in the same person till the contrary is pleaded. Besides the books cited in the margin, see 17. E. 4. b. 10. 11. 7. 26. Bro. Præcipe 33. and Dav. 55. b.

(3) Acc. Dav. 55. b.

(4) See Acc. Yelv. 143.

(5) Adj. Acc. in the case of a devise Cro. Eliz. 190.

(6) To know when wood will include the soil, and when not, see Bro. Grants. 167. Cro. Ja. 487. 524. 2. Ro. Abr. 455. U. pl. 1. 3.

in a præcipe. It is derived from bruyet, a French word for heath, and it is called fos in the Brittainish tongue.

Roncaria or runcaria signifieth land full of brambles and briars, and is derived of roucier, the French word, which signifieth the same, and as much as fenticetum. [a] By the grant of omnes juncarias or joncarias, the soile where rushes do grow doth passe; for jonc in French is a rush, whereof joncarias commeth. [b] A man grants omnes ruscarias suas, the soile where rusci, i. e. kneholme, or butchers pricks, or broome, doe grow, shall passe, and so is the verbe in the Register it is called; but in F. N. B. fol. 2. in the verbe piscaria is put instead of ruscaria. And janpna commeth of jonc and nower, a waterish place, and is all one in effect with joncarias. He that granteth omnes mariscos suos, all his fennes or marsh grounds doe passe. Mariscus is derived of the French word mares or marets; the Latin word for it is palus or locus paludosus. Mora is derived of the English word moore, and signifieth a more barren and unprofitable ground than marshes, dangerous for any cattell to goe there, in respect of myrie and morish soyle, neither serves it for getting of turves there. [c] You shall reade in record, that such a man perquisivit trescent. acr. maretti, &c. This word marettum is derived of mare the sea, and tego, and properly signifieth a morish and gravelly ground, which the sea doth cover and overflow at a full sea, and lyeth betwene the high water marke and low water marke, infra fluxum et refluxum maris. By grant of these particular kinds, the lands of these particular kinds onely doe passe; but as hath been said, by the grant of land in generall, all these particular kinds, and some others doe passe. Non mihi si centum linguæ sint oraque centum, Omnia terrarum percurrere nomina possem. And therefore let us turn our eye to generall words, which doe include lands of several sorts and qualities. [d] By the name of an honor, (1) which a subject may have, divers mannors and lands may passe. So by the name of an isle, insula, many mannors, lands, and tenements may passe.

Isle or bulmus signifieth an isle or fenny ground. * A commote is a great feignory, and may include one or divers mannors. [e] By the name of a castle, one or more mannors may be conveyed, et è converso, by the name of a mannor, &c. a castle may passe (2). In Domestday I read, Comes Alanus habet in suo castellatu 200 maneria, &c. præter castellariam habet 43 maneria; and in that booke a castle is called castellum, and castrum, and domus defensibilis, and mansus muralis. [f] But note by the way, that no subject can build a castle or house of strength imbatellled, &c. or other fortresse defensible, called in law by the names aforesaid, and sometimes domus kernellata or carnellata, imbattellata, teuellata, machecollata, nese carnelet, &c. without the licence of the king, for the danger which might ensue, if every man at his pleasure might do it. And they be called imbatellments, because they are defences against battels in assaults. Tenellare, or tanellare, is to make holes or loopes in walls, to shoote out against the assailants. Machecollare, or machecollare, is to make a warlike device over a gate or other passage like to a grate, through which scalding water, or ponderous or offensive things, may be cast upon the assailants (3). But to returne to the matter from whence upon this occasion we are fallen.

By the name of a towne, villa, a mannor may passe. In Domestday, alodium (in a large sense) signifieth a free mannor (4); and alodiarum or alodarii lords of the same; and lannemanni there signifie lords of a mannor, having facam et facam de tenentibus et hominibus suis. [g] And by the name of a mannor, divers townes may passe. Quod olim dicebatur fundus nunc manerium dicitur. By the name of a ferme or fearme (5), ferma, houses, lands, and tenements may passe; and ferma is derived of the Saxon word feormian, to feed or releeve; for, in ancient time, they reserved upon their leases cattell and other victuall and provision for their sustenance. [h] Note a fearme in the north parts is called a tacke, in Lancashire a fermeholt, in Essex a wike. But the word fearme is the general word; and anciently fundus signifieth a fearme, and sometime land. [i] Lands making a knight's fee (6) shall passe by the grant of a knight's fee de uno feodo militis. [k] Unum solinum or solinus terræ in Domestday booke containeth two plow-lands and somewhat lesse than an halfe; for there it is said, septem solini or solina terræ sunt 17 carucat (7). Una bida seu carucata terræ, which is all one as a plow-land, viz. as much as a plow can (8) till. Sallerye also signifieth a plow-land. Una virgata terræ, a yard-land, (the Saxons called it girdland, and now the g is turned to a y) is in some countries 10, in some 20, in some 24, in some 30, &c. (9). [l] Una bovata terræ, an oxgange, or an oxgate of land, is as much as an ox can till (10). [m] But carucata terræ and bovata terræ are words compound, and may containe meadow, pasture, and wood necessary for such tillage. Fuzum terræ in Domestday containeth halfe a plow-land. And by all these names, in the raigne of R. 1. lands were usually demanded, and long after (11).

[n] By the name of a grange, grangia, a house or edifice, not onely where corne is stored up like as in barnes, but necessary places for husbandry also, as stables for hay and horses, and stables and styes for other cattell, and a curtilage, and the close wherein it standeth, shall passe; and it is a French word, and signifieth the same as we take it (12).

[o] Stagnum, in English a poole, doth consist of water and land; and therefore by the name of stagnum

[a] Regill. 1. E. 3. 4. F. N. B. 2.

[b] 16. Aff. p. 9. Register.

Jampna.
(Cro. Cha. 179.)

[c] Pasch. 41. E. 3. coram rege Lincoln. rot. 28.

[d] Mag. Cart. c. 31. Wallingford
Nott. Bolon. Lanc. &c. Trin. 33.
E. 1. coram rege in Thel. honor de Huntingdon. Mich. 9. E. 1. coram rege in Thel. 18. E. 2.
Aff. 377. 26. Aff. p. 60. 6. E.
3. 56. 47. E. 3. 21. honor de Peverel. 49. E. 3. 324. honor de Egles. 9. H. 6. 27. 36. H. 8.
Dyer 58. honor de Glouc. F. N.
B. 265. honor Abbath. de Merle.
5. E. 4. 129. 7. H. 6. 39. 1.
E. 3. 4. &c. 13. E. 3. jurisdift.
23. 4. Co. 88. Lutterel's case.
5. H. 7. 9. 14. H. 4. in recordo longo. 8. H. 4. Pl. Com. 168.
8. H. 7. 1. 4. E. 4. 16. (4. Inst. 294.)
* 13. E. 3. jurisdift. 23.

[e] 26. Aff. 54. 29. E. 3. 15.
29. H. 6. travers 4. Bract. fo.
434. 1. E. 3. 4. 5. H. 7. 9. 3.
E. 2. avowry 188. 37. H. 6. 26.
18. H. 6. 11. Lib. rub. fac. fo. 18.
[f] In veter. Mag. Cart. cap. 16.
chatriæ, fo. 162. Britton. cap.
23. Rot. Parliam. 45. E. 3. m.
31. 6. H. 4. m. 19. 1. E. 4.
cap. 1. Rot. Parliam. 1. E. 3. 2.
pars Alano Charleton. 22. E. 3.
2. pars Thoma Barkley, &c.
(3. Inst. 201.)

[g] Lamb. exposit. verb. ferme.
Pl. Com. 195.

[h] Pl. Com. 169. Regill. 227.
b. eject. sumae.

[i] 17. E. 3. fo. 8. 5. E. 3. 213.
16. E. 3. bre. 165. 12. E. 2. bre.
814.

[k] 4. E. 3. 161. 6. E. 3. 283.
2. E. 3. 5. 35. H. 6. 29. Pl.
Com. 168. 7. Aff. 18. 11. Aff.

13. Lamb. exposit. verb. Hyda et Virgat. terræ. Glauv. lib. cap.

Domestday. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 26.
27. & lib. 5. fo. 434. Regill. 72.

[l] 5. E. 3. fine 49. 13. E. 3.
fine 67. 39. H. 6. 8. 4. E. 3.

159. 8. E. 3. 377. Bracton fo.
180. 269. 431. 5. H. 3. Droit.

66. Pl. Com. 168.

[m] 13. E. 3. bre. 241. 2. E. 3.
57. temps E. 1. bre. 811. Pl.

Com. 168.

[n] Pl. Com. 169. Linwood. 44.
E. 3. 21. 4. E. 3. 32.

[o] 4. E. 3. tit. feoffments et fait
79. 14. E. 3. Formedon. 34.
34. Aff. pl. 11.

(1) For the nature of a land-honor or barony, see Mad. Bar. Angl. 2.

(2) Acc. 2. Inst. 31.

(3) See further as to castles, Mad. Baron. Anglican. 17. to 20. Discours. by Emin. Antiq. ed. 1773. v. 1. p. 100, 186, and 191.

(4) See ante 1. b.

(5) See 2. Inst. 145.

(6) As to the contents of a knight's fee, see post. 69.

(7) Some think, that solinus terræ was frequently synonymous with carucata terræ. See Somn. Rom. Ports 82. Cow. Interpr. ed. 1727. voc. solinus terræ.

(8) See further as to this, Post. 69. and 86. b.

(9) See Post. 69.

(10) See Post. 69.

(11) See further on the dimensions of land in England, Post. 200. b. and 69. Crompt. on Courts, 222. and Disc. by Emin. Antiq. ed. 1773. v. 1. p. 39. to 50. and 107, 195, and 197.—By what names, and in what order, lands, &c. ought to be demanded, see Post. 5. b. Fitzh. N. Br. 2. C. Hugh. Comment. on Orig. Writs. 2. and Theloal's Dig. Br. Orig. l. 8. c. 1. p. 118. and particularly the latter book.

(12) Grange sometimes comprehends a whole farm. See 4. Co. 42. b.

[a] 13. E. 3. 4. 4. E. 3. 143. 8. E. 3. 381. 10. E. 3. 482. 13. E. 3. entry 57. F. N. B. 191. h. Domesday.

[b] Temps E. 1. bre. 861. 4. E. 3. 5. 10. H. 7. 30. 44. E. 3. 12. 43. E. 3. 24. 35. H. 6. 55. 3. H. 6. 2. Domesday. Bracton lib. 4. fo. 235. Int. ad judicat. coram rege p. 39. E. 3. lib. 3. fo. 95. in Thesaur. (4. Inlt. 289.)

[c] 40. Aff. 38. 4. H. 6. 14. 35. E. 1. ca. 6. Anno 10. R. 1. inter fines in Thes. Ferlingus terræ continet 32 acras. Domesday. Frustrum. 16. E. 3. tit. comon. 9.

[d] Mich. 8. H. 3. incipien. 9. coram rege. Warr. Ro. 6.

[e] Virg. Eclog. 1. 2.

[f] Bract. 211. 233. 22. E. 4. trans. 140. Pl. Com. 168. 171. 23. H. 8. Br. feoffments 53. 9. Aff. p. 21. 35. H. 6. 44. Pl. Com. 169. (1. Sid. 309.)

[g] Domesday.

[h] Pasch. 30. E. 1. coram rege. Kanc. in Thesaur. Statut. de extent. manerii. Domesday.

Domesday.

[i] Int. placita coram domino rege Mich. 10. E. 3. Rot. 26. Lamb. exposit. verb. Thanus.

[k] Lib. Rub. cap. 15. & cap. 41. & 76. W. 2. c. 46. 7. H. 4. 38. Lib. d'entries Aff. corps pol. 2. (4. Inlt. 294.) Domesday.

[l] 7. H. 4. 28. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 35. Domesday. 10. R. 1. inter fines.

[m] 9. E. 3. 39. Temps E. 1. Br. 866. Mich. 30. E. 1. coram rege Gloc. in Thesaur.

[n] Bract. fo. 377. 431. 43. E. 3. 27. Regist. fo. 1. 94. 248. 249. F. N. B. fo. 87. F. 1.

[o] Regula.

7. R. 1. inter fines Suffex.

flagnum or a poole, the water and land shall passe also. [a] In the same manner gorges, a deepe pit of water, a gors or gulfe, consisteth of water and land; and therefore by the grant thereof by that name, the soile doth passe, and a præcipe doth lye thereof, and shall lay his esplees in taking of fishes as breames and roches. In Domesday it is called guort, gort, and gors plurally; as for example, de 3 gors mille anguille.

[b] So it is of a forrest, parke, chafe, vivarye, and warren in a man's owne ground, by the grant of any of them, not onely the priviledge, but the land itselfe passeth; for they are compound. In the booke of Domesday, that is called lewad, and lenga, and lewed, and lewe, which in Latin is called leuca.

[c] Stadium or ferlingus sive ferlingum, or quarentena terra, is a furlong of land, and is as much as to say, a furrow long, which in ancient time was the eighth part of a mile; and land will passe by that name. And some hold that by that name land may be demanded. And de ferlingis et quarentenis, you shall read divers times in the book of Domesday; and there you shall read in insula rex habet unum frustrum terræ unde exeunt sex vomeres. Nota, frustrum signifieth a parcel. [d] Warectum, or wareccum, or warectum, doth signifie fallow; terra jacet ad warectum, the land lyeth fallow: but in truth the word is vervacum quasi vere novo victum seu subactum, terra novalis seu requieta, quia alternis annis requiescat; [e] tam culta novalia. [f] By the grant of a messuage, or house, mesuagium, the orchard, garden, and curtilage doe (1) passe, and so an acre or more may passe by the name of a house. It is derived of the French word mes. [g] In Domesday, a house in a city or burrough is called baga; other houses are called there mansiones, mansura, and domus; [h] and in an ancient plea concerning Feverham in Kent, hawes are interpreted to signifie mansiones. In Normans French it is called mesnil or mesuil. Bye signifieth a dwelling, bye an habitation, and byan to dwell.

It is to be noted, that in Domesday there be often named bordarii seu borduanni, cofces, cofset, cotucami, cotarii, who are all in effect bores or husbandmen, or cotagers, saving that bordarii, which cometh of the French word borde for a cottage, signifieth there bores holding a little house, with some land of husbandry bigger than a cottage; and coterelli are meere cottagers, qui cotagia et curtilagia tenent (2).

Villani in Domesday (often named) are not taken there for bondmen, but had their name de villis, because they had fermes, and there did worke of husbandry for the lord; and they were ever named before bordarii, &c. and such as are bondmen are called there servi.

[i] Coleberti, often also named in Domesday, signifieth tenants in free socage by free rent; and so it is expounded of record. Radmans and radebemisfres, (rad, or rede, signifieth firme and stable) there also often named, these are liberi tenentes qui arabant et berciebant ad curiam domini, seu falcabant, aut metebant, because their estates are firme and stable; and they are many times called sokemans and sokemanni, because of their plough service.

Dreuchs signifieth free tenants of a manor, there also named. Taini or thaini mediocres were freeholders, and sometime called militis regis, and their land called tainland, and there it is said, hæc terra T. R. E. fuit tainland, sed postea conversa in reueland. [k] But thainus regis is taken for a baron; for it is said in an ancient author, thainus regis proximus comiti est, et ibidem mediocris thainus, et alibi baro sive thainus (3). Berquarium or bercaria cometh of berc, an old Saxon word, used at this day for barks or rindes of trees; and signifieth a tanhouse, or a heath house, where barks or rindes of trees are laid to tan withal, and berquarii are mentioned in Domesday. It signifieth also, and more legally, a sheep-coat, of the French word bergerie.

[l] By vaccaria in law is signified a dairy house, derived of vacca the cow. In Latin it is lactarium or lactitium, and vaccarius is mentioned in Domesday. And Fleta maketh mention of porcaria, a swinetye.

The content of an acre is known. The name is common to the English, German, and French. In legall Latin it is called acra, which the Latinists call jugerum. In Domesday it is called arpen prati, sive, &c. 10. R. 1. inter fines. Acra in Cornwall continet 40 pericatas in longitudine, et 4 in latitudine, et qualibet pericata de 16 pedibus in longitudine (4).

[m] By the grant of a felion of land, selio terræ, a ridge of land, which containeth no certainty, for some be greater and some be lesser; and by the grant de una porca, a ridge doth passe. Selio is derived of the French word fellon for a ridge.

[n] By the grant de centum libratibus terræ, or 50 libratibus terræ, or centum solidatis terræ, &c. land of that value passeth, and so of more or lesse, and in ancient time by that name it might have been demanded. [o] And many things may passe by a name, that by the same name cannot be demanded by a (5) præcipe, for that doth require more prescript forme; but whatsoever may be demanded by a præcipe may passe by the same name by way of grant.

Frythe is a plaine betweene woods, and so is lawnd or lound. Combe, bope, dene, glyn, hævgh, bowgh, signifieth a vally. Howe, boo, knol, law, pen, and cope, a hill. Ey, ing, and worth, signifieth a watry place or water. Falsia is a bank or hill by the sea-side: it cometh of falaise, which signifieth the same. Of all these you shall read in ancient bookes, charters, deeds, and

(1) Contra as to the garden, Keilw. 57. Mo. 24. Dal. in N. Bendl. 29. But see acc. Post. 56. a. and b. Plowd. 171. 2. Co. 32. 2. Saund. 401. S. p. adj. acc. in case of a devise, 3. Leon. 214. and Cro. Eliz. 89. See acc. 2. Cha. Caf. 27. See further Latt. Rep. 6. where the court held, that the devise of a messuage was not sufficient to pass 2 acres 4 miles distant from the messuage, though occupied with it. In Keilw. 57. a difference is taken between messuage and domus; and it is there said, that messuage extends to the curtilage, though not to the garden, but that domus only comprehends buildings. Also in some of the cases cited, particularly that from Plowden, the grant was of a messuage with the appurtenances; on which latter word some stress seems to have been laid.

(2) See as to cottages, 2. Inlt. 736.

(3) See further as to thane and thane land, in Reliq. Spelm. 11, &c. See also post. 6. a. n. 6.

(4) This differs from the common acre, because each perch usually contains 16 feet and an half. In some places the custom is to measure by a perch of 24 feet, and in others by one of 20 feet. See Crompt. on Courts, 222.

(5) See Ant. 3. a. n. 11.

and records : and to the end that our student should not be discouraged for want of knowledge, when he meeteth with them (nescit enim generosa mens ignorantiam pati) we have armed him with the signification of them, to the end he may proceed in his reading with alacrity, and set upon, and know how to worke into with delight these rough mines of hidden treasure.

[m] By the name of minera or fodina plumbi, &c. the land itselfe shall passe in a grant, if livery be made, and also be recovered in an assise, et sic de similibus.

By the grant of a fouldcourse or the like, lands and tenements may (1) passe [n]. Tenementum, tenement, is a large word to passe, not onely lands and other inheritances, which are holden; but also offices, rents, commons, profits, apprender out of lands and the like, wherein a man hath any franktenement, and whereof he is icised, ut de libero tenemento (2). But hereditamentum, hereditament, is the largest word of all in that kind; for whatsoever may be inherited is an hereditament, be it corporeall or incorporeall, reall or personall, or mixt (3).

[o] A man seised of land in fee has divers charters, deeds, and evidences, and maketh a feoffment in fee, either without warrantie, or with warrantie only against him and his heirs: the purchaser shall have all the charters, deeds, and evidences, as incident to the lands, et ratione terra, to the end he may the better defend the land himselfe, having no warrantie to recover in value; for the evidences are as it were the sinewes of the land, and the feoffor not being bound to warrantie hath no use of them. But if the feoffor be bound to warrantie, so that he is bound to render in value, then is the defence of the title at his perill; and therefore the feoffee in that case shall have no deeds that comprehend warrantie, whereof the feoffor may take advantage. Also he shall have such charters as may serve him to deraigne the warrantie paramount. Also he shall have all deeds and evidences, which are materiall for the maintenance of the title of the land; but other evidences, which concerne the possession, and not the title of the land, the feoffee shall have them (4).

A aver et tener. These two words do in this place prove a double signification, viz. a aver, to have an estate of inheritance of lands descendible to his heirs, and tener to hold the same of some superior lord.

There have beene eight formall or orderly parts of a deed of feoffment, (5) viz. 1. the premisses of the deed implied by Littleton; 2. the habendum, whereof Littleton here speaketh; 3. the tenendum, mentioned by Littleton; 4. the reddendum; 5. the clause of warrantie; 6. the in cuius rei testimonium, comprehending the sealing; 7. the date of the deed, containing the day, the month, the yeare, and stile of the king, or of the yeare of our Lord; [p] lastly, the clause of his testibus. And yet all these parts were contained in very few and significant words, [q] hæc fuit candida illius ætatis fides et simplicitas, quæ pauculis lineis omnia fidei firmamenta posuerunt.

The office of the premisses of the deed is twofold; first, rightly to name the feoffor and the feoffee; and secondly, to comprehend the certainty of the lands or tenements to be conveyed by the feoffment, either by expresse words, or which may by reference be reduced to a certaintie, for certum est quod certum reddi potest. The habendum hath also two parts, viz. first, to name againe the feoffee; and secondly, to limit the certaintie of the estate. The tenendum at this day, where the fee simple passeth, must be of the chiefe lords of the fee. And of the reddendum more shall be said in his proper place, in the chapter of Rents. Of the clause of warrantie more shall be said in the chapter of Warranties. In cuius rei testimonium sigillum meum apposui was added, for the seale is of the essentiall part of the deed. The date of the deed many times antiquity omitted; and the reason thereof was for that the limitation of prescription, or time of memory, did often in proesse of time change, and the law was then holden, that a deed bearing date before the limited time of prescription was not pleadable; and therefore they made their deedes without date, to the end they might alledge them within the time of prescription. And the date of the deedes was commonly added in the raigne of E. 2. and E. 3. and so ever since.

And sometime antiquitie added a place, as datum apud D. which was in disavantage of the feoffee; for being in generall he may allege the deed to be made where he will. And lastly, antiquitie did add his testibus in the continent of the deed after the in cuius rei testimonium, written with the same hand that the deed was, which witnesses were called, the deed read, and then their names entered. [r] And this is called charter land, and accordingly the Saxons called it bockland, as it were booke land (6). Which clause of his testibus in subjects deedes continued untill and in the raigne of H. 8. but now is wholly omitted. And it appeareth by the ancient authors and authorities of the law, that before the statute of 12. E. 2. ca. 2. proesse should be awarded against the witnesses named in the deed, testes in carta nominatos, [s] and that the same statute was but an affirmance of the common law; which not being well understood hath caused varietie of opinions in our books. But the delay therein was so great, and sometimes (though rarely) by exceptions against those witnesses, which being found true, they were not to be sworne at all, neither to be joined to the jury, nor as witnesses; [t] as if the witness were infamous, for example, if he be attainted of a false verdict, or of a conspiracie at the suite

(1) Here fold course seems to be understood for land used as a sheep-walk; but the word has various other senses. Sometimes it signifies land to which is appurtenant the sole right of folding the cattle of others. Sometimes it means merely such right of folding. It is also used to denote the right of folding on another's land, which is called common of foldage. See in W. Jo. 375. and Cro. Cha. 432. a case, in which common of foldage was claimed, and 2. Ventr. 139. one in which the right of folding the cattle of others is prescribed for.—(2) See further as to the extent of the word tenement, Perk. sect. 114. & 11. H. 6. 22.—(3) See further as to hereditament, Ant. 3. Plowd. 58. Mo. 176. 3. Co. 2. Dy. 323. b. pl. 30. With the word hereditament lord Coke ends his laborious inquiries about the names, by which things will pass in grants and other conveyances. His etymologies and explanations of the several words are certainly open to many observations, besides the few made by the editor of this edition. But the omission on his part proceeds from the nature of his undertaking, which confines him to narrow limits. To supply his unavoidable deficiencies in this instance, and for the sake of recommending assistances which are too much neglected, he refers the student to the glossaries which are so peculiarly adapted for the libraries of such as study English law, history, and antiquities. Of these a good list is given in a tract by Dr. Thomas Barlow, intitled Directions for the Study of the English History and Antiquities, and published in 1742 by Dr. Taylor with his Commentary on the Decemviral Law De inope Debitore in partes dissecando. To this list of Glossaries should be added Du Fresnoy's Glossary ad Scriptores Med. et Infim. Latin. ed. Par. 1733, the Glossarium Novum by Charpentier, ed. Par. 1766, the Glossary by Dr. Kennett, at the end of his Parochial Antiquities, that at the end of Wilkins's Leg. Anglo-Saxon. and Lye's Dis. Saxon. & Gothic. Latin. ed. 1772.—(4) See Cro. Eliz. 347. Cro. Cha. 442. Noy 145. In all of these books it is said, that in the case of conveyances to uses the possession of deeds appertains to the feoffee or covenantor, and not to cestuique use; and the reason given is, that it was so at common law, and the statute of uses, though it transfers the legal estate to cestuique use, doth not transfer the deeds. But this doctrine seems questionable.—(5) See the observations on this part of the Commentary in Mad. Form. Angl. Dissert. p. 5. See also on the subjects of ancient deeds and charters, the whole of the same Dissertation, and Nich. Engl. Hist. Libr. 2d ed. 240. Seld. Jan. Angl. b. 2. c. 2. and 3. to which may be added Mabillon de Re Diplomatica.—(6) See further

[m] 17. E. 3. 7. 43. E. 3. 35. b. Regist. 65. 10. H. 7. 21. Pl. Com. 191. 195. Bract. 211. 326. [n] 45. E. 3. Vouchee 72. 33. E. 3. grant 102. 11. H. 6. 22. 27. 14. E. 4. 4. 20. Aff. p. 9. 3. E. 4. 19. 11. H. 7. 25. (Post. 19. b. 20. and 154.)

[o] 1. Co. fo. 1. & 2. in Seignior Buckhurst's case. 44. E. 3. 11. b. 39. E. 3. 17. a. 19. H. 6. 65. b. 34. H. 6. 1. a. 10. E. 4. 9. b. 18. E. 4. 14. 15. 6. H. 7. 3. b. 11. 7. 33. a. (2. Ro. Abr. 31.)

Vid. Sect. 40. & 370. 371. many things de cartis et factis. Fleta, lib. 3. ca. 14. Britton 100. 101. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 396. a. 399. 38. H. 6. 33. 36. Pl. Com. Wrottesleve's case, fol. 96.

[p] Vid. Throgmorton's case, Pl. Com.

[q] 6. Co. 43. in fir Anthony Mildmay's case. Vid. Sect. 278. (2. Ro. Abr. 23.)

Brit. fo. 101.

[r] Lamb. exposit. verb. terra ex scripto. Vid. Fortescue, cap. 32. See the Second Part of the Instit. cap. 38. 12. E. 2. c. 2. See the Second Part of the Institutes. Marlb. cap. 6. and cap. 14. [s] Brit. fo. 65. 101. 11. E. 3. procel. 170. 6. H. 3. procel. 209. 8. H. 3. procel. 210. 4. E. 2. gard. 119.

[t] Mirror ca. 4. sect. de infamies et perjurie. Glanv. lib. 2. cap. 15. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 288. 292. Brit. fo. 134. 135. 101. Fleta, lib. 5. ca. 21. 8. E. 2. Aff. 396. 2. E. 3. 22. 24. E. 3. 34.

(5. Co. 99. Flower's case.)
43. E. 2. conspir. 11. 27. Aff. 59.
33. H. 6. 55. 21. H. 6. 36. (4.
Inst. 279. 1. Sid. 51. Godb.
288. 2. Bull. 154. Raym. 369.
1. Ventr. 349. 1. Kelynge, 38.
18. 4. Inst. 279. T. Jo. 155.
2. Ro. Abr. 636.)
[4] Fortesc. ca. 26. Pat. 55. H.
3. m. 3. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 174. a.
[6] Fortescu. ca. 25.

[c] 22. Aff. 12. and 41. 23.
Aff. 11. 19. E. 2. tit. Aff. 409.

[d] 34. E. 1. procel. 208.

[e] 34. E. 1. tit. procel. 208.
11. Aff. p. 10. 20. 12. Aff. p.
1. 12. 41. 18. Aff. p. 11. 22.
Aff. 15. 23. Aff. 15. 40. Aff.
23. 48. Aff. p. 5. 21. H. 6. 39.

[f] 48. E. 3. 30. 12. H. 6. fo.
6. a. 50. E. 3. 16. 43. E. 3.
32. 12. H. 4. 9. 19. E. 2. Aff.
408. Patch. 14. E. 3. coram rege
Devon. in Theaur. Fleta, lib.
6. cap. 6. F. N. B. 106. h. and
97. c. (Post. 303.)
[g] Mirror ca. 3. Pl. Com. fo.
10. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 400. (Post.
373. a.)

Fleta lib. 6. ca. 33. 8. E. 3. 290.
39. E. 3. 21. b.

Glanv. lib. 10. ca. 12. Fleta,
lib. 6. ca. 33.

[h] Patch. 10. Ja. in Com. Banco upon the stat. of bankrupts. (1.
Brownl. 47. 2. Ro. Abr. 585.
Hutt. 115. Raym. 1. 1. Ventr.
243. 3. Keb. 193. 1. Sid. 431.)
[i] Fleta, lib. 2. ca. 44. 13. E.
1. tit. Vil. 36. 37. 19. E. 2. ibid.
32. (Post. 25.)

[k] Tr. 8. Ja. in Com. Banco.
Smithe's case, in evidence upon an information upon the statute of usury. Brit. fo. 134. (Raym.
291. 7. Mod. 118.)

suited of the king, or convicted of perjury, or of a premunire, or of forgery upon the statute of 5. Eliz. cap. 14. and not upon the statute of 1. H. 5. cap. 3. or convicted of felony, or by judgement lost his eares, or stood upon the pillory or tumbrell, or beene stigmaticus, branded, or the like (1), whereby they become infamous; for some offences, quæ sunt minoris culpe, sunt majoris infamiae. [a] If a champion in a writ of right become recreant or coward, he thereby loseth liberam legem, and thereby becomes infamous, and cannot be a witness; for regularly he, that loseth liberam legem, becometh infamous, and can be no witness. Or if the witness be an infidell (2), or of non sane memory, or not of discretion, or a partie interested, or the like. [b] But oftentimes a man may be challenged to be of a jury, that cannot be challenged to be a witness. And therefore though the witness be of the neereſt alliance, or kindred, or of counsell, or tenant, or fervant to either partie, or any other exception that maketh him not infamous, or to want understanding, or discretion, or a partie in interest, though it be proved true, shall not exclude the witness to be sworne; [c] but he shall be sworne, and his credit upon the exceptions taken against him left to those of the jury, who are tryers of the fact; inſomuch as some bookes have said, that though the witness named in the deed be named a disseisor in the writ, yet he shall be sworne as a witness to the deed. [d] A witness amongst others named in a deed was outlawed, and no proces was awarded against him by the statute, because he was extra legem, and an outlawed person cannot be an auditor. And the court in some bookes have said, that they have not seene witnesses challenged, which is regularly to be understood with the limitations abovesaid; but such as are returned to be of a jury are to be challenged for the causes abovesaid for outlawry, and divers other causes, (for the which a witness cannot be challenged) and such proces against witnesses (3) banished. But seeing the witnesses named in a deed shall be joyned to the inquest, and shall in some sort joyne also in the verdict (in which case if jurie and witnesses finde the deed that is denied to be the deede of the partie, the adverse partie is debarred of his attaint because there is more than 12 that affirme the verdict) (4) it is reason, that in that case of joyning such exception shall be taken against the witness as against one of the jury, because he is in the nature of a juror. [e] And therefore to put one example, if he be outlawed in a personall action he cannot be joined to the jury, but yet that is no exception against him to exclude him to be sworne as a witness to the jury. And the reason of all this is, for that if he with others should joyne in verdict with the jurie in affirmance of the deed, the partie should be barred of his attaint. But note, there must be more than one witness that shall be joyned to the inquest. And albeit they joyne with the jury, and finde it not his deed, notwithstanding this joyning, the partie shall have his attaint; for it is a maxim in law, [f] that witnesses cannot testify a negative (5), but an affirmative. And if one of the witnesses named in the deed be one of the panel, he shall be put out of the panel. And all these secrets of law do notably appear in our bookes.

To shut by this point, it is to be knowne, [g] that when a triall is by witnesses, regularly the affirmative ought to be proved by two or three witnesses; as to prove a summons of the tenant, or the challenge of a juror, and the like. But when the trial is by verdict of 12 men, there the judgement is not given upon witnesses, or other kinde of evidence, but upon the verdict, and upon such evidence as is given to the jury they give their verdict. And Bracton saith, there is probatio duplex, viz. viva, as by witnesses viva voce; and mortua, as by deedes, writings, and instruments. And many times juries, together with other matter, are much induced by presumptions, whereof there be three sorts, viz. violent, probable, and light or temerary. Violenta presumptio is many times plena probatio; as if one be runne thorow the bodie with a sword in a house, whereof he instantly dieth, and a man is seene to come out of that house with a bloody sword, and no other man was at that time in the house. Presumptio probabilis moveth little, but presumptio levis seu temeraria moveth not at all. So it is in the case of a charter of feoffment, if all the witnesses to the deed be dead (as no man can keep his witnesses alive, and time wearieth out all men) then violent presumption, which stands for a proove, is continuall and quiet possession; for ex diuturnitate temporis omnia presumuntur solemniter esse acta. Also the deed may receive credit per collationem sigillorum, scripturæ, &c. et super fidem cartarum, mortuis testibus, erit ad patriam de necessitate recurrendum.

Note, it hath been resolved by the justices, that a wife [h] cannot be produced either against or for her husband (6); quia sunt duæ animæ in carne una, and it might be a cause of implacable discord and dissention between the husband and the wife, and a meane of great inconvenience. But [i] in some cases women are by law wholly excluded to beare testimony, as to prove a man to be a villeine: mulieres ad probationem status hominis admitti non debent. It was also agreed by the whole court [k], that in an information upon the statute of usury, the partie to the usurious contract shall not be admitted to be a witness against the usurer; for in effect he should be testis in propria causa, and should avoyd his owne bonds and assurances, and discharge himselfe of the money borrowed; and though he commonly raise up an informer to exhibit the information, yet in rei veritate he is the partie (7). And herewith in effect agreeth Britton,

further as to bockland and falkland, Reliq. Spelm. 12. 39. and Durymp. Feud. Prop. 9. In this last book the very spirited writer attempts a new distinction between the two kinds of laud, and to shew that bockland or thane land was feudal, and that falk or reveland was allodial.

(1) But according to the modern cases, it is the infamy of the crime and not of the punishment, which disqualifies from being a witness; and therefore persons stigmatized by an infamous punishment, such as being set on the pillory, are admissible witnesses, unless the punishment was inflicted for forgery, perjury, or any species of the crimen falsi, or any other crime of an infamous nature. See further on this subject, Gilb. Law of Evid. 142. the Law of Nisi Prius, 1st ed. 413. and 1. Willf. part 2. p. 18.

(2) But now it is settled, that all persons professing to believe in a God, though neither believing in the Old or New Testament, may be witnesses, if sworn according to the ceremonies of their own religion. See in 1. Atk. 19. 2. Eq. Caf. Abr. 397. and 1. Willf. part 1. p. 84. the great case of Omichund and Barker, in which lord chancellor Hardwicke, assisted by the two chief justices and the chief baron, determined, that the deposition of one who was of the Gentoo religion should be read in evidence.

(3) See further on this subject of joining with the jury the witnesses named in a deed, and the procel for that purpose, 33. H. 6. 19. and in Vin. Abr. Evidence. H. a. and J. a.

(4) Acc. 1. Ro. Abr. 280. pl. 14. and 2. Inst. 662. See infra n. 5.

(5) Acc. 4. Inst. 279. and the references supra in n. 4. But see 1. Ro. Rep. 83. Comb. 18. 57. Gilb. Law of Evid. 157. Law of Nisi Prius, 1st ed. 422.

(6) There are many exceptions to this rule, as well at common law, as under acts of parliament. See Gilb. Law of Evid. 135. Law of Nisi Prius, 1st ed. 435. See further as to admitting or refusing the evidence of the wife or husband against each other, in Caf. B. R. temp. Hardwicke, 265. Rep. of Caf. B. R. temp. Hardw. 140. 1. Atk. 451. 2. Kel. 62.

(7) But this objection fails, where the debtor previously to his examination has paid the money borrowed, there being, as it is said, no remedy to recover the money back again; and therefore in such a case his testimony hath been received. See the addit. refer. supra in marg. letter [k] and Caf. B. R. temp. Hardw. 266. and Gilb. Law of Evid. 127.

ron, that he that challengeth a right in the thing in demand, cannot be a witness, for that he is a party in interest (1). But now let us returne to that from the which by way of digression (upon this occasion) we are fallen.

And the ancient charters of the king, which passed away any franchise or revenue of any estate of inheritance, had ever this clause of hiis testibus, of the greatest men of the kingdome, as the charters of creation of nobility yet have at this day. When hiis testibus was omitted, and when teste me ipso came into the king's grants, you shall reade in the Second Part of the Institutes (2), Magna Charta, cap. 38. I have tearmed the said parts of the deed formall or orderly parts, for that they be not of the essence of a deed of feoffment; for if such a deed be without premisses, habendum, tenendum, reddendum, clause of warrantie, the clause of in cuius rei testimonium, the date, and the clause of hiis testibus, yet the deed is good. [f] For if a man by deede give lands to another and to his heires without more saying, this is good, if he put his seale to the deed, deliver it, and makelivery accordingly. [g] So it is if A. give lands, to have and to hold to B. and his heires, this is good, albeit the feoffee is not named in the (3) premisses. And yet no well advised man will trust to such deeds, which law by construction maketh good ut res magis valeat; but when forme and substance concur, then is the deed faire and absolutely good. The sealing of charters and deeds is much more ancient than some out of error have imagined (4); for the charter of the king Edwyn, brother of king Edgar, bearing date anno Domini 956. made of the land called Jecklea in the isle of Ely, was not only sealed with his owne seale (which appeareth by these words, ego Edwinnus gratia Dei totius Britannicæ telluris rex meum donum proprio sigillo confirmavi) but also the bishop of Winchester put to his seale, ego Ælfwinus, Winton. ecclesiæ divinus speculator, proprium sigillum impressi. And the charter of king Offa, whereby he gave the Peter-pence, doth yet remaine under seale. But no king of England before or since the Conquest sealed with any seale of armes before king R. 1. but the seale was the king sitting in a chaire on the one side of the seale, and on horsebacke on the other side in divers formes. And king R. 1. sealed with a seale of two Lyons, for the Conqueror for England bare two Lyons; and king John in the right of Aquitaine (the duke whereof bare one Lyon) was the first that bare three Lyons, and made his seale accordingly, and all the kings since have followed him. And king E. 3. in anno 13. of his raigne, did quarter the armes of France with his three Lyons, and tooke upon him the title of king of France, and all his successors have followed him therein.

In ancient charters of feoffment there was never mention made of the delivery of the deed, or any livery of seisin indorsed; for certainly the witnesses named in the deed were witnesses of both: and witnesses either of delivery of the deed, or of livery of seisin by expresse tearmes was but of latter times, and the reason was in respect of the notoriety of the feoffment. And I have knowne some ancient deeds of feoffment having livery of seisin indorsed suspected, and after detected of forgerie. As if a deed in the stile of the king name him defensor fidei before 13. H. 8. or supreme head before 20. H. 8. at what time he was first acknowledged supreme head by the cleargy, albeit the king used not the stile of supreme head in his charters, &c. till 22. H. 8. or king of Ireland, before 33. H. 8. at which time he assumed the title of king of Ireland (5), being before that called lord of Ireland, it is certainly forged, et sic de similibus.

And some have observed that grace was attributed to king H. 4. excellent grace to king H. 6. majesty to king H. 8. and before, the king was called soveraigne lord, liege lord, highnesse, and kingly highnesse, which in Latin in legall proceedings is called regia celsitudo, as the beginning of the petition of right to the king is humillimè supplicavit vestra celsitudini regia, &c. and the like. And upon this occasion it shall not be impertinent, seeing it is part of the formall deed, to set downe the severall stiles of the kings of England since the Conquest.

William the Conqueror commonly stiled himselfe Willielmus rex, and sometimes Willielmus rex Anglorum. And the like did William Rufus, and sometimes Willielmus Dei gratia rex Anglorum. Henry the first, Henricus rex Anglorum, and sometimes Henricus Dei gratia rex Anglorum.

Mawde the sole daughter and heire of H. 1. wrote Matildis imperatrix Henrici regis filia et Anglorum domina. Divers of whose creations and grants I have seene.

King Stephen used the stile that king H. 1. did.

Henry the 2. Fitz-Empress omitted Dei gratia, and used this stile, Henricus rex Angliæ, dux Normanniæ, et Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegaviæ; he having the duchy of Aquitaine and earldome of Poitiers in the right of Elianor his wife heire to both, and the earldome of Anjowe Tournie and Maine, as sonne and heire to Jeffery Plantagenet by the said Mawde his wife, daughter and sole heire of king H. 1. She was first married to Henry the emperor, and after his death to the said Jeffery Plantagenet. Which duchie of Aquitaine doth include Gascoigne and Guian.

King R. 1. used the stile that H. 2. his father did; yet was he king of Cyprus, and after of Jerusalem, but never used either of them.

King

(1) Besides the books already cited on the subject of evidence, see Duncombe's Trials per Pais in the chapter on evidence, the Law of Evidence, and the title Evidence in the severall Treatises on the Pleas of the Crown and in the severall Abridgments of Law and Equity. As to the book intituled the Theory of Evidence, it is included in the Law of Nisi Prius. The writings of the civilians on evidence are very numerous; and the curious reader may see an account of them in Baderus's edition of the Bibliotheca Juris selecta by Struvius. Amongst the most admired of their professed writers on the subject are Menochius de Præsumptionibus, Mascardus de Probationibus, Everardus de Testibus et Fide Instrumentorum, and Farinacius de Testibus. Struvius's Bibliotheca Juris will be found very useful to the diligent student, by introducing him to a knowledge of the principal books on the law of nature and nations, the civil and canon law, and the laws of most of the countries in Europe, and of the characters of the severall writers. It is to be wished, that we had a Bibliotheca Juris Anglicani, written on the same critical and enlarged plan. Such a work has been attempted by Mr. Gatzert, a German writer, who has lately published at Gottingen a book entitled Commentatio Juris Exotici Historico-Litteraria de Jure Communi Angliæ. But though Mr. Gatzert, when the disadvantage of his being a foreigner is considered, has really done wonders; yet it is not to be conceived, that such a work can ever be executed with the requisite judgment, accuracy, and nicety, until the task is undertaken by one of our own country, who hath been regularly trained in the study of the English law, and is familiarly acquainted with all the writers on our laws constitution and history.—(2) In the Second Institute, sir Edward Coke seems to think, that the clause of teste me ipso was first introduced into the king's grants in the time of Richard the second; but Mr. Madox dates the use of it much earlier, and gives an instance in the reign of Richard the first. See 2. Inst. 77. and Mad. Form. Anglic. Dissert. p. 32.—(3) The cases in 3. Leon. 33. and 2. Ro. Abr. 66. pl. 13. are contra. That in Cro. Eliz. 902. and 917. also seems contra on the first reading; though, on examination, the question appears to have been rather on the manner of pleading the deed, than on the operation of it. But in Car. Rep. 123. there is a case of the 21. and 22. Eliz. in which the two chief justices and the chief baron certified to the chancellor, that a lease was good in law, though the lessee was named in the habendum only; and the case in Allen 41. is also with lord Coke.—(4) See further as to the antiquity of sealing deeds, in Seld. Jan. Angl. b. 2. c. 2. Mad. Form. Anglic. Dissert. p. 27. and Nichols. Engl. Histor. Libr. 2d ed. 241.—(5) See post. 7. b. n. 1.

[f] Mirror cap. 1. sect. 6. and cap. 5. sect. 1. Glanvil. l. b. 10. cap. 12. Bract. lib. 5. fol. 396. Flet. lib. 6. ca. 32. Brit. fo. 66. [g] Vid. Tearmes of the Law, verb. Faits. Vid. Glanvil. lib. 10. c. 12. Mir. c. 1. sect. 3. and c. 3. (2. Ro. Abr. 66. pl. 13. Cro. Eliz. 903.)

21. H. 8. cap. 16.

Vid. 2. H. 4. c. 15. where to all majesty is attributed to the king, and crimen læsæ majestatis fact more ancient.

King John used that stile, but with this addition, dominus Hiberniæ; and yet all that he had in Ireland was conquered by his father king H. 2. which title of dominus Hiberniæ he assumed as annexed to the crowne, albeit his father, in the 23. yeare of his raigne, had created him king of Ireland in his life time (1).

King H. 3. stiled himselfe, as his father king John did, untill the 44. yeare of his raigne, and then he left out of his stile, dux Normanniæ, et comes Andegaviæ, and wrote onely rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitaniæ.

King E. 1. stiled himselfe in like manner as king H. 3. his father did, rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitaniæ. And so did king E. 2. during all his raigne. And king E. 3. used the selfe same stile untill the 13. yeare of his raigne, and then he stiled himselfe in this forme, Edwardus Dei gratiâ rex Angliæ et Franciæ, et dominus Hiberniæ, leaving out of his stile dux Aquitaniæ. He was king of France as sonne and heire of Isabel wife of king E. 2. daughter and heire of Philip le Beau king of France. He first quartered the French armories with the English in his great seale, anno Domini 1338. et regni sui 14.

King R. 2. and king H. 4. used the same stile that king E. 3. did. And king H. 5. untill the 8. yeare of his raigne continued the same stile, and then wrote himselfe rex Angliæ, hæres et regens Franciæ, et dominus Hiberniæ, and so continued during his life.

King H. 6. wrote, Henricus Dei gratiâ rex Angliæ et Franciæ, et dominus Hiberniæ. This king being crowned in Paris king of France used the said stile 39. yeares, till he was dispossessed of the crowne by king E. 4. who after he had raigned also about ten yeares, king H. 6. was restored to the crowne againe, and then wrote, Henricus Dei gratiâ rex Angliæ et Franciæ, et dominus Hiberniæ, ab inchoatione regni sui 49. et recaptationis regni potestatis primo.

King E. 4. R. 3. and H. 7. stiled themselves, rex Angliæ et Franciæ, et dominus Hiberniæ.

King H. 8. used the same stile till the tenth yeare of his raigne, and then he added this word (oſſavus) as Henricus octavus Dei gratiâ, &c. In the 13. yeare of his raigne he added to his stile fidei defensor (2). In the 22. yeare of his raigne, in the end of his stile he added, supremum caput ecclesiæ Anglicanæ (3). And in the 23. yeare of his raigne he stiled himselfe thus, Henricus octavus, Dei gratiâ Angliæ Franciæ et Hiberniæ rex, fidei defensor, &c. et in terrâ ecclesiæ Anglicanæ et Hiberniæ supremum caput (4).

King E. 6. used the same stile, and so did queene Mary in the beginning of her raigne, and by that name summoned her first parliament, but soone after omitted supremum caput. And after her marriage with king Philip, the stile notwithstanding that omission was the longest that ever was, viz. Philip and Mary, by the grace of God, king and queene of England and France, Naples, Jerusalem, and (5) Ireland, defenders of the faith, princes of Spaine and Sicilie, archdukes of Austria, dukes of Millaine Burgundy and Brabant, countes of Halburgh Flanders and Tyroll. And this stile continued till the fourth and fifth yeare of king Philip and queene Mary, and then Naples was put out, and in place thereof both the Sicilies put in, and so it continued all the life of queene Mary.

I need not mention the stile of queene Elizabeth, king James, nor of our soveraigne lord king Charles, because they are so well knowne; and I feare I have beene too long concerning this point, which certainly is not unnecessary to be knowne for many respects. But to shew the causes and reasons of these alterations would aske a treatise of itselfe (6), and doth not fort to the end that I have aimed at. And now let us returne to the learning of charters and deeds of feoffments and grants.

Very necessary it is that witnesses should be underwritten or indorsed, for the better strengthening of deeds, and their names (if they can write) written with their owne hands. For livery of feisin see hereafter, Sect. 59. and for deeds, Sect. 66. and of conditionall deeds see our author in his chapter of Conditions. And now let us proceed to the other words of our author.

Livery of feisin incident to a feoffment. Vid. sect. 59.

Mirr. cap. 2. sect. 15. Bract. lib. 2. fol. 62. b. Flet. lib. 6. cap. 1. & 54. & lib. 1. cap. 13. Glanvil. lib. 7. ca. 1. & ca. 12. & 13. (Post. 237. b.)

Aluy et a ses heires. Hæres, in the legall understanding of the common law, implyeth, that he is ex justis nuptiis procreatus, for hæres legitimus est quem nuptiæ demonstrant, and is he to whom lands, tenements, or hereditaments by the act of God and right of blood do descend of some estate of inheritance. For solus Deus hæredem facere potest, non homo: dicuntur autem hæredes et hæres ab hærendo, quod est arctè insidendo, nam qui hæres est hæret; vel dicitur ab hærendo, quia hæreditas sibi hæret; licet nonnulli hæredem dictum velint, quod hæres fuit, hoc est dominus terrarum, &c. quæ ad eum perveniunt.

[a] Bract. lib. 5. fol. 437. 438. Brit. ca. 66. fol. 167. & ca. 83. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 5. (Post. 29. b.)

A monster, which hath not the shape of mankind, cannot be heire or inherit any land, albeit it be brought forth within marriage; [a] but although he hath deformity in any part of his body, yet if he hath human shape he may be heire. Hii, qui contra formam humani generis converso more procreantur, ut si mulier monstrosam vel prodigiosam enixa, inter liberos non computentur. Partus tamen, cui natura aliquantulum ampliaverit vel diminuerit, non tamen superabundanter (ut si sex digitos vel nisi quatuor habuerit) bene debet inter liberos connumerari.

Si

(1) See further as to the deduction and change of the king's title in respect to Ireland, in Seld. Tit. Hon. b. 1. c. 4. f. 1.

(2) This title was given to Henry by pope Leo X. in consequence of the king's publishing his book, in defence of the seven sacraments, against Martin Luther, and dedicating it to the pope. Coll. Eccl. Hist. v. ii. p. 11. to 17.

(3) See Burn. Hist. Reform. v. i. p. 136.

(4) See the 35. H. 8. c. 3. which ratifies the king's stile.

(5) Though Henry the 8th and Edward the 6th had both used the title of king of Ireland, yet pope Paul the 4th, dissembling notice of it, conferred the same title as a new one upon Philip and Mary, in order that the world might deem their use of the title merely the effect of his power. Heyl. Hist. Reform. 69. 70.

(6) See further concerning the stiles of the kings of England, and also of Great Britain, since the union of the two kingdoms, in Nicholl. Engl. Histor. Libr. 2d ed. p. 248. and the several Treatises which have been published on the English Coins.

Si inutilia natura reddidit, ut si membra tortuosa habuerit, non tamen is partus monstrosus. Another faith, ampliatio seu diminutio membrorum non nocet. [b] A bastard cannot be heir, for (as hath been said before) qui ex damnato coitu nascuntur inter liberos non computantur. Every heir is either a male, or female, or an hermaphrodite, that is, both male and female. And an hermaphrodite (which is also called Androgynus) shall be heir, either as male or female, according to that kinde of the sexe which doth prevaile. Hermaphrodita, tam masculo, quam femina comparatur, secundum praevalentiam sexus incalescentis. And accordingly it ought to be baptized. See more of this matter, Sect. 35.

[c] A man seized of lands in fee hath issue an alien that is borne out of the king's ligeance; he cannot be heir, propter defectum subjectionis (1), albeit he be borne within lawful marriage. If made denizen by the king's letters patent, yet cannot he inherit to his father or any other. But otherwise is it, if he be naturalized by act of parliament; for then he is not accounted in law alienigena, but indigena. But after one be made denizen, the issue that he hath afterwards shall be heir to him, but no issue that he had before. If an alien cometh into England and hath issue two sonnes, these two sonnes are indigenae subjects borne, because they are borne within the realme. And yet if one of them purchase lands in fee, and dyeth without issue, his brother shall not be his heir (2); for there was never any inheritable blood between the father and them; and where the sonnes by no possibility can be heir to the father, the one of them shall not be heir to the other. See more at large of this matter, Sect. 198.

If a man be attainted of treason, or felony, although he be borne within wedlocke, he can be heir to no man, nor any man heir to him propter delictum, for that by his attainder his blood is corrupted. And this corruption of blood is so high, as it cannot absolutely be salved and restored but by act of parliament; for albeit the person attainted obtaine his charter of pardon, yet that doth not make any to be heir whose blood was corrupted at the time of the attainder, either downward or upward. [d] As if a man hath issue a sonne before his attainder, and obtaineth his pardon, and after the pardon hath issue another sonne, at the time of the attainder the blood of the eldest was corrupted, and therefore he cannot be heir. But if he die living his father, the younger sonne shall be heir; for he was not in esse at the time of the attainder, and the pardon restored the blood as to all issues begotten afterwards. But in that case if the eldest sonne had survived the father, the younger sonne cannot be heir; because he hath an elder brother which by possibilitie might have inherited: but if the elder brother had been an alien, the younger sonne should be heir, for that the alien never had any inheritable blood in him (3). See more plentifully of this matter, Sect. 746, 747.

If a man hath issue two sonnes, and after is attainted of treason, or felony, and one of the sonnes purchase land and dieth without issue, the other brother shall be his heir; for the attainder of the father corrupteth the lineall blood onely, and not the collateral blood between the brethren, which was vested in them before the attainder, and each of them by possibilitie might have been heir to the father, and so hath it been adjudged (4). * But otherwise in the case of the alien-née, as hath been said. [e] But some have holden that if a man after he be attainted of treason or felony have issue two sonnes, that the one of them cannot be heir to the other; because they could not be heir to the father, for that they never had any inheritable blood in them (5).

[f] One that is borne deafe and dumbe may be heir to another, albeit it was otherwise holden in ancient time. And so if borne deafe dumbe and blinde, for in hoc casu vitio partitur naturali. But contract they cannot. Ideots, leapers, madmen, outlaws in debt trespasses or the like, persons excommunicated, men attainted in a præmunire or convicted of heresie, may be heires.

[g] If a man hath a wife, and dyeth, and within a very short time after the wife marrieth againe, and within 9 months (6) hath a childe, so as it may be the childe of the one or the other, some have said, that in this case the childe may choose (7) his father, quia in hoc casu filiatio non potest probari, and so is the booke to be intended; for avoiding of which question and other inconveniencies, this was the law before the Conquest, Sit omnis vidua sine marito duodecim mensibus, et si maritaverit perdat dotem (8).

[h] A man by the common law cannot be heir to goods or chattels, for haeres dicitur ab hereditate. [i] If a man buy divers fishes, as carps, breames, tenches, &c. and put them in his pond, and dyeth, in this case the heir shall have them, and not the executors, but they shall goe with the (9) inheritance; because they were at libertie and could not be gotten without industrie, as by nets, and other engines. Otherwise it is, if they were in a trunke or the like. Likewise deere in a parke, conies in a warren, and doves in a dove-house; young and old, shall goe to the (10) heir. [k] But of ancient time the heir was permitted to have an action of debt upon a bond made to his auncestor and his heires; but the law is not so holden at this day. Vid. Sect. 12.

[l] It is to be noted that one cannot be heir till after the death of his auncestor. Before he is called haeres apparens heir apparent.

(1) If the father in this case is to be supposed a natural-born subject at the birth of the issue, the child would now be also a natural-born subject by force of the 7. Ann. c. 5. and 4. Geo. 2. c. 21. But the children of persons attainted of, or liable to the penalties of treason, or in the service of a foreign state in enmity with Great Britain, are excepted from the benefit of this provision. See the 25. E. 3. st. 2. which declares, that at common law, the children of the king, wherever born, may inherit. The same statute enables children born abroad to inherit, if at their birth both their parents are within the king's allegiance, and their mothers pass the sea with the licence of their husbands. Amongst the MSS. in Lincoln's-Inn library, there is a very learned dialogue between two serjeants on the 25. E. 3. See lib. no. 80. See also post. 128. b. 129. and Cro. Cha. 601.—(2) In the case of Collingwood and Pace, the court denied this to be law; and held, that the sons of aliens were inheritable to each other. See in 1. Sid. 193. and 1. Ventr. 413. the very elaborate speech by lord chief justice Hale, on giving the judgment of the court. Also now by the 11. and 12. W. 3. c. 6. natural-born subjects may derive a title by descent through their parents, though aliens; but the 25. G. 2. c. 40. confines the benefit of the former statute to such heirs, as shall be living and capable of taking at the death of the person last dying seized, unless such heirs happen to be daughters, and there is afterwards a son or another daughter, for which cases the statute makes a special provision.—(3) Besides the authorities in the margin, see W. Jo. 34.—(4) S. p. arc. Noy 158. 4. Leon. 5.—(5) The principle, on which it has been adjudged that the children of an alien may be heirs as between themselves, though not to their father, seems to reach the case of children born after their father's attainder. See the cases cited in n. 2. supra.—(6) See post. 123. b. where this is said to be the utmost time the law supposes a woman to go with child, and the authorities which the reader will find there cited on the subject.—(7) Brooke questions this doctrine; from which it seems as if he thought it reasonable, that the circumstance of the case, instead of the choice of the issue, should determine who is the father. See Bro. Abr. Bastardy, pl. 18. and Palm. 10.—(8) See 11. and 12. W. 3. c. 4. which disables persons educated in the popish religion, or professing it, from inheriting, but in respect of themselves only, if they do not conform within 6 months after the age of 18; and provides, that till they do conform, their protestant next of kin shall enjoy. By the same statute papists are disabled from taking lands by purchase, which should have been mentioned before. For cases on the construction of this statute, see 1. Stra. 267. 2. P. Wms. 3. 6. and 132. 3. P. Wms. 46. 1. Atk. 526. 528. 2. Atk. 210. 3. Atk. 155. 457. 2. Vell. 398. 1. Will. part i. p. 176. Rep. Caf. B. R. temp. Hardw. 149. Caf. B. R. temp. Hardw. 91. and Vin. Abr. Devise, l. 7. pl. 4. and 5.—(9) Acc. Cro. Eliz. 372.—(10) It is said, that though the party has only a term of years, still such things will go as accessory to the land. See Wentw. Off. Ex. ed. 1676. c. 5. p. 75.

[b] Vid. Sect. 188. 399. Bract. lib. 2. fo. 92. Brit. fo. Fleta li. i. ca. 5. & l. 6. c. 8. Fleta ubi supra. 3. R. 2. entr. cong. 38. (1. Ro. Abr. 625.)

[c] Mirror ca. 1. ca. 3. sect. ca. 5. sect. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 415. 427. Brit. fo. 29. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 47. 13. E. 3. br. 677. 25. E. 3. de natis ultra mare. 31. E. 3. Cousinage. 5. 42. E. 3. 2. 11. H. 4. 26. 14. H. 4. 19. 20. 3. H. 6. 55. 22. H. 6. 38. 9. H. 4. 7. Co. 1. in Calvin's case. (Cro. Jam. 539. Godb. 275. 1. Sid. 195. 201. Noy 158. T. Jo. 10. Vaugh. 274. 2. Sid. 23. Hardr. 224. 2. Ventr. 1.)

1. Ed. 3. 4. 6. Ed. 3. 55. 27. E. 3. 77. 3. E. 2. discent. Br. 64. 31. E. 1. discent. 17. 46. E. 3. Petition 20. 26. Ail. p. 2. 49. Ail. pl. 4. 29. Ail. pl. 11. 9. H. 5. 9.

[d] Stanf. pl. cor. 195. 196. Bract. lib. 3. fo. 132. 133. 276. & lib. 5. fo. 374. Briton fo. 215. b. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 28. (Noy 170. Finch 8vo. ed. 207. Ant. 2. b. Poff. 129. Cro. Cha. 543. 1. Sid. 195. 202. 1. Ro. Abr. 625. Cro. Jam. 539.)

* In the Exchequer Mic. 40. & 41. Eliz. in le case de Hobby.

[e] Bract. lib. 3. fol. 130. Briton fol. 15. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 58. (1. Sid. 193. 1. Lev. 60. Vaugh. 274. 1. Ventr. 414.)

[f] Bract. lib. 5. fo. 421. 430. 434. lib. 2. fo. 12. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 39. 47. 14. H. 3. br. 877. 32. E. 3. Age 8. 10. E. 3. 535. 18. E. 3. 53. 13. E. 3. Ley 49. (1. Ro. Abr. 626.)

[g] 21. E. 3. 39. Panarollus nova rep. 485. &c. Opus eximium 48. b. Lambard de precibus Anglorum legibus 120. 72. acc. (1. Ro. Abr. 357. Cro. Jam. 541. 3. S. C. Godb. 281.)

[h] Bract. lib. 4. ca. 9. fo. 265. lib. 2. fo. 62. b. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. 8. Co. 54. Sym's case.

[i] Mich. 36. & 37. E. 1. Rot. 25. Inter Gray and Poulet in the king's bench. Stanf. 25. b. 18. E. 4. 8. 22. Ail. 25. 18. H. 8. 2.

[k] 13. E. 3. det. 135. 139. 140. 47. E. 3. 73. 25. E. 3. fo. 48. 26. E. 3. fo. Vid. for an heretome hereditary or principalis, sect. 12.

In [l] Mirror ca. 1. sect. 3.

[a] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 85. Heref. p. 8. E. 1. Ro. 80. de Banco. Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18. Britton 251. b.
[b] Registr. fo. 227. Bracton lib. 2. fo. 69. Britton fo. 165. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 14. (Cro. Eliz. 566. Cro. Jam. 685.)

Britton fo. 165. b. Registr. ubi supra.

Vid. Bracton, Britton and Fleta ubi supra. Registr. ubi supra. Bracton and Fleta ubi supra have (ad exheredationem.)

[c] 10. H. 6. 7. 22. H. 6. 15. Pl. Com. 28. b. 22. E. 4. 16. 2. H. 4. 13. 20. E. 3. bre. 377.
[d] 5. Co. 96. 97. Brit. fo. 23. H. 8. Dyer. Pl. Com. 287. 288. (Poll. 22. a. 5. Co. 112.)
[e] Bract. lib. 2. cap. 39. fo. 92. b. Br. ca. 39. fo. 99. b. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. 2. & lib. 3. cap. 2. 20. H. 6. 35. 36. 19. H. 6. 17. 22. 74. 22. E. 4. 16. b. 4. E. 6. Pl. Com. 26.
[f] Vid. Sect. 413.
[g] 7. E. 3. 25. Vid. Sect. 686. 25. E. 3. 35. Bract. lib. 2. fo. 62. b. Vid. Sect. 413. (5. Co. 112. 1. Leon. 2.)
[h] Pl. Com. 242. Seignior Berkeley's case.
[i] Vid. Brit. fo. 86. 121. & 130. 17. E. 3. 25. b. 33. H. 6. 22. 10. H. 7. 13. 14. 9. H. 7. 11. 16. H. 7. 9. 15. F. 4. 13. 14. H. 6. 12. 35. H. 6. 34. 24. Aff. 14. 40. Aff. 21. (Poll. 94.) Tr. 5. E. 3. Rot. 4. in Scaccario. 3. E. 3. 32. 7. E. 2. 40. 11. H. 4. 84. 12. H. 4. 12. 18. E. 3. Conusans 39. b. 5. E. 4. 121. 38. E. 3. 4. Co. 9. 28. in Case de Abb. de Strata Marcella.

In our old bookes and reco^ds there is mention made of another heire, viz. hæres astrarius, so called of astre, that is, an harth of a house; because the auncestor by conveyance hath set his heire apparent, and his family, in a house and living in his life-time, of whom Bracton saith thus. [a] Item esto quod hæres sit astrarius, vel quod aliquis antecessor restituat hæredi in vitâ suâ hereditatem, et se dimiserit, videtur, quod nullo tempore jacebit hereditas, et ideo quod nec relevari possit, nec debeat, nec relevum dari. [b] For the benefit and safety of right heires contra partus suppositos, the law hath provided remedie by the writ de ventre inspiciendo, whereof the rule in the register is this. Nota si quis habens hereditatem duxerit aliquam in uxorem, et postea moriatur ille sine hærede de corpore suo exeunte, per quod hereditas illa fratri ipsius defuncti descendere debeat, et uxor dicat se esse prægnantem de ipso defuncto cum non sit, habiat frater et hæres breve de ventre inspiciendo. It seemeth by Bracton, and Fleta which followed him, that this writ doth lie, Ubi uxor alicujus in vitâ viri sui se prægnantem fecit cum non sit, vel post mortem viri sui se prægnantem fecit cum non sit, ad exheredationem veri hæredis, &c. ad querelam veri hæredis per preceptum domini regis, &c. which is to be understood according to the rule of the register. When a man having lands in fee simple dieth, and his wife soon after marrieth againe, and faines herselfe with childe by her former husband, in this case though she be married, the writ de ventre inspiciendo doth lie (1) for the heire. But if a man seised of lands in fee (for example) hath issue a daughter, who is heire apparent, she in the life of her father cannot have this writ for divers causes. First, because she is not heire, but heire apparent; for as hath been said, nemo est hæres viventis, and this writ is given to the heire to whom the land is descended. And both Bracton and Fleta say, that this writ lyeth ad querelam viri hæredis, which cannot be in the life of his auncestor, and herewith agree Britton and the register. Secondly, the taking of a husband in the case aforesaid being her owne act, cannot barre the heire of his lawfull action once vested in him (2). Thirdly, the law doth not give the heire apparent any writ, for it is not certaine whether he shall be heire, solus Deus facit hæredes. Fourthly, the inconvenience were too great, if heires apparent in the life of their auncestor should have such a writ to examine and trie a man's lawfull wife in such sort as the writ de ventre inspiciendo doth appoint; and if she should be found to be with childe, or suspect, then she must be removed to a castle and there safely kept untill her delivery, and so any man's wife might be taken from him against the lawes of God and man.

The words of the writ de ventre inspiciendo make this evident. Rex vic. salutem. Monstravit nobis A. quod cum R. quæ fuit uxor Clementis B. prægnans non sit, ipsa falsò dicit se esse prægnantem de eodem Clemente, ad exheredationem ipsius A. defuncti terra quæ fuit ejusdem C. ad ipsum A. jure hereditario descendere debeat tanquam ad fratrem et hæredem ipsius C. si predicti R. prolem de eo non habuerit, &c. But this rather belongs to the treatise of originall writs, and therefore thus much herein shall suffice (3).

And it is to be observed, that every word of Littl. is worthy of observation. First (Heires) in the plurall number; for if a man give land to a man and to his heire in the singular number, he hath but an estate for life, for his heire cannot take a fee simple by descent, because he is but one, and therefore in that case his heire shall take (4) nothing. Also observable is this conjunctive (Et). For if a man give lands to one, To have and to hold to him or his heires, he hath but an (5) estate for life, for the uncertaintie. (Ses, suis). If a man give land unto two, To have and to hold to them two et hæredibus [c] omitting suis (6), they have but an estate for life for the uncertainty, whereof more hereafter in this section. But it is said, if land be given to one man, et hæredibus, omitting suis, that notwithstanding a fee simple passeth; but it is safe to follow Littleton.

[d] Et de assignes. Assignee cometh of the verb assigno. And note there be assignes in deed, and assignes in law, whereof see more in the chapter of warrantie, Sect. 733.

Ceux parolx (ses heires) tantselement font lestate denberitance en tous feoffments et grants. [e] Si autem facta esset donatio, ut si dicam, do tibi talem terram, ista donatio non extendit ad hæredes sed ad vitam donatoris, &c. [f] Here Littleton treateth of purchases by naturall persons, and not of bodies politique or corporate; [g] for if lands be given to a sole bodie politique or corporate, (as to a bishop, parson, vicar, master of an hospital, &c.) there to give him an estate of inheritance in his politique or corporate capacitie, he must have these words, To have and to hold to him and his successors; for without these words successors, in those cases there passeth no inheritance (7); for as the heire doth inherite to the ancestor, so the successor doth succeed to the predecessor, and the executor to the testator. [h] But it appeareth here by Littleton that if a man at this day give lands to I. S. and his successors, this createth no fee simple in him; for Littleton speaking of naturall persons saith that these words (his heires) make an estate of inheritance in all feoffments and grants, whereby he excludeth these words (his successors). [i] And yet if it be an ancient grant, it must be expounded as the law was taken at the time of the grant. [k] A chantry priest incorporate tooke a lease to him

(1) But in such a case the manner of proceeding on the writ de ventre inspiciendo is not the same, as where the party remains a widow. In the case in Cro. Jam. 685. the wife was married to a second husband, when the writ de ventre inspiciendo was sued. Therefore, instead of ordering her into the sheriff's custody, and to be kept by him till delivered of the child, as the practice is, if the party is a widow, the court permitted the wife to remain with her husband, on his entering into a recognizance, that she should not remove from the house they then inhabited, and that some of the women returned by the sheriff should see her every day, and that three or more of them should be present at her delivery. (2) This is a reason, why the actual heir should have his writ notwithstanding the wife's marrying a second husband, but is foreign to the heir apparent's not having the writ; and therefore I presume has been placed here by mistake. (3) See further on the writ de ventre inspiciendo Ailcough's Case Mos. 391. & 2 P. Wms. 591. in which the lord cha. King, on a petition, granted the writ, though the persons applying were only tenants in tail; and note the special manner in which he ordered the writ to issue, and what he said as to the execution of it. In Mosely's Report, a case of personal estate is cited, in which the then master of the Rolls, in conformity to the reason of the common law, directed, that the master should appoint two matrons to inspect a woman. Some perhaps may think this a great stretch of power. I cannot conclude this note, without suggesting the necessity of an act of parliament to regulate the proceedings on the writ de ventre inspiciendo. If the writ was to be strictly executed, it would be an intolerable grievance. On the other hand, if our courts of justice should, without authority from the legislature, change the established form for the sake of softening its rigour, it would be a dangerous precedent, and something very like the exercise of a dispensing power. (4) According to many authorities, heir may be nomen collectivum as well in a deed as a will, and operate in both in the same manner as heirs in the plurall number. See 2. Ro. Abr. 253. See also 1. Ro. Abr. 832. K. pl. 1. 2. Godb. 155. T. Jo. 111. Cro. Eliz. 313. Robins. Gavelk. 95. 96. Burr. 4. part v. 1. p. 38. & Vin. Abr. Devise U. a. pl. 13. & Parols H. (5) See 5. Co. 112. post. 214. & Plowd. 286. 289. in which last book it is particularly considered, where the disjunctive shall be construed as the conjunctive. (6) See 2. Ro. Abr. 833. M. & Vin. Abr. Estate M. (7) But a fee will pass to a corporation aggregate without the word successors, and sometimes to a corporation sole. See post. 94. b. and Vin. Abr. Estate L.

him and his successors for a hundred yeares, and after tooke a release from the leasor to him and his successors, and it was adjudged that by the release he had but an estate for life, [k] for he had the lease in his naturall capacity, for it could not go in succession (1), and (his successors) gave him no estate of inheritance for want of these words (his heires). [l] If the king by his letters patents giveth lands decano et capitulo, habendum sibi et heredibus et successoribus suis, in this case, albeit they be persons in their naturall capacity to them and their heires, yet because the grant is made to them in their politique capacity, it shall enure to them and their successors. And so if the king do grant lands to I. S. habendum sibi et successoribus sive heredibus suis, this grant shall enure to him and his heires.

[m] B having divers sonnes and daughters, A giveth lands to B, et liberis suis, et a lour heires, the father and all his children do take a fee simple jointly by force of these words (their heires); (2) but if he had no child at the time of the feoffment, the child borne afterward shall not take (3).

These words (his heires) do not onely extend to his immediate heires, but to his heires remote and most remote, borne and to be borne, [n] sub quibus vocabulis (heredibus suis) omnes heredes propinqui comprehenduntur, et remoti, nati, et nascituri. And heredum appellatione veniunt heredes heredum in infinitum. And the reason wherefore the law is so precise to prescribe certaine words to create an estate of inheritance, is for avoiding of uncertainty, the mother of contention and confusion.

There be many words so appropriated, as that they cannot be legally expressed by any other word, or by any periphrasis or circumlocution: some to estates of lands, &c. as here and in [a] other places of our author. In this place these words tantsolement, not solement alone, but tantsolement all onely, i. e. solummodo, or duntaxat, are to be observed. [b] Some to tenures; [c] some to persons; [d] some to offences; [e] some to forms of original writs, either for recovery of right, or removing, or redresse of wrong; [f] some to warrantie of land. These have I touched foreexamples. I leave others to the studious reader to observe, and add, holding this for an undoubted verity, that there is no knowledge, case, or point in law, seeme it of never so little account, but will stand our student in stead at one time or other, and therefore in reading, nothing to be pretermitted.

Font lestate. Status dicitur a stando, because it is fixed, and permanent. The Isle of Man, which is no part of the kingdom, but a distinct territory of itselfe, hath beene granted by the great seale to divers subjects and their heires. [g] It was resolved by the lord chancellor, the two chiefe justices and chiefe baron, that the same is an estate descendible according to the course of the common law; for whatsoever state of inheritance passe under the great seale of England, it shall be descendible according to the rules, and course of the common law of England (4).

En tous feoffments et grants. Here he giveth the feoffment the first place, as the ancient and the most necessary conveyance, both for that it is solemne and publike, and therefore best remembred and proved, [g] and also for that it cleareth all disseins, abatements, intrusions, and other wrongfull or defeasible estates, where the entry of the feoffor is lawfull, which neither fine, recovery, nor bargain and sale by deede indented and inrolled doth. And here is implied a division of fee, or inheritance, viz. [b] into corporeall, as lands and tenements which lie in livery, comprehended in this word feoffment, and may passe by livery by deed, or without deed, which of some is called hereditas corporata, and incorporeall, (which lie in grant, and cannot passe by livery, but by deede, as advowsons, commons, &c. and of some is called hereditas incorporata, and, by the delivery of the deede, the freehold, and inheritance of such inheritance, as doth lie in grant, doth passe) comprehended in this word Grant. And the deed of incorporeate inheritances doth equall the livery of corporeate. And therefore Littleton saith, in all feoffments and grants, hereditas, alia corporalis, alia incorporalis: corporalis est, quæ tangi potest et videri, incorporalis quæ tangi non potest, nec videri.

Feoffment is derived of the word of art feodum, quia est donatio feodi, for the ancient writers of the law called a feoffment donatio of the verb do or dedi, which is the aptest word of feoffment (5). And that word Ephron used, * when he enfeoffed Abraham, saying, I give thee the field of Machpelah over against Mamre, and the cave therein I give thee, and all the trees in the field and the borders round about, all which were made sure unto Abraham for a possession, in the presence of many witnesses.

By a feoffment the corporeate fee is conveyed, and it properly betokeneth a conveyance in fee, as our author himselfe hereafter saith, † in his chapter of Tenant for life. And yet sometime improperly it is called a feoffment when an estate of freehold onely doth passe, donec est nomine generalis plus que nesci feoffment, car donec est generalis a tous choses meubles et nient meubles, feoffment est riens forsque del soyle. And note there is a difference inter cartam et factum, for carta is intended

(1) The reason is, because a chantry priest was a corporation sole, which regularly could not take in succession chattels real or personal, in possession or action, though a corporation aggregate may. Acc. Post. 46. b. 4. Co. 65. Hob. 64. But by custom, some chattels will go in succession to a sole corporation, as in London, where the chamberlain is a special corporation for taking bonds, which has been frequently adjudged a good custom. Cro. Eliz. 464. 682. 4. Co. 64. b. Also in some instances, particularly of chattels in action, the law is the same without a custom. See 1. Ro. Abr. 515. pl. 3. 5. and Vin. Abr. Corporation, L. As to the king's taking the ancient jewels of the crown, which are a kind of heir-looms, it is not to be considered as an instance of a sole corporation's taking chattels in succession, but rather as one of a personal chattel's descending like a thing of inheritance. See Post. 18. b. — (2) But in this case, the children must be understood to be parties to the grant; for it is said, that otherwise they can only take, where the limitation is to them by way of remainder. Cro. Eliz. 10. — (3) Acc. Cro. Eliz. 121. 334. Ow. 152. Lord C. J. Hale adds, that the father takes the whole fee simple. Hal. MS. But if the limitation to the children be a remainder, then the children born after may take. See Wild's case, 6. Co. 18. b. where will be found several other distinctions on this subject. See further 1. Ro. Rep. 254. See also Vin. Abr. Devise, Y. a. I am the more frequent in my reference to Mr. Viner's Abridgment, because it tends to facilitate the use of that immense body of law and equity; which, notwithstanding all its defects and inaccuracies, must be allowed to be a necessary part of every lawyer's library. It is indeed a most useful compilation, and would have been infinitely more so, if the author had been less singular and more nice in his arrangement and method, and more studious of avoiding repetitions. These faults, in great measure, proceeded from the author's error of judgment, in attempting to engraft his own very extensive Abridgment on that of Mr. Serjeant Rolle, whose work, though most excellent in its kind, and in point of method, succinctness, legal precision, and many other respects, fit to be proposed as an example for other abridgments of law, was by no means calculated for the excessive enlargement from 2 vols. to 23 vols. in folio. It is not to be wondered at, that an incorporation of works, so widely different in proportion as well as execution, should produce much confusion and disorder in the effect. Mr. Viner's labours would probably have advanced his reputation as a compiler much higher, if he had not attempted an union so unnatural. — (4) S. C. 4. Inst. 284. and 2. And. 115. See further concerning the Isle of Man in Pryn. on 4. Inst. 201. 384. Hale's Hist. Com. L. 183. Palm. 344. 1. P. Wms. 329. 1. Vef. 202. 2. Vef. 337. 1. Blackst. Comment. 5th ed. p. 104. and Camp. Polit. Surv. of Brit. v. 1. p. 524. — (5) See more as to the word feoffment, in Mad. Formul. Angl. Dissert. p. 3. 2. Inst. 110.

[k] Hil. 21. El. 2. Dyer's manuscript, inter Ansley and Johnson in Com. Banco. (4 Co. 65.)
[l] 18. H. 6. 11. b. &c. adjudged.

[m] 15. E. 3. tit. Counterplea de Voucher. 43. 17. H. 6. 30.
11. E. 4. 2. (Cro. Jam. 374
6. Co. 16. b. 1 Leon. 287.)

[n] Fleta lib. 3. cap. 8.

Pl. Com. 163.

[a] Sect. 17. 62. 133.

[b] Sect. 156. 161.

[c] Sect. 184.

[d] Sect. 190. 194. 746.

[e] Sect. 9. 67. 194. 204. 234.
236. 241. 405. 485. 488. 651.
655. 646. 620. 614. 637. 674.
692.

[f] Sect. 733.

[g] Tr. 40. Eli. in le Count de Derby's case, by the Lo. Chancellor, les 2 chiefe Justices, & chiefe Baron.

[g] Vide Sect. 59. and 66.

[b] Mirror c. 2. sect. 15. & c. 5.
sect. 1. Bract. lib. 2. fo. 53. 366.
368. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 1. 2 15.
Britt. 84. 87. a. & fol. 63. 101.
102. 141. 142 agreeeth herewith.
Pl. Com. 171. Hill & Grange.

Mirror cap. 5. sect. 1.
Britton cap. 34.

For the Antiquity of Feoffments see the second part of the Institutes, Marlebridge, ca. 9. 8. E. 3. 24. 18. H. 6. 14. 39. H. 6. 39.
* Genesis 23.

† Vide sect. 57.

Britton cap. 34. 44. E. 3. 41.
See more of feoffments, sect. 66.
See of factum, sect. 259.

Lib. 1. Cap. 1. Of Fee simple. Sect. 1.

intended a charter which doth touch inheritance, and so is not factum unless it hath some other addition (1).

3. Co. 63. in Lincolne Colledge case.
(1. Ro. Abr. 833. 6. Co. 16. b.)

[i] Litt. lib. 3. c. de Attorn. sect. 5. 8. 6. 4. E. 6. Estates Br. 78. 29. H. 8. Testaments 18. 22. Eliz. Dier 371. Temps H. 8. tit. Conscience Br. 25. (3. Co. 21.)

[k] 21. E. 3. 16. 34. H. 6. 7. 19. H. 8. 9. Co. 3. 21. in Boraston's case, Co. 6. 16. 17. 20. Co. 67.

[l] Vide sect. 585.
[m] Mich. 40. & 41. Eliz. in Error Int. Downhall & Catesby adjudge. Brooke tit. taile 21.

[n] 1. Co. 100 Shellye's case. 42. E. 3. 7. 19. H. 6. 17. b. 22. b. Pl. com. 248.

[o] Litt. lib. 2. ca. tenant in common, sect. 304. 305. cap. Attorn. sect. 374. Dier 9. Eliz. 263.

[p] Litt. lib. 3. c. Releases, sect. 479. 480. 20. H. 6. 17. 19. H. 6. 17. 22.

[q] Litt. cap. Releases sect. 467.

27. H. 6. Lo. Vescie's case, (7 Co. 33. b.)

[r] 39. Aff. 12. 41. E. 3. tit. Feoffments & faits 254. 14. H. 4. 13. 34. E. 3. Avowry 258.

[s] Vide Sect. 17. 12. H. 4. 19. in Formedon.

[t] 8. E. 3. 27. 11. H. 7. 12. 22. E. 4. 11. H. 4. 84. 2. H. 4. 13.

[u] 19. H. 6. 74. 20. H. 6. 36. (1. Ro. Abr. 43.)

[w] Pl. Com. Lo. Berkleye's case.

Grant, concessio, is properly of things incorporeall, which (as hath been said) cannot passe without deed. And here it is to be observed, (that I may speak once for all,) that every period of our author in all his three books contains matter of excellent learning, necessarily to be collected by implication, or consequence. For example he saith here, that these words (his heires) make an estate of inheritance in all feoffments and grants. He expressing feoffments and grants, necessarily implyeth, that this rule extendeth not, first, to last wills and testaments; for thereby, [i] as he himselfe after saith, an estate of inheritance may passe without these words (his heires.) [k] As if a man devise 20 acres to another, and that he shall pay to his executors for the same ten pound, hereby the devisee hath a fee simple by the intent of the devisor (2), albeit it be not to the value of the land. [l] So it is if a man devise lands to a man imperpetuum, or to give and to sell, or in feodo simplici, or to him and to his assigns for ever. In these cases a fee simple doth passe by the intent of the devisor. But if the devise be to a man and his assigns without saying (for ever), the devisee hath but an estate for life. [m] If a man devise land to a man et sanguini suo, that is a fee simple; but if it be semini suo, it is an estate taile (3).

[n] Secondly, that it extendeth not to a fine sur consans de droit come ceo que il ad de son done, by which a fee also may passe without this word (heires) in respect of the height of that fine, and that thereby is implied that there was a precedent gift in fee.

Thirdly, Nor to certain releases, and that three manner of waies, [o] first when an estate of inheritance passeth and continueth, as if there be three coparceners or joyntenants, and one of them release to the other two, or to one of them generally without this word (heires), by Littleton's own opinion they have a fee simple as appeareth hereafter. 2. By release [p] when an estate of inheritance passeth and continueth not, but is extinguished, as where the lord releaseth to the tenant, or the grantee of a rent, &c. release to the tenant of the land generally all his right, &c. hereby the feignory, rent, &c. are extinguished for ever, without these words (heires). [q] When a bare right is released, as when the disseisee release to the disseisor all his right, he need not (saith our author in another place) speake of his heires. But of all these, and the like cases, more shall be treated in their proper places. 4. Nor to a recovery. A feised of land suffereth B to recover the land against him by a common recovery where the judgment is quod prædictus B. recuperet versus præd. A. tenementa prædicta cum pertin., yet B recovereth a fee simple without these words (heires); for regularly every recoveror recovereth a fee simple. 5. Nor to a creation of nobilitie by writ; for when a man is called to the upper house of parliament by writ, he is a baron and hath inheritance therein without the word (heires). (4) Yet may the king limit the generall state of inheritance created by the law and custome of the realme to the heires males, or generall, of his body by the writ, as he did to Bromflete, who in 27. H. 6. was called to Parliament by the name of the lo. Vescye, &c. with the limitation in the writ to him and the heires, males of his bodie. But if he be created by patent, he must of necessitie have these words (his heires) or the heires males of his bodie, or the heires of his body, &c. otherwise he hath no inheritance. The first creation of a baron by patent that I finde was of John Beauchampe of Holte, created baron by patent in 11. R. 2. (5). for barons before that time were called by writ. And it is to be observed, that of ancient times earles, &c. were created by girding them with a sword, and nominating him earle, &c. of such a countie or place, and this with a calling of him to parliament by writ, by that name was a sufficient creation of inheritance.

But out of this rule of our author the law doth make divers exceptions (et exceptio probat regulam); for sometime by a feoffment a fee simple shall passe without these words (his heires). For example, first, [r] if the father infeoffe the sonne, to have and to hold to him and to his heires, and the sonne infeoffeth the father as fully as the father infeoffed him, by this the father hath a fee simple, (6) quia verba relata hoc maxime operantur per referentiam ut in esse videntur. [s] Secondlie, in respect of the consideration, a fee simple had passed at the common law without this word (heires), and at this day an estate of inheritance taile. As if a man had given land to a man with his daughter in frankmarriage generally, a fee simple had passed without this word (heires) for there is no consideration so much respected in law, as the consideration of marriage, in respect of alliance and posteritie. [t] Thirdly, if a feoffment or grant be made by deed to a mayor and communaltie or any other corporation aggregate of manie persons capable, they have a fee simple without the word (successors); (7) because in judgment of the law they never dye. [u] Fourthly, in case of a sole corporation a fee simple shall sometime passe without this word (successors). As if a feoffment in fee be made of land to a bishop, to have and to hold to him in libera elemosina, a fee simple doth passe without this word (successors). [w] And so if a man give lands to the king by deede inrolled; a fee simple doth passe without these words (successors or heires); because in judgment of law the king never dieth. Fifthly, in grants sometimes an inheritance shall passe without this word (heires)

(1) See further as to the distinction between charters and deeds, and the various other names of writings before and since the Conquest, in Mad. Form. Angl. Dissert. p. 2. and Mad. Hist. Exch. Pref. Ep. p. 8.

(2) The reason is, because the devisee is to pay the money at all events, and he may die before he repays himself out of the estate; in which case, he would be a loser by the devise, if he was not to have a fee. But if the will directs the payment to be out of the profits of the land, then the devisee cannot lose by the will, and therefore only an estate for life passes. Cro. Cha. 157. Most of the cases relative to this point are abridged or referred to in Vin. Abr. Devise, S. a.

(3) As to the passing of an estate of inheritance in last wills without the word heirs, see the title Devise, in the several Abridgments of Law and Equity, and Gilb. Law of Devises.

(4) See as to this, Mr. Serj. Rolle's argument in Coll. Proc. on Claims of Baronies, 209. 221.

(5) Acc. Post. 16. b. Seld. Jan. Angl. b. 2. c. 15. and Seld. Tit. Hon. ad ed. p. 747. which latter book contains the form of the letters patent to lord Beauchamp.

(6) Adj. contra 39. lib. Aff. pl. 12. but Rolle abridges the case with a quære. See 1. Ro. Abr. 833. pl. 7.

(7) Acc. Post. 94. b. But according to some authorities it is otherwise, if only the head of the corporation is capable, and the body is dead in law, as in the case of an abbot and convent. Post. 94. b. See, however, contra 1. Ro. Abr. 832. pl. 1.

(heires) [x] as if partition be made between coparceners of lands in fee simple, and for owelty [x] 29 Aff. 23. 15. H. 7. 14. of partition the one grant a rent to the other generally, the grantee shall have a fee simple with- 2. H. 7. 5. 11. H. 4. 3. 21. out this word (heires) (1); because the grantor hath a fee simple in consideration whereof he E. 3. 1. 21. Aff. granted the rent, ipse etenim leges cupiunt ut jure regantur. Sixthly, by the forreist law if an assart be granted by the king at a justice seat (which may be done without charter) to another habendum et tenendum sibi imperpetuum, he hath a fee simple without this word (heires) [y] for there [y] 40. H. 7. 7. (4. Infl. 314.) is a speciall law of the forreist, as there is a law marshall for wars, and a marine law for the seas. [z] And this rule of our author extendeth to the passing of estates of inheritances in ex- [z] 22. E. 3. 3. 45. E. 2. 20. changes, releases, or confirmations that enure by way of enlargement of estates, warranties, 6. E. 3. 22. 4. Co. 1. Buf- bargain and sales by deed indented and inrolled, and the like in which this word (heires) is also tard's case. Vide sect. 465. 469. 610. 19. H. 6. 17. 22. 19. E. necessary, for they do tantamount to a feoffment or grant, or stand upon the same reason that a 2. garr. 85. feoffment or grant doth, for like reason doth make like law, ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus (2). And this is to be observed throughout all these three books, that where other cases fall within the same reason, our author doth put his case but for example, for so our author himselfe in another place * explaneth it, saying, *et memorandum que en tous autres cas, coment que ne sont icy ex- * Sect. 301. pressment mores et specifics, si sont en semblable raison sont en semblable ley*. And here our author is to be understood to speak of heires when they are inheritable by descent, for they are capable of land also by purchase, and then the course of descent is sometimes altered. As if lands of the na- (Post. 10. b. Dy. 133. b. Hob. 31. 1. Co. 101. 103.) ture of gavelkind be given to B, and his heires having issue divers sons, all his sons after his decease shall inherit (3); but if a lease for life be made the remainder to the right heires of B and B dieth, his eldest son only shall inherit, for he only to take by purchase is right heire by the common law (4). So note a diversity between a purchase and a descent. But where the remain- der is limited to the right heires of B it need not to be said, and to their heires, for being plural- ly limited it includeth a fee simple, and yet it resteth but in one by purchase.

Out of that which hath beene said it is to be observed, that a man may purchase lands to him and his heires by ten manner of conveyances, (for I speake not here of estoppells.) First, by feoffment; secondly, by grant (of which two our author here speaketh). Thirdly, by fine, which is a feoffment of record. Fourthly, by common recovery, which is a common conveyance and is in nature of a feoffment of record. Fifthly, by exchange, which is in nature of a grant. Sixthly, by release to a particular tenant. Seventhly, by confirmation to a particular tenant, both which are in nature of grants. Eighthly, by grant of a reversion or remainder with at- tornment of the particular tenant, of all which our author speaketh hereafter. Ninthly, by bargain and sale by deede indented and inrolled ordained by statute since Littleton wrote. 27. H. 8. ca. 16. Tenthly, by devise by custome of some particular place, as he sheweth hereafter, and since he 32. H. 8. ca. 2. 34. H. 8. ca. 5. wrote, by will in writing, generally by authority of parliament.

What words are apt words for a feoffment or grant, vide sect. 531. Our author speaketh of Sect. 531. feoffments and grants, whereby is implied lawfull conveyances, and therefore this rule extendeth 37. Aff. p. 3. 38. Aff. p. 9. not to disseisins, abatements or intrusions into lands or tenements or to usurpations to advow- 12. E. 4. 9. &c. sons, &c. in which cases estates in fee simple are gained by the act and wrong of the disseisors, abators, intruders and usurpers; (5) and if a disseisin, abatement, or intrusion be made to the use of another, if cessui que usi agreeth thereunto in pays, by this bare agreement he gaineth a fee simple without any livery of seisin or other ceremony.

Sect. 2.

ET si home pur- AND if a man purchase terres en chase land in fee fee simple et devy sans simple and die with-issue, chescun que est out issue, he which is son prochain cosin col- his next cosen collatelateral delentire sanke, rall of the whole blood, de quel plus long de how farre so ever he gree qu'il soit (6), poet be from him in deinheriter et aver meme gree, may inherite and la terre come heire a have the land as heire
luy. to him.

concerning them in this chapter, sect. 5. and in his chapters of Parceners; but this is intended

LITTLETON sheweth (plowd. 444.) here who shall be heire to lands in fee simple, for he intendeth not this case of an estate taile, for that he speaketh of an heire of the whole blood, for that extendeth not to estates in taile, as shall be said hereafter in this chapter, section 6.

Prochein cosin colla- terall. Neither excludeth he brethren or sisters, because he hath a speciall case where

(1) Acc. Plowd. 134. b.—(2) For other instances in which a fee will pass by deed or grant without the word heirs, see Vin Abr. Estate, K. 2. and L. To the cases in Viner, add 8. H. 4. 16. b. 19. H. 6. 17. 20. H. 6. 36. 27. H. 8. 3. b. Dy. 169. which I do not see cited by him. See also Ash. Repertor. tit. Estate.—(3) Here heirs being a word of limitation, none can take under it but by descent; and the land being gavelkind, the descent is to all the sons, who are as much heirs to such land, as the eldest son is heir to land descending according to the common law. The custom of gavelkind extends to estates tail, and so irresistible is the customary descent both of gavelkind and borough-english land according to some authorities, that, even in the case of estates tail, it cannot be changed by express words directing a descent secundum cursum communis legis. Dy. 178. b. pl. 45. See Robins. Gavelk. 94. Mr. Robinson's book on Gavelkind is a very excellent law-treatise, and generally comprehends every thing relative to his subject; but in this part of it, he is rather short in his explanation; for though he takes notice of the custom's applying to estates tail, yet he neither mentions the case from Dyer, nor hints whether express words are as insufficient to exclude the custom from estates tail, as they certainly are to controul the descent of estates in fee. Perhaps the author's silence might proceed from his doubts on the subject. See further the case of tanistry, Dav. 31. a. & 36. b. In that case it was resolved, that the customary descent was interrupted by the grant of an estate tail; but then the judges proceeded on a principle quite consistent with the general doctrine in Dyer. They held, first, that the custom of tanistry only applied to lands going with the chiefry or seignory, from which the lands in question had been severed by the grant of the estate tail; and secondly, that the custom of tanistry was not inherent in the land, like the customs of gavelkind and borough-english, but merely personal to the eldest and most worthy, and therefore became extinguished for ever, when the land was conveyed to another person, that is, the heir at common law.—(4) Acc. Rob. Gavelk. 117. 118. and the authorities there cited. The reason seems to be, that though the subject of the gift is customary land, the heir at common law is presumed to be meant, unless words are added to describe the customary heir. But if such special words are used, the presumption fails; and then it is said, that though the subject of the gift is common-law land, yet the customary heir shall be preferred. On this principle, lord ch. Cowper, in a case before him, declared, that if one, having borough-english land and also lands at common law, devises the latter to his heir by the custom of borough-english, this will be a sufficient description of the youngest son, though not heir at common law, and though the devise is not of the customary, but of the common-law land; and that a like devise to gavelkind heirs would entitle all the sons. 2. Vern. 732. and Prec. in Cha. 464. But see further on this latter subject, Post. 24. b. where lord Coke writes, that to take by purchase under a limitation to the heirs female, the person claiming must be both heir and female. See also the note, in which it is attempted to justify lord Coke for that doctrine, and to explain the qualifications with which it ought to be understood.—(5) See Ante. 3. b. and Post. 18. b. (6) De lui. L. and M. Roh. Red.

Glanvill lib. 7. ca. 3. 4.
 Bract. lib. 2. c. 30. fo. 65.
 Britton cap. 119.
 Fleta lib. 6. cap. 1. & 2.
 (Plowd. 444.)
 Bract. lib. 2. ca. 30. fo. 64.
 Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5. & lib. 6. ca.
 1. & 2. Britton ca. 119. Mirror 11. ca. 1. sect. 3. 30. Aff.
 p. 47. (3. Co. 40. 42.)

19. R. 2. tit. gar. 100.

(2 Inst. 7.)

30. Aff. p. 47.

where a man purchaseth lands and dieth without issue, and having neither brother nor sister, then his next cousin collateral shall inherit⁽¹⁾. So as here is implied a division of heires, viz. lineall (whoever shall first inherit) and collateral, (who are to inherit for default of lineall.) For in descents it is a maxime in law, quod linea recta semper præfertur transversali. Lineall descent is conveyed downward in a right line, as from the grandfather to the father, from the father to the sonne, &c. Collateral descent is derived from the side of the lineall, as grandfather's brother, father's brother, &c. Prochein cousin collateral enheritera doth give a certain direction to the next cousin to the sonne, and therefore the father's brother and his posterity shall inherit before the grandfather's brother and his posterity. Et sic de cæteris, for propinquior excludit propinquum, et propinquus remotum, et remotus remotiorem.

Upon this word (prochein) I put this case. One hath issue two sonnes A and B and dieth, B hath two sonnes C and D and dieth. C the eldest sonne hath issue and dieth: A purchaseth lands in fee simple and dieth without issue. D is his next cousin, and yet shall not inherit, but the issue of C, for he that is inheritable is accounted in law next of blood. And therefore here is understood a division of next, viz. next jure representationis, and next jure propinquitatis, that is, by right of representation and by right of propinquity. And Littleton meaneth of the right of representation, for legally in course of descents he is next of blood inheritable. And the issue of C doth represent the person of C, and if C had lived he had been legally next of blood. And whensoever the father if he had lived, should have inherited, his lineall heire by right of representation shall inherit before any other, though another be jure propinquitatis neerer of blood. And therefore Littleton intendeth his case of next cousin of blood immediately inheritable. So as this produceth another division of next blood, viz. immediately inheritable, as the issue of C, and mediately inheritable as D, if the issue of C die without issue; for the issue of C and all that line be they never so remote shall inherit before D or his line, and therefore Littleton saith well de quel plus long degre que il soit. And here ariseth a diversity in law between next of blood inheritable by descent, and next of blood capable by purchase. And therefore in the case before mentioned if a lease for life were made to A, the remainder to his next of blood in fee, in this case as hath been said D shall take the remainder, because he is next of blood and capable by purchase, though he be not legally next to take as heire by descent ⁽²⁾.

Sect. 3.

UNcore le pier est plus prochein de

MES si soit pier et fits, et le pier

BUT if there be father and son, and the

5. E. 6. tit. Administr. Br. 47.
 Ratcliffe's case ubi sup. See after in the chapter of socage.

(Hob. 33.)

(3. Co. 40.)

[p] Pl. Com. 293. b. Osborne's case.

(Post 67.)

sanke. And therefore some do hold upon these words of Littleton, that if a lease for life were made to the sonne the remainder to his next of blood, that the father should take the remainder by purchase, and not the uncle, for that Littleton saith the father is next of blood, and yet the uncle is heire. As if a man hath issue two sons, and the eldest sonne hath issue a sonne and die, a remainder is limited to the next of his blood, the younger son shall take it, yet the other is his heire.

[p] Est un Maxime en le ley, que enheritance poet linealment discender, mes nemy a fcender.

Maxime, i. e. A sure foundation or ground of art, and a ad un frere que est uncle a le fits, et le fits purchase terre en fee simple et mort sans issue vivant son pier, luncle avera la terre come heire al fits et nemy le pier, uncore le pier est plus pro-chein de sanke; pur ceo que est un maxime en le ley, que enheritage poet linealment discender, mes nemy⁽³⁾ ascender. Un-core si le fits en tiel case mort sans issue, et son uncle entra en la terre come heire a le

father hath a brother that is uncle to the son, and the son purchase land in fee simple, and die without issue, living his father, the uncle shall have the land as heire to the son, and not the father, yet the father is neerer of blood; because it is a maxime in law, that inheritance may lineally descend, but not ascend. Yet if the son in this case die without issue, and his uncle enter into the land as heire to the fits

(1) In the preceding page, lord Coke begins his comment on that part of Littleton, which describes the course of descent by the common law of England; and this seems to be a proper place for referring the student to some valuable writings, published since lord's Coke's time on the same subject. See Hal. Hist. C. L. c. 11. Wright's Ten. 174. Gilb. Ten. 2. Dalrymp. Feud. Prop. 4th ed. c. 5. p. 159. and Blackst. Law of Descents. To the first and last of these books it is that we principally call the attention of the student; though it must be confessed, that in all of them, the history of the law is so learnedly and critically traced, and the feudal principles, on which it chiefly depends, are so clearly unfolded, that a subject, in itself dry and abstruse, becomes not only plain and intelligible, but even agreeable and interesting. Mr. R. Robinson's Discourse concerning the Law of Inheritances in Fee-simple is another treatise on the same subject, which should not be passed over without notice. Many parts of it are ingeniously written; but unfortunately the author has chiefly exerted his talents in inventing a new kalendar of consanguinity, the explanation of which employs a very considerable part of the work; and by always referring to this, and by introducing a number of arbitrary terms, which are only intelligible as he explains them, he involves his subject, before too much embarrassed with difficulties, in still greater perplexity.

(2) Harpur having a son and 4 daughters, viz. A, B, C, and D, devises to the son in tail, remainder to B and C for life, remainder proximo consanguinitatis et sanguinis of the devisor; and Easter 17. Jam. by two justices against one, the remainder vests in all the daughters when the son dies without issue. But afterwards, Mich. 10. Jam. per totam curiam, it vests in the eldest daughter only, and not in all the daughters; 1. because proximo; 2. because an express estate is limited to two of the daughters—Periman and Pierce.—Hal. MS.—See S. C. in Palm. 11. and 303. 2. Ro. Rep. 256. Bridgm. 14. O. Bendl. 102. 106.—Lord chief justice Hale also gives a note on the words, proximus de sanguine vel consanguinitate; in which, after citing from Radcliffe's case, 3. Co. 40. that on the stat. 21. H. 8. the father or mother shall be preferred in administration to the son, as next of blood before the brother, he adds, Nota, ruled that in administration, the sister of the half blood shall be preferred in administration before the son of the sister of the whole blood; but when they are in æquali gradu, the sister of the whole blood shall be preferred before the sister of the half blood. M. 23. Cha. and M. 1650. B. R. Brown's case. Hal. MSS. See further as to proximus de sanguine in Dy. 333. b.

(3) Linealment.—P. and Red.

fits (siccome il devoit per la ley) et apres l'un-cle devia sans issue, vivant le pier, donques le pier avera la terre come heire al uncle, et nemy come heir a son fits, pur ceo que il veigne al terre per collateral discent et nemy per lineal ascention.

sonne (as by law he ought) and after the uncle dieth without issue, living the father, the father shall have the land as heire to the uncle, and not as heire to his sonne, for that he commeth to the land by collateral discent and not by lineall ascent.

conclusion of reason, so called [q] quia maxima est ejus dignitas et certissima auctoritas, atque quod maxime omnibus probetur, so sure and uncontrollable as that they ought not to be questioned. [r] And that which our author here and in other places calleth a maxime, hereafter he calleth a principle, and it is all one with a rule, a common ground, postulatum, or an axiome, and it were too much curiositie to make nice distinctions between them. And it is well

[q] Pl. C. m. 27. b. (3. Co. 46.)

[r] Sect. 90. 643.

saïd in our bookes, [s] nest my a disputer l'ancien principes del ley. I never read any opinion in any booke old or new against this maxime, but onely in lib. rub. where it is said, [t] si quis sine liberis discesserit, pater aut mater ejus in hereditatem succedat, vel frater et soror si pater et mater defuncti, si nec hos habeat, soror patris vel matris, et deinceps qui propinquiores in parentela fuerint hereditario succedant, et dum virilis sexus extiterit, et hereditas abinde sit, femina non hereditat. But all our ancient authors and the constant opinion ever since do affirme the maxime.

[s] 12. H. 4. Glanvill lib. 7. cap. 1. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 29.
[t] Lib. Rub. cap. 70.

By this maxime in the conclusion of his case, onely lineall ascention in the right line is prohibited, and not in the collateral, [u] Quelibet hereditas naturaliter quidem ad heredes hereditabiliter descendit, nunquam quidem naturaliter ascendit. Descendit itaque jus quasi ponderosum quod cadens deorsum recta linea vel transversali, et nunquam reascendit ea via qua descendit post mortem antecessorum, à latere tamen ascendit alicui propter defectum heredum inferius provenientium; so as the lineall ascent is prohibited by law, and not the collateral (.) And in prohibiting the lineall ascent, the common law is assisted with the law of the 12 tables (2).

[u] Brit. cap. 119. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. Num. ca. 27. Ratcliff's case ubi supra. (3. Co. 42.)

Here our author for the confirmation of his opinion draweth a reason and a prooffe (as you have perceived) from one of the maxims of the common law. Now that I may here observe it once for all, his proofes and arguments, in these his three books, may be generally divided into two parts, viz. from the common law and from statutes, of both which, and of their several branches I shall give the studious reader some few examples, and leave the rest to his diligent observation.

For the common law his proofes and argument are drawn from 27 several fountaines or places.

[a] First, from the maxims, principles, rules, intendment and reason of the common law, which indeed is the rule of the law, as here, and in other places our author doth use.

[b] Secondly, from the bookes, records, and other authorities of law cited by him ab auctoritate, et pronuntiatis.

[c] Thirdly, from originall writs in the register à rescriptis valet argumentum.

[d] Fourthly, from the forme of good pleading.

[e] Fifthly, from the right entrie of judgements.

[f] Sixthly, à precedentibus approbatis et usu, from approved precedents and use,

[g] Seventhly, à non usu, from not use.

[h] Eightly, ab artificialibus argumentis, consequentibus et conclusionibus, artificial arguments, consequents and conclusions.

Ninthly, [i] a communi opinione jurisprudentum, from the common opinion of the sages of the law.

Tenthly, [k] ab inconvenienti, from that which is inconvenient.

Eleventhly, [l] a divisione from a division, vel ab enumeratione partium, from the enumeration of the parts.

Twelvethly, [m] a majore ad minus, from the greater to the lesser, or [n] from the lesser to the greater, [o] a simili, [p] a pari.

13. [†] Ab impossibili, from that which is impossible.

14. [q] A fine, from the end.

15. [•] Ab utili vel inutili, from that which is profitable or unprofitable.

16. [r] Ex absurdo, for that thereupon shall follow an absurditie, quasi a furdo prolutum, because it is repugnant to understanding and reason.

17. [s] A natura et ordine naturæ, from the nature or the course of nature.

18. [t] Ab

[a] Sect. 5. 8. 90. 96. 32. 53. 57. 59. 65. 99. 130. 146. 156. 169. 178. 231. 293. 302. 352. 360. 376. 377. 399. 410. 440. 441. 346. 347. 462. 43.

[b] Sect. 20. where a number of others are quoted.

[c] Sect. 67. 132. 170. 234. 241. 263. 613. 614. (Plowd. 228.)

[d] Sect. 38. 176. 183. 369.

[e] Sect. 248. 249.

[f] Sect. 88. 74. 76. 145. 332. 371. 372. 445.

[g] 108. 733.

[h] Sect. 170. 264. 283. 302. 429. 464. 629. 633. 686. 340. 413. 613. 686. 739.

[i] Sect. 697. 59. 104. 283. 332. 478.

[k] Sect. 87. where many others are quoted.

[l] Sect. 13. where many more are quoted, but see chiefly sect 381.

[m] Sect. 438. 439. 441.

[n] Sect. 18. [o] 301. &c.

[p] 291. 293. 409. &c.

[†] 129. 440.

[q] Sect. 146. 194.

[•] Sect. 360.

[r] Sect. 722.

[s] Sect. 114. 223. 129. 211.

[t] 107. 108.

(1) In Ratcliffe's case, 3. Co. 40. the reasons given for excluding lineal ascent are, first, that fathers and mothers are not of the blood of their children; secondly, that the exclusion is agreeable to the Jewish law, as prescribed to Moses by God himself; and thirdly, that it tends to avoid that confusion and diversity of opinions in the case of descents, of which the allowance of lineal ascension by the civil law is said to be the occasion. Lord Coke himself controverts the first of these reasons, by the words of Littleton in the section here commented upon, and by the case of administration, in which the father or mother is preferred as nearest of blood to their children, and also by the case of a remainder to the sons nearest of blood, under which description the father is entitled to take by purchase. But as to the two other reasons, lord Coke rather appears to adopt them. However, neither of them seems satisfactory. The inference from God's precept to Moses is unwarranted, unless it can be shewn, that it was promulgated as a law for mankind in general, instead of being, like many other parts of the Mosaic law, a rule for the direction of the Jewish nation only. Besides, by the Jewish law, the father did succeed to the son in exclusion of his brothers, unless one of them married the widow of the deceased, and raised up seed to him. See Blackst. Law Tracts, v. 1. p. 182. 8vo ed. and Seld. de Success. Ebraeor. c. 12. there cited. The argument from the supposed confusion and uncertainty, which might arise, if lineal ascent should be permitted, is not less liable to objection; because lineal ascent might be governed by the same rules as lineal descent; and what is the difference between the two, that should create more confusion and uncertainty in the one case than in the other? Our modern writers account for our law's disallowance of lineal ascent in a very different way; and, according to them, it in a great measure originated from the nature of ancient feudal grants, which, like estates tail, being confined to the first feudatory and his descendants, necessarily excluded his father and mother, and all paramount them and also his collateral relations. How this rule in practice became extended so as to exclude lineal ascent universally, without confining it to the cases to which the feudal reason for the rule is applicable, and yet at the same time is so contrived, as to let in all collateral relations, and even the father himself collaterally, and by the medium of others, is not now very easy to explain, though this has been attempted. See Wright's Ten. 180. and Blackst. Law Tracts, v. 1. p. 183. 8vo ed. See also a learned note on the subject in Littleton avec Observat. par M. Houard. This edition of Littleton is in 2. vol. 4to. and was published at Rouen in 1766.

(2) See Tab. 5 l. de successionibus ab intestato; but neither in this, nor in any other part of the 12 tables, do I see any thing to exclude lineal ascent; and as I have not met with any book on the Roman law in which such an exclusion is mentioned, I conclude,

[1] Sect. 202.
 [u] Sect. 440.
 [w] Sect. 481.
 [x] Sect. 13, &c. Sect. 731. 692.
 635. 633. 441. 103. 193. 154.
 140. 2. (Plowd. 57. b. 49. b.)
 [y] Sect. 464. (Cro. Ja. 474.)
 [z] Sect. 731. 685. (Plowd. 105.)
 [a] 17. E. 5. Rot. Parl. nu. 19.
 25. E. 3. cap. 1. Regist. inter Jura regia 61. &c. (Post 360.)
 [b] Commonly spoken of in Parliament Rolls. (4. Inst. 14. Post.
 15. b.)
 [c] 13. E. 4. 9. 7. Co. Calvin's case. Pl. Com. Sherington's case.
 (Dr. and Stud. Dial. 1. c. 2.)
 [d] This law appeareth in our bookes and judicall records [e] These are of record in Rolls of Parliament.
 [f] Whereof you shall read in our author, and in our bookes.
 [g] Rot. Parl. 2. R. 2. nu. 3.
 13. R. 2. ca. 2. (Post 249.)
 [h] 7. Co. Caudrie's case articul.
 super cartas, &c.
 [i] 37. H. 6. 21. Fortesc. ca. 32.
 13. H. 4. 4. 28. H. 8. ca. 15.
 [k] Carta de Foresta, &c. the charters of the Forests.
 [l] 27. E. 3. ca. 17. Wi. ca. 23.
 4. H. 5. ca. 7.
 [m] Mirror des Justic. c. 1. Bract.
 334. 444. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 51. 52.
 &c. 5. E. 3. 11. 38. E. 3. 7.
 27. E. 3. cap. 8. Fortesc. 32.
 F. N. B. 117. 13. E. 4. 9. Rot.
 Parl. 6. H. 4. nu. 43. 10. H. 7.
 16. 47. E. 3. 22. 30. E. 1. Account 127. Carta mercatoria 31.
 E. 1. rot. patent. (4. Inst. 237.)
 [n] Mich. 41. E. 3. coram rege in Thesaur. 12. E. 3. 5. b. 12. H.
 8. fol. 5. Rot. Pat. an. 20. E. 1.
 7. Co. Calvin's case fol. 21. Re-gift. fol. 22.
 [o] 50. E. 3. Rot. Parl. 50. E.
 3. Rot. Patent, &c.
 [p] 31. H. 6. ca. 3. 4. Ja. c. 1.
 [q] 11. H. 4. 11. 10. Aff. 27.
 34. Aff. p. 20. 19. E. 2. quar.
 impd. 177. 45. E. 3. 13. 40.
 Aff. p. 6.
 [r] 11. Aff. p. 6. Doct. and Stud. 12. b. 32. H. 6. 35.
 [s] 19. H. 6. 61.

18. [1] Ab ordine religionis, from the order of religion.

19. [u] A communi presumptione, from a common presumption.

20. [w] A lectionibus jurisprudentium, from the readings of learned men of law.

From statutes his arguments and proofes are drawne,

1. [x] From the rehearfall or preamble of the statute.

2. By the bodie of the law diversly interpreted.

Sometime by other parts of the same statute, which is benedictio expositio, et ex visceribus causae.

[y] Sometime by the reason of the common law. But ever the generall words are to be intended of a lawfull act, [z] and such interpretation must ever be made of all statutes, that the innocent or he in whom there is no default may not be damnified (1).

En la ley. There be divers lawes within the realme of England. As first, [a] Lex coronae, the law of the crowne.

2. [b] Lex et consuetudo parliamenti. Ista lex est ab omnibus quaerenda, à multis ignorata, à paucis cognita.

3. [c] Lex naturae, the law of nature.

4. [d] Communis lex Angliae, the common law of England, sometime called lex terrae, intended by our author in this and the like places.

5. [e] Statute law. Lawes established by authoritie of parliament.

6. [f] Consuetudines. Customes reasonable.

7. [g] Jus belli. The law of armes, war, and chivalrie, in republica maxime conservanda sunt jura belli.

8. [h] Ecclesiastical or canon law in courts in certaine cases.

9. [i] Civil law in certaine cases not onely in courts ecclesiasticall, but in the courts of the countable and marshall, and of the admiraltie, in which court of the admiraltie is observed la ley
Olyron, anno 5. of Richard the first, so-called, because it was published in the ille of Olyron.

10. [k] Lex foreste, forest law.

11. [l] The law of marque or reprisall (2).

12. [m] Lex mercatoria, merchant, &c.

13. [n] The lawes and customes of the isles of Jerfey, Gernsey and Man.

14. [o] The law and priviledge of the Stannaries.

15. [p] The lawes of the east, west, and middle Marches, which are now abrogated.

But hereof this little taste for our student, that he may be capable of that which he shall reade concerning these and others in records, and in our books, and orderly observe them, shall suffice.

Et son uncle enter en la terre. For if the uncle in this case doth not enter into the land, then cannot the father inherit the land; for there is another maxime in law herein implied, [q] that a man, that claimeth as heire in fee simple to anie man by descent, must make himself heir to him that was last seised of the actuall freehold and inheritance (3). And if the uncle in this case doth not enter, then had he but a freehold in law, and no actuall freehold, but the last that was seised of the actuall freehold was the sonne to whom the father cannot make himself heire; and therefore Littleton saith, et son uncle enter en la terre (siccome devoit per la ley) to make the father to inherite, as heire to the uncle. [r] Note, that true it is that the uncle in this case is heire, but not absolutely heire; for if after the descent to him the father hath issue a sonne or daughter, that issue shall enter upon the uncle (4). [s] And so it is if a man hath issue a sonne and a daughter, the sonne purchaseth land in fee and dyeth without issue, the daughter shall inherite the land, but if the father hath afterward issue a sonne, this sonne shall enter into the land as heire to his brother, and if he hath issue a daughter and no sonne, she shall be coparcener with her sister.

Siccome il devoit per la ley. These words as a key doe open the secrets of the law, for hereupon it is concluded, that where the uncle cannot get an actuall possession by en-trie or otherwise, there the father in this case cannot inherit. And therefore if an advowson be granted to the sonne and his heires, and the sonne die without issue, and this descend to the uncle, and he die before he doth or can present to the church, the father shall not inherit, because he should make himself heire to the sonne, which he cannot doe. And so of a rent and the like. But if the uncle had presented to the church, or had seisin of the rent, there the father should have inherited. For Littleton putteth his case of an entry into land but for an example. If the sonne make a lease for life, and die without issue, and the reversion descend to the uncle, and he die, the reversion shall not descend to the father, because in that case he must make himselfe heire to the sonne. A infeoffe the son with warrantie to him and his heires, the sonne dies, the uncle enters into the land and dies, the father if he be impleaded shall not take the advantage of this warrantie

clude, that lord Coke is mistaken in his idea of our law's conforming to the law of the 12 Tables. The mother was indeed excluded; but it was not because the law of the 12 Tables did not permit lineal ascent, but on account of her sex, that law preferring the agnati or those related through males, and excluding the cognati, or those related through females. See Inst. 3. 3. Princ.

(1) As to the construction of statutes, see lord ch. Hatt. Treat. on Stat.—Aff. Expof. Stat. by Eq.—Vin. Ab. Statutes E. 6.—
 Com. Dig. Parliament R. 10.

(2) Besides the books more generally known, see Lee's Capt. in War, which is a Treatise on this subject.

(3) Grandfather, father, and son; grandfather dies; father is bound in an obligation or warranty, and dies before entry. Held, that the son is not liable, because he shall make himself heir to the grandfather. 24. E. 3. Hal. MSS.

(4) Here lord Coke is silent as to the right to the intermediate profits from the death of the father. In the case of Basset and Basset, lord ch. Hardwicke held, that a posthumous son, claiming under a remainder in a settlement, was, by construction of the 10. and 11. W. 3. c. 16. which preserves remainders for posthumous children, where no estate is limited to trustees for that purpose, intitled to the mean profits. See 3. Atk. 203. But in the same case, lord Hardwicke seems to have taken it for granted, that on a descent the mean profits belong to the uncle; for he directed, that the profits of the estate descended should be accounted for by the uncle, only from the birth of the posthumous son. See Post 55. b. where lord Coke puts the case of a daughter's being intitled against a posthumous brother to corn sowed before his birth; which seems to shew, that lord Coke did not consider the posthumous child as intitled to any mean profits on a descent. See also Will. Rep. vol. 2. p. 526. where lord ch. j. De Grey, in delivering the opinion of the court of C. P. on a question whether a posthumous son was actually seized, denies that the posthumous son, in the case of a descent, can be intitled to any profits received before his birth, and cites 9. H. 6. 25. as an authority in point.

warrantie, for then he must vouch A as heire to his sonne, which he cannot doe (1), for albeit the warrantie descended to the uncle, yet the uncle leaveth it as he found it, and then the father by Littleton's (devoit) cannot take advantage of it. For Littleton Sect. 603. saith that warranties shall descend to him that is heire by the common law, and Sect. 718. he saith that everie warrantie which descends, doth descend to him that is heire to him which made the warrantie by the common law, which proveth that the father shall not be bound by the warrantie made by the sonne, for that the father cannot be heire to the sonne, that made the warrantie. And a warrantie shall not goe with the tenements, whereunto it is annexed, to any speciall heire, but alwaies to the heire at the common law (2). And therefore if the uncle be seised of certaine lands, and is disseised, the sonne release to the disseisor, with warrantie, and die without issue, this shall bind the uncle; but if the uncle die without issue, the father may enter, for the warranty cannot descend upon him. So if the sonne concludeth himselfe by pleading concerning the tenure and services of certaine lands, this shall bind the uncle; but if the uncle die without issue, this shall not bind the father, because he cannot be heire to the sonne, and consequently not to the estoppel in that case; but if it be such an estoppel as runneth with the land, then it is otherwise (3).

Vid. Sect. 603. 718. (Post 329.)

Vid. Sect. 735. 736. 737.

35. H. 6. 33. John Crook's case. (5. Co. 79.)

Sect. 4.

ET en tiel case, lou le fits purchase terre en fee simple, et devie sans issue, ceux de son sang de part son pier enheriteront come heires a luy, devant aucun de sang de part sa mere: mes fil nad aucun heire de part son pier, donques la terre descendra a les heires de part la mere (4). Mes si home prent (5) enheretrix des terres en fee simple, queux ont issue fits, et deviont, et le fits enter en les tenements, come fits et heire a sa mere, et puis devie sans issue, les heires de part la mere doyent enheriter, les tenements et jammes les heires de part le pier. Et fil ny ad aucun heire de part la mere, donque le seignior, de que la terre est tenu, avera la

AND in case where the sonne purchaseth land in fee simple, and dies without issue, they of his blood on the father's side shall inherite as heires to him, before any of the blood on the mother's side. But if he hath no heire on the part of his father, then the land shall descend to the heires on the part of the mother. But if a man marieth an inheritrix of lands in fee simple, who have issue a sonne, and die, and the sonne enter into the tenements, as sonne and heire to his mother, and after dies without issue, the heires of the part of his mother ought to inherit, and not the heires of the part of the father. And if he hath no heire on the part of the mother, then the lord

BY this it appeareth, that our author divideth heires into heires of the part of the father, and into heires of the part of the mother. [a] And note, it is an old and true maxime in law, that none shall inherite any lands as heire, but only the blood of the first purchaser, for * refert à quo fiat perquisitum. As for example, Robert Coke taketh the daughter of Knightley to wife, and purchaseth lands to him and to his heires, and by Knightley hath issue Edward, none of the blood of the Knightleys, though they be of the blood of Edward, shall inherite, albeit he had no kindred but them, because they were not of the blood of the first purchaser, viz. Robert Coke (6).

Vide Sect. 354. an excellent point.

[a] Pl. Com. Sir Edward Clere's case. 447.

[*] Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. 2. &c. Bracton lib. 2. fo. 65. 67. 68. 69. &c. Britton ca. 119. 24. E. 3. 50. 39. E. 3. 29. 30. 38. 49. E. 3. 12. 49. Aff. p. 4. 12. E. 4. 14. Pl. Com. 445. & 450. 7. E. 6. Dyer 6. 24. E. 3. 24. 37. Aff. 4. 40. E. 3. 9. 42. E. 3. 10. 45. E. 3. Releases 28. 7. H. 5. 3. 4. 8. Aff. 6. 35. Aff. 2. 5. E. 4. 7. 3. H. 5. 21. H. 7. 33. 40. Aff. 6. Ratcliffe's case, 3. Co. 42.

Post 220. b.

[b] Ceux del sang de part son pier. Here it is to be understood, that the father hath two immediate bloods in him, viz. the blood of his father, and the blood of his mother (7), both these bloods are of the part of the father. [c] And this made ancient authors say, that if a man be seised of lands in the right of his wife, and is attainted of felony, and after hath issue, this issue should not inherit his mother, for that he could derive no blood inheritable from the father. And both these bloods of the part of the father must be spent before

[b] Bracton ubi supra. Fleta ubi supra. Britton ca. 118. 119. Pl. Com. 444. Clere's case. Tr. 19. E. 1. in Banco Rot. 25. Linacoln. Will. Scel's case.

[c] Britton fol. 15. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 18. Pl. Com. 445. 446. &c. Clere's case. (1. Sid. 200.)

(1) Quere of this case of warranty; for though the lieu of warranty descends from him, who makes the warranty, to the heir at common law, and it cannot descend to the special heir, because it is a thing in gross, yet the benefit of a warranty, being once annexed to land, shall go in divers cases as incident to the land to the special heir or offessee. Thus a gift of borough english, with a warranty, shall go to the youngest son with the land. Hal. MSS. See Acc. 2. Ro. Ab. 743. where it is said, that the father may vouch on such a warranty to the uncle. In Gilb. Ten. 18. there is a reference to lord ch. j. Hale's note on this part of lord Coke, from which it appears that lord ch. bar. Gilbert had seen lord Hale's MSS. notes.—(2) See Acc. both as estoppels and warranties. Hob. 31. 8. Co. 54. but observe what is said by lord Hale in the preceding note.—(3) The son makes lease for life, and dies; the uncle releases to the lessee for life in tail on condition, and dies. Quere, who shall enter for the condition broken, as the reversion in fee doth not descend to the father? Hal. MSS.—(4) Et cest l'opinion de toutes les justices M. 12. E. 4. Mes la suit tenu si terre descende a un home de part son pere, qui devia sans issue, que son prochain heire de part son pere enheritera a luy cest assavoir le prochain que est del sang le pere de part layel. Et pur defaute de tiel heire, ceux que sont de sang le pere del part le mere le pere, S. laielesse doient enheriter. Et fil ny ad tiel heire de part le pere donques le seignior avera le terre par eschete. Red. But this passage is not in any edition prior to Redman's, and seems an addition to Littleton by another hand, and to be an opinion extracted from 12. E. 4. 14. pl. 12. which is indeed cited in the margin of Redman.—(5) Feme. L. and M.—Roh.—P.—Red.—(6) And therefore if the heir of the part of the father be attainted, the land shall escheat. 49. Aff. p. 4. Hal. MSS.—(7) But sometimes a man can only have immediate inheritable blood from one parent, as where his father or mother is an alien or person attainted; and this it seems suffices to enable children to inherit from the parent, who confers the inheritable blood, and also to inherit to each other. See Acc. ante 8. a. n. 2. and the following note by lord Hale on lord Coke's next passage, where he mentions, that according to ancient authors the issue of an attainted father cannot inherit to the mother. This seems not to be law. A female heritrix takes an alien to husband, and they have issue: the issue shall inherit to the mother. Post sect. 114. and fol. 33. a. for dower of wife being alien or attainted. Hal. MSS. To the same purpose is what follows, being a note on fol. 8. a. ante, where lord Coke asserts that the children of an alien cannot inherit to each other, though he allows that the children of one attainted, if born before the attainder, may. Quere of this; for it seems the blood of the mother suffices to make them inheritable one to the other, and this was the principal reason in Hobby's case. Hal. MSS. Also lord Hale, in another note on fol. 8. a. ante abridges the case of Bacon and Bacon from Co. Cha. and cites Stephens's case in the dutchy as another case of the same kind, and then there is the note following.

(Plowd. 144.)

[a] 19. R. 2. garr. 100.

Britton ca. 118. 119. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 2.

before the heire of the blood of the part of the mother shall inherit, wherein ever the line of the male of the part of the father, (that is) the posteritie of such male, be they male or female, (whoever in descents are preferred) must faile before the line of the mother shall inherit, [a] and the reason of all this is for that the blood of the part of the father is more worthie, and more neere in judgment of law, than the blood of the part of the mother.

Devant ascun del sanke del part del mere.

And it is to be observed, that the mother hath also two immediate bloods in her, (viz.) her father's blood, and her mother's blood. Now to illustrate all this by example. Robert Fairefield, sonne of John Fairefield and Jane Sandie, takes to wife Anne Boyes, daughter of John Boyes and Jane Bewpree, and hath issue William Fairefield who purchaseth lands in fee. Here William Fairefield hath foure immediate bloods in him, two of the part of his father, viz. the blood of the Fairefields, and the blood of the Sandies, and two of the part of his mother, viz. the blood of the Boyes, and the blood of the Bewprees, and so in both cases upward in infinitum. Now admit that William Fairefield die without issue, first the blood of the part of his father, viz. of the Fairefields, and for want thereof the blood of the Sandies (for both these are of the part of the father) if both these faile, then the heires of the part of the mother of William Fairefield shall inherit, viz. first the blood of the Boyes, and for default thereof the blood of the Bewprees.

It is necessary to be knowne in what cases the heire of the part of mother shall inherit, and where not. If a man be seised of lands as heire of the part of his mother, and maketh a feoffment in fee, and taketh backe an estate to him and to his heires, this is a new purchase, and if he dyeth without issue, the heires of the part of the father shall first inherit. (2) If a man so seised maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and dye, the heire of the part of the father, which is the heire at the common law, shall enter for the condition broken, but the heire of part of the mother shall enter upon him, and enjoy the land. [m] A man so seised maketh a feoffment in fee reserving a rent to him and to his heires, this rent shall goe to the heires of the part of the father; but [n] if he had made a gift in taile, or a lease for life reserving a rent, the heire of the part of the mother shall have the reversion, and the rent also as incident thereunto shall passe with it, but the heire of the part of the mother shall not take the advantage of a condition annexed to the same, because it is not incident to the reversion, nor can passe therewith. [o] If a man had been seised of a manor as heire on the part of his mother, and before the statute of Quia emptores terrarum, had made a feoffment in fee of parcell to hold of him by rent and service, albeit they be newly created, yet for that they are parcell of the manor, they shall with the rest of the manor descend to the heire of the part of the mother, quia multa transeunt cum universitate quæ per se non transeunt. If a man hath a rent secke of the part of his mother, and the tenant of the land

9. H. 7. 24. (Plowd. 47. Post 202.)

[m] 7. H. 6. 4. 1. Co. 100. Shelley's case.

[n] 5. E. 2. tit. Avowry 207. (Hob. 31.)

[o] 5. E. 3. Avowry 207. (8. Co. 54. 3. Co. 32. b.)

Yet note, that he cannot be heir to his mother, because she is an alien. Husband denizen takes wife an alien, or wife takes husband an alien, and they have issue. It seems the issue shall inherit to the father in the first case, to the mother in the second. Ergo videtur, that if alien has issue by denizen two sons, one son shall inherit to the other, because the mother is a denizen; and so in the case of a person attainted, having issue after attainder; and this was one of the reasons of Hobby's case. Hal. MSS. This doctrine is agreeable to lord Hale's argument when he gave judgment in Collingwood and Pace, cited ante fo. 8. a. n. 2. and also confirms the observation hazarded in n. 5. fol. 8. a.

(1) All between En mesme and sic vide omitted in Red.—(2) But here lord Coke must be understood to speak of two distinct conveyances in fee; the first passing the use as well as the possession to the feoffee, and so completely divesting the feoffor of all interest in the land; and the second regranting the estate to him. For if in the first feoffment, the use had been expressly limited to the feoffor and his heirs, or if there was no declaration of uses, and the feoffment was not on such a consideration as to raise an use in the feoffee, and consequently the use resulted to the feoffor, in either case he is in of his ancient use, and not by purchase. Adj. acc. 3. Lev. 406. and 2. Salk. 59. and see Acc. Post 13. a. and 21. b. What shall be a purchase, and break the descent, so as to entitle the paternal heir to a preference over the maternal heir, particularly in the case of a devise to the heir, the student may inform himself by the authorities cited in Vin. Abr. Heir. W. 1. 2. to which add Barrey and Trevillian. Mo. 278. Hinde and Lyon. 3. Leon. 64. 70. and Dy. 124. Hainsworth and Pretty. Cro. Eliz. 833. 919. Brown and Taylor. Cro. Cha. 38. Clark and Smith, 1. Salk. 241. and 1. Lutw. 793. Smith and Trig. 8. Mod. 23. and 1. Stra. 487. Ratcliffe's case. 1. Stra. 267. Martin and Strachan. 1. Willf. part 1. p. 66. and Hurst and the earl of Winchelsea Burr. 4. pt. v. 2. p. 879. In this last case, a feme covert by force of a power appointed by will to her heir in fee, but charged the land with debts and legacies; and it was adjudged in B. R. that the heir took by descent, and that the appointment had no other operation than making the estate subject to the debts and legacies. One leading principle, which this and the other authorities seem clearly to establish is, that whenever a devise gives to the heir the same estate in quality as he would have by descent, he shall take by the latter, which is the title most favoured by the law; and that merely charging the estate with debts or legacies will not break the descent. This is onely one of the many useful propositions, which might be extracted on the subject as the result of the long list of cases before cited, if this was the proper place for a discussion so nice and difficult.

terre per escheat.

(1) En mesme le maner est, si tenements descendent a le fits de part le pier, et il enter et puis morust sans issue, cel terre descendra as heires de part le pier, et nemy as heires de part la mere. Et fil ny ad ascun heire de part le pier, donques le seignior, de que la terre est tenus, avera la terre per escheat. Et sic vide diversitatem, lou le fits purchase terres ou tenements, en fee simple, et lou il veient eins a tiels terres ou tenements per descent de part sa mere ou de part son pier.

of whom the land is holden, shall have the land by escheate. In the same manner it is, if lands descend to the sonne, of the part of the father, and he entereth, and afterwards dies without issue, this land shall descend to the heires on the part of the father, and not to the heires on the part of the mother. And if there be no heire of the part of the father, the lord of whom the land is holden shall have the land by escheate. And so see the diversity, where the sonne purchaseth lands or tenements in fee simple, and where he cometh to them by descent on the part of his mother, or on the part of his father.

granteth a distresse to him and to his heires, and the grantee dieth, the distresse shall go with the rent to the heire of the part of the mother, as incident or appurtenant to the rent, for now is the rent fecke become a rent charge (1).

[p] A man so seised as heire on the part of his mother maketh a feoffment in fee to the use of him and his heires, the use being a thing in trust and confidence shall ensue the nature of the land (2), and shall descend to the heire on the part of the mother. [q] A man hath a seignior as heire of the part of his mother, and the tenancy doth escheat, it shall go to the heire of the part of the mother. If the heire of the part of the mother of land whereunto a warranty is annexed is impleaded and vouchee, and judgment is given against him, and for him to recover in value, and he dieth before execution [r] the heire of the part of the mother shall sue execution to have in value against the vouchee, for the effect ought to pursue the cause, and the recompence shall ensue the losse.

If a man giveth lands to a man, to have and to hold to him and his heires on the part of his mother, yet the heires of the part of the father shall inherit, for no man can institute a new kind of inheritance not allowed by the law, and the words (of the part of his mother) are void, as in the case that Littleton putteth in this chapter. If a man giveth lands to a man to him and his heires males, the law rejecteth this word males, because there is no such kind of inheritance, whereof you shall read more in his proper place.

A man hath issue a sonne, and dieth, and the wife dieth also, lands are letten for life, the remainder to the heires of the wife, the sonne dieth without issue, the heires of the part of the father shall inherit, and not the heires of the part of the mother, because it vested in the sonne as a purchaser. And the rule of Littleton holdeth as well in other kind of inheritances, as in lands and tenements. [s] And therefore if there be lord, feme mesue, and tenant, and the mesne bind her selfe and her heires by her deed to the acquittal of the tenant, the mesne take husband, the tenant by his deed granted to the husband and his heires, that he or his heires shall not be bound to acquittal, the husband and wife have issue, and die, this issue, being bound as heire to his mother, shall not take benefit of the said grant of discharge, for that extends to the heires of the part of the father, and not to the heires of the part of the mother, and therefore the heire of the part of the mother was bound to the acquittal (3). And thus much for the better understanding of Littleton's cases concerning the heire of the part of the mother shall suffice (4).

Mes si home priest feme inheritrix, &c. Here there is another maxime, [t] that whensoever lands do descend from the part of the mother, the heires of the part of the father shall never inherit. And likewise when lands descend from the part of the father, the heires of the part of the mother shall never inherit (5). Et sic paterna paternis, et de converso, materna maternis. For more manifestation hereof, and of that which hereafter shall be said touching descents, see a table in the end of this chapter.

Avera la terre per escheat. [u] Escheat (6), escheata, is a word of art, and derived from the French word eschear (id est) cadere, excidere or accidere, and signifyeth properly when by accident the lands fall to the lord of whom they are holden, in which case we say the fee is escheated. And therefore, of some, escheats are called excadentia or terre excadentiales [w]. Dominus vero capitalis loco heredis habetur quoties per defectum vel delictum extinguatur sanguis sui tenentis, loco heredis et haberi poterit nisi per modum donationis fit reversio cuiusque tenementi. And Ockam (who wrote in the raigne of Henry the second) treating of tenures of the king, saith, porro escheatae vulgo dicuntur quae decedentibus hiis quae de rege tenent, &c. cum non existit ratione sanguinis heres, ad fiscum relabuntur. [x] So as an escheat doth happen two manner of wayes, aut per defectum sanguinis, i. e. for default of heire, aut per delictum tenentis, i. e. for felony, and that is by judgment three manner of waies, aut quia suspensus per collum, aut quia abiuravit regnum, aut quia utrogatus est. And therefore, they which are hanged by martiall law in furore belli forfeit no lands: and so in like cases escheats by the civilians are called caduca.

[y] The father is seised of lands in fee holden of I. S. the son is attainted of high treason, the father dieth, the land shall escheat to I. S. propter defectum sanguinis, for that the father dyeth without heire. And the king cannot have the land, because the sonne never had any thing to forfeit. But the king shall have the escheate of all the lands whereof the person attainted of high treason was seised, of whomsoever they were holden (7).

[z] In an appeale of death or other felony, &c. processe is awarded against the defendant, and hanging the processe the defendant conveyeth away the land, and after is outlawed, the conveyance is good (8) and shall defeat the lord of his escheat, but if a man be indicted of felony, and hanging the processe against him, he conveyeth away the land, and after is outlawed, the conveyance shall not in that case prevent the lord of his escheate. And the reason of this diversity is manifest: for in the case of the appeale, the writ containeth no time when the

[p] 5. E. 4. 4. 1. Co. 100. Shelley's case. 27. H. 8. Dyer Buckenham's case. 32. H. 8. Gard Brooke 93. 13. H. 7. 6. (Ro. Abr. 780. Post. 23. a. 271. b. 1. Co. 127. Heb. 31. 2. Co. 58.)

[q] 16. E. 3. age 46.

[r] Pl. Com. 292. & 515. See more of this in the chapter of Warranties.

(Post. 27. a.)

[s] 38. E. 3. 12.

[t] 39. E. 3. 29. 40. E. 3. 12.

[u] Vide sect. 130. Glanvill. lib. 7. cap. 17. Bract. lib. 3. fol. 118. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5. & lib. 3. cap. 10. Britton ca. 37. & cap. 119. F. N. B. 100. Tr. 19. E. 1. in branco Rot. 25. (3. Inst. 21. 4. Inst. 225. F. N. B. 144. b.)

[w] Fleta lib. 6. cap. 1. Ockam cap. quod non absolvitur, &c.

[x] Pl. com. Dame Hale's case.

(Post. 92. b.)

[y] Pl. Com. in Nicholl's case.

[z] 38. E. 3. f. 37. 30. H. 6. 5. Bract. l. 2. tit. de Forf. Stamford. Pl. cor. 192. and according to this diversity was it resolved in 5. E. 6. as it appeareth by my Lord Dier's Manuscript. (Post. 390. b.)

(1) Acc. 8. Co. 54. a.—(2) The better reason seems to be, that the use being the same as it was before the feoffment, it is the old use which continues. As to an use's ensueing the nature of the land, see 1. Co. 127. 2. Co. 58. and Bac. Read. on Stat. Uses, 8vo. ed. 308. in which latter book the author controverts the generality of the doctrine, which certainly ought to be understood with many restrictions, and considers at large the differences between uses and the land itself, or rather, as he expresses himself, between uses and cases of possession. Lord Bacon's Reading on the Statute of Uses is a very profound treatise on the subject so far as it goes, and shews that he had the clearest conception of one of the most abstruse parts of our law. What might we not have expected from the hands of such a master, if his vast mind had not so embraced within its compass the whole field of science, as very much to detach him from professional studies? It may be proper to observe, that all the editions of lord Bacon's Reading on Uses are printed with such extreme incorrectness, that many passages are rendered almost unintelligible, even to the most attentive reader. A work so excellent deserves a better edition.—(3) Note, it was grant and release; but ratio libri is, because the husband was not charged, except during the coverture, and by reason of that the discharge doth not extend further. Hal. MSS.—(4) 7. H. 6. 3. by Cottessmore. If lord takes tenant to wife, and dies having issue, which dies without issue, the seignory is revived, and the tenancy shall go to the heir of the part of the mother. Hal. MSS.—(5) But if the eldest son purchases land, and it descends to the youngest son, and he dies without heir of the part of the father, it shall descend to the heir on the part of the mother; because they have one and the same mother. Hal. MSS.—(6) See Wright's Ten. 115. Blackst. Law Tracts, 8vo. ed. v. 1. p. 236. and 2. Blackst. Comm. 5th ed. 241.—(7) A feoffment B attainted of treason to the use of C, the king shall have the land discharged of the use. Hal. MSS. and Pim's case, M. 27. Eliz. is cited from Moore. See Mo. 196. But note, that according to Moore, B, at the time of the conveyance to him, had only committed treason, and was not attainted till after; and it was by relation to the time of committing the offence, that the case was construed to be the same as if the conveyance had been to a person actually attainted. The doctrine in Pym's case sounds peculiarly harsh; for first the legal estate in the land was given to the queen by a constructive relation, and then she was deemed to hold the land discharged of the use, because the king cannot be a trustee. However, it is but justice to mention, that the case being represented to queen Elizabeth, she, much to her honour, granted the land to esqueive use by patent. As to the king's holding land discharged of all uses and trusts where the legal estate vests in him, and the sense in which that doctrine is to be understood, see Vin. Abr. Uses C. where most of the authorities on the subject are stated or referred to.—(8) But if the party appears on an appeal, and the plaintiff counts, and the defendant is convicted by verdict or confession, it is all one. Hal. MSS.

(W. Jo. 217. Cro. Cha. 172.)

the felony was done, and therefore the escheate can relate but to the outlawry pronounced. But the indictment containeth the time when the felony was committed, and therefore the escheate upon the outlawry shall relate to that time (1). Which cases I have added, to the end the student may conceive, that the observation of writs, indictments, proceffe, judgments, and other entries, doth conduce much to the understanding of the right reason of the law.

[a] Mirror ca. 1. sect. 5. 51. H. 3. statutum de Seac. Britton fo. 33. 34. Flet. lib. 1. cap. 36. & lib. 2. cap. 34. 35. Regist. 301. his Oath 18. E. 1. Ro. Parl. 21. F. 1. Rot. Parl. 1. 29. E. 1. stat. de Escheatoribus. 14. E. 3. c. 8. 28. E. 1. ca. 18. F. N. B. 100. c. Stamf. Praer. 81. 1. H. 8. ca. 8. 3. H. 8. ca. 2. Capitula Escheatrie in Vet. Magna carta fo. 160. 161, &c.

Of this word (escheta) here used by our author, commeth [a] Escheator, an ancient officer so called, because his office is properly to look to escheats, wardships, and other casualties belonging to the crowne. In ancient times there were but two escheators in England, the one on this side of Trent, and the other beyond Trent, at which time they had subescheators. But in the raigne of Edward the second, the offices were divided and several escheators made in every county for life, &c. and so continued untill the raigne of Edward 3. And afterwards by the statute of 14. E. 3. it is enacted by authority of parliament, that there should be as many escheators assigned, as when king Edward 3. came to the crown, and that was one in every county, and that no escheator should tarry in his office above a yeere, and by another statute to be in office but once in three yeares. The lord treasurer nameth him.

And hereof also cometh eschetria, which signifieth the escheatership, or the office of the escheater. But now let us heare what our author will further say unto us.

Et sic vide, &c. This kind of speech is often used by our author, and doth ever import matter of excellent observation, which you may find in the sections noted in the margin *.

* Sect. 147. 149. 243. 283. 417. 667. &c.

(2. Ro. Abr. 816.)

[b] 7. E. 4. 11. 12. Fitz N. B. 33. 9. F. 3. 26. 17. E. 2. stat. de templariis.

And it is to be well observed, that our author saith, fil nad aucun heire, &c. la terre escheatera. In which words is implied a diversity (as to the escheate) betweene fee simple absolute, which a natural body hath, and fee simple absolute, which a body politique or incorporate hath. [b] For if land holden of I. S. be given to an abbot and his successors: In this case if the abbot and all the convent die so that the body politique is dissolved, the donor shall have againe this land, and not the lord by escheat (2). And so if land be given in fee simple to a deane and chapter, or to a maior and commonalty, and to their successors, and after such body politique or incorporate is dissolved, the donor shall have againe the land, and not the lord by escheate. And the reason, and the cause of this diversity is, for that in the case of a body politique or incorporate the fee simple is vested in their politique or incorporate capacity created by the policy of man, and therefore the law doth annex a condition in law to every such gift and grant, That if such body politique or incorporate be dissolved, that the donor or grantor shall re-enter, for that the cause of the gift or grant faileth; but no such condition is annexed to the estate in fee simple vested in any man in his naturall capacity, but in case where the donor or feoffor reserveth to him a tenure, and then the law doth imply a condition in law by way of escheat. Also (as hath beene said) no writ of escheat lyeth but in the three cases aforesaid, and not where a body politique or incorporate is dissolved.

Sect. 5.

(Post. 237.)

NOW commeth our author to the descent betweene brethren, which he purposely omitted before. Discent, descensus commeth of the Latine word descendo, and, in the legall sense, it signifyeth, when lands do by right of blood fall unto any after the death of his ancestors: or a descent is a meanes whereby one doth derive him title to certain lands, as heire to some of his ancestors. And of this, and of that which hath been spoken doth arise another division of estates in fee simple, viz. every man that hath a lawful estate in fee simple, hath it either by descent, or by purchase.

ITEM si joint trois freres, et le mulnes frere purchase terres en fee simple, et devie sans issue, leigne frere avera la terre per discent et nemy le puisne, &c. Et auxi si joint trois freres, et le puisne purchase terres en fee simple, et devie sans issue, leigne frere avera la terre per discent et

ALSO if there be three brethren, and the middle brother purchaseth lands in fee simple, and die without issue, the elder brother shall have the land by descent, and not the younger (3), &c. And also if there be three brethren, and the youngest purchase lands in fee simple, and die without issue, the eldest brother shall nemy

(1) Nota, if one be attainted by outlawry or confession of a felony, which is precedent to the seoffment of the party attainted, the seoffee may falsify the attainder by traverse to the felony or to the time of the felony. But if he be attainted by verdict, it seems, that he cannot falsify by traverse to the felony; but he may traverse the time of the felony, for that is not material; for if he be guilty on another day, the jury ought to find him guilty. Hal. MSS. which cites 3. Inst. 230.

(2) Vid. tamen Mich. 20. Jac. C. B. Johnson and Morris, that it shall escheat. Hal. MSS. which also cites 21. E. 4. 1. and 21. H. 7. 9. See further on this subject, Godb. 211. and Mo. 283. which are with lord Coke. But the case of Johnson and Norway, in Winch. 37. which seems to be the same as that cited by lord Hale is against the donor, though it is not mentioned in Winch, that the judges finally decided the point. See also contra lord Coke, the case of Southwell and Wade, in 1. Ro. Abr. 816. A. pl. 1. and S. C. in Poph. 91.

(3) But if the land purchased by the middle brother was holden of the elder brother, who accepts homage of him, the land shall descend to the younger brother by 13. E. 1. Avowry 235. Hal. MSS.

nemy le mulnes, have the land by descent and not the middle, for that the eldest is most worthy of blood.

Leigne est plus digne de sanke. It is a maxime in law, that the next of the worthiest blood shall ever inherit, as the male and all descendants from him before the female, and the female of the part of the father before the male or female of the part of the mother, &c. because the female of the part of the father is of the worthiest blood. [c] And therefore among the males the eldest brother and his posterity shall inherit lands in fee simple as heire before any younger brother, or any descending from him, because (as Littleton saith) he is plus digne de sanke. Quod prius est dignius est, and qui prior est tempore potior est jure. Si quis plures filios habuerit, jus proprietatis primo descendit ad primogenitum, eo quod inventus est primo in rerum natura. In king Alfred's time knights fees (1) descended to the eldest sonne, for that by division of them between males the defence of the realme might be weakened; but in those dayes socage fee was divided between the heires males, and therewith agreeeth Glanvill. * Cum quis hereditatem habens moriatur, &c. si plures reliquerit filios, tunc distinguitur utrum ille fuerit miles, sive per feudum militare tenens, aut liber Sockmannus, quia si miles fuerit aut per militiam tenens, tunc secundum jus regni Angliæ primogenitus filius patri succedit in totis, &c. si vero fuerit liber Sockmannus, tunc quidem dividetur hereditas inter omnes filios, &c. (2). But hereof more shall be said hereafter his proper place.

[c] Britton cap. 119. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 30. 277. 279. 3. E. 3. 26. 3. Eliz. Dyer 138. Stanford præf. 52. 58. 3. E. 1. tit. avowry. 235. 32. E. 3. discent. 80. Bra. lib. 4. 211. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 2. Glanvill lib. 7. ca. 1. Mirror cap. 1. Sect. 3.

* Glanvill lib. 7. cap. 3. & ca. 1. Vid. Pl. Com. 229. b.

Sect. 6.

ITEM est a savoir, que nul a vera terre de fee simple per discent come heire a ascun home, si non que il soit son heire dentire sanke. Car si home ad issue deux fits per divers venters, et leigne purchase terres en fee simple et morust sans issue, le puisne frere navera la terre, mes luncle leigne frere ou auter son procheine cosin ceo avera, pur ceo que le puisne frere est de demy sanke al eigne frere.

ALSO it is to be understood, that none shall have land of fee simple by descent as heire to any man, unless he be his heire of the whole blood, for if a man hath issue two sonnes by divers venters, and the elder purchase lands in fee simple, and dye without issue, the younger brother shall not have the land, but the uncle of the elder brother, or some other his next cosin shall have the same, because the younger brother is but of halfe blood to the elder (5).

NO man can be heire to a fee simple by the common law, [a] but he that hath sanguinem duplicatum, the whole blood, that is both of the father and of the mother, so as the halfe blood is no blood inheritable by descent, (3) because that he that is but of the halfe blood cannot be a compleat heire, for that he hath not the whole and compleat blood (4), and the law in descents in fee simple doth respect that which is compleat and perfect. And this maxime doth not only hold where lands (whereof Littleton here speaketh) are claymed or demanded as heire, [c] but also in case of appeale of death: for if one brother be slaine, the other brother of the halfe blood shall never have an appeale (albeit he shall recover nothing therein either in the realtie or personaltie) because in the eye of the law he is not heire to him. Also this rule extends to a warranty, as our author himselfe elsewhere holdeth (6).

[d] Bract. lib. 4. idem lib. 2. 10. 65. Britton ca. 119. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. 1. E. 3. 19. John Gifford's case. 31. E. 3. Conterpl. de voucher 88. 40. Aff. 6. 4. E. 2. Formd. 49. Vid. Ratcliff's case, 3. Co. 40. 41.

(1. Ro. Abr. 629.)

[c] 7. E. 4. 15.

Sect. 737.

Sect. 7.

ET si home ad issue fits et file

AND if a man hath issue a sonne and a

THIS is put for an example to illustrate that which hath been said,

(1) Here lord Coke writes, as taking it for granted, that feudal tenures subsisted in England before the Conquest. But this is a controverted point amongst our best writers. See Post. 64. a. where a note is given on this subject.

(2) See Robins. Gavelk. an elaborate dissertation on the origin, antiquity, and universality of partible descents. The author pursues his subject amongst the Jews, Greeks, and Romans, and afterwards amongst most of the modern nations in Europe, and then proceeds to inquire into the state of our own law of descents before the Conquest. See page 20. See also lord Hale's learned researches into the history of the law of descents in his Hist. of the C. L. c. 11. p. 206.

(3) The exclusion of the half blood by our law is variously accounted for. Sir Martin Wright considers it as a consequence of the rules established for restricting the succession to the descendants of the first feudatory, in conformity to the strict notion of feuds. See Wright's Ten. 184. where the exclusion of lineal ascent is excused on the same principle. See also Blackst. Law Tracts, v. 1. p. 213. 8vo. ed. where the feudal reason is explained more at large, though the author admits that the practice goes much further than the principle will warrant. Others there are, who insist, that the true reason, why the brothers of different venters cannot inherit to each other, is the aversion our Saxon ancestors had to second marriages, which they are said to have deemed at best but a permitted fornication. But this unfavourable idea of the vota iterata was not peculiar to the Saxons, or any other descendants of the ancient Germans. See Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 294.

(4) See what is observed on lord Coke's explanation of the meaning of the term whole blood, in 1. Sid. 200. See too 1. Vent. 424. and 2. P. Wms. 667.

(5) But daughters by different femes, though they cannot inherit to each other, may inherit together to their father, because the descent is immediate from the father. See R. Robins. Disc. on Inher. 2d ed. p. 37. and Bro. Abr. Descent. pl. 20. and 1. Ro. Abr. 627.

(6) So brother of half-blood shall not have error on fine levied by the elder brother, though, if there had not been such fine, the land would descend to him. Hal. MSS.—Nota, if A purchases a reversion expectant on an estate for life, and dies without issue, regularly his brother said, and needeth no explanation. And heerwith agreeth Britton.

Britton cap. 119.

per un venter, et fits daughter by one venter, per auter venter, et and a son by another le fits del primer ven- venter, and the son of the ter purchase terres first venter purchase en fee, et morust sans lands in fee and die issue, la soer avera la without issue, the sister terre per discent, come shall have the land by de-heire a sa frere (1) et scent as heire to her bro-nemy le puisne frere, ther, & not the younger pur ceo que la soer est brother, for that the sisde le entire sanke a ter is the whole blood son eigne frere. of her elder brother.

Sect. 8.

SE*isie de terres en* fee simple. These words exclude a seisin in fee taile, albeit he hath a fee simple expectant. [f] (2) And therefore if lands be given to a man and his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, the remainder to the heires of the husband, and they have issue a sonne, and the wife dyeth, and he taketh another wife, and hath issue a sonne, the father dieth, the eldest son entereth, and dieth without issue, the second brother of the halfe blood shall inherit, because the eldest sonne by his entry was not actually seised of the fee simple, being expectant but onely of the estate taile (3). And the rule is, that possessio fratris de feodo simplici facit sororem esse heredem, and here the eldest son is not possessed of the fee simple but of the estate taile (4). And where Littleton speaketh onely of lands, [g] yet there shall be possessio fratris of an use (5), of a feignory, a rent, an advowson, (6) and of other hereditaments.

Et leigne fits enter.

[b] These words are materially added when the father dies seised of lands in fee simple, for if the eldest son doth not in that case enter, then without question the youngest

ET*auxi ou home*
est seisie de terres en fee simple, et ad issue fits et file per un venter, et fits per auter venter, et mo-rust et leigne fits enter, et morust sans issue, la file avera les tenements, et nemy le puisne fits, uncore le puisne fits est heire a le pere, mes nemy a son frere. Mes si leigne fits ne entra en la terre apres la mort son pere, mes mo-rust devant aucun en-trie fait per luy, don-ques le puisne frere poit entrer, et avera le terre come heire a son pere. Mes lou leigne fits en le case avant dit entra apres la mort son pere, et ad ent' possession, donques, lo soer avera la terre

AND also where a man is seised of lands in fee simple, and hath issue a sonne and daughter by one venter, and a son by another venter, and die, and the eldest son enter, and die without issue, the daughter shall have the land, and not the younger son, yet the younger son is heire to the father but not to his brother. But if the elder son doth not enter into the land after the death of his father, but die before any entry made by him, then the younger brother may enter and shall have the land as heire to his father: but where the elder son in the case aforesaid enters after the death of his father, and hath pos-

Quia

brother of the half blood shall not be heir to him; because though when there is a mesne seisin, he ought to make himself heir to him who is last actually seized; yet when there is not such a mesne seisin, he ought to make himself heir to him, in whom it first vests by purchase. Yet see M. 1. Car. C. B. Cro. no. 16. Hodgkinson and Wood. A having issue B a son by one venter, and C by another, devises to B and the heirs male of his body, remainder to the heirs male of the body of the devisor and to the heirs male of their bodies, remainder to the devisor's right heirs, and dies. B dies without issue. Ruled, that C shall take as heir male of the devisor, because it is quasi an entail according to Littleton sect. 30. But it seems, that the fee shall descend to him, since it is a void devise of the fee simple, and doth not vest by purchase in the eldest son, but by descent. Hal. MSS.

(1) A sa frere, omitted in L. and M.—and Roh.

(2) 7. H. 4. 16. Vid. 38. Aff. 8. Hal. MSS.

(3) Acc. Bro. Abr. Discent, pl. 13. 14. and 30. Scire Facias, pl. 126. and Execution 67. 1. Ro. Abr. 628. and see 1. Show. 245. and 3. Mod. 257.

(4) Yet the remainder was in the elder brother to give or forfeit. 24. E. 3. 30. Hal. MSS.

(5) See Dy. 10. b. 11. a. Finch 8vo. ed. 21. and 2. And. 146. Note, that lord Coke must be understood to mean uses before the statute for transferring uses into possession, or uses not executed by the statute; for uses within the statute are legal estates.

(6) So of a copyhold before admittance. 4. Co. 22. b. Hal. MSS. See Acc. Dy. 291. b. Finch, 8vo. ed. 21.

Quia possessio fratris de feodo simplici facit sororem esse hæredem. Mes si sont deux freres per divers venters, et leigne est seise de terre en fee et morust sans issue, [et son uncle entra come prochain heire a luy quel auxy morust sans issue, (1)] ore le puisne frere puit aver la terre come heire al uncle, pur ceo que il est de lentier sanke a luy, coment que il soit de demy sanke a son eigne frere.

session there the sister shall have the land, because possessio fratris de feodo simplici facit sororem esse hæredem. But if there be 2 brothers by divers venters, and the elder is seised of land in fee, and die without issue, and his uncle enter as next heire to him, who also dies without issue, now the yonger brother may have the land as heire to the uncle, for that he is of the whole blood to him, albeit he be but of the halfe blood to his elder brother.

sonne shall be heire, because as it hath beene said before regularly he must make himselfe heire to him that was last actually seised (or to the purchaser), and that was to the father where the eldest sonne did not enter. And therefore Littleton addeth that the sonne is heire to the father. [i] But when the eldest sonne in this case doth enter, then cannot the yongest sonne being of the halfe blood be heire to the eldest, but the land shall descend to the sister of the whole blood. Yet in many cases albeit the sonne doth not enter into lands descended in fee simple, the sister of the whole blood shall inherit, and in some cases where the eldest sonne doth enter, yet the younger brother of the half blood shall be heire.

[i] 11. H. 4. 11. 40. E. 3. 39. 45. E. 3. 13. 40. Aff. p. 6. Ratcliffe's case 3. Co. 41.

[k] If the father maketh a lease for years, and the lessee entreth and dieth, the eldest sonne dieth during the tearme

[k] 8. E. 4. 7. b. 3. H. 7. 5. 8. Aff. p. 6. 45 E. 3. tit. Re-leases 28.

(Post 243. Mo. 125. 3. Co. 40, 41.)

before entry or receipt of rent, the younger sonne of the halfe blood shall not inherit but the sister (2); because the possession of the lessee for yeares is the possession of the eldest sonne, so as he is actually seised of the fee simple, and consequently the sister of the whole blood is to be heire (3). The same law it is if the lands be holden by knights service, and the eldest sonne is within age, and the gardian entreth into the lands. And so it is if the gardian in socage enter (4).

But in the case aforesaid, if the father make a lease for life or a gift in taile, and dyeth, and the eldest sonne dyeth in the life of tenant for life or tenant in taile, the younger brother of the halfe blood shall inherit, because the tenant for life or tenant in taile is seised of the freehold, and the eldest sonne had nothing but reversion expectant upon that freehold or estate taile, and therefore the yongest sonne shall inherit the land as heire to his father, who was last seised of the actuall freehold. And albeit a rent had beene reserved upon the lease for life, and the eldest sonne had received the rent and dyed, yet it is holden by some * that the younger brother shall inherit, because the seisin of the rent is no actuall seisin of the freehold of the land. But 35 Aff. pl. 2. seemeth to the contrary, because the rent issueth out of the land and is in lieu thereof (5), wherein the onely question is, whether such a seisin of the rent be such an actual seisin of the land in the eldest son as the sister may in a writ of right make herselfe heire of this land to her brother. But it is cleere, that [l] if there be bastard eigne, and mulier puisne, and the father maketh a lease for life or a gift in taile reserving a rent and die, and the bastard receive the rent and dye, this shall barre the mulier, for the reason of that standeth upon another maxime as shall manifestly appear in his apt place, sect. 399.

(Post. 191.)

* 7. H. 5. 34. per Halls & Logdington.

35. Aff. p. 2.

[l] 14. E. 2. Bastard 26. Vid. sect. 399. (Post. 244. a.)

Seisie des terres. [m] (6) But in this case, if the eldest sonne doth enter and get an actuall possession of the fee simple, yet if the wife of the father be indowed of the third part and the eldest sonne dyeth, the younger brother shall have the reversion of this third part notwithstanding the elder brother's entry; because that his actuall seisin which he got thereby was by the endowment defeated (7). But if the eldest sonne had made a lease for life, and the lessee had endowed the wife of the father, and tenant in dower had died, the daughter should have had the reversion, because the reversion was changed and altered by the lease for life, and the reversion is now expectant on a new estate for life.

[m] 7. H. 5. 2. 3. 4.

(8. Co. 35. b. Post. 191. b. 4. Co. 58. b.)

Enter. Hereupon the question groweth, whether if the father be seized of divers severall parcels of lands in one county, and after the death of the father the sonne entreth into one parcel generally, and before any actuall entry into the other dyeth, this generall entry into part shall vest in him an actual seisin in the whole, so as the sister shall inherit the whole. And this is a quære in 21 H. 7. 33. a (8).

21. H. 7. 33. a.

And

(1) All between the brackets omitted in Roh. edit.

(2) Adj. Acc. Mo. 125. But it is said to be otherwise, if the lease is of a copyhold, unless made by surrender. 3. Leon. 69. and 4. Leon. 38.

(3) Yet in pleading, it shall not be said seisin in demesne. Defendant avows, because I. S. was seized in his demesne of fee and granted rent; plaintiff replies, that a long time before the said I. S. leased to him for years. It is not a plea without traversing the seisin in demesne. T. 9. Car. B. R. Weedon's case. Hal. MSS.

(4) See accordingly, though the lord seize the land held in socage as guardian in chivalry. 11. Aff. 6. 34. Aff. 10. See 12. Eliz. Dy. 292. so as to copyholder or tenant at will. Quære of tenant by sufferance. Hal. MSS.—In Jenk. 242. it is said, that the entry of a devisee for years will make a possessio fratris. See Vin. Abr. Descent, K. pl. 34. See further on this subject in the case of Newman and Newman, Willf. vol. 2. p. 516.

(5) Nota, M. 24. Car. B. R. between Ames and Cooke, ruled that in such case seisin of rent doth not make possessio fratris. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. acc. All. 88.—S. p. adjudged acc. Trin. Term. 1657. between Piper and Masters MS. Rep. by Glyn J.

(6) See Post. 31. a.

(7) So it is, if father makes lease for life, and afterwards recovers against him by default, and dies, and the eldest son enters, against whom the lessee recovers per quod ei de forceat. 8 Aff. 6. If wife recovers dower by erroneous judgment against the elder brother and dies, the sister shall have error; and if she reverses the judgment, she shall hold against the brother. 7. H. 5. 4. Son barred by false verdict, in mortdaunceffor; the sister shall have attain and reverse the judgment; but afterwards the brother shall enter. Kelw. 119. b. Hal. MSS.

(8) Adjudged accordingly in the point P. 4. Eliz. B. R. Hal. MSS.

(Post. 252. b.)

(1. Leon. 265)

[g] 19. E. 2. quare impd. 177.
3. H. 7. 5.[b] 7. E. 3. 66. tit. bar. 293. 3.
H. 7. 5.
(Post. 29. a.)[i] 8. E. 3. 11. 49. E. 3. 12.
Ratcliffe's case. 3. Co. 41.[k] Brañon lib. 2. fo. 65. & lib.
4. fol. 279. Britton cap. 119.
Fict. li. 6. c. 1. 24. E. 3. 30.[l] Ratcliffe's case 3. Co. 42.
[m] Britton cap. 119.

(Cro. Cha. 601.)

6. H. 4. 1.

[n] 34. H. 6. fol. 34. Pl. Com.
fol. 245. 25. E. 3. ca de natis ultra mare.
(4. Infl. 206.)

Pl. Com. ubi supra.

(7. Co. 12. b. Calvin's case.)

Pl. Com. fol. 247.
(1. Sid. 138.)

And some doe take a diversitie when an entry shall vest, or devest an estate, that there must be severall entries into the severall parcels, but where the possession is in no man; but the freehold in law is in the heire that entred, there the generall entry into one part reduceth all into his actual possession. And therefore if the lord entred into a parcel generally for a mortmain, or the feoffor for a condition broken, or the disseisee into a parcell generally, the entry shall not vest nor devest in these or like cases, but for that parcell. But when a man dies seised of divers parcels in possession, and the freehold in law is by the law cast upon the heire, and the possession in no man, there the entry into parcell generally seemeth to vest the actual possession in him in the whole. But if his entry in that case be speciall, viz. that he enter only into that parcell and into no more, there it reduceth that parcell only into actual possession.

Home seise des terres. What then is the law of a rent, advowson, or such things that lie in grant? [g] If a rent, or an advowson do descend to the eldest sonne, and he dyeth before he hath seisin of the rent, or present to the church, the rent or advowson (1) shall descend to the youngest sonne, for that he must make himselfe heire to his father, as hath beene oftentimes said before. The like law is of offices, courts, liberties, franchises, commons of inheritance, and such like. [b] And this case differeth from the case of the tenant by the courtesie, for there if the wife dieth before the rent day, or that the church become voyd, because there was no laches or default in him, nor possibility to get seisin, the law in respect of the issue begotten by him will give him an estate by the courtesie of England. But the case of the descent to the youngest sonne standeth upon another reason, viz. to make himselfe heire to him that was last actually seised, as hath beene said.

En fee simple. [i] For halfe blood is not respected in estates in taile, because that the issues doe claime in descent, per formam doni, and the issue in taile is ever of the whole blood to the donee (2).

[k] Possessio fratris de feodo simplici facit sororem esse hæredem. Hereupon foure things are to be observed, every word almost being operative, and materiall. First, that the brother must be in actual possession; for possessio est quasi pedis positio. Secondly, de feodo simplici exclude estates in taile. Thirdly, facit sororem esse hæredem. So as [l] soror est hæres facta, and therefore some act must be done to make her heire, and the younger sonne is hæres natus [m] if no act be done to the contrary. And albeit the words be facit sororem esse hæredem, yet this doth extend to the issue of the sister, &c. who shall inherit before the younger brother. Fourthly, Of dignities, whereof no other possession can be had but such as descend (as to be a duke, marquess, earle, vicount, or baron) to a man and his heires, there can be no possession of the brother to make the sister to inherit (3), but the younger brother, being heire (as Littleton saith) to the father, shall inherit the dignitie inherent to the blood, as heire to him that was first created noble.

And you shall understand that concerning descents there is a law, parcell of the lawes of England, called jus coronæ, and differeth in many things from the generall law concerning the subject. As for example, the king in any suit for any thing that pertaines to the crown shall not shew in certaine his coinage as a subject shall do, or as he himselfe shall do for things touching his dutchie. [n] And in the case of the king, if he hath issue a sonne and a daughter by one venter, and a sonne by another venter, and purchaseth lands and dieth, and the eldest son enter and dieth without issue, the daughter shall not inherit these lands, nor any other fee simple lands of the crowne, but the younger brother shall have them. Wherein note that neither possessio fratris doth hold of lands of the possessions of the crowne, nor halfe blood is no impediment to the descent of the lands of the crowne, as it fell out in experience after the decease of king Edward the sixth to the queene Mary, and from queene Mary, to queene Elizabeth, both which were of the half blood, and yet inherited not onely the lands which king Edward or queen Mary purchaseth, but the ancient lands parcell of the crowne also.

A man that is king by descent of the part of his mother, purchaseth lands to him and his heires and dies without issue, this land shall descend to the heire of the part of the mother; but in the case of a subject, the heire of the part of the father shall have them.

So king Henry the eighth purchaseth lands to him and his heires, and died having issue two daughters, the lady Mary, and the lady Elizabeth, after the decease of king Edward; the eldest daughter queen Mary did inherit only, all his lands in fee simple. For the eldest daughter, or sister of a king shall inherit all his fee simple lands. So it is if the king purchaseth lands of the custome of gavelkind, and die having issue divers sonnes, the eldest sonne shall only inherit these lands (4). And the reason of all these cases is, for that the qualitie of the person doth in these and many other like cases alters the descent, so as all the lands and possessions whereof the king is seised in jure coronæ, shall secundum jus coronæ attend upon and follow the crowne, and therefore to whomsoever the crowne descend, those lands and possessions descend also, for the crowne and the lands whereof the king is seised in jure coronæ, are con-

(1) If it was an advowson in gross. But seisin of a manor is good seisin of advowson, common, &c. appendant or appurtenant. 18. H. 6. 24. Hal. MSS.

(2) 8. E. 3. 11. 12. E. 4. 19. 49. E. 3. 12. 4. E. 2. Formedon 49. Hal. MS.

(3) Accordingly adjudged in parliament H. 16. Car. Cro. n. 4. Lord Gray's case, which was a barony by writ; and there agreed, that where lord Gray being baron by writ is created earl of Kent to him and his heirs male of his body, and he has issue two sons by several venters, and the eldest has issue a daughter, the barony shall go to the daughter, and the earldom to the younger brother, and doth not draw the barony to it. But if it was a feudal title of honour, as of the earldom of Arundel or barony of Berclay, there possessio fratris should hold well; because the title is annexed to the land.—So of an office of dignity, and, ea ratione, the office of high chamberlain of England descended to the earl of Lindsey of the whole blood, and departed from the line male of the earl of Oxford; and adjudged accordingly in parliament. Hal. MSS.—See lord Gray's case at large in Coll. Proc. on Claims of Bar. 195. and the case about the office of lord chamberlain, in same book 173. and W. Jo. 96.

(4) Nota, by the common law, the king is a corporation, and purchaseth made by him after assumption of the crown vest in a politic capacity. Hence, if an usurper purchaseth lands, and the right heir resumes the crown, he shall have the purchases, et e converso, an usurper shall have the purchases made by a rightful king so long as he has the crown. So it happened in the cases of H. 4. H. 5. H. 6. E. 4. R. 3. H. 7. But nota, purchases made before accession of the crown, or descents from collateral ancestors after accession of the crown, vest concomitantia. If the right heire of the crowne be attainted of treason, yet shall the crowne descend to him, and eo instante (without any other reverfall) the attainder is utterly avoided, as it fell out in the case of Henry the seventh⁽¹⁾. [o] And if the king purchase lands to him and his heires, he is seised thereof in jure coronæ; à fortiori, when he purchases land to him his heires and successors⁽²⁾.

But hereof this little taste shall suffice.

Sect. 9.

ET est ascavoir que ce parol (enheritance) nest pas tant-solement entendue, lou home ad terres ou tenements per discent denheritage, mes auxi chescun fee simple, ou taile⁽³⁾ que home ad per son purchase puit estre dit enheritance, pur ceo que ses heyres luy purront enheriter. Car en brieve de droit que home portera de terre que fuit de son purchase demesne, le brieve dirra: Quam clamat esse jus et hæreditatem suam. Et issint serra dit en divers auters briefs, queux home ou feme portea de son purchase demesne come apiert per le Regist.

AND it is to wit, that this word (inheritance) is not onely intended where a man hath lands or tenements by descent of inheritance, but also every fee simple or taile which a man hath by his purchase may be said an inheritance, because his heires may inherit him. For in a writ of right which a man bringeth of land that was of his owne purchase, the writ shall say, Quam clamat esse jus et hæreditatem suam. And so shall it be said in divers other writs which a man or woman bringeth of his owne purchase, as appeares by the register.

ET est ascavoir.

This kinde of speech is used twice in this chapter, and oftentimes by our authour in all his three bookes, and ever teacheth us some rule of law, or generall or sure leading point, as you shall perceive by reading, and observing of the same, which for the ease of the studious reader I have observed.

Quam clamat esse jus et hæreditatem suam.

[a] Here our authour declareth the right signification of this word (inheritance.) And true it is that in the writ of right patent, &c. quando dominus remittit curiam suam, the words of the writ be, Quam clamat esse jus et hæreditatem suam. And in the Præcipe in capite, in a cui in vita, [b] when the defendant claimeth by purchase, the writ is quam clamat esse jus et hæreditatem suam. And with Littleton agreeth the Register, fol. 4. & 232. and the booke in 49. E. 3. 22. against sodaine opinions 7. H. 4. 5. 10. H. 6. 9. 39. H. 6. 38. Pl. Com. Wimbeshe's case 47. And yet in 7. H. 4. 5. which is the booke of the

Pl. Com. 238. 1. H. 7. fol. 4. (Plowd. 105. 244. 245.) [o] 43. E. 3. fol. 20.

Sect. 45. 46. 57. 59. 80. 100. 146. 164. 170. 184. 229. 243. 259. 274. 280. 293. 300. 305. 419. 420. 421. 439. 632. 697. 749.

[a] Sect. 732. Bract. lib. 2. fol. 62. b. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1. (Post. 383. b.)

[b] Regist fol. 1. 2. (F. N. Br. 193.)

Regist. fol. 4. 212. 49. E. 3. 22. 7. H. 4. 5. 10. H. 6. 9. 39. H. 6. 38. 6. E. 3. 30. Pl. Com. Wimbeshe's case, 47. & 58. b.

6. E. 3. 30

W. 2. ca. 5. 1. E. 2. tit. quare impd. 43. 35. H. 6. 54. F. N. B. 34. b. [c] 6. Co. 52. 53. Countess de Rutland's case, 8 Co. 16. 17. the Prince's case. (4. Inst. 126.)

greatest weight, Sir William Thirning chiefe justice of the common bench (as it seemeth doubting of it) went into the chancery to enquire of the chancery men the forme of the writ in that case, and they said that the forme was both the one way and the other, so as thereby the opinion of Littleton is confirmed, and the booke in 6. E. 3. fol. 30. is notable, for there in an action of waste the plaintife supposed, that the defendant did hold de hæreditate sua, and it is ruled, that albeit the plaintife purchased the reversion, yet the writ should serve. And there it is said, it hath beene seene, that in a cui in vita, the writ was, which the demandant claimed as her right and inheritance, when it was her purchase. And so this point wherein there might seem some contrariety in bookes is manifestly cleared. But in the statute of W. 2. cap. 5. de hæreditate uxorum by construction of the whole statute is taken onely for the wives inheritance by descent, and not by purchase as appeareth in 1. E. 2. tit. Quare impd. 43. 35. H. 6. 54. F. N. B. 34. b.

There be some that have an inheritance [c] and have it neither by descent nor properly by purchase but by creation, as when the king doth create any man a duke, a marquisse, earle, viscount, or baron to him and his heires, or to the heires males of his bodie, &c. he hath an inheritance therein by creation. A man may have an inheritance in title of nobilitie and dignitie three manner of wayes, that is to say, by creation, by descent, and by pre-vest in a natural capacity; and therefore in the re-ademption of the crown by Edward 4. there was a special act to give to the king all the possessions of Hen. 6. But such lands are qualified and affected differently from those of other persons. They will pass by letters patent only, and without livery; and the grants of them shall not be avoided by nonage, et similitur. As to acquisitions by conquest by the king of England, they are annexed to his crown as his purchases are, as Ireland, Man, Berwick, Calais, and the New Plantations, the antient territories of Normandy, Aquitaine, Anjou. And also many other lands, which descended in England from collateral ancestors, though in their original vested in a natural capacity, yet partly by attainder, partly by long continuance united to the crown, partly by occupation, were in some manner annexed to the crown, and will go with it. Yet see Rot. Parl. 13. R. 2. n. 32. dux Lancastriæ creatus dux Aquitanie cum mero et misto imperio tenend. de rege ut rege Franciæ.—Hal. MSS.

(1) So it is, though he be an alien, as happened in the case of king James. The reason is, because the king is a corporation. Hal MSS.

(2) See this subject very fully and learnedly considered in the case of the dutchy of Lancaster, Plowd. 212. in which it was held that a lease of dutchy land was not avoidable, by reason of the nonage of Edw. 6. and in the case of Willion and Berkley, Plowd. 223. in which a remainder to the king and the heirs male of his body was held to be an estate tail within the statute de donis, in the same manner as if the limitation had been to a subject, and not to be a fee-simple conditional. See further 7. Mod. 78.

(3) Ou taile not in L. and M.

(32. Co. 69. ante g. b.)

6. Co. 52. 53. Countesse of Rutland's case. 8. H. 6. 10. 48. E. 3. 30. 35. H. 6. 46. Pl. com. 223.
[d] 35. H. 6. 46. 48. E. 3. 30. b. 48. Aff. p. 6. 22. Aff. p. 24. Regist. 287. 11. E. 3. breve 472. 20. E. 4. 6.

(6. Co. 52. Countess of Rutland's case.)
[e] 6. Co. 52. 53. Countess of Rutland's case. 2. H. 6. 11. 22. Aff. 24. 12. E. 3. breve 254. 8. H. 4. 19. 11. H. 4. 15. Vide Fleta lib. 6. ca. 10.
[f] 4. Co. 118. Aston's case. Tempore Mariæ Reginae. Brooke nomine de dignitate 69. 14. H. 6. 18. 2. H. 6. 11.
[g] 22. H. 6. 52.

[h] 9. Co. 97. 98. Sir George Reynel's case.

Vide Sect. 88. 94. 96. 101. 157. 234. 318. 383. 412. 420. 433. 514. 643. 644. 657. 660. 692. 702. 729.

prescription (1). By creation two manner of ordinary wayes (for I will not speake of a creation by parliament) by writ, and by letters patent. Creation by writ is the ancienter way, and here it is to be observed, that a man shall gain an inheritance by writ (2). King Richard the Second created John Beauchampe de Holte baron of Kedermister by his letters patents, bearing date the 10th of October, anno regni sui 11. before whom there was never any baron created by letters patent, but by writ. And it is to be observed, that if he be generally called by writ to the parliament, he hath a fee simple in the baronie without any words of inheritance. But if he be created by letters patent, the state of inheritance must be limited by apt words, or else the grant is void. If a man be called by writ to the parliament, and the writ is delivered unto him and he dieth before he commeth and sits in parliament, whether he was a baron or no? And it is to be answered that he was no baron, for the direction and deliverie of the writ to him maketh not him noble; for the better understanding whereof it is to be knowne that the words of the writ in that case are, Rex &c. E. B. de D. Cbivalier salutem. Quia de advisamento et assensu concilii nostri, pro quibusdam arduis et urgentibus negotiis statum et defensionem regni nostri Anglia, &c. concernentibus, quoddam parlamentum nostrum apud civitatem Westm. a 21 Octob. proxim. futuro teneri ordinavimus, et ibid. vobiscum et cum prelati, magnatibus et proceribus dicti regni nostri colloquium habere et tractatum, vobis in fide et ligancia quibus nobis tenemini firmiter injungendo mandamus, quod consideratis dictorum negotiorum arduitate, et periculis imminentibus cessante exensatione quacunque, dictis die et loco personaliter interfutis nobiscum et cum prelati, magnatibus, et proceribus supradictis, super dictis negotiis tractatur vestrumque concilium impensur, &c. And this writ hath no operation or effect until he sit in parliament, and thereby his blood is ennobled to him and his heires lineall, and thereupon a baron is called a peer of parliament. [d] And if issue be joined in any action, whether he be a baron, &c. or no, it shall not be tryed by jury, but by the record of parliament, which could not appeare unless he were of the parliament (3). Therefore a duke, earle, &c. of another kingdome, are not to be tryed by those names here, for that they are not peeres of our parliament (4). And albeit the creation by writ is the ancienter, yet the creation by letters patent is the surer, for he may be sufficiently created by letters patents, and made noble, albeit he never sit in parliament.

[e] And it is to be observed, that nobilitie may be granted for term of life, by act in law without any actuall creation; as if a duke take a wife, by the intermarriage she is a duchesse in law, and so of a marquess, an earle, and the rest, and in some other cases. And there is a diversitie betwene a woman that is noble by descent, and a woman that is noble by marriage. [f] For if a woman, that is noble by descent, marrie one that is under the degree of nobilitie, yet she remaineth noble still (5); but if she gaine it by marriage, she loseth it, if she marry under the degree of nobilitie, and so is the rule to be understood, Si mulier nobilis nupserit ignobili desinit esse nobilis. [g] But if a dutchesse by marriage marrieth a baron of the realme she remaineth a dutchesse and loseth not her name, because her husband is noble (6), et sic de ceteris.

And as an estate for life may be gained by marriage, so may the king create either man or woman noble for (7) life [b] but not for yeares, because then it might goe to executors or administrators (8). The true division of persons is, that everie man is either of nobilitie, that is, a lord of parliament of the upper house, or under the degree of nobilitie, amongst the commons as knights, esquires, citizens and burgeses of the lower house of parliament, commonly called the house of commons; and he that is not of the nobilitie is by intendment of law among the commons (9).

Come appiert per le register. Which booke in the statute of W. 2. ca. 24. is called Registrum de cancellaria, because it containeth the formes of writs at the common law that issue out of the chancery, tangam ex officina justicie. There is a register of originall writs, and a register of judicall writs; but when it is spoken generally of the register it is meant of the register originall. For the antiquitie and excellencie of this booke, see in my preface to the eight part of my Commentaries. This excellent booke our author voucheth divers times in these bookes, and so doth he divers other authorities in law of several kinds, but with this observation, that he citeth no authoritie, but when the case is rare or may seeme doubtfull, which appeareth in this, that he putteth no case in all his three bookes but hath warrant of good authoritie in law. For he knew well the rule, that perspicua vera non sunt probanda. And the like observation is made of justice Fitzherbert in his booke of natura brevium, that he never citeth authoritie, but when the case is rare or was doubtfull to him. The authorities which our author hath cited in his three bookes I have collected.

Sect.

(1) See 1. Bulstr. 196. where the earldom of Arundel is mentioned as an instance of an earldom by prescription. In this case many curious particulars concerning the honour of Petworth are mentioned.

(2) Baron by writ takes grant of the same barony by patent. This determines his barony by writ. Otherwise it is, if the barony by writ was suspended. 11. Co. Lord Delaware's case. Hal. MSS.—But the doctrine of extinguishing a barony by writ by acceptance of a patent-barony seems questionable; for it supposes a right to surrender the barony by writ. See in Show. Parliam. Cas. 1. Lord Purbeck's case, in which the house of lords adjudged, that the dignity of a viscount could not be surrendered by a fine.

(3) This doctrine is certainly true with respect to baronies by writ; because, as lord Coke observes, the blood of the person summoned is not ennobled, till he takes his seat in parliament. But the case of nobility by letters patent is different, for by them the creation is perfect, and the blood is ennobled without sitting; and therefore, in lord Banbury's case, the court of king's bench held, that a peerage claimed under letters patent is not triable by the record of parliament, but must be questioned by pleading non concessit. See the King and Knollys, 1. L. Raym. 10.

(4) Nota, as to precedence of foreign dukes, earls, &c. it differs not, though they have not voice in parliament. But a Scotch or Irish earl summoned to parliament here is as an English earl, as the earl of Angus. See the case of the dutchesse of Suffolk. Hal. MSS.—See further as to precedence in general, 4. Inst. 361. and Pryn. on 4. Inst. 323. and as to the precedence of Irish peers, see a tract by the late earl of Egmont.

(5) See 14. H. 8. 42. Dy. 79.

(6) But in some books it is said, that if a woman noble by birth marries one of inferior nobility, she shall be styled by the dignity of her second husband. Dutchesse of Suffolk's case. Ow. 82. See S. C. O. Bendl. 37.

(7) It has been supposed, that a man may be noble during the life of another. 52. H. 6. 29. by Danby.

(8) As to the degree of baronet, it is parcel of the name; and therefore capias against I. S. or I. S. knight, where he is baronet, cannot take I. S. baronet. Noy. n. 382. Sir Richard Lucy's case. Tr. 10. Car. B. R. Cro. n. 6. Sir Henry Ferrer's case. The king cannot create a dignity with a mesne between baron and baronets. 9. Jac. 12. Co. n. 51. Hal. MSS. See Noy. 87. Cro. Cha. 371. and 12. Co. 81.

(9) See 2. Inst. 29. 50.

Sect. 10.

ET de tielx choses, de queux home poit aver un manuel occupation possession ou receipt, sicome des terres tenements rents et hujusmodi, la home dirra en count countant, et en plee pledant, que un tiel fuit seise en son demesne come de fee. Mes de tiels choses, que ne gisont en tiel Manuel occupation, &c. sicome de advowson desglise et huiusmodi, la il dirra, que il fuit seise come de fee, et nemy en son demesne come de fee, et en Latin il est en lun cas, quod talis seifitus fuit, &c. in dominico suo ut de feodo, et en l'auter case, quod talis seifitus fuit, &c. ut de feodo.

And of such things, whereof a man may have a manuell occupation possession or receipt, as of lands tenements rents and such like, there a man shall say in his Count Countant and Plea Pledant, that such a one was seised in his demesne as of fee. But of such things, which do not lie in such Manuall occupation, &c. as of an Advowson of a Church and such like, there he shall say, that he was seised as of fee, and not in his Demesne as of fee. And in Latine it is in one Case, Quod talis seifitus fuit in dominico suo ut de feodo, and in the other Case, Quod talis seifitus fuit, &c. ut de feodo.

courage et cure de ceo apprendre. And for this cause this word quia bene placitate super omnia placet; and it is not as some have said, so called per antiphrasin, quia non placet.

Seise; Seifitus cometh of the French word seisin, i. e. possessio, saving that in the common law, seised or seisin is properly applyed to freehold, and possessed or possession properly to goods and chattels; although sometime the one is used instead of the other.

En son demesne come de fee, in Dominico suo ut in feodo. Dominicum is not onely that inheritance, wherein a man hath proper dominion or owner-ship, as it is distinguished from the lands which another doth hold of him in service, but that which is manually occupied, manured, and possessed, for the necessary sustentation, maintenance, and supportation of the lord and his household, and savoureth de domo, of the house, either ad mensam, for his or their bord, and sustentation, or is manually received, (as rents) for bearing and defraying of necessary charges publike or private. Of these, saith our author, he should plead, that he is seised in dominico suo ut de feodo, i. e. de feodo dominicali, seu terra dominicali, seu redditu dominicali; which is as much as to say demeyne or demaine, of the hand, i. e. manured by the hand, or received by the hand; and therefore he calleth it manuell occupation, possession or receipt (3). And in Domesday demeane land is called inland, as for example, 4 bovatas terræ de inland, et 10. bovatas in servitio.

En tiel Manuel occupation, &c. There is nothing in our author but is worthy of

IN count countant. Count (Doctr. Pla. 83.) i. e. narratio cometh of the French word conte, which in Latyne is narratio, and is vulgarly called a declaration (1). The original writ is according to its name breve, brieve and short; but the count, which the plaintife or demandant makes, is more narrative and spacious and certaine both in matter and in circumstance of time and place, to the end the defendant may be compelled to make a more direct answer; so as the writ may be compared to logicke, and the count to rheticke; and it is that which the civilians call a libell. And in that ancient booke of the Mirror of Justices, lib. 2. cap. des loiers, contors are serjeants skilfull in law, so named of the count as of the principal part, and in W. 2. ca. 29. he is called serjant counter (2).

Mirror des Justices.

W. 2. cap. 29.

En plee pledant. (Post. 303.)

Placitum. Here Littleton teacheth good pleading in this point, of which in his third booke and chapter of Confirmation, sect. 534, he thus saith, et saches mon fuis, que est un des plus honorables laudables et profitable choses en nostre ley, de aver le science du bien pleader en actions reals et personels; et par ceo, ieo toy counsaile especialment de metter ton placitum is derived à placendo, serjant counter (2).

Bract. lib. 4. fol. 263. Idem lib. 5. fol. 372. Britton fol. 205. 206. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5. Stanf. Præf. 8. Pl. Com. fol. 191. Wrottesley's case.

Domesday.

(1) As to the form of a count or declaration, and all other particulars concerning it, see Com. Dig. Pleader. C. The whole of lord chief baron Comyn's work is equally remarkable for its great variety of matter, its compendious and accurate expression, and the excellence of its methodical distribution; but the title Pleader seems to have been the author's favourite one, and that in which he principally exerted himself.

(2) See further on the antiquity and dignity of serjeants at law, Blackst. Com. 5th ed. v. 1. p. 24. & v. 3. p. 26. and the books there cited, particularly Fortesc. De Laud. Leg. Ang. c. 50. Spelm. Gloss. 335. Pref. to 10. Co. 2. Inst. 214. Dugd. Orig. Jurid. and a tract by the late Mr. Serjeant Wynn, which was printed in 1765. To these add Waterh. Comment. on Fortesc. 136. 137. and 347. to 363. where the author is so full and explanatory on the same subject, that what he has collected may very well be deemed a treatise upon it. Mr. Waterhouse, though a very prolix as well as extravagant writer, one who too frequently exhausts himself, and disgusts his readers, by tedious useless and ill-timed digressions, appears to have been a man of considerable learning; and his collections, relative to the antiquities of our law, may sometimes be resorted to with great advantage, and may very much facilitate the labours of more judicious and able inquirers.

(3) Vide the diversity between count and plea in some cases. In debt for rent the plaintiff shall count, that he leased without shewing seisin or seisin in demesne. 21. H. 7. 26. So in Formedon, quod I. S. dedit. 3. E. 3. 35. 5. E. 3. 16. 3. E. 3. 59. 15. E. 4. 17. But in counting descent in writ of entry, he ought to plead seisin, and in pleading a gift in tail he ought to alledge seisin in demesne. 18. H. 6. 24. 15. E. 4. 17. Hal. MSS. See further on pleading seisin in demesne. Post. 17. b.

of observation. Here is the first (Et.) and there is no (Et.) in all his three bookes (there being as you shall perceive very many) but it is for two purposes. First it doth imply some other necessary matter. Secondly, that the student may together with that which our author hath said inquire what authorities there be in law that treat of that matter, which will worke three notable effects: first it will make him understand our author the better: secondly, it will exceedingly adde to the reader's invention. And lastly, it will fasten the matter more surely in his memory, for which purpose I have for his ease in the beginning set downe in these Institutes, the effect of some of the principal authorities in law as I conceive them concerning the same. In this place the (Et.) implyeth possession or receipt, and such other matter as appeareth by my notes in this section. As for the authorities of law, you shall find the effect of them in this section, and the like of the rest of the (Et.) which you shall find in the sections hereafter mentioned, omitting those (for avoyding of tediousnesse) that either are apparent, or which are explained in some other places, viz. sect. 20. 48. 102. 108. 120. 125. 136. 137. 146. 149. 154. 164. 166. 167. 168. 177. 179. 183. 184. 194. 200. 202. 210. 211. 217. 220. 226. 233. 240. 242. 244. 245. 248. 262. 264. 269. 270. 271. 279. 320. 322. 323. 325. 326. 327. 329. 330. 335. 336. 341. 347. 348. 349. 350. 352. 355. 356. 359. 364. 365. 374. 375. 377. 381. 384. 389. 393. 395. 397. 399. 401. 402. 410. 417. 428. 433. 447. 449. 461. 470. 471. 477. 483. 489. 500. 501. 522. 532. 552. 553. 556. 558. 562. 578. 591. 592. 593. 594. 603. 613. 624. 625. 630. 632. 634. 637. 638. 648. 659. 660. 661. 669. 687. 693. 700. 718. 745. 748. 749. All which I have observed and quoted here once for all for the ease of the studious reader (1).

Ut de feodo. Where (ut) is not by way of similitude, but to be understood positively that he is seised in fee. And so it is where one pleads a descent to one ut filio et hæredi, that is, to Io. S. that is sonne and heyre, et sic de cæteris, where (ut) denotat ipsam veritatem.

Sicome de advowson. Of an advowson [1] wherein a man hath as absolute ownership and propertie as he hath in lands or rents, yet he shall not pleade, that he is seised in dominico suo ut feodo (2) because that inheritance, favouring not de dono, cannot either serve for the sustentation of him and his household, nor any thing can be received for the same for defraying of charges. And therefore he cannot say, that he is seised thereof in dominico suo de feodo, whereby it appeareth how the common law doth detest simony and all corrupt bargaines for presentations to any benefice, but that [k] idonea persona for the discharge of the cure should be presented freely without expectation of any thing: nay so cautious is the common law in this point, that the pl. in a quare impedit should recover no damages for the losse of his presentation untill the statute of W. 2. cap. 5. (3) And that is the reason that gardian in socage [l] shall not present to an advowson, because he can take nothing for it, and by consequent he cannot account for it. And by the law he can meddle with nothing that he cannot account for. [m]. And in a writ of right of advowson, the patron shall not alledge the explees or taking of the profits in himselfe but in his incumbent. And hereby the old bookes shall be the better understood, viz. Bracton, lib. 4. tract. 3. cap. nu. 5. Est autem dominicum quod quis habet ad mensam, et proprie, sicut sunt Boordlands Anglice. And Fleta lib. 5. ca. 5. Est autem dominicum propria terra ad mensam assignata. Dominicum etiam dicitur ad differentiam ejus quod tenetur in servitio. But of an advowson and such like he shall plead, that he is seised de advocacione ut de feodo et jure (4).

Advowson. Advocatio, signifying an advowing or taking into protection, is as much as jus patronatus. Sir William Herle in 7. E. 3. fol. 4. faith, that it is not long past, that a man did know what an advowson was, but, when a man would grant an advowson he granted, ecclesiam the church, and thereby the advowson passed, vide 45. E. 3. 5. But surely the word is of greater antiquity, for in the register there is an originall writ de recto advocacionis, and in the originall writ of assise de darreine presentment the patron is called advocatus. [n] Vide W. 2. ca. 5. And so doth [o] Bracton call him. Advocatus autem dici poterit ille, ad quem pertinet jus advocacionis alicujus, ut ad ecclesiam presentet nomine proprio et non alieno. And [p] Fleta lib. 5. cap. 14. agreeth herewith almost totidem verbis: advocatus est ad quem pertinet jus advocacionis alterius ecclesie, ut ad ecclesiam nomine proprio non alieno possit presentare. And [q] Britton cap. 92. The patron is called avow, and the patrons are called advocati, for that they be either founders or maintainers or benefactors of the church, either by building dotation or encreasing of it, in which respect they were also called patroni, and the advowson jus patronatus.

And it is to be understood that there is a great [r] diversity. inter advocacionem medietatis ecclesie, Et. et medietatem advocacionis ecclesie (5), and of their severall remedies for the same. For the advowson of the moiety is, when there be severall patrons and two severall incumbents in one church, the one of the one moiety thereof, and the other of the other moiety, and one part

Britton 205. 206. optime. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 5. Idem lib. 3. cap. 15.

[1] 7. E. 3. 63. 24. E. 3. 74. 34. H. 6. 34. 19. E. 3. quar. imp. 154. Mirror cap. 2. lect. 17.

(Doctr. Plac. 287. Post 89. 388.)

[4] 6. Co. 51. Boswel's case.

[1] 8. E. 2. Presentment al Egle life 10. 7. E. 3. 39. 27. E. 3. 89. 29. E. 3. 5. 31. E. 3. Eftopel 240. (Post. 89. 344. b.) [m] 7. E. 3. 63. Bracton 263. 372. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5.

7 E. 3. 4. 45. E. 3. 2.

[n] W. 2. ca. 5. [o] Bract. lib. 4. fo. 240. [p] Fleta lib. 5. cap. 14.

[q] Britton cap. 92. [r] 33. H. 6. 11. b. per Prifot. 14. H. 6. 15. per Newton. 31. E. 1. droit 68. 69. F. N. B. 31. b. 10. Co. 135. 136 R. Smithe's case. 45. E. 3. Fines 41. 45. E. 3. 12. 17. E. 3. 78. 17. E. 2. Dower 163. (4. Co. 75. 5. Co. 102. 2. Inst. 375.)

(1) See in fol. 22. a. the note in respect to lord Coke's observation on Littleton's use of nota, Et. and like expressions. (2) And yet in 34. H. 6. 34 one pleads, that the king was seised in his demesne as of fee of an advowson in gros.—See also 26. E. 3. 64. b. where in a writ of right of advowson by an abbot against the countess of Ormond, the plaintiff counts, that one R. was seised in his demesne as of fee and right, and it was held good. If a church be impropriate, the impropriator may plead seisin in his demesne as of fee. Plowd. 503.—(3) Advowson assens. Recovery in value for advowson shall be 12d. for every mark [the church is worth by the year.] 8. E. 2. Recovery in value. 11. Hal. MSS. The words between the brackets are added from Fitzh. Abr. As to an advowson's being assens and valuable, see Post. 374. b. and the note there given on the subject.—(4) Office de balliva parci vel hundredi not demesne, yet the esplees shall be laid. 7. E. 3. 63. 8. E. 3. 55. Corody not demesne. 17. E. 2. Nuper obiit 12. Tithes whether demesne. Dy. 85. One grants a rent-charge, the grantee brings annuity, and declares of a grant virtute cujus fuit seistus in dominico suo ut de feodo. By some this is electing to have it as a rent-charge, 3. E. 6. Dy. 65. But ruled contra, and the pleading good in substance. M. 43. 44. Eliz. B. R. Case of Dean of Rochester. Noy n. 162. M. 11. Car. B. R. Cro. n. 24. Sprint and Hickes 2. Bullf. 148. Hal. MSS. The dean of Rochester's case is in Noy. 37. 2. And. 106. & Ow. 73.—A man intituled to a road pleads seisin of it in dominico suo ut de feodo et in jure. 3. H. 6. 7. In nativo habendo esplees alledged, and yet the count for the villein only de feodo et jure. 39. H. 6. 32.—Where a reversion depends on an estate for years, there pleading either seisin in demesne as of fee, or seisin as of fee, will be good; but if the reversion be on an estate of freehold, only seisin in demesne can be pleaded. Plowd. 191. a. See accord. Dy. 101. in Culpepper's case. It is said, that a reversion or remainder belonging to the king's tenant in capite formerly intituled the king to wardship, though the statute 17. E. 2. de prerogativa regis cap. 1. speaks of lands of which the tenant dies seised in dominico suo ut de feodo. Stanf. Prærog. 8. a. Plowd. 11. See further as to pleading seisin in demesne ante 17. a. n. 3. Standf. Prærog. 8. a. 14. a. Doctrin. Plac. 287. & Com. Dig. Pleader. C. 35.—(5) But note, that this diversity doth not hold in the case of a rectory; for in Holland's case, 40. Co. 75. the pleading was ad medietatem rectorie, whereas it should have been ad rectoriam medietatis, and yet it was taken by the court to be the same in effect.

o.

ing
ne-said no-exhis istithe eth this nti-pla-64.
42.
35.
89.
89.
25.
All

ely
is,

ship suo en-of do, for uld in en-[I] he unt or be bado-te-ca-ich t a ed, ely

caus.
lle,
no.
em
re.
ti, ldwec-ne.

mone art

ns.
See hat tor for ets ven ody and ge, Noy
2. ndo for of re-
E.
a.
m.
the
to

Cognati quasi fratres nati ex parte matris.

Avunculus, quasi frater minor.

Materna quasi frater altera.

Abnatus quasi a fratre cognatus.

Avus ab Avia quia patre antiquior.

Patruus quasi loco patris.

*Amita quasi a me
tertia.*

*Amita quasi a me
tertia.*
Frater quasi frater alter.
Soror quasi soror etiam diversa.
Semi germani fratres quasi ex eodem patre & secundum matris ibi nati.
Filius.
Filia.
*utroque; quidam;
i. ab amore
parentum.*

Amita.
The Aunt or Father's Sister.
Patrunculus à Patruo.
Sonnees or Daughters, Cousin Germans on the Father's side.
Amitini ab Amita.
Sonnees or Daughters, Cousin Germans on the Father's side.

*Linea transversalis,
seu collateralis.*
The side Line.

Propo-
Linea recta
The right
Line

Linea recta ascendens.
The right Line ascending.

Frater, a Brother, Uterinus Frater,
Brother of one Mother and feverall Fathers.
Soror, Sister.

*Linea transversalis,
seu collateralis.*
The side Line.

Avunculini ab Avunculo.
Sonnees or Daughters, Cousin Germans on the Mother's side.
Materterini à matertera.
Sonnees or Daughters, Cousin Germans on the Mother's side.

Matertera.
The Aunt or Mother's Sister.

Matertera quasi ex eodem utero fratres ex sepe a-libus patribus.

Filius.
Sonne.

Filia.
Daughter.

Nepos linealis.
The lineall Nephew.

Nephis linealis.
The lineall Niece.

Eorum. Of these. Nepos collat. The collateral Nephew. Nephis
collat. The collateral Niece.

Pronepos linealis.
The lineall Nephew's or Niece's
Son.

Pronephis linealis.
The lineall Nephew's or Niece's
Daughter.

Abnepos linealis.
The grand Sonne of the lineall Nephew or Niece.

Abnephis linealis.
The grand Daughter of the lineall Nephew or Niece.

Eorundem.
Of these.
Pronepos collat.
The collateral
Nephew's Son
Pronephis collat.
The collateral
Nephew's Daughter.
Et sic in infinitum.

Trinepos linealis.
The great grand Sonne of the lineall Nephew or Niece. Et sic in infinitum.

Trinephis linealis.
The great grand Daughter of the lineall Nephew
or Niece. Et sic in infinitum.

Place this next before Folio 18. b.

part as well of the church as of the towne allotted to the one, and the other part thereof to the other; and in that case each patron if he be disturbed shall have a quare impedit, quod permittat ipsum presentare idoneam personam ad medietatem ecclesie (1).

But if there be two coparceners, and they do agree to present by turne, each of them in truth hath but a moiety of the church, but for that there is but one incumbent, if either of them be disturbed, the shall have a quare impedit, &c. presentare idoneam personam ad ecclesiam; for that there is but one church and one incumbent, and so of the like (2). But in [7] the said case of two coparceners one of them shall have a writ of right of writ of advowson de medietate advocacionis; for in truth she hath but a right to a moiety; but in the other case, where there be two patrons and two incumbents in one church, each of them shall have a writ of right of advowson de advocacione medietatis.

And as there may (as hath beene said) be two severall parsons in one church, so there may be two that may make but one parson in a church. [1] Britton saith, si quis ex glise soit done a divers persons per un sole avowe, nul ne se pura pleadre per assise de juris utrum ne nul estre implede sans lautre, &c. And therewith agreeth Fleta. [u] Item licet aliqua ecclesia divisa fuerit inter duos, si bene sua habeant communia si se separata, dum tamen unicum habeant advocatum nullus eorum sine alio agere poterit vel implacitari. And Fitzh. saith, that two prebendaries may be one parson of a church, who shall joyne in a juris utrum, so as one rectory may be annexed to two severall prebends, and both of them make but one parson. But where one is parson of the one moiety of a church and another of the other moiety, as hath been said, there one of them shall have a juris utrum against the other, and in the writ shall name him persona medietatis ecclesie, &c. But for avoyding of suspicion of curiositie if we should proceed any further herein, we will attend what Littleton will further teach us.

(10. Co. 135. F. N. B. 33.)

[1] Britton for 235. 31. E. 1. droit 68. 69. F. N. B. 31. b. & 33. a. 5. H. 7. 8. 17. E. 3. 3. 75. 76. 7. E. 3. 327. 8. E. 3. 425. 22. Aff. p. 33. 14. H. 4. 10. 33. E. 3. quar. imp. 196.

[1] Britton fo. 235.

[u] Fleta lib. 5. ca. 19.

F. N. B. 49. o.

F. N. B. 49. p.

Sect. II.

E*T nota, que home ne poit aver plus ample ou plus griender estate denheritance, (3) que fee simple.* AND note that a man cannot have a more large or greater estate of inheritance than fee simple.

THIS doth extend as well to fee simples conditional and qualified, as to fee simples pure and absolute. For our author speaketh here of the amplenesse and greatness of the estate, and not of the perdurableness of the same. And he, that hath a fee simple conditionall or qualified, hath as ample and great an estate, as he that hath a fee simple absolute, so as the diversity appeareth betweene the quantity and quality of the estate.

From this state in fee simple, estates in taile, and all other particular estates are derived, and therefore worthily our author beginneth his first booke with tenant in fee simple, for a principalioribus seu dignioribus est inchoandum.

Ne poit aver plus ample ou griender estate, &c. For this cause two [a] fee simples absolute cannot be of one, and the selfe-same land. If the king make a gift in taile, and the donee is attainted of treason, in this case the king hath not two fee simples in him, viz. the ancient reversion in fee, and a fee simple determinable upon the dying without issue of tenant in taile, but both of them are consolidated and conjoined together (4). And so it is, if such a tenant in taile doth convey the land to the king his heires and successors, the king hath but one estate in fee simple united in him, and the king's grant of one estate is good, and so was it adjudged in the court of Common Pleas. And yet in several persons by act in law, a reversion may be in fee simple in one, and a fee simple determinable in another by matter ex post facto; as if a gift in taile be made to a villeine, and the lord enter, the lord hath a fee simple qualified, and the donor a reversion in fee (5). But if the lord infee the donor, now both fee simples are united, and he hath but one fee simple in him. But one fee simple cannot depend upon another by the grant of the partie, as if lands be given to A (6), so long as B hath heires of his body the remainder over in fee, the remainder is voyde (7).

[a] Pl. Com. 349. and 248. 19. H. 8. Dier 4. 29. H. 8. Dier. 33. 16. Eliz. Dier 330. 2 Marie Dier 107. Aulten's case. Pa. 38. Eliz. rot. 108. in Quar. Imp. betweene the Queene Pl. and the Bishop of Lincoln, Hussy and others Deff. 15. E. 4. 6. 8.

(Plowd. 559. Dy. 4. & 12. Cro. Jam. 590. Finch. 8vo. ed. 113. 1. Ro. Abr. 827. Dy. 156. b.)

Sect. I 2.

I*TEM purchase est appel la possession des terres ou* ALSO purchase is called the possession of lands or tene-

Purchase in Latin is either acquisitum of the verbe acquirere, for so I find it in the original register 243. In terris vel tenementis, quæ viri

(1) Accordingly in Smith's case 10. Co. 135. b. it was agreed, that quare impedit presentare ad medietatem ecclesie, shall only be when there are two severall patrons and two severall incumbents of distinct parts of the same church; but in that case the court implied as much, because the count alledged a seisin de advocacione medietatis. In Windsor's case Cro. Eliz. 686. where the count was of the advowson of two parts, the court held the declaration to be bad; but then it was, because by other parts of the declaration it appeared, that the church was entire, and that there was but one incumbent, and consequently that the plaintiff's title was to two parts of the advowson, and not to an advowson of two parts.—(2) See further on this subject Doder Advowf. 21. 2. Leon. 36. Dy. 78. b. & 299. W. Jo. 446. & Wils. vol. 2. page 225. & 231.—(3) On inheritance, L and M. Roh. P. and Red. (4) See acc. Cro. Eliz. 519. Hob. 323. & W. Jo. 6.—The king shall be said to be in, in point of reverter, and shall avoid leases by tenant in tail. Plowd. 552. Tr. 2. Car. Rot. 730. and adjudged H. 3. Car. Hutt. n. and Crook n. 4. Sir Thomas Holt's case. A, tenant for life, remainder to B his son and heir apparent in tail, remainder to A's right heires. A grants rent-charge to C, and his heires, A and B levy fine to the use of A and his heires, A enfeoffs D and dies, having issue B and ruled, that D shall hold charged, for by the fine he has a fee consolidated in him; which quære. For M. 10. Jac. B. R. Bulstr. n. 35. in Errington's case. A and B his wife tenants in tail special, remainder to the right heires of A, have issue a son and a daughter; the son by indenture makes lease for 40 years to commence after the mother's death, the father being dead; the son dies without issue; the daughter levies a fine to I. S. the mother dies; and although this lease is partly derived out of the fee simple, and by the fine I. S. had a consolidated fee, yet, because the daughter was not liable to the lease, consequently the consue shall not be liable to the lease so long as the tail continues. Vid M. 6. Jac. B. R. n. 22. Nedham's case. Tenant in tail, remainder to the king, is attainted of treason. The king shall not be in, in point of remainder, but as long as the tail continues shall be in under tenant in tail, and subject to his charges, and so it differs from Walsingham's case, where the king had the reversion. Parudine's case. Hal. MSS.—See Sir Thomas Holt's case in Hutt. 96. and Cro. Cha. 103. and Errington's case in 2. Bulstr. 42. As to Nedham's case and Parudine's case, I take them to be the same, and the reader will find it reported by the name of Poole and Nedham Yelv. 149.—(5) See Acc. Post. 117. a.—(6) The words and his heires seem wanting here.—(7) Acc. 10. Co. 97. b. See an observation on this doctrine by lord ch. justice Vaughan, who seems to question it, Vaugh. 269. 270.

Lib. 1.

Cap. 2.

Of Fee simple.

Sect. 13.

Bracton lib. 2. fol. 65.
[6] Glanvill. lib. 7. cap. 1. Britt.
c. 33. fo. 84. & 121.
(1. Ro. Abr. 827.)

vir et mulieres conjunctim ac-quisiverunt, &c. Bracton calleth it perquisitum; and by [6] Glanvill it is called quæstus or per- quisitum.

A purchase is always intended by title, and most properly by some kinde of conveyance either for money or some other consideration, or freely of gift; for that is in law also a purchase (1). But a descent, because it commeth tenements que home ad per son fait, ou per agreement, a quel possession il ne avient per title de discent de nul de ses ancesfers, ou de ses cousins

mes per son fait de-mesne.

ments that a man hath by his deed or agreement, unto which possession be commeth not by title of descent from any of his ancestors, or of his cousins but by his owne deed.

¶1. Com. Wimbisley's case 47.
b. 1. H. 5. cap. 5.

(Cro. Jam. 366. Post. 27. 2. 3.
Inft. 202.)

[c] 9. H. 4. 24.

Mich. 10. Ja. Obiter in Com.
banc. in Pym's case.

[d] B. Catlaneus fol. 13. Conc.
29. 30. E. 3. 2. & 3. 39. E. 3. 6.
9. 10. 1. H. 5. tit. Executors
108. tit. Descent Br. 43. 9. E. 4.
15. Madam Wiche's case.

[e] Vide 28. H. 8. 24.
(12. Co. 104.)

Int. adjudicata coram rege Tr. 41.
E. 3. lib. 2. fo. 104. in Theaur.
Sect. 241. 242. &c.

meerely by act of law, is not said to be a purchase; and accordingly the makers of the act of parliament in 1. H. 5. ca. 5. speaketh of them that have lands or tenements by purchase or descent of inheritance. And so it is of an escheate or the like, because the inheritance is cast upon, or a title vested in the lord by act in law, and not by his own deed or agreement, as our author here saith (2). Like law of the state of tenant by the courtesie, tenant in dower or the like. But such as attaine to lands by meere injury and wrong, as by disseisin, intrusion, abatement, usurpation, &c. cannot be said to come in by purchase, no more then robbery, burglarie, py-racy or the like can justly be termed purchase (3).

If a nobleman, knight, esquire, &c. be buried in a church, and have his coat armor and pennions with his armes, and such other ensignes of honour as belong to his degree or order, set up in the church, or if a gravestone or tombe be laid or made, &c. for a monument of him, [c] in this case albeit the freehold of the church be in the parson, and that these be annexed to the freehold, yet cannot the parson or any take them or deface them, but he is subject to an action to the heire, and his heires in the honour and memory of whose ancestors they were set up (4). And so it was holden, Mich. 10. Ja. and herewith agreeth the lawes [d] in other coun-tries. Note this kind of inheritance. And some hold that the wife or executors, that first set them up, may have an action in that case against those that deface them in their time (5). And note, that in some places chattels as heir-loomes, (as the best bed, table, pot, pan, cart, and other dead chattels moveable) may go to the heire (6), and the heire in that case may have an action for them at the common law, and shall not sue for them in the ecclesiasticall court; but the heire-loome is due by custome and not by the common law (7). And the [e] ancient jewels of the crowne are heire-loomes, and shall descend to the next successor, and are not devisable by testament. An heire-loome is called principalium or hereditarium.

Consuetudo hundredi de Stretford in Com' Oxon' est, quod hæredes tenentorum infra hundredum prædictum existentium post mortem antecessorum suorum habebunt, &c. principalium, Anglice an heire-loome, viz. De quodam genere catallorum, utensilium, &c. optimum plaustrum, optimam carucam, op-timum ciphum, &c.

Our author hath not spoken of parceners in this chapter, for that he hath particular chap-ters of the same.

Gradus Parentela, &c.

CHAP. 2. Sect. 13.

TENANT en fee
taile. Tallium, or feo-dum talliatum, is derived of the French word tailler scin-dere; for so Littleton himselfe in this chapter, sect. 18.
saith.

Le Statute de W. 2.

This statute was made in 13. E. 1. and is called West. 2. because the parliament was holden at Westminster, and

TENANT in fee taile est per force de le statute of the de West. 2. cap. 1. 2. cap. 1.
car devant le dit the said statute, all statute, tous en- inheritances were fee heritances fuerent simple; for all the fee simple; car gifts which be spe-tous les dones que cified in that sta-sont specifiques deins tute were fee simple mesme

TENANT in fee
taile is by force of the statute of W.
de West. 2. cap. 1. 2. cap. 1.
car devant le dit the said statute, all
statute, tous en- inheritances were fee
heritances fuerent simple; for all the fee simple; car gifts which be spe-
tous les dones que cified in that sta-
sont specifiques deins tute were fee simple
mesme

(2. Inft. 331.)
Mirror cap. 2. sect. 15. & cap.
1. sect. 5.
(Post. 22. a.)

(1) In Plowd. 11. Saunders arguendo says, that one may have land by purchase three ways, by bargain or gift for money, by gift without any recompense, and by way of remainder.—(2) The abbot of Fountains of the order of Cistercians before the council of Lateran makes a feoffment, and the land escheats to him after the council of Lateran. It seems, that he shall not be charged with tithes, because it is not a purchase. Quare. M. 7. Jac. B. R. Dickson and Waller Hal. MSS. It was decreed by the general council of Lateran in 1215, that the privilege of exemption from tithes, enjoyed by the Cistercians and other religious orders, should not extend to lands purchased after that council. Ne occasione privilegiorum suorum ecclesia ulterius prægraventur, decernimus, ut de ali-enis terris et a modo acquirendis, &c. decimas persolvant, &c. Gibl. Cod. 1st ed. v. 2. p. 700. 701. This explains the case cited by Lord Hale.—An escheat in appearance participates of the nature both of a purchase and a descent; of the former, because some act by the lord is requisite to perfect his title, and the actual possession of the land cannot be gained till he enters or brings his writ of escheat; of the latter, because it follows the nature of the feignory, and is inheritable by the same persons; but strictly speaking an escheat is a title neither by purchase nor descent. It should be considered, that though the lord must do some act to put himself into the actual possession; yet his title to take possession commences immediately on the want of a tenant, and this title is vested in him without waiting for his own deed or agreement, and as much by mere act of law as the title of an heir is in the case of a descent; and therefore both titles are equally excluded from being purchases. On the other hand, escheat is not a title by descent; for the lord takes in his capacity of lord of the feignory of which the land escheated was holden, and not as heir or by right of blood. Nor is it any objection to this way of considering the title by escheat, that the land escheated will be inheritable in the lord as land by purchase, where he has the feignory by purchase, and as land by descent where he has the feignory by descent; for the reason of this is, not that the escheat is either a purchase or descent, but because the escheat follows the feignory, from which the right to it is derived, as an accessory to its principal. According to this view of the subject, instead of distributing all the several titles to land under purchase and descent, it would be more accurate to say, that the title to land is either by purchase, to which the act or agreement of the party is essential, or by mere act of law, and under the latter to consider first descent, and then escheat, and such other titles not being by descent, as yet like them accrue by mere act of law. See on this subject Blackst. Comment. ed. 5. v. 2. p. 241. and 201.—(3) See Acc. ante 3 b.—(4) See Cro. Jam. 367. 2. Bulstr. 151. See too the several books cited in Vin. Abr. Descent E.—(5) See Acc. 12. Co. 104. where it is said, that afterwards the heir of the person, in honour of whom the tomb is erected, shall have the action.—(6) Heir-looms by custom cannot be alienated by devise. See Post 185. b. and 1. Vern. 273.—(7) However, personal property may be devised or limited in strict settlement to one for life, with remainder to sons and

mesme le statute fuer-ont fee simple conditional al common ley, come appiert per le reherfal de mesme le statute. Et ore per cel statute tenant en le taile est en deux maners, cest ascavoir, tenant en taile generall, et tenant en taile special.

conditional at the common law, as appear-eth by the rehearfall of the same statute.
And now by this statute, tenant in taile is in two manners, that is to say, tenant in taile generall, and tenant in taile speciall.

hath the name of the second, because another parliament was formerly holden at Westminster in the third year of the same king's raigne, which was called Westminster the first. And albeit manie parliaments were after holden at Westminster besides these, yet were they two onely, propter excellentiam, called the statutes of Westminster. And the act intended by Littleton is W. 2. ca. 1.
upon which statute our author in the Inner Temple did

(2. Inst. 337.)

learnedly read, whose reading I have. Of king Ed. 1. and of this statute, Sir William Herle, chiefe justice of the court of Common Pleas, in 5. E. 3. 14. saith, that king E. 1. was the wisest king that ever was: and the cause of the making of this statute was to preserve the inheritance in the blood of them to whom the gift was made. And in 9. E. 3. 22. he saith, that they were sage men that made this statute (1). See more of this in the chapter of Warranties, sect. 746.

5. E. 3. 14.

Of this estate taile it is said, [a] Modus legem dat donationi, et tenenda est etiam conventio, quia modus et conventio vincunt legem: ut si alicui cum uxore fiat donatio, habendum et tenendum sibi et heredibus quos inter eos legitime procreabunt, ecce quod donator vult tales heredes in hereditate paterna et materna succedant, aliis heredibus eorum remotioribus penitus exclusis: et quod voluntas donatoris observari debet, manifeste apparet per hanc statuta. Quia autem dudum regi durum videbatur, &c.

9. E. 3. 22.

[a] Fleta lib. 3. cap. 9. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 5. &c. Brit. ca. 24. & 36.

Devant le dit statute [b] tous inheritances fueront fee simple. Here fee simple is taken in his large sense, including as well conditionall or qualified, as absolute, to distinguish them from estates in taile since the said statute. Before which statute of donis conditionalibus, if land had beene given to a man, and to the heires males of his body, the having of an issue female had beene no performance of the condition; but if he had issue male, and dyed, and the issue male had inherited, yet he had not had a fee simple absolute, [c] for if he had died without issue male, the donor should have entred as in his reverter. By having of issue, the condition was performed for three purposes; First, to alien: Secondly, to forfeit: Thirdly, to charge with rent, common, or the like. But the course of descent was not altered by having issue (2): for if the donee had issue and died, and the land had descended to his issue [d] yet if that issue had dyed (without any alienation made) without issue, his collateral heire should not have inherited, because he was not within the forme of the gift, viz. heire of the body of the donee. [f] Lands were given before the statute in frank-marriage, and the donees had issue and died, and after the issue died without issue; it was adjudged, that his collateral issue shall not inherit, but the donor shall re-enter. So note, that the heire in taile had no fee simple absolute at the common law, though there were divers descents (3).

[b] Vid. sect. 18. Brit. ca. 36. fol. 93. Pl. Com. 235. 562. Shelley's case, 1. Co. 103. (2. Inst. 333. 7. Co. 38.)

[c] 44. E. 3. 3. 30. E. 1. Formdon 66. 7. E. 3. 6. 7. 7. H. 4. 31. 12. H. 4. 2.

[d] 18. E. 3. 46. 18. Aff. p. 5. 12. E. 4. 3.

[f] 4. H. 3. Formdon 34. 18. Aff. 5. 12. E. 4. 3. Pl. Com. 247. b. 18. E. 2. tit. Formdon 58. 59.

If lands had beene given to a man and to his heires males of his bodie, and he had issue two sonnes, and the eldest had issue a daughter, the daughter was not inheritable to the fee simple, but the younger sonne per formam Doni. And so if land had beene given at the common law to a man and the heires females of his body, and he had issue a sonne and a daughter, and died, the daughter should have inherited this fee simple at the common law (4); for the statute of donis conditionalibus createth no estate taile, but of such an estate as was fee simple at the common law and is descendable in such forme as it was at the common law. If the donee in taile had issue before the statute, and the issue had died without issue, the alienation of the donee at the common law, having no issue at that time, had not barred the donor.

[g] If donee in taile at the common law had aliened before any issue had, and after had issue, this alienation had barred the issue, because he claimed a fee simple; yet if that issue had died without issue, the donor might re-enter, for that he aliened before any issue, at what time he had no power to alien to barre the possibilitie of the donor. [h] But if some tenant in taile had taken husband, and had issue, and the husband and wife had aliened in fee by deed before the statute, yet the issue might have had a formdon in descender (5); for the alienation was not lawful: but otherwise it is, if it had beene by fine. And these things, though they seem ancient, are necessarie notwithstanding to be knowne, as well for the knowledge of the common law, as for annuities and such like inheritances, as cannot be intailed within the said statute, and therefore remaine at the common law. [i] If the king before the statute of Donis

(1. Ro. Abr. 840.)

[g] 30. E. 1. Formdon 5. Temps E. 1. ibidem 62. 19. E. 2. Formdon 61. Pl. Com. 246.

[h] 4. E. 2. Formdon 50.

(1. Ro. Abr. 837.)

[i] 6. E. 3. 56. Jo. of Eltham's case.

con-

daughters in tail, so as to be transmissible like heir-looms; but the goods will be the absolute property of the first tenant in tail, and be conformable to all the other rules concerning executory devises, and cannot render the property unalienable longer than lives in being, and 21 years after. For cases of heir-looms by devise and settlement, see Gower and Grosvenor, Barnad. Ch. Rep. 54. Wyth and Blackman, 1. Vef. 196. Duke of Bridgewater and Egerton, 2. Vef. 121. Boon and Cornforth, 2. Vef. 277. and Trafford, 3. Atk. 347.—See further on the subject of heir-looms, Blackst. Com. 5th ed. v. 2. p. 427. and Vin. Abr. Heir-loom.—(1) However Lord Coke in other places finds great fault with the statute de donis. See Post. 19. b.—(2) Where the gift was special to one of the heirs of his or her body by a particular person, the course of descent was in some degree changed by the having issue; for after issue had, by construction of law the land became descendible to all the heirs of the donee's body, whether they were the donee's issue by the person named in the gift or by any other person, and also liable to the curtesy or dower of a second husband or wife. See Acc. Pain's case, 8. Co. 35. b. and Berkley's case, Plowd. 247. and the next note. Lord Coke infers, that this was the common law from that part of the statute de donis, or of Westminster the second, which enacts, that from thenceforth neither the second husband nor the issue of a second marriage shall have any thing in the case of such a conditional gift. Nec habeat de cetero secundus vir huiusmodi mulieris aliquid in tenemento sic dato per conditionem post mortem uxoris sue per legem Angliae, nec exitus de secundo viro et muliere successionem hereditariam. That at common law the having of issue thus enlarged the course of descent, where the gift was of an express conditional fee to a man and woman and the heirs of their two bodies, all the authorities agree; but it is said, that the issue of a second marriage could not inherit where the gift was in frank-marriage, which was an implied conditional fee to the donees and the issue between them, and yet at the same time we are told, that in this latter case the second husband might have curtesy. See 2. Inst. 336. It will be difficult to give a reason why a gift to husband and wife and the issue between them should be so distinguished from a gift in frank-marriage, or why the husband should have curtesy, where the issue by him could not inherit. See the next note, where Lord Hale seems to doubt this doctrine.—(3) If gift be to husband and wife and the heirs of their bodies, the issue by the second marriage inherits. 8. Rep. Paine's case. It seems, that a gift in frank marriage goes to the heirs between the donees only; but a gift to husband and wife, and to the heirs of their bodies, goes to the heir of the body of the survivor for want of issue between them. Vid. tamen. Plowd. Comment. 251.—Hal. MSS.—Lord Hale must be here understood to speak of gifts at common law.—See the preceding note.—(4) In 1. Ro. Abr. 841. it is said, that if land had been given to one and his heirs males of his body, and afterwards he had issue a male and a female, and afterwards the male died, the female should have inherited the land. 18. E. 3. 46. 18. Aff. 58. are cited as authorities to prove this to have been the common law in respect to fees conditional; but Lord Coke's doctrine here is contra, and serjeant Rolle refers to it as being so; and in respect to estates in tail male it has been long settled, that a female cannot inherit by conveying her descent through a male. See Post. 25. a. and b.—(5) In another book Lord Coke says, that

[4] 45. Aff. p. 6.

[7] Pl. Com. 246. b.
(Post. 392. 370. b.)

10. Co. 38. in Post. case.

Doct. and Stud. lib. 2. ca. 55.

(Plowd. 555. 2. Ro. Abr. 780.)
[r] 24. H. 8. tit. feoffments al uses 4. 27. H. 8. fo.[f] Pach. 14. Jac. in the King's bench.

Vid. sect. 1.

(Ante 6. a.)

conditionalibus had made a gift to a man, and to the heires of his bodie begotten, the donee post prolem suscitatum might have aliened as well as in the case of a common person. [4] But if the donee had no issue, and before the statute had aliened with warrantie, and died, and the warrantie had descended upon the king, this should not have bound the king of his reversion without assents: but otherwise it was in the case of a common person (1) [7] Of the other side, if lands had beene given to the king and to the heires of his bodie, he could not before issue have aliened in fee, but onely to have barred his issue as a common person might have done, but not to have barred the reversion, for that should have beene a wrong in the case of a subject, and the king's prerogative cannot alter his case, nor make it greater, than the donor gave unto him, and it is a maxime in law, that the king can do no wrong. When all estates were fee simple, then were purchasers sure of their purchases, farmers of their leases, creditors of their debts, the king and lords had their escheats forfeitures wardships and other profits of their seignories: and for these and other like cases, by the wisdom of the common law all estates of inheritance were fee simple, and what contentions and mischiefs have crept into the quiet of the law by these fettered inheritances, daillie experience teacheth us (2). But fee more of this matter in the aforesaid chapter of warrantie, sect. 746.

Common ley. See for explication hereof, sect. 170.

Come appeirt per le rehersall de mesme le statute. Here, by the authoritie of our author, the rehearsall or preamble of a statute is to be taken for truth; for it cannot be thought, that a statute that is made by authoritie of the whole realme, as well of the king, as of the lords spirituall and temporall, and of all the commons, will recite a thing against the truth.

Et ore per cel statute tenant en taile est en 2. manners, s. tenant en tayle generall, et tenant en tayle especiall.

This division of an estate taile is perfect and sound, for the membra dividenda, viz. generall and speciall are converted properly with the thing defined, and they are proved by many authorities of law, and approved of all learned men, and so are all the divisions through all his three bookes, which the studious and diligent reader will observe. And how excellent and difficult a thing it is to divide rightly and properly, especially in the law, the learned do know.

By this statute the land is as it were appropriated to the tenant in taile, and to the heires of his body; and therefore [r] if an estate be made, either before or since the statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. to a man and the heires of his bodie, either to the use of another and his heires, or to the use of himselfe and his heires, this limitation of use is utterly voyde. For before the said statute of 27. H. 8. he could not have executed the estate to the use, and so was it adjudged [f] in an electione firmæ between John Cowper plaintife, and Thomas Franklin, &c. defendant (3).

Sect. 14, 15.

TERRES, Terra, in his generall and legall signification, (as hath been said before) includeth not onely all kinde of grounds, as meadow, pasture, wood, &c. but houses and all edifices whatsoever. In a more restrained sense it is taken for arable ground.

Tenements, tenementa. This is the only word which the said statute of W. 2. that created estates taile, useth; and it includeth, not only all corporate inheritances, which are or may be holden, but also all inheritances issuing out of any of

*T*enant en taile generall est, lou terres ou tenements sont dones a un home et a ses heires de son corps engendres. En ceo case est dit generall taile, pur ceoque quelcunque feme, que tiel tenant espousa, (sil avoit plusors femes, et per chescune de eux il ad issue) uncore chescun de les issues

*T*enant in taile, generall is, where lands or tenements are given to a man, and to his heires of his bodie begotten. In this case it is said generall taile, because whatsoever woman, that such tenant taketh to wife, (if he hath many wives; and by every of them hath issue) yet everie one of these issues by that a formedon in descender lay not at common law. See 2 Inst. 33. But this seeming contradiction may perhaps be reconciled, by observing, that in the latter book Lord Coke is commenting on that part of the statute de donis, which gives a formedon in descender, notwithstanding alienation by the donees, where the gift was to husband and wife, and to the issue between them, or in frank marriage. In such a case the alienation by the donees certainly bound the issue at common law, and consequently before the statute they could not have a formedon in descender. But in the case here put by Lord Coke the wife only was the donee, and her alienation was merely by deed, which during coverture was insufficient to bind either her or her issue. However, it is proper to mention, that according to some authorities the writ of mortdancestor was the proper remedy for the issue at common law, and that the only case, in which the issue could have a formedon in descender before the statute, was, where by reason of some special circumstances he could not have an assise of mortdancestor. To illustrate this the following case has been given. A man hath issue a son by one wife, she dies, and he marries again, and land is given to him and his second wife and the heires of their bodies, and they have a son, and afterwards they both die, and then a stranger abates. Here it is said, that the son by the second wife could not have mortdancestor, because one point of that writ is to enquire who is next heir to the father, and the son by the first wife is the heir to the father; and therefore, that formedon in descender lay at common law for this special case, because otherwise the son by the second wife would have been without remedy for the freehold. See Plowd. 239.—(1) But Lord Coke in another book says, that though such alienation bound the issue, yet it did not bar the king's possibility of reverter, as it would that of common persons. See the earl of Cornwall's case cited Post 370. b. and in Holt's case 9. Co. 132. b.—(2) Lord Coke in many other places is very strong in his representation of the inconveniences produced by the statute de donis. See Post. 370. b. and Mildmay's case 6. Co. 40. a.—(3) But in Godbolt's report of Franklin and Cooper, it is said to have been resolved, that tenant in tail might stand seized to an use expressed, but that an use could not be averred. Lord Bacon also gives it as his opinion, that an estate tail may be to uses since the statute for executing uses, and controverts the reasons for doubting it before. Bac. Law Tracts, 8vo ed. 347. See a great number of authorities on this subject in Vin. Abr. Uses C.

per possibilitie poit enheriter les tenements per force del done; pur ceo que chescun tiel issue est de sa corps engendre.

possibilitie may inherit the tenements by force of the gift; because that everie such issue is of his bodie ingendred.

EN mesme le maner est, lou terres outenements sont dones a un feme, et a ses heires de sa corps issuant. Coment que el avoit divers barons, uncore l'issue, que el poit aver per chescun baron, poit enheriter come issue en le taile per force de tiel done; et pur ceo tielx dones sont appelles generall tailles.

IN the same manner it is, where lands and tenements are given to a woman, and to the heires of her bodie, albeit that she hath divers husbands, yet the issue, which she may have by every husband may inherit as issue in taile by force of this gift; and therefore such gifts are called generall tailles.

those inheritances, or concerning, or annexed to, or exercisable within the same; though they lie not in tenure, therefore all these without question may be intailed. As [1] rents, estovers, commons or other profits whatsoever granted out of land; or uses, offices, dignities which concerne lands or certaine places, may be entailed within the said statute; because all these favour of the realtie. But if the grant be of an inheritance mere personal, or to be exercised about chattels, and is not issuing out of land, nor concerning any land, or some certaine place, such inheritances cannot be intailed, because they favour nothing of the realtie: But examples will illustrate and make this learning cleere.

The writ of assise [u] was De libero tenemento, and made his plaint of the office of the fourth part of the serjeant of the common place, and the writ adjudged good, and seeing that a man hath a free-

[1] 7. E. 3. 363. 18. E. 3. 27. 7. H. 6. 8. 32. H. 6. 28. 5. E. 4. 3. 1. H. 7. 28. 4. H. 7. 9. 1. H. 5. 1. H. 8. fol. 3. Nevil's case 7. Co. 33. 34. Pl. Com. in Manxell's case fol. 2. & 3. (7. Co. 33. 11. Co. 1. 1. Ro. Abr. 837-8. 10. Co. 87.)

[u] 7. Aff. p. 12. 7. E. 6. 1. (Fitzh. N. B. 178. f.)

hold, liberum tenementum in it, by consequent it may be intailed.

The office of the keeping of the church of our lady of Lincolne was intailed, and a form-don there brought upon that gift of the office by the issue in taile. The [x] office of the marshall of England intailed (1). The [y] office of one of the chamberlains of the exchequer intailed. 1. H. 7. 28. The office of a forresterishp intailed. 4. H. 7. 10. 9. E. 4. 56. b. Charters intailed (2). 19. H. 8. 3. Use intailed. Nomination to a benefice intailed.

18 E. 3. 27. [x] 5. E. 4. 3. 10. E. 4. 14. [y] 11. E. 4. 1. 1. H. 7. 28. 4. H. 7. 10. 9. E. 4. 526. 19. H. 8. 3. 1. H. 5. 1.

Also a name of dignitie may be intailed within the statute, [a] as dukes, marquesses, earles, viscounts, barons; because they be named of some countie, mannor, towne, or place (3). If the issue in taile [b] in a form-don in the descender be barred by a false verdict, his release is no barre to his issue, albeit the action is at the common law.

[a] 7. Co. 33. 34. Nevil's case. 28. H. 6. Lord Veieye's case. (6. Co. 7. b. Post 392. b. 1. Sid. 261.)

The like law is of a writ of error, 3. Eliz. Dyer 188. If a gift in taile be made with warrantie, the donee releases the warrantie, this shall not bind the issue in taile; for to all these cases and the like the said statute doth extend.

[b] 14. Aff. 2. 3. Eliz. Dyer 188.

But if I grant to a man, and to the heires of his body, to be keeper of my hounds, or master of my horse, or to be my falconer, or such like with a fee therefore, yet these cannot be intailed within the said statute, for that they be not issuing out of tenements, nor annexed to, or exercisable within, or concerning lands or tenements of freehold or inheritance, but concerning chattels, and favour nothing of the realtie. And so it is, if I by my deed for me and my heires grant an annuities to a man, and the heires of his body; for that this only chargeth my person, and concerneth no land, nor savoureth of the realtie (4). In all these cases he hath a fee conditionall, as they were before the statute, and the grantee by his grant or release may barre his heire, as he might have done at the common law, for that in these cases he is not restrained by the said statute (5).

Pl. Com. in Manxell's case. (10. Co. 58. 1. Ro. Abr. 837.)

Et a ses heires de son corps engendres. In gifts in taile these words (heires) are as necessary, as in feoffments and grants; for seeing every estate taile was a fee simple at the common law, and at the common law no fee simple could be in feoffments and grants without these words (heires), and that an estate in fee taile is but a cut or restrained fee, it followeth, that in gifts in a man's life time no estate can be created without these words (heires), unlesse it be in case of frankmarriage, as hereafter shall be shewed. And where Littleton saith (heires) yet (heire) in the singular number in a speciall case

(1) See in W. Jo. 96 and Collins's Claims of Bar. 183. an account of the original grant and intail of the office of earl marshal, by Crew chief justice in his argument of the case about the office of great chamberlain of England. In this last case the right, to the great chamberlain's office was contested between an heir male claiming under an intail 9. Eliz. by one of the Vere family, who was then seized of the office in fee, and the heir general claiming under the limitations of the original grant from the crown. Crew chief justice spoke in the house of lords for the heir male; but a majority of the other judges, amongst whom was Doderidge, gave their opinion for the heir general, upon the principle, that this high office, like a title of honour, was inherent in the blood of the first grantee, and incapable of alienation.—(2) But if the tail be barred by collateral warrantie, detinue will lie for the charters. Hal. MSS.—See 9. E. 4. 52. b.—(3) There are many titles of dignity without any place. Hal. MSS.—In the King and Knollys 1. L. Raym. 13. lord chief justice Holt says, that naming a place is not essential to the creation of a dignity, and mentions the earldom of Rivers as an instance. But it has been held, that if the king grants a dignity to one and the heirs male of his body, without naming any place, the grantee shall have a fee conditional, and not an estate tail, as he would have if a place had been mentioned. See 12. Co. 81. where this was adjudged in the case of a baronet. However, though dignities and titles of honour having relation to some place are intailable by the crown as tenements within the statute de donis, yet neither the donee nor his issue can bar the intail by fine, recovery, or any other means, as may be done in the case of other intailable things. See Lord Purbeck's case, Show. Parl. Caf. 1. and Collins's Claims of Bar. 293. in which it was adjudged, that the surrender of a dignity to the crown by fine was void.—Note, that in Lord Purbeck's case his counsel distinguished between ancient honours, as being feodary and officary and having relation to a place, from modern dignities as being merely titular and personal, notwithstanding the formality of naming a place in the creation; and from thence infer, that the latter are not within the statute de donis.—(4) See the case of the earl of Stafford and Buckley, 2. Vef. 170. in which lord chief justice Hardwicke held, that an annuity in fee, granted by the crown out of the 4½ per cent. duties payable for exports and imports at Barbadoes, was merely a personal inheritance, and not intailable within the statute de donis. Accordingly to a manuscript note of the same case, lord Hardwicke, in giving his opinion, said, that an annuity out of the revenue of the post office or excise lavours no more of the realty than money.—(5) Two things seem essential to an intail within the statute de donis. One requisite is, that the subject be land or some other thing of a real nature. The other requisite is, that the estate in it be an inheritance. Therefore neither estates pur autre vie in lands, though limited to the grantee and his heirs during the life of cestui que vie, nor terms for years, are intailable any more than personal chattels; because as the latter, not being either interests in things real or of inheritance, want both requisites, so the two former, though interests in things real, yet not being also of inheritance, are deficient in one requisite. However, estates pur autre vie, terms for years, and personal chattels, may be so settled, as to answer the purposes of an intail, and be rendered unalienable almost for as long a time, as if they were intailable in the strict sense of the word. Thus estates pur autre vie may be devised or limited in strict settlement by way of remainder like estates of inheritance; and such as have interests in the nature of estates tail may bar their issue

Lib. I. Cap. 2. Of Fee taile. Sect. 16.

39. Aff. p. 20. 20. H. 6. 35. 5.
H. 4. 7. b. 14. H. 4. 15.
(Post. 385. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 849.
8. Co. 57. 1. Co. 103. b. Ante
9 b.)

(Cro. Eliz. 121. Ow. 64. S. C.
Mo. 103.)
Vid. Shelley's case. 1. Co.

(1. Ro. Abr. 837.)

(7. Co. 41.)
[c] 3. E. 3. tit. Breve. 743. 3. E.
3. tit. Estates.

[d] 12. H. 4. 2.

[e] 37. H. 6. 15.

[f] 5. H. 5. 6. (7. Co. 41.)

[g] 12. H. 4. 2. per Horton.

(Post. 27. a. 26. b. 220. a.)

13. E. 2. tit. Bre. 836.

24. E. 3. 28.

(7. Co. 41. Ow. 153.)

[a] 5. H. 7. 10. 11. E. 3. Form-don 30. Pl. Com. 35.

[b] 10. Co. 120. Chudley's case.
40. Aff. pl. 15. 34. Aff. Pl. 1.
Fleta lib. 5. c. 34.

(Plowd. 35. Post. 25. b. F. N.
B. 205. b. Post. 204. a. 1. Ro.
Abr. 419.)

case may create an estate taile, as it appeareth by 39. Aff. p. 20. hereafter mentioned (1). And yet if a man give lands to A, et hæredibus de corpore suo, the remainder to B, in forma prædicta, this is a good estate taile to B, for that in forma prædicta do include the other. If a man letteth lands to A for life, the remainder to B in taile, the remainder to C in forma prædicta, this remainder is void for the incertantie. But if the remainder had beene, the remainder to C in eadem forma, this had beene a good estate taile, for idem semper proximo antecedenti refertur. If a man give lands or tenements to a man et femini suo or exilibus vel prolibus de corpore suo, to a man and to his seed, or to the issues or children of his body, he hath but an estate for life; for albeit that the statute provideth, that voluntas donatoris secundum formam in charta doni sui manifestè expressam de cætero observetur, yet that will and intent must agree with the rules of law. And of this opinion was our author himselfe, as it appeared in his learned reading a-forementioned upon this statute, where he holdeth, if a man giveth land to a man et exilibus de corpore suo legitime procreatis, or femini suo, he hath but an estate for life, for that there want-eth words of inheritance (2).

De son corps. These words are not so strictly required but that they may be expressed by words that amount to as much: for the example that the statute of W. 2. putteth hath not these words (de corpore), but these words (hæredibus) viz. Cum aliquis dat terram suam alicui viro et ejus uxori et hæredibus de ipsius viro et muliere procreatis. If lands be given [c] to B, et hæredibus quos idem B de prima uxore sua legitime procrearet, this is a good estate in especiall taile (albeit he hath no wife at that time) without these words (de corpore). So it is [d] if lands be given to a man, and to his heires which he shall beget of his wife, [e] or to a man et hæredibus de carne sua, or to a [f] man et hæredibus de se. In all these cases these be good estates in taile, and yet these words de corpore are omitted.

It is holden [g] by some opinion, that if there be grandfather father and sonne, and lands are given to the grandfather, and to his heires begotten by the father, the father dyeth, the grandfather dyeth, the sonne is in as heire to the grandfather begotten upon the body of his father, and the wife of the grandfather in that case shall be endowed. But certaine it is, that in some cases one shall have the land per formam doni that is not issue of the body of the donee, which see section 30.

Engendres. This word may in many cases be omitted or expressed by the like, and yet the estate in taile is good: as, hæredibus de carne, hæredibus de se, hæredibus quos sibi contigerit, &c. as is aforesaid, and where the word of Littleton is, engendred, or begotten, procreatis, yet if the word be procreandis or quos procreaverit, the estate in taile is good; and as procreatis shall extend to the issues begotten afterwards, so procreandis shall extend to the issues begotten before (3).

Sect. 16.

A Un home & sa feme. [a] Then put the case that lands be given to a man and a woman unmarried, and the heires of their two bodies: for the apparent possibilitie to marry, they have an estate taile in them presently. [b] So it is where lands be given to the husband of A, and to the wife of B, and the heires of their bodies, they have presently an estate in taile, in respect of the possibilitie. If a feme sole do encoiffe a married man causa matrimonii prælocuti, it is good for the possibilitie. But put the case that the premises and the habendum be in other manner than Littleton hath put, and let us see

Tenant en taile specialle est, lout terres ou tenements sont dones a un home et a sa feme, et a les heires de leur deux corps engendres. En tiel case nul poet inheriter per force de ledit done, fors que ceux que sont engendres perenter eux deux. Et est appelle speciall taile, pur ceo que si la feme devy, et il prent auter feme, et ad issue, l'issue del se-

Tenant in taile speciall is, where lands or tenements are given to a man and to his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten. In this case none shall inherit by force of this gift, but those that be engendred between them two. And it is called especiall taile, because if the wife die, and he taketh another wife, and have issue, the is-issue and all remainders over by alienation of the estate pur autre vie, as those, who are strictly speaking tenants in tail, may do by fine and recovery; but then the having of issue is not an essential preliminary to the power of alienation in the case of an estate pur autre vie limited to one and the heirs of his body, as it is in the case of a conditional fee, from which the mode of barring by alienation was evidently borrowed. The manner of settling terms for years and personal chattels is different, for in them no remainders can be limited; but they may be intailed by executory devise or by deed of trust, as effectually as estates of inheritance, if it is not attempted to render them unalienable beyond the duration of lives in being and 21 years after, and perhaps in the case of a posthumous child a few months more; a limitation of time, not arbitrarily prescribed by our courts of justice, but wisely and reasonably adopted in analogy to the case of freeholds of inheritance, which cannot be so limited by way of remainder as to postpone a complete bar of the entail by fine or recovery for a longer space. It is also proper to observe, that in the case of terms of years and personal chattels, the vesting of an interest, which in realty would be an estate tail, bars the issue and all the subsequent limitations, as effectually as fine and recovery in the case of estates intailable within the statute de donis, or a simple alienation in the case of conditional fees and estates pur autre vie; and further, that if the executory limitations of personality are on contingencies too remote, the whole property is in the first taker. Upon the whole, by a series of decisions within the last two centuries, and after many struggles in respect to personality, it is at length settled, that every species of property is in substance equally capable of being settled in the way of entail; and though the modes vary according to the nature of the subject, yet they tend to the same point, and the duration of the entail is circumscribed almost as nearly within the same limits, as the difference of property will allow. As to the entail of estates pur autre vie, see 2. Vern. 184. 225. 3. P. Wms. 262. 1. Atk. 524. 2. Atk. 259. 376. 3. Atk. 464. and 2. Vef. 681. As to the entail of terms for years and personal chattels, see Manning's case, 8. Co. 94. Lampert's case, 10. Co. 46. b. Child and Bailey, W. Jo. 15. Duke of Norfolk's case, 3. Cha. Caf. 1. a case in Carth. 267. and one in 1. P. Wms. 1. See also Fearn's Essay on Conting. Rem. and Exec. Dev. 2d ed. p. 122. to the end. Mr. Fearn's work is so very instructive on the dry and obscure subject of remainders and executory devises, that it cannot be too much recommended to the attention of the diligent student.—Note, it was resolved in the 40. Eliz. that the statute de donis doth not extend to the Isle of Man, because the statute is general, and the Isle of Man is not specially named. See 4. Inst. 284. 2. And. 215. and 2. Vef. 350. See also ante 9. a. where the following note by lord Hale in respect to the case of the Isle of Man, there mentioned by lord Coke to have been adjudged in 40. Eliz. should have been introduced; though as it partly relates to the statute de donis, it may come in here without any impropriety. Nota, William earl of Salisbury got Man from the Scots, and granted it to William Scroop. Hen. 4. claiming it by conquest from him, granted it comiti Northumbrie, and on his attainder granted it to Sir John Stanley and his heirs; and in this case ruled, 1. That Man is not parcel of England. 2. That it is bound by statutes of England where specially named, otherwise not. Therefore the statutes de donis, of uses, of wills, not in force there; and it descends to the coheirs of Ferdinando, and not to his brother William earl of Derby. Hal. MSS.—As to the entail of copyholds, see Post 60. a.—(1) See this case Post. 22. a.—(2) But devise to one et hæredibus legitime procreatis is tail. H. 43. El. C. B. rot. 1408. Moor case 711. but contra by act executed 7. Rep. 41. b.—Dormer's case. If lands be limited by deed to the use of I. S. and hæredum masculorum suorum legitime procreatorum, remainder over, it is a fee simple; but if it be hæredum masculorum de se, or in English, the heirs of him lawfully begotten, especially where there is a remainder over, it is tail, 7. Rep. 41. Bedeli's case. Dormer's case H. 38. Eliz. B. R. rot 739 Hal. MSS.—(3) 10. E. 3. 19. Adjudged accordingly. Hal. MSS. But it is held, that, where the words were in posterum procreandis, sons born before

cond feme ne ferra jammes inheritable per force de tiel done, ne auxy liffue del second baron, si le prime baron devie.

due of the second wife shall not inherit by force of this gift, nor also the issue of the second husband, if the first husband die.

said) via versa, if lands be given to a man and to his heires in the premises, habendum to him and to the heires of his bodie, that he hath an estate taile, and a fee simple expectant. But vid. lib. 8. fo. 154. b. otherwise resolved, ut patet ibi (2). [d] If lands be given to B and his heires, to have and to hold to B and his heires, if B have heires of his bodie, and if he die without heires of his bodie that it shall revert to the donor, this is adjudged an estate taile, and the reversion in the donor. [e] For voluntas donatoris in charta donisui manifeste expressa observetur; and therefore in the case next precedent, if these or the like words be added (and if he die without heires of his bodie, that the lands shall revert to the donor) that then the habendum shall by authoritie of divers bookes be construed upon the whole deed, to be a limitation or a declaration, what heires are meant in the premises, to inherit, and in that case the reversion is in the donor (3).

[f] If a man make a charter of feoffment of an acre of land to A and his heires, and another deed of the same acre to A and the heires of his bodie, and deliver seisin according to the forme and effect of both deeds, in this case he cannot take a fee simple onely, as some hold, for that liverie was made according to the deed in taile, as well as to the charter in fee, neither can the livery enure onely to the deed of estate taile with a fee simple expectant, for that liverie was made as well upon the deed in fee simple, as the deed in taile. Therefore others hold, that in that case it shall enure by moities, that is, to have an estate taile in the one moitie, with the fee simple expectant, and a fee simple in the other moitie: and so the liverie shall worke immediately upon both deeds (4).

what the law is in these cases. [c] (1) As if a man in the premises give lands to another and the heires of his bodie, habendum to him and his heires for ever; it hath beene holden that in this case he hath an estate taile, and a fee simple expectant. And so (it is

[c] 21. H. 6. 7. (Perk. Sect. 18. 170. 2. Sid. 78. 8. Co. 56. b. 8. Co. 154. Plowd. 147. 2. Ro. Abr. 680.)

[d] 30. Aff. p. 47. 35. Aff. p. 14. 37. Aff. 15. 5. H. 5. 6. (2. Ro. Abr. 68. Cro. Jam. 595. 290. 427. 448.)

[e] W. 2. ca. 22.

[f] 2. H. 6. 25. 45. E. 3. 20. (Vid. 5. Co. 25. where two fines are levied.)

Sect. 17.

EN mesme le maner est, lou tenements sont dones per un home a un autre ove un feme, que est la file ou cousin al donour en frankmariage, le quel done, ad un enheritance per ceux parolx (frankmariage) a ceo annexe, coment que ne soit expressement dit, ou reherce en le done, cestasavoir, que les donees averont les tenements a eux et a leur heires perenter eux deux engendres. Et ceo est dit especial taile; pur ceo que l'issue del se-

IN the same manner it is, where tenements are given by one man to another, with a wife (which is the daughter or cousin to the giver) in frankmariage (5), the which gift hath an enheritance by these words (frankmariage) annexed unto it, although it be not expressly said or rehearsed in the gift (that is to say) that the donees shall have the tenements to them and to their heires betweene them two begotten. And this is called especial taile, because

A Un home ove un feme. Albeit the gift is made of the land to the man with his daughter, &c. yet is the gift good to them both in speciall taile, and therefore that of Stephen de la More in [g] 5. E. 3. is very remarkable, where the case was, that Robert gave the reversion of lands which Agnes his wife did hold for her life to Stephen de la More, habendum post mortem dictæ Agnetis in liberum maritagium cum Johanna filia ejusdem Roberti, and it is adjudged that it is a good estate taile. Wherein three things are to be observed, first that Joane the daughter took with her husband an estate in especiall taile, albeit the were named but under a cum, viz. cum Johanna, &c. (7). 2. That cum doth come after the habendum, for that it is but all one sentence. 3. That these words, in liberum maritagium, doe create an estate of inheritance in especiall taile as Littleton

Vid. Sect. 19. 20. (2. Ro. Abr. 67.)

5. E. 3. 17. [g] This case is vouched in Pl. Com. 158. to be in 4. E. 3. which being not found (6) in that year it is there so left without any further reference, but you shall find it as above said in 5. E. 3. 17.

before shall be excluded on account of the peculiar force of in posterum. Adj. M. 26. Eliz. B. R. 3. Leon. 87.—(1) Where the estate in the premises shall be corrected by the habendum, if there happen to be a clause of warranty, 2. E. 2. Feoffments 94. Dedi Adamæ de B unam carucat. cum C filia mea in liberum maritagium, habendum Adamæ et hæredibus suis faciendi. forinsecum servitium; and warranty to Adam et hæredibus suis in perpetuum. After the death of Adam and his wife, their issue bring mortdancelor; and ruled, that it doth not lie, but formedon, because tail, 10. E. 3. 25. Sciatis me dedisse Edmundo et Aliciæ filiarum mearum et hæredibus suis in liberum maritagium, habendum et tenendum dictis E et A et hæredibus suis in liberum maritagium. If the gift be before the statute de donis, it is only frankmariage; if after the statute, it is tail with fee expectant. Vid. 10. H. 6. 16.—19. H. 6. 74. Gift to A, and if he dies without heir of his body reverter to the donor, it is not tail; but if it was by devise, it is tail. Hal. MSS.—(2) The resolution in 8. Co. 54. b. is, that here the words heirs of the body in the habendum qualify the word heirs in the premises, and therefore that there shall be an estate tail without any fee expectant. See acc. Mo. 26. In the case in Cro. Jam. 476. and 2. Ro. Rep. 19. 23. such words were held adjudged to pass tail and fee expectant. But the case was attended with circumstances particularly shewing an intention to pass both; for there was a reservation of tenure to the lord paramount, which could not be if only an estate tail passed to the donee and the reversion had remained in the donor, for then the tenure must have been of the donor. Also there was a warranty to the grantee and his heirs. However, the court intimated, that their opinion would have been the same, if these special circumstances had not occurred. See further as to the operation of the habendum in explaining and qualifying the premises Post 183. and the note on lord Coke's doctrine against abridging the latter by the former, Post. 199. a. See also Vin. Abr. Grants I. K. L. M. and N.—(3) In a note in 1. P. Wms. 57. lord keeper Wright puts the case of a gift by deed to one and his heirs, and if he die without issue, remainder over, and holds, that the latter words restrain the former, and convert the fee into a tail.—(4) 7. E. 3. 64. Land given to husband and wife, and the heirs of the body of husband, and if the husband and wife die without heirs between them lawfully begotten, remainder over. It is only a tail general in the husband. Dy. 171. Devise to A and the heirs male of his body, and if he die without heirs of his body, remainder over, it is only tail male.—Vid. M. 9. Jac. inter Walslop and Derby. Devise to A in fee, and afterwards by the same will devise of the same land to B in fee, they are joint-tenants. Vid. 13. R. 2. brief 645. Land given to the father and the heirs of his body, remainder to his son in tail. It seems, the son has election to claim by descent or purchase. (It seems the remainder is void, because included in the first estate.) Hal. MSS.—(5) Before or after marriage. Dy. 147. Hal. MSS.—See acc. Post 21. b. and 176. a.—(6) The case is 4. E. 3. 4. Hal. MSS. (7) Dedi et concessi Johanni White in liberum maritagium Johannæ filiarum mearum habendum dicto tleton faith, le donee ad un cond feme ne poit in- the issue of the second inheritance per reason de ceux beriter, &c. wife may not inherit.

W. 2. ca. 1. 19. F. 3. tit. Taile. 1.

(1. Ro. Abr. 840.)

[6] 6. E. 3. 33. Fitz. N. B. 172.
7. E. 4. 12. 15. E. 2. Cui in vita; sect. 24.

[1] 4. E. 3. 31. E. 1. taile. 30.
Bracton. lib. 2. cap. 7.

[k] 22. R. 2. tit. Discent 50.
Fitz. N. B. 212. 9. H. 6. 35. b.
W. 2. ca. 1. acc.

[1] Temps H. 8. Br. frankmar.
11. 13. E. 1. formdon 63. Vid.
32. E. 1. taile. 25. 2. E. 2. Feoff-ment & faitz 9. 17. E. 3. 5. a.
45. E. 3. 20 (1. Ro. Abr. 840.)
[m] 20. E. 2. aid. 174. 31. E. 3.
Gard. 216.

[n] Bract. lib. 2. cap. 7. 32. E.
1. taile. 31. 13. H. 4. 74. 4. H.
6. 17. 26. Aff. 66. 31. E. 3.
gar. 29.

26. Aff. p. 66. per Wilbye.

[o] Bract. lib. 2. ca. 34. & 39.
& lib. 2. ca. 7. nu. 3. & 4.
Glanvil. lib. 7. ca. 1. & ca. 18.

Fleta lib. 3. ca. 1.

30. E. 1. tit. Formdon. 66. ad-judg. acc.
(2. Inst. 336.)

31. E. 3. tit. Gard. 116. Mirr.
cap. 2. sect. 15. acc.

9. H. 3. Dower. 202.

annex, coment que ne soit expressement dit, &c. But this had need of some interpretation, for if lands be given by these words (in frankmarriage), according to the rules of law, then do these words create an estate of inheritance in speciall taile: for the consideration of marriage is in that case more favoured in law, than any other consideration. But though the gift be in these words, yet if it be not consonant to the rules of law in other things requisite thereunto, there they create but an estate for life. And therefore to speak once for all, four things be incident to a frankmarriage. First, that it be given for consideration of marriage either to a man with a woman, or, as some have held, to a woman with a man. For in [b] 6. E. 3. 33. in Peirs de Saltmarsh his case, a man gave land to his sonne in frankmarriage, and Fitz. N. B. 172. taketh the law so also, and 7. E. 4. 12. per Moyle against a new opinion in temps H. 8. Br. tit. Frankmarriage the former bookes being not remembered. Secondly, that the woman or man, that is the cause of the gift [i] be of the blood of the donor; but it may be made as well after marriage as before, and it may be made with a widow, &c. Thirdly, if the gift be made of such a thing as lyeth in tenure, that the donees hold of the donor at the time of the estate in frankmarriage made. A rent service [k] may be given in frankmarriage, because it may be holden. And so may a rent charge or rent secke as Fitz N. B. holdeth, and it appeareth in our bookes that a common was granted in frankmarriage. (1) Fourthly, that the donees shall hold freely of the donor till the fourth degree be past. And therefore if land be given to a woman, with a sonne of the donor in frankmarriage, there passeth an inheritance; but if the donee that is the cause of the gift be not of the blood of the donor, then there passeth but an estate for life if livery be made. Also if [l] lands be given to a man with a woman of the blood of the donor in liberum maritagium, the remainder in fee either to a stranger or to the donees, they have no estate taile, because there is no tenure of the donor (2); but if [m] in that case, the remainder had beene limited to another in taile reserving the reversion in fee to the donor, there the said words (in liberum maritagium) create an inheritance, because the donees hold of the donor. And this is the cause that it is holden, that a man cannot devise land in frankmarriage because the donee cannot hold of the donor. And cesty que use before the statute of 27. H. 8. could not have made a gift in frankmarriage because the reversion was in the feoffees. [n] And if the donor doth give lands in liberum maritagium reserving a rent, this reservation shall take no effect till the fourth degree be past, but the frankmarriage is good, for if the reservation should be good, then could not the donees have an estate taile for want of words of the heires of their bodyes. (3).

En Frankmarriage. Liberum maritagium, free marriage; maritagium is taken for fee taile, and divideth maritagium into liberum et servitio obligatum: and herewith agreeth Bracton [o] lib. 2. cap. 34. and 39. Maritagium est aut liberum aut servitio obligatum, and lib. 2. ca. 7. nu. 3. & 4. liberum maritagium dicitur, ubi donator vult quod terra sic data quiescit sit et libera ab omni seculari servitio. And so, before Bracton, said Glanvil. lib. 7. ca. 18. Maritagium autem aliud nominatur liberum aliud servitio obnoxium; liberum dicitur maritagium, quando aliquis liber homo aliquam partem terræ suæ dat cum aliqua muliere in maritagium, ita quod ab omni servitio terra illa sit quiescit &c. And after both of them Fleta that followeth them both, lib. 3. cap. 1. faith, est autem quoddam maritagium liberum ab omni servitio solutum donatori vel ejus hæredi, &c. Et est similiter maritagium servitio obligatum et oneratum, &c. And these words (in liberum maritagium) are such words of art, and so necessarily required, as they cannot be expressed by words equipollent, or amounting to as much. As if a man give lands to a man with his daughter in connubio soluto ab omni servitio, &c. Yet there passeth in this case but an estate for life, for seeing that these words (in liberum maritagium) create an estate of inheritance against the generall rule of law, the law requireth that they should be legally pursued. But then it may be demanded if a man had given lands at the common law, in libero maritaggio, whether had the donees a fee simple without these words (heires) for that it appeareth by that which hath beene said before, that all gifts in taile were fee simple at the common law, and that the statute of W. 2. did not create any estate in fee taile, but out of an estate in fee simple. To this it is answered, that these words (in liberum maritagium) did create an estate in fee simple at the common law: and it is holden in 31. E. 3. gard. 116. Per ceux parolx in frankmarriage les donees averont les terres a eux et a leur heires par-enter eux engeudres, et ceo est dit especial taile. But yet betweene donees in frankmarriage and other donees in speciall taile there may be many notable diversities. If the king give land to a man and a woman, and the heires of their two bodies, and the woman die without issue, yet shall the man be tenant in taile apres possibilitie. But if the king give land to a man with a woman of his kindred in a frankmarriage, and the woman dyeth without issue, the man in the king's case shall not hold it for his life, because the woman was the cause of the gift; but other-
wife

dicto Johanni cum hæredibus suis in perpetuum de capitali domino feodi; and warranty to him and his heires. Ruled, that it is neither tail, nor frank-marriage, but fee simple only in the husband, and nothing in the wife. M. 23. and 24. El. C. B. Webb and Porter. Vid. contra 32. E. 1. tail 25. but 45. E. 3. 20. agrees. Hal. MSS.—See acc. the same case in Ow. 26. and Godb. 18. The same case is cited in Mo. 643. pl. 888.

(1) 14. E. 2. Aiel 1. Reversion granted by two in frank-marriage. Vid. 4. E. 3. 4. 26. E. 3. tail 27. Hal. MSS.

(2) But see the contrary of this Pasch. 40. Eliz. C. B. lord Barclay's case n. 11. and all the books here cited prove, that it is at least an estate tail, although no tenure, and it is accordingly adjudged 17. E. 3. 65. Vid. H. 43. El. B. R. rot. 140. between lord Barclay and the countess of Warwick. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. in Mo. 643. Cro. Eliz. 635. and 1. Ro. Abr. 750. but the point of frankmarriage is not reported in the two latter books.

(3) 13. H. 4. Mesne 74. 30. E. 3. 24. Gift in frankmarriage salvo forinfeco servitio good, and the donee shall hold in chivalry.—Hal. MSS.

wife it is in the case of a common person, if lands be given to a man and a woman in especiall taile and they are divorced causa præcontractus, both shall hold the lands for their lives; but in [p] case of frankmariage if they be so divorced, the woman shall enjoy the whole land, because she was the cause of the gift (1). If lands holden in focage [q] be given in especiall taile and the donees die the issue being within the age of 14 yeares, [r] the next of kinne of the part of the father or of the part of the mother which can hap the custody shall have it, but in case of frankmariage the heire of the part of the mother shall have it, because as it hath been said she was the cause of the gift.

7. H. 4. 16.

[p] 13. E. 3. tit. Aff. 19. E. 3. Aff. 83. 12. Aff. 22. 19. Aff. 2. 8. E. 3. Aff. 45. (F. N. B. 204.)
[q] Pl. Com. Carril's case.
[r] 17. H. 3. tit. Gard. 146 E. 3. 79.

. 27.

Sect. 18.

ET nota, quod hoc verbum (Talliare) idem est quod ad quandam certitudinem ponere, vel ad quoddam certum hæreditamentum limitare. Et per ceo que est limitet mis en certaine, quel issue inheriteraper force de tiels dones, et come longement l'enheritance endurera, il est appelle en Latin, feodum talliatum, i.e. hæreditas in quandam certitudinem limitata. Car si tenant in general taile morust sans issue, le donor ou ses heirs poient entrer come en leur reversion.

this limitation (hæredi) in the singular number the donees had not had a fee simple at the common law. Vide registrum judiciale, fo. 6. a gift made to a man et hæredi masculino de corpore suo (4).

AND note that this word (Talliare) is the same as, to set to some certaintie, or to limit to some certaine inheritance. And for that it is limited and put in certaine, what issue shall inherite by force of such gifts, and how long the inheritance shall indure, it is called in Latine, feodum talliatum. i. e. hæreditas in quandam certitudinem limitata. For if tenant in generall taile dieth without issue, the donor or his heires may enter as in their reversion (3).

ET nota. This, in our author throughout his three bookes, betokens some notable point of instruction worthy of more speciall observation, which is often [f] used by him as you may perceive by the sections noted in the margin (2).

Feodum talliatum i. e. hæreditas in quandam certitudinem limitata.

Here our author doth interpret what feodum talliatum is. Of all the estates taile most coercted or restrained, that I finde in our bookes, is the estate taile in 39. Aff. Pl. 20. where lands were given to a man and to his wife and to one heire of their bodies lawfully begotten, and to one heire of the body of that heire only, this case being adjudged in the point is an exception (some say) out of the generall rule put before by Littleton. sect 13. that all estates tailles were fee simple at the common law; for (say they) by not had a fee simple at the

[f] Sect. 18. 37. 42. 43. 49. 50. 64. 72. 89. 90. 104. 108. 114. 116. 147. 158. 161. 168. 170. 183. 254. 279. 346. 387. 452. 467. 618. 619. 637. 642. 670. 682. 684. 711. 717. 719. 738.

West. 2. cap. 3. Pl. Com. 251.

39. Aff. pl. 20.
(1. Co. 66. 104. Ante 8. b. 1; Ro. Abr. 838.)

Sect. 13.

Vid. Pl. Com. fo. 29. b.

Regist. Judic. fo. 6.

Sect 19.

EN mesme le maner est del tenant en special taile, &c. Car en chescun done en le taile sauns plus ouster dire, le reversion del fee simple est en le donor. Et les donees et

IN the same manner it is of the tenant in especiall taile, &c. For in every gift in taile without more saying, the reversion of the fee simple is in the donor. And the donees and

EN chescun done en taile sans plus ouster dire, le reversion del fee simple est en le donor.

This is wrought by the construction of the statute of W. 2. cap. 1. which hath turned the fee simple of the donee into a particular estate of inheritance, and the possibility of the donor to a reversion in him expectant upon the estate taile, fo

(2. Inst. 331. 333.)

(1) Kelw. 104. b. Accord. Hal. MSS. See also acc. Perk. sect. 238.

(2) Lord Coke seems to lay too much stress on Littleton's use of nota, &c. and other words of a like kind. In the edition by Lettoun and Machlinia &c. is frequently omitted, and item is very often put where the other editions have nota, and vice versa. This shews, how very uncertain it is, whether any peculiar force ought to be attributed to such words. Indeed where they really come from Littleton himself, they must in general be too slight a foundation for any considerable inference.

(3) The issue in tail attained in vita patris; after the death of the father the donor cannot enter, but the issue, if pardoned may enter, and hold as special occupant subject to the charges of the father, 29. Aff. 61.—Hal. MSS.

(4) In the case of Richards and lady Bergavenny 2. Vern. 325. the court held a limitation to lady Bergavenny and such heir of her body as should be living at her death, with a remainder over, to be an estate tail. But see further on this subject ante fol. 8. b. n. 4. where several authorities are referred to in order to enable the student to find in what case heir in the singular number ought to be construed nomen collectivum.

[r] 12. E. 4. 23. 5. H. 7. 14.
West. 2. ca. 13. Pl. Com. 247.
248. 251. 562. 2. E. 2. tit. ref. ce 147. 33. H. 6. 27. 39. E. 3.
18. 45. E. 3. 20.

(Post. 142. b. Plowd. 157. 162.
196. 197. Cro. Cha. 400.)

so as there be two inheritances of one land, yet this was doubted in our bookes [r] and there resolved according to Littleton. But I see no cause wherefore that point should be drawne in question, for at the same session of parliament (in which the statute de donis conditionalibus was made) viz. ca. 3. it is expressly said, vel per donum in quo reservatur reversionis, so as by the judgement of the same parliament a reversion was settled in the donor.

Le reversion del fee simple est en le donor.

A reversion is (2) where the residue of the estate always doth continue in him that made the particular estate, or where the particular estate is derived out of his estate, as here in the case of Litt. Tenant in fee simple, maketh gift in taile, so it is of a lease for life, or for years. If a man extend lands by force of a statute merchant, staple, recognizance or elegit, he leaveth a reversion in the donor.

[a] 27. H. 8. ca. 10. (Cro. Cha. 24. 1. Ro. Abr. 625. 1. Co. 104. b. 2. Co. 91. 2. Ro. Abr. 417. 1. Leon. 182.)

[A] 38. E. 3. 26. 27. E. 3. age 118. 24. E. 3. 36. 40. E. 3.

[c] Tr. 31. Eliz. inter Fenwicke & Mitford, 32. H. 8. gard. 93. 28. H. 8. Dier. 8. 9. 10. &c. Buckenham's case. 5. Marie. Dier. 163. (1. Ro. Abr. 828. Mo. 284.)

[d] 1. H. 5. 8. 4. H. 6. 20. 9. Eliz. Dier. Bromley's case.

[e] Dier. 5. Marie 156. Groswold's case adjudge. Bendlowes Serjant in his report agreeth. (Hob. 30. 33. 1. Mod. 237. 1. 1. Ro. Rep. 240.)

[f] 20. Eliz. Dier.

leur issues ferront al leur issues ferront al donor et a ses heires autielx services, come le donor fait a son seignior prochein a luy paramount, forsprise les donees in frankmarriage, les queux tiendront quietment de chescun manner de service, sinon que soit per fealtie tanque le quart degree soit passe, et apres ceo que le quart degree soit passe lissue en le cinque degree, et issint ouster lautres des issues apres luy, tiendront del done on ses heires come ils teignent ouster, come il en avant dit.

their issue shall do to the donor, and to his heires the like services, as the donor doth to his lord next paramount, except the donees in frankmarriage who shall hold quietly from all manner of service (unless it be for fealtie) untill the fourth degree is past, and after the fourth degree is past the issue in the fifth degree, and so forth the other issues after him, shall hold of the donor or of his heires as they hold over, as before is said.

But since Littleton wrote, the description must be more large upon the statute of [a] 27. H. 8. for at this day, if a man seised of lands in fee make a feoffment in fee, (and depart with his whole estate) and limit the use to his daughter for life, and after her decease, to the use of his sonne, in taile, and after to the use of the right heires of the feoffor: in this case, albeit he departed with the whole fee simple by the feoffment, and limited no use to himselfe, yet hath he a reversion (2); [b] for whosoever the ancestor takes an estate for life, and after a limitation is made to his right heires, the right heires shall not be purchasers. And here in this case when the limitation is to his right heires, and right heire he cannot have during his life (for non est habes viventis) the law doth create an use in him during his life, untill the future use commeth in esse, and consequently the right heires cannot be purchasers, and no diversitie when the law creates the estate for life, and when the party. And all this was adjudged betwene [c] Fenwicke and Mitford in the King's Bench, and if the limitation had been to the use of himselfe for life, and after to the use of another in taile, and after to the use of his owne right heires, the reversion of the fee had been in him, because the use of the fee continued ever in him (3); and the statute doth execute the possession to the use in the same plight, qualitie, and degree, as the use was limited.

[d] If a man make a gift in taile, or a lease for life, the remainder to his owne right heires, this remainder is void, and he hath the reversion in him, for the ancestor during his life beareth in his body (in judgment of law) all his heires, and therefore it is truly said, that habes est pars antecessoris. And this appeareth in a common case, that if land be given to a man and his heires, all his heires are so totally in him, as he may give the lands to whom he will.

[e] So it is if a man be seised of lands in fee, and by indenture make a lease for life, the remainder to the heires male of his owne body, this is a void remainder; for the donor cannot make his owne right heire a purchaser of an estate taile without departing of the whole fee simple out of him (4): as if a man make a feoffment in fee to the use of himselfe for life, and then to the use of the heires males of his body, this is a good estate taile executed in himselfe, and the limitation is good by way of use, because it is raised out of the state of the feoffees, which the feoffor departed with, and that is apparent, for a limitation of use to himselfe had without question beene good.

[f] If a man make a feoffment in fee to the use of himselfe in taile, and after to the use of the feoffee in fee, the feoffee hath no reversion, but in nature of a remainder, albeit the feoffor have the estate taile executed in him by the statute, and the feoffee is in by the common law, which is worthy of observation.

To

(1) By what words a reversion will pass, see Vin. Abr. Reversion. G. and Com. Dig. Estates B. 12.

(2) Vid. 3. & 4. P. & M. Dy. 134. contra. Hal. MSS. But see the case cited by lord Hale in the next note, and also ante 12. b. and note 2. there.

(3) Casus Com. Bedford M. 34 35 Eliz. Poph. n. 8. Feoffment to the use of the feoffor for 40 years, remainder to B in tail, remainder to the right heirs of the feoffor. It is the old reversion, and the feoffor may devise it; for the use returned to the feoffor for want of consideration to retain it in the feoffee till the death of the feoffor. Hal. MSS.—See the earl of Bedford's case in Poph. 3. Vid. 27. E. 3. 8. 4. H. 6. 20. 42. Aff. 2. 9. E. 3. 14. 10. E. 3. 48. Lands granted by A by fine for the life of A, remainder to A's right heirs. It is a reversion in A, and he may grant it. Hal. MSS. Dy. 237 Fine to husband, as that which he and his wife have of his gift, with render to the donor for life, remainder to the right heirs of the husband. It is a void remainder, and the wife survivor shall have it for life. Hal. MSS.

(4) Where heir shall be purchaser Vid. fol. 9. b. 11. H. 6. 13. Devise to B for life, remainder to C in tail, remainder to the next heir of the devisor and the heirs of his body, it is a purchase in the heir. Quære there if it had been heirs.—Archer's case, 1. Rep. 66. b. Devise or conveyance to A for life, remainder to his next heir male, and to the heirs male of the body of such heir male, it is a purchase in the heir, because in the singular number, and the limitation is applied to it.—Vid. 1. Rep. 104. Shellie's case. Use limited for life to A, remainder to the heirs male of the body of A and the heirs male of the body of such heirs male. It is a limitation, and A has a tail executed. But if the ancestor takes estate for years, remainder limited to the heirs male of his body, it doth not vest in the ancestor. Accord. hic fol. 13. Hodgkinson's case. Hal. MSS.—See Hodgkinson's case from lord Hale's MSS. at the end of n. 6. ante 14. a.

To conclude this point, [g] whosoever is seised of land, hath not only the estate of the land in him, but the right to take profits which is in nature of the use, and therefore when he makes a feoffment in fee without valuable consideration to divers particular uses, so much of the use, as he disposeth not, is in him as his ancient use in point of reverter. As if a man be seised of two acres, the one holden by knights service by prioritie, and the other by knights service holden by posterioritie, and maketh a feoffment in fee of both acres to the use of himselfe and his heires, the old use continued in him, and the prioritie and posterioritie remaine. So it is of lands of part of the mother, the use shall goe to the heire of the part of the mother, which could not be, if it were not the old use, but a thing newly created. The like law of lands of the custome of Borough-english, Gavelkind, &c. (1.)

[g] 13. H. 7. 6. 28. H. 8. Dicr 12.
(3. Co. 81. b. Cro. Jam. 201.
Post. 271. b.)

5. E. 4. 7. 1. Co. 76. 84. 85.
100. &c. Chudley. 2. Co. 46.
57. 58. 77. 78. 4. Co. 22. 6. Co.
34. 43.

Les donees, et leur issues ferront al donor et a ses heires autiels services, come le donor fait a son seignior procheine a luy paramount. The reason of this is, that when by construction of the said statute there was a reversion settled in the donor, for that the donee had an estate of inheritance, the judges resolved that he should hold of his donor, as his donor held over (2): as if the tenant had made a feoffment in fee at the common law, the feoffee should have holden of the feoffor as he held over, and before the statute of W. 2. the donee had holden of the donor as of his person, and now of him as of his reversion: but if a man make a lease for life, or years, and reserve nothing, he shall have fealtie only and no rent, though the lessor hold over by rent, &c. And this, that Littleton saith, is regularly true, if the donor maketh no speciall reservation, for then the speciall reservation excludes the tenure which the law would create. As if tenant by knights service maketh a gift in taile reserving fealtie and rent, the donee shall hold in socage, by fealtie and rent, and not by knights service (3.) But if a man hold land of the king in grand serjantie, and maketh a gift in taile generally, in this case the donee shall not hold of the donor by grand serjantie, because no man can hold by grand serjantie, but of the king only, as hereafter shall be said, and therefore seeing grand serjantie doth include knights service, he shall in that case hold of the donor by knights service. If a man seised of land in the right of his wife holden by knights service giveth the same lands in taile generally, the donee shall not hold of him by knights service, because his wife held the land, and he had nothing but in her right. And in that case the baron hath gained a new reversion by wrong, and therefore such a donee shall doe fealtie only (4).

(Post. 143. a.)

(2. Ro. Abr. 501.)

A, seised of two acres of land, holdeth the one of B by knights service, and twelve pence rent, and the other of C in socage and one pennie rent, and makes a gift in taile of both acres without any expresse reservation of any tenure. In this case the donor hath but one reversion. And yet he shall make several avowries, because there be severall tenures created by law in respect of the severall tenures over: and the avowrie is made in respect of the tenures.

(Doctr. Plac. 53.)

Lord, mesne and tenant, the tenant holdeth by four pence, and the mesne by twelve pence, the tenant makes a gift in taile without reserving any thing, by reason whereof he holdeth by foure pence, in respect of the tenure over. Afterwards the reversion escheats, now shall the donee hold by twelve pence, for the mesnaltie which was four pence is extinct, and the law reserved the tenure upon the gift in taile, in respect of the mesnaltie, and when the mesnaltie is extinct, the former rent between the donor and donee is extinct also, and then by the same reason that the donee shall take advantage, if the donor by release or confirmation had holden by lesser services, by the same reason he shall be prejudiced, when he holdeth by greater services (5).

(2. Ro. Abr. 501.)

49. E. 310.

Forsprise les donees en Frankmarriage. It is to be understood, that although the land be given in liberum maritagium, in free marriage generally, yet first the law doth make a limitation of this word (free) viz. till the fourth degree be past, for the reason that our author here yeeldeth (6). And 2. albeit it be free marriage, yet the donees and their issues untill the fourth degree be past shall do fealtie, for that is incident to everie tenure (except frankealmoigne) and cannot be separated from it, and therefore the donees and their issues shall hold it as freely till the fourth degree be past as the donor can make it. See more of this in the chapter of Frankalmoigne.

Bracton. lib. 2. fol. 21. Britton
cap. 119. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 11. &
lib. 6. cap. 2. Vide sect. 17. 20.
(Ante. 21. b. Post 178. a.)

Sect. 20.

ET les degrees en frankmarriage, ferront accompts en tiel maner, sc. de AND the degrees in frankmarriage shall be accounted in this manner, viz. from

WHERE Littleton saith [a] that the donees in frankmarriage shall hold by fealtie only untill the fourth degree

[a] Vide sect. 17. 19. 138. 268.
269. 271. 733.

(1) See further on this subject the several books cited ante 12. b. in n. 2. to which add Prec. in Cha. 222. 319. and Plowd. 545. and note f. in the English translation of Plowden. It may be an useful hint to observe, that the English edition of Mr. Plowden's Commentaries, which most deservedly bear as high a character as any book of reports ever published in our law, has a great number of additional references and some notes; and that both of these are generally very pertinent, and shew great industry and judgment in the editor.

(2) And therefore gift in tail saving the reversion tenend' de capitalibus dominis feodi per servitia debita is void, and the donee shall hold of the donor, as he holds over, 6. E. 3. 28. 45. E. 3. 27. 2. E. 4. 5. 4. H. 6. 10. Champenon's case. Vide 27. H. 8. 18.—Hal. MSS.

(3) But if tenant by chivalry makes gift in tail rendering rent only, the tenure shall be chivalry, but the rent accumulative. Vid. hic 52. Dy. 52. Keilw. 125.—Hal. MSS.

(4) Quere of this case for the new reversion is held in chivalry. Vid. 4. Hen. 6. 21. by Balh. B holds of A in chivalry, and gives in tail to C, who makes lease to R for life and dies. The issue of C shall be in ward to A, not to B the donor.—Hal. MSS.

(5) Vid. Keilw. 125. 129.—Hal. MSS.

(6) And therefore after the fourth degree the issue shall have formdon and count of a gift in frankmarriage; but the warranty and acquittal are gone. 12. H. 4. 9. Vid. 10. E. 3. 25. 4. E. 3. 5. Attornment by donee in frankmarriage.—Hal. MSS.

[b] Glanvill. lib. 7. cap. 18. Bract lib. 2. fol. 21. Britton. cap. 119. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 11. & lib. 6. cap. 2.

[c] Vide 10. E. 3. tit. Avowry. 157. 31. E. 3. cessavit. 22. 31. E. 3. gard. 116. 21. H. 7. 30.

1. Rule.

2. (Plovd. 444.)

3. (Vid. Stat. 32. H. 8. cap. 38. of marriages, 2. Infl. 683. 25. H. 3. cap. 22.)

degree be past, and then the issue in the fifth degree shall hold of the donor as the donor holdeth over, [b] vide Bracton ubi supra, ita quod ille cui terra sic data fuit, nullum inde faciat servitium usque ad tertium heredem et usque quartum gradum, ita quod tertius haeres sic inclusus. And here-with also agreeth Fleta ubi supra. And the [c] learning of degrees set out in the civil and canon law (wherein I find some difference) is worth the knowledge, to the end that Littleton and the law in this case may the better be understood, which I will divide into certaine rules, whereof the first is, that a person added to a person in the line of consanguinitie maketh a degree. And it is to be understood, that a line is threefold, viz. the line ascending, descending, and collateral. And first for example, of the ascending line, take the sonne and add the father, and it is one degree ascending, add the grandfather to the father, and it is a second degree ascending.

So as how many persons there be, take away one, and you have the number of degrees. If there be foure persons it is the third degree, if five the fourth, for one must exceed, and then you have the degree. Likewise by the descending, take the father, and add the sonne, and it is one degree, then take the sonne and add the grandchild, and it is the second degree, and so likewise further. Wherein observe that the father, son and grandchild, albeit there are three persons, yet they make but two degrees, because (as it hath been said) one must exceed for making a degree.

It is to be noted, that in every line the person must be reckoned from whom the computation is made. And there is no difference between the canon and civil law in the ascending and descending line (2), for those whom the civilians do reckon in the second degree, the canonists do reckon in the first (3), and those whom they place in the fourth, these place le donor a les donees en frankmarriage, le primer degree, pur ceo que la feme que est une des donees covient estre file, soer, ou autre cousin a le donor. Et de les donees tanque a lour issue il serra accompt le second degree, et de lour issue tanque a son issue, le tierce degree, et issint ouster, &c. Et la cause est, pur ceo que apres chescun tiel done les issues queux veignent de le donor, et les issues queux veignent de les donees apres le quart degree passe de ambideux parties en tiel forme destre accompt, poyent enter eux per la ley de saint esglise entermarie. Et que le donee en frankmarriage serra dit le prime degree de les quart degrees, home poit veier en un plee sur un breve de Droit de Garde P. 31. E. 3. Lou le Pl. counta, que son tresaiel fuit seisie de certe terre, &c. et ceo tenust dun autre per service de chivaler, &c. que dona la terre a un Rafe Holland ovesque sa soer en frankmarriage, &c.

the donor to the donees in frankmarriage the first degree, because the wife, that is one of the donees, ought to be daughter, sister or other cosen to the donor, and from the donees unto their issue shall be accounted the second degree, and from their issue unto their issue the third degree, and so forth. And the reason is, because that after every such gift, the issues of the donor, and the issues of the donees after, the fourth degrees past of both parties in such forme to be accounted, may by the law of the holy church entermarie (1). And that the donee in frankmarriage shall be said to be the first degree of the foure degrees, a man may see in a plea upon a writ of right of ward, P. 31. E. 3. where the Pl. pleadeth that his great grandfather was seised of certaine lands, &c. and held the same of another by knight service, &c. who gave the land to one Rafe Holland with his sister in frankmarriage, &c.

(1) Nota by the intent of Littleton in some cases before the fourth degree passes from the donor there may be intermarriage, and yet the land shall be holden quit till it be passed. A gives land in frankmarriage with the daughter of his sister, the issue of A and the donee may intermarry after the fourth degree, yet the fourth degree shall not be passed quoad the tenure. Vid. pag. sequent. A gives to the daughter of N in frankmarriage, C and the issue of N may intermarry, because they are in quinto gradu consanguinitatis, yet this is only the first degree quoad the privilege of tenure. Hal. MSS. There is something apparently wanting in the state of lord Hale's latter case; for it is not expressed who C is, and how C and the issue of N are related in the fifth degree. But this accidental omission may be easily supplied, and the doctrine will be equally intelligible by only supposing the consanguinity to be as lord Hale's case requires.

(2) The words but in the collateral line there is seem necessary to the sense of this passage; and though not to be found in any edition of lord Coke's Commentary, were probably omitted by mistake.

(3) A G and A are in the fourth degree per utramque legem, N and K are in the fourth degree by the canon law, but in the eighth degree by the civil law. N and C are in the fourth degree by the canon, in the fifth by the civil law. C . . . B . . . D Vide pro computatione graduum consanguinitatis juxta utramque legem caus. 35. quest. 5. pars 2. in Decret. Juxta jura canonica—I. Ascendentium et descendentium quot sunt personæ, de quibus queritur, computatis intermediis, primâ demptâ, tot sunt gradus inter eas. II. Pro collateralibus. Collateralium in linea æquali quoto gradu quis distat à stirpe communi, toto distat inter se vel sibi attinent. Collateralium in linea inæquali quoto gradu remotior distat a communi stirpe, toto inter se distat.—Juxta jus civile—I. In linea recta ascendentium et descendentium quot sunt personæ, de quibus queritur, computatis intermediis, unâ demptâ, tot sunt gradus inter eas. II. Collateralium. 1. In linea æquali, quoto gradu quis distat in the second. Therefore if we will know in what degree two of kindred do stand according to the civill law, we must begin our reckoning from one, by ascending to the person from whom both are branched, and then by descending to the other to whom we do count, and it will appeare in what degree they are. For example, in brothers and sisters sonnes, take one of them and ascend to his father, there is one degree from the father to the grandfather, that is the second degree, then descend from the grandfather to his sonne, that is the third degree, then from his sonne to his sonne, that is the fourth. But by the cannon law there is another computation, for the canonists do ever begin from the stocke, namely from the person of whom they do descend; of whose distance the question is. For example, if the question be, in what degree the sonnes of two brothers stand by the canon law, we must begin from the grandfather and descend to one sonne, that is one degree; then descend to his sonne, that is another degree, then descend againe from the grandfather to his other sonne, that is one degree, then descend to his sonne, that is a second degree, so in what degree either of them are distant from the common stocke, in the same degree they are distant betweene themselves: and if they be not equally distant, then we must observe another rule. In what degree the most remote is distant from the common stocke, in the same degree they are distant betweene themselves, and so the most remote maketh the degree. And albeit the donee be a cousin in the third or fourth degree from the donor, yet in this computation it maketh the first degree: gradus dicitur a gradiendo, quia gradiendo ascenditur et descenditur. And thus much of the civile and cannon law is necessarie to the knowledge of the common law in this point (1): and herewith agreeth our author in the words following.

(Plowd. 444.)

Les issues queux veignent de le donor, et les issues queux veignent de les donees apres le 4. degree passe dambideux parties in tiel forme deste account poient enter eux per le Ley de Saint Esglise entermarrier.

(De Saint Esglise). [d] So as hereby it appeareth, that the computation of the degrees in this case, must be according to the cannon law. But it is necessarie to be knowne concerning marriages betweene persons of kindred one to another, that it is enacted [c] by the statute of 32. H. 8. that no reservation or prohibition (God's law except) shall trouble or impeach any marriage without the Leviticall degrees (2).

[d] Brit. ca. 119. Accord. Flet. lib. 3. ca. 11. & lib. 6. c. 2.
[c] 32. H. 8. ca. 38.

The case vouched by Littleton in 31. E. 3. you shall finde abridged by Fitz. tit. gard. 116. And albeit this year of 31. E. 3. was never in print till Fitzherbert did abridge it and publish it in print anno 11. H. 8. and goeth under the name of broken yeares, yet here it appeareth by our author, that the same is of authoritie in law, as hereafter also in other places shall be observed.

Sect. 21.

ET tous ceux tailes avantdits, AND all these entailed aforesaid be specified in the said statute of W. 2. Also there be divers other estates in taile, though they be not by expresse words specified in the said statute, but they are taken by the equitie of the same statute. As if lands be given to a man, and to his heires males of his bodie begotten; in this case his issue male shall

ET tous ceux tailes avantdits sont specifies en le dit statute de Westminster 2. And so it appeareth by the said statute Auxy sont divers autres estates en le taile, &c. And herewith agreeth Carbonel's case, 33. Edw. 3. titulo taile 5.

That the cases of the statute are set down but for examples of estates taile, general and speciall, and not to exclude other estates taile. 3. E. 3. 32. 18. Aff. p. 5. 18. E. 3. 46. 1. Mar. Dyer 46. Pl. Com. Seignior Barkley's case, fo. 251. For, Exempla illustrant non restringunt legem.

3. E. 3. 32. 18. E. 3. 46.
18. Aff. p. 5. 1. Mar. Di. 46.
Pl. Com. 251.

Equitie

distant à communi stipite, toto duplicato distant inter se, vel sibi attinent; nam quælibet persona facit gradum. 2. In lineâ inæquali, quot sunt personæ, stipite dempto, tot sunt gradus.—Nota in contrahibus matrimonialibus computatio canonica est recepta, et hoc per decretalem Innocentis tertii in concilio generali.—Hal. MSS.

(1) See further as to consanguinity and the manner of computing its degrees by the civil and canon law, Blackst. Law Tracts 8vo ed. v. 1. p. 14. and 173. and the annotations in the edit. of the Corp. Jur. Canon. by the Pithæi on that part of Gratian's Decretum cited by lord Hale, and Inst. lib. 3. tit. 6. et Dig. 38. tit. 10. and the commentators on those titles.

(2) The following passages from the canon law are in Hal. MSS.—Extrav. de consang. et affin. c. 9. Vir qui à stipite quarto gradu mulieri, quæ ex alio latere distat quinto, licite copulatur.—Nota antiquitus usque ad septimam generationem nullus de sua cognatione ducat uxorem. Decret. 2. Causa 52. quæst. 2. can. 11. Sed in concilio generali sub Innocentio 3º prohibitio copulæ conjugalis quartum consanguinitatis et affinitatis non excedat, viz. in collateralibus, sed in directe ascendentibus prohibetur contractus matrimonialis in infinitum Extrav. de consanguinitat. &c. can. 8.—See further as to the prohibition of marriages for affinity or consanguinity in Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 314. Inst. lib. 1. tit. 10 Dig. lib. 23. tit. 2. Cod. lib. 5. tit. 4. Nov. 74. Gibb. Cod. Jur. Ecclesiast. Anglican. 1st ed. v. 1. p. 494. Burn. Eccles. L. tit. Marriage. Vin. Abr. Marriage F.

(5. Co. 99. 3. Co. 31.)

Equitie is a construction made by the judges, that cases out of the letter of a stat. yet being within the same mischief, or cause of the making of the same, shall be within the same remedie that the statute provideth: and the reason hereof is, for that the law-maker could not possibly set downe all cases in expresse terms, equitas est convenientia rerum quæ cuncta coequiparat, et quæ in paribus rationibus paria jura et judicia desiderat. And againe, equitas est perfecta quadam ratio quæ jns scriptum interpretatur et emendat, nulla scriptura comprehensa, sed solum in vera ratione consistens. Equitas est quasi æqualitas. Bonus judex secundum æquum et bonum judicat, et æquitatem stricto juri præfert. Et jns respicit æquitatem (1).

Braft. lib. 4. fol. 186.

[f] 18. Aff. p. 5. 18. E. 3. 46. 33. E. 3. tit. Taile 5. 3. E. 3. 32. Pl. Com. Seignior Barkley's case. 1. Mar. Dy. 46. V. sect. 24.

Sicome terres sont done a un home et a les [f] heires males de son corps engendres, en tiel case son issue male inheritera lissue female ne unques inheritera, &c. This shall be explained afterward, sect. 24 (2).

Sect. 22. & 23.

THESE two sections, or any thing therein, do need no explanation, in respect they shall be also explained hereafter in the next section, saving onely these words (queux doivent inheriter) are verie observable, for they implice a diversity betweene a descent and a purchase. For when a man giveth lands to a man and the heires females of his body, and dyeth having issue a son and a daughter, the daughter shall inherit; for the will of the donor (the statute working with it) shall be observed. But in case [g] of a purchase it is otherwise: for if A. have issue a sonne and a daughter, and a lease for life be made, the remainder to the heires females of the bodie of A. A dieth, the heire female can take nothing, because she is not heire (3); for she must be both heire and heire female, which she is not, because the brother is heire, and therefore the will of the giver cannot be observed, because here is no gift, and therefore the statute cannot worke thereupon. And so it is if a man hath a sonne and a daughter, and dieth, and lands be given to the daughter, and the heires females of the bodie of her father, the daughter shall take

(Post. 164. 1. Co. 103. 104.)

(Hob. 31.)

[g] 9. H. 6. 24. 11. H. 6. 13. 14. 37. H. 8. Br. tit. Done 42. tit. nofine 1. & 40. Dyer 23. El. 374 Shelley's case 1. Co.

(Post. 26. b.)

IN mesme le manner est, si terres ou tenements soient dones a un home et a ses heires females de son corps engendres, en tiel case son issue female luy inheritera per force et form de le dit done, et nemy issue male, pur ceo que en tiels cases de dones faits en le taile, queux doivent inheriter, et queux nemi la volunt del donor serra observe.

IN the same manner it is, if lands or tenements be given to a man, and to his heires females of his bodie begotten; in this case his issue female shall inherit by force and forme of the said gift, and not his issue male. For in such cases of gifts in taile, the will of the donor ought to be observed, who ought to inherit, and who not.

ET en le case que terres ou tenements sont dones a un home, et a ses heires males de son corps issuant, et il ad issue deux fits, et devy, et leign fits entra come heire male, et ad issue file et devy son frere avera la terre, et nemi la file, pur

AND in case where lands or tenements be given to a man, and to the heires males of his bodie, and he hath issue two sonnes, and dieth, and the eldest son enter as heire male, & hath issue a daughter, and dieth, his brother shall have the land, &

CEO

(1) As to construing statutes by equity, see Plowd. 9. 10. 17. 18. 36. 46. 53. 57. 59. 81. 88. 109. 124. 177. 204. 244. 363. 364. 366. 371. 464. 466. See also Vin. Abr. Statutes E. 6. Hatt. Treat. on Stat. Ash. Expolit. of Stat. by Eq. and Com. Dig. Parliament R. 10.

(2) And see such special heir is in by descent, and shall have his age, 24. E. 3. 60.—Hal. MSS.

(3) A hath issue a son and a daughter. The daughter marries B, and has issue two daughters. A devises to his son; but if he die without issue my land shall go to my right heirs of my name and posterity, and dies. The son dies without issue. Ruled, that the land shall not go to the uncle, for though of his name, he is not heir, for the issue of the daughter is heir. H. 11. Jac. C. B. Counder and Clerke Mo. 863. and Hob. 29. Hal. MSS.—See the same case in 1 Brownl. 129.—This case of Counder and Clerke is apparently cited by lord Hale in confirmation of lord Coke's position as to the necessity of being heir as well as female, in order to take by purchase under a limitation to the heir female; and it is observable, that there is not one word in lord Hale's note intimating the least disapprobation of the doctrine. However, it so happens, that in more modern times the propriety of this doctrine has been questioned by very respectable persons, who have treated it as equally unsupported by reason and authorities of law. But perhaps this censure of lord Coke may have been too hasty; and it may be doubted, whether there is a passage in all his works, more capable of standing the severest test of modern criticism. Therefore the remainder of this note shall be employed in the defence of lord Coke's doctrine, and in explaining the qualifications with which it ought to be understood; and for this purpose it shall be formally examined, first as a reasonable rule of construction, and secondly by the authorities and determined cases.

ceo que le frere est heire male. Mes auterment serra en autres tailes, queux sont specifies en le dit statute.

not the daughter, for that the brother is heiremale. But otherwise it is in the other entailes, which are specified in the sayd statute.

nothing but an estate for life; because there is no such person, she being not heire. But where a gift is made to a man, and to the heires female of his bodie, there the donee being the first taker is capable by purchase, and the heire female by descent (1), secundum formam doni: and therefore Littleton purposely added these words, queux doivent inheriter.

Sect. 24.

AUxy si terres soient donees a un home, et a les heires males de son corps ingendres, et il ad issue file, quel ad issue fits et devy, et puis apres le donee devy, en cest case le fits de la file ne inheritera pas per force de le taile, pur ceo que quecunque, que serra inheriter per force dun done en le taile fait as heirs males, covient conveyer son discent tout per les heires males. Mes en tiel case le donor poet entrer, pur ceo que le donee est mort sans issue male, en la ley, entant que le issue del file ne poet conveyer a luy mesme le discent per Heyre male.

ALSO if lands be given to a man and to the heires males of his body, and he hath issue a daughter, who hath issue a sonne, and dieth, and after the donee die; in this case, the son of the daughter shall not inherit by force of the entaile; because whosoever shall inherit by force of a gift in taile made to the heires males, ought to convey his descent wholly by the heires males. Also in this case the donor may enter, for that the donee is dead without issue male in the law, insomuch as the issue of the daughter cannot convey to himselfe the descent by an heire male.

QUECUNQUE serra enheriter per force dun done en taile,

Ec. Vide Tr. [b] 28. H. 6. tit. Devise 18. (which is not in the booke at large, but written verbatim out of Statham): If a man devise lands to a man, and to the heires males of his body, and (2) hath issue a daughter, which hath issue a sonne, this sonne shall be inheritable, and notwithstanding in a gift in taile the law is otherwise, and that by the opinion of all the judges in the Exchequer Chamber. But I hold this case to be ill reported, unless you will referre the opinion of the judges to the gift in taile last mentioned. For first, albeit a devise may create an inheritance by other words than a gift can, yet cannot a devise direct an inheritance to descend against the rule of law. Secondly, there is no intent of the devisor appearing, that the sonne of the daughter should, against the rule of law, inherit, and the statute provideth, that voluntas donatoris, Ec. observetur. And I have heard this case often denied to be law, both in the King's Bench, and in the Common Pleas, vide

Vide sect. 719.

[b] 1. H. 6. 24. 11. H. 6. 13. 14. 28. H. 6. tit. Devise 18. Statham tit. Devise. Pl. Com. in Scholast. case 414. b. 20. H. 6. 43. 37. H. 8. Br. tit. Done & Rem. 61. tit. nosine 1. & 40. (Hob. 33. Post, 377.)

(1. Ro. Abr. 341.)

Pl. Comment 414. b. And so it is [i] mutatis mutandis, when a gift in taile is made to a man, and to his heires females of his body, and he hath issue a sonne, who hath issue a daughter, this daughter shall never inherit, because she must convey by descent from females. And for the reason hereof see a notable case in 15. E. 2. tit. Corone 385. where it is adjudged (as before it had beene) that the sonne of a female should have an appeale of the death of a cofine, and yet the daughter her selfe should never have had it. But there it is agreed, that the sonne of a female [k] in a libertate probanda, should be no witness or prooffe against the issue of the male. And the reason of this diversity is very observable: for by the common law the female might

[i] 11. H. 6. 13.

15. E. 2. tit. Cor. 386. (Ante 6. b.)

[k] Mirror c. 2. sect. 7. Vid. Glanvil. lib. 14. cap. 3.

(1) It is very unusual to create an estate in tail female, and I have seen an argument, in which it has been attempted to prove, that the law of England will not allow of a descent through females only, even in the case of estates tail; but other authors as well as Littleton and Coke mention such descents, nor did I ever hear any authority cited to support the contrary doctrine. See Plowd. Quær. 87. and 133.—(2) The word he, to describe the deviser, is wanting. See acc. Stath. Abr.

When land is given to the heirs female of the body of one, either not having any preceding estate, or not having a preceding estate of freehold, the words cannot be construed as giving an inheritable quality to an estate already vested and limiting the course of descent, but necessarily must operate on the first taker as a descriptio personæ and name of purchase; and lord Coke's doctrine means nothing more, than that those claiming under such a description should fully answer to it, and consequently that such as have only half of the description should be excluded. Now it is to be considered, that the description consists of two parts, one requiring that the donee should be heir, the other that the donee should be female; and if being heir without being female will not give a title, why on the other hand should being female, without being also heir, be sufficient? It is not a solid objection to lord Coke to say, that his construction is strict, literal, and founded on a rigid adherence to the proper and technical sense of words; because it is reasonable to presume in favour of the established sense of all words, unless there are other words or some special circumstances to shew a different sense in the mind of the person using them, and lord Coke apparently intends to put a case, in which neither occur. But it has been observed, that where heirs female of the body are words of limitation, a female may take by descent as special heir, though not heir general; and it is asked, why should not the same person be equally capable of taking by purchase? This objection is plausible, but not unanswerable. Where heirs female of the body are words of limitation, they are necessarily used to regulate the succession in a special manner, which object of the donor cannot be attained without a continual exclusion of heirs general when they happen to be males; and this establishment of a new kind of heirship is a ground for presuming that the donor by heirs means, not those who are so by the general law of descent, but those who are so according to the special course of descent he professes to introduce. But where heirs female are only words of purchase, they are used to describe who shall take the estate at one particular time and in one instance, and establishing a new course of succession is not the object in view; and it not being so, the ground of presumption, which governs the former case, is wanting. But it may be insisted, that, in the case put by lord Coke, heirs female of the body have a double effect, and after operating as words of purchase, operate a second time as words of limitation, and being allowed to point at an heir special in their latter application, ought to have the same construction in the former; for in such a case it would be strange to suppose, that heirs female were used in two different senses. This is refining on the objection made to lord Coke's doctrine, and placing it in a stronger light than it hitherto appears to have been urged. But even in this shape the objection would not prove any thing absurd in lord Coke's general doctrine, and would only shew that he had chosen an improper example for its illustration, and that he should have stated a case in which heirs female can only operate as words of purchase, as where a gift is made to the heirs female.

(2. Inst. 68.)

Vid. Seignior de la Ware's case,
11. Co. fol. 11.

17. E. 4. 1.

20. H. 6. 43.

(Post. 377.)

[1] Stanford, 58. b. 15. E. 2.
tit. Coron. 384.

(Hob. 31.)

11. H. 6. 13.

9. H. 6. 25.

might have had an appeale as heire to any of her ancestors, as well as the male. But by the statute of Magna Charta, cap. 34. Nullus capiatur aut imprisonetur propter appellam femine de morte alterius quam viri sui, which restraineth not the sonne of the female. And there Scrope saith, per tout le serjeant d'Angleterre, that is, by all the judges of the coife in England, it was awarded, that the issue of the female should have an appeale for the death of his cousin. But in a libertate probanda, the issue of the blood female shall not be received to prove villenage in the issue of the blood male, for the mother was disabled by the common law, and the mother might be a neise de en et trene, that is, of the water and whippe of three cord, (meaning such a bondwoman as is used to servile workes and correction) and enfranchised by her husband. All which appeareth in the said booke. And it is holden in 17. E. 4. 1. that if a man be flaine which hath no heire of the part of his father, that his uncle of the part of his mother shall have the appeale, and yet he must of necessity make his conveyance by a woman, vid. 20. H. 6. fo. 33. the question suddenly demanded and debated, and no consideration or mention had of the said former judgments and authorities; there it is compared to a gift in taile to a man and to his heires males of his body, that the heire male of the daughter shall not inherit which hath no affinity to it, and yet the authority of the booke is great, for it is by the assent of all the justices of the one bench and the other in the Exchequer Chamber, and therefore I leave the learned and judicious reader to his owne judgment. [1] Vide Stanford 58. b. 15. E. 2. 384. If a man give lands to a man and to the heires males of his body begotten, remainder to him and to his heires females on his body begotten, the donee hath issue a sonne who hath issue a daughter, who hath issue a son, this sonne is not inheritable to either of both these estates taile, because, as Littleton saith, the male must make his conveyance only by males, and so must the females by females. But in this case the land shall revert to the donor. And therefore the safest way, when a man will entaile his lands to the heires males and females of his bodie, is to limit the first estate to him and the heires males of his body, the remainder to him and to the heires of his body, and then all his issues whatsoever are inheritable. But if A hath issue a sonne and a daughter and dieth, and the sonne hath issue a daughter and dieth, and a lease for life is made, the remainder to the heires females of the body of A; in this case the daughter of A shall not take causa qua supra. But albeit the daughter of the son maketh her conveyance by a male, she shall take an estate taile by purchase, for she is heire and a female; but if the lands be devised to one for life, the remainder to the next heire male of B in taile, and B hath issue two daughters, and each of them hath issue a sonne, and the father and daughters die, some say this remainder is void for the uncertainty, some say that the eldest shall take it because he is worthiest, and others say that both of them shall take for that they both make but one heire (1). If lands be given to a man and to his heires males or females of his body he hath an estate in generall taile in him.

Sect. 25.

A Un home, et a sa feme. But what if tenements be given to a man, and to a woman being not his wife, and to the heires males of their two bodies. They have also an estate taile, albeit they be not married at that time (2). And so it is, if lands be given to a man which hath a wife, and to a woman which hath a husband, and the heires of their two bodies: they have presently an estate taile, [m] for the possibility that they may marry. But if

EN mesme le manner est, lou tenements sont done a un home et a sa feme, et a les heires males de leur deux corps engendres, &c.

IN the same manner
it is, where lands are given to a man and his wife, and to the heires males of their two bodies begotten, &c.

11. E. 3. Formdon. 20.

(Ante 20. b.)

[m] 15. H. 7. 10. 1. Co. Dilon and Frein's case 40. Aff. p. 13.[n] 24. E. 3. 29. 42 (Dy. 330.)[o] 7. H. 4. 16. 16. E. 3. 73.
Littleton fol. 66. 15. Eliz. Dier, 326.

[p] 44. E. 3. tit. Taile. 13.

(1) Vid. hic fol. 10. b. Harpur's case. Hal. MSS.—(2) If husband and wife are divorced a vinculo, they are only tenants for life; for the law doth not presume, that they will marry again. 7. H. 4. 16. 3. H. 6. 43. Hal. MSS.—(3) As to the doctrine of not allowing a possibility on a possibility, see post. 184.—(4) Here it cannot be tail for the uncertainty which of them he will marry first. But if a gift was to A and B a feme sole and to the heirs of their bodies, remainder to A and C a feme sole and to the heirs of their bodies, it is tail.—Hal. MSS.

Sect.

female of the body of A and their heirs, or the heirs of their bodies. So much for the propriety of lord Coke's doctrine independently of authorities; but if it is compared with them, it will appear still more defensible, and by them it is even applied to the same sort of case as is stated by him. The necessity of being actually heir in the strict sense of the word, to take by purchase under that description, appears by authorities of three kinds.—The first order of cases consists of those, by which it has been settled, that if land is given to A for life, with remainder to the heirs or heirs of the body of B, and A dies before B, or B is attainted of felony and afterwards dies before A, the remainder becomes void. In the former case it is so, because B being living at the determination of the particular estate, no person can then answer to the description of his heir, for non est heres viventis. In the latter case it is so, because B's attainder, by corrupting his blood, prevents his having an heir. Now in both these cases there is as much reason for departing from the rigid sense of the word heirs, and presuming in favour of an heir apparent in the first case, and of such person as would be heir if there was not an attainer in the second, as there is for presuming in favour of an heir special in the case of a gift to the heirs female; and yet the doctrine is so fixed by authorities, that the judges of modern times have not yet deviated from it even in the case of last wills, except when induced to adopt a less strict construction by some additional words strongly expressive of using heirs in a special sense, as where land is devised to the heir male of A now living. See Post 378. Hussey's Case, Bro. Abr. Done 61. the case of James and Richardson Pollexf. 457. that of Burchett and Durdant 2 Ventr. 311. Darbison and Beaumont in Vin. Abr. Devise U. b. pl. 5. but more accurately in 1. P. Wms. 229. and Fortesc. Rep. 18. and that of Frogmorton and Wharrey, Wilf. vol. 2. part 3. page 125. and 144. See further Vin. Abr. Remainder I.—Another series of authorities, conformable to lord Coke's doctrine, consists of cases, in which it has been agreed, that where heir is a word of purchase, the heir at common law shall take Gavelkind or Borough English land, unless the customary heir is expressly mentioned, though if used as a word of limitation, the customary heir shall take without being named. See Bro. Abr. Discent 59. See also ante 10. a. and n. 4. there and the case of Starkey and Starkey Trin. 19. G. 2. in the Exch. 5. N. Abr. 404. This rule in respect to customary land is a very cogent argument for lord Coke in point of authority; for the property, which is the subject of the gift, furnishes a very colourable pretence for preferring the customary heir, and the peculiar descent of the land by force of the custom in the person who thus takes by purchase is precisely the same sort of argument for the customary heir, as those who differ from lord Coke draw from the special descent by force of the gift where heirs female of the body are words of limitation. On a nice comparison it will be found, that the analogy between the gift of the customary land to heirs, and the gift of common law land to heirs female of the body, is almost perfect; for in both cases the words operate first as words of purchase and then

Sect. 26. 27.

26. 27. These two Sections need no explanation at all.

ITEM si tenements soient dones a un home & a sa feme, & a les heires del corps del home engendres, en ceo case le baron ad estate en le taile generall, et la feme forsque estate pur terme de vie.

ALSO if tenements be given to a man and to his wife, and to the heires of the bodie of the man, in this case the husband hath an estate in generall taile, and the wife but an estate for terme of life.

ITEM si terres soient dones a le baron & sa feme, & a les heires le baron, queux il engendra de corps sa feme, en ceo case le baron ad estate en le taile speciall, & la feme forsque pur terme de vie.

ALSO if lands be given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of the husband which he shall beget on the body of his wife, in this case the husband hath an estate in especiall taile, and the wife but an estate for life.

Sect. 28.

ET si le done soit fait al baron & a sa feme, & a les heires la feme de sa corps per le baron engendres, donque la feme ad estate en especial taile, & le baron forsque pur terme de vie (1). Mes si terres sont dones a le baron & a la feme, & a les heires que la baron engendra de corps la feme, en ceo case ambideux ont estate en la taile, pur ceo que cest parol (heires) nest limit a lun plus que a l'auter (2).

AND if the gift be made to the husband and to his wife, and to the heires of the body of the wife by the husband begotten, there the wife hath an estate in speciall taile, and the husband but for terme of life. But if lands be given to the husband & the wife, & to the heires which the husband shall beget on the body of the wife, in this case both of them have an estate taile; because this word (heires) is not limited to the one more then to the other.

HEires. This word (heires)

is nomen operativum. To which of the donees it is limited, it createth the estate taile; but if it incline no more to the one than to the other, then both doe take, as here Littleton putteth the case. And therewith accordeth the case of [7] 3 E. 3. where it appeareth, Quod Robertus de S. dedit Johanni de Riparijs et Matilde uxori ejus, et hæredibus quos idem Johannes de corpore ipsius Matildæ procrearet, &c. and this adjudged to be an estate in especiall taile in them both, because the estate is equally tailed to the heires of the baron as to the heires of the wife. If lands be given to the husband and the wife, and to the heires of the body of the survivour, the gift is good, and the survivour shall have an estate in taile generall, but the estate taile vesteth not till there be a survivour. And hereby it appeareth [r] that a gift made to 19. Hen. 6. 75. a. Regist. 2391

17. E. 2. tit. Taile 23.
3. E. 3. 32. 4. E. 3. 43.
5. E. 3. 29. b. & 34. a.
21 E. 3. 43. 12 H. 4. 1.

[7] 3. E. 3. 32. 21. E. 3. 43.
19. H. 6. 75. per Hody.

Regist. 2391

(1 Sid. 83.)

[r] 20 E. 3. Briefe 377.

a man and to the heires of his body, is as good as to his heires of his body.

Sect.

(1) In pleading seisin of such an estate in husband and wife, it shall be alledged, that they were seized together and to the heirs of the body of the wife in her right; and not that they were seized of the freehold or fee tail. Per Fitzherbert, 27. H. 8. 21. b.—
(2) Et ils ont en cell case tiel estate, sicome terre furent donez a eux & a les heires de leur deux corps engendrez. L. and M.—
(3) Vid. Hob. case 113. page 84. Gift to husband and wife for their lives, and after their decease to the heirs of the body of the husband procreant super corpus of the wife, is tail only in the husband, and the wife hath only for life; and it is the same with hæredibus of the husband de corpore of the husband on the wife procreant. Skete and Oxenbridge. So Tr. 6. Jac. B. R. Repps and Bonham. Land limited to husband and wife for their lives, and after their decease hæredibus of the body of the wife by the husband to be begotten; it is tail only in the wife. But it was agreed, that, if it had been to the heirs which the husband should beget on the body of the wife, or to the heirs of the body of the wife and of the body of the husband to be begotten, it had been tail in both.—S. R. 2. tail 32. Gift to the husband and wife and to the heirs of their bodies issuing, and if the wife obierit sine hæredibus, yet tail in both. 12. E. 3. Variance 77. 9. E. 3. 64. ibid. 93. Land given to husband and wife and to the heirs of the body of the husband, and if husband and wife obierit sine hæredibus inter eos procreatis, remainder over; yet it is tail general in the husband only.—Land given to the husband and wife and to the heirs of the husband of the body of his wife to be begotten; it is only tail in the husband. Hic sect. 29. Yet if gift be to the husband and wife and to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband to be begotten, the tail is only in the wife. His heirs appropriate in the first case, of the body in the second case.—Hal. MSS. But where the gift is to the wife only, and to the heirs of the body of the husband, then the tail is not in either, of which lord Hale gives the following case as an instance.—Nota P. 1651. Sir Leventhorpe Franck's case. Land given to the wife for life, remainder to the heirs of the body of the husband on the body of the wife to be begotten. Ruled, that it is not tail executed omnino in the wife, but a contingent remainder in the heir of the husband's body, it being limited to the heirs of the husband's body; and that as the wife died in the life of her husband, the remainder was void. Hal. MSS.—The same case is reported by the name of Gossage and Tayler in Styl. 315. but there the remainder is differently expressed; for it is not to the heirs of the bodies of both in direct terms, but it is to the use of the heirs to be begotten upon the body of Susanna by Leventhorpe her husband; which most probably were the words of the remainder; for Glyn's argument in favour of the wife's having an estate tail appears to have been founded on the remainder's not pointing expressly to the heirs of either.—After Sir Leventhorpe Franck's case, lord Hale puts a quære, and then adds—V. 3. E. 3. Formedon 8. Land given to I. S. et uxori suæ quam postea desponsaverit et hæredibus de corporibus eorum; the wife takes nothing because not known at the time; but it is a tail in the husband. Yet nota, hæredibus de corporibus; if the wife had taken an estate, it had been a tail in both. Hal. MSS. According to this case the tail is in the husband, though the wife takes no estate and the tail is expressly to the heirs of the bodies of both. But this is more than was contended for by the counsel for the wife's estate tail in Gossage and Tayler, who admitted the contrary to have been settled by the case in Dy. 99. pl. 64. and by Lane and Pannell, which is in 1. Ro. Rep. 238. 317. and 438. See also contra post sect. 352. and the case of Frogmorton on the demise of Robinson against Wharrey in Will. vol. 2. page 125. and 144. where on a surrender of copyhold lands to A, whom the surrenderer intended to marry, and to the heirs of their two bodies, it was adjudged, that the wife took for life with a contingent remainder to the heirs of the bodies of her and her husband.

then as words of limitation; and as in the latter case the heir female by purchase must be the heir at common law, and the heir by descent must, by a special heir, according to the course of descent prescribed by the donor, so in the former case the heir by purchase is the heir at common law, and the heir by descent is the heir special according to the custom.—But the authorities of the third

Sect. 29.

20. H. 6. 36.
[1] 1. Co. fol. 140. b.
Chudleigh's case adjuge.
(7. Co. 41.)

THIS is evident by that which hath been said, and needeth no explanation. But it hath been said, [1] that if a man give land to another and to his heires of the body of such a woman lawfully begotten, that this is no estate taile for the uncertainty by whom the heires shall be begotten; for that the brother of the donee or other cousin may have issue by the woman, which may be heire to the donee, and estates in taile must be certaine. Therefore our author to make it plaine in all his cases added to these words (his heires) which he shall ingender. But that opinion is, since our author wrote, over-ruled, and that estate adjudged to be an estate taile, and begotten shall be necessarily intended begotten by the donee (1).

ITEM si terre soit done a un home et a ses heires, que il engendra de corps sa feme, en ceo case le baron ad estate en especial taile, et la feme nad riens.

ALso if land be given to a man and to his heires, which he shall beget on the body of his wife, in this case the husband hath an estate in especial taile, and the wife hath nothing.

Sect. 30.

(Ante 20. b.)

SI home ad issue fits et devie, &c.

John de Mandevile by his wife Roberge had issue Robert and Mawde. Michael de Morevill gave certaine lands to Roberge and to the heires of John Mandevile her late husband on her body begotten, and it was adjudged that Roberge had an estate but for life, and the fee taile vested in Robert (heires of the body of his father being a good name of purchase), and that when he dyed without issue, Mawde the daughter was tenant in taile as heire of the body of her father per formam doni (2), and the formodon which she brought supposed,

Quod post mortem prefata Robergie et Roberti filii et heredis ipsius Johannis Mandeville et heredis ipsius Johannis de prefata Robergia per prefatum Johannem procreat, prefat Matilda filia prefati Johannis de prefata Robergia per prefatum Johannem procreata sorori et heredi prefati Roberti descendere debet per formam donationis prefati. And yet in truth the land did not descend unto her from Robert (3), but because she could have no other writ, it was adjudged to be good. In which case it is to be observed, that albeit Robert being heire tooke an estate taile by purchase, and the daughter was no heire of his body at the time of the gift, yet she recovered the land per formam doni, by the name of heire of the body of her father, which notwithstanding her brother was and he was capable at the time of the gift; and therefore when the gift was made she tooke nothing, but in expectancy, when she became heire per formam doni. But where a man by deede gave lands to Emme late wife of John Master, habendum et tenendum prefati Emme et hereditibus Johannis Master de corpore ejusdem Emme procreat, in that case the sonne and heire of John Master begotten on the body of Emme took no estate with Emme in the lands; because he was named after the habendum (4).

If a man hath issue two daughters, and dieth seised of two acres of land in fee simple, and the one coparcener giveth her part to her sister, and to the heires of the body of her father, in this case the donee hath an estate taile in the moiety of the donor's part, for the donee is not entire heire but the donor is heire with the donee, and she cannot give to the heires of her owne body, and the donee hath the other moiety of her sister's part for life. If a man hath issue a sonne and a daughter, and dieth, and land is given to the daughter and to the heires females

of

(1) So gift to A and the heirs which her husband shall beget of her body is tail in the wife; and yet it is not said her heirs nor heirs of her body. 41. E. 3. 24. Hal. MSS.—(2) Nota, in Littleton's case the son takes by purchase, and in Mandevile's case he takes by purchase jointly with the mother. But if the gift had been to Roberge and to the heirs of her body by the husband begotten, or to the heirs of her body and of the body of the husband begotten, it seems tail only in the wife. Quære and vid. 12. H. 4. 102. by Thirninge, Litt. sect. 352. and 1. Rep. Shellie's case. 104. Hal. MSS.—(3) And therefore though Maud had been of the half blood, he should have taken. Hic Hodgkinson's case cited fol. 14. sect. 6. M. 30. 31. Eliz. B. R. Morris and Maule W. Vid. H. 31. W. n. 23. Hal. MSS.—See ante fol. 14. a. n. 6.—(4) Where one named after the habendum shall take.—H. 13. Jac. Brookes and Brookes. In customary grant by copy, one not named in the premises, being named in the habendum, may take a present estate. Venit I. S. et cepit de domino habendum to him and his wife is good.—In frank-marriage a wife shall take, though named only in the habendum. Hic sect. 17. 4. E. 3. 4. 5. E. 3. 17. Brief 703.—So it seems in render by fine to B habendum to B and C his wife. 8. E. 3. 31. 24. E. 3. 58.—So by a deed by way of remainder, a stranger to the deed, though not named in the premises, shall take. Hic fol. 183. sect. 283. 8. E. 3. 50. But otherwise regularly one shall not take a present interest jointly with another, unless he be party to the deed and named in the premises. 8. B. 2. Feofments hic fol. 378. sect. 721. 3. H. 6. 18. 27. 16. E. 2. Ass. 371. Trin. 16. Jac. rot. 1089. Greenwood and Tyler. Hob. 314. But if by deed indented or poll A grants the manor of S habendum to B et hereditibus, it is good though he was not named in the premises. Hal. MSS.—See the case of Brookes and Brookes cited by lord Hale in Cro. Jam. 434. and 2. Ro. Abr. 66. 67. and Vin. Abr. Grant K. a. in which two last books there are many other cases relative to the same subject. See further ante 7. a. where lord Coke writes, that if A gives land to hold to B and his heirs it is good, though he is not named in the premises, to which lord Hale adds—But gift in the premises to A habendum to A and B is void as to B. M. 25. Eliz. Ow. Vid. ante 6. a. Plowd. Comment. 156. Throgmorton's case. Hal. MSS. See also ante where lord Coke describes the office of the habendum, on which lord Hale gives the following annotation.—It is not necessary to repeat the thing granted, it being sufficient that it is named in the premises. H. 44. Eliz. B. R. Hill and Giles adjudged. One not named in the premises shall not take by the habendum, unless first, in case of frankmarriage, hic sect. 17. Secondly, in case of grant by copy. T. 15. Jac. B. R. Brooke's case. Cro. Jam. 434. Thirdly, in case of a remainder. Lease to husband and wife habendum to the husband for 10 years; the wife takes nothing. T. 31. El. Mo. So lease of the site of a rectory and all tithes appertaining to it habendum the site cum pertinen' for 20 years the tithes pass only at will. H. 28. El. Mo. 222. Cary's case. Grant to A and B, habendum to A for years, remainder to B for years, is good; but lease of two acres to A and B, habendum one acre to A for years, the other to B for years, is bad. T. 4. Eliz. Vid. Hob. 172. Hal. MSS.—See contra to this last case. Mo. 26. by Brown arguendo. For other instances of differences between the premises and habendum, particularly where the former has been joint and the latter several, see Mo. 43. 247. 880.

third kind are those, which occur in respect to gifts to heirs male or female, and therefore apply more closely. Of these the earliest is John Faringdon's case. 9. H. 6. 23. and 11. H. 6. 12. in which one question was, whether a great grandson could take by purchase.

of the body of the father, she taketh but an estate for life; because she is not heire female to take by purchase as before hath been said.

Et a les heires de corps le pier. These words (les heires) are observable; for if they were (ses heires) it cleerly altereth the case. And therefore, if lands be given to the sonne and to his heires of the body of his father, the sonne cannot take as heire of the body of his father, because the grant is to him and to his heires, &c. and consequently he hath a fee simple⁽¹⁾. But if there be grandfather, father and sonne, and the father dieth, and lands be given to the sonne, and to the heires of the body of the grandfather, this is a good estate taile in the sonne; so as Littleton did put his case of the father but for an example⁽²⁾.

(Ante 20. b. Post 220. a.)

Et mults auters estates en le taile y sont, &c. This needeth no explanation.

Sect 31.

MES si home done terres ou tenements a un auter, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires males, ou a ses heires females, il, a que tiel done est fait, ad fee-simple, pur ceo que n'est my limit per le done de quel corps l'issue male ou female issira, et issint ne poit en aucun maner estre prise per lequitie del dit estatute, et pur ceo il ad fee simple.

BUT if a man give lands or tenements to another, to have and to hold to him and to his heires males, or to his heires females, he, to whom such a gift is made, hath a fee simple; because it is not limited by the gift, of what bodie the issue male or female shall be, and so it cannot in any wise be taken by the equity of the said statute, and therefore he hath a fee simple.

TERRES ou tenements. This rule extendeth but to lands or tenements, and not to the inheritance that noblemen and gentlemen have in their armories or armes. For where the nobleman or gentleman hath a fee simple in his armories or armes, yet is the same descendible to the heires males lineall or collaterall. For albeit a female be heire at the common law, yet the shield, armories and armes descend unto them that are able to beare them (farre exceeding the nature of Gavelkind, but with several differences.) And all the females of that family in respect that they be of the same blood, may in a losenge or under a curtaine manifest of what family they be by expressing the armories and armes belonging to that family, and the husband of them may impale them or quarter them with their owne as the case shall require. And for distinction and better explanation hereof. If the king by his letters patents giveth lands or tenements to a man, and to his heires males, the grant is void; for that the king is deceived in his grant, in as much as there can be no such inheritance of lands or tenements as the king intended to grant. But if the king for reward of service granteth armories or armes to a man and to his heires males without saying (of the body), this is good, and as hath been said, they shall descend accordingly⁽³⁾.

(Ante 13. b. P. 63. b.)

13. H. 8. tit. Patents. Br. 104.
(1. Co. 43. b. 26. b. Mo. 424.
Cro. Eliz. 478.)

If a man by his last will devise lands or tenements to a man and to his heires males, this by construction of law is an estate taile, the law supplying these words (of his bodie)⁽⁴⁾. Vide the Prince's [1] case, where it appeareth that an act of parliament may limit an inheritance of lands or tenements, otherwise then common law would doe, and create a new estate of inheritance, and many authorities in law there cited worthy of note and observation. Rot. Parliam. anno 1. E. 4. nu. 26. (5). The [u] duchie of Lancaster is intailed to king Edward the Fourth and his heires kings of England. And king Henry the sixth did by his letters patents grant, Johanni filio Johannis Talbot, quod ipse et haeredes sui Domini manerij de Kingston Lisle in comitatu Berk. ex nunc Domini et Barones de Lisle Nobiles et Proceres regni habebantur, teneantur, et reputentur, &c. By this he had a fee simple qualified in the dignity⁽⁶⁾. 2. H. 5. fol. 1. A grant was made to a man, and to his heires tenants of the manor of Dale⁽⁷⁾. A man seised of lands in Gavelkind, gives or devises the same to a man and to his eldest heires. He cannot hereby alter the customary inheritance, but as in the case of our author,

27. H. 8. 27.

[1] 8. Co. 1. The Prince's case.
21. E. 3. 4. 22. E. 3. 3. 24. E. 3. 53. 9. H. 6. 25. 9. E. 4. 15.
1. Marie Dier. 94. (7. Co. 41)
[2] Per literas patentes auctoritate parliamenti.

(3. Co. 20. 21.)

(1) Yet gift to A and his heirs of the body of B his wife, who is dead, is tail. 12. H. 4. 1. Rationem diversitatis quære, for the second son is his heir of the body of the father. Hal. MSS.—(2) Vid. Dy. 24. 247. 274. 157. 394. for the form of the writ. Hal. MSS.—(3) See further as to the descent of Arms p. 140. b. See also on the subject of Arms in general, Dugd. Ant. Usage in bearing of Arms and several pieces in Hearn. Antiq. Disc. 2d ed. vol. 1.—(4) Dy. 116. Hal. MSS. See further lord Offulton's case. 3. Salk. 336. and 11. Mod. 189. See S. C. cited 2. P. Wms. 2. and in Vin. Abr. Devise U. b. pl. 2. in Marg.—(5) In the case on the title to the earldom of Oxford decided in parliament 1. Cha. 1. the judges held, that a limitation of the earldom to Awbrey de Vere and his heires males, being by act of parliament, was sufficient to raise a fee simple descendible to males only. See W. Jo. 100.—(6) Lord Hale adds the following instances of special limitations. King Henry the Third dedit manerium de Penreth et Sourby Alexandro regi Scotie et haeredibus suis regibus Scotie; and Alexander having daughters, of which one was married to the earl of Hunt. died, not having any heir king of Scotland, et ea de causa King E. 1. recovered seisin, and the co-heirs of Alexander were excluded. Lib. parl. E. 1. 134. 308. The hospital of Saint Katharine was founded by queen Eleanor, wife of Hen. 3. reserving the patronage sibi et reginis Anglie pro tempore existentibus et eo titulo regina Philippa uxor E. 3. habet patronatum. Claus. 7. E. 3. parte 2. m. 2. Hal. MSS.—(7) See further as to a qualified fee ante 1. b. and the books cited in n. 5. there.

purchase under a remainder devised to the testator's next heir male and the heirs male of his body, the great grandson's mother, who was the testator's heir general, being alive when the estates precedent to the remainder determined. The case was argued twice, but there is an adjournment in the Year Book, and what was the opinion of the court is not any where mentioned; but there is reason for supposing, that it was against the remainder; for in 20. H. 6. 44. Newton, then a judge, though he had before argued as counsel for the remainder in Farringdon's case, lays it down as clear law, that if land is given to A for life, remainder to the right heirs male of the body of B, to hold to them and their heirs for ever, the son of a daughter of B, being his heir, may take notwithstanding he makes out his description through a female; and Fortescue, chief justice, assents to the position. This construction of heirs male of the body as words of purchase, being attended to, will be found almost necessarily to be a clear authority with lord Coke; for it shews, that as words of purchase they describe males being also heirs general, whereas as words of limitation it is agreed they have a different import, and signify such males as shall be heirs special according to the particular course of descent marked out by the donor, though they do not happen to be heirs general; which distinction is the whole amount of lord Coke's doctrine. But the next authority, which is in Bro. Abr. Done. 61. applies more directly. There lord Brooke, after mentioning the difference taken by Ellerker in Farringdon's case between descent and purchase, adds in confirmation of it, that by Hare, master of the Rolls, an antient apprentice, there is a difference between a gift in possession to a man and his heirs female, &c. and a gift to a stranger the remainder to the heirs females of another, for there heirs in deed must be when the remainder falls, and otherwise the remainder is void for ever. The same doctrine is in Plowd.

Lib. I. Cap. 3. Of Tenant in taile, &c. Sect. 32.

Mich. 26. & 27. Eliz. in Com. Banco. Leonard Lovelace's case.

thor, Ut res magis valeat, the law rejecteth (Males) so in this case the law rejecteth this adjective (eldest). And so it is if lands be given to a man, and to the eldest heires females of his body, yet all the daughters shall inherit as it hath been resolved.

[x] 18. Aff. p. 5. 18. E. 3. 46. 6. (Not so in the king's case.) 9. H. 6. 23. 25. 8 Co. fol. 1. The Prince's case. Ancient tenures, fol. 3.

Et issint ne poet estre prise per lequitie del dit statuti, &c. For it is a certaine rule in law, that in every estate in taile within the said statute, it must be limited either by expresse words or by words equipollent of what body the heire inheritable shall issue. And it was [x] adjudged in parliament, that where lands were given to a man, and to his heires males, that this was a fee simple, and that as well the heires females as heires males should inherit, for the grant of a subject shall be taken most strongly against himselfe.

Et pur ceo il ad fee simple. Littleton's reason being shortly collected is this. Whosoever hath an estate of inheritance, hath either a fee simple or a fee taile; but where lands be given to a man and his heires males, he hath no estate taile, and therefore he hath a fee simple.

What actions tenant in taile may have and cannot have, vide Sect. 595. What great alterations have been made since Littleton wrote concerning not only leases to be made by tenant in taile, but barres also of the estate taile itselfe by force of certaine acts of parliament made since Littleton's time, you shall read Sect. 56. and 708. (1).

CHAP. 3. Sect. 32.

Tenant in taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct.

(Dr. & Stud. b. 2. c. 1.)

(4. Co. 63. 1. Ro. Abr. 296.)

[a] Temps E. 1. wast. 125. 59. E. 3. 16. 31. E. 3. aid. 35. 42. E. 3. 22. 43. E. 3. 1. 45. E. 3. 22. 28. E. 3. 96. 46. E. 3. 13. 27. 2. H. 4. 17. 7. H. 4. 10. 11. H. 4. 10. 21. H. 6. 56. 10. H. 6. 1. 26. H. 6. aid 77. 3. E. 4. 11. 13. E. 2. Entre Conge. 56. Fitz. N. B. 203. Lewes Bowle's case, 11. Co. fol. 8.

(Cre. Eliz. 671.)

LITTLETON having spoken of estates of inheritance, viz. fee simple and fee taile, now he treateth of tenants of freehold tantum, that is, for terme of life, and therein first of tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct; and he giveth unto him the first place, because this tenant hath eight qualities and privileges which tenant in taile himselfe hath, and which lessee for life hath not. [a] As first he is punishable for waste (2). Secondly, he shall not be compelled to attorne. Thirdly, he shall not have ayde of him in the reversion. Fourthly, upon his alienation, no writ of entrie in consimili casu, lyeth. Fifthly, after his death no writ of intrusion doth lie. Sixthly, he may joine the mise in a writ of right, in a speciall manner. Seventhly, in a Præcipe, brought by him he shall not name himselfe tenant for life. Eighthly, in a Præcipe brought against him he shall not be named barely tenant for life. And yet he hath four other qualities, which are not agreeable to an

TENANT en fee taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct est, lou tenements sont dones a un home et a sa feme en especiall taile, si lun de eux devy sans issue, celui, que survesquist, est tenant en taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct. Et s'ils avoient issue, et lun de vie, coment que durant la vie l'issue, celui que survesquist ne serra dit tenant en taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct; uncore, si l'issue devy sans issue, issint que ne soit aucun issue en vie que poit enheriter perforce de le taile, donque celui, que survesquist,

TENANT in fee taile after possibilitie of issue extinct is, where tenements are given to a man, and to his wife in especiall taile, if one of them die without issue, the survivor is tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct. And if they have issue, and the one die, albeit that during the life of the issue, the survivor shall not be said tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct; yet if the issue die without issue, so as there be not any issue alive which may inherit by force of the taile, then the surviving party of the donees

(1) By what acts tenant in tail may prejudice his issue or those in remainder or reversion without fine or recovery, and where his acts shall not affect them, see Vin. Abr. Estate F. a. to I. a. and Tayle D.E.F.—(2) See acc. 2. Inst. 302. But yet he cannot have action of waste against another, for he cannot count ad exheredationem; and it is said, that tenant in tail loses his action of waste, if he becomes tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct pending the writ. See Bro. Abr. Waste pl. 14. 59, 60. 2. Ro. Abr. 325. pl. 5. Mo. 18. and post 53. b. Note also that it is said, that though such tenant is not punishable for waste, yet if he cuts down trees, they are not his property. 4. Co. 63. As to this difference between being punishable for waste in felling trees and having the property in them, see 1. P. Wms. 528. See also 2. P. Wms. 241. where it is said by the court, that if tenant for life cuts down timber, it belongs to those, who at the time of its being severed were seized of the first estate of inheritance.

Quær. 87. and 133. and the very learned author illustrates it by a case, the same as that stated by lord Coke. In Quær. 87. the words of the book are, If a remainder is appointed to the right heirs female of the body of I. S. who dies, having a son and daughter, the remainder shall be void; because the daughter cannot have it, in regard that she is not heir though she be female. The next authority is Shelley's case, which arose between the second son of Edward Shelley and a posthumous son of Edward's deceased eldest son. One point was, whether the second son could take by purchase, under a remainder to the heirs male of Edward's body, and the heirs male of the bodies of such heirs male, in which case his estate would not have been devolved by the birth of the posthumous son of his brother, the eldest son having left a daughter, who at Edward's death was his heir general. Judgment was given against the second son; but from the report of lord Coke and More, it seems not to have been absolutely requisite to have decided whether the second son could take by purchase; for the judges held, that on account of the preceding use for life to Edward, the remainder operated as words of limitation, though Edward died before the use to him could arise, and that so the second son took in course and nature of a descent, till the birth of his brother's posthumous son, who then became intitled. See Mo. 140. and 1. Co. 106. However, lord Dyer in his report of the case places the remainder in both points of view, and besides observing that by descent the second son could only take the remainder till the birth of his elder brother's posthumous son, also says, that he could not have it as a purchaser, because he was not heir of the body of his father, for the daughter of the eldest son was heir general, and the second son was not heir male of the body of his father unless he was heir as well as male. These words from lord Dyer, when it is considered that he was one of the judges on whose opinion Shelley's case was decided, and that they are introduced to explain the reason of the judgment, are very strong evidence, that the judges in Shelley's case gave their sanction to lord Coke's doctrine in the full extent of it, that is, in the case of a gift where heirs male of the body were both words of purchase and of limitation; and lord Dyer's authority ought to have the greater weight, because he is not contradicted by any other report of the same case; not even by lord Anderson, who was counsel for the second son, for he only takes notice of lord Coke's de les donees est tenant en le taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct.

ACCOUNT

nees is tenant in taile, after possibilitie of issue extinct.

estate in taile, but to a bare lessee for life. [b] (1) First, if he maketh a feoffment in fee, this is a forfeiture of his estate (2). Secondly, if an estate in fee, or in fee taile, in reversion, or remainder, descend or come to this tenant, his estate is drowned, and the fee or fee taile executed. Thirdly, he in the reversion or remainder shall be received upon his default, as well as upon bare tenant for life (3). Fourthly, an exchange between a bare tenant for life and him is good, for their estates in respect of their quantity are equal; so as the difference standeth in the quality, and not in the quantity of the estate. And as an estate taile was originally carved out of a fee simple, so is the estate of this tenant out of an estate in especiall taile. And he is called tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct; because by no possibility he can have any issue inheritable to the same estate taile. But if a man giveth land to a man and his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, and they live till each of them be C. yeere old, and have no issue, yet do they continue tenant in taile; for that the law seeth no impossibilitie of having children. But when a man and his wife be tenant in especiall taile, and the wife dieth without issue, there the law seeth an apparent impossibility, that any issue that the husband can have by any other wife should inherit this estate. And let this tenant keep his estate, for he hath these privileges in respect of the privacy of his estate, and of the inheritance that was once in him. [c] For in the case of Evens (4), Mich. 28 & 29. Eliz. it was adjudged, that where tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct granted over his estate to another, that his grantee was compelled to attorne in a quid juris clamat (5), as a bare tenant for life, and so be named in the writ; for by the assignement the privacy of the estate being altered, the privilege was gone; and this judgement was affirmed in a writ of error, and herewith agreeth 27. H. 6. tit. aid. 29. E. 3. 1. b(6). Statham 29. E. 3. 1. b(6).

[b] 13. E. Entre Cong. 56. 44. E. 3. 22. 28. E. 3. 96. 27. Aff. p. 60. F. N. B. 159. 32. E. 3. tit. 28. 55. 55. E. 3. 4. 9. E. 4. 17. 2. R. 2. 1. 1. 147. 41. E. 3. 12. 20. E. 3. 1. 1. 38. E. 3. 33. Lewes Bowles' case ubi supra.

[c] 11. Co. fol. 83. Lewes Bowles' case. (Post. 316.) 27. H. 6. tit. aid. Statham. 29. E. 3. 1. b.

27. H. 6. tit. aid. 29. E. 3. 1. b.

Sect. 33.

ITEM si tenements sont donees a un home et a ses heires, que il engendra de corps sa feme, en cest cas la feme nad ryen en les tenements, et le baron est seisie comme donee en speciall taile. Et en ceo cas, si la feme devy sans issue de son corps engendres per son baron, donques le baron est tenant en taile apres possibility diffue extinct.

ALSO if tenements be given to a man and to his heires which he shall beget on the bodie of his wife, in this case the wife hath nothing in the tenements, and the husband is seised as donee in especiall taile. And in this case if the wife die without issue of her body begotten by her husband, then the husband is tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct.

SI la feme devy sans issue.

So as Lewes Bowles' case 13. Co. fol. 80. the estate of this tenancy must be altered by the act of God, and that by dying without issue; for if a feoffment in fee be made to the use of a man and his wife for tearme of their lives, and after to the use of their next issue male to be begotten in taile, and after to the use of the husband and wife, and of the heires of their two bodies begotten, they having no issue male at that time; in this case the husband and wife are tenants in speciall taile executed (7), and after they have issue a sonne, in this case they are become tenants for life, the remainder to the sonne in taile, the remainder to them in speciall taile (8), for albeit their estate taile is turned to an estate for life, yet they have but a bare estate for life; but if the issue die, and the husband die having no other issue, and then the sonne die without issue, the wife shall have the privileges belonging to a tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct, as it appeareth in Lewes Bowles' case ubi supra, where it is said, that the state of this tenant must be created by the act of God, and not by limitation of the party, ex dispositione Legis, and not ex provisione hominis [d]. If land be given to a man and to his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, and after they are divorced causa pracontractus or consanguinitatis, or affinitatis, their estate of inheritance is turned to a joint estate for life, and albeit they had once an inheritance in them, yet for that the estate is altered by their owne act, and not by the act of God, viz. by the

[d] 7. H. 4. 16. 8. E. 1. Aff. 415. 12. Aff. 21. 19. Aff. p. 2. 13. E. 3. Aff. 91. in fine. (9. Co. 140. 141. 7. Co. 42. b. Kenne's case. and 4. Co. 29.)

(1) 43. Aff. 24. Hal. MSS.—(2) So if he mispleads, 39 E. 3. 16. Hal. MSS.—(3) 28. E. 3. 96. Contra as to receipt Hal. MSS.—(4) M. 26. 27. Eliz. B. R. Leon. T. 29. Eliz. Clench 88. Evans and Aprichard. Hal. MSS. See Aprice's case, 2. Leon. 40. 3. Leon. 241. which seems to be the case referred to by lord Coke and lord Hale. The anonymous case in 1. Leon. 290. and 3. Leon. 121. seems also to be the same case.—(5) 28. E. 3. 96. Grantee has the privilege. Hal. MSS. But see the reasons for the judgment cited by lord Coke in the books cited in note 4.—(6) Quære if punishable for waste. Hal. MSS. See 2. Inst. 302.—(7) Cordall's case Cro. Eliz. 315. is to the contrary; for there land was devised to A for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, remainder to the heirs of A's body, and according to Croke, who mentions the case as reported to him by lord Coke, it was resolved, that A's estate tail was not executed for the possibility of the mean estate's interposing, but was so disjoined during A's life, that his wife could not be endowed. But see Cal. B. R. temp. Hardw. 17. where lord Hardwicke says, that Cordall's case has been several times denied to be law.—(8) Sic nota remainder supported, without particular estate, by the possibility that issue may be born. But if such tenant levies a fine, now this remainder is destroyed, because the estates are confounded. Hal. MSS.—Here it is proper to add, that there is a difference between subjoining the inheritance to the particular estate by the same conveyance as limits the intermediate contingent remainder, and an accession of one to the other by a distinct and subsequent act or conveyance; for in the latter case the contingent remainder is destroyed, though not in the former. See acc. Puresoy and Rogers 2. Saund. 380. It has even been adjudged, that in the latter case the descent of the inheritance on the person having the particular estate will destroy the contingent remainder, where the descent has been subsequent to the commencement of the particular estate. See Kent, and Harpool. 1. Ventr. 306. T. Jo. 76. Hooker and Hooker Cal. in B. R. temp. Hardw. 13. But a descent of the fee on tenant for life will not hurt the contingent remainder, where the particular estate and the descent take place at the same time, and are derived from the same person; as where land is devised to A for life, remainder over on a contingency, and at the devifor's death the reversion descends upon A as his heir. See acc. Archer's case 1. Co. 96. Plunkett and Holmes 1. Lev. 111. and Boothby and Vernon 9. Mod. 147. The case of Wood and Ingersole Cro. Jam. 260. seems contra; but see the observation on the last case in T. Jo. 79. and Pollexf. 481. It would be a great omission not to apprise the student, that the subject of this note is fully gone into by Mr. Fearne in his Essay on Contingent Remainders. See page 111. to 118. of the second edition, where the author most learnedly and ingeniously states the several distinctions, explains the reasons on which they depend, and endeavours to reconcile all the cases on this nice subject.

account of the reasons of the judgment, by observing that they were not mentioned in court. See 1. And. 71. Accordingly Mr. Serjeant Rolle cites Shelley's case as having determined the point. See 2. Ro. Abr. 416. F. pl. 5. Affenhurst's case. Mich. 7. Jam. is the next authority, and in that land was devised to executors till 900l. should be raised for the preferment of the testator's

(1. Ro. Abr. 841.)

the death of either party without issue, they are not tenants in taile after possibility, of issue extinct (1). Lands are given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of the body of the husband, the remainder to the husband and wife, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten; the husband dies without issue; the wife shall not be tenant in taile after possibility, for the remainder in speciall taile was utterly void, for that it could never take effect; for so long as the husband should have issue, it should inherit by force of the generall taile, and if the husband die without issue, then the speciall estate taile cannot take effect, in as much as the issue, which should inherit the especiall, must be begotten by the husband, and so the generall, which is larger and greater, hath frustrated the especiall which is lesser. And the wife in that case shall be punished for waste.

Sect. 34.

IF lands be given to a man with a woman in frankmarriage, albeit the woman (which was the cause of the gift) dieth without issue, yet the husband shall be tenant in taile, apres possibility, &c. for that he and his wife were donees in especiall taile, and so within the words of Littleton. The residue of this section is evident.

ET nota que nul peut estre tenant en le taile apres possibility diffue extinct, forsque un des donees, ou le donee en le special taile. Car le donee en general taile ne peut estre unque dit tenant en taile apres possibility diffue extinct; pur ceo que tous temps durant sa vie, il peut per possibility aver issue que peut inheriter per force de mesme le taile. Et issint en meme le manere lissue, que est heire a les donees en un especial taile, ne peut estre dit tenant en taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct, causa qua supra.

AND note that none can be tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct, but one of the donees, or the donee in especiall taile. For the donee in general taile cannot be said to be tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct; because alwaies during his life, he may by possibility have issue which may inherit by force of the same entaile. And so in the same manner the issue, which is heir to the donees in especiall taile, cannot be tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct, for the reason abovesaid.

(Dr. and Stud. 61. 11. Co. 80.)

* This, and that which follows, is not in the first (2) edition (which I have.) And therefore, (that I may speake it once for all) it was wrong to the authour to adde any thing, (especially in one context) to his worke.

* Et nota que tenant en taile apres possibilitie diffue extinct ne serra unque puny de wast, pur lenheritance que fuit un foits en luy, 10. Hen. 6. 1. Mes cestuy en le reversion peut entrer sil alien en fee, 45. E. 3. 22.

And note that tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct shall not be punished of waste, for the inheritance that once was in him. 10. H. 6. 1. But he in the reversion may enter if he alien in fee, 45. E. 3. 22.

CHAP.

(1) Husband and wife tenants in special tail; the husband was attainted of treason, or levies fine with proclamations; the husband dies having issue by the wife: the issue cannot inherit, and yet to many purposes the wife surviving is tenant in tail after possibility, for if she makes lease for 21 years according to the statute, it shall bind the devisee, or if it is for three lives, it shall not be a forfeiture. H. 21. Jac. Rot. Crocker and Kelsey. Hob. Rep. Melton's case. Vid. 9. Rep. Beaumont's case. It seems, she cannot suffer recovery after. Quære. Vid. this case of Beaumont afterwards debated. H. 13. Cha. B. R. in Baker and Willis Cro. Cha. 476. The case of Crocker and Kelsey is in W. Jo. 60. Hutt. 84. Cro. Jam. 688. Bridgm. 27. 2. Ro. Rep. 490. 498. 1. Ro. Abr. 843. pl. 3. and O. Bendl. 139. 143. Beaumont's case is in 9. Co. 138. b. and Melton's case is in Hob. 254. Note, that in the case of Crocker and Kelsey, the question was on the operation of a lease for 21 years not warranted by the 32. H. 8. the ancient rent not having been reserved; but the issue in tail having levied a fine during the wife's life, it was adjudged that the lease was good; but it was to have been agreed, that the wife, notwithstanding the husband's death, was tenant in tail so as to be capable of making leases within the statute. Indeed this latter point had been adjudged in a former case, which is in Godb. 102. See too 4. Leon. 57. As to the former point, besides the books already cited, see 2. Sid. 62. — (2) By the first edition, lord Coke means that printed at Rohan, as appears by the preface to this his Commentary on Littleton. But the edition by Letton and Machlinia, which was really the first, is also without the addition here mentioned. It appears to have been first introduced into the edition by Redman. — See further as to the subject of tenant in tail after possibility. Vin. Abr. Tayle, I.

testator's three daughters, and afterwards to his right heirs males for ever, and one Beard was found by special verdict to be the heir male; but the court of king's bench held that he could not take the remainder, because the three daughters were the heirs general, and in Easter 17. James the judgment was affirmed in the exchequer chamber. This case is the stronger, because it arose on a will, and the testator, in the devise to his heirs male, mentions his heirs general, which no doubt was urged as a circumstance to shew that the testator meant a special kind of heir, and might have warranted a departure from the strict sense of heir without overturning lord Coke's general rule. See Hob. 34. and Palm. 50. Counden and Clerke already stated from lord Hobart at the beginning of this note, is another case where a devise to heirs male could not take effect, because the heirs general were females; and this judgment appears to have been also affirmed on error in B. R. See Jenk. Cent. 294. There are several modern determinations to the same purpose. In Southcott and Stowell, which was adjudged about the 29. of Cha. 2. one having two sons covenanted to stand seized to the use of the eldest in special tail male, remainder to the heirs male of the covenantor, or according to one report of the case the heirs male of his body, and for want of such issue to his own right heirs. The eldest son dies leaving a son and daughter; the covenantor dies, and then the son of the covenantor's eldest son; and the question was whether the second son or the daughters of the eldest son should have the estate. The court determined in favour of the second son, because the grandson survived the grandfather, and being heir general as well as male could take either by purchase or descent on his death, and therefore it was immaterial whether an estate for life arose to the covenantor by implication or not; but it was agreed by the whole court, and even by the counsel for the second son, that if the grandson had not survived, the second son could not have taken by purchase, because his nieces would have been heirs general, and consequently he could not have been complete heir. See 1. Freem. 216. 225. 1. Mod. 226. 237. 2. Mod. 207. and 3. Kebl. 704. In 1695 lord keeper Somers, in the case of Starling and Elrick, decreed against one, who claimed to take by purchase under a devise to heirs male, because a female was the heir general. See Prec. in Chanc. 54. The case of Ford and lord Ossulton, which was determined in Mich. 7. Ann. by the king's bench is still stronger, for in that one

CHAP. 4. Sect. 35.

Curtesie Dengleterre.

TENANT per la curtesie Dengleterre est, lou home prent feme seise en fee simple ou en fee taile general, ou seise come heire de le taile special, et ad issue per mesme la feme male ou female, oyes ou vife (1), soit lissue apres mort ou en vie, si la feme devie, le baron tiendra la terre durant sa vie, per la ley Dengleterre. Et est appel tenant per le Curtesie Dengleterre, pur ceo que ceo est use en nul auter realme, forsque tantsolement en Engleterre.

Et ascuns ont dit, que il ne serra tenant per le curtesie, si non que lenfant, quil ad per sa feme, soit oye crie, car per le crie est prove que le enfant fuit nee vife: Ideo

TENANT by the curtesie of England is, where a man taketh a wife seised in fee simple or in fee taile generall, or seised as heir in taile especiall, and hath issue by the same wife, male or female borne alive, albeit the issue after dieth or liveth, yet if the wife dies, the husband shall hold the land during his life by the law of England And he is called tenant by the curtesie of England, because this is used in no other realme but in England onely.

And some have said, that he shall not be tenant by the curtesie, unlesse the childe, which he hath by his wife, be heard crie; for by the crie it is proved, that the child was borne alive. Therefore Quære.

Quære (2).

At the coronation of king R. 2. saith the record, [b] Johannes rex Castilie et Legionis Dux Lancastrie, coram dicto domino rege et consilio suo comparens, clamavit ut comes Leicestrie officium Seneschalci Anglice, et ut dux Lancastrie ad gerendum principalem gladium domini regis vocat Curtana die coronationis ejusdem regis, et ut comes Lincoln' ad sciendum et secandum coram ipso domino rege sedente ad mensam dicto die coronationis; et quia fact' diligenti examinatione coram peritis de consilio regis de premissis, satis constabat eidem consilio, quod ad ipsum ducem tanquam tenentem per legem Anglice post mortem Blanchie quondam uxoris sue pertinuit officia predicta prout superius clamabat exercere, consideratum fuit per ipsum regem et consilium suum predictum, quod idem Dux officia predicta per se et sufficientes deputatos suos faceret et exerceret, et feoda debita in seise. And first of what seisin a man shall be tenant by the curtesie. [c] There is in law a twofold seisin, viz. a seisin in deed, and a seisin in law, whereof more shall be said, Sect. 468, and 681. And here Littleton intendeth a seisin in deed, if it may be attained unto. [f] As if a man dieth seised of lands in fee simple or fee taile generall, and these lands descend to his daughter, and she taketh a husband and hath issue, and dyeth before any entry, the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesie, and yet in this case she had a seisin in law; but if she or her husband had during her life entred, he should have been tenant by the curtesie (3). [g] A man seised of an advowson (4) or rent in fee hath issue a daughter, who is married, and hath issue, and dyeth seised, the wife, before the rent became due or the church became voyd, dieth, she had but a seisin in law, and yet he shall be tenant by the curtesie, because he could by no industry attaine to any other seisin, Et impotentia excusat legem (5) But a man shall not be tenant by the curtesie of a bare right, title, use (6), or of a reversion (7) or remainder expectant upon any estate of freehold, unlesse the particular estate be determined or ended during the coverture.

PRIST feme

[c] F. N. B. 194.

(Post. 153.)

[f] 1. Mar. Dyer 55.

(Post. 40.)

[g] 7. E. 3. 66. 3. H. 7. 5.

(6. Co. 68. a. 1. Co. 97. b. 3. Co. 54. Ante 15. b.)

(8. Co. 56.)

[b] Proceff. fact. ad Coronationem R. 2. Anno regni sui primo Rot. clauf. m. 45.

(1) Instead of oyes ou vife, the words are neex vif in L. and M. This latter reading is conformable to lord Coke's translation. — (2) This quære is in L. and M. but not in Roh. — (3) But entry is not always necessary to give seisin in deed; for if the land is in lease for years, curtesy may be without entry or even receipt of rent, the possession of the lessee for years being deemed the possession of the husband and wife. See the case of De Grey and Richardson 3. Atk. 469. Lord Coke's doctrine about seisin for a possessio fratris is the same. See ante 15. a. In n. 4. there the case of Newman and Newman is cited, from Willf. vol. 1. p. 516. but no hint being given of the point adjudged, it may be proper to add here, that in that case the court construed the possession of a mother to be a possession for an infant her son as his guardian by law, she being next of blood to whom the inheritance could not descend, and held it a sufficient seisin to exclude the daughters by a former wenter. — (4) Whether it be an advowson in gross or appendant. A seised of a manor, to which an advowson is appendant, dies, having issue a daughter, who takes husband and dies before entry into the manor. It seems, that the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesy of the advowson, nor of the rents incident to the manor, because he had not seisin of the principal. Hal. MSS. — (5) According to Perkins, the husband shall have curtesy in an advowson, though he suffers the ordinary to present by lapse on an avoidance in his wife's life-time. Perk. Sect. 468. But such a case is not within lord Coke's reason for allowing curtesy of an advowson without seisin in deed; nor do I find any authority to support the doctrine, besides Mr. Perkins's name. That indeed, on account of the learning and ingenuity displayed in his Profitable Book on the laws of England, ought in general to have considerable weight; though one, who wrote soon after Mr. Perkins, describes him to be a man that writeth of diverse titles of our law rather subtilly than soundly. Fulb. Paral. 40. a. See also a more particular character of Mr. Perkins in Fulb. Prepar. 28. a. — (6) Here an use before or not executed by the 27. H. 8. must be meant; for an use within that statute is a legal estate. See acc. 2. And. 75. 147. and by lord Coke himself in Cro. Jam. 201. See also 1. New Abridgm. 660. But though in strictness of law there cannot be curtesy of trusts, yet since lord Coke's time our courts of equity have allowed curtesy both of trusts and of other interests, which, though in law mere rights and titles, are deemed estates in equity, and made to conform to many of the rules and consequences incident to estates in law. See in 1. Atk. 603 the case of Cashborn and Inglish, in which lord ch. Hardwicke decreed curtesy of an equity of redemption. See S. C. more fully reported in Vin. Abr. Curtesy E. pl. 23. However a wife in point of benefit may have a trust of inheritance, which may be so declared as to prevent curtesy, as by directing the profits during the wife's life to be paid for her separate use; for in such a case the intention to exclude the husband from curtesy is manifest, and he cannot have an equitable seisin. 3. Atk. 715. It is also proper to remark, that though curtesy out of a trust is allowed, yet dower has been refused; a partiality not easy to be reconciled with reason, however settled by the current of authorities. But as to this see Post 31. b. — (7) Mr. Perkins makes a quære, whether, if a woman seised in fee makes lease for life, reserving rent to her and her heirs, the husband shall not have curtesy in the rent during the lease; but he seems to admit, that the husband shall not have curtesy of the land itself, unless the lease determines before the wife's death. Perk. Sect. 467. See Post 32. a. where in a like case lord Coke says, that the wife shall not have dower. But if a rent is incident to a reversion expectant on an estate tail, the husband shall have curtesy of the rent till the tail determines. Post 30. a.

one Ford having issue three sons and a daughter, and also a brother, devised to his three sons successively in tail male, with remainder to his own right heirs male for ever, and the three sons being dead without issue, the whole court held, that the brother

Lib. I. Cap. 4. Of the Curtesie Dengleterre. Sect. 35.

hac parte obtineret. Qui quidem dux officium Seneschalcie prædictæ personaliter adimplevit, &c. And every man, that claimed to hold by grand serjanty to do any service to the king at his coronation, exhibited his petition to the said duke as steward of England, who upon hearing the proofes either allowed or disallowed the same.

Rot. Patent. Ann. 20. H. 6.

In letters patents made by King H. 6. to Richard earle of Salisbury you shall finde this clause, Quod charissimus consanguineus noster Richardus, nunc comes Sarum, qui Aliciam filiam et hæredem Thomæ nuper comitis Sarum adhuc superstitem duxit in uxorem, et cum eadem Alicia prolem tempore mortis prædictæ Thomæ habuit et habet superstitem de præsentibus, coque preterito idem Richardus nunc comes Sarum nomen, statum et honorem comitis Sarum, &c. habet, et pro tempore vite sue de jure præterito præmissorum habere debet (1). The name of the issue, which the said Richard earle of Salisbury had by the said Alice was Richard, who married with Anne the sister and heire of Henry Beauchamp earle of Warwicke, who was earle of Warwicke to him and to his heires, and duke of Warwicke to him and to the heires males of his body. And Richard the sonne having then no issue by his wife, king H. 6. in 27. yeare of his raigne granted to him that he should be earle of Warwicke, Licet ipse et prædicta Anna exitum inter eos ad præsens non habent. These and many more I have read concerning this matter, and only say to the reader, Utere tuo judicio, nihil enim impedit.

Rot. Patent. de anno 27. H. 6.
m.

[1] Vid. r. E. 3. G. 5. E. 3. 26.
(Post. 30)

[2] If an estate of freehold in feignories, rents, commons, or such like be suspended, a man shall not be tenant by the curtesie; but if the suspension be but for yeares, he shall be tenant by the curtesie. As if a tenant make a lease for life of the tenancie to the seignioresse, who taketh a husband, and hath issue, the wife dieth, he shall not be tenant by the curtesie (2), but if the lease had been made but for yeares he shall be tenant by the curtesie.

W. 2. ca. 1. Litt. ca. Dower fol.
40. fecl. 52.
Paine's case 8. Co. fol. 34.

En fee simple on en fee taile generall, ou seise come heire de la taile speciall, et ad issue per la feme male ou female. Secondly, of what estate. If lands be given to a woman and to the heires males of her body, she taketh a husband and hath issue a daughter and dieth, he shall not be tenant by the curtesie; because the daughter by no possibility could inherite the mother's estate in the land; and therefore where Littleton saith, issue by his wife male or female, it is to be understood, which by possibility may inherit as heir to her mother of such estate. Littleton himself explaneth this by expresse words Cap. Dower fo. 40. Sect. 52. And therefore if a woman tenant in taile generall maketh a feoffment in fee, and taketh back an estate in fee; and take a husband and hath issue, and the wife dieth, the issue may in a formedon recover the land against his father; because he is to recover by force of the estate taile as heir to his mother, and is not inheritable to his father (3).

[a] Old tenures 21. H. 3. tit.
dower 198.

Et ad issue. 3. The time of having the issue. 4. What kinde of issue. If a man seised of lands in fee hath issue a daughter, who taketh husband and hath issue, the father dieth, the husband enter, he [a] shall be tenant by the curtesie, albeit the issue was had before the wife was seised. And so it is albeit the issue had dyed in the life time of her father before any descent of the land, yet shall he be tenant by the curtesie (4). If a woman [b] seised of lands in fee taketh husband, and by him is bigge with childe, and in her travell dieth, and the childe is ripped out her body alive, yet shall he not be tenant by the curtesie; because the childe was not borne during the marriage, nor in the life time of the wife, but in the meane time the land descended, and in pleading he must alledge, that he had issue during the marriage.

[b] Vide Paine's case. ubi supra.

[c] Bract. lib. 5. 437. 438.
Britt. ca. 66. and ca. 83.
Fleta lib. 1. c. 5. and lib. 6. cap.
54.
(Ante 3. b. 7. b. 8. a.)

If the wife be [c] delivered of a monster, which hath not the shape of mankinde, this is no issue in the law; but although the issue hath some deformity in any part of his body, yet if he hath humane shape this sufficeth. Hii, qui contra formam humani generis converso more procreantur, (ut si mulier monstruosum vel prodigiosum fuerit enixa) inter liberos non computantur. Partus tamen cui natura aliquantulum ampliaverit vel diminuerit non tamen superabundanter, ut si sex digitos vel nisi quatuor habuerit, bene debet inter liberos commemorari. Si inutilia natura reddidit membra, ut si curvus fuerit aut gibbosus vel membra tortuosa habuerit, non tamen est partus monstruosus. Item puerorum alii sunt masculi, alii feminae, alii hermophradite. Hermophradita tam masculino quam femina comparatur secundum prævalentiam sexus incalescentis.

[d] 28. H. 8. 25. Dyer.
Paine's case ubi supra.

If the issue be born deaf or dumbe or both, or be born an idiot, yet it is a lawfull issue so make the husband tenant by the curtesie and to inherit the land.

[e] Mirror cap. 1. fecl. 3.

Oyes ou vive. If it be borne alive [d] it is sufficient, though it be not heard cry; for peradventure it may be born dumbe. And this is resolved cleerly in Paine's case ubi supra. For the pleading (as hath beene said) is, that during the marriage he had issue by his wife, and upon that point the triall is to be had, and upon the evidence (5) it must be proved, that the issue was alive, for mortuus exitus non est exitus, so as the crying is but a prooffe that the childe was born alive, and so is motion, stirring, and the like. And it is said by an ancient author [e] that it was ordained in the raigne of king H. 1. Que tous que survenissent

(1) So nota till issue the husband cannot use the title of his wife's dignity; but afterwards he may. So adjudged by Hen. 8. in the case of Wimby, who claimed the title of lord Talboys in right of his wife. Hal. MSS.—This annotation shews, that in the opinion of lord Hale a title of honour admits of curtesy. But lord Coke, after stating two precedents, one of curtesy in a title of honour, and another of curtesy in an office of honour, avoids making the least inference, and professedly leaves the reader to his own judgment; from which reserve it may be conjectured, that he had his doubts. In fact, the point had been several times controverted in lord Coke's time. About the year 1580 Richard Bertie claimed the barony of Willoughby in right of his lady Catherine, duchess of Suffolk, he having had issue by her. The claim was referred by queen Elizabeth, to lord Burghley, and two other commissioners, as was also a claim of the same dignity by Peregrine Bertie, the son and heir of the duchess of Suffolk by Richard Bertie. At one time the precedents urged for the husband were thought to make an impression on the commissioners; but finally they made a report in favour of the son, who was accordingly admitted to the dignity in the life-time of his father. See Coll. Proceed. on Claims of Baron. 1. to 23. But notwithstanding this case, two other claims of a like kind were made within a few years after, the first about 1586 by Sir Thomas Fane, in right of his wife Mary, the daughter and heir of Henry lord Bergavenny, and the second about 1604 by Sampson Lennard, in right of his wife Margaret lady Dacres. Of the event the former claim, I do not find any account; but as to the latter it appears, that king James referred it to commissioners, and that lady Dacres dying before any decision, the affair was compromised in 1612 by the king's granting precedency to the husband as eldest son of lord Dacres. The letters patent giving this precedency recite, that the commissioners had found baronies on the like right conferred on the husband in several families, and in this particular barony of Dacres three several precedents. There are other expressions equally remarkable for a studied ambiguity, such as leaves undecided whether the pretension to the wife's title was deemed a claim of favour or of right from the crown, and appears calculated to avoid an adjudication of the point; and in this unsettled state of things, it is not surprising, that lord Coke should be so cautious of advancing any positive doctrine on the subject. I cannot learn that there have been any claims of dignities by curtesy since lord Coke's time, and from the want of modern instances of such claims, and from some late creations, by which women have been made peeresses, in order that the families of their husbands might have titles, and yet the husbands themselves continue commoners, it seems as if the prevailing notion was against curtesy in titles of honour. However I have not yet discovered, whether this great question has ever formally received the judgment of the house of lords.—For the particulars of Wimby's case cited by lord Hale, see Coll. Claims of Bar. 11. 44 and 72.—(2) Lord Coke means, that the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesy of the seignory, it being suspended during the whole time of the marriage by the lease of the tenancy to the wife. See further as to the effect of suspension on curtesy in Perk. Sect. 459, 460, 461, 462.—(3) The husband could not have curtesy in respect of the fee, because that was defeated by the son's recovery in the formedon; nor in respect of the tail, because the wife's feoffment before the marriage had discontinued the tail, and consequently there could be no seisin of it during the marriage. This seems to be the rationale of the case put by lord Coke.—(4) Yet in some cases the time of having issue is of consequence. See Post 40.—(5) Vid. Pasch. 9. E. 1. rot.

brother could not take as heir male, 1. because a devise to heirs male operates as a limitation to heirs male of the body, and the sent leur dount ils ussent conceive tenuissent les heritages leur fems par leur vies.

By the custom of Gavelkind [f] a man may be tenant by the curtesie without having of any issue (1).

Soit lissue apres mort ou en vie. And therefore, [g] if a woman tenant in taile generall taketh a husband, and hath issue, which issue dyeth, and the wife dieth without any other issue, yet the husband shall be tenant by the curtesie albeit the estate in taile be determined, because he was intituled to be tenant per legem Angliæ before the estate in taile was spent, and for that the land remaineth. But if a woman maketh a gift in taile, and reserve a rent to her and to her heires, and the donor taketh husband and hath issue, and the donee dieth without issue, the wife dieth; the husband shall not be tenant by the curtesie of the rent, for that the rent newly reserved is by the act of God determined, and no state thereof remaineth. But [h] if a man be seised in fee of a rent and maketh a gift in taile generall to a woman, she taketh husband and hath issue, the issue dieth, the wife dieth without issue, he shall be tenant by the curtesie of the rent, because the rent remaineth (2). The diversity appeareth.

Si la feme devie, le baron tiendra a la terre, &c. Four things doe belong to an estate of tenancy by the curtesie, viz. marriage, seisin of the wife, issue, and death of the wife. But it is not requisite, that these should concur all together at one time. And therefore, if a man taketh a woman seised of lands in fee, and is disseised, and then have issue, and the wife die, he shall enter and hold by the curtesie. So if he hath issue which dieth before the descent, as is aforesaid.

And albeit the state be not consummate untill the death of the wife, yet the state hath such a beginning after issue had in the life of the wife as is respected in law for divers purposes.

First, after issue had, he shall doe homage alone, and is become tenant to the lord, and the avowrie shall be made onely upon the husband in the life of the wife, as shall be said hereafter when we come to the apt place (3). Secondly, if after issue [i] the husband maketh a feoffment in fee, and the wife dieth, the feoffee shall hold it during the life of the husband, and the heire of the wife shall not during his life recover it in sur cui in vita; for it could not be a forfeiture, for that the estate, at the time of the feoffment, was an estate of tenancy by the curtesie initiate (4) and not consummate. And it is adjudged in 29. E. 3. that the tenant by the curtesie cannot claime by a devise, and waive the state of his tenancy by the curtesie, because faith the booke the freehold commenced in him before the devise for terme of his life.

Et est appel tenant per le curtesie Dengleterre, pur ceo que nest use en auter realme forsque tant solement en Engleterre.

Per le Curtesie. In Latine per legem Angliæ.

Tantsolement en Engleterre. It is also used within the realme of Scotland, and there it is called Curialitas Scotiae. And so it is in the realme of Ireland (5).

Et ascuns ont dit, que il ne serra tenant per le curtesie, sinon que lenfant que il ad per sa feme soit oye crie, car per le crie est prove que le enfant fuit nee vise. Our author having delivered his owne opinion before, viz. Oyes ou wife, now he sheweth the opinions of others: for so is said in the [k] statute De tenentibus per legem Angliæ: and of that opinion is Glanvill [l] lib. 7. cap. 8. Bracton lib. 5. tract. 5. cap. 30. Britton cap. 50. fol. 132. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 50. &c. But the reason is against their opinion; for by the cry it is proved, &c. so as it is but an evidence to prove the life of the enfant.

Ascuns ont dit. By these and the like speeches our author intendeth, that the point had been controverted, but thereby, except it be in this section where formerly he delivered his opinion as hath been said, he tacitely insinuateth his owne judgement which in all the rest holdeth for good law and warranted by good authority throughout his three bookes; which kinde of speech and the like I have collected together, as it appeareth by the sections in [m] the margin.

Ideo quere. This quere is not in the originall edition of Littleton, and therefore to be rejected (6).

And some have said, that in divers cases a man shall by having of issue be tenant by the curtesie where a woman shall not be endowed. And therefore they say, if lands be given to two women and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, and one of them take husband and have issue and die, the inheritances being severall the husband shall be tenant by the curtesie, as it is adjudged 7. E. 1. and in other bookes [n] this judgment is cited and allowed. But certaine it is, that if land be given to two men and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, and the one taketh wife and dieth, she shall not be endowed, for no estate in the land is altered by that marriage. But I leave the reader to his owne opinion or rather to suspend it untill he come to

rot. 4. Si habuit exitum, qui auditus fuit clamare seu vocem edere infra quatuor parietes; quia puer non fuit visus nec auditus clamare ab hominibus masculis, licet per feminas nominatus fuit Johannes. Therefore husband not tenant by the curtesy. H. 5. E. 1. rot. 1. Wigorn. Hal. MSS.—I cannot guess what lord Hale's view could be in citing this record, unless it was to shew, that anciently in the case of curtesy the having male issue born alive could be proved by men only; which must be confessed to have been a most unaccountable peculiarity.

(1) On the other hand, curtesy by the custom of Gavelkind is subject to several disadvantages; for it is only of a moiety of the wife's land, and it ceases if the husband marries again. See Robins. Gavelk. b. 2. c. 1. where the learned author suggests, that some have doubted, whether there is any such variance between the common law and the custom, and therefore undertakes to prove it by authorities on record.—(2) So if it was a rent de novo granted in tail, and the wife dies without issue, the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy. Hal. MSS.—(3) Hic fest. 90. 21. E. 3. 35. Hal. MSS.—(4) 4. E. 2. Cui in vita 15. 34. E. 1. ibid. 30. 10. E. 3. 11. 22. H. 6. 24. If husband intituled to be tenant by the curtesy aliens and retakes estate to him and his wife, by which the wife is remitted, he shall not be tenant by the curtesy. Contra if it was before issue had. 9. H. 7. 1. Vid. T. 7. Jac. Ley. n. 11. Sparrye's Case. Hal. MSS.—See Ley's Rep. 9.—(5) Pat. 11. H. 3. m. 3. Cum consuetudo et lex Angliæ sit, quod si aliquis desponsaverit aliquam hereditatem habentem, et ex ea prolem habuerit, cujus clamor auditus fuerit infra quatuor parietes, et vir supervixerit uxorem, habebit tota vita sua custodiam hereditatis uxoris, licet ea heredem habuerit ex primo viro, qui plenæ ætatis est; preceptum est, quod eadem lex observetur in Hibernia. Hal. MSS.—This same extract from the patent roll of 11. H. 3. is given in Hal. Hist. C. L. 180.—(6) It appears by the various reading already given, that this quere, though not in the Rohan edition, which lord Coke thought the oldest, is in that by Lettou and Machlinia, which is really the original one.

the brother could not be heir male of the devisor's body; 2. because the remainder to the heirs male were words of purchase, and by purchase the brother could not take as heir male, his niece being the heir at common law; and so jealous was lord chief justice Holt of departing from the established doctrine, that notwithstanding the special circumstances in the case of Pybus and Mitford, which will presently be stated, he doubted the authority of that case. See 3. Salk. 336. 11. Mod. 189 and Vin. Abr. Devise U. b. pl. 2. in marg. The doctrine was thought to be so firmly settled by this last case, that in 1712 lord ch. Macclesfield, in Dawes and Ferrars, which was a case similar to that of Ford and Ossulston, interrupted the counsel for the person claiming as heir male, by saying that he would not suffer the bar to dispute what was the land-mark and foundation of the law; adding, that in the case of Ford and lord Ossulston the point had been determined on trials at bar in every court in Westminster Hall, and appeared to be so very plain a case, that in the King's Bench the plaintiff's own counsel would not ask a special verdict. See 2. P. Wms. 1. and Prec. in Chanc. 54. However it was not thought proper to acquiesce in this opinion of lord Macclesfield, and a bill of review being brought to reverse

[f] 9. E. 3. 38. 16. E. 3. aids 229. Stat. de Consuetudinibus Mancie

[g] 21. H. 3. tit. Dower 198. Paine's case ubi supr. (1. Leon. 167.)

(Post. 32. a.)

[h] Brooke tit. per le Curtesie 86. 10. E. 3. 27.

(6. Co. 57. b. Post. 67. a. 124. b.)

[i] 34. E. 2. Cui in vita 15. 2.

E. 2. Cui in vita 26. 10. E. 3.

12. Dier 21. Eliz. 363.

29. E. 3. fo. 27.

(3. Co. 34.)

[k] Vet. Mag. Car. part. 2. fol.

70.

[l] Glanvill lib. 7. cap. 8. Bract.

lib. 5. tract. 5. ca. 30. Britton

cap. 50. fo. 132. Fleta lib. 6.

cap. 54.

[m] Sest 40. 119. 132. 136.

137. 138. 141. 145. 148. 156.

170. 179. 192. 202. 227. 234.

269. 336. 339. 357. 400. 415.

436. 440. 443. 460. 462. 478.

501. 503. 506. 522. 523. 524.

534. 576. 601. 633. 634. 640.

642. 643. 644. 646. 658. 675.

689. 721. 723. 726. 730. 731.

733. 734.

(2. Ro. Abr. 90. & Post. 183.

contra.)

7. E. 3. 6.

[n] 17. E. 3. 51.

Prærog. Regis ca. 13.

33. E. 3. tit. Travers 36.
(4. Co. 55. 1. Leon. 47.)

[*] Pl. Com. Dame Hales' case
263.
(9. Co. 129.)

[6] Magna Carta 30. E. 1. Dower
81. 17. H. 3. Dower. Bract.
lib. 2. fol. 46. & 314.

(Post. 32. 2. Cro. Cha. 300. 1.
Ro. Abr. 675.)

[p] 4. H. 3. dower 180. Bract.
fol. 93. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 23.
2. E. 2. dower 123. 3. E. 3.
dower 102. 9. H. 7. 1. 30.
E. 3.
(Hob. 338. Post. 278.)

to the proper place in the next chapter. If lands holden of the king by knights service in capite descend to a woman, and after office found she intrude and taketh husband and hath issue, in this case the husband shall be tenant by the curtesie (1); and yet if the heire male after office, in the like case intrudeth and taketh wife, his wife shall not be endowed, for so it is provided by the statute of Prærogativa regis, cap. 13. that in that case there accrue to the heire no freehold, nor dower to the wife, which by interpretation is as much as to say, that the heire shall have no freehold as to this respect to give any dower to his wife. If a man marry the niece of the king by licence and hath issue by her, and after lands descend to the niece and the husband enter, the niece dieth, he shall be tenant by the curtesie of this land, and the king upon any office found shall not evict it from him, because by the marriage, the niece was enfranchised during the coverture. But if a free woman marry the villaine of the king by licence, and lands descend to the villaine, the villaine dieth, the wife shall not be endowed, but upon an office found the king shall have the land, for the villaine remained still a villaine to the king. A woman [n] taketh husband, and hath issue, lands descend to the wife, the husband enters, and after the wife is found an idiot by office, the lands shall be seised by the king (2), for the title of the tenancy by the curtesie, and of the king begin at one instant, and the title of the king shall be preferred. A man shall be tenant by the curtesie of a castle [o] which serveth for the public defence of the realme, but a woman shall not be endowed thereof, as shall be said more at large hereafter (3).

A man shall be tenant by the curtesie of a common feigns number, but a woman shall not be endowed thereof, because it cannot be divided. A man shall be tenant by the curtesie [p] of a house that is Caput Baronie, or Comitatus: (4) but it appeareth by 4. H. 3. Dower 180. that a woman shall not be endowed of it. For the law respecteth honour and order. A man is entitled to be tenant by the curtesie, and maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken, and then his wife dieth, he shall not be tenant by the curtesie, because albeit the state given by the feoffment, be conditionall, yet his title to be tenant by the curtesie was inclusively absolutely extinct by the feoffment, for the condition was not annexed to it (5). As if the lord disseise the tenant, and maketh a feoffment in fee of the land upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken, yet the seignior is extinct, for that was inclusively extinct by the feoffment. See more of tenant by curtesie. Section 52 (6).

CHAP. 5. Sect. 36.

Dower.

Tenant en dower (7).

Tenens in dote. Dos, dower in the common law [q] is taken for that portion of lands or tenements, which the wife hath for terme of her life of the lands or tenements of her husband after his decease, for the sustenance of herselfe, and the nurture and education of her children (8). Propter onus matrimonij, et ad sustentationem uxoris et educationem liberorum cum fuerint procreati si vir præmoriatur: et hoc proprie dicitur dos mulieris secundum consuetudinem Anglicanam. And dos is derived ex donatione, et est

TENANT in dower

er est, lou home est seisie de certaine terres ou tenements en fee simple, taile generall, ou come heire de le taile speciall, et prent feme, et devie, la feme apres le decesse de la baron sera endow de la tierce part de tiels terres et tenements, que fueront a ja baron en ascun temps durant

TENANT in dower

is, where a man is seised of certaine lands or tenements in fee simple, fee taile generall, or as heire in speciall taile, and taketh a wife, and dieth, the wife after the decease of her husband shall be endowed of the third part of such lands and tenements as were her husband's at any time during the coverture,

[7] Lib. Rub. cap. 70. Glanvill
lib. 6. cap. 1. Bract. lib. 2. fol.
92. Britt. cap. 101. Fleta lib.
5. cap. 22.

(1) 1. H. 7. 17. Dy. 95. Hal. MSS.—(2) Mr. Serjeant Hawkins makes a quare of this, observing that the fee and freehold were in the wife, and that the wife of an idiot shall have dower. Hawk. Abr. of Co. Littl. 42. It has been also remarked, that there is not any concurrence of titles between the king and the husband; the husband's title by curtesy not being consummate, till the death of the wife, when the king's title determines. See Plowd. 264. Engl. ed. in a note by the Editor. However, note the reasoning in Plowden. See also 3. Co. 170. where it is adjudged, that though in the case of idiotcy the office for some purposes has relation to the time when the idiot's estate commenced, yet the king is only intitled to the profits from the finding of the office; which, as it may have some influence on the point of curtesy, is proper to be attended to.—(3) See Post 31. b.—(4) If disseisee enters on disseisor's heir, and makes feoffment on condition, and enters for condition broken, and the heir enters the right is revived. Vid. 19. H. 6. 43. Hal. MSS.—(5) Hic fol. 266. Hal. MSS.—(6) See also Wright's Ten. 193. and Vin. Abr. Curtesy, and the same title New Abr.—(7) Nota, in tenancy in dower the wife shall be said to be in by the husband. 36. H. 6. Dower 30. But tenancy by the curtesy is in the Post. 5. E. 2. Entry 66. Hal. MSS.—(8) The following note is by the editor of the eleventh edition of lord Coke's Commentary.—(The reason why the law gave the wife dower will appear, if we consider how the law stood anciently; for by the old law, if this provision had not been made, and the party at the marriage had made no assignment of dower, the wife would have been without any provision, for the personal estates even of the richest were then very inconsiderable, and before fruits were invented, which is but lately, the husband could give his wife nothing during his own life, nor could he provide for her by will, because lands could not be devised, unless it was in some particular places by the custom, till the statute of Hen. 8.)

verse his decree, lord ch. Hardwicke directed a case for the opinion of the King's Bench; but the four judges of that court followed lord Macclesfield, and the person under whom the claim was made not being heir general, they, in February 1743, certified, that he could not take by the description of right heir male. See the certificate in Vin. Abr. Devise W. b. in a note on pl. 13. Such is the list of grave authorities which confirm lord Coke's doctrine as to the necessity of being very heir, in order to take by purchase under the description of heir male or heir female, whether of the body or not; and if they wanted aid from his name, it will scarce be denied by the coldest of his admirers, that his private opinion on a point of law he had so fully considered, will even in these times, when perhaps we are too apt to decry those ancient authors, whose writings are still the grand sources of information and instruction, will be no mean addition to their weight. However it must be confessed, that there are some cases, in which the doctrine has been deviated from; but all of them, except one, are determinations since his time, and besides, most of them may rather be deemed exceptions to lord Coke's general rule, than proofs of its non-existence. The earliest of these is a case in the time of Elizabeth, and cited by lord Hale in Pybus and Milsford 1. Vent. 381. A son of the testator's brother was admitted to take under a devise to the testator's heir male, though he left three daughters; but the reason was, because the testator introduced the devise with taking notice that his brother had left a son, and that he himself had three daughters who were his right heirs, and he also gave the daughters 2000l. on condition not to trouble the heir. In this case the special intent of heir male, is so marked by the other words, as clearly to take it out of the general rule; and that lord Hale meant rant le couverture, a aver et tener a mesme la feme en feveralte per metes et bounds pur terme de sa vie, le quel el avoit issue per sa baron ou nemy et de quel age que la feme soit, issint que el passe lage de neuf ans al temps de le mort sa baron, [car il covient que el soit passe lage de neuf ans al temps del mort sa baron,] (1) ou auterment el ne serra my endow.

To have and to hold to the same wife in feveralty by metes and bounds for terme of her life, whether she hath issue by her husband or no, and of what age soever the wife be, so as she be past the age of nine yeares at the time of the death of her husband, for she must be above nine yeares old, at the time of the decease of her husband, otherwise she shall not be endowed.

quasi dotarium, because either the law it self doth (without any gift) or the husband himself giveth it to her, as shall be said hereafter. And at this day dos or dower is not taken by the professors of the common law, either for the land which the wife bringeth with her in marriage to her husband, for then it is either called in frankmarriage or in marriage, as hath beene said, nor for the portion of money or other goods or chattels, which she bringeth with her in marriage, for that is called her marriage portion. And yet of ancient time [r] Dos mulieris, the dower or dowrie of the woman was also applyed to them. But it is commonly taken for her third part, which she hath of her husband's lands or tenements.

[r] Britton cap. 201. Bracton lib. 2. fo. 92. Glanvil lib. 6. ca. 1. lib. 7. ca. 1. 2. Co. 93. Bingham's case. 4. H. 3. dower 179.

In Domeſday, Dos is called Maritagium.

To the consummation of this dower three things are necessary; viz. marriage, seisin and the death of her husband.

Dos, [1] the very name doth import a freedome, for the law doth give her therewith many freedoms. Secundum consuetudinem regni mulieres vidue, &c. debent esse quiete de tallagiis, &c. And tenant in dower shall not be distreyned for the debt due to the king by the husband in his life time in the lands which she held in dower. And other privileges she hath; of all which Ockam yeelds the reason, Doti ejus parcatur quia premium pudoris est (2).

[f] Clauf. 11. H. 3. nu. 17. Regist. 142. 143. F. N. B. 150. Ockham fol. 40.

Lou home. If the husband be an alien (1) the wife shall not be indowed. So if the husband be the king's villaine, the wife shall not be endowed, (as hath beene said) but if the husband be a villaine to a common person, the wife shall be endowed if she be intituled to dower before the entrie of the lord. And so if a free man take a niese to wife and dieth she shall be endowed. The wife of an ideot (3), non compos mentis, outlawed, or attainted of felony or trespass, attainted of hereſie, præmunire, or the like, shall be endowed. But if the husband be attainted of treason, albeit it be treason done after the title of dower she shall not be endowed, as shall be said hereafter.

[1] Bract. fol. 298. 19. E. 2. dower 171. Dame Hale's case 13. E. 3. dower Statham. 13. E. 1. tit. Dower. (Post 392. b.)

Seisie. Here this word (seised) extendeth it selfe as well to a seisin in law, or a civil seisin, as to a seisin in deed, which is a naturall seisin: but seised he must be either the one way or the other during (4) the coverture. For a woman shall be endowed of a seisin in law. As where lands or tenements descend to the husband, before entrie, he hath but a seisin in law, and yet the wife shall be endowed, albeit it be not reduced to an actual possession, for it lieth not in the power of the wife to bring it to an actual seisin, as the husband may do of his wives land, when he is to be tenant by curtesie, which is worthy the observation. And yet of every seisin in law, or actual seisin of lands or tenements, a woman shall not be endowed. For example, if there be grandfather, father, and sonne, and the grandfather is seised of three acres of land in fee, and taketh wife and dieth, this land descendeth to the father, who dieth either before or after entrie, now is the wife of the father dowable. The father dieth and the wife of the grandfather is endowed of one acre and dieth, the wife of the father shall be endowed onely of the two acres residue, for the dower of the grandmother is paramount the title of the wife of the father, and the seisin of the father which descended to him (be it in law or actual) is defeated (5), and now upon the matter the father had but a reversion expectant upon a freehold, and in that case, Dos de dote peti non debet; although the wife of the grandfather dieth living the father's wife (6). And here note a diversity [w] betweene a descent and a purchase. For in the case aforesaid, if the grandfather had infeoffed the father, or made a gift in taile unto him, therein the case aforesaid, the wife of the father, after the decease of the grandfather's wife, should have been endowed of that part assigned to the grandmother

(Ante 29. a.)

[u] 43. E. 3. 32. 45. E. 3. 17. 9. E. 3. 4. F. N. B. 149. 8. E. 3. tit. Aff. 393. 19. E. 2. dower 170. 23. E. 3. dower 30. (Perk. test. 315. 316. 4. Co. 122. Ro. 1. Abr. 677.)

[w] 5. E. 3. tit. Voucher 249. Paris's case 9. E. 3. 4.

(1) All between the brackets omitted in L. and M. and in Roh.—(2) Clauf. 26. H. 3. m. 15. Mulier ratione tenuræ in dōtem non debet venire coram iudiciariis itinerantibus ratione communis summationis. But yet she shall be attendant to the heir for a third part of the services, for which he is attendant over. Tenant in frank-marriage in the fourth degree dies; his issue endows his mother; she shall be attendant as the issue is and shall not hold acquitted. So if A gives to B in tail rendering during his life 5 s. and afterwards 10 s. the wife of B endowed shall hold of the heir by a third part of 10 s. But if there be tenant by 5 s. and mesne holds over by 10 s. and tenant dies without heir, his wife shall be attendant to the mesne only for the third part of 5 s. Kelw. 124. 129. Hic fol. 46. lease by tenant in tail, avoided by the issue yet revived against tenant in dower—Hal. MSS.—(3) See ante 30. b. n. 3.—(4) Lessee for life surrenders to him in reversion on condition, and enters for the condition broken; yet the wife of the reversioner shall be endowed. Noy n. 284. Ormond's case.—Hal. MSS. See Noy 66.—(5) Hic fol. 8. 8. E. 3. 13. 3. Aff. 6. But by some the heir shall have mortdancester of such seisin.—Hal. MSS.—(6) 17. E. 3. 65. hic fol. 42. Vid. 6. E. 3. 43. contra. Nota the case 5. E. 3. Vouch. 249. A gives in tail to B his eldest son who dies, the wife of B is endowed of the third part of the whole. A dies, his wife brings dower against the wife of B, she vouches the heir of her husband by reason of the reversion, and adjudged that he shall warrant. But quære if she shall recover in value the third part of the whole or only the third part of two parts. It seems only the third part of two parts, by reason of the evasion. Therefore quære if in this case the seisin of B be not fully avoided. Suppose that the wife of A had first recovered, during her life the wife of B cannot demand dower except of the two parts which are in the hands of the heir.—Hal. MSS.

meant to cite it as an exception appears from his saying, that it is not inconsistent with Counden and Clerks. See 1. Ventr. 382. Bowman and Yates 1. Cha. Caf. 145. is another case which was determined on special circumstances; for the son of a second marriage was allowed to take a rent-charge under a limitation to heirs male by a second wife, though not strictly heir, there being a son of the first wife, because the settlement was apparently made as a provision for the issue of the second marriage. The case of Pybus and Mitford, adjudged 36. Ch. 2. is liable to a similar observation. One, who had issue two sons by two different wives, covenanted to stand seized to the use of the heirs male of his body by his second wife. The point determined by three judges against one was, that an use arose to the covenantor's son for life, and that so the limitation to his heirs male on the body of his second wife being a remainder in tail special executed in him, his son by the second wife took by descent as special heir; but Hale, chief justice, held, that the son of the second wife, though not heir general, might have taken by purchase, and according to Ventriss, Wild, justice was of the same opinion, though another book mentions, that in this respect all the three other judges differed from lord Hale. See 1. Freem. 370, 371. But the reasoning of lord Hale shews, that he did not mean to shake Coke's general doctrine, and that he founded himself on the special penning

(4. Co. 122.)

[x] 8. E. 3. tit. Aff. 393. 13. R.
2. Dower 55. 22. E. 3. 5. 8.
E. 3. 3. 7. H. 6. 4.
(Post. 42. a. 4. Co. 122.)

[y] 6. E. 3. 50. F. N. B. 149.
(Cro. Cha. 190. 191. 1. Ro. Abr.
676. 474. Cro. Jam. 615. Doctr.
Plac. 148. 2. Co. 77.)

[z] 27. H. 8. 23. F. N. B.
17. H. 3. Dower 192.

Vide sect. 242.
(Post. 165. a. Ante 30. b.)

[a] Pasf. 23. Eli. in Com. Banco.
Bract. fol. 96. Brit. ca. 103. Flet.
1. 5. c. 23. 30. E. 1. tit. Dower 81.
b. 30. E. 1. Vouch. 298. 17. H.
3. Dower 192. 8. H. 3. Dower
196. 8. H. 3. ib. 194.
[b] Pat. 1. E. 1. part. 1. m. 17.
Ech. 4. E. 1. nu. 88.

[c] Bract. 1. 2. f. 93. Brit. c.
103. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 22. Trin.
17. El. in com. Banco.

[d] 41. E. 3. 30. 44. E. 3. 26.
30. H. 8. Dyer 41.

30. H. 8. Dyer. 41.

(Doctr. Plac. 148. Post. 33. a.)
[e] Rot. Parl. 26. E. 1. Rot. 1.

mother, and the reason of this diversitie is, for that the seisin, that descended after the decease of the grandfather to the father, is avoyded by the indowment of the grandmother, whose title was consummate by the death of the grandfather; but in the case of the purchase or gift, that took effect in the life of the grandfather (before the title of dower of the grandmother was consummate) is not defeated, but onely quoad the grandmother, and in that case there shall be Dos de dote. And yet there is another diversitie [x] (1) where the wife of the father is first indowed, and where the wife of the grandfather; for in the same case after the decease of the grandfather and father the sonne entreth and indoweth his mother of a third part, against whom the grandmother recovereth a third part and dyeth, the mother shall enter againe into the land recovered by the grandmother, because she had in it an estate for terme of her life, and the estate for the life of the grandmother is lesser in the eye of law, as to her then her owne life. Also the husband [y] (2) may be seised in his demesne, as of fee absolutely, yet the woman shall not be endowed, as she shall not be indowed both of the land given in exchange, and of the land taken in exchange, and yet the husband was seised of both, but she may have her election to be indowed of which she will.

Also of a seisin for an instant a woman shall not be indowed (3), As if Cestuy que use [z] after the statute of 1. R. 3. and before the statute of 27. H. 8. had made a feoffment in fee, his wife should not be indowed (3a).

Likewise if two joyntenants be in fee, and the one maketh a feoffment in fee, his wife shall not be indowed (4). And so if the conusee of a fine doth grant and render the land to the conu- for, the wife of the conusee shall not be indowed, for it is not possible that the husband could have indowed his wife of such an estate as the usual pleading is, lib. intrat. 225. Quia dicit quod W. quondam vir suus nunquam fuit seifitus de tenementis predictis de tali statu ita quod eandem A. inde dotasse potuit.

Des terres ou tenements. Of a castle that is maintained for the necessary defence of the realme a woman shall not be indowed, because it ought not to be divided, and the publique shall be preferred before the private (5). But of a castle that is onely maintained for the private use and habitation of the owner, a woman shall be indowed. And so it was adjudged in the court of [a] Common Pleas, where in a writ of dower the demand was, De tertia parte Castri de Hilderker in Comitatu Northumb. And the statute of Magna Charta cap. 7. whereby it is provided, nisi domus illa sit Castrum, is to be understood, a castle maintained for the necessary and publique defence of the realme. And this agreeth with ancient records, [b] (albeit in the argument of the said case they were not vouched) the effect whereof be, Non debent mulieribus assignari in dotem castra quæ fuerant virorum suorum et quæ de guerra existunt, vel etiam homagia et servicia aliquorum de guerra existent. Wherein it is to be observed, that the law is not satisfied with the names of things, or nominatives, but with things reall and substantial. But of the principal mansion, or capitall messuage, the wife shall be indowed, [c] si non sit caput Comitatus, sive Baronie (6), for the honour of the realme, or (as hath beene said) a castle for the publique defence of the realme. And so are the old bookes to be intended, as it was resolved Tr. 17. Eliz. in the court of Common Pleas, which I heard and observed. And of an estate taile in lands determined, a woman shall be indowed in the like manner and forme as a man shall be tenant by the curtesie mutatis mutandis.

En fee simple, fee taile general, &c. If a man be tenant in fee taile generall, [d] and make a feoffment in fee, and taketh back an estate to him and to his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, and they have issue, and the wife dyeth, the husband taketh another wife, and dyeth, the wife shall not be indowed, for during the coverture, he was seised of an estate taile speciall, and yet the issue which the second wife may have, by possibilitie may inherit (7).

The same law it is, if in this case he had taken backe an estate in fee simple, and after had taken wife and had issue by her; yet she shall not be indowed, for that the fee simple is vanished by the remitter, and her issue hath the land by force of the entaile. But in that case the tenant cannot plead, that the husband was never seised of such an estate whereof the demandant might be indowed, but he must plead the speciall matter (8).

Et prent feme. If a man so seised as is aforesaid, taketh an alien to wife, and dyeth, she shall not be indowed (9); but if the king take an alien borne, and dyeth, she shall be indowed by the law of the crowne. And Edmond the brother of king Edward the first, married the queen of Navarre, and dyed, and it was resolved [e] by all the judges, that she should be indowed of the third part of all the lands whereof her husband was seised in fee (10).

If a Jew born in England taketh to wife a Jew borne also in England, the husband is converted to the Christian faith, purchaseth lands, and infeoffeth another, and dyeth, the wife brought

(1) 8. E. 2. Recovery in value 10.—Hal. MSS.—(2) Hic fecit. 56. fol. 42.—Hal. MSS.—(3) If tenant for life makes feoffment in fee and dies, the wife shall not be endowed. 3. H. 4. 6. 14. H. 4. 13. Yet if tenant at will makes feoffment and dies, his wife shall be endowed. Cited by Jones 9. Cha. to have been adjudged 34. Eliz. in Moseley and Taylor.—Hal. MSS.—See W. Jo. 317.—(3a) That there cannot be dower of a trust, see Forrest. 138. 2. Atk. 525. See further 2. P. Wms. 700.—(4) S. p. Acc. in MSS. Common Place-book supposed to be by judge Doderidge, and 14. H. 4. 13. b. and P. 34. E. 1. Fitzh. Dower 178. cited.—See further Cro. Eliz. 502. Noy 64. Cro. Jam. 615. 1. Atk. 442. and 2. Blackst. Comment. 132.—(5) Pat. 1. E. 1. m. 17. Præsertim cum hujusmodi mulieribus castra, quæ fuerunt virorum suorum, et quæ sunt de guerra, vel etiam homagia et servitia aliquorum, quæ sunt de guerra, in dotem non debuerunt, nec consueverunt assignari, ideo salvis nobis castris et homagiis predictis, &c.—Hal. MSS.—(6) Vid. a whole manor resealed, because it was caput baroniam, though assigned by the husband. Claus. 20. H. 3. m. 20. pro uxore Roberti Fitzwalter.—Hal. MSS.—But this doctrine must be understood to be applicable only to baronies by tenure, of which it is said there is not any now remaining except Arundel; and therefore creating a person baron by a title taken from a principal mansion house in his possession will not make the house caput baronia and so exclude the wife from dower out of it, because such a barony is merely titular, and a titular barony cannot have caput baronia. Adj. in lady Gerard's case 1. L. Raym. 72. and other books. See Mad. Bar. Angl. 10.—(7) Vid. 24. E. 3. 28. 59. Tenant in tail has issue A and B, and leases to A for years and releases to him and his heirs with warranty, and A takes C to wife and dies having issue D; tenant in tail dies, D dies, and C recovers dower against B. Adjudged.—Hal. MSS.—(8) 21. E. 3. 36. 3. H. 6. 55.—Hal. MSS.—(9) Nota anciently a woman alien was not dowable; but by special act of parliament not printed rot. parl. 8. H. 5. n. 15. all women aliens, who from thenceforth (desores ou avant) should be married to Englishmen by licence of the king are enabled to demand their dower after the death of their husbands, to whom they should in time to come be married, in the same manner as English women. But this act did not extend to those married before, and therefore in Rot. Parl. 9. H. 5. n. 9. there is a special act of parliament to enable Beatrice countess of Arundel born in Portugal to demand her dower.—Hal. MSS.—See acc. 1. Ro. Abr. 675.—(10) Yet Edmond the queen of Navarre's husband was only a subject, therefore quare the reason of the case.

ning of the deed; and he distinguished it, by observing that the limitation was to the heirs by the second wife, and that the covenantor had taken notice in the deed that another was his heir general, there being a proviso that if the son by the first wife should, after the death of the son by the second wife, and within five years after attaining 21, pay 1200l. for the covenantor's younger children, the uses should cease; and for these two reasons he thought the deed sufficient to describe a special heir. See Pybus and Mitford 1. Ventr. 372. 1. Freem. 351. 369. Raym. 228. 1. Mod. 121. 159. 3. Keb. 129. 239. 316. 338. and 2. Lev. 75. in which last book the case is most fully stated. In Wall and Baker Trin. 8. W. 3. the circumstances were still more special; for according to lord Cowper's state of the case the testator expressly directed, that if his heir should be a female his heir male should pay to his heir female 12l. a year out of his lands; words, manifestly implying, that by heir male was meant a special kind of brought a writ of dower, and was barred of her dower, and the reason yeilded in the record [f] is this, Quia verò contra justitiam est, quod ipsa dotem petat vel habeat de Tenemento quod fuit viri sui, ex quo in conversione sua noluit cum eo adhaerere et cum eo converti (1).

[f] Doff. claus. 18. H. 3. m. 17.

Del tierce part de tiels terres et tenements per severaltie per metes et bonds. Albeit of many inheritances that be entire, whereof no division can be made by metes and bounds, a woman cannot be endowed of the thing itselfe, yet a woman [g] shall be endowed thereof in a speciall and certaine manner. As of a mill a woman shall not be endowed by metes and bounds, nor in common with the heire, but either she may be endowed of the third tolle dish, or de integro molendino per quemlibet 3. mensem. And so of a villeine, [h] either the third dayes work, or everie third weeke or month. A woman shall be endowed of the third part of the profit of stallage, of the third part of the profits of a faire, of the third part of the profits of the office of marshalle, of the [i] third part of the profits of the keeping of a parke. Of the third part of the profit of a dove-house; and likewise of the third part of a piscary, [k] viz. tertium piscem, vel jactum retis tertium. Of the third presentation to an advowson (2). A writ of dower lieth de 3. parte exituum provenientium de custodia gaolæ Abathie Westm. And herewith agreeth reverend antiquitie. De [l] nullo, quod est sua natura indivisibile et sectionem sive divisionem non patitur, nullam partem habebit, sed satisfaciatur ei ad valentiam. Of the third part of profits of courts, [m] fines, heriots, &c. Also a woman shall be endowed of tithes; and the surest indowment of tithes is of the third sheafe, for what land shall be sowne is uncertaine (3).

(1. Ro. Abr. 681.)
[g] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 97. b. 23.
H. 3. tit. Aff. 435. F. N. B. 149.
45. E. 3. Dower 50.
(Post. 165. a.)
[h] 2. H. 6. 11. Bract. lib. 2.
fo. 97. Britt. 247. 11. E. 3. tit.
Dower 85. 15. E. 3. ibid. 81. 2.
E. 3. 57. F. N. B. 8. k.
[i] 4. E. 2. Tr. 233. 26. E. 3.
58. 45. E. 3. Dower 50.
(Cro. Jam. 621.)
[k] Bract. 98. 208. Brit. 247.
Flet. lib. 5. ca. 23. 17. Ed. 2.
Dower 104. 163. 19. Ed. 3. Quar.
Imp. 154. 7. E. 3. 7.
[l] Bract. 97. Brit. 146. 147.
[m] Lib. Intr. Judgme. 18. fo.
230.
11. Co. 25. 26.
Harper's case.
[n] 28. Aff. 3. 8. R. 2. Dower
184. 1. E. 6. Dow. 89.

But in some cases of lands and tenements, which are divisible, and which the heire of the husband shall inherit, yet the wife shall not be endowed. As if the husband [n] maketh a lease for life of certaine lands, reserving a rent to him and his heires, and he taketh wife and dieth, the wife shall not be endowed, neither of the reversion (albeit it is within these words tenements) because there was no seisin in deed or in law of the freehold nor of the rent, because the husband had but a particular state therein, and no fee simple (4). But if the husband maketh a lease for yeares, reserving a rent, and taketh wife, the husband dieth, the wife shall be endowed of the third part of the reversion by metes and bounds, together with the third part of the rent, and execution shall not cease during the yeares (5). And herewith agreeth the common experience at this day. But if the husband maketh a gift in taile, reserving a rent to him and to his heires, and after the donor taketh wife and dieth, the wife shall be endowed of this rent, because it is a rent in fee, and by possibilitie may continue for ever.

Vid 1. E. 6. Dow. B. 89.
(Ante 30. a.)

Of a common certaine a woman shall be endowed, but of a common sauns nombre en grosse she shall not be endowed, as hath beene said before. And so of a rent service, rent charge, and rent secke, she shall be endowed (6): but of an annuitie that chargeth onely the person, and issueth not out of any lands or tenements, she shall not be endowed. But if the freehold of the rents, common, &c. were suspended before the coverture, and so continue during the coverture, she shall not be endowed of them. If after the coverture the husband doth extinguish them by release or otherwise, yet she shall be endowed of them; for as to her dower they in the eye of the law have continuance.

(Cro. Cha. 300. Ante 30. b.)
2. Ro. Abr. 675. Ante 29. b.)

If the wife be entitled to have dower of three acres of marsh, every one of the value of twelve pence, the heire by his industry and charge maketh it good meadow, every acre of the value of ten shillings, the wife shall have her dower according to the improved value, and not according to the value as it was in her husband's time: for her title is to the quantitie of the land, viz. one just third part (7).

7. Co. 38. Lillingston's case.
6. Co. 78. Seig. Aburganie's case.
(Post. 56. a. 171. a. 179. a. Peik. sect. 328. Contra.)

And the like law it is, if the heire improve the value of the land by building: and on the other side, if the value be impaired in the time of the heire, she shall be endowed according to the value at the time of the assignment, and not according to the value as it was in the time of her husband (8).

(F. N. B. 149. C.)
V. 30. E. 1. Vouch. 298.

Afcuns temps durant le coverture. For the better understanding whereof it is to be knowne, that (as hath beene said) to dower three things doe belong, viz. marriage, seisin, and the death of the husband. Concerning the seisin, it is not necessarie that the same should continue during the coverture, for albeit the husband alieneth the lands or tenements, or extinguisheth the rents or commons, &c. yet the woman shall be endowed. But it is necessary that the marriage doe continue, for if that be dissolved the dower ceaseth, ubi nullum matrimonium, ibi nulla dos. But this is to be understood when the husband and wife are divorced à vinculo matrimonii, as in case of precontract, consanguinity, affinity, &c. and not à mensa et thoro only, as for adulterie (9). And yet it is said, that if the assignment of dower ad osium ecclesiæ be specified, viz. that notwithstanding any divorce shall happen, yet that she shall hold it for life, that this is good.

Bract. 92. Brit. cap. 101.
Brit. cap. eodem.
(1. Ro. Abr. 681. Doffr. Plac.
148. Post. 73. b. 4. Co. 29.
5. Co. 9. b.)
[e] W. 2. ca. 34. Lib. Intr. 224.
Fleta lib. 5. c. 22. Br. c. 109.
Mirror ca. 5. sect 5.
(F. N. B. 150. Perk. sect. 354.
1. Ro. Abr. 680. 1. Sid. 118.)

If the wife clope [o] from her husband, that is, if the wife leave her husband, and goeth away and tarrieth with her adulterer (10), she shall lose her dower until her husband willingly without

(1) Nota placitum illud fuit coram justiciariis ad custodiam Judæorum assignatis. Hal. MSS.—See the record at length in Tov. Angl. Judaic. 230. See also Moll. de Jur. Marit. 8th ed. b. 3. c. 6. f. 11.—(2) See post. 32. b. n. 2.—(3) But the assignment is good, though tithes of the third yard-land be assigned. M. 9. Jac. C. B. Kettleby's case.—Hal. MSS.—(4) 25. E. 3. 46. But she shall be endowed of rent reserved in tail so long as the tail continues. 10. E. 3. 27. hic sol. 30.—Hal. MSS.—(5) P. 8. Jac. C. B. n. 23. Fulgeam's case Noy n. 280. Whitley and Best a proviso in the writ of seisin quod tenens non expellatur. But see 27. H. 8. 7. If tenant for yeares be received and his term is allowed, cesset executio durante termino. Yet the law vests the actual possession in him who recovers; and nota here she shall recover damages according to the value of the rent. P. 22. Jac. C. B. P. 16. E. 3.—Hal. MSS.—(6) Yet demand of land and common pro omnibus averiis, without saying eidem spectant, is good after verdict and shall not be intended common without number. P. 9. Car. B. R. Prewet and Drake Crook n. 3.—Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 300. W. Jo. 315.—(7) But she shall not have emblements. Dy. 316.—Hal. MSS.—(8) Vid. 1. H. 5. 11. 17. E. 3. If seoffee improves by buildings, yet dower shall be as it was in the seisin of the husband. 17. H. 3. Dower 193. 31. E. 1. Vouch. 288. For the heir is not bound to warrant, except according to the value as it was at the time of the seoffment, and so the wife would recover more against the seoffee than he would recover in value, which is not reasonable.—Hal. MSS. See further Hugh. Comment. on Orig. Writs 196.—(9) 18. E. 4. 29. Vid. acc. Noy. n. 433. and n. 467. Porvel and Weekes in case of divorce causa adulterii. Yet dower lies. Vid. acc. 10. E. 3. 15. in case of divorce ex voto castitatis. Yet this in some cases dissolves the marriage ex tunc. 45. E. 3. Hal. MSS. See Powel's case acc. Godb. 145. But according to Rolle's report it was adjudged, that the divorce for adultery was a bar of dower, 1. Ro. Abr. 681.—(10) Dy. 107. Where issue is joined on reconciliation after elopement, advantage shall not be had except of one elopement. Vid. Lib. Parl. 30. E. 1. John Comoy's grant of his wife. Noveritis me tradidisse et demisisse spontanea mea voluntate domino Willielmo Paynell militi Margaretam uxorem meam; et concedo, quod Margareta cum predicto Willielmo remaneat pro voluntate ipsius Willielmi. Afterwards William and Mary lived together, and John died. Ruled 1. that this was a void grant: 2. that it did not amount to a licence, or at least was a void licence: 3. that after elopement there shall not be any averment, quod non fuit adulterium, though William and Mary after the death of John intermarried. So she was barred of dower. Nota they produced a sentence of purgation of adultery in the ecclesiastical court; yet not allowed against such presumption. Hal. MSS. See Comoy's grant of his wife at length in 2. Init. 435. and in Marg. of Dy. ed. 1688. fol. 106. b. See S. C. cited in 1. Ro. Abr. 680. See further Vin. Abr. Dower P. and R. Hugh. Comment. Orig. Writs 190.

of heir in contradistinction to the heir general. See 1. Stra. 41. 42. Hitherto lord Coke's general rule as to being both heir and female to take by purchase seems unimpeached. But it must be owned, that there is a case in which the doctrine, after a very solemn discussion, received a most severe attack from a judge of the highest authority. This happened in the famous case of

(1. Ro. Abr. 680. Perk. sect. 354.)
 [p] 3. E. 3. 2. 6. E. 3. 29. 9.
 E. 3. 29. 19. E. 3. Dower. 94.
 43. E. 3. 19.
 Vid. Fitz. N. B. 150. h.
 3. E. 2. Dower 153.

[9] M. 2. & 3. Elis. Dier 187. b.
 10. Aff. p. 2. 17. E. 3. 4.
 Tr. 10. H. 5. Rot. 447.

26. E. 3. Dower 133.
 30. E. 3. 31.
 17. E. 2. Dower 164.
 19. E. 3. qua. Imp. 154.
 32. E. 4. 2.
 38. H. 6. 27. per Paston.

[r] Magna Carta, cap. 6.
 Fleta lib. 5. cap. 23.
 Bracton lib. 2. fol. 96.
 Britton ca. 103.
 (Post. 34. b.)
 29. H. 6. 14. 6. E. 6.
 Dyer 76. F. N. B. 161.
 Regist. orig. 175.
 1. Marie Dower 101.
 (2. Inst. 17. F. N. B. 161. A.)
 [f] Lamb. Sect. 120. 71. & divers ancient manuscripts. See the
 2. part of the Institutes, cap. 7.
 [r] Bract. lib. 4. 312. & lib. 2.
 96.
 Britton. cap. 103.
 Fleta, lib. 5. cap. 23.

(Cro. Jam. 621. 1. Leon. 56.)
 [u] Regist. Iudic. 4.
 Origin. 173.
 Dyer 11. El. 284.
 Rast. pl. fo. 226. &c.
 16. E. 3. tit. Damages 83.
 3. E. 2. ibid. 11.

(Dr. and Stud. Dial. 2. c. 23.)
 [w] 5. E. 3. 1. 41. E. 3.
 Dower 46. and not in the booke at large.
 (Doctr. Plac. 152.)
 [x] 16. E. 3. Dower 59.
 2. H. 4. 7. 9. H. 4. 4. tit. issue
 233. 11. H. 4. 40.
 23. E. 4. 7. 14. H. 8. 25. b.

(1) Nota if the sheriff doth not return seisin per metas et bundas, it is ill, unless certain closes are assigned by name. M. 44. 45. El. C. B. Husband makes lease for years and dies, the heir says to the wife, I endow you of the third part of all the lands whereof your husband was seised. Ruled 1. This a good endowment, though not by metes and bounds. Otherwise where the sheriff assigns dower. 2. This assignment shall bind the lessee, and they shall hold in common. Tr. 1651. B. R. Couss and Lambert. Hal. MSS. See further as to assignment of dower post. 34. b.—(2) Where the wife shall hold charged. First 19. E. 3. Quare Impedit 154. Husband seised of the manors of A B and C, to which several advowsons are appendant, grants the next avoidance of the three advowsons and dies. The heir assigns the manor of A to the wife, with the advowson of A, which becomes void. The grantee shall present, for assignment of common right is of the third part of every manor and the third presentment of every church. Otherwise if the dower had been assigned to her ad ostium ecclesie. Secondly if the husband had granted a rent-charge, then in the former case the wife shall hold it discharged, for she may distrain in the other two manors, and for the same reason the wife of the heir shall not have dos de dote. But thirdly if he had granted a rent out of the manor of A, and this manor had been assigned, she should hold charged. 5. E. 2. Avowry 106. Husband's feoffee grants rent-charge to the wife, the husband dies, the third part of the land charged is assigned in dower. The rent shall be appor- tioned, and shall not issue wholly out of the residue. Hal. MSS. See further Vin. Abr. Dower D. a.—(3) See further as to Quarentine 2. Inst. 17. Barringt. Ant Stat. ad. ed. p. 9. 10. Hugh. on Orig. Writs 193. and Vin. Abr. Dower I. a.—(4) Vide quoad damages in dower. First what shall be said to be a dying seised. Husband makes feoffment to the use of himself for life, remainder to his son in tail, and dies seised: the wife shall not have damages, because he doth not die seised of the inheritance, which descends to the son. T. 6. Car. And therefore finding that the husband dies seised without saying of what estate is ill. M. 5. Car. Bromly and Littleton. Secondly, How the inquiry shall be of the dying seised and damages. If judgment be by confession or default, a writ shall issue to deliver seisin and inquire of damages; but if it be by verdict, the same jury shall inquire of the dying seised and damages; but if it be omitted, it may be supplied by writ of inquiry. Thirdly, What the damage shall be. Nota before the statute of Merton no damages in dower, and by that statute the wife shall have damages, viz. the value of the third part de tempore mortis usque iudicium, and by the statute of Gloucester 6. E. 1. c. 1. costs as well as damages. Therefore the judgment quoad the land may be affirmed in writ of error and the judgment for damages be reversed, because they are several in their nature, 22. E. 4. 46. and error lies after judgment for seisin and before judgment for damages. T. 24. Car. B. R. Dudley and Glyde. The damages in dower are 1. the value de tempore mortis: 2. damna occasione detentionis dotis, which are usually assessed severally. But if they are mixed together by the verdict, yet it is good. T. 5. Car. C. B. Harves case. Judgment to recover seisin by default, and writ to enquire of the value; the jury assess the value to the taking of the inquisition, and judgment given for them, and affirmed good in writ of error; so that the judgment intended by the statute of Merton is not the first judgment but the second. T. 1649. Thynne and Thynne. Hal. MSS. See in Barn. Not. 2d. ed. p. 234. Penrice's case, according to which damages should be computed only to the awarding of the writ of inquisition. But Walker and Nevil 1. Leon. 56. and the case cited by lord Hale are contra.—(5) Damages in such case according to the value, not of the land, but of the rent. P. 22. Jac. C. B. Hal. MSS.

Brown and Barkham determined by lord chancellor Cowper; who held a younger brother to be capable of taking as heir male

And the reason why tout temps prift is a good plea in a writ of dower brought against the heire to barre her of the meane values and damages is, because the heire holdeth by title, and doth no wrong till a demand be made (1). But in a writ of aiel, cofinage, &c. where the land and damages are to be recovered, there such a plea is not good; for there the tenant of the land hath no title, but holdeth the land by wrong, and the feoffee of the heire cannot at the first day plead tout temps prift, because he had not the land all the time, since the death of the ancestor. 5. It is to be observed, that the meane values and damages are to be recovered against the tenant in a writ of dower, as it appeareth in a notable record [y] between Belfield and Rowse (2). The tenant as to parcell pleaded non-tenure, and for the rest due deteynement of charters, upon which pleas they were at issue, and both issues found by the jury against the tenant, and found further that the husband died seised such a day and yeare, and had issue a sonne, and that the demandant and the sonne by 6 yeares after the decease of the husband together tooke the profits of the land, and after the sonne such a day and yeare died without issue, after whose decease the land descended to the tenant as uncle and heire to him, by force whereof he entred and tooke the profits untill the purchasing of the originall writ, and found the value of the land by the yeare, and assessed damages for the deteyning of the dower, and costs; and upon this verdict, after often debating, the demandant had judgment to recover her dammages for all the time from the death of her husband without any defalcation (3). In which case many things apparent therein are observable. Let the tenant therefore take heed how he plead false pleas. 6. That this statute of Merton doth extend to copiholds [z] where the custome is, that women be dowable (4). 7. That if the wife hath dower assigned to her in chancery she shall have no damages, [a] for the words of the statute be, Et vidue per placitum recuperaverint, &c. So it is if the heire or his feoffee assigne dower, and the wife accepteth it she loseth her damages.

A man seised of lands in fee taketh a wife and granteth a rent charge, and after maketh a feoffment in fee, and taketh backe an estate taile and dieth, the wife recovereth dower against the issue in taile by reddition, the wife maketh a furmise that her husband died seised, and prayeth a writ to enquire of the damages, and that is granted to her. In this case she holds the land charged with the rent charge, for by her prayer she accepteth herselfe dowable of the second estate (5), for of the first estate, whereof she was dowable, her husband died not seised, and so she hath concluded herselfe, wherefore if the rent charge be more to her detriment then the damages beneficiall to her, it is good for her in that case to make no such prayer (6).

De quel age que la feme soit, issint que el passe l'age de neufe ans (7) al temps del mort son baron. Feme, wife, here Littleton speaketh of a wife generally, and generally it is to be understood as well of a wife de facto, as de jure. Therefore if the wife be past the age of 9 yeares [b] at the time of the death of her husband, she shall be endowed, of what age soever her husband be, albeit he were but 4 yeares old. Quia junior non potest dotem promereri, neque virum sustinere; nec obstat mulieri petenti minor aetas viri. Wherein it is to be observed, that albeit Consensus non concubitus facit matrimonium, and that a woman cannot consent before 12 nor a man before 14, yet this inchoate and imperfect marriage (from the which either of the parties of the age of consent may disagree) after the death of the husband shall give dower to the wife, and therefore it is accounted in law after the death of the husband legitimum matrimonium, a lawfull marriage, quoad dotem. If a man taketh a wife of the age of 7 yeares, and after alien his land, and after the alienation the wife attaineth to the age of 9 yeares, and after the husband dieth, the wife shall be endowed; for albeit she was not absolutely dowable at the time of the marriage, yet she was conditionably dowable, viz. if she attained to the age of 9 yeares before the death of the husband, for so Littleton here saith, so that she passe the age of 9 yeares at the death of her husband, for by his death the possibility of dower is consummate.

And so it is if the husband alien his land, and then the wife is attainted of felony, now is she disabled, but if she be pardoned before the death of the husband, she shall be indowed. If the son indow his wife at her age of 7 yeares ex assensu patris, if she before the death of her husband attaine to the age of 9 yeares, the dower is good. But otherwise it is of an originall absolute disability; as if a man take an alien to wife, and after the husband alien the land, and after she is made denizen, the husband dieth, she shall not be indowed, (8) because her capacity and possibility to be indowed came by the denization. Otherwise it is if she were naturalized by act of parliament, whereof see more in the chapter of villenage (9).

And the bishop upon an issue joyned in a writ of dower, Quod nunquam fuerunt copulati legitimo matrimonio, ought to certifie that they were coupled in lawfull marriage, albeit the man were under fourteen, or the wife above nine, and under twelve (10). So it is if a marriage de facto, be voidable by divorce (11), in respect of consanguinity, affinity, precontract, or such like, whereby the marriage might have bene dissolved, and the parties freed a vinculo matrimonij, yet if the husband die before any divorce, then for that it cannot now be avoyded, this wife de facto shall be endowed, [c] for this is legitimum matrimonium (as in the other case

(Doctr. Plac. 152.)

(S. C. Mo. 80. N. Benl. 155. 4. Leon. 198.)
[y] Mich. 8. & 9. Eliz. rot. 904. in Comm. banc.
(9. Co. 15. b. Beddingfield's case. 1. Ro. Abr. 679.)

[z] Tr. 37. Eliz. 4. Co. 30. b. Shawe's case.

[a] 43. Aff. Pl. 32. (F. N. B. 263.)

14. H. 8. 28.

(1. Ro. Abr. 675. Doctr. Plac. 148.)

[b] 3. E. 1. Dower 172. Itin. North. 8. E. 2. Dower 112. 7. E. 2. Dower 147. 12. E. 2. ibid. 159. 21. E. 3. 28. 15. E. 3. Dower 67. 12. R. 2. Dower 54. 12. H. 4. 3. 35. H. 6. 40. 7. H. 6. 11. 12. 12. H. 4. Doctr. & Stud. Fitz. N. B. 149. b. 22. Eliz. Dower 369. Bract. fol. 92. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 21. Lib. Intrat. fo. 123.
(Post 37. a. Ante 31. Cro. Jam. 539.)

(See 1. Salk. 120. S. C. 3. Leo. 410.)
(5. Co. 98. b. Berrie's case.)

[c] 10. E. 3. 35. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 22. Brit. cap. 107.
(7. Co. 41. b.)

(1) If the tenant comes the first day, and acknowledges the action, and avers that he was at all times ready to render dower, the demandant may take judgment immediately, and then there shall only be recovery of seisin et nihil de missa quia venit primo die. But if the demandant would have damages, she may aver, that she requested her dower and the tenant did not endow her, and then the judgment for damages and value shall wait till the issue is tried. N. Entries Dower in Judgment 4. Hal. MSS.—(2) Mich. 8. and 9. Eliz. Belford and Rows, Moor and Bendl. Hal. MSS. See Mo. 80. and N. Bendl. 153.—(3) Ratio istius casus videtur, because the wife ought to accompt to the heir for the whole. But if the heir be in ward in chivalry and the wardship is granted to the wife, or if the wife has estate for years, and after the years expired or the full age she brings dower, it seems that the heir shall not be charged pro tempore, because she has a good estate to her own use. The reason is, because the statute of Gloucester, that every one shall render for his time, doth not extend to this case. H. 8. Jac. C. B. Casus Archiepisc. Ebor. Hal. MSS.—(4) Vid. Rot. Parl. 3. H. 6. n. 29. special act of parliament for giving mesne values to the wife against the king, in casu comitis Marche. Hal. MSS.—(5) Sic nota, the wife has election to be endowed of the last seisin; and therefore if husband and wife levy fine and take back estate to the husband in fee, the wife shall dower of the second seisin; but otherwise it is in the case of a husband intitled to be tenant by the curtesy, ut videtur. Hic fol. 30. a.—Hal. MSS.—(6) See further as to damages in dower. Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 180. Treat. on Dow. in Gilb. Law of Uses 375. 2. L. Raym. 1384. New Abr. Dower I. Vin. Abr. Dower O. a. P. a. Say. Law of Dam. 16. and 17. Ch. 2. c. 8. sect. 3. and 4. Caf. B. R. temp. Hardw. 19. 50. 23.—(7) Vid. Raft. Entr. 228. novem annorum et dimid. She ought to shew how much more she is than 9 yeares.—Hal. MSS.—(8) Philips in his reading holds, that if the wife be attainted, and then the husband purchases lands and aliens it again, and then the wife is pardoned, she shall have dower of the land which was purchased and aliened during the time she was not dowable. And he cited Maunsfield's case adjudged 28. Elizabeth. In that case a jointure was conveyed to the wife before the coverture, and during the coverture the husband purchased other lands and aliened them again and died, the land which the wife had in jointure was evicted, and the wife had dower of the land which was purchased and aliened by her husband at the time when she was barred of her action of dower. So if wife elopes and husband purchases lands and aliens them, and then the wife is reconciled, she shall have dower of those lands. MS. Comment. on Litt. penes editorem, supposed to have been written before the publication of lord Coke's Commentary.—See the list of readers of the Middle Temple in Dugd. Orig. Jurid. by which it appears that Mr. Philips was autumn reader in 38. Eliz.—See further Plowd. Quær. 181. and 204.—(9) Vide supra fol. 31. b.—Hal. MSS.—See note 9. in 31. b.—(10) Vid. M. 9. and 10. E. 1. coram rege Rot. 24. Ebor. A contract per verba de presenti with B, and has issue by her, and afterwards marries C in facie ecclesiæ. B recovers A for her husband by sentence of the ordinary, and for not performing the sentence he is excommunicated, and afterwards enfeoffs D, and then marries B in facie ecclesiæ, and dies. She brings dower against D, and recovers because the feoffment was per fraudem mediate between the sentence and the solemn marriage, sed reveratur coram rege et concilio quia predictis A non fuit seiscitus during the espousals between him and B. Nota, neither the contract nor the sentence was a marriage. Quoad marriage infra annos nobiles, nota infra sect. 104. It is only sponsalia de futuro quoad other purposes. Dy. 105. 313. 369. 47. E. 3. Action sur lestatute 37. Whether husband shall have trespass de tali uxore abducta.—Hal. MSS.—(11) Nota obiter. When A per judicium ecclesiæ recuperasset aliquam in uxorem, vel in divortium celebratum male under a devise to the heirs male of the body of the testator's great grandfather, though the daughter of an elder brother

[d] Bracton lib. 4. fol. 304.
Britton ibidem. Fleta lib. 5.
cap. 23. 32. E. 1. Dier 156.
(5. Co. 98. b. Ante 32. a. 1. Ro.
Abr. 341. 681. Noy 108.)

[e] Tr. 2. Ja. Rot. 1815. in Communi Banco. Inter Stowell and Wikes in Dower.

[f] 50. E. 3. 15. b.

[g] W. 2. cap. 34.
(1. Mod. Rep. 130. 2. Inf. 68.)

[h] Britton cap. 106. Bracton
lib. 4. fol. 301
[i] 31. E. 3. tit. Collusion 29.

[k] Bract. lib. 2. cap. 39. fol.
92. &c.
Fleta lib. 5. cap. 22.
Britton cap. 101.

[l] Glanvil lib. 6. cap. 1.
Bracton ubi supra.
Britton ubi supra.
Fleta ubi supra.
Mirror cap. 1. sect. 3.
Magna Carta cap. 7.

Fitz. N. B. 150. O.

[m] 21. E. 4. 53. 54. 7. H. 6.
26. 22. H. 6. 14. 21. H. 7. 17.
40. Aff. 27. 41. 16. E. 2. Prescription 53. 43. E. 3. 32. 45.
Aff. 8. Dier 363. 39. E. 3. 2. 10.
14. E. 3. Barre 27. 13. E. 3. tit.
Dower, 65. (1. Ro. Abr. 558.
563.)

[n] Vide le statute de consuetud.
Kancie, &c. Trin. 17. E. 3. coram rege Kan. in Thesaur. in which record Sententia significeth Widowhood.

bratum inter A & B his wife, and she is married to C, et postea ad prosecutionem A sententia divortii reversatur by appeal, a writ directed to the sheriff shall issue out of chancery on the sentence there certified. Claus. 19. H. 3. m. 1. pro Willelmo de Tregor. Claus. 20. H. 3. m. 9. pro Willelmo de Dauntsey. Claus. 21. H. 3. m. 17. pro Roberto de Halsted. And vid. M. 9. and 10. E. 1. ubi supra. Et cum eundem Willelmum, si in malitia sua ulterius perseverasset, ad executionem dictæ sententiæ regia potestas temebatur compulisse, si a loci diocesano fuisset super hoc requisitus. Hal. MSS.

(1) 10. E. 3. 15. Supra 32. Hal. MSS. See n. 9. in 32. a.—(2) Acc. 2. Hawk. Pl. C. b. 2. c. 23. f. 36. and the authorities there cited.—(3) To the books cited ante 32. a. n. 10. as to the effect of elopement on dower, add New Abr. tit. Marriage E. 1. Treat. on Dower in Gilb. Law of Uses, 402.—(4) Acc. Bro. Appeal 17. Staund. Pl. C. 59. But see contra 2. Inf. 317. and 1. Mod. 130. by judge Hide.—(5) See post 37. a.—(6) The reason is, because post carnalem copulam the husband cannot be professed without the consent of the wife. Extrav. de conversione conjugatorum cap. 2. et per totum. Nec è converso. Hal. MSS. See New Abr. Marriage E. 3. Vin. Dower K. and Treat. on Dow. in Gilb. Law of Uses, 401.—(7) Vid. 15. H. 3. Prescription 57. Custom of the town of Salop, that the wife shall have a moiety of socage, but if the husband has socage and chivalry the wife shall have only a third part. Hal. MSS.—(8) Nota, the writ special. Hal. MSS.—(9) See Acc. Robinf. Gavelk. 159.—(10) Accordingly adjudged that she cannot waive. H. 24. Eliz. rot. 1515. C. B. P. 43. Eliz. Davers and Selby T. 30. Eliz. C. B. Rot. 157. Hunt and Gilbert. Hal. MSS.—See the former case in Cro. Eliz. 825. and the latter in Mo. 260. 1. Leon 133. Gouldsb. 108. Cro. Eliz. 121. and Sav. 91. See further on the subject in Robinf. Gavelk. 179. and Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 160.—(11) By the custom of some places the wife shall have the whole of her husband's lands in dower. See Fitzh. N. Br. 150. p.

ther was heir general, and instead of founding his decree on special circumstances, which were not wanting in the case, moit expressly denied lord Coke's distinction between descent and purchase. See Prec. in Cha. 442. 461. Gilb. Rep. 116. 131. and 1. Stra. 35. But lord Cowper's decree, notwithstanding his high character, was not acquiesced in; for in November 1641 the same case was brought, by bill of review, before lord chancellor Hardwicke, who indeed decreed in favour of the same person, but was far from following lord Cowper in his reasons. He admitted lord Coke's distinction to have been long ago established, and professed to determine wholly on the special circumstances, without the least intention of impeaching the general rule. In giving judgment he divided the case into two questions, 1st. whether it was an established rule, that he who claims as heir male by purchase must be general heir as well as nearest male descendant; 2dly, whether the apparent intent of a testator to the contrary may not create an exception to the general rule. According to a very good note of the case lord Hardwicke's words on the first question were these: As to the first of these questions, it cannot be denied, but that the distinction between an heir male of the body to take by descent, who is the nearest male descendant of the party claiming through males, and to take by purchase, who must be heir as well as a male descendant of the body, has been long ago established. The statute de donis established the first, and the second has been laid down by lord Coke in his Comment upon Littleton, and is taken from his argument in Shelley's case and Dyer's report of that case, and he has been followed by some later authorities. Lord Cowper argued strongly against this rule; but as his argument is well known and very common, I shall not now take notice of it. If this doctrine had been res integra at the time of his decree, or was so now, I am so fully convinced of the unreasonableness of it that I would never establish it. But when a rule of law has long prevailed, it ought to be supported, though it be not strictly agreeable to natural reason; for in many instances it is more material, that the law is settled than how it is settled. But as I think that this case may be determined without determining this question, I shall leave the rule when the wife is infra annos nobiles) quoad dotem. And so in a writ of dower the bishop ought to certify, that they were legitimo matrimonio copulati, according to the words of the writ. And herewith agreeth 10. E. 3. 35. And [d] Bracton: quamdiu duravit matrimonium, duravit dotis exactio, eo deficiente deficit dotis petitio, &c. poterit tamen replicare contra exceptionem illam, quod si aliquando fuit matrimonium propter consanguinitatem, &c. inter eos accusatum, nunquam tamen fuit in vita viri sui solum nec divortium celebratum. But if they were divorced à vinculo matrimonij in the life of her husband, she loseth her dower: otherwise it is if they were divorced [e] Causa adulterij (1), which is but à mensa et thoro, and not à vinculo matrimonij, as it was adjudged. But some doe hold that a wife de facto shall not have an appeale of the death of her husband, but onely she that is a wife, de jure in favorem vitæ (2). Vide 50. E. 3. fol. 15. 28. E. 3. 92. 27. Aff. Stamf. Pl. Cor. 59. and that there unques accomple in loyall matrimonie shall be taken de jure strictly. And so in some case a wife shall have dower where she cannot have an appeale, [f] and in other cases she shall have an appeale, where she cannot have a writ of dower, as if she elope (3), &c. she is barred of her dower, but not of her appeale (4): and the reason is for that the statute [g] barreth her of her dower, but not of her appeale. So if the husband be attainted of treason, &c. his wife shall not be endowed, and yet if any doe kill him, the wife shall have an appeale, the reason of the diversity shall appeare hereafter in this chapter (5).

Après le mort le baron. [h] mortuo viro hinc confirmatur dos. This is intended of a naturall, not of a civill death. For if the husband entred in religion, [i] the wife shall not be endowed untill he be naturally dead (6).

And in this chapter Littleton divideth dower into five parts, viz. dower by the common law. Secondly, dower by the custome. Thirdly, dower ad osium ecclesiæ. Fourthly, dower ex assensu patris. And fifthly, dower De la plus beale. And all these dowers were instituted for a competent livelihood for the wife during her life. [k] Propter onus matrimonij, et ad sustentationem uxoris et educationem liberorum, cum fuerint procreati, si vir præmoriatur.

Sect. 37.

NOTA per le common ley la feme navera pur sa dower forsque [1] la tierce part, &c. This third part is called rationalis dos, or dos legitima, because it is the dower that the common law giveth, rationalis autem dos est cujuslibet mulieris de quocun-que tenemento tertia pars omnium terrarum, et tenementorum quæ vir suus tenuit in dominio suo ut de feodo, &c.

Mes pur custome dafcun pais (7) el avera le moitie, et per le custome en ascun Ville et Burgh el avera lentierte. Such a [m] custome may extend to a county, city, or an ancient burgh without question; and so this custome, as here it appeareth by Littleton, may extend to upland towns, which are neither counties, cities, nor boroughs. But the furer pleading, in this and the like cases, is to lay the custome within a manor or seignory, if the truth of the case will so beare it (8). By the custome of Gavelkind [n] the wife shall be endowed of the moiety, so long as she keepe herselfe sole, and without child, which she cannot waive and take her thirds for her life (9). For in that case, Consuetudo tollit communem legem (10).

And as custome may enlarge, so may custome abridge dower, and restraine it to a fourth part, &c.

ET nota, que per le common ley
la feme navera pur sa dower forsque la tierce part des tenement que fueront a sa baron durant le espousels; mes per custome dascun pais el avera le moitie, et per le custome en afcun ville et burgh,
el avera lentierte;
et en tous tiels cases, el serra dit tenant en dower.

AND note, that by
the common law,
the wife shall have for her dower, but the third part of the tenements which were her husband's during the efpousals; but by the cus-tome of some county
she shall have the halfe, and by the custome in some towne or borough, she shall have the whole; and in all these cases she shall be called tenant in dower.

Sect.

Sect. 38.

This shall be explained by that which shall be said in the two Sections next ensuing.

AUXY sont deux autres manners de dower, cestascavoir, dower que est appelle dowment ad ostium Ecclesiæ, et dower appelle dowment ex assensu patris.

ALSO there be two other kinds of dower, viz. dower which is called dowment at the church doore, and dower called dow-ment by the father's assent.

Sect. 39.

*D*owment ad of-tium Ecclesiæ
est, lou home de plein age seisie en fee simple que serra espouse a une femme, quant il vient al huis del monastery ou desgli-se destre espouse, et la apres affiance enter eux fait, il endowe la femme de sa entier
terre ou de la moity, ou dautre meindre parcel, et la overt-ment declare le quanttitie et la certaintie de la terre, que el avera pur sa dower. In ceo case la femme, apres le mort le baron, poit entrer en le dit quantitie de terre dont le baron luy endowa, sans autre assigne-ment de nulluy.

*D*owment at the church doore is,
where a man of full age seised in fee simple, who shall be married to a woman, and when he commeth to the church doore to be married, there, after affiance and troth plight betweene them, he endoweth the woman of his whole land or of the halfe or other lesser part thereof, and there openly doth declare the quantity and the certaintie of the land which she shall have for her dower.
In this case the wife, after the death of the husband, may enter into the said quantity of land of which her husband endowed her, without other assigne-ment of any.

ever after marriage solemnized (3), and therefore this dower is good without deed, because he cannot make a deed to his wife. For no assignment of dower ad ostium ecclesiæ can be made before marriage, for that before marriage the woman is not intitled to have dower.

De sa entier terre ou de le moitie. (4) In ancient time [9] as it appeareth by Glanvill

(1) Post affidationem et carnalem copulam sunt quasi husband and wife, and gift by him to the wife is void. 16. H. 3. Feoffments 117. 13. E. 1. ibid. 113. Hal. MSS.—(2) This explanation of affiance or sponsalia is conformable to the strict sense of the word amongst the civilians and canonists; but our law books, as Mr. Swinburne long ago observed, use affiance and marriage promiscuously for one and the same thing, and lord Coke apparently supposes Littleton by affiance to mean marriage; for lord Coke says that dower ad ostium ever is after marriage, without professing to contradict Littleton. See Swinb. on Spousals. 2. Perk. sect. 442.—(3) But though dower ad ostium cannot be till after marriage, yet it seems that such endowment cannot be made at any time after, but must be immediately after. See Perk. sect. 442. where the time of assigning dower ex assensu patris is so explained. But Mr. Perkins adds a case, in which, according to some ancient books, dower ex assensu patris made 8 weeks after the marriage was held good. Perk. Sect. 443. See further Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 167. and note p. in 2. Blackst. Comment. 5th edit. 134.—(4) Vid. 9. H. 3. Dower 190. Dower ad ostium ecclesiæ of a moiety of all lands which he has or may have. He purchases lands afterwards, and the dower good for them. Hal. MSS.

unimpeached, and found my decree on the second question. He then proceeded to consider the second question, and after stating several authorities to shew there might be exceptions to the general rule, he pointed out the particular circumstances which he relied upon in the case before him, and on account of them only affirmed lord Cowper's decree. Lord Hardwicke's guarded manner of expressing himself on this last case amounts to a full acknowledgment of the general rule, and is the strongest authority to prove its existence, because he avowed his dislike of it.—Upon the whole, it is submitted to the learned reader, that the general rule of being heir general to as take heir male or female by purchase may be defended as a reasonable rule of construction, where the words merely operate as words of purchase, and more particularly if the superadded words of limitation are to heirs general, as where land is given to the heirs female of the body of one and the heirs of their bodies; that the authorities before and in the time of lord Coke fully warranted him in advancing the rule in its full extent, that is, where the words operate as words both of purchase and limitation; that the rule has been confirmed by many cases since lord Coke's time; and lastly, that as lord Cowper's opinion is the single direct authority in any printed book against the rule, and it has been acted upon and acknowledged in several subsequent cases, it ought still to be observed, where the construction rests singly on the words heirs female, and they stand unexplained by any other words or circumstances.

*I*F this dower be made ad ostium castri sive mesuagii it is not good, but ought to be made, ad ostium Ecclesiæ sive monasterii.

Et sciendum est [a] quod hac constitutio fieri debet in facie Ecclesiæ, et ad ostium Ecclesiæ; non enim valet facta in lecto mortali, vel in camera, vel alibi ubi clandestina fuere conjugia. For the law requires, that this and like matters be done publickly and solemnly.

10. H. 3. Dower 200.

[a] Bracton. lib. 2. cap. 13. Mirror. cap. 1. sect. 2. and cap. 5. 10. H. 3. Dower 201. F.N.B. 150. m. n. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 22. &c. Britton cap. 101. 108. &c.

(Perk. sect. 305.)

Ou home de pleine

age. That is of one and twenty yeares. Anno 9. H. 3. dower 197. A man of the age of eighteen yeares tooke a wife, and by assent of his guardian endowed her ad ostium ecclesiæ, and it was adjudged a good endowment, albeit the husband dyed before the age of one and twentie yeares; but I hold Littleton's opinion to be good law.

9. H. 3. Dower 197.

(Post. 38. 4. 1. Ro. Abr. 681.)

La apres affiance enter eux. (1) Affidare est fidem dare, Affiance or sponsalitie, and is derived of this word spondeo, because they contract themselves together, et ideo sponsalia dicuntur [p] futurarum nuptiarum conventio, et re-promissio (2). But this dower is good without deed, because he

[p] Glanvill. lib. 6. ca. 1. 40. E. 3. 43. Vide Vernon's case, 4. Co. 1. 2.

[q] Glanvill. lib. 6. cap. 1. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 38. 39. and lib. 4. tract. 6. cap. 1. & 6. Britton cap. 101. &c. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 22. &c.

(1. Ro. Abr. 682.)
 [r] F. N. B. 150.
 [f] 20. E. 3. Barre 132.
 45. E. 3. 6. Fleta lib. 5. 23.

[i] Britton cap. 101.
 Bracton lib. 2. cap. 18.

[u] Vide 14. H. 3. Dower 189.
 9. H. 3. Dower 190. 8. H. 3.
 Dower 195. F. N. B. 150. 40.
 E. 3. 43.

[w] Magna Carta cap. 7. See the second part of the Institutes
 cap. 7. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 23.
 Britton cap. 103. Bract. lib. 2.
 cap. 40. Regist. 175. Vide Dyer 6. E. 6. 76. b. and 161. a.
 F. N. B. 161. 1. Marie. Br. 101.
 (Aate 32. b.)

Nota. surest way.

(1. Ro. Abr. 681. 2. Inst 678.
 32. H. 8. cap. 5. of execution.)

[x] 45. E. 3. 26. 48. E. 3. 36.
 22. Aff. 87. 39. E. 3. 12. 37.
 H. 6. 38. 39. H. 6. 25. 1. H.
 5. 8. Brev. 199. 30. E. 3. 30.
 21. E. 4. 3. Vide 1. Co. Shelley's case. 40. E. 3. 22.

[a] 8. E. 2. Ent. 75. 40. E. 3.
 22. 45. E. 3. 5. 6.
 [b] 1. Mar. Dyer. 91. 1. E. 2.
 Dower 146. 28. H. 6. 2. Dyer
 9. El. 263. 26. Aff. 41. 31. E.
 3. Scir. fa. 99. 33. H. 6. 2. Vernon's case. 4. Co. 1. 5. E. 4. 22.
 (1. Ro. Abr. 682. 684. Cro. Eliz.
 451. Noy 55. Mo. 59. Post. 169.)

[c] 7. H. 6. 34. 10. E. 2. Dower
 169. 10. E. 3. 38.
 (2. Co. 67.)

Glanvill lib. 6. cap. 1. It was taken that a man could not have indowed his wife ad osium ec- clesie of more then a third part, but of lesse he might. But at this day [r] the law is taken as Littleton here holdeth. An assignement of dower, [f] where the husband was sole seised, cannot be made of the third or fourth part in common, but ought to be in severaltie (1).

Et la overtment [t] declare le quantitie et certeintie del terre. Here be two things that the law doth delight in, viz. first, to have this and the like openly and solemnly done. Secondly, to have certaintie, which is the mother of quiet and repote. And this word (moitie) above said is to be entended of the halfe in certaintie, and not of the moitie in common, which cleerly [u] appeareth in that here Littleton saith, the quantitie and certaintie of the land.

En ceo case la feme poet entrer en le dit quantitie del terre. And afterwards Sectione 43. he saith, Nota, que en tous cases lou le certaintie appeirt, queux terres ou te- nements feme avera pur sa dower, la feme poet entrer apres la mort son baron. It was instituted in favour and reliefe of wives, that a man after marriage might assigne to his wife certaintie of dower, to the end that the widow should not be driven to a long and chargeable suit, wherein delay might be used, and in the meane time her life spent, together with her money also.
 For albeit the [w] law hath provided, Quod vidua post mortem mariti sui non det aliquid pro dote sua, et maneat in capitali mesuagio mariti sui per quadraginta dies post obitum mariti sui, infra quos dies assignetur ei dos sua, nisi prius ei assignata fuerit, &c. et habeat rationabile estoverium suum interim in communi, yet because there was no penaltie or punishment inflicted, the tenant of the land may drive her to sue for her dower. And this continuance of the widow in the capitall messuage, is in law called a quarantine, quarentina, for that it is by the space of fortie days, as is aforesaid (2). And if the heire or other tenant of the land put her out, she may have her writ, De quarentina habenda. If the wife marry within the fortie dayes she loseth her quarantine, for her habitation in the house is personall to her, and only given to her in judgment of law during her widowhood, albeit the words of the law be generall. And therefore to the end that widowes might have certaintie of estate, and that they might enter (3) and not be driven to suit, the law hath provided dower ad osium ecclesie, and as it shall appeare hereafter, dower ex assensu patris. And lastly, by making of a joynture of which (being no dower but made in satisfaction of dower either before or after marriage) it is necessary that something should be said hereafter in his apt place, for that this now falleth out to be the surest way.

En tous cases quant le certaintie appeirt, &c. la feme poet entrer apres le mort del baron. This is to be intended where the certaintie appeareth upon an assigne-ment of dower ad osium ecclesie, or ex assensu patris. For if a woman bring a writ of dower of fixe pound rent charge, and she hath judgement to recover the third part, albeit it be certain that she shall have fortie shillings, yet she cannot [x] distreine for 40 shillings, before the sherife doe deliver the same unto her: (4) for wheresoever the writ demands land, rent, or other things in certain, the demandant after judgement may enter or distrein before any seisin delivered to him by the sherife upon a writ of habere facias seisinam. But in dower where the writ de-mandeth nothing in certaine, there the demandant after the judgement cannot enter or distreine untill execution sued, by which execution the sherife is by the king's writ to deliver the third part in certaintie to the demandant. And so it is when the wife of one tenant in common demand a third part of a moitie, yet after judgement she cannot enter until the sherife deliver to her the third part, albeit the deliverie of the sherife shall reduce it to no more certaintie then it was (5).

Sauns auter assignement (6) de nulluy. For as concerning dower at the common law, there must be assignement either by the sherife, (as hath been said) by the king's writ, or else by the heire or other tenant of the land by consent and agreement between them. To a perfect assignement of dower eight things are to be observed: [a] first regularly the assignement must be certaine, as our author here saith (7).

Secondly, (8) it [b] must be either of some part of the land whereof she is dowable, or of a rent or some other profit issuing out of the same, either before judgement or after, which rent may be assigned to her by parol. But an assignement of other land whereof she is not dowable, or of a rent issuing out of the same, is no barre of her dower (9).

Thirdly, the assignement must be absolute, and not conditionall, or subject to any limitation (10).

Fourthly, it must be made by him that is tenant of the land, but herein certaine diversities are to be observed (11).

If two or more be joyntenants of lands, [c] the one of them may assigne dower to the wife,

(1) Vide contra adjudged supra. Hal. MSS. See Lambert's case ante 32. b. n. 1. See S. C. in 1. Ro. Abr. 682. X. pl. 3. and
 Sty. 176. in both of which books the case is so explained as to make it consistent with lord Coke's general doctrine as to the manner of assigning; for according to them the court held, that the assignment of the third part in common would have been bad, if the wife and heir had not by mutual assent waived the assignment by metes and bounds, and that it would have been error, if the sheriff had so assigned.

(2) See further as to quarantine ante 32. a. and n. 3. there, and Treat. on Dow. in Gilb. Law of Uses 372.

(3) 24. H. 3. Dower 189. A man endows his wife of all the lands which his mother then had in dower; the mother and husband dye; the wife brings writ of dower ad osium ecclesie and recovers. Sic nota, that the wife may have action orenter. MSS. Com.
 on Litt.—See acc. post 35. b.

(4) 20. E. 4. 14. Hal. MSS.

(5) If the sheriff reduces to certainty by metes and bounds, though the demandant refuses, yet she may afterwards enter. 10. Eliz.
 Dy. 278. Hal. MSS.

(6) Nota P. 38. Eliz. Wentworth's case. It ought to be pleaded by the word assignavit not dedit. Hal. MSS.—See Cro. Eliz. 451.

(7) Vid. ante 32. b. Lambert's case. Hal. MSS.—See n. 1. in 32. b. & supra n. 1.

(8) 12. H. 4. 17. Hal. MSS.

(9) But see 2. H. 5. 12. The heir assigns dower of lands of which the husband was seised, but the wife not dowable: she is tenant in dower. 30. E. 1. Briefe 884. If wife be endowed, and afterwards exchanges with the heir for other lands which were the inheritance of the husband, she shall be said to be tenant in dower of the lands so taken in exchange, and her entry shall be said to be by the husband.
 Per omnes justiciarios. Hal. MSS.

(10) P. 33. Eliz. Wentworth's case. A conditional assignment of rent doth not bar dower. Hal. MSS.

(11) And this ought to be averred in pleading. Dy. 361. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. in Cro. Eliz. 451. and Noy 55.

wife of a third part in certainty, and this shall binde his companions, because they were compellable to do the same by law⁽¹⁾. But if one of them assigne a rent out of the land to the wife, this shall not binde his companion, because he was not compellable by the law therunto⁽²⁾. If the husband make several feoffments of severall parcells, and dyeth, and the one feoffee assigne dower to the wife of parcell of land in satisfaction of all the dower which she ought to have in the land of the other feoffees, the other feoffees shall take no benefit of this assignment, because they are strangers thereunto, and cannot plead the same⁽³⁾. But in that case if the husband dyeth seized of other lands in fee simple, and the same descend to his heire, and the heire endoweth the wife of certaine of those lands in full satisfaction of all the dower that she ought to have aswell in the lands of the feoffees, as in his owne lands, this assignment is good, and the several feoffees shall take advantage of it⁽⁴⁾. And therefore if the wife bring a writ of dower against any of them, they may vouch the heire; and he may pleade the assignment which he himselfe hath made in safety of himselfe, lest they should recover in value against him, [d] so as there is a privity in this respect betweene the heire and the feoffees, and by this meanes the same may be pleaded by the heire that made it⁽⁵⁾. And so it is adjudged in our bookes, which is a notable case for many purposes.

Fiftly, If assignment be made [e] by any disseisor, abator, intruder, or any wrong doer, of lands or tenements, if they came to that estate by collusion and covin betweene the widow and them, albeit the widow hath just cause of action, and the assignment be indifferently made after judgement by the sherife of an equall third part, yet shall the disseisee, &c. avoyd it, for covin in this case shall suffocate the right that appertained to her, and so the wrongfull manner shall avoyd the matter that is lawfull⁽⁶⁾.

Sixtly, An assignment by [f] a disseisor, abator, intruder, &c. if there be no covin, is good, unlesse it be prejudiciall to the disseisee, &c. As if the husband [g] infeoffeth the younger sonne with warranty, the eldest sonne disseise the yongest sonne, and endow the widow, in this case the yonger sonne shall avoyd this assignment⁽⁸⁾, for otherwise he shall lose his warrantie: but a disseisor, abator, intruder, &c. cannot assigne a rent out of the land to her for her dower, to bind the disseisee, &c.

Sevently, No assignment can be made, but by such as have a freehold⁽⁹⁾, (as hath beene said) or against whom a writ of dower doth lie, and therefore [h] an assignment by a gardian in focage is voyd⁽¹⁰⁾, but a gardian in chivalry may assigne dower⁽¹¹⁾, as shall be said hereafter, because a writ of dower lieth against him, and not against a gardian in focage.

Eightly, And before the gardian in chivalry enter⁽¹²⁾, the heir within age [i] may assigne dower, for the gardian may waive the wardship. And so briefly have you heard, of what, by whom, and to whom the assignment must be made⁽¹³⁾. But there needeth neither livery of seisin, nor writing, to any assignment of dower, because it is due of common right.

Sect. 40.

DOWMENT ex assensu Patris est lou le pier est seise de tenements en fee, et son firs et heire apparent, quant il est espouse, endowe sa feme al huys del monasterie ou del Esglise, de parcel de terres ou tenements son pier de assent son pier, et assigne la quantitie et les parcells. En ceo case apres le mort le firs, after the death of the

Dowment by assent of the father is, where the father is seised of tenements in fee, and his sonne and heire apparent, when he is married, endoweth his wife at the monastery or church doore, of parcel of his fathers lands or tenements with the assent of his father, and assignes the quantity and parcells. In this case after the death of the en fee. Tenant for life of a carve of land, the reversion to the father in fee, the sonne and heire apparent of the father endoweth his wife of this carve, by the assent of the father, the tenant for life dieth, the husband dieth, the reversion was a tenement in the father, and yet this is no good endowment ex assensu patris, because the father at the time of the assent had but a reversion expectant upon a freehold, whereof he could not have endowed his owne wife⁽¹⁴⁾; and albeit the tenant for life died, living the husband, yet, quod initio non valet, tractu temporis non convalescet

LOU le pier est seise de tenements

(9. Co. 18. Mo. 26.)

[d] 33. E. 3. tit. Judgm. 254.
8. E. 3. 69. 17. E. 3. 58. b. 3. E. 3.
tit. Dower 76. 3. E. 3. Vouch. 196.
See the second part of the Institut.
W. 1. cap. 49.
[e] 25. Ass. p. 1. 44. Ass. 29.
44. E. 3. 46. 27. Ass. 74. 11. H. 4.
60. 15. E. 4. 4. 19. H. 8. 12.
Lit. 83. 151. (2. Co. 67. 1. Ro.
Ab. 549. 1. Sid. 21. Post. 357.
1. Co. 78. 6. Co. 58. a. 5. Co. 30. b.)
[f] 12. Ass. p. 20. 21. E. 3. 12.
[g] 3. E. 3. tit. Dower 77. 16. E.
2. tit. dower Statham. (Post. 357.)

[h] 31. E. 1. Dower 151. 29. Ass.
68. 15. E. 3. Dower 69. (6. Co. 57.)

[i] 7. R. 2. admesurement. 4.
F.N.B. 148. f. (Post. 38. b.)

Brit. ca. 109. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 22.
23. Bract. lib. 5. 305. 6. E. 3. 34.
F.N.B. 150. (1. Ro. Ab. 677.)

(1. Sid. 3. Post. 36. b.)

(1) This case of assignment of dower by one of two or more jointenants must be understood to be, where the husband has been solely seized during the coverture, and afterwards conveys or devises the land to two jointly and dies; for the wife of a jointenant is not dowerable. See post sect. 45.

(2) 9. E. 3. 38. Husband and wife are jointenants of land, of which the wife of I. S. is dowerable: the husband alone assigns: it is good, and shall bind the wife. 7. H. 6. 33. Hal. MSS. See Perk. Sect. 399. and Keilw. 128. b.

(3) Vid. the statute of Westminster 1. cap. 48. 4. E. 3. 42. M. 8. Jac. C. B. n. 15. D. D. adjudged accordingly in Throgmorton's case. Hal. MSS.—However, Mr. Perkins seems to think, that such an assignment by one feoffee may be pleaded in bar of dower by the other feoffees. Perk. sect. 402.

(4) 31. E. 3. Scire facias 99. Hal. MSS.

(5) Vid. if the heir by receipt shall have the plea. Kelw. 128. Hal. MSS.

(6) See further on this subject Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 199.

(7) 3. E. 3. 1. 50. E. 3. 7. 8. Hal. MSS.

(8) 3. E. 3. 18. By Herle, the assignment shall bar in such a case. Hal. MSS.

(9) Acc. Perk. 404.

(10) A quære is made of this in 1. Ro. Abr. 682.

(11) And yet guardian in chivalry had only a chattel interest. See post 38. b. where it is explained why a dower might be brought against him.

(12) But not after entry of the guardian. 9. H. 6. 6. Hal. MSS.

(13) See further as to assignment of dower post 39. b. Perk. sect. 393. to 423. Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 194. and 198. New Abr. Dower D. and Vin. Abr. Dower S. to A. 2.

(14) S. p. acc. Perk. 445.

valescet. And for the most part, dower ad osium ecclesie, and ex assensu patris, ensue the nature of a dower at the common law. And for these the wife may have a writ of dower, albeit they be certaine, as for the third part at the common law (2).

Et son firs et heire apparent. It must be such a sonne and heire apparent, as must continue an heire apparent, and therefore the yongest sonne and heire apparent cannot endow his wife ex assensu patris, of lands whereof the father is seised in fee of the nature of Borough English, because the father may have another sonne, and then the husband is not heire apparent: and it is in respect of the constant and perpetuall apparence, that the son and heire apparent may endow his wife of his father's lands. And so it is of lands in Gavelkind: [k] and this is the reason that dower ex assensu fratris, or consanguinei, is not good, for that albeit he is heire apparent at that time, yet for the common possibility that he may have issue, and every issue that the brother or cosin should have afterwards, shall exclude him, he is no such heire apparent as the law intendeth. [l] But an endowment ex assensu matris, is as good as ex assensu patris, because there is an apparence of a constant and perpetuall heire. And some have said, that if the father after his assent be attainted of treason or felony, that the wife in that case loseth her dower, because her husband doth not continue heire (3).

Quant il est espouse, endow sa feme.

[m] In this case, albeit the freehold and inheritance is in the father, yet in respect (as hath been said) of the constant and perpetuall apparence of the heire, the heire apparent doth endow, and the father doth but assent. And therefore where the father did endow the wife of his sonne and heire apparent, that endowment was holden void, because the husband in that case must endow, and the father assent.

And it is holden in 2.H.3. Dower 199(4). That if the heire apparent be within age, yet the endowment ex assensu patris is good. Note, Littleton in the case of dower ad osium ecclesie, doth put the husband of full age, but here of the dower ex assensu patris, he speaketh generally.

Et assigne le quantitie & les parcell.

So as both in dower ad osium ecclesie, & ex assensu patris, the certainty must be expressed. And therefore where books speake of a moiety, it is intended (as hath been said) of an halfe in certaine(5).

Apres la mort le firs sa feme entera. In this case after the death of the husband the wife shall enter, or have a writ of dower albeit the father be alive.

Que il covient al feme daver un fait provant sont assent a cel endowment.

Un fait.

A deed, factum, this word (deed) in the understanding of the common law is an instrument written in parchment or paper, [o] whereunto ten things are necessarily incident: viz. First, writing. Secondly, in parchment or paper. Thirdly, a person able to contract. Fourthly, by a sufficient name. Fifthly, a person able to be contracted with. Sixthly, by a sufficient name. Seventhly, a thing to be contracted for. Eighthly, apt words required by law. Ninthly, sealing. And tenthly, delivery. A deed cannot be written upon wood, leather, cloath, or the like, but only upon parchment or paper, for the writing upon them can be least vitiated, altered or corrupted.

If a deed [p] be alledged in count or plea, regularly it must be shewed to the court(6), to the end the court may judge whether there be apt words to make it a good contract according to the rule of law, whereof more shall be said in the chapter of conditions. But if non est factum be pleaded(7), because thereby the sealing, delivery, or other matter of fact is denied, it shall be tried by the country. Of deeds some be indented, and some be deeds poll. Of indented, some be bipartite, some tripartite, some quadripartite, &c. whereof more shall be said in the chapter of conditions. Also of deeds, some be inrolled, and some [q] be not inrolled; if it be inrolled according to the statute of 27. Hen. 8. cap. 10. it must be inrolled in parchment for the strength and continuance thereof, and not in paper, and so was it resolved in parliament by [k] 8. H. 3. Dower 193. 9. H. 3. Dower 191. 11. H. 3. Dower F.N.B. 150. l. 29. E. 3. Dow. 134. [l] F.N.B. 150. e. Flet. l. 5. cap. 22. Bract. lib. 4. 305. Ambr. Gorge's case. 6. Co. 22.

[m] 2. H. 3. Dower 199. (Post. 38. a.) 6. E. 3. 34. 8. E. 2. Dower 154.

2. H. 3. Dower 199.

[n] 9. H. 3. Dower 190. F.N.B. 150. m.

8. E. 2. Dower 154.

[o] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 33. &c. & l. 5. fo. 396. Brit. fol. 34. 65. 66. 101. Flet. l. 3. ca. 14. & lib. 6. ca. 32. & lib. 3. c. 3. 4. 5. 6. (2. Co. 5. Post 229. a. 2. Ro. Abr. 21.) (5. Co. 74. 76.)

[p] 4. E. 2. Fines 116. 14. E. 2. Ley 79. 4. E. 2. Ley 78. 27. H. 6. 10. 27. H. 8. 22. F.N.B. 122. l. (5. Co. 18.)

[q] Brit. fol. 101. Bract. l. 2. fol. 33. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14. (2. Inst. 673.)

(1) No reference to the Year Book, in L. and M. Roh. or P. It was first inserted in Redman's edition. See the observation on this addition to Littleton post 36. a.—(2) See acc. ante 34. b. n. 3.—(3) See Plowd. Quer. 181.—(4) This book is not to the purpose. Hal. MSS.—(5) Dower good of a moiety in common in the said book. Vid. ante. Hal. MSS. See acc. 9. H. 3. Dower 190. which is the book meant by lord Hale. See also ante 34. b. n. 1.—(6) Where a deed ought to be shewn. Vid. 12. H. 7. 12. 9. H. 7. 15. 9. E. 4. 53. 4. H. 7. 10. 14. H. 8. 18. 18. H. 8. 9. F. N. B. 210. E. in formdon. Dr. Leyfield's case 10. Rep. Where a thing cannot pass without deed in respect of the nature of the things, as herbage common in gross, &c. one ought to shew deed. So in respect of the quality of the lessor, as count or plea of demise of abbot with consent of convent T. 36. Eliz. Goffe and Thurston, mayor and commonalty P. 5. Jac. B. R. Garnons and Kenton, master and fellows of a college. P. 9. Jac. Lord Norris's case B. R. But yet count in ejectment of demise by husband and wife is good without shewing deed, though wife cannot demise without deed, as it seems. Dy. 91. when one declares on a deed, where it is not necessary. Count in ejectione firmæ on demise per scriptum indentatum without shewing, and yet good. M. 42. 43. El. B. R. Hall and Mather; and it seems, that defendant shall not have oyer. Count in debt for rent on demise of the reversion in scriptis hic in curia prolatis, yet the other shall not have oyer of the testament. 1651 Filston's case. A covenants with B to stand seised to the use of C his son: the son may plead this deed without shewing it, because the estate is executed by the statute. H. 11. Car. B. R. Crook n. 12. Stockman and Hampson. M. 5. Jac. C. B. So it seems, if it was with the party himself. M. 6. Jac. C. B. Debt on obligation by commissioners of bankrupt good without shewing deed. H. 6. Car. B. R. Crook n. 5. Gay and Fielder. Hal. MSS. See further on shewing of deeds and oyer in Com. Dig. Pleader O. P. Wilf. vol. 1. part 1. page 121. vol. 2. page 1. and Sheph. Touchst. 73. but most fully in Vin. Abr. Fairs, M. a. to M. a. 32.—(7) Where to plead non est factum. Dy. 112. In case of sigillum avulsium before issue, one may plead non est factum. 7. H. 6. 18. If a deed be suspicious by rasure or avulsion of seal, the party on oyer of deed may demur, and put it into the judgment of the court, or plead non est factum. T. 40. El. B. R. Rot. 202. Obligation with condition to save harmless against Tracy with a blank: a stranger after delivery fills up the blank with a christian name by consent of the obligor; yet adjudged to avoid the deed, because material. But if the addition is not material, as the addition of a county, and it be by a stranger, it doth not avoid the deed, though if by the party himself it doth avoid it. Vid. H. 43. Eliz.

by the judges in anno 23. Eliz. Now for the rest of the parts of a deed, you shall read thereof plentifully in our bookes, and in my Reports; which by this short instruction you shall easily understand (1).

Un fait de feoffement. It is properly called Charta feoffamenti (2), and yet if such a deed be denied, the plea is non est factum. So as of deeds some concerne the reatie, as here a deed of feoffement; some the personaltie, as a deed of gift of goods, obligations, bills, &c. And some mixt, whereof more shall be said in the chapter of releases.

If a man deliver a writing sealed, to the partie to whom it is made, as an escrow to be his deed upon certaine conditions, &c. this is an absolute deliverie of the deed, being made to the partie himself, for the deliverie is sufficient without speaking of any words (otherwise a man that is mute could not deliver a deed), and tradition is onely requisite, and then when the words are contrarie to the act which is the deliverie, the words are of none effect, non quod dictum, sed quod factum est inspicitur. And hereof though there hath been [r] variety of opinions, yet is the law now settled agreeable to judgements in former times, and so was it resolved by the whole court of Common Pleas (3). But it may be delivered to a stranger, as an escrowe, &c. because the bare act of deliverie to him without words worketh nothing (4). And this is the ancient diversitie [r] in our bookes, the record whereof I have seene agreeable with the reason of our old bookes (5). And as a deed may be delivered to the partie without words, so may a deed be delivered by words without any act of deliverie (6), as if the writing sealed lyeth upon the table, and the feoffor or obligor saith to the feoffee or obligee, goe and take up the said writing, it is sufficient for you, or it will serve the turne, or take it as my deed, or the like words, it is a sufficient delivery (7).

Of deeds and their distinctions you shall reade excellent matter in antiquitie. [t] Cartarum, alia regia, alia privatarum; et regiarum, alia privata, alia communis, et alia universitatis. Privatarum, alia de puro feoffamento et simplici, alia de feoffamento conditionali five conventionali, alia de recognitione pura, vel conditionali, alia de quiete clamantia, alia de confirmatione, &c. Verba intentioni non e contra debent inservire.

Carta non est [u] nisi vestimentum donationis. Carta non est nisi vestimentum orationis. Nemo tenetur armare adversarium suum contra se. Scriptum est instrumentum ad instruendum quod mens vult. Carta est legatus mentis. [w] Benignæ sunt faciendæ interpretationes cartarum propter simplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Nihil tam [x] conveniens est naturali æquitati, quam voluntatem domini volentis rem suam in alium transferre ratam habere.

*Re, verbis, scripto, consensu traditione
Fundura vestes sumere pacta solent.*

Verba cartarum fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem. Generale dictum generaliter est intelligendum. Verba debent intelligi secundum subjectam materiam. Carta de non ente non valet.

Note, the father may [a] make a deed to the wife of his sonne, and so is the law holden. for that the father's land by his assent is charged with a future freehold whereunto a deed is requisite; but to a dower ad officium ecclesie no deed is requisite. And here it is not well done (of him that made the addition to our author) to vouche 44. E. 3. fo. 45. because the author himselfe vouched it not, for if he [b] meant to have vouched authorities, he would have vouched more than one in this case, and those that [c] he vouched he would have cited truly, but this case is mistaken both in the yeare and in the leaf, for where it is cited in 44. E. 3. it is in 40. E. 3. and where he saith it is fo. 45. it is fo. 43.

An assignment of dower [d] either ad officium ecclesie, or ex assensu patris, may be made of more than a third part. But the ancient law was that no greater assignment could be made in those cases but of a third part, but lesse he might, as it appeareth in Glanvill.

(2. Rol. Ab. 26, 9. Co. 137.
Noy 50. 11. Cro. Jam. 85.)
35. Aff. Pl. 11. Tr. 29. H. 8.
Dyer. 95. (1. Cro. El. 835. Hob.
246. Dy. 34. b. N. Ben. 75.
1. And. 4. Cro. El. 884. 1. Raym.
197. Ow. 95. Dy. 192. b. Dal.
104.)

[r] Tr. 43. Eliz. inter Haukeſby & Lacher in the King's Bench.
Hill. 12. J. R. in the Common place. (5. Co. 119. b.)
[f] 13. H. 8. 19. H. 8. 8. 4. E.
3. 18. 13. H. 4. 8. (3. Co. 126. b.
1. Leon. 140. 2. Ro. Abr. 24.)

[r] Br. A. lib. 2. fol. 33. b. Fleta
lib. 3. cap. 14.

[u] Fleta lib. 6. ca. 28.
Brafton lib. 2. fo. 34.

[w] Bracton lib. 2, f. 94 95.
[x] Idem l. 2, fo. 18.

[y] Pl. Com. in Throgmorton's case fol. 161. b.

[a] 3. E. 2. Dower 126. 8. E. 2.
Dower 154. 6. E. 3. 34-40. E. 3. 43.

[b] 11 H.3. Dower 186. 14. H.
3. Dower.

[c] 2. E. 2. Dower 125. Vid. Stat. Wallie anno 12. E. 1. fo. 18. in veteri magna carta. 47. H. 3.

[d] F.N.B. 150. p. Glanvil.
lib. 6, ca. 1. 2. 3.

Sect. 41.

ET si apres l'mort
le baron el enter, et agree a ascun tiel dower de les dits dowers ad ostium
ecclesiæ, &c. donque

AND if after the death of her husband she entreth, and agree to any such dower of the said dowers at the church doore, &c. then

EL est conclude a clamer ascun auter dower per la common ley. (8) Wherein a di-versitie is to be observed between a dower ad ostium ecclesiæ, or ex assensu patris, and a

Eliz. Cam. Scacc. the case of Fox and Markham. Vid. Noy fo. 112. n. 487. A B and C are bound jointly and severally: the seal of A is torn off; in debt against B he may plead non est factum. But if A B and C covenant severally, and the seal of A is torn off, it will not avoid against the others. 5. Rep. 23. Vide where by rasure of the deed the interest is lost. Where a thing may pass without deed, as in case of feoffment or lease, though the deed be rased, the interest continues. H. 10. Car. B. R. Crook n. 8. Miller and Man-couring. But if lease by abbot and convent be interlined by lessee, the interest is destroyed. H. 9. Eliz. rot. 1056. Bendl. Arden and Michell. Hal. MSS.—See further as to pleading non est factum to a deed Sheph. Touchst. 74. and Vin. Abr. Fairs. N. a. and as to rasure and alteration of deeds and breaking off seals Sheph. Touchst. 68. 69. Vin. Fairs. T. to Z. and Com. Dig. Fait. F.

(1) See further as to deeds, Perk. c. 2. ante 6. a. and n. 5. there. Sheph. Touchst. c. 4. Vin. Abr. tit. Deeds and also tit. Faits, Com. Dig. Fait.

(2) For the formal parts of a deed of feoffment, see ante 6. a.

(3) In Mo. 697, there is an opinion of some judges in 39. Eliz. to the contrary; but the authorities since are with lord Coke. See acc. Mo. 642. Noy 6. Hob. 146. 9. Co. 137. Sty. 251. 6. Mod. 218.

(4) See Dy. 167. b.

(5) Note, if dean and chapter seal a deed, it is their deed immediately; but if at the same time they make letter of attorney to deliver it, this is not their deed till delivery. T. 21. Jac. B. R. rot. 662. Hayward and Fulcher. Hal. MSS. As to the former point, see acc. Dav. 44. 2. Leon. 97. and Cro. Eliz. 167. and as to the latter point the case cited by lord Hale in W. Jo. 170. and Palm. 304. according to which the court was divided in opinion.

(6) The obligor seals obligation, and throws it upon the table without other circumstances; this is not a delivery. But if he throws it towards the obligee, or if the obligee immediately takes it, and the obligor says nothing, it is a delivery. M. 29. and 30. Eliz. Rot. 636. Staunton and Chambers. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. in Ow. 95. Cro. Eliz. 122. Dy. Ed. 1688. fo. 192. b. in marg.

(7) Trin. 3. Eliz. Gibben verf. Tenant Bendl. n. 140. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. in N. Bendl. 92. and Dy. 192.—See further as to the delivery of deeds. Sheph. Touchst. 57. Com. Dig. Fait A. 3. Vin. Abr. Faits I. and K.

(8) Vid. 32. E. i. Dowder 126, 127.—Hal. MSS.

(15) 1121.32-2: 1. DOWD, 1120: 1771-1121: 1135A

(Doc. Pla. 149.)
Vernon's case 4. Co. 1.
1. Mariae. Dyer 91. 31. E. 3.
Scire, fac. 99. 20. E. 4. 3.

(Dy. 248. a. 317. a.)

27. H. 8. cap. 10.

[a] 12. E. 2. Dower 158. 27. H.
8. cap. 10. versus finem.

(4. Co. 1. 3. Cro. Jam. 489.)

(1. Sid. 3.)

Leake & Randal's case, 4. Co. 4.

(3. Co. 25. 27.)

Vide Vernon's case ubi supra, fo. 2. b.

Dyer 19. Eliz. 358.

Brit. cap. 102, 103.

joyniture or estate made to the wife in satisfaction of her dower, for one of those dowers being assented unto is a barre of the dower at the common law, but a joyniture was no barre of her dower at the common law. For a right or title that one hath to a freehold cannot be barred by acceptance of collateral satisfaction (1). But a woman cannot have a double dower, viz. ad ostium ecclesie, &c. and at the common law, for the wife of one husband can have but one dower. But since Littleton wrote, by the statute of 27. H. 8. if a joyniture be made to [a] the wife, according to the purview of that statute, it is a barre of her dower, so as the woman shall not have both joyniture and dower, and to the making of a perfect joyniture within that statute fixe things are to be observed. First, her joyniture by the first limitation is to take effect for her life in possession or profit presently after the decease of her husband. Secondly, that it be for the terme of her owne life, or greater estate. Thirdly, it must be made to herself, and to no other for her. Fourthly, it must be made in satisfaction of her whole dower, and not of part of her dower. Fifthly, it must either be expressed or averred to be in satisfaction of her dower. And sixthly, it may be made either before or after marriage.

Concerning the first, if a man make a feoffment in fee of lands or tenements either before or after marriage to the use of the husband for life, and after to the use of A for life, and then to the use of the wife for life in satisfaction of her dower, this is no joyniture within the statute, because by the first limitation it was not to take effect in possession or profit presently after the death of her husband. And albeit in that case A should die living the husband, and after the death of the husband the wife entred, yet this is no barre of her dower, but she shall have her dower also (2), because it is not within the said statute, and (as it hath been said) by the common law it was no barre of her dower (3). 2. It must be either in fee taile, or for terme of her owne life, for an estate for life or lives of one or many other, or to her for a hundred or a thousand yeares, &c. if she live so long, or without such limitation is no barre of her dower, albeit they be expressly made in satisfaction of her dower, Causa qua supra (4). 3. If an estate be made to others in fee simple, or for her life upon trust, so as the estate remaine in them, albeit it be for her benefit, and by her assent, and by expresse words to be in full satisfaction of her dower, yet is this no barre of her dower (5). The fourth is so plaine as it needeth not any example. 5. A devise by will cannot be averred to be in satisfaction of her dower, unless it be so expressed in the will (6). 6. If the joyniture be made before marriage, the wife cannot waive it and claime her dower at the common law, but if it be made after marriage, she may waive the same, and claime her dower (7). I have touched these points the more summarily because they are resolved at large with the reasons thereof in Vernon's case ubi supra. So as to comprehend all in few words, a joyniture (which in common understanding extendeth as well to a sole estate as to a joynit estate with her husband) is a competent livelihood of freehold for the wife of lands or tenements, &c. to take effect presently in possession or profit after decease of the husband for the life of the wife at the least, if she herselfe be not the cause of determination or forfeiture of it. Which see more at large in Vernon's case ubi supra. If a joyniture be made to a wife of lands before the coverture, and after the husband and wife alien by fine those lands so conveyed for her joyniture, she shall not be endowed of any of the other lands of her husband. But if the joyniture had been made after marriage, notwithstanding the alienation by the husband and wife thereof by fine, yet seeing her estate was originally waivable, and the time of her election came not till after the decease of her husband, she may claim her dower in the residue of her lands. But in the other case, the joyniture of the wife made before marriage was not waivable at all. Now as the dower ad ostium ecclesie, and ex assensu patris, is better for the wife, because in respect of the certainty she may enter, than the dower at the common law, where she is driven to her reall action, and therefore Britton calleth dower ad ostium ecclesie, and ex assensu patris establishment of dower by the husband and assignment of dower after his decease (for nothing that is uncertaine is established): so a joyniture (that hath the force of a barre of dower by the said act of 27. H. 8.) is, as hath been said, more sure and safe for the wife than either dower

ad

(1) Rent granted by parol out of the same land, of which she is dowable, bars; not if out of other land. 1. Mar. Dy. 91. Sturge's case. Hal. MSS.—See Cro. Eliz. 128. But though a collateral satisfaction is not pleadable at law in bar of dower, yet acceptance of a term of years, or of a sum of money, or of any other kind of collateral satisfaction, in lieu of dower, is a good bar in equity. See Lawrence and Lawrence 2. Vern. 365. and note that lord Somers's decree against the wife in that case, which was afterwards reversed by lord keeper Wright, and finally in the house of lords, was objected to, not on account of any doubt of dower's being barrable in equity by a collateral satisfaction, but merely because the devise to the wife was not expressed to be in satisfaction of dower. See further as to bar of dower in equity by collateral satisfaction. 1. Eq. Caf. Abr. Dower B. and 9. Mod. 152.

(2) T. 20. Jac. Sherwell's case. Hutt. 51. accord. Hal. MSS.

(3) But quare whether a court of equity will not confine her to one, and compell her to elect which she will have. See the references in note 1. supra. and the case of Visset and Longdon cited in Jordan and Savage New Abr. Joyniture B. 6.

(4) Vid. M. 29. and 30. Eliz. C. B. Rot. 334. Devise to the wife for 7 years. Hal. MSS.

(5) But though this may be true at law, yet it is now settled, that a trust estate, being equally certain and beneficial as what is required at law, or even an agreement to settle lands as a jointure, is a good equitable jointure in bar of dower. See the case of Jordan and Savage reported in New Abr. Joyniture B. 6.

(6) 10. Eliz. Dy. 266. Hal. MSS.—But though a devise cannot at law be averred to be in satisfaction of dower, if the will is silent, yet sometimes our courts of equity have been induced by special circumstances to consider such devises as a satisfaction; and it has therefore been decreed, that the wife should make her election to waive her dower and accept under the will, or to waive the will and take her dower. In Lawrence and Lawrence 1. Vern. 463. lord chancellor Somers made such a decree; because he inferred an intention to give in bar of dower, from the testator's having devised the residue of his whole estate to another. But this decree was reversed by lord keeper Wright, and the reversal was afterwards affirmed in the house of lords, and this is said to have settled the doctrine. 1. Eq. Caf. Abr. Dower B. pl. 2. and see acc. Prec. in Chanc. 133. Vin. Abr. Devise T. c. pl. 45. 2. Atk. 427. 3. Atk. 8. 436. See also the case of Broughton and Errington adjudged in Dom. Proc. 8th March 1773. However, notwithstanding the doctrine on which the case of Lawrence and Lawrence was finally decided, and the frequent recognition of that case, devises have been since frequently deemed a satisfaction of dower, on account of very strong and special circumstances; as where allowing the wife to take a double provision would have been quite inconsistent with the dispositions of the will. On this latter principle lord chancellor Northington is said to have decided for a satisfaction of dower in the case of Arnold and Kempstead, which was heard in July 1764, and lord chancellor Camden in the case of Villareal and lord Galway, which was heard soon after the former case.—(7) Though she be within age ut videtur she can- not.

ad ostium ecclesie, or ex assensu patris, for besides it is as certaine as those others, and she may enter into it, after the death of her husband and not be driven to her action. She shall not be barred of her joynture albeit her husband comit treason or felonie, as she shall be both of her dower ad ostium ecclesie and ex assensu patris by the common law. But now at this day by the statutes of 1. E. 6. cap. 2. and 5. E. 6. cap. 11. a wife shall not lose any title of dower which to her was accrued, by the attainder of her husband by any manner of murder or other felony whatsoever. But [a] if the husband be attainted of high treason or petie treason she shall be [b] barred of her dower at this day, so long as that attaindrie standeth in force.

Bract. 311. lib. 4. Britton ca. 15.

1. E. 6. ca. 6. 5. E. 6. ca. 11. (Post. 40. b.)

[a] Stanford 195. b.

[b] Vid. in the chapter of Garanty. Sect.

Conclude, commeth of the [c] verbe concludo, which is derived of con and claudo to determine, to finish, to shut up, to estoppe or barre a man, to plead or claime any other thing; Vid. Estoppel.

[c] Pl. Com. 276. b. per Walsli. Vid. Sect. 693. 695. 667. 679.

Sect. 42.

ET nota, que nul feme serra endow ex assensu patris en le forme avantdit, mes lou sa baron est firs et heire apparant a son pier. Quere de ceux deux cas de dowment ad ostium Ecclesie, &c. si la feme al temps del mort sa baron, ne passe lage de ix. ans, si el avera dower ou non.

AND note, that no wife shall be endowed ex assensu patris in forme afore said, but where her husband is sonne and heire apparant to his father. Quere of these two cases of dowment ad ostium ecclesie, &c. if the wife, at the time of the death of her husband be not past the age of 9. yeares, whether she shall have dower or no.

NUL feme serra endowed, &c. Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Quere de ceux deux cas de dowment ad ostium Ecclesie, &c. And it seemeth, that these dowers being made by assent, &c. that the same are good albeit the wife be within the age of nine yeares, for Consensus tollit errorem. But without question, a joynture made to her under or above the age of nine yeares, is good.

(Ante 33. a.)

Sect. 43.

ET nota, que en tous cas de lou le certainty appiert, queux terres ou tenements feme avera pur sa dower, la le feme poit entrer apres la mort sa la baron sans assignement de nul luy. Mes lou le certainty ne appiert, si come destre endow de la tierce part daver en severaltie, ou del moitie selonque le custome de tener

AND note, that in all cases, where the certainty appeareth what lands or tenements the wife shall have for her dower, there the wife may enter after the death of her husband without assignement of any. But where the certainty appeares not, as to be endowed of the 3. part, to have in severalty, or the moity according to the custom

ET nota, que en tous cas, &c.

In all cases, where the demand of the dower is certaine, as in case of dower ad ostium Ecclesie or ex assensu patris, there the wife after the death of the husband may enter (1). But where the demand is uncertaine, as in writs of dower at the common law, there albeit the thing it selfe be certain, yet shall she not take it without assignement. As if a woman bring a writ of dower of three shillings rent, albeit she ought to be endowed of one shilling, yet cannot she after judgment distrein for twelve pence before assignement (2), because the demand was un-

40. E. 3. 22. 43. 45. E. 3. 4. 20. E. 3. barre. 132. 8. E. 2. Entry 75.

(Ant. 34. b.)

not waived. Hal. MSS.—The important question, whether a jointure on an infant before marriage may be waived, was not quite settled till the case of Drury and Drury, which was heard before lord chancellor Northington in Hillary 1. Geo. 3. The points determined by lord Northington in that case were, 1. that the statute of 27. H. 8. which introduced jointures, extends to adult women only, infants not being particularly named; and therefore that notwithstanding a jointure on an infant, she may waive the jointure and elect to take dower: 2. that a covenant by the husband that his heirs, executors, or administrators shall pay the wife an annuity for her life in full for her jointure and in bar of dower, without expressing that it shall be charged on any particular lands or be secured out of lands generally, is not a good equitable jointure within the statute: 3. that a woman being an infant cannot by any contract previous to her marriage bar herself of a distributive share of her husband's personalty in case of his dying intestate. From this decree by lord Northington there was an appeal to the house of lords, and after hearing the judges seriatim on the question, whether a jointure on an infant could be waived, on which they were divided in opinion, the decree was wholly reversed. See the printed cases in the house of lords of the year 1762. Before Drury and Drury the only judicial opinions as to the effect of a jointure on an infant were Sir Joseph Jekyll's in Cray and Willis against its barring, and lord Hardwicke's in Leys and Price and in Harvey and Ashley to the contrary. See Vin. Dower Q. 4. pl. 18. Barnard. Ch. Rep. 117. and 3. Ark. 607.

(1) It seems, that though it be assigned, the freehold is not in her till entry. 9. E. 3. 5. Hal. MSS.

(2) But videtur, that after the third part set out by the sheriff she may enter immediately before the writ returned. Yet as to the damages the writ ought to be returned, because another judgment is to be given. M. 19. Jac. B. R. Howard versus Carvendish. Vid. 10. Eliz. Dy. 278. Hal. MSS.

taine. And so it is if two tenants in common be, and the wife of one of them bring a writ of dower to be endowed of a third part of a moitie, and have judgement to recover, yet cannot she enter without assignement, albeit the assignement cannot give her any certainty because her husband's state was incertain. See more of this before section 39.

en feveralte, en tielz casés ils covient que sa dower soit a luy assigne apres le mort del baron; pur ceo que non constet devant assignement, quel part des terres ou tenements el avera pur sa dower.

to hold in feveralte, in such casés it behoveth that her dower be assigned unto her after the death of her husband; because it doth not appeare before assignement, what part of the lands or tenements she shall have for her dower.

Sect. 44.

Of this sufficient hath beene said before, and that in this case the wife cannot enter without assignement.

MES si soient deux jointenants de certaine terre en fee, et lun alien ceo, que a luy affiert, a un autre en fee, que prent feme et puis devie; en ceo cas la feme pur sa dower avera le tierce part de la moitie que sa baron ad purchase, a tener en common (come sa part amountera) ovesque l'heire sa baron, et ovesque l'auter jointenant que ne aliena pas; pur ceo que en tiel cas sa dower ne poit estre assigne per metes et bounds.

BUT if there be two joyntenants of certaine land in fee, and the one alieneth that which belongeth to him, to another in fee, who taketh a wife, and after dieth; in this case the wife for her dower shall have the third part of the moitie which her husband purchased, to hold in common (as her part amounteth) with the heire of her husband, and with the other jointenant, which did not alien; for that in this case her dower cannot be assigned by metes and bounds.

Sect. 45.

(1. Ro. Ab. 676.)

THE reason of this diversity is for that the jointenant, which surviveth, claimeth the land by the feoffment, and by survivorshippe, which is above the title of dower, and may plead the feoffment, made to himselfe without naming of his companion that died, as shall be said hereafter in his proper place; but tenants in common have several free-holds and inheritances, and their moities shall descend to their several heires, and therefore their wives shall be indowed.

ET est ascarvoir, que la feme ne servira my endow de terres ou tenements; que sa baron tient jointement ovesque un autre al temps de son morant; mes lou il tient en common, autrement est, come en le case prochain avantdit.

AND it is to be understood, that the wife shall not be endowed of lands or tenements, which her husband holdeth joyntly with another at the time of his death: but where he holdeth in common, otherwise it is, as in the case next abovesaid.

Sect.

Sect. 46.

ET est ascavoir, que si tenant en le taile endowa sa feme ad ostium Ecclesiæ, come est avant-dit, ceo servera pur petit ou rien al feme; pur ceo que apres la mort sa baron, l'issue en le taile puit entrer sur le possession la feme; et issint puit celuy en le reversion si ne soit issue en le taile en vie, &c.

AND it is be understood, that if tenant in taile endoweth his wife at the church doore, as is afore-said, this shall little or nothing at all availe the wife; for that after the decease of her husband, the issue in taile may enter upon her possession; and so may he in the reversion, if there be no issue in taile then alive.

an endowment is not to be made because it is

THE reason of this is, for that tenant in taile is restrained by the sayd statute of 13 E. 1. de donis conditionalibus.

And so did our author take the law in his learned reading. Here our author's reason is à fine, and therefore such

Vide Sect. 194.

to no end.

Sect. 47.

AUXY si home seisi enfee simple, esteant deins age, endowa sa feme al huiz del monasterie ou deglise, & devie, & sa feme enter, en ceo cas l'heire la baron luy puit ouster. Mes autrement est (come il semble) lou la pier est seisie en fee, & le fits deins age endow sa feme ex assensu patris, le pier donque esteant de plein age.

ALSO if a man seised in fee simple being within age, endoweth his wife at the monasterie or church doore, and dieth, and his wife enter, in this case the heire of the husband may out her. But otherwise it is, (as it seemeth) where the father is seised in fee, and the sonne within age endoweth his wife ex assensu patris, the father being then of full age.

not avoide it in respect of his infancy.

THE reason of this diversitie is for that in the first case the husband within age is seised, and therefore he being within age cannot by a voluntary act bind himself: otherwise it is, where he doth an act whereunto he is compellable by law, but in the latter case the father which giveth the assent, is seised of the freehold and inheritance, and the sonne therein hath nothing, and therefore his heire shall

Vid. 9. H. 3. tit. dower 197.

(Ante 34. a.)

Sect. 48.

AUXY il y ad un autre endowment, que est appelé dowment de la pluis beale. Et ceo est come en tiel case, que home seisie de xl. acres de terre, et il tient vint

ALSO there is another dower which is called dowment de la pluis beale. And this is in case where a man is seised of forty acres of land, and he holdeth twenty acres of

ET le Seignior de que le terre est tenu en chivalrie enter en les vint acres tenus de luy. For he is not possessed as a gardein against whom a writ of dower lieth, untill he doth enter. Of the wardship of the body he is possessed before seisure, because

(Ante 35.)

Vid. le statut. de bigamis cap. 3.

[a] 44. E. 3. 13. 4. H. 6. 11. Stanf. præf. 13. 6. E. 3. 15. 16. E. 3. breve 657. Temps E. 1. breve 863. 11. E. 3. breve 473. 45. E. 3. 5. 17. E. 3. 70. 1. H. 7. 17. 4. H. 7. 1. 4. H. 7. aid le Roy 31. 38. E. 3. 13. 9. H. 6. 6. b. 39. E. 3. 8. 8. E. 2. Dower 169. 8. E. 2. breve 809. 22. E. 4. Dower 16. (9. Co. 17.)

8. E. 3. 52.

8. E. 3. 15. & 31. 38. E. 3. 37. 47. E. 3. 9. b.

cause it is transitory, but he is not possessed of the land untill he enter because it is permanent. And therefore if he doth not enter, the heire within age may assigne dower as hath been said, and as it appeareth afterwards.

Si en tiel case el port breve de dower envers le gardein en chivalrie.

Albeit [a] the gardein in chivalrie or the grantee of the king of a wardship hath but a chattle during the minority of the heire, and the woman shall recover a freehold in her writ of dower, yet after the gardein as is afore said, hath entered into the land, that writ lieth against him, and not against the heire who is tenant of the freehold, because the law hath trusted the gardein to plead for the heire within age, and that is in his custody, and also for his own particular interest, and by this diversity all the bookes be reconciled (1). So likewise if the gardein die, the wife shall have a writ of dower against his executors, and if there be two executors, and one of them alone take the profits, the writ of dower shall be maintained against him only. If a man be possessed of the wardship of certaine land, either jointly with his wife or in the right of his wife, yet the writ of dower lieth against the husband onely. Gardein in focage shall not endow herselfe de la plus beale without judgement, as shall be said hereafter.

Le gardein en chivalrie poit pleader.

The authority of Littleton is direct that the gardein may plead this plea. But hereof ariseth two questions. First whether if the heire be vouched by the tenant in the writ of dower in the gard of the gardein (2), whether he coming in as vouchee may plead that plea. The second is, whether if the gardein in acres de les dits xl. acres de terre dun per service de chivalrie, et les autres vint acres de terre dun auter en focage, et prent feme, et ont issue fits, et morust, son fits estant deins lage de xiiii. ans, et le seigniour, de que la terre est tenu en chivalrie, entre en les xx. acres tenus de luy, et eux ad come gardein en chivalrie durant le nonage lenfant, et la mere de lenfant enter en le remnant, et ceo occupie come gardein en focage: si en tiel case le feme port brieve de dower envers le gardein en chivalrie, destre endow de les tenements tenus per service de chivaler en le court le roy, ou en auter court, le gardein en chivalrie puit plede en tiel case tout cest matter et monstre coment la feme est gardein en focage, come devant est dit, et prie que serra adjudge per la court que le feme luy mesme endowera de le plus beale de les tenements que el ad come gardein en focage solongue le value de le tierce part

the said forty acres, of one by knight's service, and the other twenty acres of another in focage, and taketh wife, and hath issue a sonne, and dyeth, his sonne being within the age of fourteene yeeres, and the lord of whom the land is holden by knight's service entreth into the twenty acres holden of him, and holdeth them as gardein in chivalrie, during the nonage of the infant, and the mother of the infant, entreth into the residue, and occupieth it as gardein in focage. If in this case the wife bringeth a writ of dower against the garden in chivalry to be endowed of the tenements holden by knight's service, in the king's court, or other court, the gardein in chivalry may pleade in such case all this matter, and shew how the wife is gardein in focage, as afore said, and pray that it may be adjudged by the court, that the wife may endow her selfe de le plus beale, i. e. of the most faire of the tenements which she hath as gardein in fo-

(1) Nota Pasch. 1653: B. R. Ruled, 1. Grantee of wardship of the body cannot assign dower; but grantee or committee of wardship of land may, though it be by court of wards. 2. Yet court of wards cannot assign dower by commission, but it ought to be by writ de dote assignanda out of chancery. Accord. M. 35. 36. Eliz. C. B. case of Viscountess Bouden. 3. But lessee for years of land by the guardian cannot assign dower.—4. But if the king leases the land during minority of the heir rendering rent, whether he be a committee to assign dower dubitatur. Videtur quod non, but there ought to be dedimus vel committimus custodiam. 2. E. 3. 13. Husband of ward in right of his wife, and dower against the husband only. Nota H. 8. Jac. C. B. Nicholson and Gower. 1. After full age and before livery, dower lies against the heir, and cannot be assigned by the king. 2. Judgment in dower against the heir in wardship shall bind the heir, but not the guardian.—Hal. MSS.

(2) For voucher in wardship in dower.—1. If the heir be in wardship of guardian in chivalry, though he be in wardship of many, there ought to be voucher of all having the heir in wardship, because every one may make defence, and every one shall lose proportionably. But several writs lie against several guardians. 16. E. 3. Brieve 657.—2. If the heir be in wardship of one or many guardians in focage, one may vouch the heir in wardship or may vouch at large as it seems, and not as in wardship, because the guardian has the land only to the use of the infant.—3. If the heir be in wardship of the demandant in chivalry he ought to vouch in wardship of the demandant.

que el claime daver de les tenements tenus en chivalrie per sa briefe de dower. Et si la feme ceo ne puit dedire, donques le judgement serra fait, que le gardein en chivalrie tiendra les terres tenus de luy durant le nonage lenfant quit de la feme, &c (1).

age, after the value of the third part which she claimes by her writ of dower, to have the tenements holden by knights service. And if the wife cannot gainsay this, then the judgement shall be given, that the gardein in chivalry shall hold the lands holden of him during the nonage of the infant quit from the woman, &c.

focage have not sufficient, as if the land holden by service of chivalry be thirty acres, and the lands holden in focage but five acres, whether she shall be endowed by parcels, viz. to recover five acres against the gardein in chivalry, and to retaine five acres. And as to the first the gardein shall as well plead it, when he comes in as vouchee, as when he is tenant. And as to the second some say that the demandant in the writ of dower must have assets in her hands to the value of her dower, so as she shall not be partly endowed against the gardein, and partly retaine in her owne hands. And they say, that the judgement should be in part, that is, as to the land in focage in fevralty, and as to the land in chivalry to recover the third part, and compare it to the case in 8. E. 4. 3. that damages shall not be recovered, partly against the defendant in an appeale, and partly against the abettors, but entirely either against the one or the other. And Littleton here putteth his case that the gardein in focage hath assets in value, and seeing it is a dower against common right, they hold that she must be entirely endowed either by herselfe against common right, or against the gardein according to common right. But [a] yet by the booke in 25. E. 3. 52. b. and others it appeareth, that she may in this very case retaine for part, and recover against the gardein for part (2).

5. E. 3. 60. 2. E. 3. 31. Lib. intrat. Dower fol. 225. 2. 18. E. 3. 4. b.

14. H. 7. 26. Keeble. (12. C. 125. 126.)

Gardein in chivalry [b] shall plead in barre of her dower, detainment, or eloigning of the body of the ward, because his marriage doth appertaine unto him: and if the heire come in [c] as vouchee, he shall plead the same plea. But he shall not plead detainment of the charters, [d] because the charters concerning the inheritance of the heire belong not to the gardein (3). The gardein in chivalry [e] may assigne dower of the lands and tenements he hath in ward, or if he assigne a rent out of those lands in allowance of her dower, it is good. If the gardein in chivalrie assigne too much for her dower, the heire shall have a writ of Admesurement by the common law (4). And so [f] if the heire within age assigne, before the gardein enter, to the wife too much in the dower, the gardein shall have a writ of Admesurement by the statute of West. 2. cap. 7. And if the heire within age, before the gardein enter into the land, assigne too much in dower, he himselfe shall have a writ of Admesurement at full age: and some have said, that in that case he may have it within age. [g] But if the heire (before the gardein enter) endow the wife of more than she ought, and the gardein assigne over his estate, his assignee shall have no writ of Admesurement, because it was a thing in action. Also the heire shall have an [h] Admesurement for the assignment in the life of his ancestor, by the common law, [i] and a writ of Admesurement lyeth upon an assignment in chancery.

[a] 25. E. 3. 52. b. 4. E. 2. tit. discessin. 10. Regist. judic. 26. Lib. intrat. 22. 16. E. 3. breve. 657. 20. E. 3. judgement 175. [b] 7. E. 3. 57. 8. E. 3. 71. (Doc. pla. 149.) [c] 17. E. 3. 58. [d] 10. E. 3. 50. 6. El D. 230. [e] 3. E. 3. Dow. 75. 8. Ed. 2. Dower 155. W. 2. cap. 7. (F.N.B. 148. 149. 2. Inst. 367.) [f] Bract. li. 4. 314. Reg. origin. 171. Flet. li. 5. ca. 22. 7. E. 2. tit. Admes. 13. F.N.B. 149.

[g] 7. R. 2. Admes. 4. F.N.B. 148. i.

[h] 7. R. 2. ub. su. F.N.B. 149. 2. [i] 7. R. 2. ub. sup. 12. H. 6. Admes. 9. F. N. B. 149. 25. E. 3. 51.

Donques le judgement serra fait que le gardein en chivalrie tiendra les terres tenus de luy durant le nonage lenfant, quit de la feme, &c.

Judgement. Judicium quasi juris dictum, the very voyce of law and right, and therefore, judicium semper pro veritate accipitur. The ancient words of judgement are very significant, Consideratum est, &c. because that judgement is ever given by the court upon due consideration had of the record before them: and in every judgement there ought to be three persons, actor, reus, and judex. Of judgements some be finall, and some not finall, whereof you shall read more hereafter. And now to returne to our author, it is materiall that these words (et cetera) be explained at large, viz. Et quod prædicta A (the demandant) capit de terris hæred' prædicti in custodia sua existen' ad valentiam præd' 3. partis cum pertinent' tenend' nomine dotis sue pro præd' 3. parte superius per eam petit (5). Now some are of opinion, that upon this judgement the demandant may not in any sort endow herselfe of the land, because she cannot do an act to herselfe, but she shall recoupe the third part of the profits upon her account, and be endowed against the heire at his full age (6). But observe what Litt. saith in the next section: but before you come to that, observe what priviledge the common law giveth demandant; but if he be in wardship of the demandant in focage, there it is in the election of the seoffee to vouch in wardship of the demandant. Registr. Judicial. 54. But he may plead in bar and pray that she shall be endowed de pluis beale as well as guardian in chivalry. 21. E. 3. 28. 25. E. 3. 21. — 4. But if A having 4 acres in focage and 2 acres in chivalry makes seoffment of 2 acres of focage with warranty and dies, the heir within age, and dower is brought by the wife of A against the seoffee, dubitatur, if he may vouch the heir in wardship of the guardian in chivalry only, or ought to vouch in wardship of the demandant and of guardian in chivalry, or if he shall only plead in bar that she may endow herselfe de pluis beale. But whether the voucher be in wardship of guardian in chivalry only, or of guardian in chivalry and demandant guardian in focage, the guardian shall turn all the loss on the demandant as it seems. Reg. Judic. 54. 21. E. 3. 28. 25. E. 3. 51. — Hal. MSS. There is an obscurity in the third part of this annotation by lord Hale, which the editor on translating found himselfe unable to remove. See further on the subject in Hugh. on Orig. Wr. 166.

(1. Ro. Abr. 201. Cro. C. 12. 442. post 108. a.)

22. E. 4. Dow. 16. 16. E. 3. Wall. 100. 45. E. 3. 6.

(1) Et que la feme poet endower lui meme de la pluis beale partie de les terres, qu'ele ad come gurdien en focage a le value, &c. L. and M.

(2) Vid. 2. E. 3. Vouch. 273. 13. E. 3. Judgment 165. — Hal. MSS.

(3) Vid. 9. Rep. 15. b. Ann Bedingfield's case. — Hal. MSS. See further as to pleading detainment of charters. Hugh. Orig. Wr. 185. Vin. Abr. Dower L. M. and N.

(4) See further as to Admesurement of dower. Vin. Abr. Dower Q. a. and as to assignment in chancery, Hugh. Orig. Wr. 171. New Abr. Dower D. 3.

(5) 15. E. 3. Dower 69. — Hal. MSS.

(6) Where judgement shall be against heir and where against vouchee. — 1. Where the heir of the husband is vouched as having assets in the same county, and the demandant acknowledges it, judgement shall be for the demandant against the heir, and that the tenant shall go in peace if giveth to the land holden by knights service, viz. that it shall not be dismembered, but the whole dower taken of the lands holden in socage, and the reason is, for that knights service is for the defence of the realm, which is pro bono publico, and therefore to be favoured.

Sect. 49.

ET nota, que apres tiel judgement done, la feme puit prendre ses vicines, et en leur presence endower luy mesme per metes et bonds de la pluis beale part de les tenements que el ad come gardein en socage⁽¹⁾, daver et tener a luy pur terme de sa vie; et tiel dower est appel dower de la pluis beale.

And the judgement, viz. Tenend' nomine dotis, proveth, that she may have it for terme of her life, for every dower is for terme of life.

AND note, that after such a judgement given, the wife may take her neighbours, and in their presence endow herselfe by metes and bonds, of the fairest part of the tenements which she hath as gardein in socage, to have and to hold to her for terme of her life; and this dower is called dower de la pluis beale.

Sect. 50.

15. E. 3. Dow. 69. 16. E. 3. tit. Wast. 100.

LOU le judgement est fait, &c. For without such a judgement, as appeareth before, gardeine in socage cannot endow herselfe, as likewise hath bin said before (3).

Braet. lib. 5. 329. F. N. B. 7. 3.

Ou en auter court. That is by writ of right of dower in the court of the heire, if he have any, or of the lord of whom the land is holden.

Et ceo est pur salvation del estate del gardein en chivalrie, durant le nonage de lenfant. For the heire (before the entre of the gardein) cannot plead the same plea, that the demandant should endow herselfe de la pluis beale. And the reason of this dower de la pluis beale to be all of the socage land, was for advancement of chivalrie for the defence of the realme (4).

ET nota, que tiel dowment ne puit este, mes lou le judgement est fait en le court le roy, ou en auter court, &c.⁽²⁾ et ceo est per salvation del estate del gardeine in chivalrie durant le nonage le enfant.

AND note, that such dowment cannot be, but where a judgement is given in the king's court, or in some other court, &c. and this is for the preservation of the estate of the gardein in chivalrie, during the nonage of the infant.

Sect. 51.

This is manifest of it selfe, and therefore needeth no explanation.

ET issint poyes veier cinque manners de dower, scilicet, dower per le common ley, dower per le custome (5), dower ad ostium ecclesie, dower ex assensu patris, et dower de la pluis beale.

AND so you may see five kinds of dower, viz. dower by the common law, dower by the custome, dower ad ostium ecclesie, dower ex assensu patris, and dower de la pluis beale.

Sect.

if he has assets in the same county, and if not judgment against the tenant and for him over in value. But if it is agreed, that he has not assets in the same county, but only in a foreign county, then judgment shall be against the tenant, and for him over in value. 6. E. 3. 11.—2. If he has assets for part in the same county, vide conditional judgment for that part. 2. E. 3. Vouch. 213. 25. E. 3. 52.—3. If the tenant vouches the heir of the husband having assets in the same county, and the voucher is counterpleaded, or if the demandant dedit the assets, &c. then it seems judgment shall be for demandant immediately against the tenant and for him over in value. But it seems, that the demandant may pray conditional judgment, if the heir counterpleads the assets with warranty. Quære and vide 16. E. 3. Vouch. 85. 3. E. 3. Judgment 165. 18. E. 3. 38. 55.—4. But if tenant vouch I. S. who vouches the heir of the husband having assets in the same county, still no judgment conditional shall be given. 18. E. 3. 36. Contra 2. E. 3. Vouch. 213.—Hal. MSS. See further Hugh. Orig. Wr. 163.

(1) A le valur de le tierce partie des tenementz que le gardeyn en chevalerie ad, &c. ad ceo. L. and M.—Roh.—P. and Red.

(2) Que la feme ceo puit faire. L. and M.—Roh.

(3) Dower de la pluis beale, being merely a consequence of tenures by knight's service, is virtually abolished by the statute, which converts such tenures into socage. See 12. Ch. 2. c. 24.

(4) Vid. 16. E. 3. 88. She may recoup the third part of the profits on her own account, ut videtur, without judgment. Hal. MSS.

(5) Besides the books cited ante 33. b. as to dower by custom, see Hugh. Orig. Wr. 160. Robinf. Gavelk. cap. 2. New Abr. Dower K. Vin. Abr. Copyhold H. e. Com. Dig. Copyhold K. 2.

Sect. 52.

ET memorandum, que en chescun case, lou home prent feme seisie de tiel estate de tenements, &c. issint que lissue, que il ad per son feme, poit per possibilitie enheriter mesmes les tenements de tiel estate que la feme ad come heire al feme, en tiel case apres le mort la feme il avera mesmes les tenements per le curtesie de Angleterre, et auterment nemy.

AND memorandum, that in everie case where a man taketh a wife seised of such an estate of tenements, &c. as the issue, which he hath by his wife, may by possibility inherit the same tenements of such an estate as the wife hath, as heire to the wife; in this case after the decease of the wife, he shall have the same tenements by the curtesie of England, but otherwise not.

Memorandum. This word doth ever betoken some excellent point of learning, which our author hath used in other places, as appeareth in the margin.

Sect. 234. 301. 315.

The matter hereof hath bin partly explained in the chapter of Tenant by the curtesie.

(Ante 29. b.)

If a man [a] taketh a wife seised of lands or tenements in fee, and hath issue, and after the wife is attainted of felony so as the issue cannot inherit to her, yet he shall be tenant by the curtesie, in respect of the issue which he had before the felonie, and which by possibilitie might then have inherited. But if the wife had been attainted of felonie before the issue, albeit he hath issue afterward, he shall not be tenant by the curtesie (1).

[a] 21. E. 3. 9. 11. H. 7. 3. H. 7. 17. Stamford. 195. 27. E. 3. 77. 46. E. 4. Petit. 20. 26. Ass. p. 2. 13. H. 4. 8.

Come heire al feme.

This doth implice [b] a secret of law, for except the wife be actually seised, the heire shall not (as hath been said) make himselfe heire to the wife (2): and this is the reason that a man shall not be tenant by the curtesie of a seisin in law.

[b] 8. Co. 34. in Paine's case.

Sect. 53.

ET auxy en chescun case lou le feme prent baron seisie de tiel estate des tenements, &c. issint que si per possibilitie il puiroit happer, que si le feme avoit ascun issue per la baron, et que mesme lissue puiroit per possibilitie enheriter mesmes les tenements de tiel estate que le baron ad, come heire a le baron, de tiels tenements el avera sa dower, et auterment nemy. Car

AND also in every case where a woman taketh a husband seised of such an estate in tenements, &c. so as by possibilitie it may happen that the wife may have issue by her husband, and that the same issue may by possibilitie inherit the same tenements of such an estate as the husband hath, as heire to the husband, of such tenements she shall have her dower, and otherwise not. For Issint que si per possibilitie il puit happer que le feme avoit ascun issue per son baron.

12. H. 4. 2. 7. H. 6. 11. 12.

Albeit the wife be a hundred yeares old, or that the husband at his death was but foure or seven yeares old (3), so as she had no possibilitie to have issue by him, yet seeing the law saith, that if the wife be above the age of nine years at the death of her husband, she shall be endowed, and that women in ancient times have had children at that age, whereunto no woman doth now attaine, the law cannot judge that impossible, which by nature was possible. And in my time, a woman above threescore yeares old hath had a child, and ideo non definitur in

(1. Ro. Abr. 675)

(1) See ante 29. b. n. 4. and Vin. Abr. Curtesy. H.

(2) See 8. Co. 36. a. where 11. H. 4. 11. and 40. E. 3. 9. are cited to prove this doctrine. See also ante 11. b. where it is advanced as a general rule, that he, who claims by descent, must make himself heir to the person last actually seised. See further ante 14. b. 15. b. and n. 3. in 11. b. W. Jo. 361. and Blackst. Law Tr. 8vo ed, vol. 1. p. 180.

(3) See ante 33. a.

in jure. And for the husband's being of such tender yeares, he hath habitu, though he hath not potentiam at that time, and therefore his wife shall be endowed.

Et que mesme lissue puisse per possibilitie inheriter mesmes les tenements, &c.

A man seised of land in generall taile, taketh wife, and after is attainted of felony, before the said statute of 1. E. 6. the issue should have inherited, and yet the wife should not have bin endowed: for the statute of W. 2. ca. 1. relieveth the issue in taile, but not the wife in that case (1). But at this day, if the husband be attainted of felony, the wife shall be endowed, and yet the issue shall not inherit the lands which the father had in fee simple. If the wife clope from her husband, &c. she shall be barred of her dower, as hath beene said (2), and yet the issue shall inherit (3).

(Ante 37. a.)

(F. N. B. h. 150. Ante 32. a.)

si tenements sont dones a un home et a les heires que il engendra de corps sa feme, en tiel case la feme nad riens en les tenements, et le baron ad estate forsque come donee en especiall taile. Uncore si le baron devy sans issue, mesme la feme serra endow de mesmes les tenements, pur ceo que lissue, que el per possibilitie puisse aver per mesme le baron, puisse inheriter mesmes les tenements. Mes si la feme deviait, vivant sa baron, et puis le baron prist auter feme, et morust, sa second feme ne serra my endow en cest case, causa qua supra.

if tenements be given to a man, and to the heires which he shall beget of the bodie of his wife, in this case the wife hath nothing in the tenements, and the husband hath an estate but as donee in special taile. Yet if the husband die without issue, the same wife shall be endowed of the same tenements; because the issue, which she by possibilitie might have had by the same husband, might have inherited the same tenements. But if the wife dyeth, living her husband, and after the husband takes another wife and dieth his 2. wife shall not be indowed in this case for the reason aforesaid.

Sect. 54.

5. E. 3. Voucher 249. 8. E. 3. Ass. 293. 4. H. 6. 24. F. N. B. 149.

You may easily perceive by the context that this shaft came never out of Littleton's quiver of choice arrowes (4), and therefore I will leave it. Onely for students sake I will referre them to 5. E. 3. Voucher 249. 8. E. 3. Ass. 393. 4. H. 6. 24. F. N. B. 149.

NOTA si un home soit seisse de certaine terres et prist un feme, et puis aliena mesme la terre oue garrantie, et puis le feoffor et le feoffee deviont, et le feme de le feoffor port un action de dower envers le issue le feoffee, et il vouch lheire le feoffor, et pendant le vouch et nient termine, la feme le feoffee port son action de dower envers le heire le feoffee, et demaunda la tierce part de ceo

NOTE if a man be seised of certaine lands, and taketh wife, and after alieneth the same land with warrantie, and after the feoffor and feoffee dye, and the wife of the feoffor bring an action of dower against the issue of the feoffee, and he vouch the heire of the feoffor, and hanging the vouch and undetermined, the wife of the feoffee brings her action of dower against the heire of the feoffee,

(1) 12. H. 4. 3. by Hankford.—Hal. MSS. See further as to loss of dower by the husband's offences ante 37. a. Post 392. b. Hugh. Orig. Wr. 156. and Vin. Abr. Dower Q. 6.

(2) See ante 32. a.

(3) See another instance, where the issue shall inherit and yet the wife shall not be endowed, in Perk. sect. 317.

(4) Section 54. is neither in the edition by L. and M. nor in the Roh. edition. It appears to have been first added in the edition by P.

de que sa baron fuit seifie, et ne voile demaunder le tierce part del eux deux parts de que sa baron fuit seifie; fuit adjudge, que el navera judgement tanque lauter plee fuit determine.

feoffee, and demand the third part of that whereof her husband was seised, and will not demand the third part of these two parts of which her husband was seised; it was adjudged, that she should have no judgement untill such time as the other plea were determined.

Sect. 55. (1)

ET nota que Vavifour dit, que si un home soit seifie de terre et fait felonie, et puis alien, et puis est attaint, la feme avera bone action de dower envers le feoffee: mes si soit eschete al roy, ou al seignior, el navera breve de dower, et sic vide diversitatem, et quære inde legem.

AND note, Vavifour saith, that if a man be seised of land and committeth felony, and after alieneth, and after is attaint, the wife shall have a good action of dower against the feoffee: but if it be escheated to the king, or to the lord, she shall not have a writ of dower. And so see the difference, and inquire what the law is herein.

THIS is also of the new addition, et expressa est hæc opinio; for it is cleare in law, that the wife at the common law should not have been endowed against the feoffee. For to deterre and retaine men from committing of treason or felony, the law hath inflicted five punishments upon him that is attainted of treason or felony. 1. He shall lose his life and that by an infamous death of hanging betweene heaven and the earth, as unworthy in respect of his offence of either. 2. His wife, that is a part of himselfe, (et erunt animæ duæ in carne una) shall lose her dower. 3. His blood is corrupted, and his children

Vide Sect. 746. Vide Britton; cap. 109. l. 1. Bracton title Evidens, l. 4. fo. 397. 30. 311. Stanf. pl. cor. 194. 195.

Britton fol. 15. cap. 5.

(Post 392. b.)

Vide Sect. 746.

(1. Leon. 3.)

M. 3. & 4. Ph. & Mar. Ro. 760. in com. banco. 8. E. 3. 20. 12. H. 4. 30.

Bracton lib. 4. fol. 311.

Vide Sect. 746. Britton cap. de Homicide, fo. 15. Bracton lib. 4. fol. 308. & Fleta ubi supra, & Britton ubi supra.

cannot be heires to him, and if he be noble or gentle before, he and all his posterity are by this attainder made ignoble. 4. He shall forfeit all his lands and tenements; And 5. all his goods and chattels, and all this is included by the law in the judgement, Quod suspendatur per collum. But this is not intended of all felonies, but of felony by stealing of goods above the value of xii. pence, and not of petit larceny under the value (2). So as the woman shall lose her dower as well against the feoffee as against the lord by escheat. And so it was resolved in a writ of dower brought by Mary Gates late wife of John Gates, who after the coverture had infeoffed Wiseman in fee, and after committed high treason, and was thereof attainted, that the wife should not be indowed against the feoffee, and in that case it was resolved, that so it was at the common law in case of felony (3). And it is to be understood, that the wife shall not only lose her reasonable dower at the common law for the felony of her husband, but also her dower ad osium ecclesiæ, and ex assensu patris (4), for felony done after the dower assigned, and dower by custome also (5). And the reason of all this is yeelded by Littleton himselfe in the chapter of Warranties, section 746. to the end that men should be afraid to commit felony. But at this day the wife of a man attainted of felony (as often hath been said) shall be endowed by force of the statutes in that case provided.

And it appeareth by Britton, Que fem de homicide ne teigne nul dower de tenants que lour fuit assigne per lour barons, so as the wife of a felon attainted by the common law was disabled to recover dower ad osium ecclesiæ, and ex assensu patris, as well as her reasonable dower which the common law gave her. See in Bracton many barres of dower as the law was then held.

CHAP.

(1) Sect. 55. is not in L. and M. nor in Roh. but is in P. and the subsequent editions.—(2) But outlawry in trespass doth not bar. 3. E. 3. 7. 41. Hal. MSS.—(3) S. C. acc. Dy. 140. b. and N. Bendl. 55. But Dyer observes, yet nota that the land aliened before the treason committed was not subject to any forfeiture or escheat; and adds, that Brown serjeant fuit valde iratus propter iudicium prædictum. Also in Sav. 54. there is a case of attainder of the husband for treason, in which two judges for the reason mentioned in Dyer were inclined to Vavifour's opinion; but the case of Sir John Gates's wife being cited, the court held that the demandant was not intitled to dower. In this latter case the wife afterwards had dower; but then it was allowed to her on account of the reversal of her husband's attainder. See 3. Inst. 315.—(4) Here lord Coke expressly makes dower ex assensu patris, as well as the dowers at common law and ad osium ecclesiæ, liable to be defeated at common law by the husband's treason or felony. Ante 37. a. But some have inclined to think, that the 5. & 6. E. 6. c. 11. which so far repeals the 1. E. 6. c. 2. and revives the common law as to take away the wife's dower in case of treason by the husband, doth not extend to dower ex assensu patris. This will appear from the following extract from a valuable manuscript, which has been already cited.—It seems that dower ex assensu patris shall not be lost by the statute of 5. E. 6. by attainder of the husband for treason; for the wife is in by the father and not by the husband, and if action be brought for the land, it shall be against the husband and wife. Contra of dower ad osium ecclesiæ. Quære tamen of the former case ex assensu patris. MSS. Comment. on Littl. pen. Edit.—In Plowden's Queries 181, a like question is started as to the effect of the husband's attainder of felony on dower ex assensu patris before the 1. E. 6. c. 2. changed the common law, and saved the wife's dower; but Mr. Plowden argues against the wife. See further ante 35. b. where lord Coke mentions, that according to some opinions the wife lost dower ex assensu patris, if after assent the father was attainted of treason or felony.—(5) In Winch 27. there is a loose note of a case, in which, notwithstanding the 1. E. 6. c. 2. for preserving dower in cases of treason or felony by the husband, Winch inclined to think, that attainder of the husband for felony prevented the wife's dower, where the wife of a copyholder for life was dowable by custom. But the reasons of this opinion, which seems strange, do not appear.

CHAP. 6. Sect. 56.

Tenant a terme de vie.

OU pur terme de vie dun auter TENANT pur terme de vie TENANT for term of life is, est, lou home lessa terres ou tenements a un auter pur terme de vie le lessé, ou pur terme de vie dun auter home, en tiel casé le lessé en tenant a terme de vie. Mes per common parlance celuy que tient pur terme de sa vie demesne, est appel tenant pur terme de sa vie, et cestuy que tient pur terme dauter vie, est appel tenant pur term dauter vie. where a man letteth lands or tenements to another for terme of the life of the lessee, or for terme of the life of another man. In this case the lessee is tenant for terme of life. But by common speech he which holdeth for terme of his owne life, is called tenant for terme of his life, and he which holdeth for terme of another's life, is called tenant for terme of another man's life.

(Cro. Ja. 200. 554.)
Braet. lib. 2. ca. 5. & ca. 9. fol. 26. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 12. Britton fol. 83. Braet. lib. 4. fo. 170. Vide Sect. 381.

[a] Vide le Deane de Worcester. case, 6. Co. 37. 27. Aff. 31. 39. E. 3. 1. 27. H. 6. Recognizance. Stattham pl. ultimo. 38. H. 6. 27. Braet. lib. 2. fo. 9. Britton fo. 84. 85. (Vaugh. 189. 390. Cro. El. 407.)

[b] 27. Aff. p. 31. & Pl. com. fo. 28. b. in Colthorff's case tit. Barre 303. (Cro. Jam. 201. Mo. 394. Cro. Eliz. 57. Mo. 664. Cro. Jam. 282.)

[c] Littleton 167. 17. H. 4. 42. 47. E. 3. 48. 39. E. 3. 25. 7. H. 4. 46. 8. H. 4. 15. Dier S. E. 112. 253. (2. Ro. Abr. 150. 151. 3. Ro. Abr. 844. 1. Leon. 126. Post 239. 2.)

[d] Braet. lib. 4. fo. 222. 231. 232. & vid. fo. 136. 157. Fleta lib. 4. ca. 19. 25. 26. 27. S. E. 3. 54. 55. 21. E. 3. 41. 48. E. 3. 31. 7. E. 4. 28. 21. H. 6. 46. 10. E. 4. 3. F. N. B. 180. 4. Co. 86. 87. in Luttrell's case.

(11. Co. 46.)

Vide Sect. 381.

Roffe's case, 5. Co. 13. (5. Co. 9. b.)

And therefore no man shall gain the king's land by priority of entry. There can be no occupant of any thing that lyeth in grant (3), and that cannot passe without deed, because every occupant must claime by a que estate and averre the life of Ce' que vie (4). It were [c] good to prevent the incertainty of the estate of the occupant to adde these words, (to have and to hold to him and his heires during the life of Ce' que vie) and this shall prevent the occupant, and yet the lessee may assigne it to whom he will, or if he hath already an estate for another man's life without these words, then it were good for him to assigne his estate to divers men and their heires during the life of Ce' que vie (5).

Note that [d] to every tenant for life, the law as incident to his estate without provision of the party giveth him three kinde of estovers, (that is) boufbote which is twofold, viz. estoverium edificandi et arandi, ploughbote that is estoverium arandi, and lastly, haybote, and that is estoverium claudendi, and these estovers must be reasonable, estoveria rationabilia. And these the lessee may take upon the land demised without any assignement, unlesse he be restrayned by speciall covenant (6), for modus et conventio vincunt legem. Note in the Saxon tongue, and estovers in the French in this case are all of one signification, that is, to have compensation or satisfaction for these purposes. Estovers commeth of the French word eslover. And the same estovers that tenant for life may have, tenant for years shall have.

You have perceived, that our author divides tenant for life into two branches, viz. into tenant for terme of his own life, and into tenant for terme of another man's life: to this may be added a third, viz. into an estate both for terme of his owne life, and for terme of another man's life.

As if a lease be made to A to have to him for terme of his own life, and the lives of B and C, for the lessee in this case hath but one freehold, which hath this limitation, during his owne life, and during the lives of two others. And herein is a diversity to be observed between several estates in several degrees, and one estate with several limitations. For in the first, an estate for a man's own life is higher than for another man's life, but in the second it is not. As if A be tenant for life, the remainder or reversion to B for life, A may surrender to B for

(1) Who shall be occupant.—A makes lease to B for one hundred years, and afterwards ousts him and makes lease to C for the life of D, B re-enters, C dies: B shall not be occupant against his will, for so his term would be drowned. H. 6. Jac. C. B. Karolin's case. 1. essee for another's life makes lessee at will, who continues in possession after the death of his lessor: he is an occupant. If A lessee for another's life makes lessee for years, who is possessed, and A dies, it seems that lessee for years shall be occupant against his own will, though he doth not enter; but if the lessee for years makes lease at will, and then A dies, lessee at will shall be occupant, though he claims to the use of the lessee for years, or though lessee for years enters on lessee at will and claims to be occupant. But riding over the ground to hunt or harok doth not make an occupant. Vid. Dy. 328. H. 15. Jac. B. R. Rot. 356. Stellicorn and Hayes, and M. 10. Jac. Bullr. n. 6. Chamberlain and Erwer. A lessee for life of B makes lessee to C for 20 years, rendering 5 l. C makes lease to D for 10 years, rendering 3 l. A dies: D is occupant, yet he shall pay the rent of 3 l. to C and C shall pay the rent of 5 l. to D, for D's term is prevented from merging by the intervention reversion in C, but D has the freehold in reversion expectant on C's term and the rent incident to it. Hal. MSS.—See Stellicorn and Hayes in 2. Ro. Rep. 123. and Cro. Jam. 554. and Chamberlain and Erwer in 2. Bullr. 11. 2. Ro. Abr. 151. E. pl. 3. 4. and Palm. 42.—(2) In some books it is asserted, that there cannot be an occupant of estates created by law, without distinguishing between a general and a special occupant. Cro. Eliz. 58. 1. Bullr. 135. 2. Ro. Rep. 123. Probably the assertion was meant to be confined to the former, for as to the latter the authorities seem decisive in favour of the heir's taking as special occupant if named in granting over curtesy or any other estate created by law. See 27. Aff. pl. 31. Plowd. 28. and 556. and Palm. 32. But even the doctrine against general occupancy of estates created by law comes merely from persons arguing as counsel, who neither explain why it should not be, nor cite any authorities except 15. E. 3. Fitzh. Abr. Scire facias pl. 17. which appears foreign to the purpose.—(3) Lord Hale adds, nor of a copyhold. Hal. MSS.—See acc. 2. L. Raym. 1000. and the reason why in 6. Mod. 66. As to things lying in grant, lord Coke in mentioning them must be understood to mean general occupancy only, for he writes in another place, that if heirs are named in the grant of a rent pur autre vie, they shall take, though formerly this was doubted. See Post 388. Dy. 186. ed. 1689. in marg. 1. Bullr. 155. Mo. 625. 664. and Godb. 172.—(4) Vid. M. 44. 45. Eliz. B. R. Salter's case. Rent granted to one, his executors and administrators pur autre vie, and the grantee dies; it shall not go to the administrator as special occupant, but determines by the death unless there has been an assignment. Hal. MSS. See S. C. in Cro. Eliz. 901. Noy 46. Yelv. 9. and Mo. 664. See also S. P. acc. 2. Ro. Abr. 151. G. pl. 3. However some have thought that executors and administrators if named in the grant might take an estate pur autre vie, though a freehold, even before the 29. Ch. 2. c. 3. and 14. G. 2. c. 20. by which they are now intitled. See 3. Atk. 466. The authority relied on is Dy. 328. b.—(5) The title by general occupancy is now universally prevented by the 29. Ch. 2. c. 3. f. 12. and the 14. G. 2. c. 20. f. 9. The first statute enacts, that estates pur autre vie shall be deviseable, and if not devised chargeable in the hands of the heir as assets by descent, where the estate falls on him as special occupant; and if he is not intitled as such, shall go to the grantee's executors or administrators and be assets. On this statute a doubt arose, whether it operated further than by making such estates deviseable and assets for debts; and in one case it was adjudged, that the administrator took the surplus of such estates after payment of debts, if not devised, for his own benefit as in the place of a general occupant. See 12. Mod. 103. This gave occasion to the second statute, which expressly makes the surplus in case of intestacy distributable as personal estate. See further as to occupancy 2. Blackst. Comment. 258. an elaborate argument by lord chief justice Vaughan Vaugh. 187. Vin. Abr. Occupancy and Estates R. a. 3. Com. Dig. Estates F. and New Abr. Estate for life B.—(6) But affirmative covenants do not restrain. 28. H. 8. Dy. 19.—Hal. MSS.

for the estate of B for terme of his own life is higher than an estate for another man's life: (Ante 31. b. post 273. b.) and therefore if tenant for life infeoffe him in the remainder for life, this is a surrender, and no forfeiture. And albeit an estate for terme of a man's own life be but one freehold, yet may several freeholds in certaine cases be derived out of the same, whereof our bookes are very plentiful, and wherewith you may disport your selves for a time. As if tenant for life maketh a lease by deed, or without deed, to him in the remainder, or reversion, in taile or in fee, for the term of the life of him in the rem. or reversion, and after he in the remainder taketh wife and dieth, his wife shall not be endowed, for tenant for life shall enjoy the land again, for forfeiture it cannot be, for he in the rem. was party, and surrender it cannot be, for that his whole estate was not given (1).

The heire maketh a lease for life, reserving a rent, against whom the wife recovereth her dower and dieth, the lessee shall have the land againe for his life, and the rent is revived. 7. H. 5. 4.

So it is, if tenant for life take husband and by deed indented they make a lease to him in the reversion for the life of the husband, reserving a rent, this is neither forfeiture, nor absolute surrender, for the cause aforesaid, and the reservation is good. 29. Aff. p. 64.

B seised of lands in fee, taketh to wife If. and infeoffe C in fee, who takes Alice to wife: C dieth, Alice is endowed; B dieth, If. recovereth dower against Alice and dieth, Alice shall enjoy the land againe during her life (2). 8. E. 2. Aff. 393. 45. E. 3. 13.

A and [a] B joyntenants, A for life, and B in fee, joyne in a lease for life (3), A hath a reversion, and shall joyne in an action of wast (4). [a] 2. H. 5. 7. 13. H. 7. 15. 18. E. 2. l. r. 8. 5. F. N. B. 59. f.

Tenant for [b] life, and he in the reversion joyne in a lease for life, it is said, that they shall joyne in an action of wast, and that the lessee for life shall recover the place wasted, and he in reversion, damages (5). [b] 27. H. 8. 13. 13. H. 7. 15. 22. H. 6. 24. 17. E. 3. 9. b.

If a man grant [c] an estate to a woman dum sola fuit, or durante viduitate, or quam diu se bene gesserit, or to a man and a woman during the coverture, or as long as the grantee dwell in such a house, or so long as he pay x l. &c. or untill the grantee be promoted to a benefice, or for any like incertaine time, which time, as Bracton saith, is tempus indeterminatum: in all these cases, if it be of lands or tenements, the lessee hath in judgment of law an estate for life determinable, if livery be made; and if it be of rents, advowsons, or any other thing that lie in grant, he hath a like estate for life by the delivery of the deed, and in count or pleading he shall alledge the lease, and conclude, that by force thereof he was seised generally for terme of his life (6). [c] 37. H. 6. 27. 26. E. 3. 69, 14. E. 2. Grant. 92. 3. E. 3. 15. 14. H. 8. 13.

If a man make a lease of a mannor, that at the time of the lease made is worth xx l. per annum, (6. Co. 35. b.) to another until c. l. be paid, in this case because the annuall profits of the mannor are incertain, he hath an estate for life, if livery be made determinable upon the levying of the c. l. (7) But if a man grant a rent of xx l. per annum untill c. l. be paid, there he hath an estate for five yeares, for there it is certaine, and depends upon no incertainty. And yet in some cases a man shall have an incertaine interest in lands or tenements, and yet neither an estate for life, for yeares, or at will (8). As if a man by his will in writing, devise his lands to his executors for payment of debts, and untill his debts be paid; in this case the executors have but a chattell, and an incertaine interest in the land untill his debts be paid; for if they should have it for their lives, then by their death their estate should cease, and the debts unpaid, but being a chattell, it shall go to the executors of executors for the payment of his debts: and so note a diversity betweene a devise and a conveyance at the common law in his life time. And tenant by statute merchant, by statute staple, and by Elegit, have incertaine interests in lands or tenements, and yet they have but chattells, and no freehold, whose estates are created by divers acts of parliament, whereof more shall be said hereafter. And so have gardians in chivalry which hold over for single or double value incertaine interests, and yet but chattells. 33. Aff. p. 2. (Plow. 273.)

If one grant lands or tenements, reversions, remainder, rents, advowsons, commons, or the like, and expresse or limit no estate, the lessee or grantee (due ceremonies requisite by law being performed) hath an estate for life (9). The same law is of a declaration of a use (10). A man may have an estate for terme of life determinable at will; as if the king doth grant an office to one at will, and grant a rent to him for the exercise of his office for terme of his life, this is determinable upon the determination of the office. 8. Co. 94. b. Manning's case. 3. H. 7. 13. 27. H. 8. 5. 14. H. 8. 13. 21. Aff. p. 8.

A, tenant in fee simple makes a lease of lands to B, to have and to hold to B for terme of life, without mentioning for whose life it shall be, it shall be deemed for terme of the life of the lessee, for it shall be taken most strongly against the lessor, and as hath beene said, an estate for a man's owne life is higher than for the life of another (11). But if tenant in taile make such a lease without expresse for whose life, this shall be taken but for the life of the lessor, for two reasons. Vide sect. 381. (1. Ro. Abr. 346.)

First, when the construction of any act is left to the law, the law which abhorreth injury and wrong will never so construe it, as it shall work a wrong: and in this case, if by construction it should be for the life of the lessee, then should the estate taile be discontinued, and a new reversion gained by wrong: but if it be construed for the life of the tenant in taile, then no wrong is wrought. And it is a generall rule, that whensoever the words of a deed, or of the parties without deed may have a double intendment, and the one standeth with law and right, (Post 183.)

(1) 1. E. 3. 15. Vid. 41. Aff. 2. A tenant for life, remainder to B in tail, remainder to C in fee; A enfeoffs E and his wife and their heirs; B dies without issue; now there is a forfeiture, and C may enter. Hal. MSS.

(2) Hic fol. 21. Hal. MSS.

(3) 13. E. 4. 4. Dy. 237. So of a gift in tail. 38. E. 3. 7. Hal. MSS.

(4) And the writ ought to be ad exheredationem B. 13. E. 2. Brief 835. Hal. MSS.

(5) 3. H. 7. 9. P. 43. Eliz. C. B. D. D. n. 4. But if the lease be without deed it is a surrender. 10. H. 7. 3. 1. Rep. Bredon's case. Hal. MSS.

(6) A leases to B till A makes I. S. bailly of his manor: adjudged a freehold. H. 37. El. Butler and Ridgely. Vid. 1. Rep. Bredon's case rent granted to A for life if B or C shall so long live. But if there be an estate with such conditional limitation, it ought to be pleaded with the limitation, and continuance should be averred; for otherwise it fails. Vid. Dy. 192. Hal. MSS.

(7) But feoffment to the use of A for life, remainder to the use of B his executors and assigns till ten pounds should be levied out of the profits, ruled to be a chattell. Hal. MSS.

(8) Plowd. Comment. 273. Hal. MSS.

(9) Hic. sect. 283. But if termor for years devises his house generally without shewing what estate, the whole term passes. 14. Eliz. Dy. 307. Hal. MSS.

(10) 21. H. 8. 5. by Shelly. Hal. MSS.

(11) Vid. 8. E. 3. 3. A lessee for life makes lease to B and C, on condition that if they die leaving A, then the land shall revert to A without determining any estate certain in the grant. All the estate passes under the condition, for in præcipe A was not received on default of B and C. Hal. MSS.

4. E. 2. Wast. 11. 17. E. 3. 7.
(Mo. 358. 363. Post. 276. a.)

right, and the other is wrongfull and against law, the intendment that standeth with law shall be taken.

Secondly, The law more respecteth a lesser estate by right, than a larger estate by wrong; as if tenant for life in remainder disseise tenant for life, now he hath a fee simple; but if tenant for life die, now is his wrongfull estate in fee by judgment in law changed to a rightfull estate for life.

19. H. 6. 7. H. 4. 32. 6. E. 3.
17. 7. E. 3. 66. 18. E. 3. 60.
23. E. 3. c. 1. &c. 11. H. 4. 44.
38. E. 3. 23. 24.

If a man retaine a servant generally without expressing any time, the law shall construe it to be for one yeare, for that retainer is according to law. Vide 23. E. 3. cap. 1. &c. (1). To shut up this point it hath been adjudged, that where tenant in taile made a lease to another for terme of life generally, and after released to the lessee and his heires, albeit betweene the tenant in taile and him a fee simple passed, yet after the death of the lessee the entry of the issue in taile was lawfull; which could not be, if it had been a lease for the life of the lessee, for then by the release it had beene a discontinuance executed (2). But let us now returne to Littleton.

Sect. 57.

THIS and the rest that follow in this chapter concerning the description of feoffor and feoffee, donor, and donee, and lessor and lessee are evident.

Et est ascavoir que il y ad le feoffor, et le feoffee, &c. Vide sect. 2.

Where a light touch is given who may purchase. Now somewhat is to be said, who have ability to enfeoffe, &c. and may be a feoffor, donor, lessor, &c. Whosoever is disabled by the common law to take, is disabled to infeoffe, &c. But many that have capacite to take, have no ability to infeoffe, &c. As men attainted of treason, felony, or of a præmunire, aliens borne, the king's villaines, traitors, felons, &c. he that hath offended against the statutes of præmunire, after the offences committed (3) if attainders ensue, ideots, madmen, a man deafe, dumbe, and blinde from his nativity, a feme covert, an infant (4), a man by duress: for the feoffments, &c. of these may be avoyded. But an hereticke, though he be convicted of heresie, a leper removed by the king's writ from the society of men, bairds, a man deafe, dumbe, or blinde, so that he hath understanding and sound memory, albeit he expresse his intention by signes, villaine of a common

ET en ascavoir que il y ad le feoffor et le feoffee, donor et le donee, le lessor et le lessee. Le feoffor est properment lou home enfeoffa un auter en ascuns terres ou tenements en fee simple, celui que fist le feoffment est appel feoffour, et celui a que le feoffment est fait, est appel feoffee. Et le donour est properment lou un home done certaine terres ou tenements a un auter en le taile, celui que fist le done est appel le donour, et celui a que le done est fait est appel le donee. Et le lessor est properment lou un home lessa a un auter certaine terres ou tenements pur terme de vie, ou pur terme des ans, ou a tener a volunt, celui que fist le leas est appel les-

AND it is to be understood, that there is feoffor and feoffee, donor and donee, lessor and lessee. Feoffor is properly where a man enfeoffes another in any lands or tenements in fee simple, he which maketh the feoffment is called the feoffor, and he to whom the feoffment is made, is called the feoffee. And the donor is properly where a man giveth certaine lands or tenements to another in taile, he which maketh the gift is called the donor, and he to whom the gift is made is called the donee. And the lessor is properly where a man letteth to another lands or tenements for terme of life or for terme of years, or to hold at will, he which maketh the lease is called lessor, Brañon lib. 5. fo. 415. Britton fo. 88. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 3. & lib. 6. ca. 39. 40.

2. H. 5. ca. 7. which is repealed, Doct. and Stud. lib. 2. ca. 29.

(1) Mr. Barrington calls this a supposed statute, because the intervention of the commons is not mentioned; and the introductory part seems to justify the observation; for the title is like that of an ordinance of the king in council, the words being that the king cum praelatis nobilibus et peritis et aliis sibi assidentibus deliberationem habuit et tractatum; de quorum unanimi consilio ordinavit. See Observat. on Ant. Stat. 2d ed. 206. However the 23. E. 3. appears to have been always treated as a statute, and Fitzherbert, in his commentary upon the writ founded upon it, calls it by that name. Fitzh. Nat. Br. 167. B.

(2) That is, if the lease was for the life of the lessee it would be a discontinuance for life, and the tenant in tail would thereby raise in himself a new reversion in fee, and the release, by passing such new reversion in fee to the discontinuee, would merge his estate for life and make it a fee executed; which enlargement of the estate for life would proportionably enlarge the discontinuance for life, and so make it a discontinuance in fee as much as if the first conveyance by the tenant in tail had been for that estate. See further on this subject Post sect. 620.

(3) As to conveyances made by felons or by offenders against the statutes of præmunire between indictment and attainder, see W. Jo. 217. Cro. Cha. 172. and Will. vol. 1. part 2. page 219.

(4) There is an important difference between the deeds of femes covert and infants. Those of the former are always void; but those of the latter are sometimes void, and sometimes only voidable. As to the distinction between void and voidable in the case of deeds by infants, see a case in Burr. 4. part 3. vol. 1794, in which the court held a conveyance by lease and release by an infant to be voidable only. See further Post sect. 259.

for, et celui, a que le leas est fait, est appellee. Et chef-cun, que ad estate en ascun terres ou tenements pur terme de sa vie ou pur terme dauter vie, est appellee tenant de franktenement, et nul autre de meindre estate poit aver franktenement: mes ceux de greinder estate ont franktenement; car cestuy en fee simple ad franktenement, et celui en le taile ad &c. franktenement, &c.

and hee, to whom the lease is made, is called lessee. And every one, which hath an estate in any land or tenements for term of his owne or another man's life, is called tenant of freehold, and none other of a lesser estate can have a freehold: but they of a greater estate have a freehold; for he in fee simple hath a freehold, and tenant in taile hath a freehold, &c.

person before entrie, or the like may infeoffe, &c.

[a] All feoffments, gifts, grants, and leases by bishops, albeit they be confirmed by the deane and chapter, by any of the colledges or halls in either of the Universities, or elsewhere, deans and chapters, master or gardian of any hospital, parson, vicar, or any other having spirituall or ecclesiastical living, are also to be avoyded, [b] and all the said bodies politique or corporate, are by the statutes of the realm disabled to make any conveyances to the king, or to any other, as it hath been adjudged: which statutes have bin made since Littleton wrote (1).

It is provided [c] by the statute of Magna Charta, quod nullus liber homo det de cetero amplius alicui de terra sua, quam ut de residuo terræ suæ possit sufficient' fieri domino fe-

[a] 32. H. 8. cap. 28. 1. El. not printed. 13. El. ca. 10. 14. El. ca. 11. 18. El. ca. 20. 1. J. cap. 3.

[b] 4. Co. 76. 120. 5. Co. 6. 14. 6. Co. 37. 11. Co. 67. Magdalen Colledge case. Vide Leif. de W. 2. ca. 41.

[c] Magna Charta cap. 32. Mirror cap. 5. Sect. 2. Glanvil lib. 7. ca. 1. Bract. lib. 1. Brit. 88. &c. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 3.

[d] Vide an excellent declaration hereof interadjudicat' coram Rege. Trin. E. f. fol. 2. in Thelau. Nott. & Derb.

[e] Bract. lib. 1. 10. H. 7 fol. 10. b. 33. E. 3. Avowry 255. Stamford, p. 29. 8. E. 4. 12.

Mirror cap. 5. Sect. 2. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 3.

[f] 26. Ass. p. 37. 20. Ass. p. 17. 20. E. 3. Avowry 126. 34. E. 3. c. 15. Vide Stamford. 29. 30. Matt. Paris. Wallingham 37. 39.

Vide 5. H. 3. Mordanc. 53. Magna Charta there vouched, which was the charter of King John, for it was cited before 9. H. 3.

odi servitium ei debitum quod pertinet ad feudum illud. Upon which act I have heard great question [d] made, whether the feoffment made against that statute were voydable or no, and some have said that the statute intended not to avoyd the feoffment, but implicate to direct the tenure, viz. that the tenant should not infeoffe another of parcell to hold of the chief lord (that is of the next lord) but to hold of himselfe, and then the lord may distreine in everie part for his whole service without any prejudice unto him. But this opinion is against [e] the authoritie of our bookes, and against the said statute of Magna Charta. For first it is agreed in 10. H. 7. that as well before the statute as after, a tenant which held two acres might have aliened one of the acres to hold of him, and notwithstanding the lord might have distrained in which of the acres he would for his whole services: and reason teacheth that before that statute a tenant could not have aliened parcell to hold of the chiefe lord; for the feignory of the lord was entire, for the which the lord might distreine in the whole or in any part, and which the tenant by his owne act cannot divide to the prejudice of the lord to barre him to distreine in any part for his services, as he should doe, if he should infeoffe another of parcell to hold of the chiefe lord. But the tenant might have made a feoffment of the whole to hold of the chiefe lord, for there no prejudice infused to the lord (2). Others have said, and they said truly, that the intention of the statute was that the tenant could not alien parcell (which might turn to the prejudice of the lord) without his assent, and this appeareth cleerly by the mirror. And by this statute the king tooke benefit to have a fine for his licence, before which statute no fine for alienation was due to the king. For it is [f] adjudged that for an alienation in time of Henry the second, no fine was due, and it appeareth in our bookes, that if an alienation had bene made before 20. H. 3. no fine was due to the king for alienation (3). Now it is to be observed, that oftentimes for the better understanding of our bookes, the advised reader must take light from historie and chronicles especially for distinction of times. And therefore Matthew Paris (who in his chronicle reciteth Magna Charta) (4) testifieth that king Henry the third by evill counsell (and especially, as the truth was, of Hubert de Burgo then chiefe justice) sought to avoyde the great charter first granted by his father king John, and afterward granted and confirmed by himselfe in the ninth of Henry the third, for that as he said king John did grant it by duces, and that he himselfe was within age when he granted and confirmed it. But forasmuch as afterwards the said king Henry the third in the twentieth yeare of his raigne, at what time he was nine and twentie yeare old, did grant and confirme the said great charter, for that cause to put out all scruples in the twentieth yeare of Henry the third named, albeit in law the king's charter granted in the ninth yeare of Henry the third, was of force and validitie notwithstanding his nonage, for that, in judgement of law the king, as king, cannot be said to be a minor

(1) And in case of corporation aggregate, as dean and chapter, the lease is void against the dean who makes the lease. M. 13. Car. B. R. Lloyd and Gregory. But it is otherwise in the case of a sole corporation, for there it is void only against the successor. M. 44. Eliz. C. B. Saunders's case. Hal. MSS.—See the observation on the case of Lloyd and Gregory Post 45. a. As to conveyances by corporations before the restraining statutes, see Post 44. a. and 103. a.—(2) This assertion has been controverted, as repugnant to the feudal notions of alienation, and inconsistent with any reasonable construction of the statute quia emptores terrarum. Wright's Ten. 155. Dalrymple. Hist. Feud. Prop. 80. and Sulliv. Lect. 418. In fact the history of our law with respect to the powers of alienation before the statute of quia emptores terrarum is very much involved in obscurity. See Bract. lib. 2. cap. 19. where the author inquires, si ille, cui datum est, rem datam ulterius dare possit. See also Bract. lib. 2. cap. 5. and Staundf. Prærog. cap. 7.—(3) Nota, for seizure of serjanties aliened without licence, it seems that it was the ancient law. Vid. Roger Hoveden 783. It was one of the articles inter capitula coronæ R. 1. de serjantiis alienatis and so it still continues. Claus. 7. Johann. m. 11. *precept to seize serjanties theinagia et dengagia tent. de honore Lancaster alienat. post primam coronation. H. 2. Vid. T. 7. E. 1. Coram rege Gilbertus de Clare comes Gloucester impeached for alienation made to his father. Vid. 24. E. 3. 71. special custom to alienate without licence. Videtur per Rot. Parl. 29. E. 3. n. 18. quod other tenures than serjanties the prerogative began in the time of Edward the First. Nota it seems, that the statute of quia emptores takes away licences and pardons of alienations in case of tenure of a subject. Yet see 14. H. 4. 4. recordare longum for custom of the honor of Gloucester and Rot. Parl. 38. H. 6. n. 29. pro ducatu Cornubiæ ubi facta a custome. Rot. Parl. 8. E. 2. m. 7. in scedula pendente dorso. "Accord est et assensu per archevesques evesques abbes priores countes et barons et autres du realme le roy summons a Westminster octab. Hill. 8. E. 2. que eux desoremes nul fine de mandront ne prendront des frankhomes, pur entrer terres et tenements que sont de leur fee, issint totes voyes que per tiel feoffments ils ne soient pas eloignes ds leur services ne leur services dedits." Hal. MSS. From lord Hale's observing, that the crown's right of seizure for alienation of serjanties without licence still continues, it seems, that his note on the subject was written before the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. which converts tenures by knight service into socage and takes away fines of alienation. See Post. 43. b. n. 2.—(4) Nota pro carta de libertatibus.—Carta regis Johann. proclamata 19. Junii 17. Johana. apud Runimede*

Lib 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yearès. Sect. 58.

20. Aff. Pl. 17. by Skipwith.

Britt. fo. 28. 88. 186. 187. 245. 247. Prer. Regis ca. 7. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 29. acc. 20. E. 3. Aff. 122. 29. Aff. pl. 19. 14. E. 3. quare imp. 45. 14. H. 4. 2. 3. 9. E. 3. fo. 26. 1. E. 3. c. 12. 34. E. 3. ca. 15. 2. Co. 81. 82. in Seignior Cromwell's case.

Regist. int. les breves de onerand' pro rata portione.

(Plowd. 561. b. 562.)
Bracton lib. 4. fo. 224. Britton cap. 32. & 47. Bracton lib. 4. fo. 22. Regist. Judic. 68. 73.

28. Aff. p. 7. W. 2. ca. 18. Stat. de mercatoribus an. 13. E. 1. 27. E. 3. ca. 9. 23. H. 8. ca. 6. F. N. B. 178. (Ante 42. a.)

nor, for when the royall bodie politique of the king doth meete with the naturall capacity in one person, the whole bodie shall have the qualitie of the royall politique, which is the greater and more worthy, and wherein is no minoritie (1). For, omne majus trahit ad se quod est minus. And it is to be observed, that no record can be found, that either a licence of alienation was sued, or pardon for alienation was obtained for an alienation without licence at any time before the twentieth yeare of Henry the third, and it is holden in the twentieth of Edward the third, that a licence for alienation grew by this statute.

Now in the case of a common person it was the common opinion, that if the tenant had aliened any parcell contrary to the said act, that he himselfe was bound by his owne act, but that his heire might have avoyded it; and in the king's case many held the same opinion. For Britton saith, Ne counts, ne barons, ne chevaller, ne serjeants, que teignent en chiefe de nous ne purr' my dismember nous fees sans licence: que nous ne puissent per droit engettre les purchasors, &c. And herewith agreeth Fleta, and our bookes. But now by the statute 1. E. 3. cap. 12. & 34. E. 3. cap. 15. although the king's tenant in chiefe or by grand serjantie doe alien all or any part without licence, yet is there not any forfeiture of the same, but a reasonable fine therefore to be paid. And note, it appeareth by the preamble in 1. E. 3. that complaint was made that land holden of the king in Capite, being aliened, without licence was seized as forfeited. And in the case of a common person, the statute of 18. E. 1. De quia emptores terrarum hath made it cleare, for this hath in effect as to the common perions taken away the said statute of Magna Charta cap. 32. for thereby it is provided, Quod liceat unicuique libero homini terras suas seu tenementa sua, seu partem inde ad voluntatem suam vendere, ita quod feoffatus teneat, &c. de capitali domino. And herein are divers notable points to be observed. First, that this word liceat proveth that the tenant could not, or at least wayes was in danger to alien parcell of his tenancy, &c. upon the said act of Magna Charta. Secondly, that upon the testiment of the whole, the tenant shall hold of the chiefe lord. Thirdly, that the tenant might infeoffe one of part to hold pro perticula of the chiefe lord. But this act (the king being not named) doth not take away the king's fine due to him by the statute of Magna Charta (2).

Franktenement. Here it appeareth that tenant in fee, tenant in taile, and tenant for life are said to have a franktenement, a freehold, so called, because it doth distinguish it from termes of yeares, chattels upon incertaine interests, lands in villenage or customary, or copyhold lands. Liberum autem tenementum dicitur ad differentiam villenagii, et villanorum qui tenent villenagium quia non habent actionem nec assisam, &c. item quod sit suum et non alienum, hoc est si teneat nomine alieno ut firmarius et ad terminum vel sicut creditor ad wadium. And note that tenant by statute merchant, statute staple, or elegit, are said to hold land ut liberum tenementum untill their debt be paid, and yet in troth they (as hath beene said) have no freehold, but a chattle, which shall go to the executors, and the executors also if they be ousted shall have an assise. But (ut) is similitudinary, because they shall by the statutes have an assise as tenant of the freehold shall have, and to that respect hath a similitude of a freehold, but nullum simile est idem.

CHAP. 7. Sect. 58.

Tenant for terme of yeares.

LOU home lessa TENANT pur TENANT for terme terres, &c. lessa terme dans est, of yeares is;
and lease is [a] derived of the lou home lessa ter- where a man letteth Saxon word leapum, or leasum, res ou tenements a lands or tenements for that the lessee commeth in un auter pur terme to another for terme by lawfull meanes; [b] and dimittere is in French lasser to de certaine ans, so- of certaine yeares, depart with or forgoe. longue le number after the number of When Littleton wrote, many persons might make leases for yeares, or for life, or des ans que est accord perenter le less- yeares that is accorded between the
for

[a] Mirror cap. 2. Sect. 17.
Bracton lib. 2. cap. 26. & lib. 4. fol. 220. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 12. & lib. 5. cap. 34.
[b] For the word (dimitto) see Sect. 531.

mede Pat. 17. Johann. m. 33. dorso. Carta de libertatibus sub H. 3. magna scilicet de libertatibus, et minor sive de foresta, proclamantur 8. Maii 9. H. 3. prima pars claus. 9. H. 3. m. 14. dorso interrupt. et cancell. Math. Paris sub anno 1227. pag. 336. but afterwards confirmed by H. 3. Rex confirmat "omnes libertates, &c. contentas in cartis quas fecimus cum minoris ætatis essemus tam in magna carta quam in carta de foresta." Cart. 21. H. 3. n. 4. confirmatur per stat. Marlbr. cap. 5. et tunc primum devenit statutum, viz. 52. H. 3. Hal. MSS.—See a most accurate history of the magna carta of king John and of that Hen. 3. in the introductory discourse to Mr. Justice Blackstone's valuable edition of the charters.

(1) See this subject considered at large in the case of the dutchy of Lancaster Plowd. 214. and in Willion and Berkley. Plowd. 234.

(2) Fines for alienation are taken away as well from the king as from all others by the 12. Cha. 2. chap. 24. But the statute saves fines for alienation due by the customs of particular manors, other than fines for alienation of lands holden of the king in capite.—See further on the subject of alienation 2. Inst. 65. 501. Vin. Abr. tit. alienation. Sulliv. Lect. page 259. and 418. and the books cited in fol. 43. a. note 2.

for et le leſſee. Et quant le leſſee entrer per force del leas, donque il eſt tenant pur terme des ans; et ſi le leſſor en tiel caſe reſerve a luy un annuall rent ſur tiel leas, il poit eſlier a diſtraine pur le rent en les tenements leſſes, ou il poit aver un action de debt pur les arrerages enverz le leſſee. Mes in tiel caſe il covient, que le leſſor ſoit ſeiſie de meſmes les tenements al temps del leas, car il eſt bone plee pur le leſſee adire, que le leſſor navoit riens en les tenements al temps de le leas, ſinon que le leas ſoit fait per fait endent, en quel caſe tiel plee donque ne giſt en le bouch le leſſee a pleader.

leſſor and the leſſee, and when the leſſee entreth by force of the leaſe, then is he tenant for tearme of yeares; and if the leſſor in ſuch caſe reſerve to him a yearely rent upon ſuch leaſe, he may chuſe for to diſtraine for the rent in the tenements letten, or elſe he may have an action of debt for the arrerages againſt the leſſee. But in ſuch caſe it behooveth, that the leſſor be ſeiſed in the ſame tenements at the time of his leaſe for it is a good plee for the leſſee to ſay, that the leſſor had nothing in the tenements at the time of the leaſe, except the leaſe be made by deed indented, in which caſe ſuch plee lieth not for the leſſee to plead.

lives at their will and pleaſure, which now cannot make them firme in law. And ſome perſons may now make leaſes for yeares, or for life or lives (obſerving due incidents) firme and good in law, who of themſelves could not ſo doe when Littleton wrote, and this by force of divers acts of parliament [c] as namely 32. H. 8. 1. Eliz. 13. Eliz. 18. Eliz. and 1. Jac. Regis, of which ſtatutes one is enabling, and the reſt are diſabling. When Littleton wrote, biſhoppes with the confirmation of the deane and chapter, maſter and fellowes of any college, deanes and chapters, maſter or gardian of any hoſpitall, and his brethren, parſon or vicar with the conſent of the patrone and ordinary, archdeacon, prebend, or any other body politique ſpirituell and eccleſiaſticall (Concurrentibus hiis quæ in jure requiruntur) might have made leaſes for lives or yeares without limitation or ſtint. And ſo might they have made gifts in tailles or ſtates in fee at their will and pleaſure, whereupon not onely great decay of divine ſervice, but dilapidations and other inconveniences enſued, and therefore they were diſabled and reſtrained by the ſayd acts of 1. Eliz. 13. Eliz. and 3. Jac. Regis to make any ſtate or conveyance to the [c] 32. H. 8. ca. 28. 1. Eliz. not printed but in the abridgement. 13. Eliz. cap. 10. 18. Eliz. cap. 6. 1. Jac. cap. 3.

5. Co. 14. caſe de eccleſiaſtical perſons. 11. Co. 66. Magdalen Colledge caſe. Leveſque de Sarrum's caſe. 10. Co. 60. 61. (1. Sid. 162.)

(5. Co. 15.)

(Cro. Char. 16. 47. 50. 10. Co. 58. Pollexf. 134. 4. Mod. 16. Finch 191. 192. 193. Cro. Cha. 48. Cro. Jac. 173.)

king at all, or to the ſubject; but there is excepted out of the reſtraint or diſability, leaſes for three lives, or one and twenty yeares, with ſuch reſervation of rent, and with ſuch other provisions and limitations as hereafter ſhall appeare. Alſo they may make grants of ancient offices of neceſſity with ancient fees, Concurrentibus hiis quæ in jure requiruntur, for thoſe grants are not within the ſtatute of 32. H. 8. but by conſtruction, they are not reſtrained by the ſtatutes of 1. Eliz. or 13. Eliz. becauſe theſe ancient offices be of neceſſity, and with the ancient fees, and ſo no diminution of revenue (1).

There be three kinds of perſons that at this day may make leaſes for three lives, &c. in ſuch ſort as hereafter is expreſſed, which could not ſo doe when Littleton wrote, viz. firſt, any perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate taile in his owne right. Secondly, any perſon ſeiſed of an eſtate in fee ſimple in the right of his church. Thirdly, any huſband and wife ſeiſed of any eſtate of inheritance in fee ſimple or fee taile in the right of his wife, or jointly with his wife before the coverture or after, viz. the tenant in taile, by deed to binde his iſſues in taile, but not the reversion or remainder, the biſhop, &c. by deed without the deane and chapter to bind his ſucceſſors, the huſband and wife by deed to bind the wife and her and their heires (2), and theſe are made good by the ſtatute of 32. H. 8. which inableth them thereunto. But to the making good of ſuch leaſes by the ſaid ſtatute, there are nine things neceſſarily to be obſerved belonging to them all, and ſome other to ſome of them in particular.

Firſt, the leaſe muſt be made by deed indented, and not by deed poll, or by paroll (3).

5. Co. 6. Seig. Mountjoye's caſe. (3. Lev. 438. Cro. Ja. 94. 458.)

Secondly, it muſt be made to begin from the day of the making thereof, or from the making thereof (4).

Thirdly,

(1) Vid. 29. Eliz. Caſe of the biſhop of Cheſter, who had antiently uſed to have a counſel who had a fee. This grantable by the biſhop with conſent of dean and chapter. Nota, though it be not an office of time of which, &c. yet grantable, if of neceſſity, as in the caſe of the biſhop of Glouceſter founded within time of memory. M. 1. Car. C. B. Crook n. 8. Cook and Young. Vide that it is holden, that though it be a new office, yet if neceſſary and the fee is reaſonable, being confirmed it ſhall bind the ſucceſſor; and vide the grant of antient office and fee, with the addition of a new fee, which notwithstanding ſeems good, becauſe the office is antient. M. 2. Car. C. B. Crook n. 7. Gee's caſe. If it has been uſual to grant an antient office to one only, a grant to two is not good. But if it has been once granted to two or granted in reversion before the ſtatute 1. Eliz. then it ſhall be intended to have been uſually ſo granted, and ſuch grant to two or in reversion ſhall bind the ſucceſſor. T. 8. Car. B. R. Crook n. 2. Walker and Lamb. M. 8. Car. B. R. Crook n. 19. Young and Steele concerning the official and commiſſary of the biſhop of Lincoln and the regiſter of the biſhop of Rocheſter. Hal. MSS. Ley 75. is contrary to Gee's caſe cited by lord Hale.—See further as to the grant of offices by eccleſiaſtical perſons, New Abr. Offices D. See alſo in Burr. part 4. vol. 1. page 219. the caſe of Sir John Trelawney and the biſhop of Wincheſter, in which the court held, that an office and fee which exiſted before the 1ſt. of Eliz. are not within the reſtraint of that ſtatute, but that they may be granted as before the ſtatute, and that the utility or neceſſity of the office is not more material ſince than it was before.

(2) Quoad leaſes by huſband and wife. Huſband and wife ſeiſed to them and the heires of the body of the huſband make leaſe for three lives, rendering the antient rent; huſband dies: this ſhall not bind the wife. Adjudged, becauſe the ſtatute ſpeaks of the wife's inheritance. H. 14. Eliz. C. B. n. 5. D. D. Huſband and wife jointly ſeiſed by purchaſe to them and their heires; the huſband alone during the coverture makes leaſe, rendering the antient rent: dubitatur if it ſhall bind the wife, becauſe the proviſo, which requires the wife's joining, ſpeaks only of huſband ſeiſed in right of his wife. Finitur per compositionem. M. 1. Car. C. B. Crook n. 15. Smith and Trindon. Hal. MSS.

(3) See New Abr. Leaſes E. 2.

(4) Vid. 7. Eliz. Dy. 246. Leaſe for 20 years to begin at next Michaelmas ſeems good. Hal. MSS.—See further as to the time when ſuch leaſes ſhould begin, and the difference between from the day of making and from the making. New Abr. Leaſes E. rule 2. and Poſt 47. b.

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect 58.

5. Co. 2. Elmer's case.

(Cro. Cha. 95. Cro. Ja. 112. 173.)

[d] 5. Co. 3. Jewel's case. 17. E. 3. 75. 9. Aff. 24. 14. E. 3. Scire facias 22. 10. H. 6. 2. 3. H. 6. 21. (1. Sid. 316. 317. 416. Cro. Eliz. 708.)

[e] 6. Co. 37. Deane and Chapter of Worcester's case.

5. Co. 6. Seignior Mountjoye's case.

(Cro. Jam. 76.)

6. Co. 37. 38. Deane and Chapter of Worcester's case.

5. Co. 5. Seignior Mountjoye's case. 6. Co. 37.

Lord Mountjoye's case ubi supra.

(Cro. Cha. 16. 17.)

Deane and Chapter of Worcester's case ubi supra.
Deane and Chapter of Worcester's case ubi supra.

3. E. 6. 1. Mar. tit. leases. Bro. 62. (Finch 191.)

Thirdly, if there be an old lease in being, it must be surrendered (1) or expired, or ended within a year of the making of the lease, and the surrender must be absolute and not conditionall.

Fourthly, there must not be a double lease in being at one time, as if a lease for yeares be made according to the statute, he in the reversion cannot expulse the lessee, and make a lease for life or lives according to the statute, nor à converso; for the words of the statute be, to make a lease for three lives, or one and twenty yeares, so as one or the other may be made, and not both (2).

Fifthly, it must not exceed three lives, or one and twenty yeares, from the making of it, but it may be for a lesser terme of fewer lives.

Sixthly, it must be of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, manurable or corporeall, which are necessary to be letten, and whereout a rent by law may be reserved, and not [d] of things that lye in grant, as advowsons, faires, markets, franchises, and the like whereout a rent cannot be reserved (3).

Seventhly, it must be of lands or tenements which have most commonly beene letten to farme, or occupied by the farmers thereof by the space of 20 yeares next before the lease made, so as if it be letten for 11 yeares at one or severall times within those 20 yeares it is sufficient. A grant [e] by copy of court roll in fee for life or yeares is a sufficient letting to farme within this statute, for he is but tenant at will according to the custome, and so it is of a lease at will by the common law, but those lettings to farme must be made by some feised of an estate of inheritance, and not by a gardian in chivalry, tenant by the curtesie, tenant in dower, or the like (4).

Eighthly, that upon every such lease there be reserved yearly during the same lease due and payable to the lessors, their heires and successors, &c. so much yearly farme or rent, or more, as hath beene most accustomedly yeilded or paid for the lands, &c. within twenty yeares next before such lease made (5). Hereby first it appeareth (as hath beene said) that nothing can be demised by authority of this act, but that whereout a rent may be lawfully reserved. Secondly, that where not onely a yearly rent was formerly reserved, but things not annuall, as heriots, or any fine or other profit at or upon the death of the farmor, yet if the yearly rent be reserved upon a lease made by force of this statute, it sufficeth by the expresse words of the act. Thirdly, if he reserve more then the accustomed rent it is good also by the expresse letter of the act; but if twenty acres of land have beene accustomedly letten, and a lease is made of those twenty, and of one acre which was not accustomedly letten, reserving the accustomedly yearly rent, and so much more as exceeds the value of the other acre, this lease is not warranted by the act, for that the accustomed rent is not reserved, seeing part was not accustomedly letten, and the rent issueth out of the whole. Fourthly, if tenant in taile let part of the land accustomedly letten, and reserve a rent pro rata, or more, this is good, for that is in substance the accustomed rent. Fifthly, if two coparceners be tenants in taile of twenty acres every one of equall value, and accustomedly letten, and they make partition, so as each have ten acres, they may make leases of their severall parts each of them, reserving the halfe of the accustomed rent. Sixthly, if the accustomed rent had beene payable at foure daies or feasts of the yeare, yet if it be reserved yearly payable at one feast, it is sufficient, for the words of the statute be, reserved yearly.

Ninthly, nor to any lease to be made without impeachment of waste. Therefore if a lease be made for life, the remainder for life, &c. this is not warranted by the statute, because it is dishonourable of waste. But if a lease be made to one during three lives, this is good, for the occupant, if any happen, shall be punished for waste (6). The words of the statute be (feised in the right of his church) yet a bishop that is feised jure episcopatus, a deane of his sole possessions in jure decanatus, an archdeacon in jure archidiaconatus, a prebendary and the like are within the statute, for every of them generally is feised in jure ecclesie (7).

But a parson and vicar are excepted out of the statute of 32. H. 8. and therefore if either of them make a lease for three lives, &c. of lands accustomedly letten, reserving the accustomed rent, it must be also confirmed by the patron and ordinary, because it is excepted out of 32. H. 8. (8). and not restrained by the statutes of primo or 13. Eliz. And what hath beene said concerning a lease for three lives, doth hold a lease for one and twenty yeares.

Thus much shall suffice to have spoken of the inabling statute of 32. H. 8. the better to inable the reader to understand both this and that which followes. Now to speake somewhat of the disabling statutes of 1. Eliz. and 13. Eliz. (9). the words of the exception out of the restraint and disability of 1. Eliz. are, Other than for the terme of twenty one yeares, or three lives, from such time as any such grant or assurance shall be given, whereupon the old and accustomed yearly rent, or more, shall be reserved: And to that effect is the exception in the statute of 13. Eliz. First, it is to be understood that neither of these disabling acts, nor any other, do in any sort alter or change the inabling statute of 32. H. 8. but leaveth it for a pattern in many things for leases to be made by others. Secondly, it is to be knowne, that no lease made according to the exception of 1. Eliz. or 13. Eliz. and not warranted by the statute of 32. H. 8. if it be made by

(1) Feme covert tenant for life; reversion in tail; husband surrenders; tenant in tail leases for three lives; the wife dies. Adjudged, that this is a good lease to bind the issue. Sydenham and Cops cited by Popham. Mo. 783. Hal. MSS.—(2) M. 29. 30. Eliz. Clench v. 38. Grindal's case. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. 4. Leon. 78. 1. And. 65. and Mo. 107. and the observations upon it in New Abr. Leases E. rule 3—(3) But if tithes have been usually lett to farm, they cannot be leased for life to bind the successor; but they may be leased for 21 years, rendering the antient rent, and it shall bind the successor. Mo. 778. T. 2. Jac. B. R. Adjudged in Denny's case, and the rent goes with the reversion. Nota, it was the case of the precentor of Paul's. Hal. MSS.—See New Abr. Leases E. rule 5 where many authorities are cited to prove this difference between leasing tithes for life and for years, and that in the latter case the lease will bind the successor because he may have debt for the rent, which will not lie for him on a freehold lease. But the distinction is no longer of any importance; for the 5. G. 3. c. 17. makes leases of tithes and other incorporeal hereditaments by ecclesiastical persons, whether for lives or for years, as good as if the leases were of corporeal hereditaments, and gives action of debt to the successor for rent reserved on freehold leases.—(4) Lease by the king during vacancy of bishoprick will not enable. P. 19. Jac. B. R. Denny's case. Vid. Dy. 271. Hal. MSS.—(5) 6. Rep. 37. T. 3. Jac. Crook n. 6. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Jam. 76.—(6) Prebend makes lease for years, reserving the running of a cult, rendering rent. A new lease, rendering the same rent, without reserving the running of a cult, adjudged good; because quoad this it is neither reservation nor exception. But if lease be of a manor except the woods rendering rent, and after the expiration of it there is a new lease rendering the same rent without such exception, the second lease is bad. T. 18. Jac. B. R. case of precentor of Paul's. Hal. MSS.—(7) Vid. for leases by bishop tenant in tail, &c.—A feised in tail of a manor, of which three acres parcel of the demelnes had been usually demised at 5 s. rent, and the residue not, demises the three acres and also the manor habendum for 21 years, rendering for the three acres and all other the premises therewith demised 5 s. and for the manor 5 s. This is good to bind the issue for the three acres, but not for the residue. H. 37. Eliz. Tanfield and Rogers—The bishop of G. feised of a manor, of which one tenement was usually demised for life at 5 s. rent and the manor usually at 10 s. rent, makes lease of the tenement for three lives, rendering 5 s. and afterwards leases the whole manor for three lives to another rendering rent, and dies. Ruled 1. That the reversion of the tenement passes by the lease of the manor. 2. And therefore that the lease of the manor quoad the tenement shall not bind the successor, because then there would be six lives in being for the tenement, and the lessee would be dishonourable of waste. 3. It seems, that the lease of the manor is also voidable, because the rent issues also out of the tenement. (Quare of this, for here the rent as well for the tenement as for the manor is reserved on the second lease, so that though the tenement should be evicted the entire rent for the manor would continue.) 4. But it was agreed, that the lease of a copyhold manor usually demised, or of a manor consisting of demelnes copyholds and services usually demised, is good to bind the successor. 5. The lease is only voidable by the successor; and therefore if he accepts the rent, it is good against him. M. 20. Jac. C. B. Bishop of Gloucester against Wood, M. 5. Car. C. B. Sheir and Penter on lease by the bishop of Exeter. Hal. MSS.—(8) Prebend simple or prebend with office, as is precentor, is enabled by the statute 32. H. 8. Adjudged Bro. Leases 62. M. 36. 37. Eliz. Watson and Major. T. 18. Jac. case of precentor of Paul's. Hal. MSS.—(9) Nota, these disabling statutes extend by a bishop, or any sole corporation, but it must be confirmed by the deanes and chapters, (Cro. Eliz. 874.) or others that have interest, as hath been said in the case of the parson and vicar, but examples doe illustrate. If a bishop make a lease for 21 yeares; and all those yeares being spent saving three or more; yet may the bishop make a new lease to another for twenty one yeares, to begin from the making, according to the exception of the statute, but not a lease for life or lives, as hath beene said, and this concurrent lease hath been resolved to be good (1), as well upon the exception of 1. Eliz. in the case of bishops, as upon 13. Eliz. (2) which extend to spirituall and ecclesiasticall corporations, aggregate of many, as deanes and chapters, &c. which 32. H. 8. did not: but in the case of the concurrent lease, in the case of the bishop it must be confirmed. Also the exception of 1. Eliz. and 13. Eliz. doth differ from the statute of 32. H. 8. for the leases for yeares to be made according to the exceptions of the statutes of 1. and 13. Eliz. must begin from the making, and not from the day of the making, but by force of 32. H. 8. from the day of the making. And although the statutes of the first or thirteenth of Eliz. doe not appoint the lease to be made by writing, yet must it therein and in the other eight properties or qualities before mentioned and required by 32. H. 8. follow the patterne thereof (the concurrent lease onely except). (3) Although the exception in 1. and 13. Eliz. concerning the accustomed rent is more generall then that of 32. H. 8. and there is not any provision for leases made dispunishable of waste, &c. yet must the patterne of 32. H. 8. be followed: for leases without impeachment of waste made by such spirituall and ecclesiasticall persons are unreasonable and causes of dilapidations. Thus much have I thought good to lead the studious reader by the hand, and to conduct him in the right way, and to put all these things together upon consideration had of all the statutes, which otherwise might have prima facie seemed to him a diffuse and darke laborinth. And albeit it be provided by the said acts of 1. and 13. Eliz. that all grants, &c. leases, &c. made, &c. (other then leases for three lives, or one and twenty yeares according to those acts) should be utterly voyd and of none effect, to all intents, constructions and purposes, yet grants, or leases, &c. not warranted by those acts are not voyd, but good against the lessor, if it be a sole corporation: or so long as the deane or other head of the corporation remaine, if it be a corporation aggregate of many (4): for the statute was made in benefit of the successor (5). But let us now returne to our author.

(Cro. Eliz. 874.)

(1. And. 65.)

(1. Leon. 59.)

3. Co. 59. 60. Lincolne Colledge case. p. 39. Eliz. Inter Hunt and Singleton ibidem.

Home lesse. Here Littleton putteth this case where one letteth, &c. It is therefore necessary to be seen what the law is where divers joyne in a lease. If the tenant of the land, and a stranger which hath nothing in the land joyne in a lease for yeares by deed indented of one and the self-same land, this is the lease of the tenant onely, and the confirmation of the stranger, and yet the lease as to the stranger workes by conclusion (6).

(2. Ro. Ab. 64.)

Vide sect. 146. 11. H. 4. 1. 3. E. 4. 2. 27. H. 8. 16.

If two severall tenants of severall lands, joyne in a lease for yeares by deed indented, these be severall leases and severall confirmations of each of them, from whom no interest passeth, and worke not by way of conclusion in any sort, because severall interests passe from them (7). B tenant for life of C, and he in the remainder or reversion in fee, having severall estates in the one and the same land, joyne in a lease for yeares by deed indented, this demise shall worke in this sort, during the life of C it is the lease of B, and confirmation of him in the reversion or remainder, and after the decease of C it is the lease of him in the reversion or remainder, and the confirmation of B; for seeing the lessors have severall estates, the law shall construe the lease to move out of both their estates respectively, and every one to let that which he lawfully may let, and not to be the lease onely of tenant for life, and the confirmation of him in the remainder or reversion, neither is there any conclusion in this case, as shall be said hereafter. Tenant for life and he in the remainder in fee, made a lease for yeares by deed indented, the lessee was ejected, and brought an ejectione firmæ, and declared upon a demise made by tenant for life and him in remainder, and upon not guilty pleaded, this speciall matter was found, and that tenant for life was living, and it was adjudged [a] against the pl^r, for during the life of the tenant (as hath been said) it is the lease of the tenant for life, and therefore during his life he ought to have declared of a lease made by him, and after his decease he ought to declare of a lease made by him in remainder (8). [b] And the deed indented could be no estoppel in this case, because there passed an interest from them both. And whensoever any interest passeth from the party, there can be no estoppel against him, and [c] so it was adjudged. Hereby you shall understand your bookes the better which treat of those matters, and accordingly it was adjudged that where tenant in taile and he in the remainder in fee joynd in a grant of a rent charge by deed in fee, and after tenant in taile died without issue, the grantee distrained and avowed by force of a graunt from him in the remainder, and upon non concessit, the jury found the speciall matter, and it was adjudged for the avowant; for every one granted according to his estate and interest.

(1. Ro. Abr. 877. Mo. 72. 1. Leon. 177. Cro. El. 701. 6. Co. 15. Treport's case. Doc. Pl. 93.)

[a] 27. H. 8. f. 13. a. 13. H. 7. 14. 2. H. 5. 7. 1. Co. 76. Breton's case. [Post. 502. b.]

[b] Mich. 36. & 37. Eliz. in the King's Bench. Vide Mich. 6. & 7. Eliz. Dier 234. 235.

[c] Hill. 44. Eliz. Rot. 1459 in Communi Banco inter Ellice & Cowne.

Leases for lives or yeares are of three natures, some be good in law; some be voydable by entry, extend only to their own possessions. The archdeacon of Ely 12. Eliz. makes lease for 30 yeares, which after the statute 13. Eliz. is confirmed by the bishop and dean and chapter. Ruled, that this is a good lease to bind the successor, though after the statute 1. Eliz. and though confirmed after the statute 13. Eliz. H. 37. Eliz. Rot. 881. Sir Edward Denny's case. Hal. MSS.

(1) Accordingly adjudged, though the concurring lease was to commence a datu indenturæ. T. 21. Eliz. Rot. 124. Fox and Collier. M. 22. 23. Eliz. C. B. Rot. 2409. Scot and Brewster. H. 22. Jac. B. R. Rot. 11. Evans and Ascu adjudged T. 3. Car. P. 35. Eliz. W. 14. Southcot's case. Hal. MSS.—(2) Nota, the statute 13. Eliz. chap. 10. *quoad tenements in cities is altered by the statute 14. Eliz. chap. 11. which permits leases of them for 40 yeares; and therefore it has been ruled, that covenants for renewing leases of messuages in cities are not prohibited by the statute 13. Eliz. chap. 11. which only restrains leases against the statute of 13. Eliz. Hob. case 352. Crane and Taylor. Hal. MSS. See Hob. 269.—(3) H. 44. Eliz. C. B. n. 14. D. D. Bishop of Hereford against Scory. Adjudged accordingly, where the land had not been usually demised. Hal. MSS.—(4) Nota, lease for three lives by bishop, not warranted by the statute, is not voidable against himself, but shall bind him. M. 44. 45. Eliz. C. B. D. D. n. 32. Saunders's case. And it is not void, but only voidable against the successor, for if he accepts the rent the lease is good against him. M. 8. Car. C. B. Crook n. 21. Owen and App-Rees. But lease by A dean of B and his chapter not warranted is void immediately against A himself. Adjudged so, because the corporation is aggregate. M. 13. Car. B. R. Lloyd and Gregory. Hal. MSS.—The case of Lloyd and Gregory is reported in Cro. Cha. 501. W. Jo. 405. 1. Ro. Abr. 728. and 2. Ro. Abr. 495. But none of these books mention the point to which lord Hale cites the case. See New Abr. Leases H. where several authorities besides that of lord Coke are cited to shew, that a lease by a corporation aggregate, though not warranted by the statutes, is good for the time of the person who was head of the corporation when the lease was made. See also ante 43. a. n. 1.—(5) See further as to leases by tenants in tail, husband and wife, and ecclesiastical persons in Vin. Abr. tit. Estates and tit. Confirmation, and New Abr. tit. Leases; which title in the latter book is generally attributed to lord chief baron Gilbert, and comprises a most copious and excellent treatise on a very difficult and extensive subject.—(6) 2. H. 5. 7. by Affr. Hal. MSS.—(7) And therefore where the declaration in ejectment was of a joint demise of A and B, and on the evidence it appeared, that they were tenants in common, the plaintiff failed. M. 3. Jac. Blakasper's case. Noy n. 43. Hal. MSS. See Noy 13.—(8) Intratur H. 34. Eliz. Rot. 72. King and Brny.—Hal. MSS.*

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 58.

(3. Co. 64. b.)

[d] 32. H. 8. cap. 28.

(Flow. 264. b. Cro. Ja. 173)

[e] 33. H. 8. Dier 3. Co. 59.
60. in Lincoln Co ledge case,
Hant's case vouched.
(1. Ro. Abr. 848.)

Pl. Com. Wroteff, 198. 33. H. 8.
tit. exposition des parols 44. 8. Co.
145. in Davenport's case (5. Co.
7. 1. Co. 154. 274. 1. Ro. 849.)

[f] 1. Co. 154. in the Rector of Chedington's case.

[g] Vide Sect. 531.

[h] Register F. N. B. 270. e.

[i] 8. H. 6. 34.

[k] 14. H. 8. 14. 3. Mar. leases Br.
67. 2. Mar. ibid. 67. Say and Fuller's case. Pl. com. 273. and Welden's case ibid. 4. H. 6. 12.
21. H. 7. 38. Vid le case del evesque de Bathe. 6. Co. 34. 35.
Bract. lib. 2. cap. 9. Vid. 1. Co.
155. 156. Rector de Chedington's case.
(1. Ro. Ab. 848. 849.)

Bract. lib. 2. cap. 9. See resolved
Hill 26. Eliz. Rot. 935. in com.
Banco.

Pl. com. Say and Fuller's case.
Mirror ca. 2. sect. 17. & cap. 5.
sect. 1.

entry, and some voyd without entry. Of such as be good in law, some be good at the common law as made by tenant in fee, whereof Littleton here putteth his case, some by act of parliament, as tenant in taile, a bishop seised in fee in the right of his church alone without his chapter, a man seised in fee simple or fee taile in the right of his wife together with his wife, (as hath beene said) may by deed indented make leases for 21 yeares or three lives in such manner and forme as hath beene said and by the statute [d] is limited, all which were voydable by the common law when Littleton wrote, and now are made good by parliament.

An infant seised of land holden in socage, may by custome make a lease at his age of 15 yeares, and shall binde him, which lease was voydable by the common law; (1) voydable, some by the common law, after the death of the leasor as of tenant in taile a bishop, &c. or after the death of the husband (intended of leases not warranted by the said statute of 32. H.
8.) Some voydable by act of parliament, as by a bishop though it be confirmed by deane and chapter, if it be not warranted by the statute of 32. H. 8. and so of a deane and chapter after the death of the deane; some voydable at times by the lessor himselfe or his heires, as by an infant and the like. Some voyde in futuro, and some voyde in presenti. In futuro, as if a tenant in taile make a lease for yeares and die without issue, it is voyde, as to them in reversion or remainder, though it be made [e] according to the said statute. If a prebend, parson or vicar make a lease for yeares, it is voyde by death; if it be not according to the statutes. Otherwise it is of a lease for life, for that is voidable, et sic de similibus.

Some voyde in presenti, as if one make a lease for so many yeares as he shall live, this is voyde in presenti for the incertainty. Et sic in similibus, whereof Littleton himselfe will teach you next and immediately, and I know you would now gladly heare him.

Pur terme. Pro termino, terminus in the understanding of the law doth not onely signifie the limits and limitation of time, but also the estate and interest that passeth for that time.
As if a man make a lease for twenty one yeares, and after make a lease to begin a fine et expi- ratione prædicti termini 21 annorum dimissit, and after the first lease is surrendered, the second lease shall begin presently, but if it had beene to begin Post finem et expirationem prædicti 21 annorum, in that case although the first terme had beene surrendered, yet the second lease should not begin till after the 21 yeares be ended by effluxion of time, and so note the diversities betweene the terme for 21 yeares, and 21 yeares; and [f] herewith agreeth the lord Paget's case.

[g] Words to make a lease be, demise, grant, to searme let, betake, and whatsoever word amounteth to a grant may serve to make a lease. In the king's case [h] this word Committo doth amount sometime to a grant, as when he saith Committimus W. de B. officium senescallie, &c. quamdum nobis placuerit, and by that word also he may make a lease: and [i] therefore à fortiori a common person by that word may doe the same.

De certaine ans. For regularly in every lease for yeares the terme must have a certaine beginning, and a certaine end, and herewith [k] agreeth Bracton, terminus annorum certus debet esse et determinatus. And Littleton is here to be understood, first, that the yeares must be certaine when the lease is to take effect in interest or possession. For before it takes effect in possession or interest, it may depend upon an incertainty, viz. upon a possible contin-gent before it begin in possession or interest, or upon a limitation or condition subsequent. Secondly, albeit there appeare no certainty of yeares in the lease, yet if by reference to a certainty it may be made certaine it sufficeth, Quia id certum est quod certum reddi potest. For example of the first. If A seised of lands in fee grant to B, that when B payes to A xx shillings, that from thenceforth he shall have and occupie the land for 21 yeares, and after B payes the xx shillings, this is a good lease for 21 yeares from thenceforth. For the second, if A lease his land to B for so many yeares as B hath in the mannor of Dale, and B hath then a terme in the manner of Dale for 10 yeares, this is a good lease by A to B of the land of A for 10 yeares. If the parson of D make a lease of his glebe for so many yeares as he shall be parson there, this cannot be made certaine by any meanes, for nothing is more uncertaine then the time of death, Terminus vite est incertus, et licet nihil certius sit morte, nihil tamen incertius est hora mor- tis (2). But if he make a lease for three yeares, and so from three yeares to three yeares, so long as he shall be parson, this is a good lease for 6 yeares, if he continue parson so long, first for three yeares, and after that for three yeares; and for the residue uncertaine (3).

If a man maketh a lease to I. S. for so many yeares as I. N. shall name, this at the beginning is uncertaine, but when I. N. hath named the yeares, then it is a good lease for so many yeares.

A man maketh a lease for 21 yeares if I. S. live so long, this is a good lease for yeares, and yet is certaine in incertainty, for the life of I. S. is uncertaine. See many excellent cases concerning this matter put in the said case of the bishop of Bath and Wells. By the ancient law of England for many respects a man could not have made a lease above 40 yeares at the most, for then

(1) Heretofore some made a difference between leases by infants with reservation of rent and those without, and thought that the former were only voidable, but that the latter were absolutely void. New Abr. Leases B. But in a late case this distinction was denied, and it was said, that leases whether with or without rent, if made by deed, are voidable only. Burr. 4. part v. 3. page 1806.

(2) But if livery is made on such a lease, perhaps it may be sufficient to pass a freehold to the lessee during the life or incumbency of the lessor. See New Abr. tit. Leases L. 2.

(3) But vid. Noy fol. 143. n. 635. Lease from three years to three years till the expiration of ten years shall be a lease for nine years, and the law rejects the last year, because not computed by three.—Hal. MSS. See New Abr. tit. Leases L. 3. page 433.

then was it said that by long leases many were prejudiced, and many times men disinherited, but that ancient law is antiquated (1).

In the eye of the law any estate for life being, as Littleton hath said, an estate of freehold, against whom à præcipe quod reddat doth lye, is an higher and greater estate then a lease for yeares, though it be for a thousand or more, which never are without suspicion of fraud, and they were the lesse valuable, for that at the common law they were subject unto, and under the power of the tenant of the freehold, the learning whereof standeth thus, and is worthy to be knowne. When Littleton wrote, if a man had made a lease for yeares by writing, and he that had the freehold had suffered himselfe to be impleaded in a reall action by collusion to bar the lessee of his terme, and made default, &c. the statute of Glouc^r gave the lessee for yeares some remedy by way of receipt, and a triall whether the demandant did move the plea by good right or collusion, and if it were found by collusion, then the termor should enjoy his tearme, and the execution of the judgement should stay untill after the tearme ended (2). But this statute extended not to 5 cases. First, if the lease were without writing, for the words of this act are, (so that the termor may have recovery by writ of covenant.) 2. It extended not but to a recovery by default (3). 3. The termor could not be relieved by this statute, unless he knew of the recovery, and were received, &c. 4. By the better opinion of bookes, it extended not to tenants by statute merchant, statute staple, or elegit. 5. Not to gardian. [1] But now the statute of 21. H. 8. doth give remedy in all the said cases saving the case of the gardian, and giveth them power to falsifie all manner of recoveries had against the tenants of the freehold upon fained and untrue titles, &c. Now the [m] statute saith, that it was a doubt before that statute whether a termor for yeares might falsifie or no: but yet it seemeth by the better opinion of bookes in so great variety, that he having but a chattell, was not able by the common law to falsifie a covenous recovery of the freehold, because he could not have the thing that was recovered (4).

11. Co. 33.

[1] 21. H. 8. ca. 15.

[m] That a termor might falsifie at the Common Law Vid. 10. E. 3. Aff. 82. 21. E. 3. 1. 7. H. 7. 11. b. 1. H. 7. 9. b. Pl. Com. 83. 10. E. 3. 46. 19. E. 3. re- scit 112. That he could not. 30. H. 6. Fauver recovery 9. 43. Aff. 41. 26. H. 8. 2. 9. E. 4. 38. F. N. B. 198. E. 14. H. 8. 4. 9. Co. fo. 135. Alcoughe's case. [n] 7. H. 4. 12. 33. H. 8. Dier 52.

[n] And Thirning and Hankford doe hold that a gardian is not within the statute of Glouc^r. If two coparceners be, and one of them let her part to another for yeares, and after upon a writ of partition brought against the lessor too little is allotted to the lessor, it is holden by some that the lessee cannot avoid it, for that it is made by the oath of men, and judgement is thereupon given that the partition shall remaine firme and stable. But if there be two coparceners of three acres of land, every one of equal value, and the one coparcener letteth her part, and make after partition, and one acre is allotted onely to the lessor, the lessee is not bound hereby, but he may enter and take the profits of another halfe acre, for that of right belongs unto him (5). Thus much have I thought good to set downe, for it sufficeth not to know what the law is in these cases, unless he understand the reason and cause thereof.

And albeit (as hath beene said) a lease for yeares must have a certaine beginning, and a certaine end, yet the continuance thereof may be incertaine, for the same may cease and revive againe in divers cases (6). As if tenant in taile make a lease for yeares reserving xx. shillings, and after take a wife and dye without issue, now as to him in the reversion the lease is meerly void; but if he indow the wife of tenant in taile of the land, (as she may be though the estate taile be determined) now is the lease as to the tenant in dower (who is in of the state of her husband) [a] revived againe as against her, for as to her the estate taile continueth, for she shall be attendant for the third part of the rent services, and yet they were extinct by act in law. So it is if tenant in taile make a lease for yeares ut supra, and dyeth without issue, his wife enseint with a sonne, he in the reversion enter, against him the lease is void, but after the sonne be borne the lease is good, if it be made according to the [b] statute, and otherwise is voydable.

(7. Co. 9. a. 1. Ro. Ab. 842.)

[a] 10. E. 3. 26. 34. Aff. 15. 23. E. 3. Dower 130. (7. Co. 3. b.)

[b] 32. H. 8. ca. 28.

The king made a gift in taile of the mannor of Eastfarleigh in Kent, to W to hold by knights service; W made a lease to A for thirty six yeares, reserving thirteene pound rent; W died, his son and heire of full age. All this was found by office. As to the king this lease is not of force, for he shall have his primer seisin, as of lands in possession, but after livery, the lessee may enter; and if the issue in taile accept the rent, the lease shall binde him, for the king's primer seisin shall not take away the election of the issue in taile, for it may be that the rent was better then the land: [c] and so it was adjudged in Awlten's case, as I had it of the report of master Edmond Plowden, a grave and learned apprentice of law.

(1. Ro. Ab. 842.)

[c] Pasch. 2. & 3. Ph. & Mar in an information of In- trusion in the Exchequer against Austen. Vid Dier pasch. 2. & 3. Ph. & Mar. 115. 13. Eliz. ca. 10.

[d] 6. E. 6. Dier 72. (Cro. Car. 552.) 17. E. 3. 52. 17. Aff. p. 17. 2. R. 3. 20. 9. H. 6. 33. (Hob. 7.)

(Hob. 225. 10. Co. 43.)

If tenant in fee take wife, and make a lease for yeares, and dieth, the wife is endowed, she shall avoid the lease, but after her decease the lease shall be in force againe. But if the patron grant the next avoydance, and after parson, patron, and ordinary, before the statute, [d] had made a lease of the glebe for yeares, and after the parson dieth, and the grantee of the next avoydance had presented a clerke to the church, who is admitted, instituted, and inducted, and dieth within the terme; the patron presents a new clarke, and he is admitted, instituted, and inducted, albeit he commeth in under the patron that was party to the lease, yet because the last incumbent, who had the whole state in him, avoyded the lease, it shall not revive againe, no more than if a feme covert levy a fine alone, if the husband enter and avoyd the fine, and dye, the whole estate is so avoyded as it shall not binde the wife after his death (7).

It

(1) See 2. Blackst. Comment. 5th edit. p. 142. It is there observed, that it appears by Mr. Madox's collection of ancient instruments in his Formulare Anglicanum, that the law against leases for more than 40 years, if it ever existed, was soon antiquated; and several instances of leases for a longer term, as early as the reign of Richard the Second, are referred to.

(2) Yet videtur, that the recoveror shall have wast. 27. H. 8. 7. Keilw. 108. But reversioner being received in default of tenant for life, no judgment against tenant for life, if a good bar pleaded. Hal. MSS.

(3) Or reddition. 16. H. 7. 5. 21. H. 7. 25. 5. H. 7. 39. 8. H. 7. 6. 12. H. 8. 7. 27. H. 8. 7. 11. E. 4. 10. or on nihil dicit, or disclaimer. 9. E. 4. 37. by Danby, or on default of the vouchee at the grand cape or sequatur sub periculo. 9. E. 4. 38. Hal. MSS.

(4) Vid. 27. H. 8. 7. 21. H. 7. 25. Grantee of rent-charge for years might falsify recovery against terre tenant. Hal. MSS.

(5) Vid. 24. E. 3. 54. If parceners be of two acres, and one leases one acre, which on writ of partition is allotted to the other, the lease is wholly avoided. Hal. MSS.

(6) Vid. 7. Rep. the earl of Bedford's case. Hal. MSS.

(7) Adjudged accordingly Cro. Cha. Plowden v. Oldford 582. But in Hill. 10. Eliz. C. B. E. 233. adjudged, that the lease revived. Polydore Virgil's case. Hal. MSS.

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 58.

2. E. 3. 8. per Scroope;
(1. Ro. Ab. 240. 247.)

Pl. Com. 437. a.
(1. Ro. Ab. 831. 842. 843. 1.
Sid. 260. 261.)

(1. Ro. Ab. 403. Cro. Car. 110.
400.)

V. Sect. 454. 455.

(Cro. Ja. 60. 5. Co. 124.)

V. Sect. 665. more fully of this matter. (Hob. 3.)

(1. Ro. Abr. 344. 345. Plow. 191.)

Hil. 17. El. in the king's Bench.
(Post. 351. 10. Co. 51. Hutt. 17.)

37. Aff. p. 11. Pl. Com. 418. b.
(1. Ro. Rep. 359.)

5. Co. 1. Clayton's case. 12.
Eliz. Dyer 286.
(2. Ro. Ab. 520. Cro. Ja. 135.
Post. 255. a.)
14. El. Dy. 307. 5.
El. Dy. 218.
(1. Ro. Ab. 849. 850. Cro.
Cha. 78.)

2. Co. 3. Goddard's case.

[a] Pl. Com. 148. 3. E. 6. tit.
Leases Br. 62. 3. El. Dy. 195.
1 Mar. Dyer. 116. (Cro. Car.
400. 2 Ro. Ab. 52. 1. Ro. Ab.
849. 1. Sid. 460.)

If a woman be endowed of an advowson which is appropriated, and she present, and her incumbent is admitted, instituted, and inducted, albeit the incumbent dye, yet is the appropriation wholly dissolved, because the incumbent, which came in by presentation, had the whole state in him, and so was it adjudged, as the case is to be intended (1).

Tenant in taile make a lease for forty yeares, reserving a rent, to commence ten yeares after; tenant in taile dye, the issue enter and enfeoffe A, ten yeares expire, the lessee enter, if A accept the rent, the lease is good, for he shall have the same election that the issue in taile had, either to make it good, or to avoid it, so as it could not be precisely affirmed, whether by the entry of the issue this executory lease was avoided, but it dependeth incertainly upon the will of the feoffee (2). But now I know you are desirous to heare Littleton, who is speaking to you.

Et quant le lessee enter per force del lease, donques il est tenant pur terme des ans. And true it is, that to many purposes he is not tenant for yeares until he enter: as a release made to him is not good to him to increase his estate, before entry; but he may release the rent reserved before entry, in respect of the privity. Neither can the lessor grant away the reversion by the name of the reversion, before entry; vide Sect. 567. But the lessee before entry hath an interest, interesse termini grantable to another. vide Sect. 319. And albeit the lessor dye before the lessee enters, yet the lessee may enter into the lands, as our author himselfe holdeth in this chapter. And so if the lessee dyeth before he entred, yet his executors or administrators may enter, because he presently by the lease hath an interest in him: and if it be made to two, and one dye before entry, his interest shall survive. Vid. Sect. 281.

He that hath a lease for yeares, hath it either in his owne right, whereof Littleton hath here spoken, or in another's right, and that in divers manners, as a man may have a terme for yeares in the right of his wife, whereof the husband hath power to dispose at any time during his life, and if he surviveth his wife, the law doth give the lease to him. But if he make no disposition thereof, and his wife survive him, it remaineth with the wife: but of this in another place more fully.

If a man be possessed of a terme of forty yeares in the right of his wife, and maketh a lease for twenty yeares, reserving a rent, and die, the wife shall have the residue of the terme, but the executors of the husband shall have the rent, for it was not incident to the reversion; for that the wife was not party to the lease (3). So note, a disposition of part of the terme is no disposition of the whole. But if the husband grant the whole terme, upon condition that the grantee shall pay a summe of money to his executors, &c. the husband die, the condition is broken, the executors enter, this is a disposition of the terme, and the wife is barred thereof, for the whole interest was passed away (4).

If a lease be made to a baron and feme for terme of their lives, the remainder to the executors of the survivor of them, the husband grant away this terme and dieth, this shall not barr the wife, for that the wife had but a possibility, and no interest.

If the husband and wife be ejected of a terme in the right of his wife, and the husband bring an ejectione firmæ in his owne name (5), and have judgement to recover, this is an alteration of the terme, and vesteth it in the husband (6).

If a lease for yeares be made to a bishop and his successors, yet his executors or administrators shall have it in antea dicitur, for regularly no chattell can goe in succession in a case of a sole corporation, no more then if a lease be made to a man and his heires it can goe to his heires. But let us returne to Littleton (7).

Touching the time of the beginning of a lease for yeares, it is to be observed, that if a lease be made by indenture, bearing date 26 Maii, &c. to have and to hold for twenty one yeares, from the date, or from the day of the date (8), it shall begin on the twenty seventh day of May (9). If the lease beare date the twenty sixth day of May, &c. to have and to hold from the making hereof, or from henceforth, it shall begin on the day in which it is delivered, for the words of the indenture are not of any effect till the delivery, and thereby from the making, or from henceforth take their first effect. But if it be à die consecrationis, then it shall begin on the next day after the deliverie. If the habendum be for the terme of twenty one yeares, without mentioning when it shall begin, it shall begin from the deliverie, for there the words take effect, as is aforesaid. If an indenture of lease beare date, which is void or impossible, as the thirtieth day of Februarie, or the fortieth of March, if in this case the terme be limited to begin from the date, it shall begin from the delivery, as if there had been no date at all. [a] And so it is, if a man by his indenture of lease, either recite a lease which is not, or is void, or misrecite a lease in point materiall which is in effect, to have and to hold from the ending of the former lease, this lease shall begin in course of time from the delivery thereof (10).

Et si le lessor en tiel case reserve a luy un annuel rent sur tiel lease, il poet eslier a distreyner pur le rent, ou il poet aver action de debt pur les arerages.

Reserve

(1) Vid. 21. E. 3. Grants 58. Appropriation without licence, and ea de causa it seems a disappropriation. Hal. MSS.—(2) But if it was lease in present by tenant in tail, and the issue before entry levies fines, the lessee shall not avoid the lease, for the lease was only avoidable, and the land passes in degree of reversion. Vid. Dy. 51. 7. Rep. 9. Earl of Bedford's case. Hal. MSS.—(3) Vid. tamen one Evans's case, in which it was adjudged that the wife shall have the rent. Cited by Houghton. 16. Jac. Quære and vid. 7. H. 6. 2. T. 16. Jac. Blaxton and Heath. 2. Poph. n. 38. Hal. MSS. By 2. Poph. lord Hale means the additional cases at the end of Popham's Reports. See Poph. 125. For Blaxton and Heath, see Poph. 145.—(4) If part of a term be granted by husband on condition, it seems that the condition is gone by his death. Quære. A ward changes the property of such a term. Dy. 183. Hal. MSS. See the case in Marg. Dy. 183.—(5) Vide. Husband of wife termor may have petition of right alone. 37. Aff. pl. 11. If husband is guardian in right of his wife, dower lies against the husband alone; for there can be no voucher there against the ward's right. 2. E. 3. 13. 15. 47. E. 3. 9. Hal. MSS.—(6) Vid. 50. E. 3. Judgment for husband in quare impedit for the wife's advowson; the husband dies; the wife presents. Hal. MSS.—(7) Hic fol. 9. a. Hal. MSS.—(8) Vid. for date and day of the date hic fol. 6. a. and the note there. Hal. MSS. In fol. 6. a. lord Hale gives the following note. Date and day of the date the same in point of computation. 5. Rep. But in point of interest date is taken inclusive, day of the date exclusive in many cases. T. 9. Jac. B. R. Buller. n. 177. A on the second of August 1. Jam. makes an obligation to B, and afterwards on the same day B releases all actions usque datum scripti: the obligation is discharged, because date is delivery. Otherwise, if it had been to the day of the date. T. 9. Car. B. R. Rooke and Richards. Condition of obligation to stand to an award, so that it be made within four days after the date: a good award may be made the same day; and so it seems, if it be day of the date. M. 1653. Street's case. Stiles 382. Obligation dated 2. January; release dated 1. January of all actions usque diem hujus presentis temporis, but delivered 3. January: præsens tempus is the date, and so the obligation stood. P. 7. Jac. Hal. MSS. See further as to the difference between date and day of the date. Com. Dig. Estates G. 8. Bargain and Sale. B. 8. Temps A. and Vin. Abr. Estate Z. a. Time A. and Will. vol. 1. part 2. page 165. and the next note.—(9) Vid. for commencement of lease, M. 10. Jac. Rot. 75. Hob. case 32. Moor and Musgrave. A by indenture dated 4. May 10. Jac. to hold from the feast of the annunciation last past for the term of 21 years next ensuing the date hereof fully to be complete and ended. In ejection plaintiff counts on this lease, as a lease to hold from the feast for 21 years ex tunc prox. sequent. and agreed to be good. But see T. 24. Car. B. R. Cornish and Carwsey. Lease by indenture of 25. of March 15. Car. to have and to hold from and after the day of the date of these presents for the term and time of seven years from henceforth next and immediately ensuing, shall commence in computation from the delivery, and in point of interest from the date. Stiles 118. Hal. MSS.—(10) For misrecital a lease shall commence immediately. 6. Rep.

Reserve a luy an annual rent, &c. First it appeareth [b] here by Littleton that a rent must be reserved out of lands or tenements, whereunto the lessor may have resort or recourse to disreine, as Littleton here also faith, and therefore a rent cannot be reserved by a common person (1) out of any incorporeall inheritance, as advowsons, commons, offices, corrodie, mulcture or a mill, tythes, sayres, markets, liberties, priviledges, franchises, and the like. [c] But if the lease be made of them by deed (2) for yeares, it may be good by way of contract to have an action of debt, but disreine the lessor cannot. Neither shall it passe with the grant of the reversion for that it is no rent incident to the reversion (3). But if any rent be reserved in such case upon a lease for life, it is utterly void, for that in that case no action of debt doth lie (4). But if a man demiseth the vesture or herbage of his land, he may reserve a rent, for that the thing is maynorable, and the lessor may disreine the cattell upon the land (5): and so a reversion, or a remainder of lands or tenements may be granted reserving a rent; for the apparent possibility that it may come in possession (6), and they are tenements within the words of Littleton.

[a] It appeareth by Littleton, that reservando is an apt word of reserving a rent, and so is reddendo, solvendo, faciendo, inveniundo, dummodo, and the like (7).

[b] And note a diversity between an exception (which is ever of part of the thing granted and of a thing in esse) for which, exceptis, salvo, prater, and the like be apt words; and a reservation which is alwaies of a thing not in esse, but newly created or reserved out of the land or tenement demised. [c] Poterit enim quis rem dare et partem rei retinere, vel partem de pertinentiis, et illa pars quam retinet semper cum eo est et semper fuit. [d] But out of a generall a part may be excepted, as out of a manor, an acre, ex verbo generali aliquid excipitur, and not a part of a certainty, as out of twenty acres one.

It is further to be observed that the lessor cannot reserve to any other but to himselfe, for Littleton faith, reserve a luy, reserve to himselfe. [e] If two joyntenants be, and they make a lease for yeares by paroll, or deed poll reserving a rent to one of them, this shall enure to them both; but if it be so reserved by deed indented, it shall enure to him alone by way of conclusion.

[f] Littleton here is putting of a case, and not making a lease, for then he would not reserve the rent to him, but to him and his heires, for otherwise the rent shall determine by his death, if he die within the terme (8). [g] But if he reserve a rent generally without shewing to whom shall goe, it shall go to his heires. If he reserve a rent to him and his assignes, yet the rent shall determine by his death, because the reservation is good but during his life. So it is if he reserve a rent to him and his executors it shall end by his death, because the heire hath the reversion, and the rent was incident to the reversion (9). So if a man warrant land to B and his assignes, the assignee must vouch during the life of B, for the warranty continues but only during the life of B, for the warranty is but for life, for want of words of inheritance. But if the warranty be to B, his heires and assignes, so as he hath an inheritance therein, then his assignee shall vouch after his decease. So if the rent be reserved to the lessor, his heires and assignes, so as it be incident to the inheritance, then shall all the assignees of the reversion enjoy the same.

Annual rent. So it is if the rent be reserved every two or three or more yeares (10). Of rents Littleton doth excellently treat hereafter in his chapter of rents, and therefore in this place thus much shall suffice.

A distreyner pur le rent. Here it is necessary to be seene of what things a distresse may be taken for a rent, and how the distresse ought to be demeaned. [b] First it must be of a thing, whereof a valuable propertie is in some body, and therefore dogs, bucks, does (11), conies, and the like that are feræ naturæ (12) cannot be distreyned. Secondly, altho' it be of valuable propertie as a horse, &c. yet when a man or woman is riding on him, or an axe in a man's hand cutting of wood and the like, they are for that time priviledged and cannot be distreyned (13). [c] 3. Valuable things shall not be distreined for rent for benefit and maintenance of trades, which by consequent are for the common-wealth, and are there by authority of law, as a horse in a smith's shop shall not be distreyned for the rent issuing out of the shop, nor the horse, &c. in the hostry, nor the materials in the weaver's shop for making of cloth, nor cloth or garments in a taylor's shop (14), nor sacks of corne or meale in a mill, nor in a market, nor any thing distrayned for damage feasant, for it is in custody of law, and the like.

[k] 4. Nothing shall be distrayned for rent, that cannot be rendered againe in as good plight as it was at the time of the distresse taken (15), as sheaves or shokes of corne or the like cannot be distrayned for rent (16), but for damage feasant they may be distreyned (17). But charretts or carts with corne may be distreyned for rent, for they may be safely restored.

[l] 5. Beasts belonging to the plow (18), averia caruæ, shall not be distreyned (which is the ancient common law of England, for no man shall be distreined by the utensils or instruments of his trade or profession, as the axe of the carpenter, or the bookes of a scholler) while goods

[b] 7. Co. 23. But's case. 10. Co. 59. 60. (Cro. Ia. 173. Post 142. a. 144. a. 5. Co. 3. 2. Saund. 303. 2. Ro. Abr. 446. 5. Co. Mountjoy's case. Noy 60.)

[c] 30. Aff. p. 5. 12. Aff. 20. 20. H. 4. 10. 1. H. 4. 1. 2. 3. 11. H. 4. 82. 19. E. 2. Fines 126. 44. E. 3. 45. 9. Aff. 24. 26. Aff. 60. 14. E. 3. Scir. fac. 122. 5. E. 3. 68. 17. E. 3. 75. 11. H. 4. 40. 3. H. 6. 21. 45. 10. H. 6. 12. 21. H. 6. 11. 5. H. 7. 39. 21. H. 7. 19. 17. E. 2. Ex. 112. 23. El. Dyer 377.

[d] 40. E. 3. 47. 8. E. 3. 67. 21. E. 4. 62. 3. H. 6. 45. 31. Aff. p. 30. 3. Aff. 9. 26. Aff. 66. 32. E. 3. Br. 291. 8. E. 4. 8. 10. El. Dy. 276. Pl. Com. en Browning and Beestons's case fo. 131. 132. &c.

[e] 50. E. 3. 12. 13. Aff. 9. 38. E. 3. 10. 21. E. 3. 4. 34. Aff. 11. 29. E. 3. 14. 3. H. 6. 45. 10. H. 6. 8. 41. 31. H. 6. 1. 35. H. 6. 34. 17. Aff. 14. H. 8. 1. 44. E. 3. 43. Pl. Com. 367. [f] Bract. h. 2. f. 32. b. & f. 249. [g] 9. El. Dy. 264. 38. H. 6. 138. 14. H. 8. 1. 22. E. 3. 8. 2. E. 3. 56. 5. E. 3. 66. 34. Aff. 11. [h] 5. E. 4. 4. 14. E. 3. bre. 282. 8. Co. 70. 71.

[i] Vid. Sect. 314. 215. 216. &c. 10. E. 4. 18. 11. E. 3. Aff. 86. 27. H. 8. 19. 21. H. 7. 25. 30. H. 8. Dy. 45. [j] Mich. 5. Ja. in repl. inter Wood & Edwin Bank le roy. Hil. 33. El. Rot. 1431. in bank le roy inter Richmond and Butcher. (Post 215. b. 2. Ro. Ab. 450. 12. Co. 35. 2. Ro. Ab. 743.)

Vid. for this word Distresse Sect. 136. [b] 14. H. 8. 25. 2. E. 2. tit. Distress 6. R. 2. Reicous 11. 7. E. 3. Avowr. 199. 15. E. 2. Avowr. 2. (1. Ro. Ab. 666. Cro. El. 552.)

[i] 22. E. 4. 49. b. 7. H. 7. 1 b. 22. E. 4. 36. 4. E. 6. tit. Dist. Br. 74 (Cro. El. 596. Noy 181.)

[k] 18. E. 3. 4. a. 11. H. 7. 14. a. 21. H. 7. 39. b. 22. E. 4. 50. b. 2. H. 4. 15. (1. Ro. Abr. 667.)

[l] Okeham 38 39. Bra. lib. 4. f. 217. F. N. B. 60. a. Reg. 57. Flit. lib. 2. ca. 41. Mirr. ca. 2. Sect. 15. 16. 4. E. 3. 1. 29. E. 3. 17.

6. Rep. bishop of Bath's case.—The earl of Oxford by deed dated 10. Feb. 27. H. 8. demises to A for 21 years; and afterwards by indenture, reciting that he by indenture dated 10. Feb. 28. H. 8. had demised to A for 21 years, demises the same land to B habendum for 31 years from and after the expiration surrender or forfeiture of the said lease. It was ruled, that B's lease should commence in computation immediately, because A's lease was misrecited. H. 10. Car. B. R. Crook n. 8. Miller and Manwaringe. But if in case of such a misrecital, the habendum be from and after the demise and indenture made to A, and it is not said the said demise then the second lease shall commence after the true lease notwithstanding the misrecital. M. 1. & 2. P. & M. Rot. 648. Mount and Hodyken Bendl. n. 71. Hal. MSS.—See Cro. Cha. 397. and N. Bendl. 38. See further as to the commencement of leases and the effect of misrecitals in that respect, Sheph. Touchst. 272. New Abr. Leases L. and Vin. Abr. Estate Z. a. and Grant R. 4.

(1) Lord Coke confines the rule to common persons, because the king may reserve rent out of an incorporeal inheritance; the reason of which is, that he by his prerogative can distrain on all the lands of his lessee. 4. New Abr. 192. & 339.—(2) The case of a lease by deed is put, because in general things incorporeal will not pass without deed. Post 48. a. 49. a. 169. a. and ante 9. a.—(3) 12. H. 4. 17. Vid. supra fol. 44. b. the case of the precentor of Paul's, according to which rent on lease for years of tithes is incident to the reversion. Hal. MSS. See ante 44. b. n. 3.—(4) That the common law did not allow debt for rent on freehold leases whilst they continued is certain, though the reason is not quite so clear. See 3. Blackst. 233. It has been accounted for by suggesting, that the remedies by cessavit and distress were deemed sufficient securities for the rent and services. See Gilb. on Rents 93. and Gilb. on the Action of Debt in his Cas. in L. and Eq. 370. But it may be proper to observe, that the cessavit seems to have been first given by the 6. E. 1. c. 4. though the lord's right of seizing the land for subtraction of services, which continued till it was taken away by the 52. H. 3. c. 22. was a remedy in some respects similar, and furnishes occasion for the same observation. See 2. Inst. 295. and Wright's Ten. 197. Note that the 8. Ann. c. 14. now gives debt for rent on a lease for life; on which statute Mr. Serjeant Hawkins queries, whether it doth not extend to leases of incorporeal hereditaments. Hawk. Abr. of Co. Litt. 73.—(5) Quære how assise shall be brought in case of herbage. 17. E. 3. 75. Hal. MSS.—(6) And after the particular estate determined, distress may be made for all arrears. 10. E. 4. 3. Hal. MSS.—(7) Lease for years by indenture, and lesser covenants to pay 5 l. a year; this is a reservation. Dy. 276. H. 6. Car. B. R. Crook n. 1. Drake and Munday. But if there be reddendo rent and the lessee covenants to pay two capons, there it seems to be only covenant. M. 40. 41. Eliz. Bruerton's case. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 207. and Hardr. 326.—(8) Rent, reserved to him and his assigns during the term, or to him his executors and assigns during the term, determines by the lessor's death. T. 2. Car. B. R. Noy n. 412. 12. Co. n. 20. and Hil. 32. Eliz. Richmond's case. Hal. MSS.—See Noy 96. 12. Co. 35. and Cro. Eliz. 217.—But notwithstanding the cases here cited by lord Hale, it was adjudged, whilst he was chief justice of the King's Bench, that the words during the term are of themselves sufficient to carry the rent to the heir, if the lessor is seized in fee, and he concurred in the judgment. See the case of Sacheverell and Frogatt East. 23. Cha. 2. in 2. Saund. 367.—(9) Rendering rent to him his heirs executors and administrators good, and it shall go to the heir. Drake's case supra. Rendering rent to him or his successors good, and the successor shall have it. 5 Rep. Hal. MSS.—(10) See further as to reservation of rent Vin. Abr. title Reservation, and Gilb. Treat. on Rents.—(11) But deer kept in a private inclosure may be distrayned. See 3. Blackst. Com. 8 where the case of Davis v. Powell C. B. Hil. 11. G. 2. is cited.—(12) Some have thought, that a horse, on which

Lib. i. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 58.

[m] 21. H. 7. 26. 3. E. 3. Aff. 46. 9.
 [n] 7. H. 7. 1. b. 10. H. 7. 21. 11. H. 7. 4. a. 15. H. 7. 17. 18. E. 2. avowrie. 219. 6. E. 4. 22. E. 4. 49. 4. E. 3. distres. 18. 27. E. 3. 80. 2. H. 4. 16. (2. Leon. 7. Doct. and Stud. lib. 2. c. 27.)
 [o] Marlebr. cap. 4. W. 1. cap. 16. 2. & 3. Ph. & Mar. cap. 13. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 20. 6. H. 3. axowrie 242. 30. Aff. 38. 1. H. 6. 9. 22. E. 4. 11. F. N. B. 89. Doct. and Stud. lib. 2. cap. 27. 5. H. 7. fol. 9.
 [p] 33. H. 8. tit. distres. Br. 65. (1. Ro. Abr. 673.)
 [q] 4. E. 6. tit. distres. 74. F. N. B. 100. E. (Post 160. b.)

[r] 3. E. 3. tit. transf. 11.

[s] 34. H. 6. 18.

[t] Regist. F. N. B. 100. 107.

(Doct. and Stud. lib. 2. cap. 9.)

(1. Ro. Ab. 601. Post 292. b.)

[u] 7. H. 6. 13. 4. Co. 49. 3. Co. 16. 34. E. 1. tit. Avowrie 233. 32. H. 8. Br. relieve 11. F. N. B. 82. 83. Glanvil lib. 9. cap. 35. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 40. and lib. 3. cap. 14. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 36. W. 1. cap. 35. 25. E. 3. cap. 11. Britton fol. 57. & 70. (Post 3. a. 1. Ro. Abr. 596.)

[x] 45. E. 3. 7. 20. E. 4. 10. 34. H. 6. 48. 35. H. 6. 34. 9. H. 6. 35. 11. H. 4. 22.
 [y] 2. E. 2. Estop. 253. 39. E. 3. 13. Pl. Com. 434. 18. E. 3. 16. 15. E. 3. Estop. 236. 14. H. 4. 32. (Mo. 20.)

[z] 14. H. 6. 23. 8. H. 4. 7.

[a] Resolve. Pasch. 2. Eliz. in Communi Banco. (Cro. Cha. 110.)

[b] Mich. 31. & 32. Eliz. in Communi Banco adjudge in London's case.

[c] 38. H. 6. 24. 30. E. 3. 21.

(1) At common law corn growing could not be distrained, because it adheres to the freehold. 1. Ro. Abr. 666. H. pl. 4. But now by the 11. G. 2. c. 19. landlords are empowered to distrain all sorts of corn, grafs, or other product growing on the estate demised, and to cut and gather them when ripe.—(2) If they escape for want of inclosure by him who ought to repair, they are not distrainable. Alf. 14. Eliz. Dy. 317. The lord cannot distrain beasts which escape, when they are gone out of the land, though they are within view. Vid. 41. E. 3. 26. 14. H. 7. 8. 20. H. 7. 10. 15. H. 7. 17. 2. E. 4. 6. Hal. MSS. See the next note.—(3) This doctrine has been objected to as too general; and several distinctions are taken, the sum of which seems to be, that if a stranger's beasts escape into another's land by default of the owner of the beasts, as by breaking the fences, they may be distrained for rent immediately without being levant or couchant; but that if they escape there by default of the tenant of the land, as for want of his keeping a sufficient fence, then they cannot be distrained for rent or service of any kind till they have been levant and couchant, nor afterwards by a landlord for rent on a lease, unless on notice the owner of the beasts neglects to remove them, tho' it is said, that such notice is not necessary where the distress is by the lord of the fee for an ancient rent or by the grantee of a rent-charge. See this subject argued upon at large in the case of Kimp and Cruves 2. Lutw. 1573.—(4) And now by the 11. G. 2. c. 19. f. 10. persons distraining for rent may impound the distress on any convenient part of the land chargeable with the rent.—(5) Vid. 30. E. 26. where defendant pleads, that he found the cattle sans nul manner de fermeture ne ferrure n'autre engine. Hal. MSS.—(6) For one cannot distrain the same day the rent grows due; but it must be the day after. 21. H. 6. 40. Vid. 14. H. 4. 31. Hal. MSS. By the 8. An. c. 14. rent may be distrained for after determination of the lease in the same manner as before, if the distress is made within six kalendar months afterwards, and during the continuance of the landlord's title and the possession of the tenant from whom the arrears are due.—(7) See further as to distress 3. Blackst. Comment. 6. & 145. and in the several abridgments titles Distress and Replevin, and also Gilbert's Treatise on the Law of Replevins. See also 2. W. & M. c. 5. 8. An. c. 14. 4. G. 2. c. 28. & 11. G. 2. c. 19. These statutes have made great alterations in the ancient law of distress, particularly by empowering persons, who distrain for rent of any kind, to sell the distress for payment of the rent in arrear, if the tenant or owner fails to replevy with sufficient security within five days after taking of the distress and giving the tenant notice of the cause. This improvement of the remedy by distress was first introduced by the 2. W. & M. c. 5. with respect to rents due on demise or contract, and afterwards by the 4. G. 2. c. 28. was extended to rents-secck, rents of allise, and chief rents. Before these two statutes, the remedy by distress was very imperfect; for the distress was merely taken nomine pæne to compel satisfaction, and could not be sold or used for the profit of the person distraining, except in case of the king and in some few other instances. Most of the other changes, made by the statutes since lord Coke's time, have been incidentally hinted at in the preceding notes.—(8) See New Abr. Debt B. and Vin. Abr. Debt O.—(9) Nota this diversity. In pleading a lease, one ought to say, that the lessor was seised and demised; but in count in debt for rent it is good without alledging seisin. 20. E. 3. Barr. 132. 21. H. 7. 32. Hal. MSS.—(10) 13. E. 3. 16. Brief 747. Dy. 122. Martyn and Hardy. Hal. MSS.—(11) Et videtur, that by the purchase of the land, that is turned into a lease in interest, which before was purely an estoppel. Vid. tamen P. 3. Car. C. B. Crook. 2. Ibbam and Morris. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 109.—(12) Vid. 4. H. 6. 7. If disseisee makes lease for years by indenture to disseisor, he shall not have assise during this lease. Hal. MSS.—(13) 30. E. 3. 21. Vid. 14. H. 6. 22. per curiam. But if it be estoppel by matter of record, as by fine, &c. it continues after. 2. E. 4. Hal. MSS.

one is riding, may be distrained for damage feasant. 2. Keb. 596. 1. Sid. 440. But the opinion was extrajudicial, and may be questioned; or other beasts, which Bracton calls animalia (or catalla) otiosa, may be distrained. [m] 6. Furnaces, caudrons or the like fixed to the freehold, or the doores or windowes of a house, or the like, cannot be distrained (1). [n] Lastly, beasts that escape (2) may be distrained for rent, tho' they have not been levant and couchant (3). [o] Note that he that distraines any thing that hath life, must impound them in a lawfull pownd within three miles in the same county, and that is either overt or open, in a pinfold made for such purposes, or in his owne close, or in the close of another by his consent (4). And it is therefore called open, because the owner may give his cattle meat and drinke without trespassse to any other, and then the cattle must be sustained at the perill of the owner. [p] Or it is a pownd covert or close, as to impound the cattle in some part of his house, and then the cattle are to be sustained with meat and drink at the perill of him that distraineth, and he shall not have any satisfaction therefore. But if the distress be of utensils of household, or such like dead goods which may take harme by wet or weather, or be stolne away, there he must impound them in a house or other pownd covert within three miles within the same county, for if he impound them in a pownd overt he must answer for them.

[q] If the distress be taken of goods without cause, the owner may make rescous; but if they be distrained without cause, and impounded, the owner cannot breake the pownd and take them out, because they are then in the custody of the law.

[r] But if a man distraine cattle for damage feasant, and put them in the pownd, and the owner that had common there make fresh suite, and find the doore unlocked (5), he may justifie the taking away of the cattle in a parco fracto. [s] If the owner breake the pownd, and take away his goods, the partie distraining may have his action de parco fracto, and he may also take his goods that were distrained wherefoever he find them, and impound them againe.

It is called a writ de parco fracto of these words in the writ [t] Parcum illum vi et armis frangit. And the forme thereof appears in the Register and F. N. B.

But it is to be observed that for the rent due the last day of the terme, the lessor cannot distraine because the terme is ended (6), and therefore some use to reserve the last halfe yeare's rent, at the feast of the nativite of Saint John Baptist before the end of the terme, so as if the rent be not then paid, he may distraine betweene that and Michaelmasse following (7).

Action de debt. Note a diversitie betweene a rent reserved upon a lease for yeares, reserving a yearely rent: the lessor may have severall actions of debt for every yeare's rent. But upon a bond or contract for payment of several summes, no action of debt lieth till the last day be past (8). But otherwise it is of a recognizance, which see at large and the reason thereof cap. Releases Sect. 512. 513. [u] Note that the lord shall not have an action of debt for relieve or for escuage due unto him, because he hath other remedie; but his executors or administrators shall have an action therefor, because it is now become as a flower false from the stocke, and they have no other remedy. Neither shall the lord have an action of debt for aid, par file marrier, or faire fitz Chivaler, for the cause aforesaid.

Mes en tiel case il covient, que le lessor soit seisie (y) de mesmes les tenements al temps del lease, car est bone plea pur le lessor a dire, que le lessor navoit riens en les tenements al temps del lease. And the reason of this is, for that in every contract there must be quid pro quo, for contractus est quasi actus contra actum, and therefore if the lessor hath nothing in the land, the lessee hath not quid pro quo, nor any thing for which he should pay any rent. And in that case he may also plead, that the lessor non dimisit, and give in evidence the other matter (10).

Si [x] non que le lease soit per fait indent, &c. If the lease be made by deed indented, then are both parties concluded, [y] but if it be by deed poll the lessee is not estopped to say that the lessor had nothing at the time of the lease made. A, lessee for the life of B, makes a lease for yeares by deed indented, and after purchase the reversion in fee. B dieth, A shall avoid his owne lease, for he may confesse and avoid the lease which took effect in point of interest, and determined by the death of B. But if A had nothing in the land, and make a lease for yeares by deed indented, and after purchase the land, the lessor is as well concluded, as the lessee to say that the lessor had nothing in the land (11), and here it worketh only upon the conclusion, and the lessor cannot confesse and avoid as he might in the other case. [z] If a man take a lease of his owne land by deed indented reserving a rent, the lessee is concluded. [a] But if a man take a lease of the herbage of his owne land by deed indented, this is no conclusion, to say that the lessor had nothing in the land, because it was not made of the land itselfe: [b] but if a man take a lease for yeares of his owne land by deed indented, the estoppel doth not continue after the terme ended (12). For by the making of the lease, the estoppel doth grow, and consequently by the end of the lease, the estoppel determineth (13), [c] and that part part of the indenture which belonged to the lessee, doth after the terme ended belong to the (Post. 229. a.) lessor, which should not be if the estoppel continued.

Sect. 59.

ET est ascavoir, que en lease pur terme de ans, per fait ou sans fait il ne besoigne ascun liverie de seisin destre fait al lessee, mes il poit entrer quant il voet per force de mesme le lease. Mes des feoffments faits en pais, ou dones en le taile, ou lease pur term de vie, en tiels cases ou franktenement passera, si ceo soit per fait ou sauns fait, il covient aver un liverie de seisin.

AND it is to be understood, that in a lease for yeares by deed or without deed (1), there needs no livery of seisin to be made to the lessee, but he may enter when he will by force of the same lease. But of feoffments made in the country, or gifts in taile, or lease for terme of life, in such cases where a freehold shall passe, if it be by deed, or without deed, it behoveth to have livery of seisin.

LIVERIE de seisin.

(2) Traditio, or deliberatio seisinæ is a solemnity, that the law requireth for the passing of a freehold of lands or tenements by delivery of seisin thereof. [b] Intervenire debet solennitas in mutatione liberi tenementi, ne contingat donationem deficere pro defectu probationis (3).

And there be two kinds of livery of seisin, viz. a livery in [c] deed, and a livery in law. A livery in deed is when the feoffor taketh the ring of the doore, or turfe or twigge of the land, and delivereth the same upon the land to the feoffee in name of seisin of the land, &c. per hostium et per baspam et annulum vel per fustem vel baculum, &c.

A feised of an house in fee, and being in the house, [d] saith to B, I demise to you

18. E. 3. fo. 16. 41. E. 3. 17. 40. Aff. 10. 2. Aff. 1. 2. E. 3. 4. 41. E. 3. Feoff. 51. Pl. Com. 25. a. & 303. b. Vide Sect. 66. (Post 216.)

[b] Bract. lib. 2. ca. 15.

[c] Bract. lib. 2. ca. 15. & 18. Brit. ca. 33. in fine fo. 87. Flet. lib. 3. cap. 15.

[d] 6. Co. 26. Sharp's case.

[e] See of this more Sect. 60. (2. Ro. Ab. 7.)

41. E. 3. 17. b. 41. Aff. p. 10. 38. Aff. p. 2. 38. E. 3. 11. 39. Aff. p. 12. 26. Aff. 39. 27. Aff. p. 61. 18. E. 3. 16. 6. Co. 26. Sharp's case. (Post. 37. Cro. Jam. 80.)

43. E. 3. tit. Feoff. 51. 35. H. 8. Feoff. Br. (9. Co. 136. b. 1. Leon. 207.)

50. E. 3. Rot. Parlo nu. 30.

(Post 50. a.) 13. E. 3. Estop. 177.

Ibidem. (2. Co. 246. Post 212.)

7. E. 4. 25. 29. Aff. 40. 10. Aff. 19. 43. Aff. 20.

liver

this house for terme of my life; this is a good beginning to limit the state, but here wanteth livery (4). A livery in deed may be done two manner of wayes, by a solemn act and words, as by delivery of the ring or haspe of the doore, or by a branch or twigge of a tree, or by a turfe of the land, and with [e] these or the like words, the feoffor and feoffee both holding the deed of feoffment, and the ring of the doore, haspe, branch, twigge, or turfe: and the feoffor saying, here I deliver you seisin and possession of this house, in the name of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed, according to the forme and effect of this deed. Or by words without any ceremony or act (5), as the feoffor being at the house doore, or within the house, here I deliver you seisin and possession of this house, in the name of seisin and possession of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed, et sic de similibus, or, enter you into this house or land, and have and enjoy it according to the deed; or, enter into the house or land, and God give you joy, or, I am content you shall enjoy this land according to the deed, or the like. For if words may amount to a livery within the view, much more it shall upon the land (6). But if a man deliver the deed of feoffment upon the land, this amounts to no livery of the land, for it hath another operation to take effect as a deed: but if he deliver the deed upon the land in name of seisin of all the lands contained in the deed, this is a good livery; and so are other books intended that treat hereof, that the deed was delivered in name of seisin of that land. Hereby it appeareth, that the delivery of any thing upon the land in name of seisin of that land, though it be nothing concerning the land, as a ring of gold, is good, and so hath it been resolved by all the judges, and so of the like.

If divers parcels of land be conteyned in a deed, and the feoffor delivers seisin of one parcel according to the deed, all the parcels doe passe, albeit he saith not (in name of all, &c.) because the deeth containeth all. And so if there be divers feoffees, and he make livery to one according to the deed, the land passeth to all the feoffees (7), and yet the plainer way is to say (in the name of the whole, or of all the feoffees (8).)

If a man make a charter in fee, and deliver seisin for life secundum formam cartæ, the whole fee simple shall passe, for it shall be taken most strongly against the feoffor. Note that these words (secundum formam cartæ) are understood according to the quantitie and quality of the effectuell estate contained in the deed. If a man make a lease for yeares by deed, and de-

(1) As to the distinction at common law between hereditaments lying in livery, which might be passed for any estate without deed or even writing, and those lying in grant, which could be transferred by deed only, and the alteration of our ancient law by the 29. Ch. 2. c. 3. which requires a deed or writing in most cases, see infra n. 3. ante 9. a. and Post 49. a. 121. b. 169. a. — (2) For the origin and history of the transfer of lands by livery of seisin, see 2. Blackst. Comment. 311. Mad. Formul. Anglic. Dissert. 9. and Spelm. Gloss. and Du Fresn. Gloss. voce investitura. — (3) But since the introduction of uses and trusts and the statute of 27. H. 8. for transferring the possession to the use, the necessity of livery of seisin for passing a freehold in corporeal hereditaments has been almost wholly superseded, and in consequence of it the conveyance by feoffment is now very little in use. Before the statute of uses equitable estates of freehold might be created through the medium of trusts without livery, and by the operation of the statute legal estates of freehold may now be created in the same way. Those who framed the statute of uses evidently foresaw, that it would render livery unnecessary to the passing of a freehold, and that a freehold of such things as do not lie in grant would become transferrable by parol only without any solemnity whatever. To prevent the inconveniences, which might arise from a mode of conveyance so uncertain in the proof and so liable to misconstruction and abuse, it was enacted in the same session of parliament, that an estate of freehold should not pass by bargain and sale only, unless it was by indenture inrolled. See 27. H. 8. c. 16. The objects of this provision evidently were, first to force the contracting parties to ascertain the terms of the conveyance by reducing it into writing; secondly, to make the proof of it easy by requiring their seals to it, and consequently the presence of a witness; and lastly, to prevent the frauds of secret conveyances by substituting the more effectual notoriety of inrollment for the more ancient one of livery. But the latter part of this provision, which if it had not been evaded would have introduced almost an universal register of conveyances of the freehold in the case of corporeal hereditaments, was soon defeated by the invention of the conveyance by lease and release, which sprung from the omission to extend the statute to bargains and sales for terms of years; and the other parts of the statute were necessarily ineffectual in our courts of equity, because these were still left at liberty to compel the execution of trusts of the freehold though created without deed or writing. The inconveniences from this insufficiency of the statute of inrollments are now in some measure prevented by the 29. Ch. 2. c. 3. which provides against conveying any lands or hereditaments for more than three years, or declaring trusts of them, otherwise than by writing. See Post 121. b. — (4) 9. Rep. 13. Thoroughgood's case. Hal. MSS. — (5) 43. Aff. 10. 18. H. 6. 16. A makes charter of feoffment to A, and B being on the land A says, I am content you shall have this house and land according to the deed made to you; it is not livery, because it imports only assent and is future. H. 6. Jac. Munnd's case. Ley n. 3. Hal. MSS. See Ley 2. — (6) But Cro. Jam. 80. and Ley 2. seem contra. — (7) But if it be without deed nothing passes to the others. Dy. 14. 35. Hal. MSS. — (8) 15. E. 4. 18. 18. E. 4. 12. 18. H. 6. 9. 22. H. 6. 1. 40. E. 3. 40. Hal. MSS.

questioned; for 1. Ro. Abr. 664. A. pl. 4. and the case of 7. E. 3. Fitzh. Abr. Avowry 199. are directly contra. See also n. 17. infra, and Cro. Eliz. 549. 596. Some also have inclined to think, that horses drawing a cart loaded with corn, though one be riding in the cart, may be distrained for rent, and for that purpose may be severed from the cart, if the person distraining doth not chuse to take the cart with the corn as well as the horses, all of which as it seems are equally liable to the distress. See 2. Keb. 529. 596. 1. Vent. 36. and 1. Sid. 422. 440. in which latter book the reporter makes a query, whether the man's being

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 59.

(Hob. 171. Plow. 155. 197. 1. Sid. 82. 2. Ro. Ab. 7. 1. Co. 127. 129. Cro. Ja. 376.) Mich. 33. & 34. Eliz. in the King's Bench inter Hogge & Croffe for lands in London. Vid. Pl. Com. 395.
* See more of this Sect. 66. 11. H. 4. 71. 19. Aff. 9. 19. H. 8. 9. b. (2. Ro. Ab. 8. Post. 359. 2. Sid. 61.)

Bridgewater's case.
(Ante 4. b. Post. 190. b.)

Vid. Sect. 7.

38. E. 3. 11. 38. Aff. p. 2. 43. Aff. p. 20. Temps H. 8. Tit. Feoffments Br. 70. 18. E. 3. 16. b. 28. H. 8. F. 18. 9. E. 4. 39. per Moyle. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 18. & lib. 4. fo. 225 a.
(1. Co. 156. Post. 253. a.)

[a] 9. E. 4. 30. 38. E. 3. 11.
[b] 9. E. 4. 28. 40. 5. H. 7. 9. 3. H. 6. tit. Pleint. 1.
11. H. 4. 32. 11. E. 3. Aff. 86.
[c] 38. Aff. p. 23.

[d] Hill. 37. Eliz. Rot. 620. in com. Banco, inter Browne & Terry adjud.
Dyer 16. Eliz. 234.
3. Eliz. Dyer 131.
(6. Co. 26.)

3. Co. 35. inter Jennings & Bragge.

(2. Co. 31. b. 3. Co. 35. b.)

(2. Ro. Ab. 4. Dy. 33. a. Mc. 11.)

2. Co. 31. 32. Bettisworth's case.

liver seisin according to the forme and effect of the deed; yet he hath but an estate for yeares, and the liverie is void as Littleton saith. So if A by deed give land to B, to have and to hold after the death of A to B and his heires, this is a void deed, because he cannot reserve to himselfe a particular estate, and construction must be made upon the whole deed, and if livery be made according to the forme and effect of the deed, the livery also is void, because the livery referreth to a deed that hath no effect in law, and therefore it cannot worke secundum formam et effectum cartæ (1). And so it was adjudged, et sic de similibus. * And it is to be observed that neither the feoffor being absent, can make livery, nor the feoffee being absent can take livery, but by warrant of attorney, by deed, and not by parol, because it concerneth matter of freehold (2).

Vide Sect. 1. in Bridgewater's case, where a man hath a moveable estate for inheritance, for example there put, in 13 acres: the question is where livery shall be made. First, if they be parcel of a manor, they may passe by the name of the manor, but if they be in gross then the charter of feoffment must be of 13 acres, lying and being in the meadow of 80 acres, generally without bounding or describing of the same in certaintie, and liverie of the seisin of any 13 acres allotted to the feoffee for a yeare secundum formam cartæ is a good livery to passe the content of 13 acres wheresoever the same lie in that meadow. In the second case where one entire manor is separate and divided, as is aforesaid, there is no question but the livery must be made of that manor, but in the other case where two manors are separate, and divided alternis vicibus, there the charter of feoffment must be made of both, and liverie in that manor which he is seised of in any one yeare secundum formam cartæ, and the next yeare in the other secundum formam cartæ: for there are two distinct manors, and severall estates in them (3).

A livery in law is when the feoffor saith to the feoffee being in the view of the house or land, (I give you yonder land to you and your heires, and goe enter into the same, and take possession thereof accordingly,) and the feoffee doth accordingly in the life of the feoffor enter, this is a good feoffment, for signatio pro traditione habetur (4). And herewith agreeth Bracton, item dici poterit et assignari, quando res vendita vel donata sit in conspectu, quam venditor et donator dicit se tradere: And in another place he saith, in seisinâ per affectum et per aspectum. But if either feoffor or the feoffee die before entry the livery is voyd (5). And livery within the view is good where there is no deed of feoffment. [a] And such a liverie is good albeit the land lie in another county. [b] A man may have an inheritance in an upper chamber, though the lower buildings and soile be in another, and seeing it is an inheritance corporeall it shall passe by livery. [c] A man maketh a charter of feoffment and delivers seisin within the view, the feoffee dares not enter for feare of death, but claimes the same, this shall vest the freehold and inheritance in him, albeit by the livery no estate passed to him, neither in deed, nor in law, so as such a claime shall serve, as well to vest a new estate and right in the feoffee, as in the common case to reveist an ancient estate and right in the disfeisee, &c. as shall be said hereafter more at large in the chapter of continuall claime. And so note a liverie in law shall be perfected and executed by an entry in law. [d] If a man be disfeised, and make a deed of feoffment, and a letter of attorney to enter and take possession, and after to make livery secundum formam cartæ, this is a good feoffment albeit he was out of possession at the time of the charter made (6), for the authority given by the letter of attorney is executory, and nothing passed by the delivery of the deed till livery of seisin was made. And in ancient letters of attorney power is given to others to take possession for the feoffor. But if a man be disfeised, and make a writing of a lease for yeares and deliver the deed, and after deliver it upon the ground, the second delivery is voyde, for the first delivery made it a deed, and for that the lease for yeares must take effect by the delivery of the deed, therefore the deed delivered when he was out of possession was voyde. But so it is not of a charter of feoffment, for that takes effect by the livery and seisin. But if the lessor had delivered it as an escrowe, to be delivered as his deed upon the ground, this had bene good.

A man makes a lease for yeares and after makes a deed of feoffment and delivers seisin, the lessee being in possession and not assenting to the feoffment, this livery is voyd, for albeit the feoffor hath the freehold and inheritance in him, yet that is not sufficient, for a livery must be given of the possession also (7); but if the lessee be absent, and hath neither wife nor servants (though he hath cattell) upon the ground the liverie of seisin shall be good.

If a man be seised of an house, and of divers severall closes in one countie in fee, and makes a lease thereof for yeares, and afterward maketh a feoffment in fee of the same, and makes liverie of seisin in the closes, (the lessee or his wife or servants then being in the house) the livery is voyd for the whole: for the lessee cannot be upon every parcell of the land to him demised, for the preservation or continuance of his possession therein. And therefore his being in the house, or upon any part of the land to him demised, is sufficient to preserve and continue his possession in the whole, from being ousted or dispossessed (8).

Note

(1) Charter of feoffment habendum a die datus. Ruled, 1. If livery be made the same day secundum formam cartæ, it is void. 2. If it was after the day by the feoffor himself, it is good. 3. If there be letter of attorney to deliver seisin in the deed, or it was at the same time, and it is delivered after the day, yet it is not good, because the authority was given at a time when it was a void charter. But 4. if letter of attorney be made after the day, and livery is made according to the deed, it is good. Hob. 314. Greenwood and Tiler. T. 3. Car. Owen and Price. C. B. H. 3. Jac. Rot. 216. B. R. Hennings and Paucharden. So there is a diversity between this and a grant of a reversion habendum from a day to come, for attornment after the day doth not aid the grant. 2. Rep. 55. Buckler's case. Hal. MSS.—See Cro. Jam. 563. and 153.—(2) Adjudged, that feoffee being absent cannot take livery, nor feoffor being absent make livery, by attorney by parol. T. 1659. Gregory and Badbourne. But a lease for yeares may be delivered by attorney by parol, as has been often adjudged. Hal. MSS.—(3) Vid. 8. E. 2. Feoffments 111. Livery by the lord of any part of the manor without going to it; but contra if not parcel. Hal. MSS.—(4) Nota the case of 38. Aff. 2. A makes feoffment to B within the view, and afterwards marries her, and afterwards claims to the use of the wife; it is a good execution of the livery. 38. E. 3. 11. Vid. 42. E. 3. Feoffments 54. Livery good, though the land is not within view. Hal. MSS.—(5) 1. Rep. Rect'or of Cheddington's case. Hal. MSS.—(6) H. 22. Car. B. R. Hinde's case, M. 4. Jac. B. R. Sparks and Darcy, 37. Eliz. Brown's case. Charter of feoffment of lands in the hands of the king with letter of attorney to make livery, and afterwards the feoffor jues outter maine, and the attorney makes livery; it is good. 25. Eliz. Feoffment on condition which is broken; feoffor makes charter of feoffment and letter of attorney to deliver seisin; the attorney enters and makes livery; it is good. Dick's case. Hal. MSS.—(7) P. 40. Eliz. B. R. A tenant for yeares; the reversion is granted to B for life, remainder to C in tail, remainder to D in fee; D by deed infeoffs A and one E, and makes livery: it was ruled to be void, because there was not any surrender, and A was in possession and could not take by livery. Edes and Knotsford. A tenant for yeares, remainder to the king for yeares, remainder to B in fee; B enters and ousts A and makes livery; it is good, notwithstanding the mesne remainder for yeares to the king; but it would have been otherwise, if the king's remainder had been for life. Hal. MSS.—(8) But nota, if lessee consents, livery is good, though he be upon the land. Tr. 40. Eliz. Shephard and Gray. A makes lease for yeares, and afterwards makes charter of feoffment with letter of attorney to enter and take possession and seisin for him and such seisin and possession to deliver; the attorney makes livery with the consent of the lessee, he being on the land; and it was ruled good. P. 1651. Wegg and Villers.—Lessee for yeares consents, that feoffor shall make livery, and afterwards goes out of the country, leaving servants on the land; the feoffor enters and makes livery; it was ruled good. But it was ruled, that if lessee be absent, livery by lessor by consent of servants is void, they being upon the land. 1. 7. Jac. C. B. n. 45. D. D. Blackleach and Small. But if A be lessee of white acre by one demise and of black acre by another demise of the same lessor; or if there be lessee of white acre and black acre by one demise, and he makes lease for yeares of black acre, and lessor enters on black acre and makes livery, though A be on white acre it is good. 2. Rep. Bettisworth's case. Hal. MSS.

being on the cart should not privilege the whole team.—(13) If ferrets and nets in a warren be taken damage tenant, it is good. But if they are in the hands of a man, they cannot be distrained any more than a horse on which a man is; nor can they be distrained, if they are out of the warren. 2. E. 2. Avovery 182. 7. E. 3. ibid. 199. Hal. MSS. See Vin. Abr. Distrains A.—(14) If A brings yarn to his neighbour's house to twigh, it cannot be distrained by the lord. Noy n. 298. Burley and Read. Vid. 15. E. Avovery 216. Hal. MSS. See Noy 68. and f. c. in Cro. Eliz. 549. and 596. For other cases in which things the property of strangers are privileged from

Note a great diversity, when a man hath two waies to passe lands, and both of the waies be by the common law, and he entendeth to passe them by one of the wayes, yet ut res magis valeat it shall passe by the other. But where a man may passe lands either by the common law, or by raising of an use, and settling it by the statute, there in many cases it is otherwise (1). For example, if a man be seised of two acres in fee, and letteth one of them for yeares, and intending to passe them both by feoffment, maketh a charter of feoffment, and maketh livery in the acre in possession, in name of both, onely the acre in possession passeth by the livery. Yet if the lessee attorne, the reversion of that acre shall passe by the deed and attornment, for he is in by the common law, and in the per in both, and so in the like. But otherwise it is, if the father make a charter of feoffment to his son, and a letter of attorney to make livery, and no livery is made, yet no use shall rise to the son, because he should be in by the statute in another degree, viz. in the post, and the intention of the parties worke much both in the raising and direction of uses. So if Cestuy que use and his feoffees had joyned in a feoffment after the statute of 1. R. 3. &c. it had bene the feoffment of the feoffees, and the confirmation of Cestuy que use, for the state at the common law shall be preferred. So to conclude this point, of freehold and inheritances, some be corporeall, as houses, &c. lands, &c. these are to passe by livery of seisin, by deed or without deed; some be incorporeall, as advowsons, rents, commons, estovers, &c. these cannot passe without deed, but without any livery (2). And the law hath provided the deed in place or stead of a livery. And so it is if a man make a lease, and by deed grant the reversion in fee, here the freehold with attornment of the lessee by the deed doth passe, which is in lieu of the livery. See Bract. lib. 2. cap. 18. Et est traditio de re corporali de persona in personam de manu, &c. gratuita translatio, et nihil aliud est traditio in uno sensu, nisi in possessionem inductio, de re corporali; et ideo dicitur, quod res incorporales non patiuntur traditionem sicut ipsum jus quod rei sive corpori inbæret, et quia non possunt res incorporales possideri sed quasi, ideo traditionem non patiuntur.

This ancient manner of conveyance by feoffment and livery of seisin, doth for many respects exceed all other conveyances. For (as hath bene said) (3) if the feoffor be out of possession, neither fine, recovery, indenture of bargain and sale inrolled, nor other conveyance, doth avoid an estate by wrong, and reduce cleerely the estate of the feoffee, and make a perfect tenant of the freehold, but onely livery of the seisin upon the land: the other conveyances being made off from the ground, doe sometimes more hurt then good, when the feoffor is out of possession (4). And yet in some cases a freehold shall passe by the common law without livery of seisin: as if a house or land belong to an office by the grant of the office by deed, the house or land passeth as belongeth thereunto. So if a house or chamber belong to a corodie, by the grant of a corodie, the house or chamber passeth. A freehold may by custome be surrendered without livery, as hereafter shall be said (6): and so of assignement of dower ad officium ecclesie, or otherwise, and by exchange a freehold may passe without livery, as hereafter shall be said in this chapter.

Sect. 60.

MES si home les-sa terres ou tenements, per fait ou sans fait, a (7) terme des ans, le remainder ouster a un auter per terme de vie,
ou en taile, ou en fee;
donque en tiel case il covient, que le lessor fait un liverie de seisin a le lessee per terme de ans, ou auterment riens passa a eux en le remainder, coment que le lessee enter en fee enter into the

BUT if a man letteth lands or tenements
by deed or without deed for terme of yeares, the remainder over to another for life, or in taile, or in fee; in this case it behooveth, that the lessor maketh livery of seisin to the lessee for yeares, otherwise nothing passeth to them in the remainder, although that the lessee enter into the

PER fait, ou sauns fait. For seeing that the remainders take effect by livery, there needes no deed (8).

Le remainder is a residue of an estate in land depending upon a particular estate, and created together with the same, and in law Latine it is called remanere (9).

Fait un livery de seisin al lessee. This livery is not necessary in this case for the lessee himsele, because he hath but a terme for yeares, but it is for the benefit of them in the rem', so as the livery to the lessee shall enure for the benefit of them in the rem': for the li-verie

(1) Where land shall pass by one way or the other at common law.—*Termor for years makes charter of feoffment by the word dedi, with letter of attorney in the same deed to deliver seisin, and afterwards livery is made, yet it is a forfeiture, and the term shall not be said to pass first by the delivery of the deed, as it seems. Dy. 362.—Grant to a tenant at will shall enure as a confirmation. Dy. 269.—*29. Eliz. B. R. Leonard's case. If A makes lease for years to B, and afterwards makes charter of feoffment to B being in possession with the words dedi et concessi, with letter of attorney to deliver seisin; before livery, he may use the deed as a confirmation in fee, and after livery as a feoffment. And there it was also agreed, that if by indenture in consideration of money A bargains and sells to B with letter of attorney, and the deed is inrolled, it is a good bargain and sale.—17. Eliz. Lessee for life and he in remainder in fee make charter of feoffment, and letter of attorney to make livery, which is made accordingly, it is good and the remainder shall not be said to pass by delivery of the deed.—Where one shall have election to take by statute or common law. Vid. Dy. 302. Grant of reversion to a brother averred to be pro fraterno amore.—2. Rep. Sir R. Heyward's case. Demise or concessi taken either as lease or bargain and sale. 7. Rep. Bedell's case. Grant to a son. T. 15. Car. B. R. entered H. 11. Car. Rot. 459. Father gives and grants to his son and his heirs, habendum after the death of the father; and no consideration of blood or marriage is mentioned in the deed: an estate shall not arise by way of use. Nota videtur, that there was a letter of attorney in the deed. P. 1657. Jackson's case. A by indenture for love and affection grants to B a rent in esse, habendum to B for life, remainder to the use of C in tail, remainder to the use of A's right heirs, and attornment was made but not till after the death of A; and it being found that B was cousin it was ruled, that an estate should arise by way of use without attornment.—Where one may elect one way or the other by statute.—Vid. 7. Rep. Bedell's case. If father in consideration of money bargains and sells to his son, there ought to be an enrollment. But if A for natural love to his son and also for money grants to the son, the land shall pass without inrollment, because the consideration of love is expressed. M. 1649. Watts and Dicks B. R.—Hal. MSS. See further as to electing in what way an estate shall pass, Yelv. 124. the case of Crofting and Scudamore. 1. Ventr. 137. and 1. Mod. 175. and Barker and Keat in 2. Mod. 249. See also Vin. Abr. Uses B. a. and the observation in Hawk. Abr. of Co. Litt. 83.—(2) See ante 9. a. 47. a. 48. a. and Post 121. b. and 169. a.—(3) Ante 9. a.—(4) For this see 2. Rep. 56. Buckler's case. Fine by disseisee extinguishes his right, and shall enure to the disseisor. But see this denied M. 13. Car. B. R. Crook n. 7. Fitzherbert's case. Hal. MSS.—See Cro. Cha. 483. and S. C. W. Jo. 397. In this last book it is said, that the judges did not deliver any opinion on the point. See further W. Jo. 317. Cro. Cha. 305. and Gouldsb. 162.—(5) Rot. 74. Hal. MSS.—(6) Vid. 5. Rep. Peryman's case. Hal. MSS.—See 5. Co. 84. In Peryman's case the jury found, that in the manor of Porchester there was a custom, according to which all alienations of lands within that manor by writing feoffment or last will were void, unless presented at the next court of the manor, or at some court within a year after, or at the next court after the year; and this was adjudged to be a good custom. In the same case mention is made, that by the custom of Lidford Castle in Devonshire a freeholder of inheritance cannot pass his freehold except by surrender into the lord's hands. As to this latter kind of custom, in consequence of which the estates subject to it have been called customary freeholds, see Post 59. b. and Blackit. Law Tracts, 8vo ed. vol. 1. p. 144.—(7) Un pur. L. and M.—(8) 12. H. 4. 20. Hal. MSS.—(9) Sett. 215. Hal. MSS.

from distress for the sake of trade and commerce, see Francis and Wyatt. 4. Bur. v. 3. p. 1498. In that case the question was whe-

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect 60.

verie of the possession could not be made to the next in remainder, because the possession belonged to the lessee for yeares, and for that the particular terme, and all the remainders, made in law but one estate, and take effect at one time, therefore the livery is to be made to the lessee. But if a lease for yeares without deed be made to A and B, the remainder to C in fee, and livery is made to A in the absence of B, in the name of both; it seemeth the livery is good to vest the remainder, and there is a diversity, between two joynt attornies to receive livery for another, and livery and seisin is made to one of them, in the name of both, this is cleerly void, because they had but a meer and bare authority (1), and they both doe in law make but one attorney, unlesse the warrant be joyntly and severally (2), but the lessee for yeares hath an interest in the land. Againe, if A is to make a feoffment to B and C, and their heires without deed, and A makes livery to B in the absence of C in the name of both, and to their heires; this livery is void to C, because a man being absent cannot take a freehold by a livery, but by his attorney being lawfully authorised to receive livery by deed, unlesse the feoffment be made by deed, and then the livery to one in the name of both is good (4).

Note there is a diversity between livery of seisin of land, and the delivery of a deed, for if a man deliver a deed without saying of any thing, it is a good delivery, but to a livery of seisin of land words are necessary; as taking in his hand the deed, and the ring of the doore (if it be an house) or a tursle or twigge (if it be of land) and the feoffee laying his hand on it, the feoffor say to the feoffee, Here I deliver to you seisin of this house, or of this land, in the name of all the land, contained in this deed, according to the forme and effect of the deed, (as hath been said) and if it be without deed, then the words may be, Here I deliver you seisin of this house or land, &c. to have and to hold to you for life, or to you and the heires of your body, or to you and your heires for ever as the case shall require.

When the kinsman of Elimelech gave unto Boas the parcell of land that was Elimelech's, he tooke off his shoe, and gave it unto Boas in the name of seisin of the land (after the manner in Israel) in the presence, and with the testimony of many witnesses. And when Ephron infeoffed Abraham of the field of Machepela, he said to him, agrum trado tibi, &c. I deliver this field to thee.

A man makes a lease for yeares to A, the remainder to B in fee, and makes livery to A within the view: this livery is void, for no man can take by force or a livery within the view, but he that taketh the freehold himselfe.

Et si le termor en tiel case enter devant ascun livery fait, &c. By the entry of the lessee he is in actual possession, and then the livery cannot be made to him that is in possession, for quod semel meum est, amplius meum esse non potest. But if the lessor and lessee come upon the ground, of purpose for the lessor to make, and the lessee to take livery, there his entry vests no actuall possession in him untill livery be made; for [a] affectio tua nomen imponit operi tuo (5). And therefore if it be agreed betweene the disseisor and disseisee, that the disseisee shall release all his right to the disseisor upon the land, and accordingly the disseisee entreth into the land, and delivereth the release to the disseisor upon the land, this is a good release, and the entry of the disseisee, being for this purpose, did not avoid the disseisin, for his intent in this case did guide his entry to a speciall purpose. And so was it resolved [b] by Sir James Dyer, and the whole court of Common Pleas, Pasch. 18. Eliz. upon evidence which I myselfe heard and observed. But if the disseisor enfeoffe the disseisee and others, there albeit the disseisee came to take livery, yet when livery is made, the disseisee is remitted to the whole in judgment of law, as shall be said more at large in the chapter of remitter in his proper place.

Sect.

(Post 143 a.)

(5. Co. 94 b.)

10. E. 4. 1. 12. E. 4. 16. 15. E. 4. 18. 22. E. 4. 35. 40. E. 3. 10. 41. (3)
Temps H. 8. Feoffments 72.
6. H. 4. 2. b. Litt. 153.
3. H. 7. 13. (Post 359 a.)
(Ante 36. a. 9. Co. 137.)

Ruth cap. 4. verse 7. 8. Deut. 25. 9. 10.
Gen. 23. verse 11.

(Mo. 14)

[a] Bracton lib. 1.

[b] P. 19. Eliz. in Communi Banc. Pl. Com. in Aff. de fresh-force. 92. 29. Aff. 26. 43. Aff. p. 3. 3. H. 6. 19. in formdon. (6)

(1) See further as to the difference between a naked authority and an authority coupled with an interest, Post 52. b. 113. 2. and 181. b.

(2) See Post note 1. in 52. b.

(3) 18. E. 4. 12.—Hal. MSS.

(4) Dy. 14. 35. 18. H. 6. 9. 22. H. 6. 1.—Hal. MSS.

(5) Nota, if the lease for years with the remainder over be by deed, the deed ought not to be delivered till livery made; for otherwise the livery is bad. H. 2. Eliz. Helyar's case. Vide Bendl. n. 130. Hal. MSS.—See N. Ben. 85. and S. C. Mo. 14. 1. And. 8.

(6) 9. H. 7. 1. 41. E. 3. 17. Hal. MSS.

whether a person's chariot, which stood at a common livery stable, could be distrained for rent due from the keeper of the livery stable; and the court after two arguments appearing to be strongly inclined in favour of the distress, the owner of the chariot afterwards declined bringing the question to a third argument, which had been ordered by the court.—(15) 20. H. 7. 9. 13. 21. E. 4. 47. Hal. MSS.—(16) But now by the 2. W. and M. c. 5. sheaves, or cocks of corn, or corn loose or in the straw, or hay in any hovel, stack or rick, or otherwise on the land, may be distrained for rent due on demise lease or contract.—(17) Sheep are equally privileged with averia caruæ, and cannot be taken, if any other distress can be found. See further 2. Inst. 133. 134. and the case cited in n. 18.—(18) But it has been adjudged, that beasts of the plow may be taken for the poor's rate under the 43. Eliz. because the remedy given by that and other statutes for compelling the payment of particular rates or sums of money, though called a distress, is in effect an execution. 4. Burr. v. 1. p. 579. See acc. Saund. on 22. Ch. 2. against convenicles 39. which is referred to in Com. Dig. Distrs C. but not cited in the case in 4. Burr.

Sect. 61.

ET si home voile faire feoffment, per fait ou sans fait, de terres ou tenements que il ad en plusors villes en un countie, le liverie de seisin fait en un parcel de les tenements en un vile, en le nosme de tous, suffist pur tous les autres terres et tenements comprehendes deins mesme le feoffment, en toutz les autres villes deins mesme le countie. Mes si home fait un fait de feoffment des terres ou tenement en divers counties, la il covient en chescun countie aver un liverie de seisin.

AND if a man wil make a feoffment, by deed or without deed, of lands or tenements which he hath in divers townes in one countie, the livery of seisin made in one parcell of the tenements in one towne, in the name of all the rest, is sufficient for all other the lands and tenements comprehended within the same feoffment in al other the townes in the same countie (1). But if a man maketh a deed of feoffment of lands or tenements in divers counties, there it behoveth in every county to have a livery of seisin (2).

EN un countie. (Post = 53. 2.) A countie is fetched from the French, and shire from the Saxon. For Syran in the Saxon tongue signifieth partiri, because everie countie or shire is divided and parted by certaine metes and bounds from another, and in Latine is called Comitatus à comitando, for accompanying together. And for as much as the men of one county doe not accompany together with men of another county at countie courts, turnes, leets, and other courts, therefore in judgement of law they shall take no notice of a liverie in another countie to passe any lands in their owne countie. But of this more shall be said hereafter.

Sect. 62.

ET en ascun cas home avera per le grant dun auter fee simple, fee taile, ou frankten. sans liverie de seisin. Si come deux homes sont, et chescun deux est seise dun quantite de terre deins un countie, et lun granta sa terre a l'auter en eschange pur la terre que l'auter ad, et en mesme le manner l'auter granta sa ter-

AND in some case a man shall have by the grant of another a fee simple, fee tail, or freehold without livery of seisin. As if there be two men and each of them is seised of one quantity of land in one countie, and the one granteth his land to the other in exchange for the land which the other hath, and in like maner the other grant-

HERE Littleton putteth a case where freehold, &c. shall passe without liverie of seisin, and thereupon putteth the case of an exchange of lands in one countie that is good by deed or without deed, without any livery, but if it be in severall counties there must be a deed. Also of things that lye in grant, as advowsons, rents, commons, &c. an exchange of them albeit they be in one counties, is not good, unlesse it be by deed; and therefore Littleton putteth his case warily of land. And in case of a fine which is a feoffment of record, of a devise by a last will, of a surrender, of a release or confirmation to a lessee

(1) Vid. 11. Eliz. Dy. 233. Cestui que use of three acres by three several feoffments in one county makes charter of feoffment of all and livery in one of the acres, it is pursuant to the statute and passes all. Hal. MSS.—The statute meant is the 1. R. 3. c. 1. which empowers cestui que use to make effectual feoffments and conveyances against his feoffees in trust; and the case cited was of a feoffment before the 27. H. 8. for transferring uses into possession. It is stated, that the livery was made by attorney, and that was the cause of the doubt, it being said, by some, that the statute of R. 3. ought to be construed strictly and to be confined to conveyances made by the cestui que use in his own person. See Bro. Feoffment to Uses 28.

(2) Vid. Dy. 246. 22. H. 6. 10. If a manor extends into two counties, livery in that part of the manor, which is in one county, doth not pass that which is in the other county. So it is with respect to disseisin. Hal. MSS.—But Mr. Perkins holds, that livery of parcel of such a manor in one county will pass the parcel in the other county. Perk. Sect. 227. However he admits, that if one be disseised of two acres in different counties, entry into the acre in one of the counties, though made in the name of both acres, will not extend to the acre in the other county. Perk. Sect. 229.

Lib. 1.

Vide Sect. 1.

Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 63, 64, 65.

lessee for yeares, or at wil. In all these and some other cases a freehold, &c. (as hath beene said) may passe without livery. But this word (exchange) which our author here useth, is so appropriated by law, to this case, as it cannot be expressed by any periphrasis or circumlocution (3).

En ceo case chescun poet enter, &c. For by the exchange the parties, albeit the lands be all in one county, have no freehold in deed or law in them before they execute the same by entry; and therefore if one of them dyeth, before the exchange be executed by entrie, the exchange is void; for the heire cannot enter and take it as a purchasor, because he was named onely to take by way of limitation of estate in course of descent.

re a le primer grantor en eschange pur la terre que le primer grantor ad; enceo case chescun poet entrer en lauter terre issint mise en eschange sans ascun liverie de seisin, et tiel eschange fait per parolx de tenements deins mesme le countie sans escript est assets bone.

eth his land to the first grantor in exchange for the land which the first grantor hath; in this case each may enter into the other's land, so put in exchange without any livery of seisin(1). And such exchange made by paroll of tenements within the same county without writing is good enough (2).

9. E. 4. 38. 39. 45. E. 3. 20. 21. 45. E. 3. Exchange 10.

Sect. 63.

THIS is evident enough. But of what things an exchange may be made (which was a convenience frequent in former times) is to be seene, and herein many things are to be observed.

First, that the things exchanged [a] need not to be in esse at the time of the exchange made. As if I grant a rent newly created out of my lands in exchange for the manor of Dale, this is a good exchange (4).

[b] Secondly, there needeth no transmutation of possession, and therefore a release of a rent, or estovers, or right to land, in exchange for land, is good (5).

The things [c] exchanged need not be of one nature, so they concerne lands or tenements, whereof Littleton here speaketh. As land for rent or common, or any other inheritance which concerne lands or tenements, or spirituall things, as tythes, &c. for temporall, and tenure by a divine service for a temporall seigniorie, &c. But annuities or such like which charge the person onely, and doe not concerne lands or tenements, cannot be exchanged for lands or tenements.

ET si les terres ou tenements soient en divers counties, cest ascavoir ceo que lun ad est un countie et ceo que lauter ad est en auter countie, la il covient de aver un fait indent destre fait enter eux de tiel eschange.

AND if the lands or tenements be in divers counties, viz. that which the one hath in one county, and that which the other hath in another county, there it behoveth to have a deed indented made betweene them of this exchange.

(Hob. 41.)

[a] 30. E. 1. Esch. 15. 3. E. 4. 10. 9. E. 4. 21. 14. H. 8. 20.

(Post 366. a.)

(1. Ro. Ab. 812.)

[b] 6. E. 56. 30. E. 1. Es. 16. 16. E. 3. Esch. 2. 7. H. 4. 34. 3. E. 4. 11.

[c] 9. E. 4. 21. 9. E. 3. 56. 21. E. 3. 6.

Sect. 64, 65.

EN eschange, il covient que les estates soient egales, &c. Equality in lands is threefold, viz. First equality in value:

ET nota que en eschange il covient, que les estates soient egales, que

AND note that in exchanges it behoveth, that the estates, which both parties

(1) It is observable, that Littleton expresses himself concerning an exchange as of a transaction between two; and in a late case the court held, that an exchange in the strict legal sense of the word cannot be between three, the principles of it not being applicable to more than two distinct contracting parties, for want of the mutuality and reciprocity on which its operation so entirely depends. For, 1. The consideration of an exchange and of the implied warranty incident to it is the receiving something with warranty from the same person, to whom something with warranty is given; but if there could be three distinct parties, each would give to one and receive from another. 2. The implied condition of re-entry is, that re-entry may be made on him whose title fails; but if there could be three parties to an exchange, then each person would be liable to re-entry for the fault of another's title as well as of his own. See the case of Eton College in Wilton, v. 2. part 3. page 483. and Post n. 1. in 51. a. and n. 2. in 51. b.

(2) But now by force of the statute of 29. C. 2. c. 3. a writing is necessary, if the exchange is of freeholds or of terms for years being for more than three years.

(3) See acc. Post 51. b. and Will. vol. 2. part 3. page 491. 496.

(4) But in one of the books cited by lord Coke, the opinion is, that both of the things exchanged ought to be in esse at the time of the exchange. See 9. E. 4. 21.

(5) See as to this Fulb. Paral. 33. a. in the dialogue on exchanges.

Estates.
Vide Sect. 650.

ambideux tielx parties averont en les terres issint eschanges, car si lun voloit et grant que l'auter a-veroit la terre en fee taile, pur le terre que il a-veroit del grant de le auter en fee simple, coment que l'auter soit agree a cel, cest eschange est voide, pur ceo que les estates ne sont my egales.

EN mesme le manner est, lou il est grant et agree enter eux, que lun avera en lun terre fee taile, et l'auter en l'autre terre forsque a terme de vie, ou si lun avera en lun terre fee taile generall, et l'auter en l'autre terre fee taile especial, &c. Issint touts foits il covient que en eschange les estates dambideux parties soient egales, cest ascavoir, si lun
ad fee simple en lun terre, que l'auter ave-ra tiel estate en lauter terre, et si lun ad fee taile en lun terre il covient que l'auter avera semblable estate en l'autre terre, &c. et sic de aliis statibus.
Mes nest my riens a charger del egal value des terres, car

ties have in the lands so exchanged, be equall, for if the one willeth and grant that the other shall have his land in fee taile for the land which he hath of the grant of the other in fee simple, although that the other agree to this, yet this exchange is voyde, because the estates be not equall.

IN the same manner
it is, where it is granted and agreed be-twene them, that the one shall have in the one land fee taile, and the other in the other land but for terme of life, or if the one shall have in the one land fee taile generall, and
the other in the other land fee taile especial, &c. So alwaies it behoveth that in exchange the estates of both parties be equall, viz. if the one hath a fee simple in the one land that the other shall have like estate in the other land, and if the one hath fee taile in the one land the other ought to have the like estate in the other land, &c. and so of other estates. But it is nothing to charge of the equal

Secondly, equality in quantity of estate given and taken.
Thirdly, equality in quality or manner of the estate given and taken. But as Littleton after saith, equality in value of lands in an exchange is not requisite; neither equality in the quality or manner of the estate. And therefore if two jointenants give lands jointly to two men and their heires, and the other in exchange of other lands to them and their heires in common, this is a good exchange⁽¹⁾, and yet the manner of their estates is not equall, for the estate of one party is joynt, and the other in common. And so it is if two men give lands in exchange to A and his heires for lands from A to them two and their heires, though the one party have a joynt estate, and the other a sole estate, yet the exchange is good. The like is if the one land be of a defeasible title, and the other of an undefeasible title, yet the exchange is good till it be avoided.

[a] An exchange with the king is good, and yet the king is seised in his politike capacity, and the subject in his naturall capacity⁽²⁾. But equality of the quantity of the estate is requisite, as it appear-eth clearly in the cases put by Littleton. [b] But therein it is to be observed, that it is not necessary that the parties to the exchange be seised of an equall estate at the time of the exchange made: for if tenant in taile, or a husband seised in the right of his wife, exchange lands, and both by the exchange give a fee simple, this is good until it be avoided by the issue in tail, or by the wife after the death of the husband; [d] so as Littleton saith, that in exchanges it behoveth that the estates which both parties have in the land so exchanged be equal, is as much as to say that the state reciprocally given in exchange ought to be equall. [e] But in a partition the estates allotted to either party need not to be equall,

[a] Bracton lib. 5. fo. 389. 17.
E. 3. 12. b. 4. H. 4. 2.

[b] 14. H. 6. 6. E. 2. Exch. 12.
8. E. 2. Cui in vita 28. 10. E. 2.
Exch. 13. 16. E. 3. Exch. 2. 3.
E. 3. 19. 12. H. 4. 12. 21. H.
6. 25. 13. E. 4. 3. (3)

(1. Ro. Ab. 311. 4. Co. 121.)

[d] 44. E. 3. 20. 38. E. 3. 15.
39. E. 3. 1. 9. E. 4. 21. 7. H.
4. 17. 30. E. 1. tit. Bre. 884. 30.
E. 1. tit. Exchange, 15.

[e] F. N. B. 62. m
(Post. 172. b.)

(1) Here four persons are named as parties to an exchange. But this is not irreconcilable with the opinion mentioned in note 7. of fol. 30. b. that an exchange cannot be between more than two distinct parties; because though four persons are named, yet they constitute only two distinct parties; for in point of interest the two joint-tenants are the conveying parties on the one side, and the two tenants in common are the conveying parties on the other, and consequently there is the same reciprocity as if the transaction was between two persons only. The same observation applies to any number of persons, if so conjoined in the mutuality of giving and receiving in exchange, as to make only two distinct relative parts.

(2) See 2. Inst. 269.—But if the king makes exchange, it seems that it should be by writing recorded; because he can neither give nor take land without matter of record. See Lane 31. 60. Vin. Abr. Z. c. A. d. B. d.

(3) 45. E. 3. 20. Hal. MSS.

Lib 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 66.

equall, as shall be observed in his proper place.

To shut up this point, there be five things necessary to the perfection of an exchange.

1. That the estates given be equall (1): 2. That this word (excambium exchange) be used, [f] which is so individually requisite, as it cannot be supplied by any other word or described by any circumlocution (2): and herewith agreeth Littleton afterwards in this Section. In the booke of Domesday I finde, hanc terram cambiavit Hugo Briccni- no quod modo tenet comes Meriton, et ipsum scambium valet duplum.

Hugo de Belcamp pro escambio de warres.

3. That there be an execution by entry or claime in the life of the parties, as hath bin said. [g] 4. That if it be of things that lye in grant, it must be by deed. [h] 5. If the lands be in severall counties there ought to be a deed indented, or if the thing lye in grant albeit they be in one county.

[i] If an infant exchange lands, and after his full age occupy the lands taken in exchange, the exchange is become perfect, for the exchange at the first was not void (because it amounted to a livery, and also in respect of the recompence) but voidable (3).

Coment que l'auter agree a cel cest eschange est voide. The agreement of the parties cannot make that good which the law maketh void.

*coment que la terre lun vault mult plus que la terre de l'auter ceo nest reins a purpose; issint que les estates per leschange fait soient egales.
Et issint en leschange sont deux grants; car chescun partie grant son terre a l'auter en eschange, &c. et en chescun de leur grants mention serra fayt de leschange.*

value of the lands, for albeit that the land of the one be of a farre greater value then the land of the other, this is nothing to the purpose, so as the estates made by the exchange be equall. And so in an exchange there be two grants, for each party granteth his land to the other in exchange, &c. and in each of their grants mention shall be made of the exchange.

[f] 9. E. 4. 21. 25. H. 6. 56.
19. H. 6. 27. 44. E. 3. 24. 50.
Ass. Dorset. Wadon. Bedf. Sande-deia.
9. E. 4. 39. 15. E. 4. 3.
45. E. 3. 30.
(4. Co. 121.)

45. E. 3. Eschange 1.
[g] 28 H. 6. 2.
[h] 45. E. 3. 20. 7. H. 4. 11.

[i] 4. E. 2. tit. Exch. 10. 12. H.
4. 12.

Sect. 66.

*SI home lessa terre a un auter pur
terme dans, coment que
le lessor morust devant,
&c.* The reason is because the interest of the tearme (as hath beene said) doth passe and vest in the lessee before entry, and therefore the death of the lessor cannot devise that which was vested before.

Attorney. Is an ancient English word, and signifieth one that is set in the turne, stead, or place of another, and of these some be private (whereof our author here speaketh) and some be publike, as attorneys at law, whose warrant from his master is ponit loco suo talem attorneyatum suum, which setteth in his turne or place such a man to be his attorney.

*ITEM si home
lessa terre a un auter pur term dans, coment que le lessor morust devant que le lessee enter en les tenements, uncore il
poit enter en mesmes les tenements apres le mort le lessor, pur ceo que le lessee per force de le lease ad droit maintenant da-ver les tenements solonque le forme de le lease. Mes si home fait un fait de feoffe-ment a un auter, et un letter dattorney a un*

ALSO if a man letteth land to another for term of years, albeit the lessor dieth before the lessee entreth into the tenements, yet he may enter into the same tenements after the death of the lessor, because the lessee by force of the lease hath right presently to have the tenements according to the forme of the lease. But if a man ma-keth a deed of feoff-ment to another, and a letter of attorney to home

(Post 270. a.)

(9. Co. 75. F. N. E. 156.)

(1) Vid. 22. E. 3. 3. Contra 38. E. 3. 15. Hal. MSS..

(2) See ante 50. b. n. 1. and 3. and the case of Eton College there cited. In that case one reason given, why an act of parliament was not suffered to operate as an exchange, was the want of that word in the act.

(3) Contra in surrender or partition. 11. H. 4. 61. Hal. MSS.—But see the case of Zouch against Parsons 4. Burr. v. 3. page 1806. where lord Mansfield in delivering the opinion of the court seems to incline strongly in favour of construing an infant's surrender, if made by deed, as voidable only. In Zouch and Parsons it became necessary to consider what was the true ground for holding the acts of infants as voidable only, whether the solemnity of the instrument, or the semblance of benefit to the infant on the face of the deed. As to the former ground, the court thought fit to approve of Mr. Perkins's distinction, according to which all such grants gifts or deeds of an infant as do not take effect by delivery of his hand are void, and those which do are voidable. See Perk. sect. 12. But the court decided the case principally on the latter ground, and held a lease and release by an infant to be voidable, because the consideration of the conveyance and other circumstances shewed, that the act was right and proper and apparently not in the least to his prejudice. See further as to the deeds of infants ante 45. b. note 1. and Post 171. b.

home a deliverer a luy seisin per force de mesme le fait, uncore si liverie de seisin ne soit fait en la vie celui, que fesoit le fait, ceo ne vault riens, pur ceo que l'auter nad pas ascun droit d'aver la tenements solongue le purport de le dit fait, devant le liverie de seisin; et si nul liverie de seisin soit fait, donque apres le mort celui, que fist le fait, le droit de tiels tenements est maintenant en son heire, ou en ascun autre.

one to deliver to him seisin by force of the same deed, yet if livery of seisin be not executed in the life of him which made the deed, this availeth nothing, for that the other had nought to have the tenements according to the purport of the said deed before livery of seisin made; and if there be no livery of seisin, then after the decease of him who made the deed, the right of these tenements is forthwith in his heire, or in some other.

Et un letter dat-torney a un home a deliver a luy seisin per force de mesme le fait.

Here first it appeareth that the authority to deliver seisin (as hath bin said) must be by deed (1): for letter d'attorney is as much as a warrant of attorney by deed, for litteræ doe signifie sometime a deed, as litteræ acquietancie doe signifie a deed of acquittance, and herewith [a] agreeth Britton.

2. Littleton here speakes generally a un home, and few persons are [b] disabled to be private attornies to deliver seisin; for mounks, infants, feme covert (2), persons attainted, outlawed, excommunicated, villeins, aliens, &c. may be attornies. A feme may be an attorney to deliver seisin to her husband, and the husband to the wife, and he in the remainder to the lessee for life.

3. It appeareth here that the attorney must [c] pursue his warrant, otherwise he doth not deliver seisin by force of the deed, as Littleton speaketh. Now his authority is twofold, expressed in his warrant, and implied in law, both which he must pursue, and first of his expresse authority. A man seised of blacke acre and white acre makes a deed of feoffment of both, and a letter of attorney to enter into both acres, and to deliver seisin of both of them according to the forme and effect of the deed, and he entreth into blacke acre and delivers seisin secundum formam cartæ, this livery and seisin is good, albeit he did not enter into both, nor into one in the name of both; for when he delivereth seisin of one secundum formam cartæ, this is tantamount and implyeth a livery of both. So when the feoffment is made to two or more, and the attorney is to make livery of seisin to both, and the attorney make livery of seisin to one of the feoffees secundum formam et effectum cartæ, this is good to both, and yet in that case he that is absent may waive the livery (3). If lessee for life make a deed of feoffment and a letter of attorney to the lessor to make livery, and the lessor maketh livery accordingly, notwithstanding he shall enter for the forfeiture. But if lessee for yeares make a feoffment in fee and a letter of attorney to the lessor to make livery, and he make livery accordingly, this livery shall binde the lessor, and shall not be avoyded by him: for the lessor cannot make livery as attorney to the lessee, because he had no freehold, whereof to make livery, but the freehold was in the lessor (4). If the lessor make a deed of feoffment, and a letter of attorney to the lessee for yeares to make livery, and he doth it accordingly, this shall not drowne or extinguish his tearme, because he did it as a minister to another (6) and in another's right, and is accounted in judgement of law the act of the other and the feoffee claimeth nothing by him (7).

If one as procurator or attorney to another present to his owne benefice, he puts himselfe out of possession, because he commeth in by the induction and institution of the ordinary. If the tenant devise that the lord shall sell the land, and dieth, and the lord selleth it, the feignory remains. But if the lord or a grantee of a rent charge had been also Ce que use of the land, and after the statute of R. 3. and before the statute of 27. H. 8. Ce que use had made a feoffment in fee of the land, albeit the land passeth from the feoffees, and his feoffment is warranted by the power given to him by the statute, yet the feignory or rent charge is extinct by his feoffment, for that he hath not a bare authority as the attorney hath (8).

If a man be disseised of blacke acre, and white acre, and a warrant of attorney is made to enter into both and to make livery, there if the attorney enter into blacke acre onely and makes livery secundum formam cartæ, there the livery of seisin is void, because he doth lesse then his warrant (9).

(1) Vid. 1. Aff. 16. 26. Aff. 29. 35. Aff. 1. 12. H. 7. 27. 13. H. 7. 14. 4. H. 7. 13. 13. E. 4. 8. Hal' MSS.—(2) In another place lord Coke cites a passage from the Miroir, which excludes both infants and femes covert from being attornies. Post 128. a. But that is quite reconcileable with the doctrine here; for there publick attornies for prosecuting suits at law are meant, whose office cannot be properly executed without considerable knowledge and discretion; but here lord Coke in the first part of the sentence confines himself to private attornies to deliver seisin, which is an act so merely ministerial that it may be done by the most ignorant. See the case of Hearle and Greenough in 3. Atk. 695. and 1. Ves. 298. One question in that case was, whether a power of disposing of real estate could be well executed by an infant feme-covert of the age of 19; and lord ch. Hardwicke determined against the execution of the power, 1. because he thought in general, that such a power could not be well given to an infant, the disability of infancy being stronger than that of coverture; 2. because in the particular case it did not appear, that the power was intended to be given during infancy, the power being given notwithstanding coverture without the least notice of infancy; and 3. because it was a power coupled with an interest, the infant having a trust in equity for life, together with the trust of the inheritance subject to the power.—(3) Adjudged accordingly of livery to one feoffee. T. 1651. B. R. Troutman's case. Vide M. 31. 32. Eliz. C. B. Trevillian's case. A seised of two acres makes lease of one acre to B for years, and afterwards makes charter of feoffment of both acres and letter of attorney to B and C conjunctim et divisim to make livery; B makes livery in one acre and C in another, and adjudged good. Entered M. 30. 31. Eliz. Rot. 2908. Vide Bandl. n. 15. M. 32. 33. Eliz. 1868. Hal. MSS.—(4) Yet vide if lessee for years makes feoffment and livery, though lessor be on the land, it seems to be a forfeiture. Dy. 362. 363. 14. H. 7. Hal. MSS.—(5) Smyth's case. Hal. MSS.—(6) If A brings præcipe of C's land against B, and recovers, and C is made sheriff, and habere facias seisinam comes to him, he may return the special matter on account of the mischief. 13. H. 4. 15. 7. H. 6. 33. Hal. MSS.—(7) So it is of livery by the lord. H. 4. E. 6. Mo. n. 41. Trevillian's case supra. Hal. MSS. See notelq.—By the case of livery by the lord, it is meant, that if tenant makes feoffment of his tenancy and the lord as attorney makes livery, it shall not extinguish his feignory. Mo. 11.—(8) See supra note 7.—(9) Vid. 11. H. 4. 3. If there be feoffment on condition and letter of attorney to make livery accordingly, and livery is made absolutely, it is void and a disseisin. So e converso 12. Aff. 24. 26. Aff. 39.—H. 38. Eliz. B. R. Poph. n. 2.

Vid. Sect. 196.

[a] 24. E. 3. 27. 11. H. 7. 13. Britt. 101. b.

[b] 21. E. 4. 18. Br. feoffments, 50. 21. H. 6. 30. 13. E. 3. Attorney 73.

[c] 12. Aff. pl. 24. 26. Aff. 39. 11. H. 4. 3. 10. H. 7. 11. H. 7. 13. 40. Aff. 38. (9. Co. 76. b.)

27. Aff. 61. 41. Aff. 10. 41. E. 3. 17. (2. Leon. 73.)

(Post 310. 2. 359. a.)

Tr. 7. Eliz. in com. banco. (5) (Mo. 11. Cro. Ja. 177.)

17. E. 3. 61. (F. N. B. 35. O.)

(1. Co. 111. Post 265. b.)

(Post 252. b.)

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 67.

(1. Ro. Ab. 511.)

[1] Hil. 36. El. Rot. 492. Inter Stanton & Barnes, in ejectione firma, in the King's Bench. (Post 265. b. 1. Sid. 6.)

2. & 3. Ph. & M. Dyer 131. 17. El. Dyer. 40. (Mo. 91. 2. Sid. 65. 2. Leon. 19. Ante 48. b.)

[1] Pasc. 31. El. Rot. 514. in Com. Banc. inter Carter pl. & Claypole & al. def. In ejectione firma, & in brieve de error. Hil. 32. El. Rot. 791.

• Communis error fecit jus (ut dicitur) in contrarium. (2. Inst. 673. 2. Ro. Ab. 8. Cro. Eliz. 905.)

Pasc. 3. El. in Com. Banc. in Yarham's case.

22. H. 6. 6.

Bracton. li. 2. fo. 16. 40. Aff. pl. 38. 29. H. 6. 7. a. 14. E. 4. 2. 18. E. 3. 16. b. 11. H. 7. 13. &c.

18. H. 8. 3. 11. H. 7. 19. (1. Sid. 162.)

(4. Co. 119. b. Cro. Ja. 103. 6. Co. 38) Mich. 3. Ja. in Com. Banc. F. N. B. 223. 2. E. 3. offi. de Court. 29. Stamf. Prior. 30. (1. Ro. Ab. 331. 332.)

warrant for the estate of the disseisor in white acre cannot be divested without an entry. But there is a diversity between an authority coupled with an interest, and a bare authority (1). For example, a custome within a manor time out of mind of man used, was to grant certaine lands parcell of the said manor in fee simple, and never any grant was made to any, and the heires of his body, for life or for yeares; and the lord of the said manor did grant to one by copie for life, the remainder over to another, and the heires of his body: and it was [k] adjudged, that the grant and remainder over was good; for the lord having authoritie by custome, and an interest withall, might grant any lesser estate: for in this case, the custome that enableth him to the greater, enableth him to the lesser, Omne majus in se continet minus. But he that hath but a bare authority, as he that hath a warrant of attorney, must pursue his authority (as hath bene said) and if he doe lesse, it is voyd (2).

A man make a lease for life, and after make a charter of feoffment, with a letter of attorney to deliver seisin, the attorney enters upon the lessee, this is sufficient to convey away the reversion, for (3) (that it may be said once for all) livery of seisin being to perfect the common assurance of lands, is alwayes expounded favorably, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. And all this was adjudged and [7] resolved by the court of Common Pleas, and after affirmed by all the judges of the King's Bench, in a writ of error.

And it is to be knowne, that a deed of feoffment beginning Omnibus Christi fidelibus, &c. or Sciatis presentes et futuri, &c. or the like, a letter of attorney may be contained in such a deed; for one continent may containe divers deeds to severall perions; but if it be by indenture between the feoffor on the one part, and the feoffee on the other part, * there a letter of attorney in such a deed is not good, unlesse the attorney be made a partie in the deed indented (4).

Now the authoritie of an attorney implied in the law, is, though the warrant be generall, to deliver seisin: yet the attorney cannot deliver seisin within the view, for his warrant is intendable in law of an actuall and expresse livery and not of a livery in law, and so hath it bene resolved (5). See more hereof here next following.

Uncore si livery et seisin ne soit fait en la vie celui que fesoit le fait.

Here albeit the warrant of attorney be indefinite, without limitation of any time, yet the law prescribeth a time, as Littleton here saith, in the life of him that made the deed: but the death not only of the feoffor, of whom Littleton speaketh, but of the feoffee also, is a countermand in law of the letter of attorney, and the deed it selfe is become of none effect, because in this case nothing doth passe before livery of seisin. For if the feoffor dieth, the land descends to his heire, and if the feoffee dieth, livery cannot be made to his heire, because then he should take by purchase, where heires were named by way of limitation (6). And here-with agreeth Bracton, Item oportet quod donationem sequatur rei traditio, etiam in vita donatoris et donatorij. Therefore a letter of attorney to deliver livery of seisin after the decease of the feoffor is voyd (7).

Fourthly, in all cases the attorney must pursue the warrant in substance and effect that he hath to deliver seisin.

Fifthly, all this is to be understood of sole persons, or of a corporation or body consisting of one sole person, or a bishop person, &c. But it holdeth not in a corporation aggregate of many persons capable (8). And therefore if a maior and commonalty make a charter of feoffment, and a letter of attorney to deliver seisin, the livery of seisin is good after the decease of the maior, because the corporation never dieth (9). The like of a deane and chapter, Et sic de similibus.

Lastly, if the lessor by his deed licence the lessee for life or yeares, (which is restrained by condition not to alien without licence) to alien, and the lessor dyeth before the lessee doth alien, yet is his death no countermand of the licence, but that he may alien, for the licence exempteth the lessee out of the penaltie of the condition, and it was executed on the part of the lessor as much as might be. And so was it resolved, Michael. 3. Jacob. in communibus Banco. As if the king doth licence to alien in mortmaine, and dyeth, the licence may be executed after (10).

Sect. 67.

(F. N. B. Waste 55. Post 355.)

SI le le lessee fait waft. Waste, Vastum dicitur à vastando, of wasting and depopulating: and for that waft is often alledg- ITEM si tenements soient lesses a un home per term de demy an, ou pur le ALSO if tenements be let to a man for terme of halfe a yeare, or for a quarter of a quarter

n. 2. Slaving's case. A seised of the manors of B and C, and also of a mill in possession of I. S. by force of a lease for years makes charter of feoffment, with letter of attorney to enter into the said manors and all other the said lands and tenements and seisin thereof to take and after such possession and seisin taken such seisin and possession to deliver, &c. according to the form and effect of the deed. The attorney makes livery in the manors of C and B, but not of the mill, nor doth I. S. attorn. Ruled, that the mill doth not pass, but that the livery of the manors was well executed. Hal. MSS.

(1) See ante 49. b. and Post. 115. a. and 181. b.—(2) Vide these diversities. A makes letter of attorney to B C and D conjunctim et divisim to make livery. If two make livery, it is void, because it is neither conjunctim nor divisim. 27. H. 8. 6. But if one makes livery in one parcel, and another in another parcel, it is good. M. 31. 32. Eliz. Trevillian's case. But if two make livery in presence of the third, he not saying anything, it seems good. Dy. 63. But if authority be to six or any two of them to do an act, there if it be done by three it is good. 5. Rep. 91. Hoe's case. So where one devised, that his executors or any one of them might sell his land, and made three executors, and one died, and the other two sold, it was ruled good; for it is not so strict as conjunctim et divisim. M. 37. 38. Eliz. C. B. the case of Townsend and Whales. But if warrant be by sheriff to three bailiffs conjunctim et divisim, execution by two is good, because it is the execution of justice. M. 44. 45. Eliz. King and Hobbs. Hal. MSS. See ante 52. note 3. to which part this note more properly belongs. See also infra note 6.—(3) So such attorney may deliver seisin with assent of lessee for years, he being on the land. Adjudged P. 1651. B. R. Wegg and Villers. Hal. MSS.—See ante 48. b.—(4) Adjudged contra between Dicker and Noland. Hal. MSS. See also another case contra in Cro. Eliz. 905. The case cited by lord Hale is in 2. Ro. Abr. 8. pl. 12.—(5) Dy. 233. Sir Walter Denny's case. Hal. MSS.—(6) If A and B join-tenants in fee make charter of feoffment to C and D with letter of attorney to deliver seisin, and B or C dies, it is good as to the survivor. M. 32. 33. Eliz. W. 68.—(7) Vid. letter of attorney to deliver seisin after the feoffor's death in 40. Aff. 38. Nota by devise or by special custom authority may be created executory after the party's death. Lease to A for life, remainder to B for life, A dies, videtur, that livery cannot be made to B. P. 31. Eliz. B. R. W. n. 4. Peirce and Leverage. Hal. MSS.—(8) 11. H. 7. 27. 12. H. 8. 12. 5. H. 7. 25. 21. H. 7. 1. Hal. MSS.—(9) But it seems, that livery cannot be made till the new mayor is made. Hal. MSS.—(10) Vid. Plowd. Com. 457. contra in licence to the tenant to alien, ut videtur. Hal. MSS.

quarter de un an, &c. en tiel case, si le lessée fait wast, le lessor averra envers luy briefe de wast, et le briefe dirra, Quod tenet ad terminum annorum, mes il avera un speciall declaration sur le veritie de son matter, et le count nabatera le briefe, pur ceo que il puit aver nul autre briefe sur le matter.

yeares, &c. in this case if the lessee commit wast, the lessor shall have a writ of waste against him; and the writ shall say, Quod tenet ad terminum annorum, but he shall have an especiall declaration upon the truth of his matter, and the count shall not abate the writ, because he cannot have any other writ upon the matter.

ged to be in timber, which we call in Latine maremium, or marefnum, or marefmium, it is good to fetch both of them from the original. First, timber is a Saxon word. Secondly, maremium is derived of the French word marreim, or marrein, which properly signifieth timber.

An action of wast doth lie against tenant by the curtesie, tenant in dower, tenant life, foryeares, or halfe a yeare; or gardian in chivalry (1), by him that hath the immediate estate of inheritance, for wast or destruction in houses, gardens, woods, trees, or in lands (2); meadows, &c. or in exile of men to the disherison of him in the reversion or remainder.

V. Marlb. ca. 23. 2. part of the Instit. (F. N. B. 55.)

There be two kinds of wasts, viz. voluntary or actual, and permissive. [a] Wast may be done in houses, by pulling or prostrating them down, or by suffering the same to be uncovered, whereby the spars or rafters, plaunchers, or other timber of the house are rotten (3).

[b] But if the house be uncovered when the tenant cometh in, it is no wast in the tenant, to suffer the same to fall downe. But though the house be ruinous at the tenant's coming in, yet if he pull it downe, it is wast unless he reedifie it againe (4). [c] Also if glasse windowes (tho' glased by the tenant himselfe) be broken downe, or carried away, it is wast, for the glasse is part of his house. And so it is of wainscot (5), benches, doores, windowes, furnaces, and the like, annexed or fixed to the house, either by him in the reversion, or the tenant.

[d] Though there be no timber growing upon the ground, yet the tenant at his perill must keepe the houses from wasting. If the tenant doe or suffer waste to be done in houses, yet if he repaire them before any action brought, there lieth no action of wast against him, but he cannot plead, Quod non fecit vastum, but the speciall matter.

A wall uncovered when the tenant cometh in, is no wast if it be suffered to decay. [e] If the tenant cut downe or destroy any fruit trees growing in the garden or orchard, it is waste; but if such trees grow upon any of the ground which the tenant holdeth out of the garden or orchard, it is no waste (6).

[f] If the tenant build a new house, it is waste, and if he suffer it to be wasted, it is a new waste. [g] If the house fall downe by tempest, or be burnt by lightning, or prostrated by enemies, or the like, without a default of the tenant, or was ruinous at his coming in, and fall downe, the tenant may build the same againe with such materials as remaines, and with other timber which he may take growing on the ground for his habitation, but he must not make the house larger then it was. If the house be discovered by tempest, the tenant must in convenient time repaire it (7).

[h] If the tenant of a dove house, warren, parke, vivary, estanges, or the like, do take so many, as such sufficient store be not left as he found when he came in, this is wast, and to suffer the pale to decay, whereby the deere is dispersed, is waste (8).

And it is to be observed, that there is wast, destruction, and exile. Wast properly is in houses, gardens, (as is aforesaid) in timber trees, (viz. oke, ash, and elme, and these be timber trees in all places) either by cutting of them downe, or topping of them, or doing any act whereby the timber may decay. Also in countries where timber is scant, and beeches or the like are converted to building for the habitation of man, or the like, they are all accounted timber. [i] If the tenant cut down timber trees, or such as are accounted timber (10), as is aforesaid, this is wast, and if he suffer the young germins to be destroyed this is destruction [k] So it is, if the tenant cut down underwood, (as he may by law) yet if he suffer the young germins to be destroyed, or if he stub up the same, this is destruction.

[l] Cutting downe of willowes, beech, birch, aspe, maple, or the like, standing in the defence and safeguard of the house, is destruction. [m] If there be a quickset fence of white thorne, if the tenant stub it up, or suffer it to be destroyed, this is destruction (11), and for all these and the like destructions an action of wast lyeth. [n] The cutting of dead wood, that is, Ubi arbores sunt aride, mortuae, cavae, non existentes macremium, nec portantes fructus, nec folia in aestate, is

[a] 34. E. 3. Wast. 143. (4. Co. 62. Mo. 54. 2. Ro. Ab. 819.)

[b] 40. Aff. p. 22. 2. Mar. Dyer 117. 23. H. 6. 24. 10. H. 7. 2. 44. E. 3. 44. 29. E. 3. 33. 4. Co. 63. Herlakenden's case.

[c] 22. H. 6. 18. 12. H. 8. 1. 13. H. 7. 21. 22. E. 4. 18. 21. E. 4. 39. 10. H. 7. 2. Reg. Judic. 26.

[d] 44. E. 3. 21. 38. Aff. 1. 4. E. 3. Wast. 22. 10. El. Dyer 276. 5. Co. 119. in Whelpdale's case. 19. E. 3. Wast. 30. 44. E. 3. 44.

[e] 7. H. 6. 38. 44. E. 3. 44.

[f] 42. E. 3. 21. 49. E. 3. 2. 9. H. 6. 52. 17. E. 2. Wast. 118. (Hob. 234. 2. Ro. Ab. 814. 815. 820. 1. Ro. Ab. 507. cont. Mo. 7.)

[g] 4. Co. 63. Herlakenden's case. 43. E. 3. 6. 26. E. 3. 76. 11. H. 4. 32. 12. H. 4. 5. 22. H. 6. 18. 19. E. 3. Wast. 30.

[h] Temps E. 1. wast. 128. Brit. fo. 34. 5. R. 2. wast 97. 12. H. 8. 2. Pl. Com. 322. 7. H. 3. Wast. 141. (2. Ro. Ab. 814.)

[i] 22. H. 6. 12. 2. 9. H. 6. 1. 66. 11. H. 6. 1. F. N. B. 59. m. [j] 20. E. 3. Wast. 32. 10. H. 7. 2. 42. E. 3. 6. b. 5. E. 4. 100.

41. E. 3. wast. 82. 20. E. 3. wast. 32. 12. E. 4. 1. (9) [k] 40. E. 3. 15. b. & 35. 12. E. 4. 1. 12. H. 8. 1. b. 10. H. 7. 2. 8. E. 2. wast. 111. 4. E. 6. wast.

Br. 136. (Cro. Ja. 126. 4. Co. 63. 64. 1. Ro. Ab. 569.) [m] 46. E. 3. 17. 9. H. 6. 10. 12. H. 8. 1.

[n] 16. El. Dy. 332. 20. E. 3. Wast. 32. F. N. B. 59. m. no

- (1) Some of these were not punishable at common law. See Post 53. b. and 54. 2.
- (2) On writ of waste in lands, one cannot assign waste for cutting of trees, because for that the writ should be in boscis. Tr. 6. Eliz. More n. 200. Hal. MSS.
- (3) But the bare suffering them to be uncovered, without rotting the timber, is not waste. P. 9. Jac. C. B. Knoll's case. Converting two chambers into one, or converting a hand-mill into an horse-mill, is waste. H. 4. Jac. C. B. Grave's case. Hal. MSS.
- (4) But if an house built de novo was never covered in, it is not waste to abate it. 40. Aff. 12. Vid. 21. H. 6. 46. 26. E. 3. 26. Dy. 36. Hal. MSS.
- (5) It is said, that a tenant for years during his term may take away chimney pieces and even wainscott. See 1. Atk. 477. and 3. Atk. 13. and note there the distinction taken as to fixtures between the several cases of heir and executor, of tenant for life and him in remainder, and of landlord and tenant.
- (6) 14. H. 4. 12. Hal. MSS.
- (7) 12. H. 4. 5. Hal. MSS. — The 6. An. ch. 31. which was at first temporary, but is now made perpetual, enacts, that no action shall be prosecuted against any person, in whose house any fire shall accidentally begin, with a proviso that the act shall not defeat any agreement between landlord and tenant. See Post 53. b. and n. 5. there.
- (8) If B lessee of warren by charter or prescription ploughs the land, it is waste. Contra if it be only land stored with conies and not a legal warren. P. 40. Eliz. C. B. Moyle's case. C. C. n. 21. and T. 40. Eliz. n. 21. Vid. Noy n. 312. Moyle's case. Stopping and digging coney-boroughs not waste in a warren. Hal. MSS. See Noy 70.
- (9) 7. H. 6. 38. Dy. 35. Hal. MSS.
- (10) Beech and White-thorn may be timber by the custom of the country, and it is waste to cut them. M. 9. Jac. Palmer's case. Hal. MSS.
- (11) But cutting up of quick-sets is not waste, if it preserves the spring. M. 9. Jac. C. B. Palmer's case. Cutting of ash under the growth of 20 years not waste. M. 41. 42. Eliz. C. B. Hal. MSS.

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 67.

[o] 44 E. 3. 44. 20. E. 3. Waff. 32. F. N. B. 59. b. 19. E. 3. Waff. 20.

[p] 22. H. 6. 18. b. 9. E. 4. 35. 41. E. 3. Waff. 82. 17. E. 3. 7. 9. H. 6. 66. 2. H. 7. 24. F. N. B. 59. n. & 149. c. 20. E. 3. Waff. 32. (2. Ro. Ab. 815. 116.)

[q] Anno 6. El. Of the report of Justice Dailion in Griffin's case. 17. E. 3. 65. Brit. fol. 168. b. (Mo. 62. 69.)

[r] 20. H. 6. 1. F. N. B. 59. n. 6. El. ubi supra.

[s] 23. H. 8. Dyer 37. 22. H. 6. 24. 10. H. 7. 5. 2. 44. E. 3. 44. (2. Ro. Ab. 814. Cro. Ja. 182.)

[t] 16. El. Dy. 332. 21. H. 6. 47. 5. E. 4. 100. 12. E. 3. Waff. 28. 48. E. 3. 25. Temps. F. 1. 123. 20. E. 3. Waff. 32.

39. E. 3. Waff. 30. (Cro. Ja. 292)

[u] 3. E. 3. Waff. 5. Bracton lib. 4. fol. 315.

[v] Bracton fol. 168. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 11. 16. H. 3. Waff. 135. 3. E. 2. tit. Waff. 2. 17. E. 2. Waff. 118. 10. H. 7. 2. H. 6. 11. c. H. 6. 52. 11. E. 2. Waff. 113. F. N. B. 56. H. & 55. c. Regill. judic. 25.

[w] Glouc. cap. 5. W. 1. cap. 21. Magna Charta cap. 4. Merlebr. cap. 23.

[x] Bract. lib. 4. fol. 316. & 317.

[y] Fleta lib. 1. cap. 11.

[z] 7. E. 3. 54. b. 2. H. 5. 7. 22. H. 6. 24. 13. H. 7. 27. H. 8. 13. F. N. B. 59. f. 8. R. 2. Waff. 147 (6). (5. Co. 11.)

[a] 2. H. 4. 22.

[b] 2. H. 4. 2 (8).

[c] 10. E. 4. 1. 49. E. 3. 25. 23. H. 8. tit. Waff. Br. 38. E. 3. 17. 44. E. 3. 8. 45. E. 3. 3. 46. E. 3. 11. 11. E. 2. Waff. 115. 2. Mar. Waff. 117. 8. E. 2. Waff. 110 (9). (Ant. 42. a.)

[d] 24. E. 3. 27. 50. E. 3. 3. 8. H. 6. 13. (Post. 247. b. 5. Co. 75. 2. Ro. Ab. 834. Post. 218. b.)

[e] Bract. lib. 4. f. 315. 316. 317. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 11. Brit. fol. 168. Doct. & Stud. lib. 2. ca. 1. 12. H. 4. 3. 10. H. 3. Waff. 142. 20. H. 6. 1. 4. H. 3. Waff. 140. 9. H. 3. ibid. 136. (10. Co. 116. b.)

no wast; but turning of trees to coles for fewell, when there is sufficient dead wood, is wast.

[o] If the tenant suffer the houses to be wasted, and then fell down timber to repaire the same, this is a double wast. [p] Digging for gravel, lime, clay, brick, earth, stone, or the like, or for mines of mettall, coale, or the like, hidden in the earth, and were not open when the tenant came in, is wast; but the tenant may dig for gravell or chay for the reparation of the house, as well as he may take convenient timber trees (1).

[q] It is wast to suffer a wall of the sea to be in decay, so as by the flowing and reflowing of the sea, the meadow or marsh is surrounded, whereby the same becomes unprofitable: but if it be surrounded suddenly by the rage and violence of the sea, occasioned by winde, tempest, or the like, without any default in the tenant, [r] this is no wast punishable (2). So it is, if the tenant repaire not the bankes or walls against rivers, or other waters, whereby the meadows or marshes be surrounded, and become rushy and unprofitable (3).

[s] If the tenant convert arable land into wood, or à converso, or meadow into arable, it is waste, for it changeth not onely the course of his husbandry, but the proove of his evidencce.

[t] The tenant may take sufficient wood to repaire the walls, pales, fences, hedges and ditches, as he found them, but he can make no new (4): and he may take also sufficient plowbote, firebote, and other housebote.

The tenant cutteth downe trees for reparations and selleth them, and after buyeth them againe, and employs them about necessary reparations, yet it is wast by the vendition: he cannot sell trees, and with the money cover the house: burning of the house by negligence or mischance is waste (5).

[u] If a man make a lease for life and by deed grant that if any waste or destruction be done, that it shall be redressed by neighbours, and not by suit or plea, notwithstanding an action of wast shall lye, for the place wasted cannot be recovered without a plea.

[v] Bracton, Fleta, and Britton doe use the same division as is aforesaid, viz. Vastum, destructio, et exilium, in their proper signification.

Now somewhat is to be spoken of exile or destruction of men; exile or destruction of villaines, or tenants at will, or making them poore, where they were rich when the tenant came in, whereby they depart from their tenures, is wast. [a] And yet the statute of Glouc' speaketh not of exile, but it is comprehended under the general word of wast. The statute of W. 1. hath destructio, the statute of Magna Charta hath vastum et destructio, the statute of Merlebridge hath vastum, venditionem et exilium in domibus, boscis, vel hominibus, &c.

But wast and destruction in their larger sence are words convertible. [b] Item de hoc quod dicit vastum et exilium, sciendum est quod non sunt referenda ad eundem intellectum, sed vastum et destructio fere idem sunt, vastum idem est quod destructio, et à converso, et se habent ad omnem destructionem generaliter.

[c] Vastum autem et destructio fere æquipollent et convertibiliter se habent in domibus, boscis, et gardinis; sed exilium dici poterit, cum servi manumittantur et à tenementis suis injuriose ejiciantur. Fortuna autem et ignis vel hujusmodi eventus inopinati omnes teneantes excusant.

[d] No person shall have an action of wast, unlesse he hath the immediate state of inheritance, but sometime another shall joyne with him for conformity. As if a reversion be granted to two, and to the heires of one; they two shall joyne in an action of wast: and in like sort the surviving coparcener, and the tenant by the curtesie shall joyne in an action of waste: and if two joyntenants be, and to the heires of one of them, and they make a lease for life, they shall joyne in an action of waste (7). [e] If the estate tail determine, hanging the action of waste, and the plt. becomes tenant in taile after possibility, the action of waste is gone. [f] If the tenant doth wast, and he in the reversion dyeth, the heyre shall not have an action of waste for the waste done in the life of the ancestor; nor a bishop, master of an hospitall, parson, or the like in the time of the predecessor. [g] And so if lessee for yeares doth wast, and dyeth, an action of wast lyeth not against the executor or administrator, for waste done before their time. But if two coparceners be of a reversion, and waste is committed, and the one of them die, the aunt and the neece shall joyne in an action of waste (10).

[h] If lands be given to two and the heires of one of them, he that hath the fee shall not have an action of waste upon the statute of Glouc. for that they are joyntenants, but his heire shall have an action of waste against tenant for life.

Note after wast done there is a speciall regard to be had to the continuance of the reversion in the same state that it was at the time of the waste done, for if after the waste he granteth it over, though he taketh backe the whole estate again, yet is the wast dispunishable. So if he grant the reversion to the use of himselfe and his wife, and of his heires, yet the wast is dispunishable, and so of the like, because the estate of the reversion continueth not, but is altered, and consequently the action of waste for waste done before (which consists in privy) is gone.

[i] A prohibition of waste did lye against tenant by the curtesie (11), tenant in dower, and a gardian in chivalry by the common law, but not against tenant for life, or yeares, because they

(1) Nota, though mines be open at the time, one cannot take timber to use in them. T. 16. Jac. Darcy's Case, Hutt. 19. Hob. n. 298. Hal. MSS.

(2) See Call. on Sew. 2d. ed. 146.

(3) Because he is bound to repair, though he doth hold the bank. 46. E. 3. Waste 91. Vid. T. 6. Eliz. Mo. n. 173. Hal. MSS.

(4) Tenant cannot make rails, where none were before. Dy. 332. Hal. MSS.

(5) But now by the 6. An. c. 31. no action will lie against the tenant for such an accident. See the statute more fully stated in note 7. ante 53. a. Note also the passage from Fleta cited infra by lord Coke.

(6) 17. E. 3. 50. Hal. MSS.

(7) Fine to the use of A for life, remainder to B in fee, with power for A to make leases for three lives; A makes lease accordingly, and the lessee commits waste: A and B shall join in waste. T. 4. Car. C. B. Sacheverell's case. Hal. MSS.

(8) 21. H. 6. 46. 39. E. 3. 15. 42. E. 3. 22. Hal. MSS.

(9) 18. E. 4. 16. 10. H. 7. 5. 2. E. 3. 2. Hal. MSS.

(10) Waste amongst tenants in common.—A makes lease to B for years of two parts of a messuage; B commits waste. It was ruled that waste lies, and shall be assigned in the intirety, but that the recovery should be of only two parts of the damages and of two parts of the place wasted. P. 35. Eliz. Poph. n. 2. Warnford's case. Hal. MSS.

(11) Some have thought, that at common law waste did not lie against tenant by the curtesy. See 2. Inst. 301.

they came in by their own act, and he might have provided that no waste should be done.

[i] A tenant by the curtesie or in dower can hold of none but of the heire, and his heires by descent, and therefore if they grant over their whole estate, and the grantee doth waste, yet the heire shall have an action of waste against them, and recover the land against the assignee: but if the heire either before the assignment had granted, or after the assignment doth grant the reversion over, the stranger shall have an action of waste against the assignee, because in both cases the privity is destroyed: in all other cases the action of waste shall be brought against him that did the waste (for it is in nature of a trespassse) unless it be in the case of a ward [k] for there if the gardian doth waste and assigne over, the action lieth against the assignee [l]. A gardian shall not be punished for waste done by a stranger, it is so penall unto him, for he shall lose the wardship both of the body and of the land (5), though the waste be but to the value of twenty shillings, and if that sufficeth not to satisfie for the waste, then he shall recover damages of the waste, over and above the losse of the ward. But tenant by the curtesie, tenant in dower, tenant for life, yeares, &c. shall answer for the waste done by a stranger, and shall take their remedy over. [m] But if there be two joyntenants of a ward, and one of them doe waste both shall answer for it.

[n] If the gardian doth waste and the heire within age bring an action of waste, the gardian shall lose the wardship as is aforesaid, but if the heire bring an action of waste at his full age, then he shall recover treble damages, for then he cannot lose the wardship.

[o] An infant and baron and fem shall be punished for waste done by a stranger, and so shall the wife that hath the state by survivour for waste done by the husband in his life time, if she agree to the estate, though there hath been variety of opinions in our bookes.

[p] But if fem tenant for life take husband, and the husband doth waste, and the wife dieth, no action of waste lieth against the husband in the tenuit, for he was seised but in jure uxoris, and his wife was tenant of the freehold; but if a fem be possessed of a terme for yeares, and take husband, and the husband doth waste, and the wife dieth, the husband shall be charged in an action of waste, for the law giveth the terme to him.

[q] If tenant for life grant over his estate upon condition, and the grantee doth waste, and the grantor re-enteth for the condition broken, the action of waste shall be brought against the grantee, and the place wasted recovered.

[r] If a lease for life be made to a villeine, and waste is done, the lord enteth, he shall not be punished for the waste done before, but for waste done after, he shall.

[s] An occupant shall be punished for waste, and so if an estate be made to A. and his heires during the life of B. A dieth, the heire of A shall be punished in an action of waste.

[t] If a lease be made to A for life, the remainder to B for life, the remainder to C in fee, in this case where it is said in the Register, and in F. N. B. that an action of waste doth lie, it is to be understood after the death or surrender of B in the meane remainder, for during his life, no action of waste doth lie (5).

But if a lease for life be made, the remainder for yeares, the remainder in fee, an action doth lie presently during the terme in remainder, for the meane terme for yeares is no impediment.

But if a man make a lease for life or yeares, and after granteth the reversion for yeares, the lessor shall have no action of waste during the yeares, for he himself hath granted away the reversion, in respect whereof he is to maintaine his action. (*) Otherwise it is, if he had made a lease in reversion which had been but a future interest, for there an action of waste lieth during the terme, and so is the booke to be understood, and the terme shall be saved in that case.

[u] No action of waste lieth against a gardian in socage, but an account or trespassse, nor against tenant by statute staple, &c. or elegit (6).

[w] If tenant for life or yeares or their assignee make a grant over, and notwithstanding take the profits, an action of waste lieth against him, by him in the reversion or remainder by the statute, Nota (7).

[x] If waste be done sparfim here and there in woods, the whole woods shall be recovered, or so much wherein the waste sparfim is done. And so in houses so many rooms shall be recovered wherein there is waste done, but if waste be done sparfim throughout, all shall be recovered. It hath beene said that if the hall be wasted, the whole house shall be recovered, because the whole house is denominated of the hall: but later authority is to the contrary.

[y] There is waste of a small value, as Bracton saith, Nisi vastum ita modicum sit propter quod non fit inquisitio facienda. Yet trees to the value of three shillings and foure pence hath beene adjudged waste, and many things together may make waste to a value (9). But let us now returne to our author (10).

Briefe de waste. See in the Register five severall writs of waste; two at the common law for waste done by tenant in dower, or the gardian; and three by speciall or statute law, for waste done by tenant for life, for yeares and tenant by the curtesie.

Briefe

(1) 7. E. 3. 34. Hal. MSS.

(2) 26. E. 3. Waste 10. is contra. Hal. MSS.

(3) Value of wardship not lost. Vid. Dy. 35. 28. H. 8. Bendl. n. 33. Hal. MSS.

(4) 3. E. 3. 18. Hal. MSS.

(5) But though action of waste doth not lie in this case on account of the intermediate remainder for life, yet a court of equity will interpose by injunction to prevent waste. See 3. Atk. 95. and 210.

(6) Vid. F. N. B. 58. Grantee of reversion shall have waste. Hal. MSS.

(7) F. N. B. 59. C. Hal. MSS.

(8) 3. E. 3. 24. Hal. MSS.

(9) Vid. Hil. 40. Eliz. C. B. n. 9. Thorne's case. C. C. Waste to the value of 4 d. Hal. MSS.

(10) It ought to be to the value of 40 d. at least. Noy n. 18. Thore and Thomas. Hal. MSS.—See Noy 4.—As lord Hale makes so frequent a reference to Noy's Reports, it may not be amiss to apprise the student, that though the book is known by the name of that very learned lawyer, yet there is not the least reason to suppose, that such a loose collection of notes was intended by him for the public eye. In an edition of Noy's Reports penes editorem, there is the following observation upon them in manuscript. A simple collection of scraps of cases made by Serjeant Sizer from Noy's loose papers, and imposed upon the world for the reports of that vile prerogative fellow Noy. This account of Noy's Reports, which was probably written soon after the first publication in 1656, though expressed in terms inexcusably gross, contains an anecdote not altogether useless.

(11) 9. H. 6. 66. Hal. MSS.

(2. Inst. 145. Pest 273. 299. b. 5. Co. 77. Stat. Glouc. c. 5.)

[i] F. N. B. 56. c. et f. Temps E. 1. Waste 122. 18. E. 3. 30. E. 3. 16. 38. E. 3. 23. 11. H. 4. 18. 4. E. 3. 25. Regist. 72. 3. Co. 23. Walker's case. 9. Co. 142. Beaumont's case (1). (2. Inst. 303. Dr. & Stud. lib. 2. c. 1.)

[k] 27. E. 3. 81. 26. E. 3. Waste 10 (2).

[l] 12. H. 4. 3. Bract. lib. 4. 316. 317. Fleta lib. 1. c. 11. Brit. 168. 34. E. 3. Waste 146. 44. E. 3. 27. F. N. B. 59. a. & 60. g. & T.

[m] 33. E. 3. Waste 6 (4).

[n] 44. E. 3. 27. 48. E. 3. 10. F. N. B. 60. r. 12. H. 4. 3. 19. E. 2. Waste 117. 41. E. 2. Waste 81. 3. E. 2. Waste 3. 7. E. 3. 12.

[o] 15. H. 3. Waste 16. temps E. 1. Waste 128. 2. H. 4. 3. E. 3. 13. 76. 11. Aff. 1. 217.

H. 6. 24. b. 33. H. 6. 31. 4. 42. E. 3. 22. 19. E. 3. Waste 246. 46. E. 3. 25. 7. H. 6. 2. b. 3. E. 3. 46. 10. E. 3. 17. 18. 9.

E. 3. 42. 9. E. 3. Waste 246. 17. E. 4. 7. 9. H. 6. 52. F. N. B. 36. b. Doct. & Stud. lib. 2. c. 1. 23.

H. 8. Waste 138. 8. Co. 442. Willingham's case.

[p] 5. Co. 75. Clifton's case. 49. E. 3. 25. 46. E. 3. Waste. Stat. tham. 10. H. 6. 11. 12. (2. Inst. 301.)

[q] 30. E. 3. 16.

[r] 48. E. 3. 19.

[s] 6. Co. 37. le Deane and Chapt. of Worcester's case 10. Co. 9. b. (2. Ro. Ab. 826.)

[t] 4. E. 3. 18. Cote's case. 3. F. 3. 18. F. N. B. 58. c. & 59. h. 50.

E. 3. 33. E. 3. Waste 144. 11. E. 3. Waste 118. 10. E. 4. 9. Regist. 74. 2. Co. 92. inter Paget & Carie in Bingham's case. 5. Co. 76. Paget's case. 10. Co. 44. Jenning's case. F. N. B. 59. h. 4. E. 3. 18.

* 4. E. 3. 18. F. tit. Waste 18.

[u] Merlebridge cap. 17. 21. E. 3. 30. 16. E. 3. tit. Waste 100.

14. E. 3. Waste 107. 2. E. 2. Waste 1. 28. H. 6. Waste 9. 32.

H. 6. 7. F. N. B. 59. E.

[w] 11. H. 6. cap. 5. 5. Co. 77. Boothe's case.

[x] 8. E. 3. Waste 112. 4. E. 6. Waste 136. 4. E. 3. 32. 15. H. 7. 11. 15. E. 3. Waste 134.

temps E. 1. Waste 134. 18. H. 8. 1 (8).

[y] Bract. lib. 4. fo. 316. 38. E. 3. 7. b. 34. E. 3. Waste 146. 14. H. 4. 11. b. F. N. B. 60. c. temps E. 1. Waste 124. 19. H. 6. 8 (11).

Lib. 1. Cap. 7. Of Tenant for yeares. Sect. 67.

[z] Vid. Bract. lib. 5. f. 413. b. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 12. See the second part of the Institutes. W. 2. cap. 24.

De vasto. Bract. li. 4. f. 315. 316. 317. Fleta li. 1. c. 11. & li. 5. c. 33. Britton fol. 163. & 168. 46. E. 3. 31. F. N. B. 60. c. 4. E. 4. 13. 37. H. 6. 26. b. 7. H. 7. 2. 14. H. 8. 12. 13. E. 3. 27. (Dr. & Stud. li. 1. ca. 23.)

Vide Marlebridge, ca. 23. 2. part of the Institutes.

[a] 12. H. 8. 1. (11. Co. 47. 79. b. Mo. 23.)

F. N. B. fo. 127.

(Hob. 234.)
[b] 17. E. 3. 7. 9. H. 6. 66. 12. H. 6. 18. 9. E. 4. 35. 12. E. 4. S. F. N. B. 149. c. & 59. n.
[c] 5. Co. 12. Sanders' case. (1. Co. 46.)

[d] 19. E. 2. Covenant 25. 19. E. 3. Covenant 24. 32. E. 3. Quid juris cl. 5. 17. E. 3. 20. 46. E. 3. 31. 40. E. 3. 5. 11. H. 4. 34. 14. Eliz. Dyer 309. M. 40. & 41. Eliz. in Com. Banc. Rot. 2215. in tresp. inter Sparke & Sparke. Hill. 42. Eliz. Sir John Savage's case in Curia Wardorum. (2. Ro. Abr. 47. 418. Mo. 100. 339. 666. 2. Leon. 6. Yelv. 85.)

Briefe dirra. The writs original of the register [z] (as Bracton saith) were formed, and of course had their first authority by act of parliament, and therefore without an act of parliament they cannot be altered, or changed, which is proved by the statute of W. 2. cap. 24. whereby remedy is provided in many cases. But heare what Bracton saith. Sunt quedam brevia formata in suis casibus, et quedam de cursu, quæ concilio totius regni sunt approbata, quæ quidem mutari non possunt, absque eorundem contraria voluntate. Magistralia autem sæpe variantur secundum varietatem casuum, &c. And this is the reason that in this case of halfe a yeare the words of the writ shall be without change, Quod tenet ad terminum annorum, and the pl' must make a speciall declaration according to his case, for otherwise he should be without remedy. In this particular case the statute of Glouc. cap. 5. which giveth the action of waste against the lessee for life or yeares (which lay not against them at the common law) speaketh of one that holdeth for tearme of yeares in the plurall number, and yet here it appeareth by the authority of Littleton, that although it be a penall law, whereby treble damages and the place wasted shall be recovered, yet a tenant for half a yeare being within the same mischiete, shall be within the same remedie, though it be out of the letter of the law, for Qui hæret in littera, hæret in cortice, which is an excellent example, whereupon in many like cases a man may settle a certaine judgment. You may observe in the said ancient authors, what remedie was given for wast at the common law, and against whom, and what was adjudged waste, destruction, and exile.

In many cases a tenant for life or yeares may fell down timber to make reparations, albeit he be not compellable thereunto, and shall not be punished for the same in any action of waste. As [a] if a house be ruinous at the time of the lease made, if the lessee suffer the house to fall down he is not punishable, for he is not bound by law to repaire the house in that case. And yet if he cut down timber upon the ground so letten, and repaire it, he may well justifie it, and the reason is, for that the law doth favour the supportation and maintenance of houses of habitation for mankind. And therefore if two or more joyntenants or tenants in common be of a house of habitation, and the one will not repaire the house, the other shall have by the law a writ de reparatione facienda, and the writ saith, Ad sustentationem ejusdem domus teneantur. So it is if the lessor by his covenant undertaketh to repaire the houses, yet the lessee (if the lessor doth it not) may with the timber growing upon the ground repaire it though he be not compellable thereunto (1). In the same manner, if a man make a lease of a house and land without impeachment of waste for the house, yet may the lessee with the timber upon the ground repaire the house, though he may utterly waste it if he will, and so in many other cases. A man hath land in which there is a mine of coales, or of the like, and maketh [b] a lease of the land (without mentioning any mines) for life or for yeares, the lessee for such mines as were open at the time of the lease made, may digge and take the profit thereof. [c] But he cannot digge for any new mine, that was not open at the time of the lease made, for that should be adjudged waste. And if there be open mines, and the owner make a lease of the land, with the mines therein, this shall extend to the open mines onely, and not to any hidden mine (2), but if there be no open mine, and the lease is made of the land together with all mines therein, there the lessee may digge for mines, and enjoy the benefit thereof, otherwise those words should be void. I have been the more spacious, concerning this learning of waste, for that it is most necessary to be knowne of all men (3).

Now hath Littleton spoken of an estate for life, and an estate for yeares in severall persons. Now let us see how they stand simul and seml in one person.

If a man letteth lands to another for life, the remainder to him for 21 yeares, he hath both estates in him so distinctly, as he may grant away either of them; for a greater estate may uphold a lesser, but not à converso, and therefore if a man make a lease to one for 21 yeares, the remainder to him for terme of his life, the lease for yeares is drowned.

[a] If a man make a lease for life to one, the remainder to his executors for 21 yeares, the terme for yeares shall vest in him (4), for even as ancestor and heire are correlativa, as to inheritance: (as if an estate for life be made to A the remainder to B in taile, the remainder to the right heires of A the fee vested in A as it had been limited to him and his heires) even so are the testators and the executors correlativa as to any chattell. And therefore if a lease for life be made to the testator, the remainder to his executors for yeares, the chattle shall vest in the lessee himselfe, as well as if it had been limited to him and his executors.

CHAP.

(1) But if lessee covenants to repaire and doth not repaire, waste will not lie. 29. E. 3. 43. 21. H. 6. 6. Dy. 198. Hal. MSS.

(2) See ante 53. b. and n. 1. there.

(3) See further as to waste in the severall Abridgments, title Waste, and Fulb. 2. part Paral. Dial. 5. fol. 49. b.

(4) 50. Aff. 1. And per curiam in Sparke's case adjudged, that it shall go to the administrator. Vide tamen M. 44. 45. Eliz. Moore's Reports, n. 911. contra. Vid. 4. & 5. P. & M. Bendl. n. 115. Gravenor's case. Hal. MSS.

CHAP. 8. Sect. 68.

Of Tenant at will.

TENANT à vol-
lunt est, ou terres
ou tenements sont
lesses per un home
a un auter, a aver et tener a luy a la volunt le lessor, per force de quel lease le lessée est en possession. En tiel cas le lessée est appel tenant a volunt, pur ceo que il nad ascun certaine ne sure estate, car le lessor luy poit ouster
a quel temps que il luy plerroit. Uncore si le lessée emblea la terre, et le lessor, apres lembleer et devant que les bles sont matures, luy ousta, uncore le lessée avera les bles, et avera frank entre egres et regres a scier et de carier les bles,
pur ceo que il ne scarvoit a quel temps le lessor voloit entre sur luy.
Auterment est si tenant pur terme dans que conust le fine de son terme emblea sa terre, et le terme est finy de-vant que les bles sont matures. En ceocas le lessor, ou celuy en la

TENANT at will is, where lands or tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold to him at the will of the lessor, by force of which lease, the lessee is in possession. In this case the lessee is called tenant at will, because he hath no
certain nor sure estate, for the lessor may put him out at what time it pleaseth him. Yet if the lessee soweth the land, and the lessor, after it is sown and before the corne is ripe, put him out, yet the lessee shall have the corne, and shall have free entry egress and regress to cut and ca-rie away the corne, because he knew not at what time the lessor would enter upon him. Otherwise it is if tenant for yeares, which knoweth the end of his terme, doth sow the land, and his terme endeth before the corn is ripe. In this case the lessor, or he in

TENANT à vo-
lunt est, ou terres
ou tenements sont
lesses per un home a un auter, a aver et tener a luy a la volunt le lessor, &c.

(1) It is regularly true, that every lease at will must in law be at the will of both parties, and therefore when the lease is made, to have and to hold at the will of the lessor, the law implyeth it to be at the will of the lessee also; for it cannot be onely at the will of the lessor, but it must be at the will of the lessee also. And so it is when the lease is made to have and to hold at the will of the lessee, this must be also at the will of the lessor; and so are all the bookes, that seeme prima facie to differ, cleerly reconciled (3).

Pur ceo que il nad ascun certaine ou sure estate, &c.

Alia possessio est præcaria, et alia pro prece concessa, ut si quis sine scripto concesserit alicui habitationem vel usumfructum in re sua tenenda ad voluntatem suam, hæc quidem possessio præcaria est et nuda, eo quod tempestive et in-tempestive pro voluntate domini poterit revocari.

Uncore si le lessée emblea la terre, et le lessor apres le embleer, &c.

(4) The reason of this is, for that the estate of the lessee is uncertain, and therefore least the ground (5) should be unmanured, which should be hurtfull to the common-wealth, he shall

Fleta lib. 3. cap. 13.

(1. Ro. Abr. 853.)

18. H. 6. 1. 38. H. 6. 21. 9. E. 4.

1. b. 10. E. 4. 18. b. 21. H. 7.

38. 13. H. 8. 16. 14. H. 8. 11.

14. (2)

Fleta lib. 3. cap. 15.

(5. Co. 85. a. 1. Sid. 339.)

(1) 21. H. 6. 37. Lease for years with proviso that lessor may enter at his will is a lease at will. Per Past.—21. H. 6. 37. A grants to B that he may sow A's land, which is done accordingly; yet A shall have the emblements, because B hath not an interest. Per Past. Hal. MSS.—See acc. as to the former case 14. H. 8. 12. and by Yelverton justice in Litt. Rep. 235. and Hetl. 128.

(2) 49. H. 6. 18. 20. E. 4. 9. Hal. MSS.

(3) See further as to the manner in which an estate at will may be created by act of the parties, or arise by act of law. Vin. Abr. Estate S. b. and T. b. Com. Dig. Estates H. 1. 2. In 4. Burr. v. 3. page 1609. it is said, that in the country leases at will in the strict legal notion being found extremely inconvenient exist only notionally. But this observation I presume means, not that estates at will may not arise now as well as formerly, but only that it is no longer usual to create such estates by express words, and that the judges incline strongly against implying them. See 2. Blackst. Comment. 147.

(4) 9. E. 3. 24. is according to Littleton's diversity, and so is the 11. H. 4. 90. But lessee at will in such case of entry of the lessor before sowing shall not have the costs of plowing and manuring. Hal. MSS.—See f. c. acc. in Bro. Abr. Emblements pl. 7. and tenant by copie pl. 3.

(5) But if lessor covenants, that lessee for years shall have the emblements which are growing at the end of the term, there the property of the corn is well transferred to the lessee, though it be not severed during the term. Hob. case 175. Grantham and Hawley.—Hal. MSS. See Hob. 132.

shall reape the crop which he sowed in peace, albeit the lessor doth determine his will before it be ripe. And so it is if he set rootes, or sow hempe or flax, or any other annual profit, if (1) after the same be planted, the lessor oust the lessee, or if the lessee dieth, reversion avera les the reversion shall have blees, pur ceo que le the corne, because the termor conust le cer- lessee knew the cer- taintie de sa terme tainty of his terme and quant sa terme ser- when it would end. roit finy.

18. E. 4. 13. (Cro. Cha. 515.)

Temps E. 1. br. 25. 10 Aff. pl. 6. 10: E. 3. 29. 45. E. 3. 1. 7. H. 4. 17. 7. Aff. 19. 5 Co. 116. Oland's case. (2. Lill. 81. Hob. 132. 5. Co. 85. 1. Ro. Abr. 727.)

[a] 8. Aff. 21. S. E. 3. 54. Dyer 316. (6) (Cro. Cha. 515.)

[b] 16. H. 6. 6.

[c] 5. Co. 116. Oland's case. (9)

(1. Ro. Abr. 726)

[d] Oland's case ubi supra. (Dy. 31. 11. Co. 51. b.)

[e] 33. E. 3. tresp. F. 254. 42. E. 3. 25. Oland's case ubi supra.

[f] 27. H. 6. 1. 37. H. 6. 6. 22. E. 4. 45. 14. E. 4. 6. 15. E. 4. 31. 2. H. 7. 1. 5. H. 7. 17. 12. H. 7. 25. 10 H. 4. 1. 28. H. 8. 32. Dyer.

[g] 44. E. 3. 15. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 15.

[h] 35. H. 6. 24. 21. H. 6. 9. 1. E. 4. 3. 21. E. 4. 5. Pl. Com. parlon de Honyland's case.

(1. Ro. Abr. 860. Post 245. b. 8. Co. 89. 5. Co. 90.)

14. E. 4. 6. 8. E. 4. 11. &c.

[a] 5. Co. 10. Henstead's case. 10. Eliz. Dier 269. b.

yet he or his executors shall have that yeare's crop. But if he plant yong fruit trees, or yong okes, ashes, elmes, &c. or sow the ground with acornes, &c. there the lessor may put him out notwithstanding, because they will yeeld no present annuall profit. And this is not only proper to a lessee at will, that when the lessor determines his will that the lessee shall have the corne sowne, &c. but to every particular tenant that hath an estate incertaine, for that is the reason which Littleton expresseth in these words (Pur ceo que il nad aucun certaine ou sure estate) (2). And therefore if tenant for life soweth the ground, and dieth, his executors shall have the corne, for that his estate was uncertaine, and determined by the act of God (3). And the same law is of the lessee for yeares of tenant for life (4). So if a man be seised of land in the right of his wife, and soweth the ground, and he dieth, his executors shall have the corne, and if his wife die before him he shall have the corne (5). But if husband and wife be jointenants of the land, and the husband soweth the ground and the land surviveth to the wife, it is said [a] that she shall have the corne (7). If tenant pur terme d'auver soweth the ground, and Cesly que vie dieth, the lessee shall have the corne. If a man seised of lands in fee hath issue a daughter and dieth, his wife beeing enfeint with a son, the daughter soweth the ground, the sonne is borne, yet the daughter shall [b] have the corne, because her estate was lawful and defeated by the act of God, and it is good for the common-wealth that the ground be sowne (8). [c] But if the lessee at will sow the ground with corne, &c. and after he himselfe determine his will and refuseth to occupy the ground, in that case the lessor shall have the corne because he loseth his rent. And if a woman that holdeth land durante viduitate sua soweth the ground and taketh husband [d] the lessor shall have the emblements, because that the determination of her owne estate grew by her owne act. But where the estate of the lessee being incertaine is defeasible by a right paramount, or if the lease determine by the act of the lessee as by forfeiture, condition, &c. [e] there he that hath the right paramount, or that entreteth for any forfeiture, &c. shall have the corne (10).

If a disseisor sow the ground and sever the corne, and the disseisee re-enter, [f] he shall have the corne, because he entreteth by a former title, and severance or remooving of the corne altereth not the case, for the regresse is a recontinuacion of the freehold in him in judgment of law from the beginning (11).

[g] If tenant by statute merchant soweth the ground, and then a sudden and casuall profit falleth by which he is satisfied, he shall have the emblements (12).

Le lessor luy puit ouster. There is an expresse ouster, and implied ouster, an expresse, as when the lessor commeth upon the land, and expressely forewarneth the lessee to occupy the ground no longer; an implied, as if the lessor without the consent of the lessee enter into the land and cut downe a tree, this is a determination of the will, for that it should otherwise be a wrong in him, unless the trees were excepted, and then it is no determination of the will, for then the act is lawfull albeit the will doth continue. If a man leaseth a manor at will whereunto a common is appendant, if the lessor put in his beasts to use the common, this is a determination of the will (13). The lessor may by actual entry into the ground determine his will in the absence of the lessee (14), but by words spoken from the ground the will is not determined untill the lessee hath notice (15). No more then the discharge of a factor, attorney, or such like in their absence is sufficient in law untill they have notice thereof.

[a] If a woman make a lease at will reserving a rent and she taketh husband, this is no countermand of the lease at will, but the husband and wife shall have an action of debt for the rent; and so it is if a lease be made to a woman at will reserving a rent, and the lessee taketh husband, this is no countermand of the lease, but the lessor may have an action of debt or distreine them for the rent. So if the husband and wife make a lease at will of the wife's land reserving a rent and the husband die, yet the lease continueth. In like manner if a lease be made by two to two others at will, and the one of the lessors or of the lessees die, the lease at will is not determined in neither of those cases; which are necessary points to be knowne (16).

Après lembler et devant que les blees sont matures. Then put the case that the corne is ripe and ready to cut downe, and the lessor, before the lessee reapeth it, enter and put out the lessee, whether shall the lessee have the corne? and it is without all question that the lessee shall have it, for by the same reason that he shall have it when he is put out before it

(1) If lessee for life of a hop-ground dies in August before severance of the hops, the executor shall have them, though growing on ancient roots. Adjudged M. 13. Car. B. R. Crook n. 13. Latham and Atwood.—Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 515.

(2) A seised in fee sows the land, and devises to B for life, remainder to C in fee, and dies before severance. Ruled 1. The executor of A shall not have the emblements. 2. If B dies before severance, his executor shall not have them, but they shall go to him in remainder. But, 3. if the devise had been only to B, and B had died, there the executor of B should have had the corn, though B did not sow. M. 20. Jac. C. B. n. 22. Spencer's case. Winch. 51. M. 5. Jac. C. B. Skele and Arnold. Vid. Hob. 132. Hal. MSS.—See acc. as to the first point Cro. Eliz. 61. Yet it seems agreed, that executors shall have the corn growing as against an heir. See Hob. 132. 3. Salk. 160. 1. Ventr. 187. 3. Atk. 16. the opinion of Saund. ch. j. in Lill. Pract. Reg. tit. Emblements, and the year-books cited in Com. Dig. Biens G. 2. It is not easy to account for this distinction, which gives corn growing to the devisee, but denies it to the heir; though it has been attempted. See Gilb. Law of Evid. 250.

(3) Whether executor of tenant in dower shall pay rent on the statute of Merton, vid. Keilw. 125.—Hal. MSS: This annotation by lord Hale requires explanation. By the statute of Merton 20. H. 3. c. 2. the widow may devise the corn on the land she holds in dower, which, as some of our most ancient writers have thought, she could not do before; but the statute saves customs and services due in respect of the land which the widow held in dower. Now in the case in Keilway it is asserted, that under this statute the wife's executors may retain the land till they can reasonably carry the corn out of the land; and this I apprehend gave occasion to the query, whether the executors shall not pay rent. See 2. Infl. 80. 81.

(4) See Gouldsb. 144.

(5) But it is said, that if the land was sown before the marriage, the wife shall have the corn. 1. Ro. Abr. 727. pl. 17.

(6) 7. Aff. 13. 10. Aff. 6. 7. E. 3. 57. Hal. MSS.

(7) In Skele and Arnold M. 5. Jac. C. B. n. 5. D. D. the court was divided on the point, whether the wife should have the emblements; but it was adjudged, that she should not. But in P. 26. El. C. B. n. 4. E. E. in Brewster's case, it was adjudged, that the wife shall have them. Hal. MSS.—See Skele and Arnold in 1. Ro. Abr. 727. pl. 16. Noy 149. and Dy. 316. a. in marg. and further on the subject in the books cited Vin. Abr. Emblements pl. 16. and Com. Dig. Biens G. 2.

(8) See

it be ripe, he shall have it when he is put out when it is ripe, Et ubi eadem est ratio, ibi idem jus.

Et auxi franke entrie, egres et regres. [b] For when the law doth give any thing to one, it giveth impliedly whatsoever is necessary, for the taking and enjoying of the same, quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur et id, sine quo res ipsa esse non potest (1), and the law in this case driveth him not to an action for the corne, but giveth him a speedy remedy to enter into the land, and to take and carry it away, and compelleth not him to take it at one time, or to cary it before it be ready to be caried; and therefore the law giveth all that which is convenient, viz. free entry, egress and regress as much as is necessary.

If the lessee be disturbed of this way which the law doth give unto him, he shall have his action upon his case, and recover his damages, and this action the law doth give unto him, for whensoever the law giveth any thing, it giveth also a remedy for the same. But here is to be observed a diversity betweene a private way, whereof Littleton here speaketh, and a common way. For if the way be a common way, if any man be disturbed to goe that way, or if a ditch be made overthwart the way so as he cannot goe, yet shal he not have an action upon his case; and this the law provided for avoyding of multiplicity of suites, for if any one man might have an action, all men might have the like. But the law for this common nuisance hath provided an apt remedy, and that is by presentment in the leete or in the torne, unless any man hath a particular damage, as if he and his horse fall into the ditch, whereby he received hurt and losse, there for this special damage, which is not common to others, he shall have an action upon his case (2); and all this [c] was resolved by the court in the King's Bench. And in that case it was said, that it had bene adjudged in that court betweene Westbury and Powell, that where the inhabitants of Southwarke had by custome a watering place for their cattell which was stopped up by Powel, that in that case any inhabitant of Southwarke might have an action; for otherwise they should be without remedy because such a nuisance is not presentable in the leete or torne. Note the diversity.

There be three kinde of wayes, whereof you shall [d] reade in our ancient bookes. First a foot way, which is called Iter, quod est jus eundi vel ambulandi hominis, and this was the first way.

The second is a foot way and horse way, which is called actus ab agendo; and this vulgarly is called packe and prime way, because it is both a foot way, which was the first or prime way, and a packe or drift way also.

The third is via or aditus, which containes the other two, and also a cart way, &c. for this is jus eundi, vehendi, et vehiculum et jumentum ducendi; and this is twofold; viz. regia via, the king's high way for all men, et communis strata, belonging to a city or towne, or betweene neighbours and neighbours. This is called in our bookes chimin, being a French word for a way, whereof commeth chiminage chiminagium, or chimmagium, which signifieth a toll due by custome for having a way through a forest; and in ancient records it is sometime also called pedagium (3).

If the lessee at will by good husbandry and industry, either by overflowing or trenching, or compassing of the meadows, or digging up of bushes or such like, make the grasse to grow in more abundance, yet if the lessor put him out, the lessee shall not have the grasse, because that the grasse is the naturall profit of the earth. And the same law is if he doth sow hay-feed, and thereby encreaseth the grasse.

Auterment est si tenant pur terme dans que conust le fine de son terme, &c. Well said Littleton (which knoweth the end of his terme) that is, where the end of the terme is certaine; but where the lease for yeares depends upon an uncertainty, as upon the death of tenant for life being made by him, or of a husband seised in the right of his wife, or the like, there it is otherwise.

Sect. 69.

ITEM si un mese soit lessé a un home a tener a volunt, per force de quel le lessé enter en le mese, deins quel mese brings his household- SI un mese soit lessé a un home a tener a volunt, &c. The reason of this is evident upon that which hath bene said before.

Mese, or Maison, called

(1) See further on this maxim Finch. Disc. on Law 63. and Finch. Descript. of Law 16. b.

(2) On special damage action on the case lies for not repairing, as well as for a nuisance in the highway. P. 1657. C. B. Adjudged. 18. E. 4. Hal. MSS.

(3) See further as to ways, tit. Chimin in Com. Dig. and Vin. Abr. and tit. Highway in New Abr. and Burn. Just.

(8) See ante 11. b. and n. 4. there in respect to intermediate profits, where an estate vested is divested by the birth of a posthumous child. To the observation in that note it may be useful to add, that there is an important distinction as to mesne profits between real estate and personalty. The law will not permit the freehold of land, except in certain special cases, to be in abeyance; and therefore where an estate is to arise on a contingency, the freehold must vest in some person in the mean time, either in the heir or some other person who takes subject to the contingency, and that person, whoever he is, has the right to the mesne profits for his own benefit, unless they are otherwise disposed of by express provision of the parties, as in the case of trustees to preserve contingent remainders who are generally directed how to apply the profits they receive, or by act of parliament, as by the 10. & 11. W. 3. c. 16. which preserves contingent remainders for posthumous children, where there are no trustees for that purpose, and gives such children the estate in the same manner as if they were born in the life-time of the father, and is therefore construed to carry the profits from the father's death. But the case of personalty is different, for the right to that may be in suspense and contingency, and generally during the time it continues so the profits accumulate till the vesting of the capital happens, and then are added to that and belong to the same person. See 3. P. Wms. 305. 2. Atk. 473. and Fearn. on Conting. Rem. 2d. ed. 173. — (10) Vid. 20. E. 3. Trespass 194. 46. Ass. 2. Hal. MSS. — (11) According to some of the antient authorities, the disseisor shall have the emblements, if the disseisee's entry is after severance. See many books cited on this subject in Vin. Abr. Emblements 54. The more modern cases are with lord Coke. See Dy. 31. b. Dal. 30. Mo. 24. and 11. Co. 51. b. — (12) See further on this subject infra and also Perk. sect. 512. to 524. Vin. Abr. Emblements per tot. and Executors U. Com. Dig. Biens B. C. and G. New Abr. Executors and Administrators H. 3. and Gilb. Law of Evid. 242. to 252. — (13) Vid. 11. H. 6. 28. by Cottes. lessor's granting a rent-charge doth not determine his will, nor are the lessee's cattle distrainable. Whether the will be determined, if lessor or lessee be outlawed, see 9. H. 6. 20. 5. Rep. 116. Hal. MSS. — Rolle makes a quare on the case of the rent-charge. The doubt seems reasonable, for the lease at will and the rent-charge clash with each other. If the grantee has the remedy by distress, that makes the tenant's chattels liable to seizure for money not due by his contract. On the other hand,

[b] Temps E. 1. tit. Grant 4. 9. E. 4. 35. 5. E. 3. tresp. 13. 21. H. 7. 14. b. 8. H. 6. 18. b. 2. R. 2. barre 237. 14. H. 8. 2. 27. H. 8. 18. b. (11. Co. 52.)

(5. Co. 100. 104. b. 1. Ro. Ab. 88. Cro. Jam. 446. 491. F. N. B. 176. b. Cro. Jam. 158.)

[c] 27. H. 8. 27. 2. E. 4. 9. 5. E. 4. 2. Tr. 41. Eliz. betweene Finienn and Hovenden. Vid. 5. Co. 72. Williams's case.

[d] Fleta lib. 4. cap. 27. Bracton lib. 4. fol. 132. (1. Ro. Ab. 390)

32. E. 3. barre 261. 27. E. 3. 78. 6. E. 3. 23.

Carta de foresta cap. 14.

(F. N. B. 149. Ante 32. 2. Post 171. 2. 179. 2.)

(1. Co. 32. a.)

[a] 31. El. ca. 1. in Doomsday.

[b] Rev. 153. F. N. B. 127. 4. E. 2. Vouch. 244. Six acres of land may be parcel of a house. (Post 200. b.)

[c] 22. E. 4. 27. 34. H. 6. 40. (Cro. Jam. 335. 204. Hob. 69. 135. 2. Instit. 476. 2. Ro. Rep. 143. 152. 1. Ro. Abr. 523. 2. Ro. Abr. 578. 5. Co. 100. a.)

[d] Braet. li. 2. ca. 52. b. (Post. 59. b. 62. a.)

[e] 2. H. 6. 15. 21. H. 6. 30.

called in legall Latine messuagium, containeth (as hath beene said) the buildings, curtelage, orchard, and garden (1).

Cottage, cotagium is a little house without land to it. [a] See 31. Eliz. cap. 1. and cottagers in Domesday booke are called cotterelli: and in ancient records baga signifieth a house. If a man hath a house neer to my house, and he suffereth his house to be so ruinous as it is like to fall upon my house, [b] I may have a writ de domo reparanda, and compell him to repair his house (2). But a praecipe lieth not de domo, but de messuagio.

Per reasonable temps.

[c] This reasonable time shall be adjudged by the discretion of the justices, before whom the cause dependeth; and so it is of reasonable fines, customes, and services, upon the true state of the case depending before them: for reasonableness in these cases belongeth to the knowledge of the law, and therefore to be decided by the justices. [d] Quam longum esse debet non definitur in jure, sed pendet ex discretione justiciariorum. And this being said of time, the like may be said of things incertaine, which ought to be reasonable; for nothing, that is contrary to reason, is consonant to law.

[e] Sicome home seisi dun mese en fee simple, ou fee taile, &c. This is so evident, as it needeth no explanation.

il porta ses utensils de meason, et puis le lessor luy ousta, uncore il avera franke entre egressse et regresse en mesme le mese per reasonable temps, de carrier ses biens et utensils. Sicome home seisse dun mese en fee simple, fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, le quel ad certaine biens deins meme le mese, et fait ses executors, et devy; quecunque apres sa mort ad le mese, uncore les executors averont frank entry egressse et regres de carier hors de mesme le mese les biens lour testator per reasonable temps.

stuff into the same, and after the lessor puts him out, yet he shall have free entrie, egressse and regresse into the said house, by reasonable time to take away his goods and utensils. As if a man seised of a mese in fee simple, fee taile, or for life, hath certaine goods within the sayd house, and makes his executors, and dieth; whosoever after his decease hath the house, his executors shall have free entrie egressse and regresse to carrie out of the same house the goods of their testator by reasonable time.

Sect. 70.

(1. Ro. Abr. 859. 2. Co. 55. b.)

HERE it appeareth, that if the feoffee doth enter, he is tenant at will, because he entreteth by the consent of the feoffor.

Et deliver a luy le fait. Albeit the deed be delivered upon the ground, yet doth it not amount to a livery of seisin of the land; for it hath its naturall effect to make it a deed. [f] Donationum alia perfecta, alia incepta et non perfecta: ut

(6. Co. 26. Ante 48. a.) [f] Flet. li. 3. ca. 3. & ca. 15. 43. E. 3. tit. Feof. & Faits 51. 35. H. 8. Feof. Br. 27. Aff. 61. 38. Aff. 2. 39. Aff. 12. 41. E. 3. 17. 6. Co. 26. Sharp's case.

ITEM si un home fait un fait de scoffement a un autre de certaine terre, et deliver a luy le fait, mes nemy livery de seisin; en ceo case celui, a que le fait est fait, poit enter en le terre, et tener et occuper a la volunt celui, que fist

ALSO if a man make a deed of feoffement to another of certaine lands, and delivereth to him the deed, but not livery of seisin; in this case he, to whom the deed is made, may enter into the land, and hold and occupie it at the will of him, which

(1) See ante 5. b. note 1. where some authorities are cited to shew, how much will pass by the word messuage.

(2) Also an action on the case will lye for damages arising from the neglect to repair. See Fitzh. N. Br. ed. 1730. p. 296. note 2.

hand, if the grantee of the rent charge cannot distrain, he is left without that remedy, which by the grant is expressly given to him. See 1. Ro. Abr. 860. As to the case of outlawry, see Vin. Abr. Estate 2. b. pl. 1. In 2. Ventr. 248. one of the books cited, lord Hale says, that outlawry is not a determination till seizure.—(14) Nota, if lessee at will is ousted by a stranger, he may re-enter and continue tenant at will; but if he accepts of a new lease from a stranger after such ouster, it has been holden, that his re-entry will not re-vest the estate in the ancient lessor. Hal. MSS. See Vin. Abr. Estate A. c.—(15) So if lessee says, that he will not hold any longer, it is not a determination of the will, unless he waives the possession. 20. H. 7. Keilw. 65. Hal. MSS.—(16) If there is tenant at will rendering rent at Michaelmas, and lessor determines the will before Michaelmas, he shall not have any rent. But it has been holden, that if lessee at any day before the rent-day determines his will, yet lessor shall have the rent incurring the next day after such determination of the will. Per Fenner and Williams; Yelverton contra. M. 3. Jac. Carpenter and Collins. Yelv. 77. 20. H. 7. Keilw. 65. is accord. if lessor doth not enter before the rent-day. Hal. MSS.—See Ali. 4. in which book there is an opinion by Rolle conformable to that of Fenner and Williams. Also in 1. Sid. 339. it is said to have been agreed by the court, that if land be leased at will and the rent is reserved half-yearly or quarterly, the lessee cannot determine his will two or three days before the rent-day, because that would be a fraudulent determination.

le fait, pur ceo que il est prove per les parols del fait, que il est la volunt que le auter avera la terre; mes celui que fist le fait luy poer ouste quaut luy pleist.

made the deed, because it is proved by the words of the deed, that it is his will that the other should have the land; but he which made the deed may put him out when it pleaseth him.

fi donatio lecta fuerit et concessa, ac traditio nondum fuerit subsecuta. But if the deed be delivered in name of seisin of the land, or if the feoffor saith to the feoffee, Take and enjoy this land according to the deed, or Enter into this land and God give you joy: these words do amount to a livery of seisin. (Ante 42. a.)

Sect. 71.

ITEM si un mese soit lessé a tener a volunt, le lessé neft pas tenu a susteiner ou repaier le meason, sicome tenant a terme d'ans est tenu. Mes si le lessé a volunt fait voluntarie wast, sicome en abatement des measons, ou en couper des arbres, il est dit que le lessor avera de ceo envers luy action de trespassse. Sicome jeo baile a un home mes barbits a compester sa terre, ou mes boefes a arer la terre, et il occist mes avers, jeo puissoy bien aver un action de trespassse envers luy nient obstant le bailement.

ALSO if a house be leased to hold at will, the lessee is not bound to sustain or repaire the house, as tenant for term of years is tyed. But if tenant at will commit voluntary wast, as in pulling downe of houses, or in felling of trees, it is said that the lessor shall have an action of trespassse for this, against the lessee. As if I lend to one my sheepe to tathe his land, or my oxen to plow the land, and he killeth my cattell, I may well have an action of trespassse against him, notwithstanding the lending.

SI un mese soit lessé a tener a volunt le les neft pas tenu, &c. For the statute of Gloucester above mentioned extends not to a tenant at will, and therefore for permissive wast, the lessor hath no remedy at all (1).

Mes si lessé a volunt fait voluntary wast, &c. [g] And true

it is, that if tenant at will cutteth downe timber trees, or voluntarily pull downe and prostrate houses, the lessor shall have an action of trespassse against him, quare vi et armis; for the taking upon him power to cut timber, or prostrate houses, concerneth so much the freehold and inheritance, as it doth amount in law to a determination of his will; [b] and so hath it bene adjudged (2).

[i] If tenant at will granteth over his estate to another, and the grantee entreteth, he is a disseisor (3), and the lessor may have an action of trespassse against the grantee; for albeit the grant was

(5. Co. 13. b.)

[g] 21. H. 6. 38. 28. E. 3. 25. 11. H. 4. 3. 22. E. 4. 50.

(1. Ro. Abr. 860. 2. Ro. Abr. 555.)

[b] Mich. 28. & 29. Eliz. Rot. 318. in Com. Panc. inter Walgrave & Somerset. V. le Counte de Shrewsburie's case, 5. Co. 13. b.

[i] 27. H. 6. 3. 22. E. 4. 5. (2. Instit. 154. 1. Ro. Abr. 661. 663. 659. Post 57. b. Cro. Ch. 303. Cro. Jam. 660. 4. Leon. 35.)

void, yet it amounteth to a determination of his will.

Sicome jeo baile a un home mes barbits a compester son terre, &c.

And the reason is, [k] that when the bailee having but a bare use of them, taketh upon him as an owner to kill them, he loseth the benefit of the use of them. Or in these cases he may have an action of trespassse sur le case for this conversion, at his election (4).

Trespassse. Transgressio derivatur à transgrediendo, because it passeth that which is right: Transgressio autem est, cum modus non servatur, nec mensura: debet enim quilibet in suo facto modum habere, et mensuram: Nota, in the lowest and the highest offences there are no accessories, but all are principalls; as in ryots, routs, forcible entries, and other transgressions

[k] V. 11. H. 4. 24. 1. E. 4. 9. b. 12. E. 4. 8. 21. E. 4. 19. & 76. 22. E. 4. 5. 3. H. 7. 4. 21. H. 7. 14.

Flet. li. 2. ca. 1.

(2. Ro. Abr. 555. Cro. Ch. 35.)

(2. Instit. 183. 3. Instit. 20. 21.)

(1) Action on the case doth not lie for permissive waste. 5. Rep. 13. b. Hal. MSS.—The case cited by lord Hale is that of the countess of Salop, who brought action on the case against her tenant at will for so negligently keeping his fire, that the house was burnt; and the whole court held, that neither action on the case nor any other action lay; because at common law and before the statute of Gloucester action did not lie for waste against tenant for life or years, or any other tenant coming in by agreement of parties, and tenant at will is not within the statute. But the doctrine that no action lies should be understood with some limitation; for if tenant at will stipulates with his lessor to be responsible for fire by negligence or for other permissive waste, without doubt an action will lie on such express agreement. The same observation holds with respect to tenants for life or years before the statute of Gloucester; for though the law did not make them liable to any action for waste, yet it did not restrain them from making themselves liable by agreement. It may be of use here to add something on the progress of the law as to the accidental burning of houses, so far as regards landlord and tenant. At the common law lessees were not answerable to landlords for accidental or negligent burning; for as to fires by accident, it is expressed in Flota, that fortuna ignis vel huiusmodi eventus inopinati omnes tenentes excusant, and lady Shrewsbury's case is a direct authority to prove, that tenants are equally excusable for fires by negligence. See Flota lib. 1. cap. 12. Then came the statute of Gloucester, which, by making tenants for life and years liable to waste without any exception, consequentially rendered them answerable for destruction by fire. Thus stood the law in lord Coke's time; but now by the 6. An. ch. 31. the ancient law is restored, and the distinction introduced by the statute of Gloucester between tenants at will and other lessees is taken away; for the statute of Ann exempts all persons from actions for accidental fire in any house, except in the case of special agreements between landlord and tenant. See ante 53. a. and note 7. there, and 53. b. and note c. there. So much relates to tenants coming in by act or agreement of parties. As to tenants of particular estates coming in by act of law, as tenant by the curtesy, tenant in dower, and also before the statute for taking away military tenures guardian in chivalry, these, or at least the two latter, being at common law punishable for waste, were therefore responsible for losses by fire; unless indeed they were answerable for waste voluntary only, and not for waste permissive, which is a distinction I have not yet met with in any book. If then tenant by the curtesy and tenant in dower were by the common law responsible for accidental fire, it may some time or other become necessary to determine, whether they are within the statute of queen Ann. The statute in expression is very general, the words being, that no action shall be prosecuted against any person in whose house any fire shall accidentally begin; and it seems calculated to take away all actions in cases

(1. Co. 32. a.)

[a] 31. El. ca. 1. in Doomsday.

[b] Rep. 153. F. N. B. 127. 4. E. 2. Vouch. 244. Six acres of land may be parcel of a house. (Post 200 b.)

[c] 22. E. 4. 27. 34. H. 6. 40. (Cro. Jam. 335. 204. Hob. 69. 135. 2. Instit. 476. 2. Ro. Rep. 143. 152. 1. Ro. Abr. 523. 2. Ro. Abr. 578. 5. Co. 100. a.)

[d] Bract. li. 2. ca. 52. b. (Post. 59 b. 62. a.)

[e] 2. H. 6. 15. 21. H. 6. 30.

called in legall Latine messuagium, containeth (as hath beene said) the buildings, curtelage, orchard, and garden (1).

Cottage, cotagium is a little house without land to it. [a] See 31. Eliz. cap. 1. and cottagers in Doomsday booke are called cotterelli: and in ancient records baga signifieth a house. If a man hath a house neer to my house, and he suffereth his house to be so ruinous as it is like to fall upon my house, [b] I may have a writ de domo reparanda, and compell him to repair his house (2). But a præcipe lieth not de domo, but de messuagio.

Per reasonable temps.

[c] This reasonable time shall be adjudged by the discretion of the justices, before whom the cause dependeth; and so it is of reasonable fines, customes, and services, upon the true state of the case depending before them: for reasonableness in these cases belongeth to the knowledge of the law, and therefore to be decided by the justices. [d] Quam longum esse debet non definitur in jure, sed pendet ex discretione justiciariorum. And this being said of time, the like may be said of things incertaine, which ought to be reasonable; for nothing, that is contrary to reason, is consonant to law.

[e] Sicome home seisi dun mese en fee simple, ou fee taile, &c. This is so evident, as it needeth no explanation.

il porta ses utensils de meason, et puis le lessor luy ousta, uncore il avera franke entre egressé et regresse en mesme le mese per reasonable temps, de carrier ses biens et utensils. Sicome home seisse dun mese en fee simple, fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, le quel ad certaine biens deins meme le mese, et fait ses executors, et devy; quecunque apres sa mort ad le mese, uncore les executors averont frank entry egressé et regres de carrier hors de mesme le mese les biens leur testator per reasonable temps.

stuff into the same, and after the lessor puts him out, yet he shall have free entrie, egressé and regresse into the said house, by reasonable time to take away his goods and utensils. As if a man seised of a mese in fee simple, fee taile, or for life, hath certaine goods within the sayd house, and makes his executors, and dieth; whosoever after his decease hath the house, his executors shall have free entrie egressé and regresse to carrie out of the same house the goods of their testator by reasonable time.

Sect. 70.

(1. Ro. Abr. 859. 2. Co. 55. b.)

HERE it appeareth, that if the feoffee doth enter, he is tenant at will, because he entreath by the consent of the feoffor.

Et deliver a luy le fait. Albeit the deed be delivered upon the ground, yet doth it not amount to a livery of seisin of the land; for it hath its naturall effect to make it a deed. [f] Donationum alia perfecta, alia incepta et non perfecta: ut

(6. Co. 26. Ante 48. a.) [f] Flet. li. 3. ca. 3. & ca. 15. 43. E. 3. tit. Feof. & Fais 51. 35. H. 8. Feof. Br. 27. Aff. 61. 38. Aff. 2. 39. Aff. 12. 41. E. 3. 17. 6. Co. 26. Sharp's case.

ITEM si un home fait un fait de feoffement a un autre de certaine terre, et deliver a luy le fait, mes nemy livery de seisin; en ceo case celuy, a que le fait est fait, poit enter en le terre, et tener et occuper a la volunt celuy, que fist

ALSO if a man make a deed of feoffement to another of certaine lands, and delivereth to him the deed, but not livery of seisin; in this case he, to whom the deed is made, may enter into the land, and hold and occupie it at the will of him, which

(1) See ante 5. b. note 1. where some authorities are cited to shew, how much will pass by the word messuage.

(2) Also an action on the case will lye for damages arising from the neglect to repair. See Fitzh. N. Br. ed. 1730. p. 296. note a.

hand, if the grantee of the rent charge cannot distrain, he is left without that remedy, which by the grant is expressly given to him. See 1. Ro. Abr. 860. As to the case of outlawry, see Vin. Abr. Estate Z. b. pl. 1. In 2. Ventr. 248. one of the books cited, lord Hale says, that outlawry is not a determination till seisure.—(14) Nota, if lessee at will is ousted by a stranger, he may re-enter and continue tenant at will; but if he accepts of a new lease from a stranger after such ouster, it has been holden, that his re-entry will not re-vest the estate in the ancient lessor. Hal. MSS. See Vin. Abr. Estate A. c.—(15) So if lessee says, that he will not hold any longer, it is not a determination of the will, unless he waives the possession. 20. H. 7. Keilw. 65. Hal. MSS.—(16) If there is tenant at will rendering rent at Michaelmas, and lessor determines the will before Michaelmas, he shall not have any rent. But it has been holden, that if lessee at any day before the rent-day determines his will, yet lessor shall have the rent incurring the next day after such determination of the will. Per Fenner and Williams; Telverton contra. M. 3. Jac. Carpenter and Collins. Telw. 73. 20. H. 7. Keilw. 65. is accord. if lessor doth not enter before the rent-day. Hal. MSS.—See All. 4. in which book there is an opinion by Rolie conformable to that of Fenner and Williams. Also in 1. Sid. 339. it is said to have been agreed by the court, that if land be leased at will and the rent is reserved half-yearly or quarterly, the lessee cannot determine his will two or three days before the rent-day, because that would be a fraudulent determination.

le fait, pur ceo que il est prove per les parols del fait, que il est la volunt que le auter avera la terre; mes celuy que fist le fayt luy poer ouste quaut luy pleist.

made the deed, because it is proved by the words of the deed, that it is his will that the other should have the land; but he which made the deed may put him out when it pleaseth him.

fi donatio leſſa fuerit et concessa, ac traditio nondum fuerit subsecuta. But if the deed be delivered in name of seisin of the land, or if the feoffor saith to the feoffee, Take and enjoy this land according to the deed, or Enter into this land and God give you joy: these words do amount to a livery of seisin. (Ante 48. a.)

Sect. 71.

ITEM si un mese soit leſſe a tener a volunt, le leſſee neſt pas tenuſ a ſuſteiner ou repaier le meſſon, ſicome tenant a terme d'ans eſt tenuſ. Mes ſi le leſſee a volunt fait voluntarie waſt, ſicome en abatement des meſſons, ou en couper des arbres, il eſt dit que le leſſor avera de ceo envers luy action de treſpaſſe. Sicome jeo bayle a un home mes barbits a compeſter ſa terre, ou mes boeſes a arer la terre, et il occiſt mes avers, jeo puiſſoy bien aver un action de treſpaſſs envers luy nient obſtant le bailement.

ALSO if a house be leased to hold at will, the lessee is not bound to sustain or repair the house, as tenant for term of years is tyed. But if tenant at will commit voluntary waſt, as in pulling downe of houses, or in felling of trees, it is said that the lessor shall have an action of trespass for this, against the lessee. As if I lend to one my sheepe to tathe his land, or my oxen to plow the land, and he killeth my cattell, I may well have an action of trespass against him, notwithstanding the lending.

SI un mese soit leſſe a tener a volunt le les neſt pas tenuſ, &c. For the statute of Gloucester above mentioned extends not to a tenant at will, and therefore for permissive waſt, the lessor hath no remedy at all⁽¹⁾.

Mes si leſſee a volunt fait voluntary waſt, &c. [g] And true

it is, that if tenant at will cutteth downe timber trees, or voluntarily pull downe and prostrate houses, the lessor shall have an action of trespass against him, quare vi et armis; for the taking upon him power to cut timber, or prostrate houses, concerneth so much the freehold and inheritance, as it doth amount in law to a determination of his will; [b] and so hath it bene adjudged⁽²⁾.

[i] If tenant at will granteth over his estate to another, and the grantee entreth, he is a disseisor⁽³⁾, and the lessor may have an action of trespass against the grantee; for albeit the grant was

[g] 21. H. 6. 38. 28. E. 3. 25. 11. H. 4. 3. 22. E. 4. 50.

(1. Ro. Abr. 860. 2. Ro. Abr. 555.)

[b] Mich. 28. & 29. Eliz. Rot. 318. in Com. Banc. inter Walgrave & Somerset. V. le Counte de Shrewsburie's case, 5. Co. 13. b.

[i] 27. H. 6. 3. 22. E. 4. 5. (2. Instit. 154. 1. Ro. Abr. 667. 663. 659. Post 57. b. Cro. Ch. 303. Cro. Jam. 660. 4. Leon. 35.)

void, yet it amounteth to a determination of his will.

Sicome jeo baile a un home mes barbits a compeſter ſon terre, &c.

And the reason is, [k] that when the bailee having but a bare use of them, taketh upon him as an owner to kill them, he loseth the benefit of the use of them. Or in these cases he may have an action of trespass sur le case for this conversion, at his election⁽⁴⁾.

Treſpaſſe. Transgreſſio derivatur à transgrediendo, because it passeth that which is right: Transgreſſio autem eſt, cum modus non ſervatur, nec meſſura: debet enim quilibet in ſuo facto modum habere, et meſſuram: Nota, in the lowest and the highest offences there are no accessories, but all are principalls; as in ryots, routs, forcible entries, and other transgressions

[k] V. 11. H. 4. 24. 1. E. 4. 9. b. 12. E. 4. 8. 21. E. 4. 19. & 76. 22. E. 4. 5. 3. H. 7. 4. 21. H. 7. 14.

Flet. li. 2. ca. 1.

(2. Ro. Abr. 555. Cro. Ch. 35.)

(2. Instit. 183. 3. Instit. 20. 21.)

(1) Action on the case doth not lie for permissive waſt. 5. Rep. 13. b. Hal. MSS.—The case cited by lord Hale is that of the counts of Salop, who brought action on the case against her tenant at will for so negligently keeping his fire, that the house was burnt; and the whole court held, that neither action on the case nor any other action lay; because at common law and before the statute of Gloucester action did not lie for waſt against tenant for life or years, or any other tenant coming in by agreement of parties, and tenant at will is not within the statute. But the doctrine that no action lies should be understood with some limitation; for if tenant at will stipulates with his lessor to be responsible for fire by negligence or for other permissive waſt, without doubt an action will lie on such express agreement. The same observation holds with respect to tenants for life or years before the statute of Gloucester; for though the law did not make them liable to any action for waſt, yet it did not restrain them from making themselves liable by agreement. It may be of use here to add something on the progress of the law as to the accidental burning of houses, so far as regards landlord and tenant. At the common law lessees were not answerable to landlords for accidental or negligent burning; for as to fires by accident, it is expressed in Fleta, that fortuna ignis vel hujusmodi eventus inopinati omnes tenentes excusant, and lady Shrewsbury's case is a direct authority to prove, that tenants are equally excusable for fires by negligence. See Fleta lib. 1. cap. 12. Then came the statute of Gloucester, which, by making tenants for life and years liable to waſt without any exception, consequentially rendered them answerable for destruction by fire. Thus stood the law in lord Coke's time; but now by the 6. An. ch. 31. the ancient law is restored, and the distinction introduced by the statute of Gloucester between tenants at will and other lessees is taken away; for the statute of Ann exempts all persons from actions for accidental fire in any house, except in the case of special agreements between landlord and tenant. See ante 53. a. and note 7. there, and 53. b. and note 4. there. So much relates to tenants coming in by act or agreement of parties. As to tenants of particular estates coming in by act of law, as tenant by the curtesy, tenant in dower, and also before the statute for taking away military tenures guardian in chivalry, these, or at least the two latter, being at common law punishable for waſt, were therefore responsible for losses by fire; unless indeed they were answerable for waſt voluntary only, and not for waſt permissive, which is a distinction I have not yet met with in any book. If then tenant by the curtesy and tenant in dower were by the common law responsible for accidental fire, it may some time or other become necessary to determine, whether they are within the statute of queen Ann. The statute in expression is very general, the words being, that no action shall be prosecuted against any person in whose house any fire shall accidentally begin; and it seems calculated to take away all actions in cases fions vi et armis, which are the lowest offences; and so in the highest offence, which is crimen lese majestatis, there be no accessaries: but in felonies there be accessaries both before and after.

Sect. 72.

21. H. 7. 39. b. 2. E. 4. 6. b. 7. E. 4. 27. a. 6. R. 2. Avourie 86.

IL poet distreyner pur le rent arere ou aver de ceo un action de debt, &c. But if he impound the distresse upon the ground letten at will, the will is determined. Note, he may distreine for the rent, and yet it is no rent service, for no fealty belonging thereunto, but a rent distreinable of common right.

NOTA, si le lessor sur sur tiel lease a volunt reserve a luy un annuall rent, il poet distrainer pur le rent arere, ou aver de ceo un action de debt a son election.

NOTE, if the lessor upon a lease at will reserve to him a yearly rent, he may distreine for the rent behinde, or have for this an action of debt at his owne election⁽¹⁾.

(Post 142. a.)

[1] Bracton lib. 4. fol. 318. 4. E. 3. 39. 7. E. 3. 13. 24. E. 3. 24. 38. E. 3. 28. 7. R. 2. Saver de def. 30. 8. E. 4. 25. 4. H. 6. 30. 22. E. 4. 38. 18. E. 4. 25. F. N. B. 201. D. 203. 8. E. 2. entre 87. Temps H. 8. Br. 15. tit. Tenant a volunt. Pl. com. 138. 4. H. 7. 3.

(3) (Post 270. b. Cro. Cha. 187. Cro. Jam. 169. Ante 57. a.)

[m] 13. H. 7. 10. a. 21. H. 6. 54. 5. E. 4. 3. 22. R. 2. tit. Discont. 48. E. 3. 23. Pl. Com. 435. 19. E. 3. bre. 468. 15. E. 4. Discont. 30. 6. E. 3. 56. 57. 21. E. 4. 5. 21. H. 7. 38. 10. E. 4. 18. Per Choke. & Litt.

[n] Statute de Merlbridge cap. 26. Abb. Aff. 120. b. F. N. B. 196. 11. E. 4. 10. & 11. Bract. lib. 4. fo. 251. 253.

(Post 271. 1. Ro. Abr. 663.)

There is a great diversity between a tenant at will, and a tenant at sufferance; for tenant at will is alwaies by right, and tenant at sufferance entreth by a lawfull lease, and holdeth over by wrong. A tenant at sufferance is he that at the first came in by lawfull demise, and after his estate ended continueth the possession and wrongfully holdeth over⁽²⁾. [1] As tenant par terme dauter vie, continueth in possession after the decease of Ce' que vie, or tenant for yeares holdeth over his terme; the lessor cannot have an action of trespass before entry. Now that a writ of entry ad terminum qui præterit lyeth against such a tenant, as holdeth over, is rather by admission of the demandant, then for any estate of freehold that is in him, for in judgement of law he hath but a bare possession. But against the king there is no tenant at sufferance, but he that holdeth over in the cases abovesaid is an intruder upon the king, because there is no laches imputed to the king for not entering⁽⁴⁾. [m] If tenant in taile of a rent grant the same in fee and dieth, yet the issue in taile may bring a formedon, and admit himselfe out of possession. The like law is it, if a man maketh a lease at will and dieth, now is the will determined, and if the lessee continueth in possession he is tenant at sufferance, and yet the heyre by admission may have an issue of Mordancesthor against him⁽⁵⁾. [n] But there is a diversity between particular estates made by the terretenaunt, as above is said, and particular estates created by act in law: as if a gardian after the full age of the heire continueth in possession, he is no tenant at sufferance, but an abator, against whom an assize of Mordancesthor doth lye⁽⁶⁾. Et sic de similibus⁽⁷⁾.

CHAP. 9. Sect. 73.

Tenant by Copie.

TENANT per Copie, &c. Tenens

per copiam rot. Cur'. Copie we call in Latine copiam, though copia in his proper signification signifieth plenty, but we have made a Latine word of the French word copie, and this is ancient, for in the Register fol. 51. there is a writ de copia libelli deliberanda, which is grounded upon the statute of 2. H. 4. ca. There is no tenant in the law, that holdeth

TENANT per copie de court rol

est⁽⁸⁾, deins quel manor il y ad un custome que ad est use de temps dont memorie ne court, que certaine tenants deins mesme le manor ont use daver terres et tenements, a tener a

TENANT by copy

of court roll is, as if a man be seised of a mannor, within which mannor there is a custome, which hath beene used time out of minde of man, that certaine tenants within the same mannor have used to have lands and te-

(1) But in his count in debt against lessee at will, he ought to shew that he entred; but otherwise it is as to lessee for years. 18. H. 3. 1. Dy. 14.—Debt lies against copyholder for his rent. Adjudged M. 10. Car. B. R. Hitcham's case. Hal. MSS.—Hitcham's case is in 1. Ro. Abr. 374. P. pl. 1. and 374. Q. pl. 3. But from Rolle's report of the case, and from some subsequent authorities it seems doubtful, whether debt will lie for rent against a copyholder, particularly unless the lord has conveyed away the manor and so lost the remedy by distress. See Carth. 92. and Gilb. Ten. 3d. Lond. ed. 308.—(2) As to holding over, see 4. G. 2. c. 28. by which every tenant for life or years or other person claiming under or by collusion with such tenant, who shall wilfully hold over after determination of the term and demand made in writing of delivery of the possession by the landlord or him in reversion or remainder, is made liable to the payment of double the yearly value of the lands detained. This statute only took in cases in which the landlord gave notice to quit, and therefore the deficiency was supplied by the 11. G. 2. c. 19. which extends the provision for double rent to the holding over after the tenant's giving notice to quit. See a case on this latter statute in 4. Burr. v. 3. page 1603. See also 6. An. c. 18. f. 1. against holding over by guardians or trustees of infants and by husbands seised in right of their wives and by all others having particular estates determinable on any life or lives.—(3) Vid. 21. H. 6. 38. Hal. MSS.—(4) 4. H. 6. 12. Hal. MSS.—(5) If the heir accepts rents from him, he is tenant at will to the heir. 10. E. 4. 18. Tenant for years surrenders, and still continues possession, he is tenant at sufferance or disseisor at election. Dy. 62. Hal. MSS.—(6) And if guardian in such case dies seised, the entry of the heir tolls. 7. H. 4. 42. per Cul. Hal. MSS.—(7) See further as to tenant by sufferance in title Estate Vin. Abr. and Com. Dig.—(8) Si come un home soit seise d'un maner. L. and M.—Roh.—P. and Red.

cases of accidental fire as well from other persons as from landlords. Note, that it has been doubted on the statute of Ann, whether a covenant to repair generally extends to the case of fire, and so becomes an agreement within the statute; and therefore where it is intended, that the tenant shall not be liable, it is most usual in the covenant for repairing expressly to except accidents by fire.—Note also, that the distinction which is taken as to waste at common law between tenants coming in by act of law and tenants whose estates accrue by act of parties, will not universally hold; for tenants by statute-merchant and statute-staple, though they come in by process of law, are not punishable for waste. 6. Co. 37. Perhaps the reason of this may be, that it is in the power of debtors to prevent the commencement of these estates or to determine them by paying the debts, for which creditors have such estates, and also that the tenants of such estates are accountable for all profits they make beyond the amount of the debts due to them.—(2) Yet if a stranger cuts trees, the tenant at will shall have action, as shall also the lessor, regard being had to their several losses. 2. H. 4. 12. 19. H. 6. 45. Hal. MSS.—(3) Lessee at will makes lease for years, and the lessee enters. Ruled on solemn argument.

eux et a lour heires en fee simple, ou en fee taile, ou a terme de vie, &c. a volunt le seigni- or solonque le custome de mesme le manor.

nements to hold to them and their heires in fee simple, or fee taile, or for terme of life, &c. at the will of the lord⁽¹⁾ according to the custome of the same manor.

by copie but onely this kinde of customary tenant, for no man holdeth by copie of a charter, or by copy of a fine, or such like, but this tenant holdeth by copy of court roll.

[a] Bracton calleth copiholders willanos sockmannos, not because they were bond, but because they held by base tenure by doing of villein services.

[a] Bracton lib. 2. cap. 8. fol. 26. & lib. 4. fo. 209. Britton 165. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 8. & lib. 2. cap. 6. Item de custumariis. Ockam Cap. quid murdrum. F. N. B. f. 12. c.

And Britton saith that some that be free of blood doe hold land in villenage, and Littleton himselfe in the next chapter calleth them tenants by base tenure: and in F.N.B. fol. 12. C. Et cest terme, que est ore a cest jour appel copitenaunts, ou copiholders, ou tenaunts per copie, est forse que un novel nosme trove, car dancient temps ils fuer' appellees tenants in villenage, ou de base tenure, &c. [b] And yet in 1. H. 5. 11. they be called copiholders, in 14. H. 4. 34. tenant per le verge, in 42. E. 3. 25. tenant per roll solonque le volunt le seignior; and in the statute of 4. E. 1. called extenta manerii, they are called custumarii tenentes, and so doth Fleta call them; and before him Ockam⁽²⁾ (who wrote in the raigne of H. 2.) spake of them, and how, and upon what occasion they had their beginning.

[b] 1. H. 5. 11. 14. H. 4. 34. 42. E. 3. 25. Vid. 4. Co. 2. Browne's case.

[c] Terra ex scripto Saxonice Bockland. Fundum veteres aut ex scripto qui Bockland, i. bookland, aut sine scripto qui Folkland dicebatur, possidebant. Quæ fuit ex scripto possessio commodior erat conditione, hæreditaria, libera, atque immunis. Fundus sine scripto censum pensabat annuum, atque officiorum servitute quadam est obligatus. Priorem viri plerunque nobiles atque ingenui, posteriorem rustici fere et pagani possidebant (3).

[c] Lamb. verb. Terra ex scripto.

Court. Curia, court is a place where justice is judicially ministred, and is derived a cura, quia in curiis publicis curas gerebant. [d] The court baron must be holden on some part of that which is within the manor, for if it be holden out of the manor it is voyd, unless a lord being seised of two or three manors hath usually time out of mind kept at one of his manors courts for all the said manors, then by custome such courts are sufficient in law, albeit they be not holden within the severall manors⁽⁴⁾. And it is to be understood that this court is of two natures, the first is by the common law, and is called a court baron, as some have said for that it is the freeholders or freemen court, (for barons in one sense signifie freemen) and of that court the freeholders being suitors be judges, and this may be kept from three weekes to three weekes. The second is a customary court, and that doth concerne copiholders, and therein the lord or his steward is the judge. Now as there can be no court baron without freeholders, so there cannot be this kind of customary court without copiholders or customary holders. And as there may be a court baron of freeholders only without copiholders, and then is the steward the register, so there may be a customary court of copiholders onely without freeholders, and then is the lord or his steward the judge⁽⁵⁾. And when the court baron is of this double nature, the court roll containeth as well matters appertaining to the customary court, as to the court baron.

(4. Instit. 268.)

[d] Vid. 4. Co. 24. inter Murrell & Smith. Eodem lib. fol. 27. inter Clifton & Molineux.

(1. Ro. Abr. 527.)

4. Co. 26. Melwitche's case, Britton fol. 274.

(4. Co. 26. b.)

And for as much as the title, or estate of the copiholder is entred into the roll whereof the steward delivereth him a copie, thereof he is called copiholder. [e] It is called a court baron, because amongst the lawes of King Edw. the Confessor it is said: Barones vero qui suam habent curiam de suis hominibus, &c. taking his name of the baron who was lord of the manor, or for that properly in the eye of law it hath relation to the freeholders, [f] who are judges of the court. And in ancient charters and records the barons of London, and barons of the cinque ports, do signify the freemen of London and of the cinque ports.

[e] Lamb. fol. 128. & 136. Cambden Brit. 10. 121. b. Britton fol. 274.

[f] Mirror cap. 1. sect. 3.

Seisie dun mannor. Manerium dicitur a manendo secundum excellentiam sedes magna fixa et stabilis. Lageman, i. habens socam et facam super homines suos, &c. [g] Et sciendum est, quod manerium poterit esse per se ex pluribus edificiis coadjutivum sive villis et hamletis adjacentibus. Poterit etiam esse manerium et per se et cum pluribus villis, et cum pluribus hamletis adjacentibus, quorum nullum dici poterit manerium per se sed villa sua hamletta. Poterit etiam esse per se manerium capitale, et plura continere sub se maneria non capitalia, et plures villas et plures hamlettas quasi sub uno capite aut domino uno. And afterwards, Manerium autem fieri poterit ex pluribus villis vel una, plures enim villæ poterunt esse in corpore manerii sicut et una (6). And in these [b] ancient authors you shall see the difference, inter mansionem, villam, et manerium. Concerning the institution of this court by the lawes and ordinances of ancient kings and especially of King Alfred, it appeareth that

Domesday.

[g] Bracton lib. 4. fo. 112. Fleta lib. 4. c. 15. & lib. 6. cap. 49. Britton fol. 124.

[b] Bract. lib. 5. fo. 434. Fleta ubi supra. Mirror. cap. 1. sect. 3.

(1) Nota, these words ad voluntatem domini are material to express copyhold; for if these words be omitted in pleading, it shall be intended, that the estate is a customary freehold. M. 7. Car. B. R. Crook n. 7. Hughes's case. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 129. See further as to customary freehold Post 59. b. and note 1. there.—(2) This author, whom lord Coke cites on several occasions, according to Sir William Dugdale wrote a book on tenures of the king, but did not perfect it. Dugd. Orig. Jurid. 1st ed. 56. I imagine, that this book is the work referred to by lord Coke; but whether it is in print, or lord Coke cites it from a manuscript, I have not yet been able to learn.—(3) See ante 5. b. and note 1. there, and 6. a. and note 6. there.—(4) See acc. Cro. Cha. 367. But the lord may take a surrender out of the manor, because that may be done out of court; and so may the steward if there is a special custom, or according to latter authorities without. See 1. Salk. 184. and Post 59. a.—(5) A steward de facto is sufficient.—The king constitutes A and B stewards of a manor by patent sub sigillo scaccarii; A holds courts; and though the appointment ought to have been sub magno sigillo, and both ought to have holden the courts, yet it was ruled, that grant by one was good. So it is as to the lord's clerk or an under steward. P. 22. Eliz. Scacc. Hal. MSS.—The doctrine in this case seems confirmed by the cases and authorities cited in Vin. Abr. Steward F. G. J. K. and Com. Dig. Copyhold C. 5. Note also particularly what is expressed in Co. Copyhold. sect. 45. in respect to the law's not being nice in examining the imperfections of the steward's authority, where his acts are ordinary and necessary, and not of a judicial kind.—(6) For other explanations of the word manor, see in Cow. Interp. voc. Manor, and the books there cited, particularly Fulb. Paral. part 1. fol. 18. a.

argument, 1. That it is only a disseisin at election, and not prima facie. 2. That admitting it to be a disseisin the lessee at will is the disseisor, and has gained the freehold, and not the lessee for years. Pasch. 9. Car. B. R. Blunden and Baugh. Hal. MSS.—See S. C. in W. Jo. 315. Cro. Cha. 302. Litt. 297. 372. and 1. Ro. Abr. 661. See also Mr. Atkins's case in 4. Burr. vol. 1. page 60. in which the curious doctrine of disseisin by election is most elaborately explained.—(4) A lessee for 20 years makes lease to B for ten; B continues in possession after expiration of the lease for ten years, and commits waste. A may have either trespass or action on the case, because he is chargeable over in waste. P. 6. Car. B. R. Crook n. 7. West and Trude. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 187. and S. C. W. Jo. 224.

that the first kings of this realme had all the lands of England in demeane(1), and les grand manors et royautes they reserved to themselves, and of the remnant they, for the defence of the realme, enfeoffed the barons of the realme with such jurisdiction as the court baron now hath, and instituted the freeholders to be judges of the court baron. And herewith agreed the aforefaid law of Saint Edward. And it is to be observed, that in those ancient lawes under the name of barons were comprised all the nobility.

(1. Co. 140. b. Cro. Jam. 260. Mo. 95. 8. Co. 63. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 499. 4. Co. 26. b. 23. b. Cro. Jam. 98.)

[i] 4. Co. 24. p. 29. Eliz. inter Rous & Artois.

[k] Dier. Mich. 7. & 8. Eliz. Manuscript.

[l] Vid. 4. Co. 24. inter Murrell & Smith.

(1. Ro. Abr. 498.)
31. Co. 17. Sir H. Nevill's case.
4. Co. 30. 31. inter Hoc & Taylor.

Regill. F. N. B. 270. d. V. mag.
Carta in cap. Itin. fol. 151. Braet.
ib. 3. 117. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 20.

There may be a customary manor granted by copy of court roll (2). So although the word be (seise) which properly betokeneth a freehold, yet tenant for yeares, tenant by statute merchant, staple, elegit, and tenant at will, gardian in chivalry (3), &c. who are not properly seised but possessed, are domini pro tempore, not only to make admittance, but to grant voluntary copies of ancient copihold lands which come into their hands (4). And therefore there is a diversity between disseisors, abators, intruders, and others that have defeasible titles; for their voluntary grants of ancient copihold lands shall not bind the disseisees or others that right have (5). And voluntary grants by copie, made by such particular tenants as is aforefaid, shall binde him that hath the freehold and inheritance, because all these be lawfull lords for the time being; but so is not a tenant at sufferance, because he is in by wrong as hath been said, and so [i] was it adjudged P. 29. Elij. inter Rowse & Artois 4. Co. 24. But admittances made by disseisors, abators, intruders, tenant at sufferance or others that have defeasible titles, stand good against them that right have, because it was a lawfull act, and they were compellable to doe them.

[k] And yet in some speciall case an estate may be granted by copie, by one that is not dominus pro tempore, nor that hath any thing in the manor. As if the lord of a manor by his will in writing deviseth, that his executor shall grant the customary tenements of the manor according to the custome of the manor for the payment of his debts, and dieth, the executor, having nothing in the manor, may make grants according to the custome of the manor (6).

Deins quel mannor il y ad un custome, que ad este use de temps dont memory ne court, &c.

Of this custome here spoken of there be three supporters. The first is time, and that must be out of memory of man, which is included within this word (custome) so as copihold cannot begin at this day. [l] The second supporter is that the tenements be parcell of the manor or within the manor, which appeare by these words of Littleton, que certaine tenants deins mesme le mannor, &c. The third supporter is that it hath beene demised and demisable by copie of court roll; for it need not to be demised time out of mind by copie of court, but if it be demisable it is sufficient. For example: if a copihold tenement echeat to the lord, and the lord keepeth it in his hands by many yeares, during this time it is not demised but demisable, for the lord hath power to demise it againe (7).

A volunt le seignior selonque le custome. So as he is not a bare tenant at will, but a tenant at will according to the custome of the mannor, as shall be spoken more hereafter in this chapter.

Certaine tenements. What things may be granted by copy, is necessary to be knowne. First, a manor may be granted by copy (8). Secondly, underwoods without the soile may be granted by copy to one and to his heires, and so may the herbage or veiture of land. Thirdly, generally all lands and tenements within the manor and whatsoever concerneth lands or tenements may be granted by copie: as a faire appendant to a mannor may be granted by copy, &c (9).

Consuetudines. This word consuetudo being derived à consuetudo, properly signifieth a custome, as here Littleton taketh it: but in legall understanding it signifieth also tolles, murage, pontage, paviage, and such like newly granted by the king; and therefore when the king grants such things, the words be, concessimus, &c. in auxilium ville predictæ paviandæ &c. consuetudines subscriptas, viz. de quolibet funnagio, &c.

And it was an article of the justices in Eire to inquire, de novis consuetudinibus levatis in regno, sive in terra, sive in aqua, et quis eas levavit et ubi; where consuetudo is taken for tolles and such like taxes or charges upon the subject.

Sect. 74.

(1. Ro. Abr. 509.)

E T tiel tenant ne puit aliener sa terre, &c. E T tiel tenant ne puit alien sa terre per fait, car AND such a tenant may not alien his land by deed, for then

(1) See as to this ante 1. b. and the authorities in note 1. there.—(2) This is denied in Cro. Jam. 260. and is a point, which has been much controverted. See Vin. Abr. Copyhold E. and Com. Dig. Copyhold C. 1.—(3) Guardian in socage may grant copies in his own name, nor can the heir hold courts during the interest of the guardian. T. 1. Jac. Rot. 883. C. B. Shopland and Ridler. Noy n. 372. Clare's case. Hal. MSS.—See the former case acc. in Cro. Jam. 55. 98. 1. Ro. Abr. 499. pl. 4. Ow. 115. Godb. 143. 4. Leon. 238. See also acc. 2. P. Wms. 122.—(4) Custom to grant copies in reversion after estates for life. Ruled, that dominus pro tempore may make such grants; and they will bind, though the particular estate doth not determine during his interest. P. 41. Eliz. B. R. n. 27. C. C. Guy and Rey. Hil. 26. Eliz. Sir Peter Carew's case. More 147. Vide tamen H. 14. Eliz. ibid. 95. the case of Com. Oxon. contra. Hal. MSS. Accord. that the lord pro tempore may grant in reversion, where reversions are grantable by copy; see Cro. Eliz. 66. 2. P. Wms. 122. and the case of Lade and Barker in 2. New Abr. 684. See also the subject enlarged upon in Gilb. Ten. 3d. Lond. edit. 204.—(5) If copyholder surrenders to disseisor for the use of 1. S. disseisor may admit him, if the surrenderor be a copyholder in fee; but otherwise it is, if he be only copyholder for life, as it seems, for it is a new grant. P. 41. Eliz. B. R. Martyn and Rew. Hal. MSS. See Gilb. Ten. 3d. Lond. edit. 201.—(6) If heir before assignment of dower grants copies, it will not bind the wife. P. 28. Eliz. B. R. Rous and Artois. Hal. MSS.—See further as to the persons by whom copyhold estates may be granted, in Vin. Abr. Copyhold G. and Com. Dig. Copyhold C. 3.—(7) What thing destroys the custom of granting a copyhold. One is lessee for life or tenant in tail of a manor; a copyhold escheats; and lessee or tenant in tail makes lease for years of the copyhold. Though quoad himself the custom is gone, yet quoad the issue or reversioner the custom is not gone. So it is in case of a husband seised in right of his wife. P. 38. Eliz. B. R. Conesby and Ruskey. And accordingly agreed per curiam P. 1650. in Cremer and Burnet. But vid. contra M. 14. Car. B. R. Crook n. 22. in Lee's case. Copyholder surrenders to the use of the lord, who makes lease of the manor and of this tenement by name. Ruled, that the tenement is still grantable by copy; for it passes with the manor, and so continues demisable. Tr. 10. Car. Crook n. 4. Lee and Boothby.—The king is seised of a copyhold manor, the copyhold escheats, and the king makes lease for years. Ruled, that though the lease is good, yet after the term the copyhold is grantable by copy, because the grant doth not inure to a double intent in the case of donques le seignior poit entre come en chose forfeit a luy. Mes fil voit alien sa terre a un auter, il covient solonque ascun custome de surrender les tenements en ascun court, &c. en le maine le seignior, al use celuy que avera le state, en tiel forme, ou a tiel effect.

Ad hanc curiam venit A de B et sursum reddidit in eadem curia, unum mesuagium, &c. in manus domini, ad usum C de D et hæredum suorum, vel hæredum de corpore suo exeuntium vel pro termino vitæ suæ, &c. Et super hoc venit prædictus C de D et cœpit de domino in eadem curia, mesuagium prædictum, &c. Habendum et tenendum sibi et hæredibus suis, vel sibi et hæredibus de corpore suo exeuntibus, vel sibi ad terminum vitæ, &c. ad voluntatem domini, secundum consuetudinem manerii, faciendo et reddendo inde redditus, servitia, et consuetudines inde prius debita et consueta, &c. et dat domino pro fine, &c. et fecit domino fidelitatem, &c.

the lord may enter as into a thing forfeited unto him. But if he will alien his land to another, it behoveth him after the custome to surrender the tenements in court, &c. into the hands of the lord to the use of him that shall have the estate, in this forme or to this effect.

A of B commeth unto this court, and surrendreth in the same court a mease, &c. into the hands of the lord, to the use of C of D and his heires, or the heires issuing of his body, or for terme of life, &c. And upon that commeth the aforesaid C of D, and taketh of the lord in the same court, the foresaid mease, &c. To have and to hold to him and to his heires, or to him and to his heires issuing of his body, or to him for terme of life, at the lord's will, after the custome of the manor, to do and yeeld therefore the rents, services, and customes thereof before due and accustomed, &c. and giveth the lord for a fine, &c. and maketh unto the lord his fealty, &c.

true in case of alienation (1), but when a man hath but a right to a copyhold, he may release it by deed or by copie, to one that is admitted tenant de facto (2).

Alien per fait.

Here it appeareth by Littleton that there must be an alienation: for the making of the deed alone, unless somewhat passe thereby, is no forfeiture. As if he make a charter of feoffment, or a deed of demise for life, and make no livery, this is no forfeiture, because nothing passeth, and therefore no alienation (3); but otherwise it is of a lease for years (4).

Forfeit a luy.

This adjective in Latine is forisfactus, the verbe is forisfacere, and the nowne forisfactura. They are all derived of foris, (that is) extra, and facere, quasi diceret, extra legem seu consuetudinem facere, to do a thing against or without law or custome; and that legally is called a forfeiture. Littleton useth this word but once in all his booke. What shall be said [4] forfeitures of copyholds you may read at large in my Reports (5).

En ascun court.

[1] This is the generall custome of the realme, that every copyholder may surrender in court and need not to allege any custome therefore. So if out of court he surrender to the lord himselfe, he need not alledge in pleading any custome. But if he surrender out of court into the hands of the lord by the hands of two or three, &c. copyholders, or by the hands of the baylis or reeve, &c. or out of court by the hand of any other, these customes are particular, and therefore he must plead them (6).

[m] Bracton lib. 4. fol. 209. speaking of these kind of customary tenants, saith, Dare autem non possunt tenementa sua, nec ex causa donationis ad alios transferre non magis quam villani puri; et unde si transferre debeant, restituant ea

Lib. intrat. 137. 4. Co. 25. b. inter Kite and Queinton.

[4] 4. Co. Inter les copyhold cases 21. 23. 25. 27. 28. 8. Co. 92. 99. 100. 9. Co. 75. 107. 10. Co. 131.

[7] Bract. lib. 2. cap. 8. & lib. 4. 49. 15. H. 4. 34. 1. H. 5. 11.

(1. Ro. Abr. 500. 9. Co. 76.)

(1) Parceners of copyhold cannot make partition without the lord's licence. P. 41. Eliz. B. R. Fuller and Terry. Hal. MSS. The same case is in 1. Ro. Abr. 509. pl. 1. 2. but the points there are different.—(2) If copyhold is granted to A and B, who are admitted, A may release to B without fine or surrender. Adjudged P. 19 Jac. entered H. 16. Rot. 735. C. B. Wase and Pretty. So he may release condition. T. 2. Jac. —But if he release to disseisor, it is holden void; but he may release all his right to him who is admitted. M. 5. Car. C. B. per curiam. Hal. MSS.—See acc. Wase and Pretty in Winch. 3. and f. p. acc. by the court in Hetl. 150. See further as to the effect of a release on a copyhold. Vin. Abr. Copyhold Z. a. and Com. Dig. Copyhold I. i.—(3) But according to Rolle, though livery is not made, the feoffment is a forfeiture, if there be a letter of attorney to deliver seisin, because then the feoffee may at any time perfect the conveyance; and he thinks, that lord Coke ought to be understood with this distinction. 1. Ro. Abr. 508. pl. 12. 13. However the distinction in Rolle may be doubted, for the criterion of forfeiture of a copyhold by alienation seems to be the actual passing of an unlawful estate to the lord's prejudice, and in the case of the feoffment no interest can pass till livery; nor is it strictly true, that the feoffee may at any time perfect the conveyance, for it is possible, that before livery the feoffor may revoke the power of attorney, or the attorney may die or refuse to execute his authority. See further on this subject 3. Leon. 109. and Godb. 269.—(4) The plural number is here significant; for a lease for one year is not a forfeiture, such lease by copyholder being, as lord Coke in another place writes, warranted by the general custom of the realm. 4. Co. 26. See also acc. 9. Co. 75. b. W. Jo. 249 and Litt. Rep. 233. See also 1. And. 192. and Mo. 272. and 679. by which it appears that it was once doubted, whether to warrant a lease for one year without the lord's licence a particular custom was not necessary.—The following annotation is by lord Hale. Vid. as to forfeiture by lease or alienation. A is lessee of a manor for free years; copyholder grants bargains and sells his copyhold to A and his heirs. Ruled, that this amounts to a full surrender; and if after the term he who hath the fee of the manor admits A or his heir, it amounts to a new grant. T. 21. Jac. C. B. Hassel and Hamerton.—Copyholder in fee makes lease for a year and so de anno in annum during the life of the copyholder except one day at the end of every year; and this was adjudged to be a forfeiture; and so if it was by covenant, for it amounts to a lease for two years, and the exception of the king. P. 1650. Cramer and Burnet. Hal. MSS. See Conesby and Ruskey in Cro. Eliz. 459. Cramer and Burnet in Sty. 266. and 2. Ro. Abr. 196. pl. 34. and Lee's case in Cro. Cha. 521. W. Jo. 449. and 1. Ro. Abr. 498. pl. 1. See also the observations on the two latter cases in Vin. Abr. Prerogative G. c. pl. 3. 4. See further on the destruction of copyhold estates in Com. Dig. Copyhold B. 3. and L. and Vin. Abr. Copyhold R.—(8) See note 2. supra.—(9) Tithes are grantable by copy. P. 45. Eliz. B. R. Sands and Drury per curiam. Hal. MSS. See as to the case here cited by lord Hale Vin. Abr. Copyhold E. pl. 1: See also as to things grantable by copy, Vin. Abr. ubi supra and Com. Dig. C. 1.

[b] Coram rege Mich. 31. E. 3. Ranulph Huntingfield's case. 3. E. 3. Corona 310. 11. H. 4. 83. per Thorning.

[c] Vide 4. Co. inter les cafes de copiholds.

[d] Mich. 2. & 3. Ph. & M. in Com. Banco, by the whole court in Constable's case of Pickenham in Norfolk.

[e] Fleta lib. 2. c. 65. & 71.

[f] See more of this 4. Co. the cafes of copiholds. Trin. 1. Ja. Rot. 854. inter Shapland & Ridler in repl. in Com. Banco. the case of the gardian in socage adjudged. (Cro. Jam. 98. 6. Co. 60. b.)

[g] T. 39. Eliz. betweene the copiholders of the mannor of Guiltins, in the county of Northumberland and Armstrong, lord of the manor, in chancery. (11. Co. 44. a. Cro. Cha. 196. 2. Ro. Abr. 578.)

eo domino vel baliivo, et ipsi ea tradant aliis in villenagium tenenda. But although it be incident to the estate of a copihold to passe, as our author saith, by surrenders, [b] yet so forcible is custome, that by it a freehold and inheritance may also passe by surrender (1) (without the leave of the lord) in his court, and be delivered over by the bailly to the tefsee, according to the forme of the deed, to be inrolled in the court or the like.

Ad hanc curiam venit Ade B et sursum reddidit, &c. Here Littleton putteth an example of a surrender in court, and in this example three [c] things are to be observed.

First, that the surrender to the lord be generall without expressing of any estate (2), for that he is but an instrument to admit Cessy a que use, for no more passeth to the lord, but to serve the limitation of the use (3); and Ce' que use, when he is admitted, shall be in by him that made the surrender, and not by the lord (4).

Secondly, if the limitation of the use be generall, then Ce' que use taketh but an estate for life, and therefore here Littleton expresseth upon the declaration of the use, the limitation of the estate, viz. in fee simple, fee taile, &c.

Thirdly, the lord cannot grant a larger [d] estate then is expressed in the limitation of the use. Littleton here putteth his case of one. If two joyntenants be of copihold lands in fee, and the one out of court according to the custome surrender his part to the lord's hands, to the use of his last will, and by his will deviseth his part to a stranger in fee, and dyeth, and at the next court the surrender is presented, by the surrender and presentment the joynture was severed, and the devisee ought to be admitted to the moitie of the lands, for now by relation the state of the land was bound by the surrender (5).

In manus domini. Dominus manerii. The lord of a mannor is described [e] by Fleta as he ought to be, in these words. In omnibus autem et supra omnia decet quolibet dominum verbis esse veracem, et in operibus fidelem, Deum et justitiam amantem, fraudem et peccatum odientem, voluntariosque, malevolos, et injuriosos contententem, et apud proximos pietatem vultumque motibilem et plenum, ipsius enim interest potius consilio quam viribus uti, proprio arbitrio. Non cujuslibet voluntarii juvenis menestrali, vel adulatoris, sed jurisperitorum virorum fidelium et honestorum, et in pluribus expertorum, consilio debet favere. Qui bene sibi vult disponere et familie sue, scire veram executionem terrarum suarum necessarium erit, ut perinde sciat quantitatem suarum facultatem et finem annuarum expensarum. And the residue is fit for every lord of a mannor to know and follow, which were too long here to be recited, only his conclusion having spoken of the lord's revenue and expences I will adde, Quae omnia distincte scribantur in membranis, ut perinde sagacius vitam suam disponat et facilius convincat mendacia compositorum.

[f] If the lord of the manor for the time being be lessee for life or for yeares, gardian, or any that hath any particular interest, or tenant at will of a manor, (all of which are accounted in law domini pro tempore) and doe take a surrender into his hands, and before admittance the lessee for life dyeth, or the yeare's interest or custody doe end or determine, or the will is determined, though the lord commeth in above the lease for life or for yeares, the custody or other particular interest or tenancy at will, yet shall he be compelled (6) to make admittance according to the surrender; and so was it holden in 17. Eliz. in the earle of Arundel's case, which I my selfe heard.

Et dat domino de fine. For the signification of this word (finis) Vide Sect. 174. 182. 194. 441.

Of fines due to the lord by the copiholder, some be by the change or alteration of the lord (7), and some by the change or alteration of the tenant. The change of the lord ought to be by act of God, otherwise no fine can be due; but by the change of the tenant either by the act of God, or by the act of the party, a fine may be due: for if the lord doe alledge a custome within his manor to have a fine of every of his copiholders of the said manor at the alteration or change of the lord of the mannor, be it by alienation, demise, death, or otherwise; this is a custome against the law, as to the alteration or change of the lord by the act of the party, for by that meanes the copiholders may be oppressed by multitude of fines, by the act of the lord. But when the change groweth by the act of God, there the custome is good as by the death of the lord. And this, upon a case in the chancery [g] referred to Sir John Popham chiefe justice, and upon conference with Anderson, Periam, Walmesley, and all the judges of Serjants Inn in Fleetstreet, was resolved, and so certified into the chancery. But upon the change or alteration of the tenant (8), a fine is due unto the lord.

Of fines taken of copiholders some be certaine by custome, and some be uncertaine, but that fine, though it be incertus, yet must it be rationabilis. And that reasonableness shall be discussed by the justices upon the true circumstances of the case appearing unto them; and if the court where the cause dependeth, adjudgeth the fine exacted unreasonable, then is not the exception of a day doth not aid the case. Vid. 10. Jac. B. R. Bulltr. n. 201. Hamlen and Hamlen. T. 10. Jac. ibid. n. 232. Luttrell and Wilson.—Copyholder makes lease by indenture for one year, and same day by another makes another lease for one year to commence after the former, and so a third lease by a third indenture for one year after the second, and then surrenders to the steward to the use of copiholder compellable to pay it (1). And so was it adjudged: [b] for all excessiveness is abhorred in law. See more concerning fines of copiholders in my Reports [i] which are so plainly there set downe, as they need not be rehearsed here.

(1) M. 9. Jac. C. B. n. 5. D. D. Wilde and Francis. Adjudged accordingly, and the admittance is tenendum but not ad voluntatem domini. Hal. MSS.—Vid. acc. ante 49. a. and note 6. there, and also the books cited in Blackitt. Law Tr. 8vo. ed. v. 1. p. 144. From these authorities it appears, that estates held by copy of court-roll, but not at the will of the lord, have been deemed freehold estates as well by others, as by lord Coke, and in order to distinguish them from the ordinary kind have been denominated customary freeholds. In consequence of the prevalence of this notion, a considerable number of such tenants some few years ago claimed a right of voting as freeholders at the election of knights of the shire. This gave occasion to a short but most excellent treatise on the subject, in which the learned author traces the origin of lands held in this peculiar way, and proves by the most clear and forcible arguments, that, though these tenures in some respects resemble freeholds, they are in truth nothing more than a superior kind of copyhold. Soon after the publication of this treatise, the doctrine asserted in it received confirmation from an act of parliament, declaring, that no person holding by copy of court-roll should be intitled to vote at the election of knights of the shire. See Blackitt. Law Tr. 8vo. ed. v. 1. page 105. and 31. G. 2. c. 14.—(2) Copyholder for life surrenders to the use of D, the lord accepts the surrender and admits D for his life who dies. Adjudged, that the surrenderor shall not have the land, but the lord, for he who surrendered had not any reversion. But if copyholder surrenders to the use of B, there on B's death the surrenderor shall have, for he hath the remainder. M. 6. Car. B. R. Crook n. 10. King and Lord. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Cha. 204. and S. C. 1. Ro. Abr. 504. 2. Ro. Abr. 462. See 9. Co. 107. Vin. Abr. Copyhold P. 6. Mod. 68. 1. Salk. 188. and Gilb. Ten. 3d Lond. ed. 257.—(3) See Post 62. a. and Jefferies's case cited from Wilf. in note 1.—(4) Acc. by Wilmot justice in 4. Burr. vol. 3. page 1543. and see further as to this Yelv. 223. 4. Co. 27. b. Com. Dig. Copyhold F. 14. and Gilb. Ten. 3d Lond. ed. 257.—(5) M. 3. Jac. B. R. Crook n. 30. Porter and Porter. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Jam. 100. by which the case appears to have been adjudged according to lord Coke's doctrine of relation. See further as to the relation of Surrenders in Vin. Abr. Copyhold T. b.—(6) Nota ruled, that action on the case doth not lie against the lord who refuses to admit, but the remedy is to compell him in chancery. P. 13. Jac. B. R. Crook n. 1. Ford and Hopkins. Hal. MSS. See Cro. Jam. 368. and S. C. Mo. 842. 2. Bulltr. 336. But it is said to have been adjudged, that though surrenderer cannot have action on the case against the lord for refusing to admit, yet the surrenderor may. 3. Bulltr. 217.—(7) Vid. for tallages in Wales on change of the lord. 34. H. 8. c. 26. Hal. MSS. See sect. 93.—(8) See Vin. Abr. Copyhold W. b. See also much curious learning on this subject in the case of the earl of Bath and Abney in 4. Burr. vol. 1. page 206. In that case the court held, that the executor of a copyholder, for a long term of years, was compellable to be admitted and to pay a fine. The great point of the case was, whether a fine became due on every change of the tenant, or on change of the estate only.

[b] Pasch. 1. Jac. in com. banco rot. 1845. inter Stallon & Brady.
[i] 4. Co. the cases of copiholds.

Sect. 75.

ET tiels tenants sont appellez tenants per copie de court rolle; pur ceo que ils nont autre evidence concernant leur tenements, fors que les copies des rolles de court.

AND these tenants are called tenants by copie of court rolle; because they have no other evidence concerning their tenements, but onely the copies of court rolles.

ILS nont autre evidence.

This is to be understood of evidences of (4. Co. 25.) alienation; for a release of a right by deed a copiholder (that commeth in by way of admittance) may have, and that is sufficient to extinguish the right of the copyhold, which he that maketh the release had (2).

Sect. 76.

ET tiels tenants ne empleront, ne seront empledes de leur tenements per briefe le roy. Mes fils voient empler auters pur leur tenements, ils averont un plaint fait en le court le seignior en tiel forme, ou a tiel effect: A. de B. queritur versus C. de D. de placito terræ, videlicet, de uno mesuagio, quadraginta acris terr', quatuor acris prati, &c. cum pertin'. & facit protestationem sequi querelam istam in natura brevis dominis regis assisæ mortis antecessoris ad communem legem, vel brevis domini regis assisæ novæ disseisinæ ad communem legem, aut in natura brevis de for-

AND such tenants shall neither implead nor be impleaded for their tenements by the king's writ. But if they will impleade others for their tenements, they shall have a plaint entered in the lords court in this forme, or to this effect: A. of B. complains against C. of D. of a plea of land, viz. of one mesuage, forty acres of land, four acres of meadow, &c. with the appurtenances, and makes protestation to follow this complaint in the nature of the king's writ of assise of Mordancester at the common law, or of an assise of novel disseisin, or formedon in the descender at the TIELS tenants ne empleront, ne seront empledes, &c.

This is evident, and needs no explanation.

Mes fils voient empler auters, ils averont, &c.

Put the case that the demandant in a plaint in nature of a reall action recovereth the land erroneously, what remedy for the party grieved? For he cannot have the king's writ of false judgement in respect of the baseness of the estate and tenure, being in the eye of the law but a tenant at will. And the freehold being in another, he shall have a petition to the lord in the nature of a writ of false judgement, and therein assigne errors, and have remedy according to law.

De forma donationis in descender ad communem legem. By the opinion of Littleton, as there may be an estate taile by custome with the co-operation of the statute of W. 2. cap. 1. so may he have a formedon in descender; but as the statute without a custome extendeth not to copiholds, so a custome

4. H. 4. 34. adjudged in parliament.

14. H. 4. 34. 1. H. 5. 11. Vet. N. B. 18. 13. R. 2. tit. Faule judgment. 7. E. 4. 19. 21. E. 4. 80.
(4. Co. 21. b.)

3. Co. 8. 9. in Heydon's case 4. Co. 22. 23. 15. H. 8. Br. tit. Taile.
(3. Co. 8. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 838.)

(1) 1. What shall be a reasonable fine. Two years and an half of rack'd rent adjudged unreasonable; and year and an half is sufficient. T. 6. Car. B. R. Crook n. 8. Dow and Goding. Two years value of rack'd rent adjudged unreasonable. 2. He, who would take advantage of a forfeiture for non-payment of a fine uncertain, ought to assesse a reasonable fine and prefix a day and place within the manor for payment of it. Otherwise non-payment is not a forfeiture. 3. If it be doubtful, whether the fine be reasonable or not, non-payment is not a forfeiture. M. 6. Jac. C. B. n. 5. D. D. Willowe's case. Vide tamen, for if in truth it be reasonable, non-payment at the day prefixed has been held a forfeiture. M. 1650. Parker's case.—Custom, that copyholder shall pay a fine of two years rent or under, held good. M. 10. Jac. B. R. 2. Bullstr. n. 23. Allen and Abraham. But M. 36. 37. Eliz. A. B. n. 148. in Green and Bury it was ruled void for the uncertainty. Hal. MSS. See the first case in Cro. Cha. 196. the second in 13. Co. 3. the third in 2. Bullstr. 32. and the fourth in 2. Ro. Abr. 165. pl. 1. Note that in the case, in which two years rack rent was deemed an unreasonable fine, the admittance was on an alienation and not on a descent, and that on a descent two years value is generally understood to be reasonable. See Rep. temp. Finch 464. See further on the quantum of fines tit. Copyhold in Vin. Abr. X. b. Com. Dig. H. 4. and New Abr. I. 3. and the case of the earl of Bath and Abney in 4. Burr. vol. 1. page 206.—(2) Vid. hic fol. 59. a. A surrenders to the use of B, clearly the land is bound by the surrender, but B hath nothing in the land till admittance. M. 8. Car. B. R. Burgoin and Spurling. But if the surrenderee dies, his heir shall be admitted. If the lord accepts rent of B, it is a good admittance. M. 24. Car. B. R. Baker and Denham. A surrenders to the use of B, who before admittance surrenders to the use of C and C is admitted. Ruled, that C takes nothing, for B who surrenders hath not any interest to surrender till admittance. 24. Eliz. Alderman Dixe's case. M. 6. Jac. B. R. n. 6. Wilson and Woodhall. But yet it hath been ruled good, for the admittance of C shall be implied to be an admittance of B first, and so there shall be priority. M. 24. Car. B. R. Baker and Denham. P. 41. Eliz. C. B. Colchin and Colchin. Vid. T. 15. Jac. B. R. 2. Popb. 5. Hal. MSS.—See the first case in Cro. Cha. 273. & 283. and 1. Ro. Abr. 473. & 500. the second in Sty. 145. the fourth case in Yelv. 144. the fifth in Cro. Eliz. 662. and 1. Ro. Abr. 499. pl. 1. See further as to the subject of the cases in this annotation, Com. Dig. Copyhold F. 11. and Vin. Abr. Copyhold U. W. Y. and Q. b.—(3) It has been often adjudged accordingly; and in such case surrender is not a discontinuance, but there may be a bar by custom either by surrender or recovery, but not without custom. M. 2. Car. C. B. Crook n. 4. P. 37. Eliz. Clun and Turner. P. 1651. B. R. Franklin and Myn. Hal. MSS.—See the case of M. 2. Cha. in Cro. Cha. 42. See also Post 60. b. and note 1. & 2. there.

the lord. Ruled, 1. Though this be by several indentures, and two days interpose between the end of one lease and the beginning of another, it is a forfeiture. 2. The covin is apparent, though it was not found. 3. Though he surrenders to the lord not having notice, the lord shall be adjudged to be in point of forfeiture, and shall avoid the leases. M. 7. Car. B. R. n. 15. Matherw and Whetton. Hal. MSS.

some without the statute cannot create an estate taylor. Now it is not a sufficient proofe, that lands have been granted in taile; for albeit lands have anciently and usually beene granted by copie to many men and to the heires of their bodies, that may be a fee simple conditionall as it was at the common law. But if a remainder have been limited over such estates and enjoyed, or if the issues in taile have avoided the alienation of the ancestor, or if they have recovered the same in writs of formedon in the descender, these and such like be proofes of an estate taile. [y] But if by custome copihold may be intailed, the same by like custome by surrender may be cut off (1); and so hath it beene adjudged. [z] Some have holden that there was a formedon in the descender at the common law (2).

(1. Ro. Abr. 506. 1. Sid. 267. 314. Cro. Eliz. 717.)
[y] P. 29. Eliz. inter Hill and Upcheic. Custome deins le manor de Overhall in Essex. 21. El. 2. Dier 366. 23. Eliz. Dier 373.
[z] 10. E. 2. Formdon 55. 21. E. 3. 47. Pl. Com. 240. 4. E. 2. Formdon 50.

Sect. 77.

CAR (il est dit) que ET coment que AND although that si le Seignior, ont inheritance solonque some such tenants Et c. And here le custome del manor, un- have an inheritance according to the custome of the manor, yet they have but an estate but at the will of the lord according to the course of the common law. For it is said, that if the lord doe oust them, they have no other remedy but to sue to their lords by petition, for if they should have any other remedy, they should not be said to be tenants at will of the lord according to the custome of the manor. But the lord cannot breake the custome which is reasonable in these cases.

13. E. 3. tit. Prescript. 20. 13. R. 2. faux judgement 7. 33. H. 6. tit. Subpna 2. 7. E. 4. 19.

But he setteth not down his owne opinion, but rather to the contrary, as hereafter in this chapter appeareth. But now magistra rerum experientia hath made this cleare and without question, that the lord cannot at his pleasure put out the lawfull copiholder without some cause of forfeiture, and if he do the copiholder, may have an action of trespass against him, for albeit he is tenens ad voluntatem domini, yet it is secundum consuetudinem manerii (4).

Vide fecit. 81. 82. 84. 132.

[b] Vid. 42. E. 3. 25. Brit. fol. 165.

[b] And Britton speaking of these kinde of tenants faith thus, et ceux sont privileges en tiel maner, que nul de les doit ouster de

est dit, si le seignior eux ousta, fils nont auter remedy forsque de fuer a leur seigniors per petition; car fils averont auter remedie, ils ne seront dits tenants a volunt le seignior solonque le custome del manor. Mes le seignior ne voile enfreinder le custom que est reasonable en tiels cases.

Mes Brian chiefe justice dit, que son opinion ad tous foits este, et unquez serra, si tiel tenant per le custome payant ses services soit eject per le seignior, que il avera action de trespass vers luy, H. 21. Ed. 4. Et issint fut l'opinion de Danby chiefe justice, M. 7. Ed. 4.

But Brian chiefe justice said, that his opinion hath alwaies been and ever shall be, that if such tenant by custome paying his services be elected by the lord, he shall have an action of trespass against him. H. 21. Ed. 4. And so was the opinion of Danby chiefe justice.

(1) See 2. Vef. 603 the case of Carr and Singer, in which three judges against Willes chief justice held, that where copyholds are intailable, and the custom has not prescribed any mode of barring, the intail may be barred by surrender. But Willes ch. justice thought, that in such a case recovery was the proper mode. Note the three ways of barring intails of copyholds mentioned in this case; namely recovery, surrender, and forfeiture and regnant.

(2) See further as to intails of copyholds in Vin. Abr. Copyhold F. E. G. c.

(3) What follows in this section is neither in L. & M.—nor P.—The addition first appears in Redm.

(4) But trespass lies not against the lord for cutting trees. Hill. 10. E. 1. Rot. 3. Casus prioris of Anthony. But now the law is changed. Hal. MSS.

See the first case cited by lord Hale in Winch 66. W. Jo. 41. and Hutton 65. though in these books the name is different. See the second case in 1. Bulstr. 189. the third in 1. Bulstr. 215. and the fourth in Cro. Cha. 233. W. Jo. 249. and 1. Ro. Abr. 508. pl. 10.—It is observable, that according to the third case cited by lord Hale a mere covenant that the lessee shall enjoy for a second year is a forfeiture; but the second case and other authorities are to the contrary, because; though in general a covenant amounts to a lease, yet it seems harsh to give such a construction, where a lease amounts to a forfeiture, and the intention of the parties may have effect by way of agreement. See Cro. Jam. 311. and 2. Keb. 267. See further as to leases by copyholders and forfeiture on that account, New Abr. tit. Leases I. 6. Vin. Abr. Copyhold G. c. H. C.—(5) See also tit. Copyhold in Vin. Abr. D. c. to E. d. 2. New Abr. L. and Com. Dig. M.—(6) Nota, by Rolle surrender into the hands of the steward, though out of the court is good without custom. M. 24. Car. B. R. Baker and Denham. Hal. MSS. See acc. 1. Ro. Abr. 500. pl. 3. 4. Leon. 111. 1. Salk. 184. Some make a distinction between stewards by deed and stewards by parol, and think, that only the former can take surrenders out of court. Godb. 142. and 1. L. Raym. 159. But this distinction has been frequently denied, and indeed seems unsupported by any good reason. Cro. Jam. 526. Com. Rep. 85.

Car il dit que le tenant per le custome est bien enheritor de aver son terre selon que le custome, come cestuy que ad frank-tenement al common ley.

tice in 7. Ed. 4. For he saith, that tenant by the custome is as well inheritour to have his land according to the custome, as he which hath a freehold at the common law (1).

tiels tenements, tant come ilz font les services que a leur tenements appendent, ne nul ne poet leur services acressre ne echange a faire autres services ou plus. And herewith agreeth Sir Robert Danby, chiefe justice of the court of Common Pleas, M. 7. E. 4. 19. and Sir Thomas Brian his successor, M. 21. E. 4. 80. viz. that the copyholder doing his customes and services, if he be put out by his lord, he shall have an action of trespass against him.

have an action of trespass a-

CHAP. 10. Sect. 78.

Tenant per le Verge.

TÉNANTS per le verge sont en tiel nature come tenants per le copy de court roll. Mes la cause, pur que ils sont apelles tenants per la verge, est per ceo que quant ils voient surrender leur tenements en le main leur seignior al use dun autre, ils averont un petite verge (per le custome) en leur main, le quel ils bailera al seneschall ou al bailife solonque le custome et use del manor, et celui, que avera la terre, prendra mesme la terre en le court, et son prisel sera enter en le roll, et le seneschal ou le bailife solonque le custome delivera a ce-

Tenants by the verge are in the same nature as tenants by copy of court roll. But the reason, why they be called tenants by the verge, is for that when they will surrender their tenements into the hands of their lord to the use of another, they shall have a little rod (by the custome) in their hand, the which they shall deliver to the steward or to the bailife according to the custome of the manor, and he which shall have the land shall take up the same land in court, and his taker shall be entered upon the roll, and the steward or bailife according to the custom

TÉNANTS per le verge. This tenant per le verge is a mere copyholder, and taketh his name of the ceremony of the verge (2). Tenure in villenage, or by base tenure is thus described by Britton, [a] Villenage est tenant de demeines de cheescun seigneur baille, a tener a son volunt per villeines services de enprover al opes le seignior, et liwere per verge et nient per tittle de escript, ne per succession de heritage, dont gards de mariages ne autres services reals, come homage et relieves, ne poient des amones de demeines ne de villenage es demand.

14. H. 4. 33. (Cro. Cha. 597.)

[a] Britton fol. 165. a. F. N. B. fol. 12. Liberatio per Virgam.

A le seneschal.

(Which we call a steward) seneschallus is derived of sein a house or place, and schale an officer or governor. Some say that sen is an ancient word for justice, so as seneschall should signifie officarius justitie; and some say that steward is derived of stewe (that is) a place, and ward, that signifieth a keeper, warden, or governor; and others, that it is derived of stede, that signifieth a place also, and ward as it were the keeper or governor of that place. But it is a word of

(1) This must be understood with exception of such copyholds, as by the custom are grantable for life only.

(2) In Cro. Cha. 597. there is a case, in which it was pleaded, that the custom was to surrender by a knife, and therefore that a surrender by the verge was void. This custom being alledged before the council of the marches of Wales, they proceeded to try it. On moving this matter in the King's Bench, a prohibition was granted, because the custom was only triable at the common law; but it is not mentioned, what the court thought of the operation of the surrender.

Lib. 1. Cap. 10. Of Tenant le Verge. Sect. 79.

Vide sect. 93. & 379. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 66. Vide statut. de extent. maner. 14 E. 1.

of many significations. In this place it signifieth an officer of justice, viz. a keeper of courts, &c. Fleta describeth the office and duty of this officer at large most excellently: Provideat sibi dominus de seneschallo circumspetto et fidei, viro provido et discreto et gratiofo, humili, pudico, pacifico, et modesto, qui in legibus consuetudinibusque provincie et officio seneschalcie se cognoscat, et iura domini sui in omnibus teneri assuetet, quique subballivos domini in suis erroribus et ambiguis sciat instruere et docere, quique egenis parcere, et qui nec prece vel pretio velit à tramite iusticie deviare, et perverſe judicare; cujus officium est curias tenere maneriorum; et de subtractionibus consuetudinum, serviciorum, reddituum, sectarum ad cur', mercata, molendina domini et ad visus francpledgi aliarumque libertatum domino pertinentium inquirat, &c. The residue pertaining to his office is worth your reading at large. Every steward of courts is either by deed or without deed (1); for a man may be retained a steward to keepe his court baron and leet also belonging to the manor without deed, and that retyner shall continue untill he be discharged. The lord of a manor may make admittances out of court and out of the manor also (2), as at large appeareth in my Reports.

Vide 4. Co. Cases de Copiholds. fol. 26, 27, 30.

luy que prist la terre mesme le verge, ou un auter verge, en nosme del seisin; et pur cel cause ils sont appellez tenants per le verge, mes ils nont auter evidence, sinon pur copy de court roll.

shall deliver to him that taketh the land the same rod, or another rod, in the name of seisin; and for this cause they are called tenants by the verge, but they have no other evidence but by copy of court roll.

Sect. 79.

A Le bailie. This word bailie as some say commeth of the French word baylife, in Latin ballivus; but in truth bailie is an old Saxon word, and signifieth a safe keeper or protector, and baile or baillium is safe keeping or protection: and thereupon we say when a man upon surety is delivered out of prison traditur in ballium, he is delivered into bayle, that is, into their safe keeping or protection from prison: and the sherife that hath custodiam comitatus, is called ballivus, and the county balliva sua.

Reve, is derived of the Saxon word gerefa or gereve; and by contraction or rather corruption greve, or reve, and is in Latine præfectus or præpositus. It signifies as much as appruator a disposer or director, as wood-reeve, sheepe reve, shire reeve, &c. whereof more shall be said hereafter. Vide Fleta lib. 2. cap. 67. where he treateth of the office of the bailie, and cap. 69. de officio præpositi, of Vide Lamb, exposition of Saxon words.

Fleta lib. 2. ca. 67. & 69.

ET auxy en divers seigniories et mannors, il y ad tiel custome, si tiel tenant, que tient per custome, voloit aliener ses terres ou tenements, il poit surrender ses tenements a le baily, ou a le reeve, ou a deux probes homes del seigniory, al use cestuy que avera le terre, daver en fee simple, fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, &c. Et tout ceo ils presenteront al procheine court, et donque celuy, que avera la terre per copy de court roll, avera mesme la terre solonque lentent del surrender.

AND also in divers lordshippes and mannors there is this custome, viz. if such a tenant, which holdeth by custome, will alien his lands or tenements, he may surrender his tenements to the bailie or to the reeve, or to two honest men of the same lordship, to the use of him which shall have the land, to have in fee simple, fee taile, or for terme of life, &c. and they shall present all this at the next court, & then he, which shall have the land by copy of court roll, shall have the same according to the intent of the surrender.

the

(1) But a patent is necessary to the making of stewards of the king's manors. See further title Stewards of courts in Vin. Abr. F. and Com. Dig. Copyhold R. 5.

(2) See ante 59. a. and note 6. there.

the office of the reeve, and what belongeth of duty and right to either of them, which words are too long here to be inserted. Only this I will take out of him. Balivus autem cujuscunque manerii esse debet in verbo verax, et in opere diligens et fidelis, ac pro discreto approbatore cognitus plegiatus et electus, qui de communioribus legibus pro tanto officio sufficienter se cognoscit, et quod sit ita justus, quod ob vindictam seu cupiditatem non querat versus tenentes domini nec alios, &c. Prepositus autem tanquam approbator et cultor optimus, &c. domino vel ejus seneschallo palam debet presentari, cui injungatur officium illud indilate. Non ergo sit piger aut somnolentus, sed efficaciter et continue commodum domini adipisci nitatur et exarare, &c. The residue concerning both the offices being worth your reading.

A le bailie ou a le reeve. Littleton intendeth into the hands of the lord by the hands of the baliffe or the reeve.

Ou al deux probes homes del seignorie. The custome doth guide these surrenders out of court and the custome must be pursued.

Vid. 4. Co. 25. Kite and Quaintin's case.

Et tout ceo ils presenteront al prochein court, &c. By the surrender out of court, the copyhold estate passeth to the lord under a secret condition that it be presented at the next court according to the custome of the mannor. And therefore if after such a surrender, and before the next court, he that made the surrender dieth, yet the surrender standeth good (1), and if it be presented at the next court ce' a que use shall be admitted thereunto; but if it be not presented at the next court according to the custome, then the surrender becometh void (2), and so was it cleerly holden Pasc. 14. Eliz. in the court of Common Pleas which I my selfe heard.

(4. Co. 29. b)

Sect. 80.

ET issint est ascavoir, que en divers seignories, et divers manors, sont plusors et divers customes en tielx cases, quant a prender tenements, et quant a pleder, et quant as autres choses et customes a faire; et tout ceo, que nest pas encounter reason, poit bien estre admitte et allow.

AND so it is to be understood, that in divers lordships, and in divers mannors, there be many and divers customes in such cases, as to take tenements, and as to plead, and as to other things and customes to be done; and whatsoever is not against reason may well be admitted and allowed.

SONT plusors et divers customes.

This was cautiously set downe, for in respect of the variety of the customes in most mannors, it is not possible to set down any certainty, only this incident inseparable every custome must have, viz. that it be consonant to reason, for how long soever it hath continued, if it be against reason, it is of no force in law.

(4. Co. 31. Cro. Cha. 220)

Enconter reason.

This is not to be understood of every unlearned man's reason, but of artificiall and legal reason warranted by authority of law: Lex est summa ratio.

Sect. 81.

Ils sont apelles tenants per base tenure. Of this sufficient hath been spoken before.

ET tiels tenants que teignent solonque le custome dun seignorie ou dun manor, coment que ils ont estate denheritance solonque le custome del seignory ou manor, uncore pur ceo que ils nont ascun

AND these tenants which hold according to the custome of a lordship or mannor, albeit they have an estate of inheritance according to the custome of the lordship of mannor, yet because frank-

(1) But vide Trin. 7. Car B. R. Rot. 373. Adjudged M. S. Crook n. 27. Burgoin and Spurling. A surrenders to the steward out of court to the use of B on condition, and before the next court surrenders to the steward to the use of C in fee; the condition is performed, and then he surrenders to the use of D in fee by the hands of the steward; and at the next court all are present. Ruled, that C shall have the land, for by the surrender the interest is bound, but the estate doth not pass till presentment, but remained fully in A, and so the surrender to C is good when the surrender to B is avoided by performance of the condition before the court. Hal. MSS.—See note 2. in 60. 2. See also as to the commencement of the surrenderee's estate Jeffereys's case in Will. vol. 1. part 2. page 13. In that case one having surrendered to the use of his will devised a copyhold to Miss Jeffereys in fee; and she being attainted of felony and hanged before admittance, the question was whether her interest in the copyhold was such as to intitle the lord by forfeiture. The whole court inclined against the lord, but did not give an absolute opinion.

(2) See further as to the time of presenting surrenders, Vin. Abr. Copyhold U. 2. Com. Dig. Copyhold F. 10:

franktenement per le cours del common ley, ils sont appellees tenants per base tenure.

they have no freehold by the course of the common law, they are called tenants by base tenure.

Sect. 82.

TENANT ET divers diversities y sint perena volunt ties y sint peren-solonque le ter tenant a volunt, que custom puit est eins per lease son les-aver estate sor per le course del comdenheritance, mon ley, et tenant solonque etc. Here note le custome del manor en that Littleton al- le forme avandit. Car tenloweth, that by ant a volunt solonque custhe custome of the tom puit aver estate denhemanor the copi- ritage (come est avantdit.)
holder hath an al volunt le seignior soloninheritance, que le custome et usage and consequently del manor. Mes si home the lord cannot put him out without cause.

Mes si home, ad terres ou tenements,
Ec. voile les- queux ne sont deins tiel ser terres ou manor ou seigniorie, tenements a ou tiel custome ad este un auter a use en le forme avantdit, aver et tener et voile lesser tiels terres
a luy et ses ou tenements a un auter, heires a vo- a aver et tener a luy et a lunt le lessor, ses heires a le volunt le ceux parols(a lessor, ceux parolx (a les les heires de le heires de le lessée) sont lessée) sont voi- voids. Car en cest case si des, car en cest le lessée devie et son heire case si le lessée enter, le lessor avera bon devie, et son action de trespas envers heire enter, le luy; mes nemy issint en-lessor avera vers l'heire le terre per le action de trespas custome en ascun cas, Ec.
passe envers pur ceo que le custome de luy, Ec. By le manor en ascun cas

10. F. 4. 18. 22. E. 4. 13. 2. R.
2. barre 237. 11. H. 7. 22. 21.
11. 7. 12.

which it is proved, that by the death of the lessee the lease is absolutely determined, which is proved by this, that if the heire enter the lessor shall have an action of trespass, quare vi et armis, before any entry made by the lessor.

AND there are divers diversities between tenant at will, which is in by lease of his lessor by the course of the common law, and tenant according to the custome of the manor in forme aforesaid. For tenant at will according to the custome may have an estate of inheritance (as is aforesaid) at the will of the lord, according to the custome and usage of the manor. But if a man hath lands or tenements, which be not within such a manor or lordship, where such a custome hath beene used in forme aforesaid, and will let such lands or tenements to another, to have and to hold to him, and to his heires at the will of the lessor, these words (to the heires of the lessee) are void. For in this case if the lessee dieth, and his heire enter, the lessor shall have a good action of trespass against him; but not so against the heire of tenant by the custome in any case, &c. for that the custome of the manor in some case may aide him to barre his lord in an action of trespass, &c.

Pur ceo que le custome de le manor en ascun case luy puit aider de barrer son seignior en action de trespassse, &c. Hereby it appeareth, that by the opinion of Littleton the lord against the custome of the manor cannot oust the copiholder.

Sect. 83.

ITEM lun tenant per le custome en ascuns lieux doit repairer et susteiner ses measons, et lauter tenant a volunt nemy.

ALSO the one tenant
by the custome in some places ought to repaire and uphold his houses, and the other tenant at will ought not.

PER le custome. For what a copiholder may or ought to doe, or not doe, the custome of the manor [a] must direct it, for consuetudo manerii est observanda. [b] But if there be no custome to the contrary, waste either permissive (1) or voluntary of a copiholder is a forfeiture of his copihold (2).

[a] Brañton lib. 2. fol. 76.

[b] Vid. 4. Co. 21. 22. &c. in Cases de Copiholds.

Sect. 84.

*ITEM lun tenant per le custome
ferra fealtie, et lauter nemy. Et plusors au-ters diversities y sont perenter eux.*

ALSO the one tenant
by the custome shall do fealty, and the other not. And many other diversities there be betweene them.

LUN tenant per le custome ferra fe-altie, et lauter nemy.

And the doing of fealty by a copiholder, proveth that a copiholder, so long as he observes the custome of the manor and payeth his servi-

Vide Sect. 131.

(Post 93. b.)

ces, hath a fixed estate. For tenant at will, that may be put out at pleasure, shall not doe fealty. For to what end should a man sweare to be faithfull and true to his lord, and should beare faith to him which he claimeth to hold of him, and that lawfully he shall doe his customes and services, &c. when he hath no certaine estate, but may be put out at the pleasure of the lessor, or he himselfe may determine it at his pleasure. Of these kind of customary tenants, and of many things concerning them, you may read more in the fourth booke of my Reports, fol. 21, 22, 23, &c. Thus much, as I have here set downe, may suffice, for the understanding of such cases and opinions as Littleton hath expressed (3).

4. Co. 21. 22. 23. &c.

Finis Libri primi.

(1) Formerly it was a question, whether waste permissive was a forfeiture by the general law in respect to copyhold estates, and according to a case in Noy a special custom is necessary. Noy 51. But the principal authorities are with lord Coke. See Ow. 17. 1 Ro. Abr. 508. pl. 16. and the case of Eastcourt and Weekes in 1. Lutw. 799. 1. Freem. 516. and 1. Salk. 186. In this last case the causes of forfeiture were making a lease without licence and want of repairs, and it appears to have been agreed by all, that permissive waste was a forfeiture; and the great point was, whether after the death of one of two coparceners, who were seized of the manor at the time of the forfeiture, it was not too late to enter and take advantage of it. Three judges held, that it was, because according to them lease and waste do not operate like alienations by fine recovery or feoffment with livery, which are immediate forfeitures and extinguish the copyholder's estate without any act by the lord, but are only forfeitures at the election of the lord in whose time they happen, and unless he enters the copyholder's estate continues; and they thought, that the right of election was not in its nature either divisible or descendible, and therefore that in the case of coparceners all must join in the election, and if one of them dies it is too late to make it. But Powel justice differed. He assented to the distinction between forfeitures operating by immediate extinguishment of the copyhold and forfeitures at the lord's election, and agreed that waste permissive was of the latter kind; but then he thought, that the lease for years without licence was as much an extinguishment of the copyhold as an alienation for a greater estate, and he seemed to be of the same opinion as to waste voluntary. Note that Powel took another distinction between waste voluntary and waste permissive, and said, that if waste permissive is repaired before the lord's entry, the forfeiture is purged, and advantage cannot be taken of it. Note also that in the same case Treby ch. j. doubted, whether lord Coke's doctrine, that if there be two coparceners of a reversion, and waste is committed, and one of them dies leaving a daughter, the aunt and niece shall join in waste, is law. See ante 53. b. and 1. Lutw. 803. This observation of Treby ought to have been mentioned before.

(2) But the court of chancery will sometimes relieve against a forfeiture for waste, and compel the lord to re-admit on receiving satisfaction for the injury he has sustained. Such relief is particularly given, where the waste is committed through ignorance, or where the waste is merely permissive and there has not been an obstinate perseverance in neglecting to repair after notice. 1. Cha. Caf. 95. and Prec. in Chanc. 568. Another instance, in which relief against forfeiture for waste is said to be proper, is where the lessee of a copyholder commits waste without his direction or privity. Toth. Cha. 237. But in this latter case it may be doubted, whether the waste is a forfeiture. See Mo. 49.

(3) See further on the subject of copyhold estates Kitchin on Courts, Coke's Copyholder and the Supplement, the book intitled the Surveior's Dialogue, Calthrope's Reading on Lord and Copyholder, Hughes on Original Writs 247. to 259. the title Copihold in the Abridgments, the Lex Custumaria, and the several other treatises on copyhold law, particularly those by Shepherd and Nelson.

T H E
S E C O N D B O O K
O F T H E
F I R S T P A R T
O F T H E
I N S T I T U T E S
O F T H E
L A W S O F E N G L A N D.

Chap. I.

Homage.

Sect. 85.

HOMAGE est le plus honorable service, et plus humble service de reverence, que franktenant puit faire a son seignior. Car quant le tenant ferra homage a son seignior, il ferra discinct, et son test discover, et son seignior seera, et le tenant genulera devant luy sur ambideux genues, et tiendra ses maines extendes, et joyntes ensemble enter les maines le seignior, et issint dirra: Jeo

HOMAGE is the most honorable service, and most humble service of reverence, that a franktenant may doe to his lord. For when the tenant shall make homage to his lord, he shall be ungirt, and his head uncovered, and his lord shall sit, and the tenant shal kneele before him on both his knees, and hold his hands joyntly together betweene the hands of his lord, and shall say thus: I become your man

OUR author having taught us in his former booke the several distinct estates of lands and tenements as most necessary to be knowne, for the understanding of these two other bookes, doth in this second book treat of the tenures (1) and services, whereby the said lands and tenements be holden; which he divideth into twelve parts, viz. Homage, Fealty, Escuage, Knight service, Socage, Frankalmoine, Homage Auncestrell, Grand Serjeanty, Petit Serjeanty, Tenure in Burgage, in Villenage, and into Rents. Wherein his method is most excellent (2), for he beginneth with Homage, because it is the most humble service of reverence, expressing the duty of the tenant to his lord, and the affectionate love and protection of the lord towards his tenant, as hereafter shall appeare. Secondly, Fealty, a sacred service, expressing by oath

(4. Co. 8. a. Bevil's case.)

(1) It is scarce possible to have a just and proper idea of our law of tenures, the greater part of which is founded on principles strictly feudal, without the aid of some previous information concerning the origin of feuds in general, and the time and manner of their introduction into this country. This interesting subject seems to have entirely escaped the attention of lord Coke; for though he writes so learnedly and minutely in explaining the nature of each tenure, and its fruits and incidents, yet there is not any thing like an historical illustration with the least reference to the general doctrine of feuds, or to the means by which they were established in England; a silence the more unaccountable, because the subject exercised the pens of several cotemporary writers, and the great antiquary of our English laws, Sir Henry Spelman, had actually published the first part of his Glossary, in which he discourses largely on feuds, near two years before the first edition of the Commentary on Littleton. To supply the deficiency here imputed to lord Coke, as far as the compass of an annotation will allow, it shall be attempted to state shortly some of the principal opinions, which occur on the subject, and to refer to some of the books in which they are respectively advanced or controverted.

As to the first institution of feuds, some writers deduce them from the earliest ages of the world, and suppose, that the idea of giving land on the terms of doing military service for it, which it must be confessed was the grand principle of the feudal system, must have been common to the most ancient nations, when they emigrated to form new settlements, and was the natural result of such a situation. See Niell. Disputat. Feud. cited in Voet. ad Pandect. lib. 38. Digress. de Feud. 1. Gen. 47. But this opinion has been generally disapproved of as fanciful, and founded on a narrow and incomprehensive notion of feuds, and depending on resemblances too faint and remote to warrant a just comparison. Inter. de Feud. Imper. c. 1. s. 2. Spelman. Posthum. 2. Others think, that they discover the origin of feuds in the institution of patron and client by Romulus on the first founding of the Roman state. Zasius Epit. Feud. &c. cited in Inter. de Feud. Imper. c. 1. s. 3. But the slightest examination shews this connection to have been widely different from that between lord and vassal; the latter merely arising from land, and, according to the strict and pure notion of feuds, being ever accompanied with services of a military kind and also with a jurisdiction;

oath his fidelity to his lord.

Thirdly, Escuage, which is servitium scuti, the service of the shield.

Fourthly, Knights service, for the defence of the realme against outward hostility and invasions, which the better might be effected, if such duty fidelity and love were betwene lords and tenants, as ought to be, and as the law expecteth.

Fifthly, Socage, the service of the plough, aptly placed next knights service; for that the ploughman maketh the best souldier, as shall appeare in his proper place.

Sixtly, Frankalmoigne, service due to Almighty God, placed towards the middest for two causes: first, for that the middest is the most worthy and most honorable place; and secondly, because the first five preceding tenures and services, and the other fixe subsequent, must all become prosperous and usefull, by reason of God's true religion and service; for nunquam prospere succedunt res humanae, ubi negliguntur divina. Wherein I would have our student follow the advice given in these ancient verses, for the good spending of the day.

Sex horas somno, totidem des legibus æquis.

Quatuor orabis, des epulisque duas.

Quod superest ultro facris largire camænis.

Seventhly, homage auncestrell, ancient families enjoying, with their blood, the ancient inheritance of their forefathers, as a great blessing of the Almighty.

8. & 9. Serjeanty grand et petit, due to the king only, to whom the highest and most eminent honor, ligeance, and reverence of all kinde is due; which hath two notable effects. First, imperii majestas est tutela salus, according to the old rule; and secondly, it is an assured means of long continuance of houses and families in prosperous estate, whereof our author speaketh in the chapter before.

10. Then followeth the tenure of Burgage, of ancient burghes and cities, &c. which are to be supported for the honour of the king, and for the maintenance of trade and traffique, the life of all common wealths, especially of islands.

11. Villenage, for the performance of service, yet necessary service for the cleansing of cities, boroughes, mannors, &c. and for the better manuring of arable grounds, and increase of husbandry.

12. And lastly, tenure by Rents, which are called vini redditus, because the lords and owners thereof do live by them; which they shall enjoy the better, if trade and traffique be maintained, and our native commodities, which are rich and necessary, holden up and fillable at a reasonable value. And now understanding his method, let us peruse our author's words.

And as our author beganne his first booke with fee simple, which is the most principall and worthiest estate, so he beginneth his second booke with homage, which is the most honorable and humble service.

[a] Glanv. li. 9. ca. 1. Bract. fo. 78. 80. Brit. fo. 170. 172. 173. Flet. li. 3. c. 16. Mir. c. 3. de Homage, et l. 5. Sect. 1.

Homage, is derived of [a] homo, and it is called homage, because when he doth this service, he saith, jeo deveigne vostre home. And in English homage is called manhood, so as the manhood of his tenant, and the homage of his tenant is all one. Mutua quidem debet esse dominii et homagii fidelitatis connexio, ita quod quantum homo debet domino ex homagio, tantum illi debet dominus ex dominio præter solam reverentiam.

[b] Lib. Rub. ca. 55.

Foyal et loyal. These words are of great extent, for they extend to the observation of the lord's counsell in whatsoever is honest and profitable. [b] Omnis homo debet fidem domino suo de vita et membris suis, et terreno honore, et observatione consilii sui per honestum et utile (comprehended under these words foyal et loyal) salva fide Deo et terra principi.

Service.

(1) Nota, in ancient times by hommes or men, homagers, whom we now call freeholders, were intended; as in grants, that he and his men should be free from toll. 14. H. 6. 12. 13. Aff. 35. 33. E. 3. 88. 31. E. 3. Barr. 161. Hal. MSS.—In the famous controversy, which began between Dr. Brady and others some few years before the revolution about the origin of the house of Commons, one point in dispute was the sense of the words homines and liberè tenentes as used in writs of summons to parliament before the reign of Henry the third and in other ancient records; the doctor endeavouring to confine the word to the king's tenants in capite, and his competitors on the other hand being as strenuous to comprehend within the description of homines any free subjects of the king, and within that of liberè tenentes all freeholders in general, whether they held immediately of the king or not. See voc. Liberi homines in the Gloss. at the end of Brad. Introd. to English Hist. Tyrrel. Biblioth. Politic. 300. 308. 322. 326. 352. 369. 537. and Lord Lyttelt. Hen. 3. 8vo. ed. vol. 3. p. 337. However Mr. Tyrrel allows the word homines to be equivocal, and to vary in the sense according to the occasion on which it is used.

(2) The words de vie et de membre et de terrene honor are not in L. and M. but the Roh. and subsequent editions have them.

(3) Vid. in Rot. Parl. 18. H. 6. n. 58. a special act of parliament to excuse the kissing in the case of homage made to the king by reason of pestilence. Hal. MSS.

tion; which circumstances are quite foreign to the former, and seem of themselves so essentially to distinguish the two, as to render the labour of seeking for other differences wholly unnecessary. See Bodin. de Repub. lib. 1. c. 7. Crag. Jus Feud. lib. 1. Dieges. 5. et Duck de Ul. Jur. Civ. cap. 6. Others again have suggested, that the grants of forfeited lands to the veteran soldiers of Sylla, Julius Cæsar, and the Triumvirs, in the latter times of the Roman republick, gave rise to feuds; but it has been sensibly observed by a very ingenious writer, that such lands were given, not on the condition of future but as rewards for past military Service. [c] Servitium in lege Angliæ regulariter accipitur pro servitio, quod per tenentes Dominis suis debetur ratione feodi sui. But servitium est duplex, spirituale, whereof more shall be said in the chapter of frankalmoigne; et temporale, whereof our author here treateth. And he beginneth with homage, first, because it is most honourable, for, honor plus est in honorante, quam in honorato. 2. It is plus humble de reverence, and both of these for five causes on the part of the tenant. First, the tenant when he doth his homage is discinctus, disarmed or unguarded. Secondly, nudo capite, bare headed. Thirdly, ad pedes domini super genua projectus. Fourthly, ambas manus junctas inter manus domini porrigit. Fifthly, per verba omni supplici veneratione plena, he saith, Jeo deveigne vostre home, &c. And for three causes on the part of the lord: first, the lord doth sit. Secondly, he incloseth his tenant's hands betweene his owne. Thirdly, the lord sitting kisseth the tenant. Prudent antiquity did, for the more solemnity and better memory and observation of that which is to bee done, expresse substances under ceremonies.

Nil sine prudenti fecit ratione vetustas.

Jeo deveigne vostre home de vie et de member. And therefore he is discinctus, for that he must never be armed against, or opposite to his lord, but both life and member must be ready for the lawfull defence of his lord.

2. De terrene honor. Expressed by kneeling at the feet of his lord.

3. Debet quidem tenens manus suas utrasque ponere inter manus utrasque domini sui, per quod significatur ex parte domini protectio defensio et varrantia, et ex parte tenentis reverentia et subjectione. So as the holding up of the tenant's hands betokeneth reverence and subjection, and the lord's inclosing of his tenant's hands between his own betokeneth protection and defence.

4. Et a vous ferra foyal et loyal, et foy a vous portera, &c. This saith, fides, or foedus perpetuum, this perpetuall league betweene the lord and the tenant is expressed by the lord's kissing of the tenant. And some say, that foedus dicitur à fide, quia fides interponitur. And so firme and strong was this league betweene them, that by the ancient law of England, nihil facere potest tenens propter obligationem homagii, quod vertatur domino ad exheredationem, vel aliam atrocem injuriam. Nec dominus tenenti è converso. Quod si fecerint, dissolvitur et extinguuntur homagium omnino et homagii connexio et obligatio, et erit inde justum judicium cum venerit contra homagium et fidelitatis sacramentum, quod in eo in quo delinquant puniantur, s. in persona domini, quod amittat dominium, et in persona tenentis, quod amittat tenementum.

Des tenements queux jeo claime a tener de vous. Britton saith, that [a] in doing of homage he must name the lands or tenements for which he doth homage in certaintie, and the reason is, ne in captione homagii contingat dominum per negligentiam decipi vel per errorem.

For the better understanding of that which shall be said hereafter, it is to be knowne, that first, there is no land in England in the hands of any subject, (as it hath been said) but it is holden of some lord by some kind of service, as partly hath been touched before (1).

Secondly, all the lands [b] within this realme were originally derived from the crowne, and therefore the king is soveraign lord, or lord paramount, either mediate or immediate of all and every parcell of land within the realme (2).

Thirdly, that in ancient time lords upon the creation of their tenures did not onely reserve rents, services, and profit, &c. for which they might disteine and have other remedy, but also tooke an humble submission of his tenant by promise and oath, (for to homage fealty is incident) to be true and faithfull to him for the tenements holden of him, which submission is called homage and fealty, according to the tenure reserved.

Salve le foy que jeo doy a nostre seignior le roy. Both because there is homagium ligum, which is due to the king onely, and also because he is soveraign lord over all (3). I have seene an ancient record in Anno 6. Edw. 1. in these words. Michael de North, qui sequitur pro Rege, queritur, quod cum Dominus Rex ratione regie dignitatis et coronæ suæ tale habeat privilegium quod nullus in regno suo de aliquo qui sit in regno Angliæ alicui homagium facere debeat, vel aliquis hujusmodi homagium ab aliquo recipere debeat, nisi facta mentione de homagio Domino regi debito eidem domino regi fideliter observand. Walterius Exon' Episcopus, in contemptu domini regis, et ad manifestam quoad privilegium prædictum ipsius domini regis exheredationem, et ad damnum et dedecus ipsius domini regis ad Valentiam decem Mill' librarum, de Henrico de Pomeray, Thoma de Kane, Johanne de bello prato, Laurentio filio Ric. Johanne le Soer, Willielmo de Alex', Eudone

Glanvil. lib. 9. c. 1. Mir. c. 3. de Fealty. Bract. ubi supr. Brit. ubi supr. Inter Inquis. apud Lancaster. anno 6. E. 1. Cornub. in Thef.

(1) According to this position, of which the truth is undeniable, all the lands in England, except those in the king's hands, are feudal. This universality of tenures, if not quite peculiar to England, certainly doth not prevail in several countries on the continent of Europe, where the feudal system has been established, and it seems, that there are some few portions of allodial land in the northern part of our own island. In France they still have their franc-aleu, which is the name by which allodial land is distinguished, as well as their fiefs; and in some provinces, such as Provence Languedoc and others, which not having any coutume or system of customary law adopt the written or Roman law, the country is so far from being wholly feudal, that all inheritances are presumed to be quite free from feudal dependance till the contrary is proved, and therefore are called franc-aleu sans titre, that is, free without the possessor's being obliged to prove them so. Instit. Droit. Franc. par Argou. l. 2. c. 3. Decif. Nouv. par Denifart. tit. Franc-aleu and Droit-ecrit. Even in Normandy, from which country our ancestors borrowed at least some parts of our law of tenures, and where the feudal policy with its utmost rigors is supposed to have been so early and so completely introduced, a remnant of allodial land is still to be found, and their reformed coutumier expressly divides their estates into franc aleu and tenures. Littelt. par Houard. v. 1. p. 196. and Cout. Reform. Norman. par Berrault. Art. 102. The German and Dutch lawyers make the like distinction with respect to lands in their countries; and they must almost necessarily have a considerable proportion of allodial land, as the rule of their courts of justice is to presume in favour of it, whenever the quality of the land appears doubtful. Heinecc. Elem. Jur. Germ. lib. 2. tit. 1. §. 35. Dar. Inst. Jur. Priv. German. sect. 705. 706. and Voet ad Pandect. lib. 38. Digres. de Feud. sect. 4. As to Scotland, lord Stair expresses himself rather ambiguously on the subject; for he says that there remains little of allodial land in Scotland, but in a few lines after observes, that the glebes of the clergy, which seem to come nearest to allodials, are more properly mortified, or as we should call them, mortmain fees. Sta. Inst. b. 4. l. 3. f. 4. However other respectable authors rank the manes and glebes of the Scotch clergy amongst things allodial; and write as if they thought, that the law of fiefs had not yet pervaded the Orkneys. Ersk. Princ. Law Scotl. 126. Ess. Brit. Antiq. 19.—(2) See ante fol. 64. a. note 1. and fol. 1. b. note 1.—(3) Vid. as to the homage by the king of England to the king of France military services, after the donation of them were of the nature of other Roman estates. Sullivan's Lectures 25. See also Clark. Connect. of Roman Saxon and English Coins 440. Some compare the coloni et gleba adscriptii, of which Eudone de Tranael, Rogero le gros, Jobanne le Lunge, Rado' de Bevill, Guidone Norant, Willielmo de Rouherrek, et Hen. Cannel, accepit servitia contra privilegium prædict', nulla facia mentione de homagio et fidelitate domino regi debitis. And judgement in the end was given against the said bishop.

Roy. Our ancestors the Saxons termed him Coning or Cynig, a name signifying power and skill, which by way of contraction we now call king. This name the Saxons with a small alteration had from the Brittaines who called him Koningh or Koninke. In French he is called Roy, in Italian Re, in Spanish Rey, all derived from the Latine (Rex), of the true signification whereof you shall read [d] plentifully in our old bookes.

So as homage is divided first in homagium ligeum, et non ligeum (1).

2. In homagium antecessorium, et non antecessorium (2). It is here necessary to be knowne, what tenant, that holdeth by homage, shall doe homage. [e] Item videndum, quis potest homagium facere. Sciendum est, quod quilibet liber homo, tam masculus quam femina, clericus et laicus, major et minor; dum tamen electi in episcopos post consecrationem homagium non faciant, quicquid fecerint ante, sed tantum fidelitatem (3). Conventus autem homagium non faciet de jure, sicut nec Abbas, nec Prior, eo quod tenent nomine alieno, scilicet nomine ecclesiarum.

[g] One within the age of 21 yeares may doe homage; but Bracton saith he cannot doe fealty, because in doing fealty he ought to be sworne, which an infant cannot be (4). But some opinions be in our bookes to the contrary, viz. that an infant shall doe fealty; but I take it to be meant of homage, and herewith [b] agreeth Britton who saith, et tout soit que enfant deins age fait homage, pur ceo ne volons nous my que il face serement de fealty, j'esque a taunt que il soit de pleine age; et tout soit ceo comon dit del people que fait de enfant fait deins age ne soit fait my a tener estable. Volons neque dent, que chescun home et chescun feme, de quel age que ils soient, facent homage a leur seignior selonque lestatut de la grand charter.

Glanvill saith, [i] women shall not do homage; but Littleton saith that a woman shall doe homage, but she shall not say, Jeo deveigne vostre feme, but Jeo face a vous homage; and so is Glanvill to be understood, that she shall not doe complete homage.

Sect. 86.

[d] Glanvill lib. 1. cap. 9. in fine. Britton lib. 2. 78. Bracton cap. 68. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 16.

[i] Vid. Sect. 96 & 133.

NO man of religion, when [k] he hath homage shall say, Jeo deveigne vostre home; because he hath professed himselfe the man of God, yet shall he doe homage, and shal say, [l] Jeo face a vous homage, et à vous ferra foyall et loyall, &c. and note, that here religion is taken largely, for it extends not only to regular persons as abbots and the like, but also to all ecclesiasticall persons, as bishops, deanes, or any other sole ecclesiasticall body politike; and so it is in use at this day, which also appears in our old bookes.

And it is to be observed, that in old bookes and records, the homage, which a bishop, abbot or other man of religion doth, is called fealty, for that it wanteth these words, (Jeo deveigne vostre home.) But yet in judgement of law it is homage; because he saith, I doe to you homage, &c. and so of a woman.

MES si un abbe, ou un pryor, ou auter home de religion, ferra homage a son seignior, il ne dirra, Jeo deveigne vostre home, &c. pur ceo que il ad luy professe pur estre tant solement le home de Dieu. Mes il dirra issint, Jeo vous face homage et a vous ferra foyall et loial, et foy a vous portera des tenements que jeo teigne de vous, salve la foy que jeo doy a nostre seignior le roy.

BUT if an abbot, or a pryor, or other, man of religion, shall doe homage to his lord, he shall not say, I become your man, &c. for that he hath professed himselfe to be onely the man of God. But he shall say thus, I doe homage unto you, and to you I shall be true and faithfull, and faith to you beare for the tenements which I hold of you, saving the faith which I doe owe unto our lord the king.

Sect.

France for the dutchy of Aquitain, &c. It was doubted, whether the homage ought to be liege; but at length it was resolved, that it should be liege; and for that purpose writs patent were made by the king of England, settling it in this way, viz. that the king of England duke of Guyen should hold his hands between the hands of the king of France, and he who should speak for the king of France should address his words to the king of England duke of Guyen, and should say thus, Do you remain a liege man of the king of France, my lord who is here, as duke of Guyen and peer of France, and promise to bear him faith and loyalty? say yes; and that the said king duke and his successors dukes of Guyen should say yes; and that then the king of France should receive the said king of England and duke to the said homage and faith and with a kiss saving his right and the other's. 1. Pars Pat. 5. E. 3. m. 19.—For the homage done to the pope by king John, see M. Paris 237. Hal. MSS.—For a full account of the circumstances, which attended Edward's homage for Guienne, &c. see 1. Tind. Rap. fol. ed. 412. See also Froiss. l. 1. c. 25. and 4. Rym. Feod. 383. to 390. there cited, and Du Fresn. Gloss. voc. Homagium. Mr. Tindal in a note on Rapin observes, that liege or full homage is done with head bare and sword ungirt, as if that was the thing which chiefly distinguished homage ligeum from homage non ligeum. But in truth that formality was incident to both, and the difference between the two was of a more essential kind, and Philip de Valois of France and our Edward the Third knew this, or probably there would not have been so much difficulty in adjusting the ceremony between them. Homage ligeum was without any saving or exception of the faith due to king or other lords; but homage non ligeum had such an exception. The former properly came from the subject to the sovereign; the latter from one subject to another. The former generally and in strictness included allegiance as a subject, and could not be renounced; though sometimes, when done by one who was himself a sovereign prince as a mark of feudal dependance in respect not of his whole dominions but only of a part of them, it was not understood with so much latitude; but the latter never imported any thing more than a connection in the way of tenure, which the homager might at any time free himself from by renouncing the land he was invested with. See Du Fresn. Gloss. voc. Hominum et legius, and Spelman. Gloss. voc. Homagium et ligantia.

(1) See note 3. in 65. a.—(2) That is, auncesirel and not auncesirel, as to which see Post 100. b.—(3) Homage done to the king by a bishop salvo suo ordine. M. Paris 101. Hal. MSS. See what is said by lord Coke infra.—(4) Infant casts ejus of being in the king's which there is such frequent mention both in the Theodosian code and in that of Justinian, with feudatories; but nothing can be more strongly marked than the distinction between the two, for the former were adstricted to the soil, were employed in cultivating it, and in performing other rural services for the owner, and in short approached nearer

Sect. 87.

Pur ceo que nest convenient, &c. By this it appeareth, [m] that argumentum ab inconvenienti plurimum valet in lege, as often shall be observed hereafter. Non solum quod licet, sed quid est conveniens est considerandum. Nihil, quod est inconveniens, est licitum (1). [m] For like reasons ab inconvenienti, vide Sect. 138. 139. 231. 269. 440. 478. 665. 722. 730. 21. H. 7. 13. F. N. B. 230. d. 16. H. 7. 9.

ITEM si feme sole ferra homage a son seignior, el ne dirra, Jeo deveigne vostre feme; pur ceo que nest convenient, que feme dirra, que il deviendra feme a ascun home, forsque a sa baron, quant el est espouse. Mes el dirra, jeo face a vous homage, et a vous ferra foial et loial, et foy a vous portera des tenements que jeo teigne de vous, Salve la foy que jeo doy a nostre seignior le roy.

ALSO if a woman sole shall doe homage, she shal not say, I become your woman; for it is not fitting, that a woman should say that she will become a woman to any man, but to her husband, when she is married. But she shall say, I do to you homage, and to you shall be faithfull and true, and faith to you shall bear for the tenements I hold of you, Saving the faith I owe to our soveraign lord the king.

Sect. 88. (2)

ITEM home puit veier un bone note en M. 15. E. 3. Pou un home et sa feme fierent homage et fealty en le common banke, quel est escrie en tiel forme. Nota, que I. Leukner et Elizabeth sa feme fierent homage a W. Thorpe en cest maner: lun et lautre tiendront jointment leur mains enter les mains W. T. et le baron dit en cest forme: Nous vous ferromus homage, et foy a vous porterons, pur les tenements, que nous teignomus de A. votre conusor, que a vous ad graunt nostre services en B. et C. et auters villes, &c. encountre tous gents, salve la foy que nous devons a nostre seig-

ALSO a man may see a good note in M. 15. E. 3. where a man and his wife did homage and fealty in the common place, which is written in this forme. Note that I. Lewknor and Eliz. his wife did homage to W. Thorpe in this manner: the one and the other held their hands joynly betweene the hands of W. T. and the husband faith in this forme: We doe to you homage, and faith to you shall beare for the tenements which we hold of A. your conusor, who hath granted to you our services in B. and C. and other townes, &c. against all nations (3), saving the faith which we owe to our lord the king and to his heires, and to our

IN this [n] record three things are to be observed. [n] Mich. 15. E. 3. tit. Avowrie 109.

1. How necessary, and profitable records and observations are; albeit they were not published in print, for at the time when Littleton wrote, this record was not printed.

2. That the husband and wife doing homage, the husband shall speake the words for them both, viz. we doe to you homage, &c.

3. That the homage which the husband and wife doe, is the very homage which the wife should doe alone. But this joint homage, done by the husband and wife, is intended to be before issue had betweene them, whereof more shall be sayd hereafter. And it is to be observed, that very few cases ruled or resolved in the reigne of Edward the Third, but the same or the like had king's service for another. 21. E. 3. 33. He shall do fealty. 24. E. 3. 63. 64. Hal. MSS.—In casting an essoin de servitio regis, the essoinor, that is, he who casts the essoin for the absent person, must swear to the truth of the essoin; which explains the object of the case cited by lord Hale. See 2. Inst. 314. See further as to the swearing of an infant Post 158. a.

(1) Arguments from inconvenience certainly deserve the greatest attention, and where the weight of other reasoning is nearly on an equipoise ought to turn the scale. But if the rule of law is clear and explicit, it is in vain to insist upon inconveniences; nor can it be true that nothing which is inconvenient is lawful, for that supposes in those, who make laws, a perfection of which the most exalted human wisdom is incapable of attaining, and would be an invincible argument against ever changing the law.—(2) In the Rohan edition and in those of Pynson and Redman, this section is transposed to the chapter of Fealty.—(3) Lord Coke's translation of the word gents is erroneous; for as Mr. Madox justly remarks, though the Roman word gens nearer to slaves than to free-men soldiers and feudal tenants. See Iter. Feud. Imper. cap. 1. sect. 3. 5. One civilian of the first character seems to deduce fiefs from the procuratores pradiorum, the emphyteuticarii, and others of a similar description, who are well known to the Roman law. Cujac. Observ. lib. 8. c. 14. and De feud. lib. 1. princip. But it should be recollected, that the procuratores pradiorum were properly only bailiffs and servants to the owners of the land, and that the emphyteuticarii were merely occupiers of land under contracts of hiring; and therefore one may differ from the great author of this opinion, without forgetting the respect justly due to so high an authority. In truth, the possessions of the former do not appear to have been like any fief, and those of the latter at the utmost only come near to a resemblance of fiefs of the pradial and improper kind, such as our socage tenure, and other deviations from the original feudal establishments. Consequently it is not in the least probable, that pure and genuine fiefs, which were the price of military service only, and gave rise to the great system of tenures, should be the offspring of such parents. The same observation may be applied to the pradia stipendiaria, which some writers cite from the books of the Roman law as instances of fiefs, but which were, as I apprehend, only a species of the emphyteusis, or land let to hire. See Iter. de Feud. Imp. cap. 1. sect. 3. 5. Heinecc. Syntagm. Antiq. Rom. lib. 3. tit. 3. f. 13. and the word had been ruled or resolved in the reigns of Edward the second, Edward the first, or before, as for example for warrant hereof, vide Hill. 17. E. 2. Rot. Parl. &c.

Hill 17. E. 2. Rot. Parl. &c.

nior le roy, et a ses heires, et a nostre auters seigniors : et lun et l'auter luy baseront. Et puis ils fierent fealtie, et lun et l'auter tyendront lour mains sur un livre, et le baron dit les parolx, et ambideux baseront le livre.

other lords, and both the one and the other kissed him. And after they did fealtie, and both of them hold their hands upon the booke, and the husband said the words, and both kissed the booke.

Sect. 89.

Et a mes auters seigniours. This saving for other lords is good for explanation, albeit the homage is referred onely to the tenements which he holdeth of him to whom he doth the homage.

NOTA si un home ad severall tenancies, queux il tient de severall seigniors, scilicet chescun tenancy per homage, donque quant il fait homage a un des seigniors, il dirra en le fine de son homage fait, Salve la foy que jeo doy nostre seignior le roy, et a mes auters seigniors (1).

NOTE if a man hath severall tenancies, which he holdeth of severall lords, that is to say, every tenancy by homage, then when he doth homage to one of his lords, he shall say in the end of his homage done, Saving the faith which I owe to our lord the king, and to my other lords.

Sect. 90.

EN droit dun auter.

As the husband and wife in the right of his wife, the bishop in right of his bishopricke, &c. the abbot or prior in right of his monastery, &c. But no corporation aggregate of many persons capable, be the same ecclesiasticall or temporall, can doe homage, as a deane and chapter, maior and commonalty, and such like, albeit they be seised in fee of lands holden by homage, yet shall not they doe homage. And the reason is, because that homage must be done in person, and a corporation aggregate of many cannot appeare in person; for albeit the bodies naturall, whereupon the bodie politique consists, may be seene, yet the bodie politique or corporate itselfe cannot be seene, nor doe any act but by attorney, and homage must ever be done in person, &c. (3) And albeit an

NOTA que nul ferra homage, mes tiel que ad estate en fee simple, ou en fee taile, et son droit demesne, ou en droit dun auter. Car il est un maxime en ley, que il, que ad estate forsque pur terme de vie, ne ferra homage, ne prendra homage. Car si feme ad terres ou tenements en fee simple, ou en fee taile, queux il tient de son seignior per homage, et prent baron, et ont issue, donque le baron en la vie la feme ferra homage (2),

NOTE, none shall do homage but such, as have an estate in fee simple, or fee taile, in his owne right, or in the right of another. For it is a maxime in law, that he, which hath an estate but for terme of life, shall neither doe homage or take homage. For if a woman hath lands or tenements in fee simple, or in fee taile, which she holdeth of her lord by homage, and taketh husband and have issue, then the husband in the life of the wife shall doe ho-

pur

gens signifies sometimes a nation, and sometimes a family, and gens is Romanick or bastard Roman, and derived from gens, yet like many other Romanick words it acquired a new import, and according to that denotes men or persons. See Mad. Bar. Angl. 167. and Hist. Excheq. in Pref. p. 13.

(1) This expresse saving of the faith due to the king was formerly of consequence, being calculated to prevent that intire dependance of the tenant on his immediate lord, the idea of which in times, when the feudal institutions were in their full vigour, operated very strongly, and tended to depress the authority of the sovereign. See a sensible note on this subject in Litt. par Howard. v. 1. p. 114. and 121. In another place lord Coke cites an instance of an information on the part of the crown against a bishop, for receiving homage from his tenants without any saving of the faith due to the king; but it doth not appear by the extract which lord Coke gives of the record, how this contempt of the royal authority was punished. See ante 65. a. — (2) Vid. F. N. B. 257. Husband alone doth fealty before the having of issue. Nota, before issue the avowry for homage shall be on the husband and wife, and not only on the wife. 29. E. 3. 15. But after issue the avowry for homage shall be on the husband. But till the lord hath notice of the having issue, he may avow upon both. 7. E. 4. 27. The husband only shall do the homage, quia si dominus adiret prælum, vir consecutus esset eum, non mulier. 13. E. 1. Avowry. 234. Hal. MSS. — (3) 2. E. 3. 10. Accord. Hal. MSS.

word spendiaria in the Lexicons of the Roman law. As to the soldurii, who were the companions and followers of the princes and chieftains amongst the ancient Gauls and are by some writers considered as feudal vassals, their attachment was independent of land, and this of itself is sufficient to shew, that the connection was not the same as that which is the result of tenure. However it may be proper to observe, that a like sort of union between the princes of the ancient Germans and their comites is agreed pur ceo que il ad title daver les tenements per le curtesie Dengleterre sil servesquist la feme, et auxy il tient en droit de sa feme. Mes si la feme devy devant homage fait per le baron en la vie sa feme, et le baron soy tient eins come tenant per le curtesie, donques il ne ferra homage a son seignior, pur ceo que el adonque nad estate forsque pur terme de vie.

Plus ferra dit de homage en le tenure per homage auncestrel.

mage, because he hath title to have the tenements by the curtesie of England if he surviveth his wife, and also he holdeth in right of his wife. But if the wife dies before homage done by the husband in the life of his wife, and the husband holdeth himselfe in as tenant by the curtesie, then he shall not doe homage to his lord, because he then hath an estate but for terme of life.

More shall be said of homage in the tenure of homage ancestrell.

gether. [i] But if the husband in that case hath issue by his wife, then he shall receive homage alone during the life of his wife; and the reason is, because he by having of issue is intitled to an estate for terme of his owne life, in his owne right, and yet is seised in fee in the right of his wife, so as he is not a bare tenant for life. But if his wife dye, then he hath onely but an estate for life, and then he cannot receive homage. Yet tenant for life or yeares of a feignory [u] shall have ward, marriage, and reliefe, and shall suppose that the tenant died in the fealty of the pl. [x] Fieri possunt homagia libero homini tam masculo quam femina, tam majori quam minori, tam clerico quam laico.

Et ount issue, donque le baron en la vie la feme ferra homage. The reason hereof is rendred before, and also that after the death of his wife he being but a bare tenant for life shall doe no homage; for regularly it is true, that he, that cannot receive homage in respect of the weaknesse of his estate in the feignory, shall not doe homage, if he hath a like estate in the tenancy.

If a man hold of the king, and hath issue divers daughters, and dyeth, the king shall have homage of every one of these daughters. And this [a] appeareth by the statute de Hibernia anno 14. H. 3. to be the common law, for that act saith, in regno nostro Angliæ talis est lex et consuetudo, quod si quis tenuerit de nobis in capite, et habuerit filias hæredes, ipso patre defuncto, antecessores nostri habuerunt et semper nos habuimus et cepimus homagium de omnibus hujusmodi filiabus, et singulæ earum tenent de nobis in capite in hoc casu. And therefore where by the [b] statute De prærogativa Regis, it is provided, Si una hæreditas, &c. that is but an affirmance of the common law. [c] But this is to be understood where the coheirs be of full age; for if they be within age and in ward to the king, Primogenita tantum faciet homagium pro se et sororibus suis, et aliæ sorores, cum ad ætatem pervenerint, facient servitia domini feodorum per manum primogenitæ. [d] Add therefore if a man holds of a common person by the service of homage, and hath issue divers daughters and dyeth, the eldest daughter onely shall doe homage for her and all her sisters. And this appeareth also by the statute of Hibernia. Primogenita tantum faciet homagium domino pro se et omnibus sororibus suis. And the reason is there rendred afterward, Quia omnes sorores sunt quasi unus hæres de una hæreditate. [e] But if the coparceners in that case make partition, then every one shall doe homage, because now it is not una sed diversa hæreditas. [f] And so it is if one make a feoffment in fee abbot and covent is a corporation aggregate of many, yet because the covent are all dead persons in law, the abbot alone in nature of a sole corporation shall doe homage,

Un maxime en ley.

A maxime is a proposition, to be of all men confessed and granted without prooffe, argument, or discourse. Contra negantem principia non est disputandum. But of this somewhat hath beene said before.

Il que ad estate forsque pur terme de vie.

[g] A parson or vicar of a church, that hath a qualified fee, [r] and yet to many intents upon the matter but an estate for life, can neither receive (1) homage nor doe homage, as a bishop, an abbot, or any such like, that hath a fee absolute, may. [s] So if a man and his wife be seised in fee of a feignorie in the right of his wife, the husband shall not receive homage alone, but he and his wife to-

(Ante 10. b. Post 343. a.)

[g] Glanvil lib. 9. cap. 2. Britton fol. 170. Temps E. 1. tit. Juris utrum 13. (Post 341. b.) [r] 8. E. 4. 28. 39. E. 3. 15. 3. E. 3. Avowry 175.

[s] 2. E. 2. Avowrie 183. F. N. B. 257. 13. E. 3. gard. 39.

[i] 27. Aff. p. 51. F. N. B. 257. 13. H. 6. Avowrie 21. 43. E. 3. 13. 44. E. 3. 41. 3. E. 3. Avowrie 175. 13. E. 3. 2. gard. 39. 22. E. 3. fol. 19. gard. 44.

[u] 6. E. 2. garl. 122. 13. E. 3. gard. 39. 22. E. 3. gard. 44. [x] Glanvil lib. 9. cap. 3. 18. E. 3. 7. 43. E. 3. 13. 44. E. 3. 41. 13. H. 6. Avowrie 21. 8. H. 6. 13. 7. E. 4. 27. F. N. B. 257.

[a] 14. H. 3. tit. Prærog. 5.

[b] Prærog. Regis cap. 5. [c] Statut. de homagio capiendo Temps E. 1. (2)

[d] Glanvil lib. 7. cap. 3. & lib. 9. cap. 2. Bract. lib. 1. de homag. capiend. & lib. 2. fo. 78. 80. Britton fol. 168. b. 171. 172. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 16. & lib. 2. ca. 60. & lib. 5. cap. 9. F. N. B. 161. 15. 259. Stanf. prærog. 23. 24. (Post 164. b.)

[e] F. N. B. 162. Vide 11. E. 3. Avowrie 101.

[f] 45. E. 3. 23. 24. E. 3. 73. Marlbridge cap. 9. F. N. B. 162.

(1) Lord Coke in another place, where he explains for what purposes a parson hath a fee and for what an estate for life only, says, that he may receive homage, and cites Bro. Abr. temps E. 1. Encumbent 19. But the book referred to agrees with the doctrine here.

(2) This seems to be the same as is now called 17. E. 2. ft. 2. and is printed in our statute books by the title of Modus faciendi homagium et fidelitatem. But Mr. Madox with reason observes, that it is not a statute. but only a precedent of the form of doing homage. Mad. Bar. Angl. 272. A like remark is made by Mr. Barrington. See Observat. on Ant. Stat. 2d ed. p. 159.

agreed by those who refer the origin of fiefs to a much later period, to have been one of the many causes which accelerated the progress of fiefs. Itter. de Feud. Imper. cap. 1. sect. 4. 5. Another opinion as to the beginning of fiefs is, that the use of them may be dated from the time of the emperor Alexander Severus, who, about the middle of the third century granted out large districts taken from the enemy on the frontiers of the Roman empire to the duces limitanei and others of his officers and soldiers, under the conditions of military service, and on those terms declared the land transmissible to heirs. Seld. Tit. of Hon. 2d ed. c. 2. f. 23. p. 332. Duck de Uf. Jur. Civ. lib. 1. c. 6. Itter. de Feud. Imper. c. 1. f. 3. and Clarke's Connect. Rom. Sax. and Engl. Coins 440. These grants, and some few others of a like kind, which are attributed to succeeding Roman emperors, give the semblance of probability to the conjecture of those, who consider the feudal establishments, so common in the subsequent times, as mere imitations of these examples and extensions of the same policy; and it must be owned, that they at least seem to justify

[g] 2. E. 2. Avowrie 179. (2.
Ro. Abr. 514. F. N. B. 135.)

[b] 7. E. 4. 27. 28. 14. H. 4.
38. 1. H. 5. grant 43. 31. E.
3. gard. 116.
[i] 48. E. 3. 8. 15. E. 4. 13. 5.
E. 4. 3.

[k] 22. E. 4. 22.

[l] 3. E. 2. Avowrie 187. 13. H.
4. 5. 13. R. 2. tit. Avowrie 89.
8. H. 3. tit. Prescription 38.
Hill. 22. E. 1. coram Rege Rot.
43. (Post 73. a.)

fee (which is a partition in law for that part) the feoffee shall doe homage, for every tenant in common shall doe severall services. And it hath been adjudged [g] in our bookes, that if the eldest coparcener doe homage to the lord, and afterward the younger sister maketh a feoffment in fee of her part, the lord shall have homage for the part of the younger sister, for that which was una hæreditas, one inheritance by law, by the alienation, which is her act, is (as hath beene said) divided and become in grosse, and the coparcenary defeated.

But if tenant in feeoffe divers men in fee jointly, [b] all these jointenants shall jointly doe their homage, and their fealty also. [i] If homage be due by the tenant, and he maketh a feoffment in fee, the feoffor shall not doe homage; because albeit he is supposed to be tenant in some cases, quant al avowrie, yet the feoffee is very tenant, and homage shall ever be done by the very tenant, but that very tenant needeth not to be very tenant of the land, and therefore the mesne because he is very tenant to the lord paramount (though he be not tenant of the land) shall doe homage. And so it is of the disseisee, and of tenant in taile, after a feoffment in fee, for in that case the donee is very tenant to the donor.

If a tenant that holdeth by homage maketh a feoffment in fee of part, [k] that feoffee shall doe homage, and so shall every feoffee of what part soever.

If there be two coparceners or jointenants of a feignory, if the tenant doth homage and fealty to one of them, [l] he shall be excused against the other.

If homage be parcell of a tenure, it is a presumption that the tenure is by knights service, unlesse the contrary be proved, but of itselfe it maketh not knights service. And yet by custome the heire of him that holds by homage onely may be in ward.

More shall be said of homage in the title of Homage Ancestrell (1).

CHAP. 2. Sect. 91.

Fealty.

FEALTY in French is seaulty, and is [a] derived of the Latin word fides, or fidelitas.

Et quant frank-tenant. Every freeholder, except tenant in frankalmoigne shall doe fealty. [b] And yet some that are not tenants of any freehold shall doe fealty, as a tenant for years shall do fealty (2).

Bracton saith, De nullo tenemento, quod tenetur ad terminum, fit homagium, fit tamen inde fidelitatis sacramentum.

Que a vous serra foial et loial, &c. et foy a vous portera des tenements que jeo claime a tener de vous, et que loialment a vous serra les customes et services, &c.

FEALTY, idem est quod fidelitas in Latin. Et quant franktenant serra fealtie a son seignior, il tiendra sa maine dexter sur un lievre et dirra issint; Ceo oyes vous mon seignior, que jeo a vous serra foyal et loial, et foy a vous portera des tenements que jeo claime a tener de vous, et que loialment a vous serra les customes et services, queux faire a vous doy, as termes assignes, sicome moy aide Dieu et ses Saints; et basera le lievre. Mes il ne genulera quant il fait fealty, ne serra tiel humble reverence, come avant est dit en homage.

FEALTY is the same that fidelitas is in Latine. And when a freeholder doth fealty to his lord, he shal hold his right hand upon a booke, and shall say thus, Know ye this my lord, that I shall be faithfull and true unto you, and faith to you shall beare for the lands which I claime to hold of you, and that I shall lawfully doe to you the customes and services which I ought to do, at the termes assigned, so help me God and his Saints; and he shall kisse the book. But he shall not kneele when he maketh his fealty, nor shall make such humble reverence as is aforesaid in homage.

[c] Fealtie

(1) See Post 100. b.—The statute of 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. which was made to free the subject from the burthen of knight's service and the oppressive consequences of tenures in capite, amongst other provisions wholly discharges all tenures from the incident of homage; not because homage itself was any grievance, but because, though not wholly, yet it was more properly an incident to knight's service, which the statute abolishes. But whilst homage continued, it was far from being a mere ceremony, for the performance of it, where it was due, materially concerned both lord and tenant in point of interest and advantage. To the lord it was of consequence, because till he had received homage from the heir he was not intitled to the wardship of him and of his land; unless the lord had the feignory for life or years only, in which case he could not take homage and therefore was allowed wardship without. Dominus (as Magna Charta expresses it) non habeat custodiam ejus, nec terra sue antequam homagium ceperit; which words it is said import, not that the lord could not have the wardship of the heir unless he had actually received homage from the ancestor, but only that he could not have it till it was received from the heir. See 9. H. 3. cap. 3. and 2. Inst. 10. To the tenant the homage was scarce of less importance; for antiently every kind of homage when received, but not before, bound the lord to acquittal or warranty, that is both to keep the tenant free from distress entry or other molestation for services due to the lords paramount, and to defend his title to the land against all others; though in subsequent times this implication of acquittal and warranty became peculiar to homage ancestral. See Post fol. 100. a. 101. a. 2. Inst. 11. Such being the effect of homage, it was necessary to provide the means of compelling the tenant to do and the lord to receive it; and accordingly our law gave the remedy by distress for the former purpose, and the writ de capiendo homagium for the latter. Post 105. a. 2. Inst. 11. However when it was settled, that implied acquittal and warranty were only incident to homage ancestral, the writ de capiendo homagium fell into disuse; for it did not lie in the case of other homage, the reason of the law, which gave it to the tenant that he might intitle himself to acquittal and warranty, having ceased with respect to that, and homage ancestral being very rare, if not entirely worn out, in the time of lord Coke. See 2. Inst. 11.—See further on the effect of homage in Littlet. par Houard v. r. p. 519. Mad. Baron. Angl. 269. and Sulliv. Lect. 128. particularly the latter book. See also as to homage in general. Spelm. Gloss. voc. Hominium, and Du Fresn. Gloss. voc. Hominium et Vassalaticum and Post 68. b.—(2) Tenant at will should be added to the exception. See Post 93. Also according to 5. H. 3. 12. and 10. H. 6. 13. tenant for years is not compellable to do fealty; but Littleton sect. 132. is expressly with lord Coke. See too the other authorities cited in the margin and an observation on the 10. H. 6. 13. in Kitch. on Courts ed. 1592. fo. 132. a.

tify Mr. Selden in observing, that some use of fiefs may very properly be referred to the time of Alexander Severus. But that opinion,

[c] Fealtie is a part of homage (1), for all the words of fealtie are comprehended within homage (2), and therefore fealtie is incident to homage.

[e] Mirror esp. 3. de sez. & de fealtie. (4. Co. 8. b.)

Sicome moy aide dieu. As homage is the more honourable service, so fealty is a service more iacred, because he is sworne thereunto. And the reason wherefore the tenant is not sworne in doing his homage to his lord is, for that no subject is sworne to another subject to become his man of life and member but to the king onely, and that is called the oath of allegiance or homagium ligeum (3). And those words for that purpose are omitted out of fealtie, which is to be done upon oath. And Littleton said wel (when a freeholder doth fealtie); [d] for the fealtie of him, that holdeth in villenage, differeth from the fealtie of the freeholder. For the villaine holding his right hand upon the booke shall say thus to his lord, Hear you my lord A. that I A. B. from this day forward shall be to you true and faithful, and shall owe you fealtie for the land that I hold of you in villenage, and shall be justified by you in bodie and goods, so help me God, &c. as by the act (4) appeareth.

(7. Co. Calvin's case.)

[d] Stat. de 17. E. 2. tit. Homage in le Abridgment.

Sect. 92.

ET grand diversite y ad per enter fealsans de fealtie et de homage; car homage ne poit estre fait forsque al seignior meme; mes le seneschal de court le seignior, ou bailife, puit prender fealtie pur le seignior.

AND there is great diversitee betwene the doing of fealty, and of homage; for homage cannot be done to any but to the lord himselfe; but the steward of the lord's court, or bailife, may take fealty for the lord.

BRACON lib. 2. fo. 80. Sciendum est, quod non per procuratores nec per literas fieri poterit homagium; sed in propria persona, tam domini quam tenentis, capi debet et fieri.

Bracton lib. 2. fo. 8. 21. E. 4. 17. acc. 2. E. 3. 10. 32. H. 6. 23. 9. Co. 76.

Mes le seneschal, &c. ou bailife poit prender fealtie. This is so evident, as it needeth no explanation.

[e] Vid. For the signification of Seneschal and Bailife Sect. 78. 79. 248. & 379.

Sect. 93.

ITEM tenant a terme de vie ferra fealtie, et uncore ilne ferra homage. Et divers autres diversities y sont perenter homage et fealtie.

ALSO tenant for terme of life shall doe fealtie, and yet he shall not doe homage. And divers other diversities there be betwene homage and fealty.

THE tenant must doe fealtie in person; because he must be sworne unto it, and no man can sweare by the common law by attorney or proctor. (5)

9. Co. 76.

Sect. 94.

ITEM home poit veir 15. E. 3. coment home et sa feme fieront homage et fealtie en common banke, que lest escript devant en tenure de homage.

ALSO a man may see in 15. E. 3. how a man and his wife shall doe homage and fealty in the common place, which is written before in the tenure of homage.

THIS is evident and appeareth before; and if lords knew what benefit they may reape by receiving of homage and fealty, they would not neglect them; [e] for by the receiving of either of them, it is a sufficient seisin of all manner of services, as by the words [f] of either of them appeareth (6). Now if it be demanded,

[e] 4. Co. 8. & 9. Co. Bevil's case. 13. E. 4. 5.

[f] Vid. Sect. 118. 130. 131. 138.

(1) In some countries on the continent of Europe homage and fealty are blended together so as to form one engagement, being so intire that one cannot be without the other; and therefore foreign jurists frequently consider them as synonymous. But lord Coke, notwithstanding his saying, that fealty is a part of homage, apparently doth not mean to confound them; for in our law, whilst both continued, they were in some respect distinct, and though fealty was an incident to homage and ought always to have accompanied it, yet fealty, as lord Coke himself tells us, might be by itself, being sometimes done where homage was not due and would have been improper, and in the two next sections Littleton strongly marks the difference between the two. In short by our law homage was inseparable from fealty, but fealty was not so from homage. See ante 67. b. Post 150. b. 151. a. and Wright's Ten. 55. note (o) and Du Fresn. Gloss. voc. Hominium et Fidelitas.—(2) This is not strictly accurate; for the words So help me God and the saints, which constitute the oath and are therefore of the essence of fealty were not comprehended in the form of homage, nor were the words I will lawfully do to you the customs and services which I ought to do to you at the terms assigned. Another difference between the two in point of expression was, that the person doing fealty did not say, I become your man, words so significant of the nature of the engagement by homage. Also in fealty there is not any exception of faith to the king or other lords, which seeming to be intended as a qualification of the peculiar words of homage, I become your man, might perhaps on that account be thought unnecessary in fealty.—(3) See ante 65. a. and note 1. in 66. b. and Post n. 1. in 68. b.—In note 1. of 66. b. it is observed, that it doth not appear by the extract from the record of the bishop of Exeter's case, what punishment was inflicted on the bishop for receiving homage without the exception of faith to the king. But this was a mistake, for the extract mentions the suit to have been for 10,000l. and so Dr. Sullivan states it to have been; though in his book no authority is vouched. See Sulliv. Lect. 129. It is observable, that there is a want of reference to authorities through the whole of the same ingenious book; a deficiency very much to be lamented, as it renders that work, which is particularly valuable for the copiousness of the author's historical deductions in respect to fiefs, much less useful than it would otherwise be.—(4) See the note on this supposed statute in 67. b. ante.—(5) Vid. fealty done by attorney. Patricius de Graham miles regis Scotiæ sacramentum fidelitatis fecit regi Angliæ in nomine ipsius regis Scotiæ pro omnibus terris de Penreth Tindal et Sourby. Parl. E. 1. 137. Hal. MSS.—This amongst us is a singular instance of fealty by attorney, and certainly by our law was an irregularity; for even in Bracton's time, homage could not be done by attorney, and much less could an oath be taken in that way. See supra. However in some countries they are not so strict, particularly in France, where both homage and fealty may be done by proxy, if the lord gives his consent, and by the custom of some of the French provinces without. See tit. Foy et Homage in Denif. Nouvel. Decif.—(6) Vid. that seisin of fealty doth not estop the tenant from traversing the seisin of other services. 41. E. 3. 25. 50. John Lillburne's case. Hal. MSS. See further as to the advantages accruing from the receiving of homage and fealty, ante 67. b. and Post 93. a. and b. and note 5. in 68. b.

opinion, which seems to have the most probability and is adapted by the generality of the best writers, particularly those of the

what difference is betweene the oath of fealtie, when it is done to the king in respect of a tenure, and the oath which everie subject ought to take in respect of his allegiance, Littleton here setteth downe the oath of fealtie. Now the [g] oath of allegiance is thus, you shall sweare, &c. (1) Then it may be demanded, where and when is this oath to be taken, and it is answered, that whosoever is above the age of twelve yeares, is to be sworne in the tourne, unlesse he be within some leet, and then in the leet (2): and I reade amongst the lawes of Saint Edward (3), Quod hanc legem invenit Arthurus, qui quondam fuit inclitissimus rex Britannorum, et ita consolidavit et confederavit regnum Britannia universum semper in unum. Hujus legis auctoritate expulit Arthurus prædictus Saracenos et inimicos à regno. Lex enim ista diu sopita fuit et sepulta, donec Eadgarus rex Anglorum excitavit, et erexit in lucem, et illam per totum regnum observari precipit. Which law in some manner is observed at this day (4). But to returne to Littleton (5).

[g] Brit. ca. 29. Calvin's case 7. Co. 6. b. 12. H. 7. 18.

Lambert 135.

Plus ferra dit de fealtie en le tenure en focage, et en le tenure en frankalmoigne, et en le tenure per homage auncestrel.

More shall be said of fealtie in the tenure in focage, and in frankealmoigne, and in the tenure by homage auncestrell.

CHAP. 3. Sect. 95. (6)

Escuage.

[a] Mir. ca. 1. sect. 3. Brit. fo. 162. &c. Ockam cap. Quid sit scutagium. (F. N. B. 83. C. 2. Ro. Abr. 507. 4. Inst. 192. Post 87. a. 106. b.)

ESCUAGE. [a] In Latine Scutagium (id est) Servitium scuti, service of the shield. Hereby it appeareth that right interpretations and etymologies are necessary: for, ad recte docendum oportet primum inquirere nomina, quia rerum cognitio a nominibus rerum dependet.

(Post 86. b. 177. a.)

Nomina si nescis, perit cognitio rerum.

And herewith agreeth that which is said, Primo excutienda est verbi vis, ne sermonis vitio obstruetur oratio, sive lex sine argumentis.

[b] Bract. li. 2. fo. 36. a. Flet. li. 3. ca. 14. Ockam ubi supra. 27. Alf. 52. 31. Alf. 38.

Scutum in French is Escue, and thereof commeth the Escuer, (i.) Scutifer, which we usually call Armiger. [b] Of this Bracton faith, Item scutagium dicitur, quod talis præstatio pertinet ad scutum, quod assumitur ad servitium militare. And Fleta faith, Sunt quedam servitia forinseca, et dici possunt regalia, quæ ad scutum præstantur, et inde habemus scutagium, et ratione scuti pro feodo militari reputatur: and Ockam faith, Hæc itaque summa, quia nomine scutorum solvitur, scutagium nuncupatur (7).

(Post 74. b.)

ESCUAGE est appell en Latine Scutagium, ce-stascavoir, Servitium scuti. Et tiel tenant, qui tient sa terre per escuage, tient per service de chivaler. Et auxy il est communement dit, que ascun
tient per un fee de service de chivaler, et ascun per le moity dun fee de service de chivaler, &c. Et il est dit, que quant le roy face voyage royal en Escoce pur subduer
les Scotas, donques il, que tient per un fee de service de chivaler, covient estre oue le roy per 40
jours, bien et covenablement array pur le guerre. Et celuy, que tient sa terre per le

ESCUAGE is called in Latine Scutagium, that is, service of the shield; and that tenant, which holdeth his land by escuage, holdeth by knights service. And also it is commonly said, That some hold by the service of one knight's fee, and some by the halfe of a knight's
fee. And it is sayd, That when the king
makes a voyage royall into Scotland to subdue the Scots, then he, which holdeth by the service of one knight's fee, ought to be with the king fortie dayes, well and conveniently
arrayed for the war.
And he, which holdeth his land by the moitie of a knight's

moity

(1) The form of the old oath of allegiance may be seen in the books cited in the margin; but it has been changed by several statutes made since the revolution, and these indulge quakers with signing a declaration of fidelity instead of taking the oath. See Burn's Justice tit. Oaths and Com. Dig. tit. Allegiance. In lord Hale's History of the Pleas of the Crown, there is a very learned dissertation on the old oath of allegiance, in which his lordship explains how it differs from the oath of fealty to the king by reason of tenure. He also discourses largely on the subject of homage, and points out the several distinctions between homagium simplex, homagium ligeum, and homagium mixtum. See 1. Hal. Hist. P. C. 61. to 75. This curious part of lord Hale's works did not occur, till it was too late to give the benefit of it to the notes in the chapter of Homage.—(2) How the taking of the oaths of allegiance is regulated by modern statutes, see Com. Dig. tit. Allegiance and Burn's Just. tit. Oaths.—(3) As to the laws of Edward the Confessor, the authenticity of those in print is controverted by the famous Dr. Hickes. See Hick. Thesaur. Ling. Septentrion. Dissert. Epist. 95.—(4) Mr. Lambard, who published the first edition of the Anglo-Saxon Laws, informs his reader, that those called Edward the Confessor's were printed from two manuscripts, and that one of them was very ancient, but the other not so old; and it appears, that this strange tale, about king Arthur's consolidating the whole island of Britain into one kingdom, was not in the more ancient manuscript. See Lamb. Archaionom. 124. a. A learned writer on British antiquities, who appears to have taken great pains to point out the real transactions of Arthur, though a warm advocate for great part of his history, doth not profess to vouch for this tradition concerning him. See Whitak. Manchestr. 4to ed. v. 2. p. 31.—(5) The law with respect to fealty continues the same as when lord Coke wrote; for it is not varied as I apprehend by the 12. Ch. 2. c. 24. or any other statute made since his time. But it is no longer the practice to exact the performance of fealty. In the case of copyholders, it is become a thing of course on admitting them to enter a respite of fealty; but with respect to such as hold by other tenures, it is never thought of. However it may not be amiss to remember, that the title to fealty still remains; that it is due from all tenants except tenants by frankalmoigne and such as hold at will or by sufferance, and if required must be iterated on every change of the lord, it differing in this respect from homage, which except in special cases is only due once; that the receiving of it is at least attended with the advantage of preserving the memory of tenures, which though perhaps sufficiently done in the case of copyholds by the admittances and by the payment of fines and quit-rents and continual render of other services, may be very necessary in cases, where fealty is the only service due; and lastly, that the law for compelling the performance of fealty has provided the remedy by distress, which is an inseparable incident to all services due by tenure, and in the case of fealty cannot, as it is said, be excessive. See ante 68. a. and Post 103. b. 104. a. b. 152. b. and Kitch. ed. 1592. fo. 70. b. and 131. b. 2. Inst. 107. and 4. Co. 8. b. See further as to fealty, Sulliv. Lect. 68. where the oath of fealty is learnedly commented upon, and the words fidelitas et sacramentum in the Gloss. by Spelman and Du Fresne.—(6) Mr. Madox in his Baron. Angl. 217. animadvertes upon this section of Littleton; as to which see note n. 2. of 62. a. ante and the note at the end of this chapter of escuage Post 74. b.—(7) In a former place, a doubt is expressed as to the book by Ockam

the present times, attributes the origin of the feudal establishments principally to the northern nations, which in the fourth and fifth moitie dun fee de chivaler, covient este oue le roy per 20 jours; et il, que tient son terre per le quart part dun fee de chivaler, covient este oue le roy per 10 jours; et issint que pluis, pluis, et que meins, meins.

fee, ought to be with the king twentieth dayes; and he which holdeth his land by the fourth part of a knight's fee, ought to be with the king ten dayes; and so he that hath more, more, and he that hath lesse, lesse.

[c] Et tiel tenant que tient son terre per escuage tient per service de chivaler.

[c] Mirr. cap. 1. sect. 3.

[d] For as fealty is incident to homage, so homage and knights service be incident to escuage, and by the grant of services escuage passeth with the rest. Every tenure by escuage is a tenure by knights service; but every tenant, that holdeth by knights service, holdeth not by escuage, as shall be said hereafter (1). But note here the wisdom of antiquity, [e] Maxime enim princeps, domesticos quam stipendiarios bellicis apponere casibus, that is, to be served in his warres by his owne subjects, rather than by stipendary forainers.

[d] 2. E. 3. 8. b. 19. E. 3. A. vovry 294. 26. H. 8. 1. a. 20. E. 3. Per quæ servic. 11. 43. E. 3. 22. F. N. B. 83. 84. (4. Inst. 192.)

(Post. 82. b.)

[e] Lib. rub.

Un fee de service de chivaler. [f] There is great diversity of opinions concerning the contents of a knight's fee, that is, how much land goeth to the livelyhood of a knight. For some say that a knight's fee consisteth of eight hides, and every hide containeth an hundred acres, and so a knight's fee should containe 800 acres. Others say, that a knight's fee containeth 680 acres. Others say, that an oxgang of land containeth 15 acres, and eight oxgangs make a plowland; by which account a plowland containes 120 acres; and that virgata terræ, or a yard land, containeth 20 acres. But I hold, that a knight's fee, an hide or plowland, a yardland or oxgang of land, doe not containe any certaine number of acres (2); but a knight's fee is properly to be esteemed according to the qualitie, and not according to the quantity of the land, that is to say, by the value, and not by the content (3). And therefore it is very true, which Master Camden in his Britannia page 136. saith, viz. Subsequenti ætate ex censu ut colligitur facti fuerunt equites, &c. And antiquity thought, that twenty pound land was sufficient to maintaine the degree of a knight, as appeareth in the ancient treatise De modo tenendi Parliamentum (4) tempore regis Edw. filii regis Etheldredi, where it appeareth that comitatus (to wit) an earledome, constat ex viginti feodis unius militis, quolibet feodo computato ad viginti libratas; baronia constat ex 13 feodis, et 3 parte unius feodi militis (5) secundum computationem prædictam; unum feodum militis constat ex terris ad valentiam 20l. Which antiquity I cite, for that it concurrith with the act of parliament, anno 1. E. 2. de militibus (6); by which act Census militaris the state of a knight is measured by the value of xx pound per annum, and not by any certaine content of acres; and with this agreeth the statute of W. 1. cap. 35. and F. N. B. fol. 82. where twenty pound of land in socage is put in equipage of a knight's fee; and this is the most reasonable estimate, for one acre may be better than many others, so as he, which hath 680 or 800 acres of some barren land, had not according to the ancient account a sufficient revenue to maintaine the degree of a knight, and he, which had a lesse number of acres of some land of the value of xx pound per annum, had a sufficient livelihood in those daies for the maintenance of a knight (7). So antiquity thought that 400 markes of land per annum was a competent livelihood for a baron, and 400 pound per annum, ad sustinendum nomen et onus of an earle, and of late time 800 markes per annum of a marquess, and 800 pound per annum of a duke; so that their yearly revenue was estimated by the value and not by the content. And one plow land, carucata terræ, or a hide of land, bida terræ, (which is all one) is not of any certain content, but as much as a plough can by course of husbandry plow in a yeare. And therewith agreeth Lambert verbo Hide. And a plowland may containe a messuage, wood, meadow, and pasture, because that by them the plowmen and the cattell belonging to the plow are maintained. Vide Temp. E. 1. tit. Briefe 860. 4. E. 3. 47. Pl. Com. in Hill and Grange's case, fol. 168. Vide 6. E. 3. fol. 42. and 39. H. 6. 8. a. And venerable Beda calleth a plowland familiam a family; because it containeth necessary things for the maintenance of a family. And Prifot well saith in 35. H. 6. fol. 29. that a plow may till more land in a yeare in one country than in another; and therefore it stands with reason, that a plowland should be lesse in one place than in another. 41. E. 3. tit. Fine 40. and 13 E. 3. Fine 67. A fine shall not be received de una virgata terræ for the uncertainty, vide 39. H. 6. 8. But an acre of land is certaine by the statute de terris mensurandis. Note also (reader) that every plowland of ancient time was of the yearely value of five nobles per annum, and this was the living of a plowman or yeoman; and ex duodecim carucatis constabat unum feodum militis, which amount to 20 pound per annum. And this you may see Termino pacis. anno 3. E. 1. Coram Rogero de Seyton et sociis suis iusticiariis apud Westm.

[f] 9. Co. 122. in Lowe's case. Vide 7. Co. 33. 34. Nevil's case. (Sid. 128.)

(2. Ro. Abr. 515. 516. F. N. B. 82. c.)

Ockam to which lord Coke so frequently refers. See ante 58. note 1. But on looking into the Dialogue of the Exchequer I find the passage here attributed to Ockam verbatim in the chapter quid sit scutagium, which lord Coke himself cites a little above in this page; from which it seems very plain, that by Ockam's book lord Coke means that Dialogue. Mr. Madox, who first published the Dialogue of the Exchequer, thinks, that it was written or finished soon after the 24th year of Hen. 2. and that, Richard bishop of London, and son of Nigell, who was bishop of Ely and treasurer to Hen. 1. was the author; and this opinion he supports with his usual learning and accuracy. See Dissertat. Epist. ad fin. Mad. Hist. Exch. What was lord Coke's reason for attributing this dialogue to Ockam, it is not easy to guess.—Note, that there seems to be great confusion in most books, when the Black Book the Red Book and the Dialogue of the Exchequer are mentioned; and this proceeds from the want of a settled distinction between the three. Even bishop Nicholson, to whose labours all who study either our history or the antiquities of our laws are so greatly indebted, expresses himself with inaccuracy on the subject of these three books. He writes, as if he took the Black Book and the Dialogue to be the same; for writing of the former he says, Mr. Madox, who has given us a correct edition of this treatise, is of opinion that Richard Nigelli filius, &c. was the author. Nicholf. Engl. Hist. Libr. 2d ed. p. 215. But this is a misconception of Mr. Madox's words, the sum of his account being, that the Dialogue is both in the Red and Black Book, but is only a part of each, and that, though Alexander de Swerford was compiler of the Red Book, not he, but Richard son of Nigell was author of the Dialogue. As to the name of the compiler of the Black-Book, Mr. Madox is wholly silent. Another thing proper to mention is, that it seems uncertain whether the Black and Red Book are not in point of contents the same. Mr. Hearne, who first published a copy of the Black-Book thinks, that they partly differ and partly agree in their contents, but he doth not write quite positively, or pretend to say, that he had seen the two originals in the exchequer. Hearne. Lib. Nig. ed. 1771. Præf. 17. As to Mr. Madox, he is silent on the subject.

(1) See as to this Post 82. b.—(2) T. 21. E. 1. Rot. 26. Ebor. coram rege. Eight acres make an oxgang in the fields of Doncaster. Hic fol. 5. a. Vid. Seld. Tit. Hon. pars 2. c. 5. f. 4. In Cranfield 48 acres make a yard-land and 4 yard-lands make a hide; so that oxgang yard-land and hide or plough-land are altogether uncertain according to the diversity of places. Hal. MSS.—See further infra and also ante 5. a. and note 11. there. In fol. 5. lord Hale gives the following note on the uncertainty of the word oxgang.—Breve de una bovata marisci is ill. 13. E. 3. Briefe 241. Hal. MSS. See infra a like case as to the uncertainty of virgata.—(3) Mr. Selden insists, that a knight's fee was estimable, neither by the value nor the quantity of the land, but by the services or number of knights reserved. Seld. Tit. Hon. 2d ed. part 2. c. 5. f. 26.—(4) See a note on this treatise Post 69. b.—(5) This notion of there being a certain number of knights fees in an earldom and barony is controverted by Mr. Selden; and he cites instances of earldoms and baronies with a less as well as with a greater number than lord Coke mentions. Seld. Tit. Hon. 2d ed. part 2. c. 5. f. 26.—(6) Lord Coke in another place observes, that the 1. E. 2. de militibus, though called a statute, was only a writ granted by the king in the time of parliament and therefore entred of record. 2. Inst. 393.—(7) Nota quoad preceptum de militibus faciendis variatim se habet census communis militaris. Omnes laici qui tenent integrum feodum militis fiant milites and fifth centuries over-run the western part of the Roman empire, and at length out of its ruins formed the principal of the various

West. Ebor. Ro. 10. Radulphus de Normanville petens in brevi de medio queritur contra Luciam de Kyme, quod cum ipsa teneat de ipso duas carectas terre in Conington per homagium et servitium militare, unde duodecim carucate terre faciunt unum feodum militis pro omni servitio, ipsa distrinxit ipsum ad faciendam sectam ad curiam suam de Thorneton in Craven, &c. (1).

And it is to be observed, that the reliefe of a knight and all above him which be noble, is the fourth part of their yearly revenue, as of a knight five pound, which is the fourth part of 20 pound. So una baronia constat ex 13 feodis militum et de 3 parte unius feodi militis, which amount to 400 markes, and therefore his reliefe is the fourth part of this, viz. 100 markes: and an earledome consists of twenty knights fees, which amount to 400 pound (as before it appeareth by the said ancient record de modo tenendi parliamentum, &c. (2).) and therefore his reliefe is 100 pound. And this also appeareth by the statute of Magna Charta, cap. 2. and by the equity of this statute, inasmuch as a marquisdome, which consists of the reveaue of two baronies which amount to 800 markes, shall pay according to that just proportion for his reliefe 200 markes; and because a dukedome consists of the revenues of two earledomes, viz. 800 pound per annum, a duke shall pay 200 for a reliefe, which is also the fourth part of his revenue; and with this agree the records of the Exchequer.

Note (reader) at the time of the making of the statute of Magna Charta 9. H. 3. there was not any duke, marquesse, or viscount in England, and therefore the statute could not make mention of them, and Edward the eldest sonne of king E. 3. called the Black Prince was the first duke in England after the Conquest, and Robert earle of Oxford in the reigne of R. 2. was the first marquesse, Sic enim inter ordines Anglie in sua Britannia testatur Camden ubi supra. Et titulus Marchionis serius ad nos devenit, nec ante R. 2. tempora cuiquam delatus; ille enim Robertum Vere Oxoniæ comitem delicias suas primum Marchionem Dubliniæ designavit, merumque erat honoris nomen. Hæc ille. And before the reigne of H. 6. there was not any viscount. Sic enim idem author ubi supra asserit. Post comites vicecomites ordine sequuntur. Viscounts nos vocamus. Hæc vetus officii sed nova dignitatis appellatio, et H. 6. tempore ad nos primum audita. Hæc ille. Et dominus de Bello monte was the first viscount created by king H. 6. Vide Cassianum in gloria mundi parte 4. confid. 55. that this dignity of a viscount is of great antiquity in other realmes.

Bracton lib. 2. 36. Item sunt quedam servitia, quæ dicuntur forinseca, quævis sunt in carta de feoffamentis expressa et nominata, et quæ ideo dici possunt forinseca, quia pertinent ad dominum regem, et non ad dominum capitalem, nisi cum in propria persona profectus fuerit in servitio, vel nisi cum pro servitio suo satisfecerit domino regi, &c.

Voyage Royal. A voyage royall is not onely, when the king himselfe goeth to warre, as Littleton here saith, but also when his lieutenant or deputy of his lieutenant goeth. And what shall be said a voyage royall shall be adjudged in this case by the judges of the common law as an incident to escuage, and not by the constable and marshall, or any other: et sic de similibus.

There is also another kind of voyage royall, viz. when one goeth with the king's daughter beyond sea to be married, &c. for such a voyage is for the good of the whole realme, (for more profit for the realme cannot be then to make alliance with another nation); but of this voyage royall Littleton speaketh not here, but onely of the voyage royall to warre: so as there is a voyage royall of warre, and a voyage royall of peace and amity. And it is to be observed, that he that holdeth by castle gard or cornage holdeth by knights service, and yet he shall pay no escuage, because he holdeth not to goe with the king to warre (3).

En Escocce. In Scotiam, this is put but for an example, for if the tenure be to goe in Walliam, Hiberniam, Vasconiam, Pictaviam, &c. it is all one. See an ancient record, Rot. & finibus Termino Mich. 11. E. 2. Sir Rich. Rockesley knight did hold lands at Seaton by serjeanty to be Ventrarius Regis, that is to be the king's fore-foot-man when the king went into Gascoigne, donec persus fuit pari solutarum precii 4 d. that is, untill he had worne out a paire of shooes of the price of foure pence. And this service, being admitted to be performed when the king went to Gascoigne to make warre, is knights service.

Il que tient per un fee de service de chivalier covient estre ove le roy per 40 jours. But this is to be understood of a tenant that holdeth of the king immediately; for every man is bound by his tenure to defend his lord, and both he and his lord the king and his country; and therefore if the lord goeth not, his tenant is excused. But yet if the tenant peravaille goeth with the king, it excuseth all the mesnes.

And it is to be observed, that for every pound of the ancient value of a knight's fee accounting twenty pound land, the tenant must goe with the king two dayes, which commeth just to 40 dayes for a whole knight's fee. By the statute of Magna Charta it is provided, that scutagium de cetero capiatur sicut capi consuevit tempore Hen. regis avi nostri. Sect.

Lib. Rub. in Scacc. 47. 48. 19. R. 2. Gard. 95. 6. R. 2. Protection 46. 6. H. 3. Avowry 242. Vide Rot. Claus. 8. H. 3. & Fin. 8. H. 3. & Patent. 9. H. 3. multi solverunt scutagium pro exercitu in Walliam. memb. 30. & ante Claus. 6. H. 3. memb. 3.

Magna Charta cap. 37. Fleta lib. cap. 60.

lites. 1. pars Claus. 9. H. 3. m. 24. dorf. Claus. 16. H. 3. m. 4. dorfo. Postea fiant milites, qui habent 15 l. per annum vel feodum militis. Rotulo respect. militie 40. H. 3. tempore E. 1. Qui habent viginti librant, fiant milites rot. hundredi 3. E. 1. Et sic continuavit usque 2. E. 2. et postea. Sed demum qui habent 40. librat. terre fiant milites. Claus. 6. E. 2. m. 27. Et sic continuavit usque 17. regis Caroli. Vid. Rot. Parl. 18. H. 6. n. 43. 28. H. 6. n. 12. and vid. Claus. 6. E. 2. m. 27. 19. E. 2. m. 9. E. 3. m. 17.—Hal. MSS.—Before and in the time of Charles the first it was apprehended, that the king might lawfully compel all men, who were of full age and seised of lands to the value of 40 l. a year, either to take upon them the order of knighthood, or to pay fines for being excused. An attempt to exercise this power, which lord Coke himself allows to have been a prerogative of the crown, was one of the many expedients, used by that unfortunate prince to raise a revenue without the aid of parliament; and it terminated accordingly, for it was the occasion of a statute, which provided against the future exercise of any such power. See 16. Cha. 1. c. 20. 2. Inst. 593. Blackst. Comment. ed. 5. v. 1. p. 402. and v. 2. p. 61. and Barringt. Ant. Stat. ad ed. 144.

(1) 4. E. 2. Avowry 200. Viginti virgata terre faciunt unum feodum militis. M. 13. & 14. E. 1. Rot. 17. Glouc. Quadraginta carucat. terre faciunt unum feodum militis. 8. E. 3. 49. Duodecim carucate et duæ bovate terre faciunt unum feodum militis. Vid. apud Math. Paris in Vitis 23. abbatum fol. 131. Abbas Sancti Albani debet regi sex milites. Et ibi recensentur numeri hidarum ad quodlibet feodum militis. Alibi quinque, alibi sex, alibi septem hidæ faciunt feodum militis. Hal. MSS.—See further as to the contents of a knight's fee, Post 76. a. and 83. b. and 2. Inst. 596.—(2) Vide Seld. Tit. Hon. parte 2. c. 5. f. 26. ubi autoritas authoris libri modi tenendi parl. et ista opinio de certa proportionem annui valoris feodi militaris, baroniz, et comitatus, optime refutantur. Vid. infra 83. b. Hal. MSS.—The modus tenendi parliamentum, according to the title as given in lord Coke's preface to his ninth book of Reports, imports to be an account of the manner of holding the English parliaments in the time of Edward the Confessor, and that it was approved of by the first William, and conformed to in his time and in that of his successors. To this modus lord Coke frequently refers as to a most undoubtedly genuine piece of antiquity; and in his fourth Institute he tells us, that Henry the Second after having conquered Ireland lent a transcript of this modus into that country as a model for parliaments there; and that in the reign of Hen. 4. this transcript, which is known by the name of the Irish modus, fell into the hands of Sir Christopher Preston, and was then exemplified by infleximus under the great seal of Ireland. But notwithstanding all this, the reasons of Mr. Selden and Mr. Pryn, of whom the former supposes it to have been an imposture of the time of Edward the Third, and the latter makes it an invention as late as the 31. H. 6. seem to furnish unsurmountable objections against the authority of the English modus; and so convinced of their force was an able advocate for the existence of the commons as a constituent part of parliament before the 49. Hen. 3. that he candidly gives up its antiquity, though if it could have been defended, it would have decided the controversy in his favour, for it expressly mentions citizens and burgesses as well as knights of the shire. See 4. Inst. 12. Seld. Tit. Hon. 2d ed. part 2. c. 5. f. 26. Pryn on 4. Inst. 1. and Tyrr. Biblioth. Polit. 270. 406. However Dr. Dopping bishop of Meath, who in 1692 first published the Irish modus, feebly endeavours to defend the antiquity of the supposed transcript in the time of Hen. 2. and two other writers deservingly of great credit seem inclined the same way. See Molyn. Case of Ireland and Harr. Edit. of Ware's Hist. and Antiq. of Irel. 84. Mr. Selden mentions, that in his time there were many copies of the English modus; but I am not aware, that any one is in print.—As to lord Coke's account of the computation of reliefs by the yearly revenue, which lord Hale observes to have been also refuted by Selden, see Post 83. b.—(3) Vid. Sæpissime temporibus H. 2. R. 1. Johann. B. 3. 1. E. 2. Scutagium pro exercitu regis various states and governments, into which we now see Europe divided. Many reasons might be adduced in favour of this opinion,

Sect. 96.

MES il appiert per les plees et arguments faits en un bon plee sur brieve de detinue de un escript obligatorie port per un H. Gray, T. 7. E. 3. que ne be-joigne a celui, que tient per escuage, de aler oue le roy luy mesme, sil voile trouver un auter person able pur luy convenablement array per le guerre, de aler oue le roy. Et ceo semble estre bon reason. Car poit estre, que celui que tient per tiels services est languissant, issint que il ne poit aler ne chivaucher. Et auxy un abbe, ou auter home de religion, ou feme sole, que tient per tiels services, ne doit en tiel cas aler en proper person. Et Sir W. Herle, adonque chiefe justice de common bank, disoit en tiel plee, que escuage ne ferra graunt mes lou le roy alast luy mesme en son proper person. Et fust demurre en judgement en mesme le plee, le quel les xl. jours seront accompts de le primer jour del mu-

BUT it appeareth by the pleas and arguments made in a plea upon a writ of detinue of a writing obligatorie brought by one H. Gray, T. 7. E. 3. that it is not needfull for him, which holdeth by escuage, to goe himsele with the king, if he will finde another able person for him conveniently arrayed for the warre to goe with the king. And this seemeth to be good reason. For it may be, that he which holdeth by such services is languishing, so as he can neither go nor ride. And also an abbot or other man of religion, or a feme sole, which hold by such services, ought not in such case to goe in proper person. And Sir William Herle then chiefe justice of the common place said in this plea, that escuage shall not be granted but where the king goes himsele in his proper person. And it was demurred in judgement in the same plea, whither the 40 dayes should be accounted from the first day of

TR. 7. E. 3. &c. This is T. 7. E. 3. fol. 29. the first booke at large that our author hath cited. (9. Co. 130. 2. Ro. Atr. 509.) And it is to be observed, that this point is not debated in the said booke, but onely it is there admitted, and yet is good authority in law; for our author saith, that it appeareth by this booke. Now both by Littleton himsele, and by the booke of 7. E. 3. it is apparant, that albeit the tenure is, that he which holdeth by a whole knight's fee ought to be with the king, &c. to do a corporall service, yet he may finde another able man to do it for him.

By the statute of Magna (4. Co. 88.) Charta, cap. 20. it is provided, that no knight, that holdeth by castle-gard, shall be distreyned to give money for the keeping of the castle, Si ipse eam facere voluerit in propria persona sua, vel per alium probum hominem faciet, si ipse eam facere non possit propter rationabilem causam.

Some have thought, that he that holds by escuage is taken by the equity of this statute that speaketh onely of castle-gard. But it is holden, (6. Co. 20.) that this statute is but an affirmation of the common law. For where that act saith, (propter rationabilem causam) that reasonable cause is referred to the tenant's own discretion and choyce, and the cause is not materiall or issuable no more then in the case that Littleton here putteth, as hereafter appeareth. And I would advise our student, that when he shall be enabled and armed to set upon the yeare bookes, or reports of law, that he be furnished with all the whole course of the law, that when he heareth a case vouched and applyed either in Westminster hall, (where it is necessary for him to be a diligent hearer, and observer of cases of law) or at readings or other exercises of learning, he may finde out and read the case so vouched;

in Ireland, Wales, Poitou, Bretagne, Normandy, Gascony, &c. though territories of the king. Quoad escuage nota. Though in some cases the subject was chargeable for defence of the realm, yet clearly for foreign invasion none were chargeable but by tenure, and therefore service of chivalry was called forinsecum servitium. Rot. Parl. 20. E. 3. n. 13. 21. E. 3. n. 16. 44. 25. E. 3. n. 23. 5. R. 2. n. 67. &c. 1. H. 5. n. 17. 5. H. 5. pars 2. n. 9. The first thing requisite to escuage was the proclamation and summons of service, which prefixed the day and place of rendezvous of the army, and commanded the lords, &c. nominatim and others by proclamation quod ad diem et locum veniant ad regem cum equis et armis et toto servitio regi debito, which is called summonitio servitii vel summonitio exercitus. Claus. 1. E. 2. m. 2. Claus. 3. E. 2. m. 1. Claus. 7. E. 2. m. 14 et sepius alibi. Vide pro scutagiis captis occasione diversarum expeditionum. Tempore H. 2. scutagium bis assessum ante annum quintum, tertium scutagium 7. H. 2. pro exercitu Tholosæ duas marcas, quartum pro eodem exercitu unam marcam, quintum 18. H. 2. pro exercitu Hiberniæ 20 s. sextum pro exercitu Galloway 20 s. Tempore Richardi primi, primum scutagium pro exercitu Walliæ anno secundo ad 10 s. secundum anno sexto ad 20 s. pro quolibet feodo pro redemptione regis, tertium 8. R. 1. pro exercitu Normanniæ ad 20 s. Tempore Johannis anno primo scutagium assessum ad duas marcas, secundum anno tertio pro exercitu Normanniæ ad duas marcas, tertium consimile pro consimili, quartum consimile pro consimili, quintum consimile pro consimili, sextum consimile pro consimili, septimum consimile, octavum anno duodecimo regis pro Hibernia duas marcas, nonum anno decimo tertio pro exercitu Walliæ ad duas marcas, decimum pro exercitu Scotiæ, undecimum anno decimo sexto Johannis pro opinion, and to evince that pursuing the history of these nations from their first successful irruptions into the Roman empire is

ed; for that will both fasten it in his memory, and be to him as good as an exposition of that case. But that must not hinder his timely and orderly reading, which (all excuses set apart) he must bind himselfe unto; for there be two things to be avoyded by him, as enemies to learning, præpostera lectio, and præpropera praxis. But let us now heare what our author will say.

Et ceo semble bone reason, &c. Here Littleton sheweth three reasons wherefore the tenant should not be constrained to doe his service in person.

First, it may be the tenant is sicke, so as he is neither able to goe nor ride. And ever such construction must be made in matters concerning the defence of the realme or common good, as the same may be effected and performed. To the former disability may be added where a corporation aggregate of many, as deane and chapter, maior and commonalty, &c. or an infant being a purchaser, for these also must finde an able man. But it may be objected, that in these particular cases the tenant might finde a man, but not when he himselfe is able without all excuse or impediment. To this it is answered, that Sapiens incipit à fine. And the end of this service is for defence of the realme, and so it be done by an able and sufficient man, the end is effected.

Secondly, seeing there are so many just excuses of the tenant, it were dangerous, and tending to the hindrance of the service, if these excuses should be issuable, Multa in jure communi contra rationem disputandi pro communi utilitate introducta sunt.

Lastly, both Littleton, and the booke in the seventh of Edward the Third, giveth the tenant power, without any cause to be shewed, to finde an able and sufficient man, and oftentimes jura publica ex privato promiscue decidi non debent.

Un abbe ou auter home de religion. Note, that if the king had given lands to an abbot and his successors to hold by knights service, this had beene good, and the abbot should doe homage and find a man, &c. or pay escuage, but there was no wardship or reliefe or other incident belonging thereunto. And though the law saith, that this was a mortmaine, that is, that they held fast their inheritances, yet if the abbot, with the assent of his covent, had conveyed the land to a naturall man and his heires, now wardship and reliefe and other incidents belonged of common right to the tenure. And so it is, if the king give lands to a maior and commonalty and their successors, to be holden by knights service, in this case the patentees (as hath beene said) shall doe no homage, neither shall there be any wardship or reliefe, onely they also shall find a man, &c. or pay escuage. But if they convey over the lands to any naturall man and his heires, now homage, ward, marriage, and reliefe, and other incidents belong hereunto. And yet this possibility was remota potentia; but the reason hereof is, Cessante ratione legis cessat ipsa lex, the reason of the immunity was in respect of the body politique, which by the conveyance over ceaseth, which is worthy of the observation.

And it is to be observed, that every bishop in England hath a baronie (2), and that barony is holden of the king in capite, and yet the king can neither have wardship or relief.

If two joyntenants be of land holden by knights service, if one goeth with the king, it sufficeth for both, and both of them cannot be compelled to goe, for by their tenure one man is onely to goe.

If the tenant peravaille goeth, it dischargeth the mesne; for one tenancy shall pay but one escuage.

Ou auter home de religion. Here this word (religion) is taken largely, viz. not onely for regular, or dead persons, as abbots, monkes, or the like, but for secular persons also, as bishops, parsons, vicars, and the like; for neither of them are bound to goe in proper person. For nemo militans Deo implicetur secularibus negotiis.

Languishant. So it may be said of an ideot, a mad man, a leper, a man maymed, blind, deafe, of decrepit age, or the like.

Ou fem sole. Seeing that a fem sole, that cannot performe knights service, may serve by deputy, it may be demanded wherefore an heire male being within the age of 21 years

(Post. 99. a.)

6 H. 3. Avowry 242. F. N. B. 83. 84.

pro exercitu Britanniae ad tres marcas sed non solutum. Nota temporibus Henrici tertii scutagium Ludowici duas marcas anno secundo, Byham 10 s. anno quinto, Montgomery duas marcas anno octavo, Bedford duas marcas anno octavo, Kerry duas marcas anno decimo tertio, Bretanny 40 s. anno decimo quarto, Pictavia 40 s. anno decimo quinto, Elam 20 s. anno decimo sexto, Gascoigny 40 s. anno viceffimo secundo, Guyen 40 s. anno viceffimo nono, Wallia 40 s. anno quadragesimo secundo. Hal. MSS. For a more particular account of the scutages assessed in the several reigns mentioned by lord Hale, see Mad. Hist. Excheq. chap. 16. where the whole subject of escuage is fully explained from the records. See also Post 72. a. and b.

(1) Mr. Madox observes, that Sir William Herle's position, that escuage should not be granted but where the king goes to the war in person, is fallacious. Mad. Baron. Angl. 226.

(2) Lord chief justice Hale, in a manuscript treatise on the Jura Corona, gives it as his opinion, that the bishops do not hold their possessions per baroniam, and that they sit in the house of peers by custom and usage, and not as barons by tenure. But the propriety of this doctrine has been ably controverted by a writer of very great eminence now living. See Warburt. Alliance between Church and State, 4th edit. 149.

is the only true way of exploring the source of the feudal institutions; but this is not the place for a minute discussion of a subject yeares may not serve also by deputie, being not able to serve himselfe.

To this it is answered, that in cases of minoritie, all is one to both sexes, viz. if the heire male be at the death of the ancestor under the age of one and twenty, or the heire female under the age of 14 they can make no deputy, but the lord shall have wardship as an incident to the tenure: therefore Littleton is here to be understood of a feme sole of full age, and seised of land holden by knights service either by purchase or descent.

Covenablement arraié pur le guerre. So as here are foure things to be observed.

First (as hath been said) that he may find another.

Secondly, that he that is found must be an able person.

Thirdly, he must be armed at the costs and charge of the tenant, and herein is to be noted, Quod non definitur in jure, with what manner of armor the souldier shall be arrayed with, for time place and occasion doe alter the manner and kind of the armour (1).

Fourthly, he must have such armor, as shall be necessary, and so appointed in readinesse.

Ferdwit is a Saxon word et significat quietanciam murti in exercitu. Worfcott is an old Eng- Fleta lib. 1. cap. 42.
lish word and signifieth liberum esse de oneribus armorum.

It is truly said, quod miles hæc tria curare debet, corpus ut validissimum et pernicissimum habeat, Livius.
arma apta ad subita imperia, cætera Deo et imperatori curæ esse.

Sapiens non semper it uno gradu, sed una via, non se mutat sed aptat. Qui secundos optat even- Vegetius.
tus, dimicet arte non casu. In omni conflictu non tam prodest multitudo, quam virtus.

Est optimi ducis scire et vincere, et cedere prudenter tempori. Multum potest in rebus humanis Polibius.
ocasio, plurimum in bellicis.

Quid tam necessarium est, quam tenere semper arma, quibus testus esse possis. But I will take my Vegetius.
leave of these excellent authors of art military, and referre them to those that professe the same, and will returne to Littleton.

Muster. I finde this word in the statute of 18. H. 6. cap. 19. and the ancient military order is worthy of observation; for before and long after that statute, when the king was to be served with souldiers for his warre, a knight or esquire of the country, that had revenues farmors and tenants, would covenant with the king, by indenture inrolled in the exchequer, to serve the king for such a terme with so many men (specially named in a list) in his warre, &c. an excellent institution that they should serve under him, whom they knew and honoured, and with whom they must live at their returne. These men being mustered before the king's commissioners, and receiving any part of their wages, and their names so recorded, if they after departed from their captaine within the terme contrary to the forme of that statute, it was felony. But now that statute is of no force; because that ancient (3. Inst. 86. Cro. Cha. 77.) and excellent forme of military course is altogether antiquated: but later statutes have provided 6. Co. 27. the souldiers case, for that mischief.

To muster is to make a shew of souldiers well armed and trained before the king's commissioners in some open field. Ubi se ostendentes præludunt prælio. In Latine it is cenfere, seu lustrare exercitum.

By the law before the conquest musters and shewing of armour should be uno eodem die per Lamb. fo. 135. b.
universum regnum, ne aliqui possint arma familiaribus et notis accommodare, nec ipsi illa mutuo accipere, ac justitiam domini regis defraudare, et dominum regem et regnum offendere.

Concerning the point in law, demurred in judgement, in the seventh of Edward the third, here mentioned by our author, the law accounteth the beginning of the fortie dayes after the king entreth into the foreine nation; for then the war beginneth, and till he come there, he and his host are said to goe towards the warre, and no militarie service is to be done till the king and his host come thither.

Sir William Herle. A famous lawyer constituted cheife justice of the Common Pleas by letters patent dated, 2 die Martii anno 5. E. 3. It appeareth by Littleton, and by the record, that he was a knight, against the conceit of those, that thinke, that the cheife justices of the court of Common Pleas were not knighted till long after.

Our student shall observe, that the knowledge of the law is like a deepe well, out of which each man draweth according to the strength of his understanding. He that reacheth deepest, he seeth the amiable, and admirable secrets of the law, wherein, I assure you, the sages of the law in former times, (whereof Sir William Herle was a principall one) have had the deepest reach. And as the bucket in the depth is easily drawne to the uppermost part of the water, (for nullum elementum in suo proprio loco est grave) but take it from the water, it cannot be drawne up but with great difficultie; so albeit beginnings of this study seem difficult, yet when the professor of the law can dive into the depth, it is delightfull, easie, and without any heavy burthen, so long as he keepe himselfe in his owne proper element.

Justice.

(1) Vide pro assisa armorum.—27. H. 2. Quicumque habet feodum unius militis, habeat loriam cassidem clipeum et lanceam. Quicumque liber laicus habuerit in catallo vel reditu ad valentiam sexdecim marcarum, habeat loriam lanceam clipeum et cassidem. Quicumque liber laicus habuerit in catallo ad valentiam decem marcarum, habeat halbergellum et capelet ferri et lanceam. Omnes burgenfes, et tota communia liberorum hominum, habeant wanbais, et capelet ferri, et lanceam. Et si quis hæc arma habens obierit, arma sua remaneant hæredi; et fiat inquisitio de his, qui has habent facultates, et faciant eos jurare ad ista arma habenda et ad ea tenenda in servitio regis. Hoveden 614. This assise continued till the time of king John, and then was a little altered. And this assise made in the time of king John was repeated and again commanded, and men were compelled to be sworn to it. Clauf. 14. H. 3. m. 5. dorso. Commissioners were assigned to cause men to be sworn and assised to arms, as they were sworn in the time of king John, in this form. Quisquis habet feodum militis integrum, habeat loriam; qui habet dimidium feodi militis, habeat haubergellum; qui habet catalla ad valentiam quindecim marcarum, habeat loriam; qui habet catalla ad valentiam decem marcarum, habeat haubergellum; qui habet catalla ad valentiam decem librarum, habeat capellum ferreum perpunctum et lanceam; qui habet ad valentiam viginti solidorum, habeat arcum et sagittas. In qualibet villa sit unus constabularius, in quolibet burgo plures, ad quorum summonitionem omnes ad arma jurati in warda sua conveniant ad imbreviandum distincte nomina et arma singulorum, ita quod singuli habeant prompta sua arma ad defensionem regni. This assise, as it seems, continued till the 26. of Hen. 3. and then another assise was ordained. In Clauf. 26. Hen. 3. pars 2. m. 10. many articles are ordained, which differ little from the statute of Winton. Amongst others there is this article. Singuli vicecomites, cum duobus militibus ad hoc assignatis, faciant cives, burgenfes, liberos homines, villanos, et alios à quindecim
ad

so extensive and difficult.— It is necessary to postpone the conclusion of this note, as also note 2. of 64. a. to another place, on account of the length of the note from lord Hale's MSS. concerning the assise of arms. They shall be given at the end of the chapter of knights service.

Glanville lib. 2. cap. 6. &c.

Justice. In Glanvil he is called justitia in ipso abstracto, as it were justice itself; which appellation remains still in English and French, to put them in mind of their duty and functions. But now in legal Latin they are called justiciarii tanquam justii in concreto, and they are called justiciarii de banco, &c. and never judices de banco, &c.

Comon banke. Banke is a Saxon word, and signifieth a bench or high seat, or a tribunal, and is properly applyed to the justices of the court of Common Pleas, because the justices of that court set there as in a certaine place: for all writs returnable into that court are coram justiciariis nostris apud Westmon. or any other certaine place where the court set; and legall records tearme them justiciarii de banco. But writs returnable into the court called the King's Bench are coram nobis (i. rege) ubicunque fuerimus in Anglia; and all judiciall records there are stiled coram rege. But for distinction sake it is called the King's Bench; both because the records of that court are stiled (as hath beene sayd)

26. Aff. p. 24. 4. E. 3. fo. 19.
Brafton lib. 3. fol. 105. b. Britton fol. 1. & 2. Fleta lib. 2. cap.
2. Mirror cap. 5. sect. 1. Fortescue cap. 51. See in the Preface to the third part of my Reports.

coram rege, and because kings in former times have often personally set there (1). For the antiquity of the court of Common Pleas they erre, that hold that before the statute of Magna Charta there was no court of Common Pleas, but had his creation by or after that charter; for the learned know, that in the sixe and twentieth yeare of Edward the Third, the abbot of B, in a writ of assize brought before the justices in Eire claimed consuance and to have writs of assize, and other originall writs out of the king's court by prescription, time out of mind of man, in the raignes of Saint Edmond, and Saint Edward the Confessor before the conquest. And on the behalfe of the abbot were shewed divers allowances thereof in former times in the kings courts, and that King Henry the first confirmed their usages, and that they should have consuance of pleas, so that the justices of the one bench or the other should not intermeddle. And the statute of Magna Charta erecteth no court, but giveth direction for the proper jurisdiction thereof in these words. Communia placita non sequantur curiam nostram, sed teneantur in aliquo certo loco. And properly the statute saith, non sequantur, for that the king's bench did in those dayes follow the king ubicunque fuerit in Anglia, and therefore enacteth that Common Pleas should be holden in a court resident in a certaine place. In the next chapter of Magna Charta (made at one and the same time) it is provided; Et ea, quæ per eosdem (i. justiciarios et itinerantes) propter difficultatem aliquorum articulorum terminari non possunt, referantur ad justiciarios nostros de banco, et ibi terminentur. And in the next to that, assise de ultima presentacione semper capiuntur coram justiciariis de banco, et ibi terminentur. Therefore it manifestly appeareth, that at the making of the statute of Magna Charta there were justiciarii de banco, which all men confesse to be the court of Common Pleas. And therefore that court was not erected by or after that statute (2). For the authority of this court, it is evident by that which hath beene said, that it hath jurisdiction of all Common Pleas. But let us returne to Littleton.

Mirror cap. 5. sect. 2. Fleta lib.
2. cap. 54.

(Doc. Pla. 115. 5. Co. 104.)

Demurre en judgement. A demurrer commeth of the Latine word demorari to abide; and therefore he, which demurreth in law, is said, he that abideth in law. Moratur or demoratur in lege. Whensoever the counsell learned of the party is of opinion, that the count or plea of the adverse party is insufficient in law, then he demurreth or abideth in law, and referreth the same to the judgement of the court, and therefore well saith Littleton here, demurre en judgement, the words of a demurrer being quia narratio, &c. materiaque in eadem contenta minus sufficiens in lege existit, &c. and so of a plea, quia placitum, &c. materiaque in eodem contenta minus sufficiens in lege existit, &c. unde pro defectu sufficientis narrationis sive placiti, &c. petit judicium, &c. But if the plea be sufficient in law, and the matter of fact be false, then the adverse partie taketh issue thereupon, and that is tryed by a jury; for matters in law are decided by the judges, and matters in fact by juries, as elsewhere is said more at large.

(5. Co. 69. Hob. 164.)

Now as there is no issue upon the fact, but when it is joyned betweene the parties, so there is no demurrer in law, but when it is joyned; and therefore when a demurrer is offered by the one party as is aforesaid, the adverse party joyneth with him, (for example) saith, quod placitum prædictum, &c. materiaque in eodem contenta bonum et sufficiens in lege existit, &c. et petit judicium, and thereupon the demurrer is said to be joyned, and then the case is argued by counsell learned of both sides; and if the poynts be difficult, then it is argued openly by the judges of that court, and if they or the greater part concur in opinion, accordingly judgement is given; and if the court be equally divided, or conceive great doubt of the case, then may they adjourne it into the exchequer chamber, where the case shall be argued by all the judges of England, where if the judges shall be equally divided, then (if none of them change their opinion) it shall be decided at the next parliament by a prelate, two earles, and two barons, which shall have power and commission of the king in that behalfe; and by advice of themselves, the chancellor, treasurer, the justices of

Vid. Braft. lib. 5. fo. 352. b.

14. E. 3. cap. 5. Statut. 1.

(1) But though formerly our kings did actually sit in the court of King's Bench, and the law still intends that the king is present there, yet the judicature belongs to the judges only, as lord Coke elsewhere observes. 4. Inst. 73. See further on the subject 3. Black. Comm. 5th ed. 41. and Mad. Hist. Excheq. fol. ed. 58. 64. 68. and 553.

(2) From the whole of lord Coke's observations here and in the preface to his eighth book of Reports, it seems to have been his opinion, that the court of Common Pleas was not only a distinct court at the time of making the Magna Charta of the 9th of Hen. 3. but also existed as such before the conquest. But according to Mr. Madox, whose inquiries into the subject were certainly more minute and particular, the origin of the court of Common Pleas is of a much later date. He so far agrees with lord Coke

ad sexaginta annos, assideri et jurari ad arma secundum quantitatem terrarum et catallorum, scilicet, ad quindecim librata terræ, unam loriam unum capellum ferreum gladium cultellum et equum; ad decem librata terræ, unum haubergellum capellum ferreum gladium lanceam et cultellum; ad quinque librata terræ, unum per punctum capellum ferreum gladium lanceam et cultellum; ad quadraginta solidos et amplius ad quinque librata, gladium arcus sagittas et cultellum; qui minus habet quam quadraginta solidos, falcem gisformas et cultellos et alia minuta arma; ad catalla sexaginta marcarum, unam loriam capellum gladium et equum; ad catalla quadraginta marcarum, unum capellum haubergellum gladium et cultellum; ad catalla decem marcarum, gladium cultellum arcum et sagittas; ad catalla quadraginta solidorum et infra decem marcas, falcem gisformas et alia minuta arma. Omnes item alii, qui possunt habere, arcus et sagittas habeant. In singulis civitatibus et burgis jurati ad arma sunt intendentes majores, vel ballivi ubi non sunt majores. In singulis villis aliis constituantur unus

the one bench and the other, and other of the king's counsell, as many and such as shall seeme convenient, shall make a good judgement, &c. And if the difficulty be so great as they cannot determine it, then it shall be determined by the lords in the upper house of parliament⁽¹⁾. See the statute, for it extends not onely to the case abovesaid, but also where judgements are delayed in the Chancery, King's Bench, Common Bench, and the Exchequer, the justices assigned, and other justices of Oyer and Terminer, sometime by difficulty, sometime by divers opinions of justices, and sometime for other causes. [a] Before which statute, if judgements were not given by reason of difficulty, the doubt was decided at the next parliament, (which then was to be holden once every yeare at the least⁽²⁾). [b] Si autem talia nunquam prius evenierint, et obscurum et difficile sit eorum iudicium, tunc ponatur iudicium in respectum usque ad magnam curiam, ut ibi per concilium curie terminetur. But hereof thus much shall suffice. [c] He that demurreth in law confesseth all such matters of fact, as are well and sufficiently pleaded. If there be a demurrer for part and an issue for part, the more orderly course is to give judgement upon the demurrer first; but yet it is in the discretion of the court to try the issue first, if they will. After demurrer joyned in any court of record, the judges shall give judgement according as the very right of the cause and matter in law shall appeare, without regarding any want of forme in any writ, returne, plaint, declaration, or other pleading, proces, or course of proceeding, except those onely which the party demurring shall specially and particularly set downe and expresse in his demurrer⁽³⁾. [a] Now what is substance and what is forme you shall read in my Reports.

And in some cases a man shall alledge speciall matter, and conclude with a demurrer; [b] as in an action of trespassse brought by I. S. for the taking of his horse, the defendant pleads that he himselfe was possessed of the horse untill he was by one I. S. dispossessed, who gave him to the plaintife, &c. the plaintife saith that I. S. named in the barre and I. S. the plaintife were all one person, and not divers; and to the plea pleaded by the defendant in the manner, he demurred in law, and the court did hold the plea and demurrer good, for without the matter alledged he could not demurre. Now as there may be a demurrer upon counts and pleas, so there may be of aid prier, voucher, receipt, waging of law, and the like. [c] By that which hath been said it appeareth, that there is a generall demurrer, that is, shewing no cause, and a speciall demurrer which sheweth the cause of his demurrer. Also by that which hath beene said, there is a demurrer upon pleading, &c. and there is also a demurrer upon evidence. [d] As if the plaintife in evidence shew any matter of record, or deeds or writings, or any sentence in the ecclesiasticall court, or other matter of evidence by testimony of witnesses, or otherwise, whereupon doubt in law ariseth, and the defendant offer to demurre in law thereupon, the plaintife cannot refuse to joine in demurrer, no more then in a demurrer upon a count, replication, &c. and so converso may the plaintife demurre in law upon the evidence of the defendant.

But if evidence for the king in an information or any other suite be given, and the defendant offer to demurre in law upon the evidence, the king's counsell shall not be inforced to joine in demurrer: but in that case, the court may direct the jury to finde the speciall matter.

En judgement. For the signification of this word, Vide Sect. 366.

Sect. 97.

ET apres tiel voyage royal en Escoce, il est communement dit, que per autoritie de parliament lescuage sera assesse et mis en certaine; scil. certaine somme d'argent, quant chescun, que tient per entier fee de service de chivaler, quel ne fuit

AND after such a voyage royall into Scotland, it is communly said, that by authority of parliament the escuage shall be assessed and put in certaine; scil. a certayne summe of money, how much every one, which holdeth by a whole knight's fee,

APRES voyage royal, &c. il est communement dit, que per authority de parliament escuage sera assesse. Nota, here is a secret of law included, that albeit escuage incertaine be due by tenure, yet because the assessment thereof concerned so many and so great a number of the subjects of the realme, it could not be assessed by the king or any other but by parliament: [a] and

Coke, as to admit, that the Magna Carta of Henry the 3d rather confirmed than erected the bank or common pleas, and that such a court was in being several years before the Magna Carta of the 17th of king John, though it was then first made stationary. But in other respects lord Coke and Mr. Maddox differ widely; for the latter thinks, that for some time after the conquest there was one great and supreme judicature called the curia regis, which he supposes to have been of Norman and not Anglo-Saxon original, and to have exercised jurisdiction over common as well as other pleas; that the common pleas and exchequer were gradually separated from the curia regis and became jurisdictions wholly distinct from it; and that the separation of the common pleas began in the reign of the first Richard, or early in the reign of John, and was completed by Henry the third. See Mad. Hist. Excheq. fol. ed. 63. and the chapter on the division of the king's courts 539. See further 3. Blackst. Comment. 5th ed. 37. 4. Inft. 99. Lamb. Archeion ed. 1635. p. 24. to 34. and the books cited in Pryn. on 4. Inft. 52.

(1) See further, as to the adjourning of causes into the exchequer chamber in order to have the opinion of all the judges, 4. Inft. 110. 118. and Warraine and Smith 2. Bulfr. 146. in which case the court refused to grant a motion for such an adjournment.

(2) See 4. Inft. 9. and Com. Dig. Parliament C.

(3) See 27. Eliz. c. 5. and 4. An. c. 16.

unus vel duo constabularii secundum numerum inhabitantium. In singulis vero hundredis unus capitalis constabularius, ad cuius mandatum omnes jurati ad arma de hundredo conveniant, et ei sint intendentes ad faciendum ea quae spectant ad conservationem pacis. Omnes vero constabularii capitanei intendentes sint vicecomiti et duobus militibus praedictis, ad veniendum ad mandatum eorum, et faciendum per praepcepta eorum ea quae spectant ad conservationem pacis nostrae, &c. And so two knights were assigned in every county to perform the premises. The next assise of arms was in the 13. of Edw. 1. by the statute of Winton,

Rot. Parlia. 14. E. 3. nu. 31. a proceeding in Sir John Stanton's case upon difficulty in the court of Common Pleas. Vide Britton fol. 41. 21. E. 3. 37. 38. 39. E. 3. fo. 1. 21. 35. 40. E. 3. 34. 13. H. 4. 3. 4.

[a] 4. E. 3. ca. 14.

[b] Bracton lib. 1. cap. 2. nu. 7. Brit. fol. 41. 1. E. 3. 7. 8. 2. E. 3. 6. 7.

[c] 17. E. 3. 50. b. 47. E. 3. 13. 14. 5. H. 7. 1. 13. E. 4. 7. b. Pl. Com. 85. 411. 172. (5. Co. 69. b. 1. Sid. 10. Post 125. Hob. 232. 233. Doc. Pla. 115. 116.)

48. E. 3. 15. 2. R. 2. inquest. 2. 38. E. 3. 25. 11. H. 4. 5. 75. 3. E. 4. 2.

[d] 3. Co. 57. Line. Coll. case. 5. Co. 74. Wymek's case. 10. Co. 88. usque 98. Doctor Leyfield's case.

(1. Leon. 178. Doc. Pla. 116. 117.)

[e] 13. E. 4. 7. 31. E. 3. Eschequer 244. 33. H. 6. 9. 10. 22. E. 4. 50. 1. H. 7. 21.

[f] 14. H. 4. 31. 37. H. 6. 6.

[g] 5. Co. 104. 2. Baker's case.

[h] 38. H. 8. Dyer 53. (Cro. Eliz. 752.)

Lib. 2.

Cap. 3.

Of Escuage.

Sect. 98.

[a] 13. H. 4. 5.

[b] 8. H. 3. Rot. Claus. & Rot. finium. memb. 30. & ante.

Staff. P. 14. E. 1. de banco.

F. N. B. 84.

Braft. lib. 2. 36. a.

F. N. B. 84.

Rot. Parl. 9. R. 2. nu. 40.

[a] and this was by the common law (1).

[b] No escuage was assessed by parliament since the reign of Edward the second, and in the eight years of his reign escuage was assessed (2).

If the tenant goeth with the king, and dyeth in exercitu, in the host or armie, he is excused by law, and no escuage shall be demanded.

And it is to be observed, that if he, that holds of the king by escuage, goeth, or findeth another to goe for him with the king, &c. then he shall have escuage of his tenants that hold of him by such service (3), which must be assessed by parliament.

But if the king's tenant goeth not with the king, then he shall pay for his default escuage, and shall have no escuage of his tenants (4). Richard the Second making a voyage royall into Scotland, at the petition of his commons pardoned the payment of escuage.

per luy mesme, ne per un auter pur luy ou le roy, paiera a son seignior, de que il tient la terre, per escuage. Sicome mittomus, que il fuit ordaine per autoritie de la parliament, que chescun, que tient per entiere fee de service de chivaler, que ne fuit ou le roy, payera a son seignior 40 s. donque celuy, que tient per moitie dun fee de chivaler, ne payera a son seignior forsque xx. s. et celui, que tient per la quart part de fee de chivaler, ne payera forsque x. s. et sic que plus, plus, et que meins, meins.

who was neither by himselfe, nor by any other, with the king, shall pay to his lord of whom he holds his land by escuage. As put the case, that it was ordained by the authoritie of the parliament, that every one, which holdeth by a whole knight's fee, who was not with the king, shall pay to his lord fortie shillings; then he, which holdeth by the moitie of a knight's fee, shall pay to his lord but twentie shillings, and he, which holdeth by the fourth part of a knight's fee, shall pay but x. s. and he, which hath more, more, and which lesse, lesse (5).

Sect. 98.

Vid. Sect. 120.

Ascuns teignent per custome, &c.

Nota, that escuage is directed by custome.

Mes auterment est de escuage certaine.

Here it appeareth, that escuage is twofold, viz. escuage incertaine, whereof Littl. here speaks; and escuage certain.

Quemadmodum incertitudo scutagii facit servitium militare, ita certitudo scu-

Et ascuns teignent per la custome (6), que si lescuage

courge per autoritie de parliament a ascun somme de money, que ils ne pairont forsque la moitie de ceo, et ascuns teignent que ils ne payeront forsque le quart part de ceo. Mes pur ceo que lescuage, que ils paieront, est non certain, pur ceo que nest certaine coment le parliament

AND some hold by the custome, that if escuage be assessed by authoritie of parliament at any summe of mony, that they shal pay but the moitie of that summe, and some but the fourth part of that summe. But because the escuage that they should pay is uncertaine, for that it is not certain how the parliament will asseffe the escuage, they hold by knights fer-

asseffera

(1) The Magna Charta of king John provides, that escuage shall not be imposed except by the consent of parliament; but some respectable writers think, that it was an arbitrary payment before. Blackit. Comment. 5th ed. v. 2. p. 74. Wright's Ten. 128. 133.

(2) See ante 69. b. note 3.

(3) Vid. claus. 26. H. 3. part 2. m. 10. dorf. Rex vicecomiti. Precipimus, quod de omnibus feodis militum, quæ tenentur de tenentibus de nobis in capite, qui brevia nostra non tulerint de habendo scutagio suo, et similiter de feodis militum quæ tenentur de wardis in manu nostra, scutagium nostrum colligi facias, ita quod habeas ad satisfaciendum, &c. Hal. MSS.

(4) According to Mr. Madox's account it seems, that the lord, though he did not go in person, or send a deputy, was intitled to escuage from his tenants, if he paid or was duly charged with escuage to the king; and perhaps lord Coke did not mean to intimate the contrary. Mad. Hist. Excheq. fol. ed. 469. See however note 4. infra.

(5) It seems, that if A held land of the king by 4 knights fees, and A before the statute of quia emptores had created diverse mesuagies and reserved 20 knights fees, and A had done the king's service, he should have had the escuage of 20 fees. But if A did not do the king's service, the king should have had the escuage of 4 fees and also of 20 fees or at least of 16. Vid. Rot. Parl. 8. m. 4. dorf. et lib. Parl. 14. E. 2. petitiones magnatum inde. Claus. 16. H. 3. m. 17. Rex vicecomiti Cornubiæ precepit, quod nullum distinguat nisi pro tot feodis, quod regi tenetur reddere. Hal. MSS.

(6) The words in L. and M. and Roh. are ascun tenantes teignent, and the words per la custome are omitted.

Winton, which commands, that every one shall be sworn to armor according to the value of their lands and goods, viz. from lands of 25 pounds and chattels of 40 marks, ad haubergellum capellum ferreum gladium cultellum et equum; from land of 10 l. and goods of 20 marks, ad haubergellum capellum ferreum gladium et cultellum, from land of 5 l. ad gladium cultellum et capellum ferreum; from asseffera lescuage, eux teignent per service de chivaler. Mes autrement est de lescuage certaine, de que ferra parle en le tenure de socage.

vice. But otherwise it is of escuage certain, of which shall be spoken in the tenure of socage.

tagii facit socagium. But more of this in the chapter of Socage, Sect. 120.

Per parliament. Of the antiquitie and authoritie of this court, see Sect. 164.

Sect. 99.

ET si home parle generalment descuage, il ferra entendue per le common parlance descuage noncertaine, que est service de chivaler. Et tiel escuage trait a luy homage, et homage trait a luy fealtie; car fealtie est incident a chescun manner de service forsque a le tenure en frankalmoigne, come ferra dit apres en le tenure de frankalmoigne. Et issint il, que tient per escuage, tient per homage fealtie et escuage.

AND if one speake generally of escuage, it shal be intended by the common speech of escuage incertaine, which is knights service. And such escuage draweth to it homage, and homage draweth to it fealtie; for fealtie is incident to every manner of service, unlesse it be to the tenure in frankalmoigne, as shal be said afterward in the tenure of frankalmoigne (1). And so he, which holdeth by escuage, holds by homage, fealty and escuage (2).

ET si home parle generalment descuage, il ferra intend per le common parlance descuage non certain.

Verba equivoca et in dubio posita intelliguntur in digniori et potentiori sensu. Tenure in capite ex vi termini is a tenure in grosse, and it may be holden of a subject; but being spoken generally, it is secundum excellentiam intended of the king, for he is caput reipublice.

Et tiel escuage trait a luy homage, et homage trait a luy fealtie; car fealtie est incident a chescun manner de service forsque a tenure en frankealmoigne.

(1. Inst. 485. 6. Co. 20. Post 78. b. 189. a. 381. b. 1. Sid. 265. 11. Co. 39. a.) Entendments en Ley Sect. 100. 110. 367. 377. 393. 406. 462. 463. 5. E. 2. Resceit 165. 20. H. 6. 23. 21. H. 6. 8. 37. H. 6. 29. 13. H. 4. 4. 6. El. Dyer 236. 10. E. 4. 11. 32. E. 3. Gard. 31.

Brit. sc. 163.

40. E. 3. 21. S. H. 7. 4.

Sect. 100.

This is gathered by the effects of their tenure, for essences are found out by properties, fountains by rivers, and causes by effects: for amongst others, the lords shall have escuage of their tenants, &c. as it followeth.

ET est ascavoir, que quant escuage est tielment asseffe per autoritie de parliament chescun seignior, de que le terre est tenu per escuage, avera lescuage issint asseffe per parliament; pur ceo que il est in-

AND it is to be understood, that when escuage is so asseffed by autoritie of parliament, everie lord, of whom the land is holden by escuage, shal have the escuage so asseffed by parliament; because it is intended by the law, that at

tendus

(1) See acc. Mad. Baron. Angl. 166.

(2) From this and the next preceding section it seems, that, notwithstanding Littleton's expressing himself in other places as if escuage was a distinct tenure or service, he did not consider it as such. Escuage must be either certain or uncertain, and Littleton expressly writes, that being the former it is socage, and being the latter it is knight's service. This tends to confirm the propriety of the observation by Mr. Madox, who will not allow escuage to be a tenure or service of itself, and insists, that, wherever it was payable, like homage and fealty, it was a mere incident to tenure. See note 2. of fol. 64. a. However a late learned judge was not satisfied with considering escuage in this limited way, and endeavours to shew, that though in general escuage uncertain

tain

from 40 s. to land of 5 l. ad gladium cultellum arcum et sagittas; et qui minus, juratur ad gisarmas cultellos et alia minuta arma; et qui minus habuerit quam viginti marcas bonorum, habeat gladios cultellos et alia minuta arma; et omnes alii arcum et sagittas; et in quolibet hundredo duo constabularii eligantur ad faciendum visum armorum. This assise was observed in the times of Edward the 1st and Edward the 2d. In 9 E. 2. the statute of Winton was put into execution sub poena forisfacturæ omnium bonorum et catallorum pro prima vice, et secunda vice sub poena captionis terrarum in manus regis et imprisonment corporum, and it was also commanded, quod citra festum, &c. in forma prædicta armati parati sint ad proficiendum cum rege versus Scotos cum victualibus necessariis pro quadraginta diebus, suorum et aliorum de partibus suis sumptibus providendis. Vid. Claus. 9. E. 2. m. 25. dorso. This assise received some change about the 8. of E. 3. and in Claus. 8. E. 3. m. 3. dorso there is the following precept. Proclamationem facias, quod omnes de balliva tua, qui habent quadraginta librata terræ vel redditus, licet milites non sunt, equitatura et armis competentibus iuxta statum suum, viz. unusquisque eorum pro se et altero ad minus; et omnes, qui habent viginti librata terræ, cum equitatura et armis pro seipsis ad minus, faciant sibi provideri: et illi, qui minus habent, assideantur juxta statutum Wintoniæ. But in progress of time the statute of Winton fell into disuse, and commissions issued to array men

Lib. 2. Cap. 3. Of Efcuage. Sect. 100, 101.

tendus per la ley, que al commence- ment tiels tenements fuerent dones per les seigniors a les tenants, de tener per tielx services a defendre lour seigniors, auxy bien come le roy, et mitter en quiet lour seigniors et le roy de les aforesaid. Scotcs avandits.

Sect. 101.

LES seigniors averont lescuage, &c.

This is evident.

Briefe le roy. This cometh of the Latine word Breve.

Fitzh. in his preface to his N. B. saith of them, that they be those foundations, whereupon the whole law doth depend.

[a] Bracton describeth a writ thus. Breve quidem, cum sit formatum ad similitudinem regule juris; quia breviter et paucis verbis intentionem proferentis exponit, et explanat, sicut regula juris rom, quæ est, breviter enarrat. Non tamen ita breve esse debeat, quin rationem et vim intentionis contineat.

Of writs some be original, brevia originalia, and some be judicall, brevia judicialia.

Also of originals, quædam sunt formata sub suis casibus et de cursu, et de communi consilio totius regni concessa et approbata, quæ quidem nullatenus mutari poterint absque consensu et voluntate eorum; et quædam sunt magistralia, et sæpe variantur secundum varietatem casuum, factorum et querelarum, as for example actions upon the case, which varie according to the varietie of everie man's case, and the like; and these being not of course, the matters being learned men did make. Item brevium originalium alia sunt realia, alia personalia, alia mixta. Item brevium originalium, alia sunt patentia seu aperta, et alia clausa. Certaine it is, that the originall writs are so artificially and briefly compiled, as there is nothing redundant or wanting in them, of which an honourable secretary of state once said, that it was not possible to comprehend so much matter so perspicuously in fewer words. Of all these kinds of writs you shal read plentifully in the Register, whereof Littleton maketh mention in this place, and also in Fitz. N. B.

Sicome appiert per le register. Register, is the name of a most antient booke and of great authoritie in law, containing all the originall writs of the common law; of which booke see more in the preface to the ninth part of my Reports, and containeth also brevia judicialia, quæ sæpius variantur secundum varietatem placitorum proponentis et respondentis (1).

Also it appeareth by the Register, that the king shal have escuage of his tenants, which hold of him as of a manor which he hath in ward (2), or by reason of a vacation of a bishopricke.

And so shall a common person, if he hath an estate for life or for yeares of a seigniory.

Sect.

F. N. B. 84. Register. 88. de Scutagio habendo.

[a] Bracton lib. 5. fol. 413. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 12. Britton ubi fol. 122. 227. (1. Sid. 187.)

(7. Co. 4. a. 4. Inst. 10.)

(Plowd. 228. a. 4. Inst. 73.) Bracton ubi supra. Britton ubi supra. Regist. 88. F. N. B. 84.

F. N. B. 84.

tain was a fine or sum of money payable as a commutation for personal service, yet antiently a payment in money, bearing a certain proportion to the escuage assessed from time to time on tenants by knights service, and on that account called escuage, was sometimes a service originally reserved, and then escuage was itself the tenure and so denominated to distinguish it from the genuine and proper tenure by knights service. See Wright's Ten. 121. to 127. But this distinction, it is allowed, is not hinted at by Littleton, and it is even conjectured, that in his time it might be lost in the general notion of escuage, to which only Mr. Madox meant to apply his animadversion on Littleton and Coke for considering it as a tenure. See further 2. Blackst. Comm. 5th ed. 75.

(1) See further as to the Register of Writs, Nicholf. Engl. Histor. Libr. 2d ed. 205.

(2) See ante 72. b. note 3.

juxta status sui exigentiam et facultates. Vid. Claus. 43. E. 3. m. 24. et sæpiissime. This commission was afterwards regulated and confirmed in parliament. Rot. Parl. 5. H. 4. n. 24. And now the statute of Winton is repealed by the 21. Jam. chap. 28. But this doth not relate to military service, and is only a certain military provision for the peace of the kingdom, and concerned burgeses and sokemen as well as tenants by knight's service. And according to this difference, the commission of array extended both to tenants by knight's service and others; but the writ, which is called summonitio servitii, respected tenants by knight's service only. And as to this latter, 1. It is to be observed, that the service was estimated by the number of fees; and so he, who held per baroniam vel comitatum, was attendant only according to the number of knight's fees, by which the barony or earldom was held, as clearly appears in Selden's Titles of Honor,

Sect. 102.

ITEM en tiel case avandit, lou le roy face un voyage royall en Escocce⁽¹⁾, et lescUAGE est assesse per parliament, si le seig-nior distreine son tenant, que tient de luy per service dentier fee de chivaler, pur lescuage issint assesse, &c.
et le tenant plede, et voit averrer, que il fuit ou le roy en E-scoce, &c. per xl.
jours, et le seignior voit averrer le contrarie, il est dit, que il ferra trie per le certi-ficat del marshall del host le roy⁽²⁾ en escript sout son seale que, serra mis a les justices.

ITEM, in such case aforesaid, where the king maketh a voyage
royall into Scotland, and the escuage is assessed by parliament, if the lord distraine his tenant, that holdeth of him by service of a whole knight's fee, for the escuage so assessed, &c. and the tenant
pleadeth, and will aver, that he was with the king in Scotland, &c.
by 40 dayes, and the lord will averre the contrary, it is sayd, that it shall be tryed by the certificat of the marshall of the king's host in writing under his seale, which shall be sent to the justices.

ET voit averrer, que il fuit ove le roy en Escocce per 40
jours, &c. [a] il est dit, que il ferra trie per le certificat del marshall.

This is a tryall appointed by the law, ne curia regis deficeret in justitia exhibenda. [b] Herewith agreeth the Register, where the marshall is called constabularius exercitus nostri.

Marshall de hoste le roy. Marescallus exercitus, in Saxon Marischalk. i. equi-tum magister. This word Marshall is either derived of Mars, or of Marc an horse, and schalc, which signifieth in the Saxon tongue, a master or governor. [c] In the lawes before the conquest it is said,
Marescalli exercitus seu ductores exercitus Heretoches per Anglos vocabantur. Illi ordinabant acies densissimas in præliis et alas constituebant, prout decui, et prout ei melius visum fuerit ad honorem coronæ et ad utilitatem regni. [d] And here it is to be observed, that his

(6. Co. 21.)
[a] 2. E. 4. 11. 4. E. 4. 10. 21.
E. 4. 10. F. N. B. 85. 11. H.
7. 5. 9. Co. 32. Cate de Strat.
Marc.

[b] Regist. 88. F. N. B. 84. 2.
E. 4. 1. 4. E. 4. 10. 9. H. 4.
3. 11. H. 7. 5. 21. H. 6. 50.
33. H. 6. 1. 45.

[c] Lomb. fo. 136.

[d] 2. E. 4. 1. b. 4. E. 4. 10.
23. E. 4. 47. F. N. B. 85. (2.
Inst. 428. Post 261. a.)

[e] 4. E. 4. 10.

[f] 5. E. 4. 37. 21. E. 4. 16.
(2. Ro. Ab. 579.)
[g] 10. H. 6. 10. (Fortesc. cap.
32.)

(12. Co. 67.)

(4. Inst. 124.)

Stat. de 1. H. 4. cap. 14. 23. H.
4. fol. 5. Vid Rot. Parliam. 3.
H. 6. nu. 38. Stanf. pl. Cor. fo.
65.

certificate in this case is a triall in law. I read of fixe kinds of certificates allowed for trials by the common law; the first whereof Littleton here speaketh of, in time of warre out of the realme. 2. In time of peace out of the realme. [c] As if it be alledged in avoy-dance of an outlawrie, that the defendant was in prison at Burdeaux in the service of the maior of Burdeaux, it shall be tryed by the certificate of the maior of Burdeaux. 3. For matters within the realme, [f] the custome of London shall be certified by the maior and aldermen by the mouth of the recorder. 4. By certificate of the sherife upon a writ to him directed [g] in case of priviledge, if one be a citizen or a forreiner. 5. Tryall of records by certificate of the judges in whose custody they are by law. All these be in temporall causes. 6. In causes ecclesiasticall, as loyalty of marriage, generall bastardie, excommencement, profession. These and the like are regularly to be tryed by the certificate of the ordinarie.

And there be divers other trialls allowed by the common law, then by a jury of 12 men, which you may reade at large in the ninth booke of my Reports, fol. 30, 31, &c. in the case of the abbot of Strata Marcella, which are as plainly set downe there, as they can be here. And in this case, if the triall should not be by certificate, it should want triall, which should be inconvenient. Onely in this place I will adde something of a forreine triall which I finde not in any of the treatises lately published against single combats; because it may de-terre men from that ungodly and unlawfull kinde of revenge, whereupon many murders have ensued, and prevent all hope of impunity for default of triall in that case.

If a subject of the king be killed by another of his subjects out of England in any forreine country, the wife or he that is heire of the dead may have an appeale for this murder or homicide before the constable and the marshall, whose sentence is upon testimony of witnesss or combate. And accordingly, where a subject of the king was slaine in Scotland

(1) It is very clear, that escuage was due for service out of the realm, which was the reason of its being called servitium fo-rinsicum; but I do not find it precisely ascertained by any writer, whether it could be claimed on all foreign expeditions, or whether it was confined to expeditions into particular countries. When indeed on the creation of the tenure the personal service, in lieu of which escuage became payable, was expressly limited to certain places, there could be no room for doubt; but the difficulty is to know, what the construction of law was, when knights service was reserved generally. Littleton mentions only Scotland, other writers add Wales; but in general both are named merely as instances. Lord Coke observes as much, and says, that escuage was also due on expeditions into Ireland, Gascony, Poictou, &c. if the tenure was to go into those countries: but there is a shortness in this manner of expression, which leaves an obscurity; for the words do not explain what the rule of law was, when no place was named. See ante fol. 69. a. One ancient author absolutely restrains escuage to Scotland and Wales, and in direct terms excludes all other territories. Old Ten. tit. Escuage. But of this restriction it is sufficient to say, that the records concerning escuage, which mention Ireland, Normandy, Poictou, Bretagne and Thoulouse, as well as Scotland and Wales, are full evidence to the contrary. See the records cited by lord Hale in note 3. of fol. 69. b. and also Seld. Notes on Hengham, 12mo. ed. 114.

(2) In L. and M. the words are constable de la hoste le roy.

(3) In L. and M. there is an &c. after seal and the words que sera mis a les justices are omitted.

(4) See further as to trial by certificate Com. Dig. tit. Certificate and title Trial in Viner and the other Abridgments.

Honor, part 2. chap. 5. sect. 26. where it is mentioned, that the barony de veteri ponte was holden by 5 knights fees, and that Clifford, who had married one of the coheirs, acknowledged the service of two knights and an half. 2. On summons of the army on service at a place and day certain, every knight by himself or his deputy came before the constable and marshall, and presented the number of his fees and the persons by whom they were to be performed and their names which were registered before them. 3. He, who held by a whole knight's

[*] Anno 25. Eliz.
(Post 261. Hutt. 3.)

land by others of the king's subjects, the wife of the dead had her appeale therefore before the constable and the marshall. And so it was [*] resolved in the raigne of queen Elizabeth in the case of Sir Francis Drake, who strook off the head of Dorvte in partibus transmarinis, that his brother and heire might have an appeale. Sed regina noluit constituere constabularium Anglie, &c. et ideo dormivit appellum.

If a man be mortally wounded in France, and dyeth thereof in England, it is said that an appeale doth lie upon the said statute; for it is not punishable by the common law, and the proceeding there (as hath bene said) is upon witness or combate, and not by jurie, and the mortal wound was given out of the realme (1).

CHAP. 4. Sect. 103.

Knights service.

(6 Co. 73. b.)

[a] Glanv. l. lib. 7. cap. 10.

[b] Regist. 2. 30. E. 3. 24.

[c] Glanvil. lib. 7. cap. 14.

[d] Glanvil. lib. 7. c. 9. &c.
Fleta lib. 1. cap. 8. Bracton lib.
2. fol. 35. Britton fol. 162. &
fol. 28. & 95. Ockam in diverfis locis. Mirror cap. 1. sect. 3.
Sud. Diton.

[e] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 36. 37.
Britton fol. 164. 165. Fleta lib.
3. cap. 14. 19. E. 2. Avowry
224. 26. Aff. 65. 31. Aff. 30.
30. E. 3. 23. S. E. 3. 67. 7. H.
4. 19.

(Ante 68. b.)

SERVICE de chivaler: Nota, it appeareth by [a] the Register, that it is [b] said unum feodum militis, and not feodum unius militis, as it was said, [c] by some of old, and so duo feoda militis, &c. and sometime these fees are called feoda militaria [d]. Our author, having before treated of homage fealty and escuage, now cometh to knight service itselfe. In Domesday it is thus recorded, episcopus Baieccensis, ille qui tenet de Modardo, reddit ei 50s. et servitium unius militis.

Chivaler, .i. eques, knight is a Saxon word, and by them written cnite. Chivaler taketh his name from the horse; because they alwayes served in warres on horseback. The Latines called them equites, the Spaniards cavalleros, the Frenchmen chevaliers, the Italians cavallieri, and the Germans reiters, all from the horse. It is necessary to be seene by what names this service of a knight is called. It is called [e] Servitium forinsecum, quia pertinet ad dominum regem et non ad capitalem dominum, nisi cum in propria persona profectus fuerit in servitio; et nisi cum pro servitio suo satisfecerit domino regi, &c. Ideo forinsecum dici potest, quia fit et capitur foris, sive extra servitium quod fit

TENURE per homage fealty et escuage est a tener per service de chivaler, et trait a luy gard mariage et relief. Car quant tiel tenant morust, et son heire male est deins lage de 21 ans, le seignior avera la terre tenus de luy tanque al age del heire de 21 ans; le quel est appel pleine age, pur ceo que tiel home, per entendement del ley, nest pas able de faire tiel service de chivaler devant lage de 21 ans. Et auxy si tiel heire ne soit marie al temps de mort de tiel auncester, dunque le seignior avera le garde et le mariage de luy. Mes si tiel tenant devie, son heire female esteant dage de 14 ans ou de plus, dunque le seignior

TENURE by homage fealty and escuage is to hold by knights service, and it draweth to it ward, marriage and reliefe. For when such tenant dyeth, and his heire male be within the age of 21 yeares, the lord shall have the land holden of him untill the age of the heire of 21 yeares; the which is called full age, because such heire by intendment of the law is not able to doe such knight's service before his age of 21 yeares. And also if such heire be not married at the time of the death of his ancestor, then the lord shall have the wardship and marriage of him. But if such tenant dieth, his heire female being of the age of 14 yeares or more, then the lord na-

(1) The office of high constable became extinct in the reign of Henry the eighth by the attainder of Stafford duke of Buckingham, in whom it was hereditary; and since his death there hath not been any permanent high constable, the practice having uniformly been to keep the office vacant except on particular occasions. In consequence of this it hath frequently been a subject of great controversy, whether during the vacancy of the office of high constable the jurisdiction incident to the court of chivalry can be exercised by the earl marshal only. Lord Coke's manner of stating Sir Francis Drake's case imports, that an appeal could not be prosecuted against him for want of a high constable, and Dr. Duck, in his excellent treatise on the use and authority of the civil law says, that the judges being consulted by Elizabeth were of that opinion. Duck lib. 2. cap. 8. pars 3. f. 16. In the reign of Charles the first the lord keeper and judges of the King's Bench were advised with on a like occasion, and held that the earl marshal could not take an appeal without a high constable; and accordingly the king appointed the earl of Lyndsey twice to the office, once to try an appeal by lord Rea against Mr. Ramsey for treason committed in Germany, and a second time to try an appeal by the widow of William Wise against William Holmes for the murder of her husband in the island of Terra nova in America. See Rushw. vol. 2. p. 106. 112. and Duck ubi supra. Hitherto only the right of the earl marshal to criminal judicature had been denied; but in 1640 the house of commons went further, for they resolved that the earl marshal can make no court without the constable. See Rushw. vol. 3. page 1056. However notwithstanding this declaration of the law by the house of commons, the court of king's bench soon after the restoration distinguished between the several branches of jurisdiction belonging to the court of chivalry, and held, that as to matters relative to arms and honor the court may be before the earl marshal only, but that as to matters of ordinary justice touching life and limb there must be a high constable as well as an earl marshal. 1. Lev. 230. But in a subsequent case before the house of lords, the counsel

knight's fee ought to perform his service by one knight, or by himself in person, or per duos servientes five armigeros, who in value are equal to a knight. Seld. ubi supra. So he, who held by the moiety of a knight's fee, might perform all the service either 40 days per servientem navera my le garde del terre, ne de corps; pur ceo que feme de tiel age poit aver baron able de faire service de chivaler. Mes si tiel heire female soit deins lage de 14 ans, et nient marie al temps de la mort son auncester, donque le seignior avera le garde de la terre tenus de luy, tanque al age de tiel heire female de 16 ans, pur ceo que il est done per le statute de Westm. 1. cap. 22. que per 2 ans prochein ensuant les dits 14 ans, le seignior poit tender convenable mariage sans disparagement a tiel heire female. Et si le seignior deins les dits 2 ans ne luy tender tiel mariage, &c. donque el al fine des dits 2 ans poit enter et ouste son seignior. Mes si tiel heire female soy marie deins lage de 14 ans en la vie son auncester, et son auncester devy, el esteant deins lage de 14 ans, le seignior navera forsque la garde de la terre jesses a fine de 14 ans dage de tiel heire female, et donque shall not have the wardship of the land, nor of the bodie; because that a woman of such age may have a husband able to doe knights service. But if such heire female be within the age of 14 yeares, and unmarried at the time of the death of her ancestors, the lord shal have the wardship of the land holden of him until the age of such heire female of 16 yeares. For it is given by the statute of W. 1. cap. 22. that by the space of two yeares next ensuing the sayd 14 yeares, the lord may tender convenable marriage without disparagement to such heir female. And if the lord within the said two yeares do not tender such marriage, &c. then she at the end of the said 2 yeeres may enter, and put out her lord. But if such heire female be married within the age of 14 yeeres in the life of her auncester, and her auncester dieth, she being within the age of 14 yeeres, the lord shall have only the wardship of the land untill the end of the 14 yeares of age of such domino capitali. And it is called scutagium, as it appeareth [f] by Littleton and many authorities before recited; sometime droit de espec. Also it is called [g] regale servitium, quia specialiter pertinet ad dominum regem. Ut si dicatur in carta, faciendo inde forinsecum servitium, vel regale servitium, vel servitium domini regis, quod idem est, &c. And another saith: Et sunt quedam servitia forinsecum, que dici poterunt regalia, que ad scutum prestantur; et inde habemus scutagium, et ratione scuti pro feodo militari reputatur, &c. So as in respect of him that doth it, it is called servitium militis; but in respect of him for and to whom it is done, viz. to the king, and for the realme, it is called servitium regale, or servitium domini regis, &c. [b] In ancient time they which held by knights service were called milites, qui per loricas, &c. defendunt et deservunt, &c. and sometime this service is called servitium bauberticum. And in ancient time, such as held by knights service for the defence of the realme had many privileges granted to them by law: as for example they might have a writ de effend' quiet' de tallagio, the effect whereof was [i] Si Tho. filius Ranulphi terram suam teneat per servitium militare, sicut domino regi monstravit, tunc nullum ab eodem Tho. capiant tallagium, nec pro eo dando ipsum distringant, vel homines suos qui per consimile servitium teneant. And this agreeth with the ancient charter of king Henry the 1. before mentioned, which he made on the day of his coronation for the restitution of the ancient lawes. [k] Militibus, qui per loricas terras suas defendunt et deservunt, terras dominicarum carucat' suarum quietas ab omnibus gildis, et omni opere, &c. concedo: and the reason thereof is there yielded, Sicut tam magno gravamine allevati sint

[f] Bracton ubi supra. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 14.

[g] Britton fol. 187. Bracton ubi supra.

[b] Carta Hen. prim. Mat. Paris. Mirror. cap. 2. lect. 17.

[i] Rot. Claus. 19. H. 3. m. 23.

[k] Carta H. 1. in libro rub. fol. 41. in scaccario.

fel arguing against the earl marshal insisted generally, that by himself he could not hold any court; though it doth not appear from the printed report whether the judgment, which was there given against the jurisdiction of the earl marshal, was founded on that proposition, or on the other points of the cause. Such is the state of the authorities against the judicature of the earl marshal without a high constable. See Dr. Oldis's case. Show. Parliam. Cas. 58. On the other hand many strong arguments, drawn from the practice immediately after the attainder of the last hereditary high constable down to the latter end of the reign of James the first, as well as from the opinions of judges and others of high name, have been urged in its favour. These are well digested in a letter written soon after the revolution by Dr. Plott to lord Somers whilst he was attorney-general, and appear to have been collected by his desire. See Hearn. Disc. of Emin. Antiqu. 2d. ed. vol. 2. p. 250. One authority much relied on by Dr. Plott is an opinion of the lord keeper the master of the rolls and a great number of the privy council in the 20th of James the first, who after a solemn hearing declared, that the earl marshal had all the powers of judicature without the high constable during the vacancy of that office. Upon report of this to the king, he issued his commission under the great seal to Thomas earl of Arundel the then earl marshal, which, after reciting that the earl marshal had delayed to proceed in some causes before him on account of doubts of his authority, contains the following strong declaration of his judicial power. We held it fit, says the king, in a case of so great weight to proceed with extraordinary deliberation, and having now both by ourselves and the whole body of our council received ample satisfaction by many and clear proofs, that the constable and marshal were joint judges together, and several in the vacancy of either, we do hereby authorize will and command you our earl marshal, that from henceforth you proceed in all causes whatsoever, whereof the court of constable ought properly to take cognisance, as judicially and definitively as any constable or marshal of this realm, either jointly or severally, heretofore have done. A more explicit recognition of the earl marshal's jurisdiction could not be penned, nor one more full and unreserved; for it declares his judicial power to extend to all causes whatsoever of which the court of the constable and marshal ought properly to take cognisance, without one exception. How it happened, that so soon after this solemn hearing and declaration concerning the earl marshal, the lord keeper and judges of the King's Bench should advise the king that lord Rea's appeal could not be taken without a high constable, seems very extraordinary and unaccountable. To attribute their advice to that jealousy of jurisdictions conforming so much to the civil law, which our judges of the courts of common law sometimes may have indulged to an illiberal excess, would be unjust; because we are not now possessed of the reasons assigned for the opinion thus given to the crown: and on the other hand, the same want of information greatly lessens its weight and authority. Having thus exhibited a view of the controversy about the earl marshal's judicial powers, it may be proper to apprise the reader, that there is not the least intention of advancing any opinion in respect to it, further than by observing upon the distinction between the cases of honor and arms and those of life and limb, so far as it is founded on the 1. H. 4. c. 14. Though that statute provides, that all appeals to be made of things done out of the realm shall be tried and determined before the constable and marshal, yet it is apparent from the other parts of the same statute, that it was made, not to declare or regulate by whom the judicature of the court of chivalry should be exercised, but when vientem or 20 days per seipsum vel militem. And so it was done by the abbot of Saint Alban, who held six knights fees of the king and sint, ita equis et armis se bene instruant, ut apti et parati sint ad servitium meum, et defensionem regni mei. But these privileges and quittances are discontinued, and the charge remaineth.

[1] Glanvil lib. 7. ca. 9. 10. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 8. & 9. & lib. 3. cap. 16. 17. &c. Bracton lib. 2. cap. 16. Mirror cap. 5. text. 2. Britton 162. (4. Inst. 192.)

It is called commonly in [1] our bookes servitium militare, &c. or servitium militis. And this service was created and provided for the defence of the realme, to performe which service the heires are not accounted in law able till the age of one and twenty yeares. Therefore during their minority, the lord shal have the custody of them, not for benefit onely, but that the lord might see, that they be in their yong yeares taught the deeds of chivalry, and other vertuous and worthy sciences.

[m] Fortescue cap 44.

[m] Si hereditas teneatur per servitium militare, tunc per leges infans ipse, et hereditas ejus, &c. per dominum feodi illius custodientur, &c. Quis putas, infantem talem in artibus bellicis, quos facere ratione tenuræ suæ ipse asstringitur domino feodi sui, melius instruere poterit, aut velit, quam dominus ille, cui ab eo servitium tale debetur, et qui majoris potentie et honoris asstimatur, quam sunt alii amici propinqui tenentis sui? Ipse namque, ut sibi ab eodem tenente melius serviatur, diligentem curam adhibebit, et melius in hiis eum erudire expertus esse censetur quam reliqui amici juvenis, &c. et revera non minimum erit regno accommodum, ut incolæ ejus in armis fiat experti, nam audacter quilibet facit, quod se scire ipse non diffidit.

[n] Lamb. fol. 135. a.

[n] Amongst the lawes of Saint Edward the Confessor, it is thus provided, Debent enim universi liberi homines, &c. secundum feodum suum, et secundum tenementa sua arma habere, et illa semper prompta conservare ad tuitionem regni, et servitium dominorum suorum juxta preceptum domini regis explendum et peragendum. And William the Conqueror confirmed that law in these words; Statuimus et firmiter precipimus, ut omnes comites, et barones, et milites, et servientes, et universi liberi homines totius regni son baron et luy poient enter en la terre et ouste le seignior. Car ceo est hors de cas de le dit estatute, entant que le seignior ne poit tender mariage a luy que est marie, &c. Car devant le dit estatute Westm. 1. tiel issue female, que fuit deins age de 14 ans, al temps de mort son auncesser, et puis que el avoit accomplish lage de 14 ans, sans ascun tender de mariage per le seignior a luy, tiel heire female donque puisset enter en le terre et ouste le seignior, sicome appiert per le rehersall et parolx de le dit statute; issint que le dit statute fuit fait en tiel cas tout pur ladvantage de seigniors, come il semble. Mes uncore ceo tous foits est entendue per les parolx de meme le statute, que le seignior naverá les deux ans apres les 14 ans, come est avantdit, mes lou tiel heire female soit deins lage de 14 ans nient marie al temps de mort son auncesser.

heire female, and then her husband and she may enter into the land, and oust the lord. For this is out of the case of the said statute, inso-much as the lord cannot tender marriage to her which is married, &c. For before the said statute of W. 1. such issue female, which was within the age of 14 yeares at the time of the death of her ancestor, and after she had accomplished the age of 14 yeares, without any tender of marriage by the lord unto her, such heire female might have entred into the land and ousted the lord, as appeareth by the rehearsall and words of the said statute; so as the said statute was made (as it seemeth) in such case altogether for the advantage of lords. But yet this is alwayes intended by the words of the same statute, that the lord shal not have these two years after the 14 yeares as is aforesaid, but where such heire female is within the age of 14 yeares, and unmarried at the time of the death of her ancestor (1).

when appeals should be brought there and when in the courts of common law, and further to put an end to the bringing appeals in parliament; and therefore it seems wholly unwarrantable to lay any stress on the statute's incidentally mentioning constable as well as marshal, who as all agree are joint judges, when both offices are full. As to the mode of trial in the case of appeals in the court of chivalry, some have apprehended, that it is ever by duel, if the party appealed elects that mode, and the appellant is not privileged from the duel by age sex or profession. But this, though it may be very true in respect to appeals in the courts of common law, is a mistaken notion as to appeals in the court military; for there duel is only the ultimate trial, and never resorted to unless there is a want of sufficient testimony to prove the offence, and even then it is said to be in the discretion of the court to grant or refuse the duel. See Rushw. v. 3. p. 113. In lord Rea's appeal against Ramsey in the 7. Cha. 1. being the last in which the duel was directed, the day of combat was prorogued; and in the mean time the king signifying his desire of not having the affair decided by duel, the court met and committed both the appellant and appellee till they should give security to the satisfaction of the king not to attempt any thing against each other, and immediately afterwards was dissolved by a revocation of the commission which had been granted for trial of the appeal. Rushw. v. 3. p. 127.—Before we leave this subject, it may not be amiss to hint the necessity of having the criminal jurisdiction of the court of chivalry, which is really of importance, duly regulated and reformed. From the preceding account it appears to be doubtful who can lawfully act as the judges, and besides the want of a trial by jury may be deemed a reasonable objection to the form of proceeding; and in consequence of these two circumstances the criminal jurisdiction of the court of chivalry hath long been in a dormant state, and is likely to continue in it, unless the legislature applies a remedy. This it would be easy to effect; for nothing more would be necessary, than to ascertain who should constitute the court in cases of appeals, to abolish the present mode of trial, and to substitute in its room the trial by jury on a plan like that, which has already been adopted by statute in respect to the criminal jurisdiction of the admiralty court. However it must not be taken for granted, that this court is the only jurisdiction for the trial of crimes committed in foreign countries; or that without resorting to it, there would be an absolute defect of justice in the case of all such crimes. For 1. the 33. of Hen. 8. c. 23. provides, that treason misprision of treason and murder, in whatever place committed, whether within the king's dominions or without, shall be triable before commissioners of oyer and terminer to be appointed for that purpose; and this statute, we are told, stands unrepealed as to murder, and hath accordingly been sometimes put into use. 2. As to treasons and misprisions of treason committed out of the realm, they by the 35. H. 8. c. 2. are triable either before the king's bench or commissioners. See 1. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 283. It is also provided by the 26. of H. 8. c. 13. that the crimes made treason under that statute or being so before, if committed out of the realm, shall be indictable before commissioners and tried in the king's bench; but it is doubtful whether this statute is now in force. See farther as to the high constable and earl marshal Post 106. a. and 391. b.—Note as to escuage, it is expressly taken away by the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. and had fallen into disuse long before; for there is no instance of parliament's assessing it since the reign of Edw. 2. See ante 72. b.

(1) In L. and M. and the Pap. MS. there is the following. Item si un home tient un maner de un auter per serwyce de chivaler, performed the service per duos milites galeatos et lege militari decenter armatos et ceto armigeros, four of whom were equites cum

regni nostri prædicti habeant et teneant se semper in armis et in equis ut decet, et oportet, et quod sint semper prompti et parati ad servitium suum integrum nobis explendum et peragendum, cum semper opus adfuerit, secundum quod nobis debent de feodis et tenementis suis de jure facere, &c.

Out of these two lawes the studious and learned reader will gather divers notable things. And therefore if after the lord hath the wardship of the body and the land, the lord doth release to the infant his right in the seigniorie, or the seigniorie descendeth to the infant, he shall be out of ward both for the body and the land; for he was in ward in respect he was not able to doe those services which he ought to doe to his lord, which now are extinct, and cessante causa cessat causatum. And our author saith, that the tenure by knights service draweth unto it ward, marriage, &c. so as there must be a tenure continuing. As if the consor in a statute merchant be in execution, and his land also, and the consor release to him all debts, this shall discharge the execution; for the debt was the cause of the execution, and of the continuance of it till the debt be satisfied, therefore the discharge of the debt which is the cause, dischargeth the execution which is the effect.

Et trait a luy gard, mariage, et reliefe. So as regularly there be fixe incidents to knights service, (viz.) two of honour and submission, as Homage and Fealtie. And foure of profit, viz. Esuage, whereof he hath treated before, Ward (i. wardship of the land) Mariage and Reliefe; of all which our author hath spoken. But there be other incidents to knights service besides these; [a] as Aide pur faire fits chevalier, et aide pur file marier, &c. which at the common law were uncertaine, and were called rationabilia auxilia, because if they were excessive and unreasonable in the judgement of the court where they were questioned, they ought not to be paid: but now as well in the king's case, as in the case of the subject, they are by acts of parliament reduced to certaintie, which are worthy your reading (1).

Gard, or Ward, in Latine custodia, and hereof the lord is called gardian, custos, and the minor is called a ward or one in ward. [b] And albeit (as our author saith) knight service draweth with it ward, &c. yet by custome the heire of him, that holdeth in socage, may be in ward.

Marriage. Maritajum betokeneth, not onely the copulation of man and wife in marriage, but also (as in this place here) the interest of the gardian in bestowing of a ward in marriage, which the law gave to the lord, not for his benefit onely, but that he should match him virtuously and in a good family without disparagement, as shall be said hereafter, which is the principall foundation of his estate.

[c] Reliefe. Relevium is derived from the Latine word relevare; for so [d] ancient authors say, and give this reason, Quia hæreditas, quæ jacens fuit per antecessoris decessum, relevatur in manus hæredum, et propter factam relevationem facienda erit ab hærede quædam præstatio, quæ dicitur relevium. And in Domesday it is called relevamentum and relevatio.

The reliefe of a whole knight's fee is five pound, and so according to that rate. And this reliefe was as some hold certaine by the common law; * but the reliefe of earles and barons were uncertaine, and therefore were called relevia rationabilia; but the statute of Magna Charta, cap. 2. limits them in certaine, and mentioneth also a knight's fee. But I reade in the book of Domesday, Quod Tainus vel miles regis dominicus moriens pro relevamento dimittebat regi omnia arma sua, et equum unum cum sella et alium sine sella; quod si essent ei canes vel accipitres, præstabantur regi, ut si vellet acciperet.

Since Littleton wrote [e] there is a good law made against fraudulent feoffements, gifts, grants, &c. contrived of fraud to hinder or defraud lords, &c. of their relieves and heriots amongst other things, for the exposition of which statute reade the authorities quoted in the margin. And it is to be observed, that the words of the said act of 13. Eliz. are, (be it therefore declared, ordained, and enacted) and therefore like cases, and infemlable mischief shall be taken within the remedie of this act by reason of this word (declared), whereby it appeareth what the law was before the making of this statute (2).

Son heire male. [f] For regularly by the common law the heire shall not be in ward, unlesse he claime as heire by descent. The statute of Merton, de hiis qui primogenitos feoffare solent, [g] did helpe feoffments by collusion in certaine cases. And Britton saith, that Robert de Walrand a sage of the law did advise the great lords of the realme to make the said statute, which when it was past, the same act tooke his first effect in the heire of Walrand's owne heire, whereof Britton maketh a speciall remembrance. But now [h] by the statutes of 32. and 34. H. 8. of wills, he which holdeth lands by knights service may by act executed in his life time, or by his last will in writing, dispose two parts as by the said acts appeareth. If he dispose all by act executed, then it shall stand good against the heire, et il tient un auter maner de un auter home per un tiel serwayce, meiz il tient lun maner per priorite, &c. et l'auter maner per posteriorite, et ady issue file, et devue, et les maners descendent al file adonques esleant deinz lage de 14 auns, et le seignour de que un dez maners est tenu per priorite seist le garde del corps del heire et de le maner tenuz de luy, et l'auter seignour seist le garde del auter maner tenuz de luy, en cest case quant la file vient al age de 14 auns, ele entrera en le maner tenuz per posteriorite coment que ele soit adonques desmarie. Par les parols de meme lestatute de Westminster premier sont en tiel forme que ensuyv. Les heires femels, puis que eles ayront complie age de 14 auns, et le seignour, a qui le mariage appent, celes ne voudra marier, meiz per coventise de la terre celes voudra tener dismariez, purveu est que le seignour ne puisse aver ne tener per encheson de le mariage les terres de celes heires femels outre deux auns apres le terme dez avantdiz 14 auns, &c. per queux parols, il post estre prove, que apres les 14 auns null doit aver les terres en tiel case, &c. forsque celui, a qui le mariage appent, &c. et pur ceo que tiell maraige nappent a celui, de qui la terre est tenu per posteriorite, &c. tiell heir femel, quant ele vient al age de 14 auns, poet bien entre en tiel terre, quo issint est tenu per posteriorite, &c. — See 35. H. 6. 52.

(1) The aids pur faire fits chevalier et pur file marier are expressly abolished by the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. — They were incident to socage as well as knights service. 2. Inst. 233. See further as to aids Wright's Ten. 40. 145. and 2. Blackst. Comment. 63.

(2) See a note on the subject of relief, Post 83. a.

complines et ferreis armis muniti, and two were ballistarii; and they were presented to the constable and marshal, and in constabulariis positi, that is, listed in their severall companies. And note, that ni milites et servientes were at their own proper expences in going,

See W. 1. cap. 48. The second part of the Institutes. (6. Co. 22. Post 248.)

20. Aff. p. 7. (2. Ro. Ab. 404. Doc. Pla. 106.)

[a] Grand. Cust. de Norm. cap. 35. Regist. orig. fo. 87. Glanvil lib. 9. ca. 8. 35. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 40. & lib. 3. ca. 14. Mirror ca. 1. sect. 3. Britton fo. 55. & 70. F. N. B. 82. b. W. 1. ca. 35. 25. E. 3. ca. 11. 11. H. 4. 34. 5 E. 3. 11. Vide sect. 110. [b] S. H. 3. Precept. 38. Pasch. 21. E. 1. Coram rege Rot. 43. Nota pro Hibernia Prior del St. Trinitie de Dublin's case.

[c] Vid. Sect. 112. [d] Bracton lib. 2. ca. 36. fol. 84. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 10. & lib. 3. ca. 16. 17. Britt. ca. 69. 70. Glanvil lib. 9. ca. 4. & lib. 7. ca. 9. Ockam de differentiis releviorum. (Ante 69. b. Post 83. a.) [e] Ockam ubi supra. Bracton lib. 2. fo. 85.

[f] 13. Eliz. ca. 5. 17. E. 3. Reliefe 3. 7. E. 3. ib. 11. 3. Co. 80. &c. Twine's case. 5. Co. 60. Gooche's case. 6. Co. 18. Pakeman's case. 10. Co. 56. b. See also the statutes of 3. H. 7. c. 4. & 50. E. 3. ca. 6. Vide Mich. 12. & 13. Eliz. Dier 295.

[g] Britton 168. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 9. [h] Merton ca. 6. (11. Rep. 23.) Bract. fo. 85. Brit. fo. 65. 9. H. 4. 6. 4. H. 7. ca. 17. 27. H. 8. 7. 89. Partridge's case. Pl. Com. 82. [i] 32. H. 8. ca. 1. 34. H. 8. ca. 5.

(10. Co. 80.)

[1] 3. Co. 25. 26. in Butler's case. 6. Co. 75. in Sir George Curson's case. 8. Co. 163. Might's case. Eod. lib. fo. 171. in Vill Parker's case.

[4] Mir. ca. 1. Sect. 3.

so as nothing shall descend unto the heire. But in case of a devise by his last will, a third part shall descend to the heire, though all be devised away: and if the tenant leave a third part to descend, then the devise is good for the residue. [i] But these things require so many diversities grounded upon evident reasons, and are so plainly expressed in my Commentaries, as they (being very long) shall not need to be repeated here. [k] And that the tenure by knights service draweth to it ward marriage and reliefe, is of great antiquity, for so it was in the time of king Alfred (1).

Quant tiel tenant mort.

Here Littleton speaketh not of a dying seised by the tenant, for in many cases the heire shall be in ward, albeit the tenant died not seised, &c. nor in the homage of the lord. As if the tenant maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and the feoffor dieth, after his death the condition is broken, the heire within age entreth for the condition broken, he shall be in ward, and yet the feoffor had no estate or right in the land at the time of his death, but onely a condition, and which was broken after his decease.

[*] But because the condition restoreth the tenant to the land in nature of a descent, (for he shall be in by descent) by the same reason shall it restore the lord to the wardship, seeing now (as Littleton saith) the heire of his tenant is within age, and not able to doe him service, and no default in the lord to barre him of his wardship.

[1] And so I doe take it, that if the heire within age recover in a dum non fuit compos mentis, or formedon en descender, or remainder as heire, or such like, the heire shall be in ward; for these be stronger cases then the former, for here a right doth descend to the demandant, which right being by course of law restored to the possession of the heire within age, by consequence the lord is to have the wardship of him, but in the case of the condition, no right at all descended to the heire, as hath beene said.

And so if tenant in taile, the remainder in fee, maketh a feoffment in fee, and dyeth leaving the issue in taile within age, if the feoffee infeoffe the issue in taile, whereby he is re-mitted, he shall be in ward to the lord; for as he is restored to the title of the land as heire, so is the lord restored to his title of wardship as lord of the fee. And as to this purpose herein I take no difference betweene a right of action and a right of entry descending, when by action the right of the land is lawfully recovered by the heire within age, to his tenant; and albeit he dyed not in his homage, yet there was a right of homage, and no default or laches was in the lord, or act done by him to prejudice himselfe thereof.

But if one levie a fine executorie (as sur grant et render) to a man and his heires, and he to whom the land is granted and rendred, before execution dieth, his heire being within age entreth, he shall not be in ward, for his ancestor was never tenant to the lord, and so there is a manifest diversitie betweene this and the other cases. Et sic de ceteris.

But if the tenant maketh a feoffment in fee of lands holden by knights service to the use of the feoffee and his heires, untill the time that the feoffor pay to the feoffee or his heires a hundred pounds, for the which a time and place is limited; the feoffee dyeth, his heire within age; the lord shall have the wardship of the bodie of the heire, and of the lands of the feoffee, conditionally, for he cannot have a more absolute interest in the wardship, than the heire hath in the tenancie: therefore if the feoffor pay the mony at the day and place, and entreth into the land, in this case both the wardship of the bodie and lands is devested, because the lord had no absolute interest in neither of them, but doth depend upon the performance or not performance of the condition.

[*] So if the consor of a fine executorie of lands holden by knights service dyeth his heire within age, the lord shall have the wardship of the bodie and land: but if the consor entreth, the heire is disherited, and the lord hath lost the whole benefit of his wardship.

If the disseisee dyeth his heire being within age, [m] the lord shall have the wardship of the heire of the bodie of the disseisee. [n] But put the case, that in that case the disseisor dieth seised, and his heire within age, the lord may seise the wardship of his heire also, and of the land also: but the doubt is, whether the heire of the disseisee shall, after the descent to the heire of the disseisor, continue in ward, for that after the descent the heire of the disseisor is become his lawful tenant, and the heir of the disseisee is not tenant unto him untill he hath recovered the land.

If cesti que use before the statute of 27. H. 8. had dyed, his heire within age, the lord [o] should have the wardship of his heire; and if the feoffee had dyed, his heire within age, the lord should have had the wardship of his heire also, and so a double wardship for one and same land, the one by the statute of 4. H. 7. the other by the common law.

[p] Tenant by knights service maketh a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, tenant in taile maketh a feoffment in fee, and dyeth, his heire within age, the lord shall have the wardship of him; and if the feoffee dieth, his heire within age, the lord shall have the wardship also of his heire, and of the land.

If

(1) This shews, that in lord Coke's opinion the feudal tenures were settled here before the conquest. But as to this controverted point, see note 1. of 64. a.

going, staying for 40 days, and returning. Note also that the 40 days are accounted from the day prefixed for the assembling of the army in the destined place, wherever it shall be, whether in the kingdom or out of the kingdom; and the day and place of the assembly of the army were prefixed in the writ de summonitione servitii. Observe, that great fines were frequently imposed on those, who were deficient in doing their service on the summons of the army. Vid. Claus. 27. H. 3. parte 1. m. 12. Thomas de Berclay was fined 60 marks for default of service in transretando cum rege. Claus. 16. E. 2. m. 36. The barons of the exchequer were commanded to compound with the archbishops, bishops, religious men, and others for the remission of their service in the next army summoned at Newcastle on the vigil of Saint James next ensuing, and to take for a fine forty pounds for every fee, and so pro rata. By Pat. 13. E. 2. it was directed that twenty pounds should be taken for a fine on every fee of a knight who should make default. Vid. fines 7. E. 2. m. 4. 5. On the summons of service for the army of Scotland, it was proclaimed, that ecclesiastical persons and women should do their service at the [*] 39. E. 3. 36. tit. Gard 92.

(1. Co. 89.)

33. E. 3. Gard. 162. 11. H. 7.

12. 19. E. 3. Gard. 114. 18.

Aff. 18. 40. Aff. 36. 20. El.

362. 4. H. 6. 16. b. F. N. B.

143. 6 H 4. 4. a.

[1] 7. H. 4. 12. 1. H. 7. 12.

22. E. 4. 7. 6. 40. E. 3. 43. 4.

M. 136. 15. E. 4. 10. 11.

33. E. 3. Gard. 162.

(2. Ro. Ab. 38.)

11. H. 7. 12.

13. El. Dyer 298.

(Post 248. a)

[*] 12. H. 4. 16. per Thirning.

[m] 41. E. 3. 225.

[n] 15. E. 4. 11.

[o] 14. H. 8. 5. 4. H. 7. cap. 17.

[p] 41. E. 3. 26. tit. Avowrie

264. 23. H. 6. 9. 48. E. 3. 8. b.

10. l. 26. 31. E. 3. tit. Gard.

116. 18. E. 3. 7. 14. H. 4. 38.

1. H. 5. Grant 43. 5. E. 4. 3.

7. E. 4. 27. 15. E. 4. 13. 2. E.

2. Avow. 181.

If tenant by knights service maketh a gift in taile, and the donee maketh a feoffment in fee, and the donee dieth his heire within age, the donor shall have the wardship of him; because he is his tenant in right. [q] But if the feoffee dieth, his heire within age, the donor shall not have the wardship of his heire, but the lord paramount; because he is tenant in fait to him, neither shall the donor avow upon the feoffee or his heire for the services due unto him, because he must in his avowry shew the reversion in fee to be out of him by the feoffment, and consequently the services incident to the reversion are also out of him, but he shall avow upon the donee and his issues: [r] and thus are all the bookes that seeme to be at variance, either answered or reconciled.

[a] La terre tenus de luy, &c. Littleton here speaketh of lands holden of a subject: for if a man hold land of the king by knights service in capite, and other lands of other lords, and dieth his heire within age, the king shall have the wardship of all the lands by his prerogative: and this was due to the king by the common law, the fees of certaine excepted, as in the statute of prærogativa regis cap. 1. appeareth.

But if a man holdeth lands of the king by knights service, as of an honor or mannor, &c. [b] in that case the king shall onely have the lands holden of him, and not of any other. Yet by reason of tenures of the king by knights service of certaine honours, (while they were in the king's hands) the king (as some have said) had (as it were by prescription) his prerogative, viz. Raleigh age net bonony and Peverel, and so of lands holden by knights service of the duchy of Lancaster in the county palatine (1).

[c] When an heire hath bin in ward to the king by reason of a tenure in capite, after his full age he must sue livery, which is halfe a yeare's profit of his lands holden. But if he be of full age at the time of the death of his ancestor, then he shall pay for lands in possession a whole yeare's profit for primer seisin: but if it be of a reversion expectant upon an estate for life, as tenant in dower, tenant by the curtesie, or tenant for life, then he shall pay but the moiety of one yeare's profit.

[d] If the heire be in ward by reason of a tenure of an honour or mannor, (except as before) he shall not sue livery, but an ouster le maine cum exitibus, albeit he never made tender.

[e] And if he be of full age, the king shall have no primer seisin, but reliefe. But where the tenure is in capite, there the king shall have the meane profits untill the tender be made; and if the tender be made, and not duly pursued, the king shall also have all the meane profits.

[f] He that holdeth of the king by focage in chiefe, and dieth, his heire of full age, the king shall have livery and primer seisin onely of the lands so holden, and not of the lands holden of others. [g] But if the heire of such a tenant in focage in chiefe be within the age of fourteene at the death of his ancestor, he shall neither sue livery, nor pay primer seisin, either then or any time after: and the reason thereof is, for that the custodie of his body and lands in that case belong to the prochein amy, as gardian in focage. [h] Neither shall the king have primer seisin of lands holden in Burgage, (as some have said) for that it is no tenure in capite.

Note, there is a generall livery, and a speciall livery: a generall livery hath two properties:

First, it is full of charge to the heire, for he must finde an office in every county where he hath land, or else he cannot sue a generall livery, and he must sue out his writ of attate probanda, &c.

[i] The second property is, that it is full of danger: first, it concludeth the heire for ever after to denie any tenure found in the office. Secondly, if livery be not sued of all and of every parcell which the king ought to have, whether it be found in the office or not found (for a generall livery could not be sued by parcels) the livery is void, and the king may reseise the lands, and be answered of the meane profits. So it is if the office be insufficient, or the process whereof the livery was made be insufficient, or the like, the king shall reseise, as is aforesaid. [a] Therefore for the ease of the heire, and for avoyding of such danger, the heire for the most part sueth out a speciall livery, which containeth a beneficiall pardon, and saveth the said charges, and preventeth the said conclusion, and the other dangers, which being of grace, and not of right, as the generall livery is, the king may well and justly take more for a speciall livery, than for a generall, for the causes aforesaid, but ever with such moderation as the heire may cheerfully goe through therewith.

Note that livery is in nature of a restitution, which is to be taken favourably: for if livery be made of a mannor cum pertinentiis, the heire shall thereby have the advowson appendant. Otherwise it is in grants by letters patents.

Since the time that Littleton wrote [c] there is a court of wards and liveries erected by authority of parliament concerning the order of the king's wards, &c. to be holden before the master of the wards and the councill of that court appointed by those acts. This hath made

(1) Rot. Parl. 11. H. 6. n. 57. Simile pro ducatu Cornub. Rot. Parl. 18. H. 6. n. 42. Ryley's escheat m. 4. and 5 E. 1. Rot. 20. Nota, as to the ancient honor of Peverel, the tenure of that is in capite, but some new additions to the honor are not so. P. 7. Jac. Ley 7. Clarke's case. Vid. tamen P. 17. Jac. Church's case, Ley 53. for there it was found, that tenure of the honor of Peverel is tenure in capite as to the manor of Woodham Mortimer. Hal. MSS. By a tenure in capite in this note, lord Hale means a tenure of the king ut de corona in contradistinction to a tenure of him ut de honore. In the time of lord Coke it was the fashion to denominate the former a tenure ut de persona regis; and as to the latter, it was not allowed to be a tenure in capite.

day, or come before A and B and pay a fine, viz. twenty marks for every fee: So observe, that they were not fines imposed, but voluntary fines. — Hal. MSS.

In reading the preceding annotation by lord Hale, it is very requisite to attend to the distinction between the two subjects of it. The first part of the annotation, which states the progressive changes in the assise of arms between the 27. of Hen. 2. and the 21. of Jam. 1. and refers to the commissions of array during the same period, is applicable to the general military service all the

(2. Ro. Ab. 38.)

[q] So was it holden Tr. 18. El. in Com. Banco per Cur. which my selfe heard and noted, in Sir Thomas Wyat's case.

[r] So was it resolved in Sir Tho. Wyat's case ubi supra.

[a] Glanv. lib. 7. cap. 20. Pract. lib. 2. fo. 85. 86. 87. Brit. l. 3. c. 2. Fleta l. 1. c. 10. 9. H. 3. Prerog. 25. 21. H. 3. ib. 26. Rot. Finium. 6. Johan. Stat. Prerog. Reg. c. 1.

[b] Brañ. ubi supra. Max. carta c. 31. 1. E. 6. ca. 4. 5. E. 3. 5. 47. E. 3. 21. 20. H. 8. B. tit. Livery 58. 28. H. 8. ib. d. 55. (2. Ro. Ab. 503.)

[c] S. Co. 172. Hale's case. 38. H. 8. Br. tit. Livery 60. Vid. Feñ. 154. (F. N. B. 255. E.)

[d] 1. El. Dier 168.

[e] 22. H. 8. tit. Liv. Br. 62.

[f] 38. H. 8. Liver. Br. 66. 45. E. 3. 11. 35. H. 6. 52. Stanf. 13. b.

[g] 20. El. Dy. 362. F. N. B. 259. b.

[h] F. N. B. 263. 7. E. 4. 17. Stanf. Prer. 13. Br. tit. Liv. 64.

[i] 46. E. 3. 33. 47. E. 3. 21. 21. H. 6. 28. b. 33. H. 6. 50. 29. Aff. 8. Pl. Com. Countee of Leic. case 44. E. 1. 1. & 25. 12. R. 2. Liv. 28. 2. H. 7. fol. 12.

[a] 1. H. 4. 6. b. 37. H. 8. E. stop. Br. 1. 218. 7. E. 6. ib. 222. Scurfield's case. Tr. 8. Ja. in cur Ward. 23. El. Dier 377. 28. H. 8. Br. tit. Liv. 56.

41. E. 3. 5. 5. E. 6. 27. Aff. 48. Pl. Com. 251. 20. El. Dyer 360. (10. Co. 64. 2.)

[c] 32. H. 8. 46. 33. H. 8. cap. 21. (4. Inst 188.)

[d] 2. E. 6. ca. 8.

(9. Co. 16.)

[e] 4. E. 4. 23. 33. H. 8. tit. enter congeabl. Br. 125.

[f] 14. Eliz. Dier. fo. 319.

[g] 5. Mar. Dier 156.

[a] 24. E. 3. 31. 38. 9. H. 6. 18. 12. E. 4. 16. 30. Aff. 28. 4. Co. 56. & 60. Sadler's case. Stanf. prerog. 58. b. 52. 5. E. 4. 16. E. 4. 4. 1. H. 7. 14. 2. H. 7. 12. 4. H. 7. 15. 8. H. 7. 11. F. N. B. 262. 12. R. 2. Livery 28. F. N. B. 233. 7. Co. 44. 45. Ken's case.

[b] 4. E. 4. 23. 10. H. 6. 19. 4. Co. 56. &c. Sadler's case. 32. H. 8. entre Cong. Br. 125. 14. E. 3. cap. 14.

[c] Vide 6. Co. 6. Wheeler's case.

[d] 12. Eliz. Dier f. 292. a. 8. Co. 168. Paris Stoughter's case.

13. Eliz. Dier 306. 4. H. 6. 13. 10. H. 4. 2. b.

15. E. 4. 12. 46. E. 3. 12. 21. H. 6. 11. 3. H. 7. 5.

But Mr. Madox very justly animadverts on lord Coke and his cotemporaries, as well for calling any tenure of the king a tenure ut de persona by way of distinction, as for not allowing a tenure ut de honore to be a tenure in capite. He observes, that all tenures of the king are of his person, and that in order to distinguish accurately between lands originally holden immediately of the king and those holden immediately of him in consequence of the escheat of an honor or barony, we should call the tenure of those of the first description a tenure ut de corona, and that of the second a tenure ut de honore. Further he insists, that tenure in capite of the king is holding immediately of him without the interposition of any mesne lord, and consequently that a tenure of the king ut de honore is equally in capite with a tenure ut de corona, though in other respects there certainly are very important differences between the two, such as render it highly necessary to preserve a distinction. See Mad. Baron. Angl. 163.

the king's subjects are liable to for the internal defence of the realm. The remainder relates to the performance of that particular military service, which was due by reason of tenure, and might be required on foreign expeditions. With respect to the latter it may be sufficient to add, that military service by tenure was wholly abolished by the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. which in express terms discharges all estates from services on voyages royaux, and that long before this statute it had fallen into disuse, as appears from there not being any instance of assessing escuage since the reign of Edward the second. As to the former, lord Hale ends his historical deduction about made such a manifold alteration, as were too long here to be inserted, and doth belong to another treatise mentioned in the epistle of the jurisdiction of courts, where it were necessary, that the true jurisdiction of that court should be set downe, a matter of no great difficulty, seeing it began so late by authority of parliament. And since Littleton's time, [d] there is a right of profitable statute made concerning the finding of offices and other things, not onely concerning the king's wards, or their rights and possessions, but some other provisions very beneficiall for the subject, in all to the number of 12. [e] First, that such persons as hold for tearme of yeares, or by copy of court roll, or have any rent common or profit appender out of any lands found in any office, wherby the king is intituled to the wardship of the lands or tenements, or to the forfeiture of the lands or tenements upon attainder of treason, felony, pramunire, or any other offence, yet may they have, hold, enjoy, and perceive their several estates, interests, and profits, although they be not found in the office. And this being a beneficiall law the estates of tenant by statute staple merchant and elegit, and executors, that hold lands for payment of debts, are taken to be within the benefit of the clause: [f] and so is a doubt in 14. El. Dier cleared.

2. Where it is found, that the heire is of fewer yeares than in truth he is, he shall not be concluded hereby, [g] but every such heire at his very fullage may prosecute a writ of attate probanda, and sue his livery or ouffier le maine: in which case he had no remedy by the common law.

[a] 3. Where one person or more be found heire, where another person is heire, the partie grieved had no remedy.

4. Or where one person or more be found heire in one county, and another person or persons found heire in another county, there could have beene no interpleading.

5. Or if any person be untruly found by office lunaticke, or ideot, or dead, the party grieved may traverse the said offices; and you may reade in Ken's case how the office shall be traversed upon this act.

[b] 6. Where it is untruly found by office, that any person attainted of treason, felony, or pramunire, is seised of any lands, &c. the party grieved, having just title of freehold, shall have his travers or monstrans de droit (without being driven by this double matter of record to his petition of right as he was before this statute) which is much more speedy then the petition, for upon the petition there be foure writs of search, and every one must have 40 dayes before the serving, and now but two writs of search.

7. Where an office is found by these words or the like quod de quo vel de quibus tenementa predicta tenentur, juratores predicti ignorant, or holden of the king per quæ servitia juratores ignorant, it shall not be taken for any immediate tenure of the king in chiefe, but in such cases a melius inquirendum to be awarded as hath beene accustomed of old time. This branch hath beene well [d] expounded; for if the first office finde a tenure of the king per quæ servitia, &c. yet if upon the melius inquirendum the tenure be found of a subject, the first office hath lost his force per sensum hujus statuti, and need not be traversed, and the melius, &c. is in nature of the diem clausit extremum or mandamus, &c. and this was but a declaration of the ancient common law, as by the words of the statute (as hath beene accustomed of old) it appeareth; but if upon the melius it be found againe as uncertainly as before is said, then it is in judgement of law a tenure in capite, and so it was before the making of this act, and so are the bookes that speake hereof to be intended; but if upon the melius a tenure be found of the king ut de manerio per quæ servitia, &c. it shall be taken for knights service.

8. Where it is found that lands, &c. are holden of the king immediately, where in truth they are holden of a common person and not of the king immediately, and that the heire is within age, such heire within age shall have his traverse, &c. which he could not have had by the common law.

9. The meane lords of whom the lands are holden, which the king hath by his prerogative during the minority of the heire, shall receive and take such rents as are due unto them by the hands of such of the king's officers as receive the profits of the same lands, where before this act, the lords used to spare the rents due, &c. during the king's possession; and after livery sued charged the heire with all the arrerages.

10. There is a provision for offices found before the statute or before the 20 day of March next after the act.

11. A speciall clause is, that a scire fac' shall be awarded upon every travers by force of this act, and where the party was put to his petition, there upon the travers there shall be two writs of search granted.

12. And lastly, if judgement shall be given against the king upon a traverse by vertue of this act, all former rights appearing of record are saved to the king. But albeit these points are most necessary to be knowne, yet let us now returne to Littleton.

Littleton warily and materially (treating of a common person) saith, tenus de luy holden of him, for he shall have nothing in ward but that which is holden of him. But the king by his prerogative prerogative shall not onely have such lands and tenements, which (as hath been said) the heire of his tenant by knights service in capite holdeth of others, but such inheritances also as are not holden at all of any, as rent charges, rent secke, fayres, markets, warrens, annuities, and the like; and so is the law cleerely holden at this day, as it hath beene resolved; and so experience teacheth, that the king by his prerogative given to him by the ancient common law shall have those inheritances not holden, and so the quære made by [a] Stanford is cleared [a] Stanf. Præf. fo. 8. and made without question.

The law is changed since Littleton wrote in many cases both for the mariage of the body, and for the wardship of the lands, and a farre greater benefit given to the lords then the common law gave them, and some advantage given to the heires, which before they had not, which shall be touched briefly.

If the father had made an estate for life or a gift in taile of lands holden by knights service to his eldest sonne, or other heire apparent within age, the remainder in fee to any other, and dyed, the heire should not have beene in ward; for this was out of the statute of Merlebridge. But at this day the heire shall be in that case in ward for his body, and a third part of his land.

[a] So if the father had infeoffed his eldest sonne within age and a stranger and the heires of the sonne, and died, the sonne should have beene out of ward; but at this day he shall be in ward for his body, and for a third part of his moiety. [b] So if the father had infeoffed any of his younger sonnes or others for the making of his wife a joynture, or for the advancement of his daughters, or for the payment of his debts, and after infeoffe and convey the land to his heire and dyed, his heire within age, his heire should not have beene in ward; because he was bound by the law of nature and nations to provide for them; but now in all these cases the heire shall be in ward for his body, and a third part of the land, and all this groweth by construction upon the statutes of 32. and 34. H. 8. [c] But if either the eldest sonne, or any of the younger sonnes purchase lands of his father, which are holden by knights service, bona fide for the reasonable value, this is out of those statutes, and the heire shall neither be in ward, nor pay primer seifon.

And in all the cases abovesaid, (for example) if a feoffment be made to the use of his wife for life, or to the use of any of his younger sonnes for life, or to the use of some persons for life for payment of debts, and upon all these estates a remainder is limited over, if the wife or tenant for life dye in the life of the father, [d] or if it be conveyed to the use of the wife or younger children in fee, or fee taile, or in fee for payment of debts, and these lands are conveyed away in the life time of the father, after the decease of the father no wardship, &c. accrueth by force of any of the said statutes, for such estates must continue till the title of wardship doe grow.

[e] If the father convey his lands holden by knights service either of the king or of any meane lord to his middle sonne in taile, the remainder to the youngest sonne in fee, and dyeth, the eldest being within age, and the king or lord seize the body and two parts of the land, if the middle brother dye without issue, the king or the lord shall not have any benefit of the statute against him in remainder; for the statute was once satisfied, and the statute extendeth not to him in remainder.

[f] If there be a grandfather, father, and divers sonnes, and the grandfather in the life of the father convey his lands holden by knights service to any of the sonnes, this is out of the statute of 32. H. 8. and if the grandfather die, there is neither wardship nor primer seifon due; for the father hath the immediate care of his sons. But if the father be dead, then the care of them belongs to the grandfather, and then if the grandfather convey any of the lands to any of the sonnes, it is within the said statute: [g] and a conveyance to the use of any of his collateral blood, which is not his heire apparant is out of the said statute. And so are conveyances either by father or mother to or to the use of bastard children out of the statute; for qui ex damnato coitu nascuntur, inter liberos non computantur. And the preamble speaketh of lawfull generations. If a man seised of lands holden in socage convey them to the use of his wife, or of his children, or payment of his debts, and after purchase lands holden by knights service in capite, and dieth his heire within age, the king shall have no part of the socage land. [h] But if in that case he had by his will in writing devised his socage lands in fee, and after purchased lands holden in capite, and dieth, the king shall have so much of the socage lands as will make a full third part of all. The benefits, that grew to the subject by those acts of parliament, were, that tenants in fee simple might devise their lands by their last wills in writing in such manner and forme, as by the said acts appeareth; also that the father might infeoffe his eldest sonne or other heire lineall or collateral of his lands holden by knights service, and two parts of the lands shall be out of ward. And in * Might's case you shall reade excellent matter of estates made upon collusion.

And both the statutes of 32. and 34. H. 8. concerning wills and wardships are many wayes prejudiciall to the heires, as taking one example for many. If tenant by knights service

(1) Vid. Trin. 8. Jac. Ley 21. Allicock's case. Hal. MSS.

(2) Grandfather enfeoffe the father and his son in fee, and dies. The father being of full age shall sue livery of the third part of a moiety. Trin. 8. Jac. Ley 21. Crawley's case. But if feoffment be to daughter and her husband, they ought to sue livery of the whole, for both are children within the statute. M. 9. Jac. Ley 41. Bacon's case et ibid. 43. Cleer's case. Hal. MSS.

(3) Lands are given to husband and wife and the heirs of the husband. Husband and wife join in a fine come ceo to the use of the husband about the assise of arms and commissions of array with the 21. of James; but the reader will find the same subject very accurately continued to the present times, together with some particulars relative to the previous period not adverted to by lord Hale, in an admired

Leon. Lovey's case ubi supra, 22.
Eliz. Dier. 367.

32. E. 3. gard. 61.

2. H. 5. 4.
(6. Co. 20. Ante 73. a. Post.
314. b.)

10. H. 6. 8. 21. E. 3. 33. 2.
27. H. 8. 10. 10.

Vide Britton, fol. 169.

Glanvil. lib. 7. cap. 1. Mirror, cap. 5. Sect. 2. Britton. fol. 168.
b. 39. H. 6. cap. 2.

35. H. 6. 40. Bracton lib. 2.
cap. 37.
(1. Ro. Ab. 342. 6. Co. 73. b.)

34. E. 1 Stat. 3. Glanvil. lib. 7.
cap. 9. Dier 5 Marie 162. Bracton. lib. 2. cap. 37. F. N. B. 202.
(1. Ro. Ab. 137. 138.)

35. H. 6. 52. tit. Gard. 71. Stanford. 3. b. F. N. B. 256. 253. 35.
H. 6. 40.

Britton. fol. 169. 35. H. 6. 52.

husband and wife and to the heirs of the body of the husband, remainder over. The husband dies. The wife shall not sue livery, because it was originally a purchase to the husband and wife, and she had not a greater estate afterwards. T. 15. Jac. Ley 51. Menfeld's case. Hal. MSS.

admired work, to which we have such frequent occasion to refer. See 1. Blackst. Comment. 5th edit. 411. It is observable, that lord Hale avoids taking the least notice of the great contest between Charles the first and the long parliament about the king's power over the militia, which arose in consequence of some commissions of array issued by him and was the immediate prelude to the civil wars in his reign. Of the arguments used by each party on this occasion, there is a very full account in Rushworth. See 4. Rushw. 655.

service make a feoffment in fee to the use of his wife and her heirs, or to the use of a younger sonne and his heirs, or wholly for the payment of his debts; in these cases, although nothing at all of the lands so holden descend to the heir, but he is disinherited of the same, yet his body shall be in ward. But this for a little taste may suffice. More hereof you may read in my Reports in the severall cases noted in the margin.

Pleine age. Full age regularly is one and twenty yeares.

Entendement del ley. Entendement .i. intellectus, the understanding or intelligence of the law. Regularly judges ought to adjudge according to the common intendment of law.

By intendment of law every parson or rector of a church is supposed to be resident on his benefice, unlesse the contrary be proved.

Of common intendment one part of a manor shall not be of another nature then the rest.

Of common intendment a will shall not be supposed to be made by collusion. In facto quod se habet ad bonum et malum, magis de bono, quam de malo lex intendit. Lex intendit vicinum vicini facta scire. Nulla impossibilia aut inhonesta sunt presumenda, vera autem et honesta, et possibilia. Lex semper intendit, quod convenit rationi. As in this case, the gardian shall have the custody of the land untill the heir come to his full age of one and twenty yeares; because by intendment of law the heir is not able to doe knights service before that age, which is grounded upon apparant reason. There note that the full age of a man or woman to alien, demise, let, contract, &c. is one and twenty yeares, the civill law five and twenty yeares, for then the Romanes accounted men to have plenam maturitatem, and the Lombards at eightene yeares.

Si le heir ne soit marie al temps del mort de tiel auncester, &c. Aun- cester is derived of the Latine word anteceffor, and in law there is a difference between ante- ceffor and prædeceffor. For anteceffor is applyed to a naturall person, as I. S. et anteceffores sui;
but prædeceffor is applyed to a body politique or corporate, as episcopus London. et prædeceffores sui, rector de D. et prædeceffores sui, &c.

Mes si tiel tenant devie son heir female esteant del age de 14 ans, &c.
And the reason as I finde in antiquity, wherefore the law gave the marriage of the heir female if she were within the age of fourteene, and that she should not marry herselfe, was, par ceo que les heires females de nostre terre ne se marieront a nous enemies, et dount il nous conviendrait leur homage prendre, si eux se puissent marier a leur volunt. This is a speciall age for an heir female to be out of ward, if she attaine unto it in the life time of her ancestor; for at that age she may have a husband able to doe knights service. A woman hath seven ages for severall purposes appointed to her by law: as, seven yeares for the lord to have aid pur file marier;
nine yeares to deserve dower, twelve yeares to consent to mariage, untill fourteene yeares to be in ward, fourteene yeares to be out ward if she attained thereunto in the life of her ancestor, sixteene yeares for to tender her mariage if she were under the age of fourteene at the death of her ancestor, and one and twenty yeares to alienate her lands goods and chattells.

A man also by the law for severall purposes hath divers ages assigned unto him, viz. twelve yeares to take the oath of allegiance in the torne or leet, fourteene yeares to consent to ma-riage, fourteene yeares for the heir in focage to choose his gardian, and fourteene yeares is also accounted his age of discretion, fifteene yeares for the lord to have aid pur faire fitz chivalier, under one and twenty to be in ward to the lord by knights service, under fourteene to be in ward to gardian in focage, fourteene to be out of ward of gardian in focage, and one and twenty to be out of ward of gardian in chivalrie and to alien his lands goods and chattells.

Mes si tiel heir female soit deins l'age de 14 ans et nient marie, &c.
Le seignior avera la gard del terre. But put case that the lord cannot have the wardship of the land, as if the lord before the age of fourteene granteth over the wardship of the body, in this case the grantee of the body cannot enjoy the benefit of the two yeares, because he cannot hold over the land, and the lord which hath the wardship of the land only should lose the benefit of the two yeares, because he hath the lands onely and cannot tender any mariage. Therefore in this case the heir female shall enter into her land at her age of 14 yeares. So if a tenant holdeth of one lord by priority, and of another by posteriority and dieth, his heir female within the age of 14 yeares, the lord by posteriority shall have the lands but untill her age of 14 yeares, because the mariage belongeth not to him. Also if the lord marieth the heir female within the two yeares, her husband and she shall presently enter into the lands: for, cessante causa, cessat effectus; et cessante ratione legis, cessat beneficium legis.

If

If the lord tender a convenable mariage to the heire within the two yeares, and she mary elsewhere within those two yeares, the lord shall not have the forfeiture of the mariage; for the statute giveth the two yeares onely to make a tender. 35. H. 6. 52. 35. H. 6. tit. Gard. 71. 6. Co. 71. the lord Darcie's case.

Et si le seignior deins les dits 2 ans ne luy tender tiel mariage, &c. donque el al fine del dits 2 ans poet entrer, et ouste le seignior. This is so evident, as it needeth no explication.

Mes si tiel heire female soit marie deins lage de 14 ans en la vie son ancestor, et son ancestor devie el esteant deins age de 14 ans, le seignior naverà la gard forsque de la terre jesque al age de 14 ans, &c. Note, albeit the heire female be married at the age of twelve yeares in the life of her ancestor, (at which age she may consent to matrimony) to a man of full age, that is able to doe knights service, yet if the ancestor die before her age of fourteene, the gardian shall have the land untill her age of fourteene, because (as hath beene said) that is the time appointed by the common law. And so if the heire male be married in the life of the ancestor at his age of fourteene yeares, and the ancestor dieth, the lord shall have the land until the ward commeth to the age of one and twenty. F. N. B. 143.

Car ceo est hors del case del dit statute, intant que le seignior ne poet tender mariage a luy que est marie.

Natura non facit vacuum, nec lex supervacuum. The law doth never enforce a man to doe a vaine thing.

And where the said statute of W. 1. giveth unto the lord the said two yeares, thereby is implied, that if he dyeth within the two yeares, his executors or administrators shall have the same. For when the statute vesteth an interest in the lord, the law giveth the same to his executors or administrators. Then put case, that a lord hath the wardship of the bodie and land of an heire female, and maketh his executor, and dyeth before her age of fourteene yeares, whether the executor shall have the two yeares, because the executor is not lord. But I take it, the executor having the wardship of the body and land, shall in that case have the two yeares, for that they were vested in the lord (1).

It is further provided by the said statute, that if the lord tender a convenable mariage to the heire female within the said two yeares, and the heire female refuseth, then the lord shall hold the land untill her age of one and twenty yeares, and further untill he hath levied the value of her mariage. But if the lord doth not tender a mariage within the two yeares, he shall lose the value of the mariage, and content himselfe with the two yeares value. 27. H. 8. 3. 11. E. 3. Exec. 77. 4. E. 5. 55. 28. Aff. p. 7.

Car devant le dit statute, &c. sicome appiert per le rehearsall et paroles de le dit statute. Nota, the rehearsall or preamble of the statute is a good meane to finde out the meaning of the statute, and as it were a key to open the understanding thereof (2). 31. Aff. p. 26. (Cro. Jam. 151.)

The tender of a mariage to an heire female before the age of fourteene is void, which must be understood where the lord may hold the land for the said two yeares, for then the statute appointeth the time of the tender; but where the lord cannot have the two yeares, he may tender a mariage to the heire female at any time after the age of twelve and before fourteene, for so he might have done at the common law. 6. Co. 71. L. Darcie's case. 35. H. 6. 52. Gard. 71.

Sect. 104.

NOTA, que le pleine age de male et female, selonque le common parlance, est dit lage de 21 ans. Et lage de discretion est dit lage de 14 ans; car a tiel age le enfant que est marie deins tiel age a un feme, puit agreer

NOTE that the full age of male and female, according to common speech, is said the age of 21 yeares. And the age of discretion is called the age of 14 yeares; for at this age, the infant, which is married with in such age to a wo-

OF full age, which is the age of one and twenty, and of the age of discretion, which is the age of fourteene (3), somewhat hath beene spoken before (4). But now to the point of agreement or disagreement in this case. The time of agreement, or disagreement, when they marrie infra annos nuptiales, is for the woman at 12 or after, and for the man at fourteene or after, and there need no new mariage, if they so agree; but disagree they can not

5. Mar. Gard. Br. pl. ultimo. 39. E. 3. 32. 33. Praer. Reg. cap. 6. Tr. 24. Eliz. Rot. 842. in bank le roy Banister's case.

(1) See 6. Co. 74. 2.

(2) Lord Coke's manner of expressing himself on the operation of the preamble in the construction of statutes is very observable. Instead of saying generally, that the preamble shall controul the enacting clauses, or of limiting precisely how far it shall have that effect, which would have been attempting to make a line where one cannot be drawn, he cautiously says, that it is a good mean to find out the intention. The authorities referred to in 4. New Abr. 645. will serve to explain by instances, what sort of influence the preamble ought to have in expounding statutes. See also Hatt. on Stat. 53.

(3) It seems more proper to consider twelve as the age of discretion for women; for Lord Coke himself a few lines lower states that to be their time for agreeing or disagreeing to a marriage. See the note as to the age, at which infants may make a will of personalty, Post 89. b.

(4) To lord Coke's account of the several ages of a man and woman, which is given in fol. 78. b. add 1. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 17.

(1. Ro. Abr. 341. 3. Inst. 89.)

not before the said ages, and then they may disagree and marie againe to others without any divorce: and if they once after give consent, they can never disagree after (1). If a man of the age of fourteen marry a woman of the age of ten, at her age of twelve he may aswell disagree, as she may, though he were of the age of consent; because in contracts of matrimony, either both must be bound, or equal election of disagreement given to both, and so à converse, if the woman be of the age of consent, and the man under (2).

a tiel mariage ou man, may agree or disagree to such mariage.

Sect. 105.

13. E. 1. gard. 137. Britton fol. 169. acc.

Glanvil lib. 7. cap. 12.

27. H. 6. gard. 118.

27. H. 6. gard. 118.

27. H. 6. gard. 118.

F. N. B. 243.

7. H. 6. 11.

[a] 30. E. 1. gard. 156. 12. E. 1. gard. 138. 21. E. 3. 19. 20. E. 3. gard. 41. Temps E. 1. ibidem 128. 35. H. 6. 45. 7. H. 6. 11. Vide Præ. Reg. cap. 6. 13. H. 3. gard. 147. Stanf. præ. 26. 27. [b] 27. H. 6. gard. 118. F. N. B. 143. m. 19. E. 3. judgement 123. 45. E. 3. 16. [c] 47. E. 3. tit. Action sur le statute 38. and the bookes above-said.

IT is a maxime in law, Quod dominus non maritabit minorem in custodia sua nisi semel. And another faith, Si semel legitime nupt fuer', &c. postmodum non tenebuntur sub custodia domino- rum esse. Albeit this mariage is de facto, and not de jure, and though the disagreement dissolveth it ab initio, yet the lord shall never have the mariage of him.

And so if the gardian marieth his ward to a woman, and after the mariage is dissolved by reason of a precontract (4), yet the gardian shall never have the mariage of the ward againe.

But if one ravisheth a ward from the lord and marieth him within the age of consent, in that case if the lord taketh again his ward, and he at the age of consent disagreeeth to the mariage, the lord shall have the mariage of him, for he never had it before.

So likewise, if the ancestor marieth his heire apparent infra annos nobiles, and dieth his heire within age, the ward disagreeeth, the gardian shall have the wardship of him. The same law it is in the same case, if the wife dyeth before the age of consent, the lord shall have the mariage of the heire.

And so note a diversity when the ward is married by the ancestor or by a ravisher, and when by the gardian himselfe. [a] For if the ancestor marie his heire apparent infra annos nobiles and dyeth, in this case, if the mariage be dissolved by disagreement either of the ward or of his wife, the gardian shall have the mariage of him. [b] And so it is if a ravisher marrie a ward infra annos nobiles, and the mariage is dissolved, ut supra, the gardian shall have the mariage. If the heire male in ward of the age of tenne yeares be married without the consent of the lord, he may tender unto the heire infra annos nobiles a mariage, albeit he be so married, and if he refuse, and agree to the former mariage, the lord shall have the forfeiture of his mariage, as it hath beene holden. But otherwise it is [c] (faith Littleton) where the gardian himselfe marrieth the ward, ut supra. And the reason of the diversitie is, because in this case the gardian had once the mariage of him, but so had not he in either of the other cases, and it is a maxime in law, Quod dominus non maritabit pupillum nisi semel.

It

(1) But now the agreement after twelve or fourteen would not be binding on the infant, if the marriage was without banns or by licence and without consent of parent or guardian, and the infant was not a widow or widower; for the 26. Geo. 2. c. 33. makes all such marriages void. In reading this statute, it should be attended to, that the clause for annulling the marriages of infants without the consent of parents or guardians is restricted to marriages by licence; so that the marriage of an infant without such consent may still be good, where banns are regularly published, unless a dissent is openly declared by the parent or guardian in the church or chapel at the time of publishing, in which latter case the statute makes the banns void. As to marriages without either licence or banns, which are usually termed clandestine, they are universally annulled by the statute. Note that Scotland is excepted out of the 26. G. 2. c. 33. In consequence of this, so much of the act, as was calculated to defeat the marriages of minors without the consent of parents or guardians, hath been frequently evaded by going

It appeareth upon consideration of all the bookes aforesaid, that where the ancestor marrieth his heire apparent within the age of consent, and dyeth, the infant still being within the age of consent, the lord may take the infant (if he will) into his possession, in respect the infant may disagree to the marriage; and if the infant be deteyned from him, he shall recover him in a writ of ravishment of ward, and thereupon have the infant delivered to him. [d] But if the ancestor marrieth his heire apparant infra annos nobiles, and dieth his heire being infra annos nobiles, and after age of consent the heire agreeth to the marriage, neither the king nor the lord shall have the marriage, for now it is a marriage ab initio, and there neede no other marriage.

[d] 7. H. 6. 11. adjudged in the booke at large.

Sect. 106.

EN mesme le manner est, si le gardein luy marie, et la feme devie, esteant lenfant deins lage de xiiii ans ou xxi.

IN the same manner it is, if the gardian marry him, and the wife die, the infant being within the age of 14 yeares or 21.

THIS Littleton addeth, because he spake in the case next before of a disagreement by the infant. Here he saith, that if the wife dye, the infant being within the age of consent.

Sect. 107.

ET que tiel enfant poit disagree a tiel marriage, quant il vient al age de xiiii ans, il est prouve per les parolx del statute de Merton cap. 6. que issint dit.

AND that such infant may disagree to such marriage, when he comes to the age of 14 yeares, it is proved by the words of the statute of Merton cap. 6. which saith thus.

L Estatute de Merton. So called because the parliament was holden at Merton.

Et que tiel enfant poit disagree, &c. il est prove, &c. Note the time of disagreement is set downe by act of parliament, and so observed by Littleton, who seekes no other prooffe therein then by the law of England.

Merton ca. 6.

De dominis, qui maritaverint illos, quos habent in custodia sua, villanis, vel aliis, sicut burgenfisibus ubi disparagentur, si talis hæres fuerit infra 14 annos, et talis ætatis quod matrimonio consentire non possit, tunc si parentes illi conquerantur, dominus amittat custodiam illam usque ad ætatem hæredis, et omne commodum, quod inde receptum fuerit, convertatur ad commodum hæredis infra ætatem existentis, secundum dispositionem parentum, propter dedecus ei impositum. Si autem fuerit 14 ans et ultra, quod consentire possit et tali matrimonio consenserit, nulla sequantur pœna.

Ubi disparagentur. Disparagement, disparagatio, commeth of the verbe disparago, and that of dispar, and ago.

Now it is necessarie to be understood, what disparagements there be for the which the heire may refuse.

And of such disparagements there be foure kindes.

The first propter vitium animi, as an ideot, non compos mentis, a lunatique, &c. (1).

The second propter vitium sanguinis, as first a villein. 2. Burgenfis. 3. The sonne or daughter of a person attainted of treason or felony, albeit pardoned, for the blood is corrupted. 4. A bastard. 5. An alien or the childe of an alien. Burgenfis is a man of trade, as an haberdasher, a draper Bracton lib. 2. fol. 91. Britton fo. 169. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 12. Mirror ca. 2. Sect. 17. Rot. Parl. 18. E. 1. fo. 9. The daughter of Nevil married to the sonne of Tho. of Weyland after his attainer.

Et issint est prove per mesme le estatute, que nul disparagement est, mes lou ce-luy, que est en garde, est marie deins lage de xiiii ans.

And so it is proved by the same statute, that there is no disparagement, but where he, which is in ward, is married within the age of 14 yeares.

(1) The 15. G. 2. c. 30. annuls the marriages of all persons, who after being found lunaticks on inquisition by commission under the great seal, or after being committed to the care of trustees by act of parliament, shall marry without the chancellor's declaring them of sane mind. Before this act there could be no doubt as to the validity of the marriages of lunaticks, where it could be clearly proved, that they were married in their lucid intervals. One should think, that there could be as little room to doubt their incapacity of contracting marriage whilst in an actual state of insanity, if our books were not remarkably silent on the subject, and it was not also said, that by our law an ideot anativitate, in whom the general incapacity of making contracts appears to form as strong an objection as occurs in the case of a madman, may consent to marriage. This doctrine, as to ideots, however strange it may appear, is mentioned as a point adjudged in one case, and seems confirmed by allowing dower to the wife of an ideot, and by questioning the right of an ideot's husband to curtesy merely, where on account of an office finding the wife's ideotcy and the descent of land to her after the marriage it is apprehended, that there is a concurrence of titles between the king and the husband. See 1. Ro. Abr. 357. and ante fol. 30. b. and note 2. there. By the Roman law, persons continually mad, lunaticks except during the intervals of sanity, and ideots were all equally incapable of marriage. See Brouwer. de jur. connubior. lib. 2. cap. 4.

going into Scotland to be married there and returning into England immediately afterwards. Indeed the validity of such mar.

Lib. 2. Cap. 4. Of Knights Service. Sect. 108.

draper or the like, (and this agreeth with the civill law, Patricii cum plebeis matrimonia ne contrahant;) whereof Glanvill speaketh thus, Si vero fuerit filius bargensis, etatem habere tunc intelligitur, quando discrete sciverit denarios numerare, et pannes ulnare et alia paterna negotia similiter exercere.

The third, Propter vitium corporis, as first de membris, having but one hand, one foot, one eye, &c. Secondly, deformitie, as to looke a squint, a creeple, halt, lame, decrepit, crooked, &c. Thirdly, privation, as blind, deafe, dumbe, &c. Fourthly, disease horrible, as leprosie, palsie, dropfie, or such like diseases. Fifthly, great and continuall infirmite, as a consumption and such like. Sixthly, impotency to have children in respect either of age past children, or so tender yeares as there is too great disparitie, or for naturall disabilitie or impediment or such like. Seventhly, deflowred of her virginity.

1. E. 6. cap. 12.
[d] Vide Sect. 109. F. N. B.
149.

The fourth kinde of disparagement was propter jacturam privilegii, &c. as to marry the heire to a widow, whereby he should by reason of the bigamie have lost the benefit of his cleargie, whereby he might save his life; but now the exception of bigamie in that case is ousted by the statute (1). And Littleton saith, [d] that there be many other disparagements which are not specified in the said statute, for those two mentioned are put but for examples. In a word, it must be competens maritadium absque disparagatione.

Si talis heres fuerit infra 14 annos, et talis etatis quod matrimonii consentire non possit, &c. Note albeit the ward, where he is disparaged, may disagree at his age of fourteene yeares, yet the law doth so abhorre the odious dealing of the gardian, to whom the custody of the heire is committed, and his horrible profanation of honourable marriage, the only ligament of mens inheritances, as it inflicteth a great punishment upon the lord in this case, albeit the marriage be not perfect, but avoydable by disagreement.

Tunc si parentes illi conquerantur. Littleton in the next section expoundeth these words in this manner, viz. Si parentes conquerantur, i. e. Si parentes inter eos lamententur, que est tant a dire, que si les cosens de tiel infant ont cause de faire lamentation ou complaint par le bont fait leur cosent issint disparage, quel est in manner un bont a eux. Parens est nomen generale ad omne genus cognationis. See more of this in the next section.

Dominus amittat custodiam illam usque ad etatem heredis et omne commodum quod inde receptum fuerit convertatur ad commodum heredis, &c. Here followeth the penaltie.

First, amittat custodiam, that is, the whole benefit of the wardship. But in this case if the gardian hath granted the wardship of the land to another bona fide, and after, the heire is disparaged, the grantee shall not forfeit his interest, for the statute is (dominus amittat custodiam.)

Secondly, Et omne commodum, quod inde receptum fuerit, convertatur ad commodum heredis secundum dispositionem parentum. These words are expounded by Littleton which needeth no further explanation. Now where readers upon this statute have put a case, that if the tenant hath issue a daughter, his wife ensint with a sonne and dieth, the lord doth disparage the daughter before the age of twelve yeares, the sonne is borne, the daughter disagrees, the sonne dieth, the daughter within the age of fourteene, she shall be in ward againe. This case is not warranted by this statute, for this statute extends not to the heires female.

Vide the second part of the Institutes. Merton cap. 5. 6. 35. H. 6. 53.
(9. Co. 127.)

If the tenant make a lease to A. for life, the remainder to B. in fee, the tenant for life surrenders upon condition, B. dieth his heire within age, the lord disparages the heire, tenant for life entreth for the condition broken and dieth, the heire shall be out of ward, for that he claimeth as heire to one man. But if after the disparagement lands descend from another ancestor to the ward so disparaged, he shall be in ward for those lands.

If two joyntenants be of a ward, and the one disparageth the heire, both shall lose the wardship, for the words be et omne commodum, &c.

Britton, fol. 169. acc.

Si autem fuerit 14 annorum et ultra, &c. nulla sequatur pena. By which it appeareth (as Littleton observeth) that there is no disparagement, but where the ward is married within the age of fourteene.

Sect. 108.

9. H. 3.
(2. Infl. 1.)

L Estatute de magna charta. NOTA que il soit loit estre question, coment ceux these words shall be pa-
NOTE, it hath beene a question, how

(1) The word bigamy is frequently used to describe the crime of marrying a second wife during the life of the first; but the proper name for this offence in our law is polygamy, and with us a bigamist is a man who either marries a widow or after the death

marriages was once questioned; and though in general marriages are governed by the law of the country in which they are celebrated, yet it was doubted, whether the lex loci ought to be applied to a case accompanied with circumstances so strongly marking the intent to evade the law of England. See Burr. 4. part vol. 2. page 1079. But this point seems now fully settled in favour of the Scotch marriages by a late decision of the court of arches, which was afterwards confirmed in the court of delegates. However it may not be amiss to recollect, that there have been persons of authority, who will not allow such cases of apparent evasion of the law of any country to fall within the principle on which the lex loci is indulged. There is a strong passage to this effect in the works of a Dutch author, whose writings on the civil law are much esteemed. Ego ita existimo, says Huber, after putting a case in which the law of one Dutch province against the marriages of minors without the consent of guardians was evaded by running away into another province having a different law, hanc rem manifeste pertinere ad eversionem juris nostri, ac ideo non magistratus heic obligatos e jure gentium ejusmodi nuptias agnoscere et ratas habere. Multoque magis statuendum est, parolx ferront entendes, Si parentes conquerantur, &c. Et il semble a ascuns, que considerant lestatute de Magna Charta, que voit, quod hæredes maritentur absque disparagatione, &c. sur quel cel statute de Merton sur tiel point est fount due (1), que nul action poit estre pris sur cel statute (2), entant que il ne fuit unques view ne oye, que ascun action fuit port sur cel statute de Merton pur cel disparagement envers le gardeine pur cest matter avandit, (3) &c. et si ascun action puissoit estre prise sur tiel matter, il serra entendue ascun foits (4) estre mise en ure. Et nota (5) que ceux parolx ferront entendes (6), Si parentes conquerantur, id est, si parentes inter eos lamententur, que (7) est taunt adire, que si les cousins de tiel enfant ont cause de faire lamentation ou complaint enter eux, pur le hont fait a leur cousin issint disparage, quel est en maner un hont a eux, donques puit le prochain cousine, a que understood, (Si parentes conquerantur.) And it seemeth to some, who considering the statute of Magna Charta, which willeth, quod hæredes maritentur absque disparagatione, &c. upon which this statute of Merton upon this point is founded, that no action can be brought upon this statute, inasmuch as it was never seene or heard, that any action was brought upon the statute of Merton for this disparagement against the gardian for the matter aforesaid, &c. and if any action might have beene brought for this matter, it shall be intended that at some time it would have beene put in ure. And note that these words shall be understood thus, Si parentes conquerantur, id est, si parentes inter eos lamententur, which is as much as to say, as if the cousins of such infant have cause to make lamentation or complaint amongst themselves, for the shame done to their cousin so disparaged, which in maner is a shame to them, then may the next cousin to whom the charter, yet being granted by assent and authority of parliament Littleton here saith it is a statute.

This parliamentary charter hath divers appellations in law. Here it is called Magna Charta, not for the length or largeness of it, (for it is but short in respect of the charters granted of private things to private persons now adays being elephantina charta;) but it is called the great charter in respect of the great weightiness and weightie greatnesse of the matter contained in it in few words, being the fountaine of all the fundamentall lawes of the realme; and therefore it may truly be said of it, that it is magnum in parvo. It is in our bookes called Charta libertatum, & communis libertas Angliæ, or Libertates Angliæ, Charta de libertatibus, Magna Charta, &c. And well may the lawes of England be called libertates, quia liberos faciunt. Magna fuit quondam magnæ reverentia chartæ.

This statute of Magna Charta is but a confirmation or restitution of the common law, as in the statute called confirmatio chartarum anno 25. E. 1. it appeareth by the opinion of all the justices; and in 5. H. 3. tit. Mord. 53. Magna Charta is there vouch- ed; for there it appeareth, that King John had granted the like charter of renovation of the ancient lawes.

This statute of Magna Charta hath beene confirmed above 30 times, and commanded to be put in execution. By the statute of 25. E. 1. cap. 2. judgements given against any points of the charters of Magna Charta, or Charta de Foresta, are adjudged void. And by the statute of 42. E. 3. c. 1. if any statute be made against either of these charters it shall be void.

Sur lestatute de Magna Charta lestatute de Merton est fount due sur tiel

Vide 8. Co. the Prince's case.

Bracton, 414. & 291. Fleta; lib. 2. cap. 48. & lib. 3. cap. 3. Mirror, cap. 2. § 18. Britton, fol. 177. b.

25. E. 1.

5. H. 3. Mord. 53. Math. Paris, 246, 276, 248.

25. E. 1. ca. 2.

42. E. 3. ca. 1.

death of his first wife marries a second time, in consequence of which he formerly could not claim the benefit of clergy. This denial of the benefit of clergy to bigamists was in consequence of some ancient papal constitutions and canons of councils against admitting bigamists into holy orders; a prohibition, which, however speciously defended by texts of scripture, wholly originated from the injurious policy of the church of Rome in discouraging the marriages of the clergy, and led the way to the complete establishment of celibacy amongst them. See Levit. c. 21. v. 13. 14. 1. Tim. c. 3. v. 12. Summa Concil. per Mirand. fol. 4. a. 119. a. 168. b. 230. b. Bingham. Antiq. Christ. Ch. b. 4. c. 5. Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 293. and the word Bigamus in the index to the Corp. Jur. Canon. ed. Pithæor. However the exclusion of bigamists from the benefit of clergy was not entirely accomplished till the council of Lyons ended the doubts, which before prevailed, by positively declaring bigamists omni privilegio clericali nudatos. It appears, that this constitution was immediately received in England; for the statute of 4. E. 1. de bigamis takes notice of it, and explains how it should be construed, by directing that it should be understood to comprehend bigamists before, as well as those who became so after. See 4. E. 1. c. 5. 2. Inst. 273. 2. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 372. 2. Hawk. Pl. C. b. 2. c. 33. f. 5. and Barringt. on Ant. Stat. 2d ed. 73. When the benefit of clergy, by being allowed to all who could read, was extended to laymen as well as persons in orders, the reason for ousting bigamists of clergy in great measure ceased; but notwithstanding this, the exception of bigamy continued till it was taken away by the statute of Edw. 6.—The pointing out exactly the appropriated sense of the word bigamy in our law was the more necessary; because very sensible writers have been inattentive to it. We find a remarkable instance of this in the quarto edition of the Statutes, the editor of which, in a note on the 4. E. 1. c. 5. refers to the 1. Jam. 1. c. 11. as making bigamy a felony.

(1) Que nul action poit estre pris sur cel statute, not in L. & M.—(2) Come semble et. L. and M.—(3) Pur cest matter avant dit not in L. & M.—(4) Per comen presumption devaunt ceux heurez in stead of entendue ascun foits in L. & M.—(5) Et nota not in L. & M.—(6) En tiel maner in L. & M.—(7) Ou in stead of que in L. & M.

est, eos contra jus gentium facere videri, qui civibus alieni imperii sua facilitate, jus patrii legibus contrarium, scientes volentes impertiuntur. See the digression de consuetudinibus legum diversarum in diversis imperiis in Huber. Prælect. Jur. Rom. page 538. In this digres-tiel point, viz. Quod hæredes maritentur ab-que disparagatione (1).

Foundue. So as Magna Charta is the foundation of other acts of parliament. This act extendeth as well to females as to males.

Nul action poet estre prise sur cel statute, in-tant que il ne unques fuit view ou oye, &c. Et si af-cun action pouvoit estre prise sur cest matter, il serra intend a ascun foits estre mise in ure.

Vide Petitiones coram domino rege in Parlamento, fol. 3. 18. E. 1.

39. H. 6. 39. per Ashton. 6. Eliz. Dier, 229. (Ante 11. a.)
23. Eliz. Dier. Nullum breve de errore de iudicio in 5. port. quia nullum breve repetitur. 3. E. 3. 50. 11. H. 4. 7. and 38.

Vide Lestatute de Marlebridge, cap. 17. In custodia parentum.

Hereby it appeareth how safe it is to be guided by judicial presidents, the rule being good, Periculosum existimo, quod bonorum virorum non comprobatur exemplo. And as usage is a good interpreter of laws, so non usage where there is no example is a great intendment, that the law will not beare it; for saith Littleton, if any action might have beene grounded upon such matter, it shall be intended, that sometime it should have beene put in ure (2). Not that an act of parliament by non user can be antiquated or lose his force, but that it may be expounded or declared how the act is to be understood.

Si parentes conquerantur. Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Si les cousins. Here Littleton expoundeth parents to be his cousins, under which name of cousins Littleton includeth uncles and other cousins, who when the father is dead are in loco parentum.

Ont cause a faire lamentation, &c. Note if they have cause to make lamentation, it sufficeth though they never complaine.

Pur le hont fait a lour cousin. For when their cousin is disparaged in his marriage, it is not only a shame and infamie to the heire, but in him to all his blood and kindred.

Donques poit le procheine cousin, a que le enheritance ne poit discender, enter et ouster le gardein in chivalrie.

This is worthy the observation, for the words of the statute are generall, Secundum dispositionem parentum, and the construction thereof shall be according to the reason of the common law, for the next cousin, to whom the inheritance cannot descend, shall enter and ouste the gardian, and shall be in place of a gardian, as it is in case of a gardian in focage.

Et fil ne voile, un auter cousin del enfant poet ceo faire. Still pursuing the reason of the common law in case of gardian in focage.

Et les issues et profits prender al use del enfant, &c. This is so evident as it needeth no explication.

Ou auterment lenfant deins age poit enter luy mesme et ouste le gardein. If none of the cousins aforesaid will enter, then the heire himself may enter. In all which the reason of the common law is pursued. But what if the heire be disparaged, and the next of kin doth enter, and when the heire commeth to 14 he agreeth to the marriage. Yet shall not this give any advantage to the lord, for that he had lost the wardship before.

Sect.

(1) See 9. Hen. 3. c. 6.

(2) In the famous case of Ashby and White, in which the question was whether an action on the case would lie against a returning officer for refusing a vote at the election of a member of parliament, one objection made to the action was, that it was of the first impression; and the words of Littleton, in explaining why an action could not be maintained on the statute of Merton against a guardian for disparagement, were much relied upon by judge Powys as an authority directly in point. But lord chief justice Holt answered this objection by citing many instances of allowing new actions; and therefore in this particular judge Powell concurred with Holt, though they differed on the principal question. See 2. L. Raym. 944. 946. & 957. It might also have been observed, that Littleton is only stating the opinion of others, and that he concludes with a quere; and further, that in the case put by him the question was merely, whether the proper remedy was by action or by entry. However it must be confessed, that the novelty of an action may frequently be fairly urged as a strong presumptive argument against its lying; more particularly, where the right, which is the foundation of the action, is admitted, and the mode of relief is the only thing controverted, as was the case in Ashby and White.

digression the reader will find a very informing dissertation on the lex loci, and the principles, by which the application of it ought to be regulated, expressed clearly and illustrated by a variety of cases, more particularly such as relate to testaments, marriages, and contracts in general. See also the printed argument against Slavery in the Case of Sommerset: the Negro, which was determined in B. R. Trin. 11. G. 3. p. 67. to 75. It is there attempted to prove by principles of reason as well as by authorities, that the lex loci is not applicable in the instance of slavery, and that though a negro is brought from a country, in which he was legally a slave, yet he ceases to be so and gains his freedom to all intents the moment his master carries him into one, where domestic slavery is not permitted.—(2) See acc. Swinb. on Spousals 34. But though the rule, which where one of the parties

Sect. 109.

Of this sufficient hath been said before.

ITEM mults auters divers disparagements y sont, que ne sont specifiés en mesme lestatute. Come si le heire, que est en gard, est marry a un, que nad forsque un pee, ou forsque un maine, ou que est deforme, decrepite, ou ayant horrible disease, ou graund et continual infirmitie; et (si soit heire male), si soit marry a feme, que est passe l'age denfanter. Et mults auters causes de disparagements sont; sed de illis quare, car il est bon matter d'ap-prender.

ALso there be many and divers other disparagements, which (Ante 80. a.) are not specified in the same statute. As if the heire which is in ward be married to one which hath but one foot, or but one hand, or which is deformed, decrepit, or having some horrible disease, or great and continuall infirmitie. And (if he be an heire male) if he be married to a woman past the age of childe-bearing. And there be other causes of disparagement; but inquire of them, for it is a good matter to understand.

Sect. 110.

ET des beires males, que sont deins l'age de 21 ans apres le mort leur ancesster nient marries, en tiel cas le seignior avera le mariage de tiel heire, et avera temps et space de tender a luy convenable mariage sans disparagement deins meme le temps de 21 ans. Et est ascavoir, que l'heire en tiel case poit eslier sil voit estre marry ou non; mes si le seignior, que est appel gardein en chivalry a tiel heire, tender convenable mariage deins l'age de 21 ans sans disparagement, et l'heire ceo refuse, et ne soy marrie deyns le dit age,

AND of heires males, which be within the age of 21 yeares after the decease of their ancestor and not married, in this case the lord shall have the marriage of such heire, and he shall have time and space to tender to him covenable marriage without disparagement within the said time of 21 yeares. And it is to be understood, that the heire in this case may chuse whether he will be married or no; but if the lord which is called guardian in chivalry tenders to such heire covenable marriage within the age of 21 yeares without dispa-

DE tender a luy convenable marriage, &c.

But it is in the election of the lord, whether for the single value the lord will tender a marriage or no, for he shall have the single value without any tender (1).

And of this there needeth no other explication. The value of the marriage of such an heire is according to the valuation by lawfull triall, or as much as another had before offered to give for the same without fraud and covyn.

Le heire en tiel case poit eslier sil voit estre marrie, ou non, &c.

And so on the other side, though there be a tender made of a covenable marriage without disparagement, yet the heire may refuse, for in everie marriage there

6. Co. 70. Lo. Darcie's case
Vid. Britton, fol. 169.
(5. Co. 127.)

Merton, cap. 6. 18. E. 3. 18.

(1) This point, which before lord Coke's time appears to have been doubtful, was adjudged in the case of Palmer and Wilder, and again in lord Darcie's case. See the former case in 5. Co. 126. b. and the latter in 6. Co. 70. b.

parties is under the age of discretion makes the contract of marriage equally voidable by both, is admitted with respect to actual marriages, yet the civilians and canonists are not agreed, that it holds as to contracts of marriage per verba de presenti without solemnization. Some think, that such contracts have the full effect of a contract per verba de presenti on the person who is of the age of discretion, and that it is only in the power of the younger party to assent or dissent on attaining the age of discretion. But according to others, both parties are in the same situation, and as it can only have the force of a contract per verba de futuro as to the younger party unless it is ratified at the age of discretion, so in the mean time it shall not have a greater effect on the elder, and consequently unless the contract is ratified by both when the younger party attains the age of discretion, it will not avoid the subsequent marriage of either. Swinburne adopts this last opinion. See Swinb. on Spoul. 36. But this doctrine there must be a free consent.

Si tiel heire. That is, if such an heire to whom a tender hath been made by the lord, and by whom a refusall hath beene made. If such an heire afterwards marieth another within age, he shall forfeit double the value; but if he before any tender marieth himselfe within age, he shall pay but the single value of the marriage.

Neither the single value, nor the double value shall be recovered against the heire, but after his full age; but for both these the lord hath a double remedie, viz. an action as is aforesaid, or the lord may retaine the land after full age for his satisfaction of both, with this difference, that in the case of the single value the taking of the profits shall not be accounted parcell of the value, but as a gage or pledge till the heire do satisfie him of the single value; but in case of the double value, the perception of the profits shall be taken in satisfaction of the double value, for the statute of Merton, which giveth the forfeiture, saith, De minus teneat terram, &c. per tantum tempus quod inde percipere possit duplicem valorem maritagii: which words (quod inde, &c.) proveth that the taking of the profits shall go in satisfaction: but in case of the single value, until the heire doth satisfie the lord of the same.

No forfeiture of marriage is given, by the said statute of Merton, of an heire female, as appeareth by the said act; neither at the common law could the lord have holden the land of the heire female after fourteene yeares for the value.

donques le gardeine a vera le value del mariage del tiel heire male. Mes si tiel heire luy meme marie dems lage de 21 ans encounter la volunt le gardeine en chivalrie, donquez le gardein avera le double value del mariage per force de lestatute de Merton avantdit, come en meme lestatute est comprise plus a pleine.

force of the statute of Merton aforesaid, as in the same statute is more fully at large comprised.

agement, and the heire refuseth this, and doth not marrie himselfe within the said age, then the gardein shall have the value of the marriage of such heire male. But if such heire marieth himself within the age of 21 yeares against the will of the gardein in chivalrie, then the gardein shall have the double value of the marriage by

Sect. III.

4. Co. 88. in Lutterel's case. 6. Co. 20. a. Gregorie's case. 19. R. 2. Gard. 195.

PE R castle gard. wardum castri, seu castle-gardum, seu castri-gardum. He that holdeth by castle-gard, holdeth by knights service, but not by escuage, for escuage is due when the king maketh a voyage royall out of this realme (as hath beene said) and the tenant maketh default, but castle-gard is to be done within the realme, and without any voyage royall.

Also a certaine tearme is appointed for the service of the tenant that holdeth by escuage, but no certaine tearme by law for him that holdeth by castle-gard. Vide in the title of Grand Serjeantie. Sect. Hereof come

ITEM divers tenants teignent de leur seigniors per service de chivaler, et uncore ils ne teignent per escuage, ne pateront escuage; come ceux, que teignent de leur seigniors per castle garde, cestascavoir, a garder un tower del castle leur seignior, ou un huis ou un auter lieu del castle, per reasonable garnishment, quant leur seigni-

ALSO divers tenants hold of their lords by knights service, and yet they hold not by escuage, neither shall they pay escuage; as they which hold of their lords by castle-ward, that is to say, to ward a tower of the castle of their lord, or a doore or some other place of the castle, upon reasonable warning, when their lords heare that the enemies will come,

ors

doctrine of reciprocity where one of the parties is an infant or under the age of discretion, however true it may be in its application to actual marriages or to contracts of marriage per verba de presenti, must not be considered as extending to other contracts with an infant, not even contracts of marriage per verba de futuro; for in them the person of full age may, it is said, be bound at all events by our law, and yet as to the infant the contract may be voidable. Accordingly in the case of Holt and Ward the court held, that if a man of full age enters into a contract of marriage with a woman of 15 per verba de futuro, and afterwards marries another woman, an action on the case lies against him for breach of his promise. See 2. Stra. 850. & 937. & S. C. in Fitz-Gibb. 175. 275. 1. Barnad. 208. 247. 333. 2. Barnad. 12. 173. 176. As to the effect of the 26. of G. 2. c. 33. on precontracts of marriage, see note 4.—(3) In L. and M. the words quare de hoc are added.—(4) It seems, that precontract is now no longer a cause for dissolving a marriage in England; for it appears impliedly taken away by 26. G. 2. c. 33. which enacts, that there shall be no suit in the ecclesiastical court for compelling the celebration of marriage by reason of any contract, whether per verba de presenti or per verba de futuro, entered into after the 25th of March 1754. It is observable, that the statute mentions contracts of marriage by future as well as those by present words; but notwithstanding this, it is far from being clear, that matrimony could ever be compelled in the ecclesiastical court on a contract of the former kind otherwise than by admonition, and probably it was included in the statute merely from caution. See 2. Stra. 938.

ors oyont, que enemis voylent vener, ou sont venus en Engleterre. Et en plusors auters cafes home poit tener per service de chevaler, et uncore il ne tient per escuage, ne payera escuage, sicome jerra dit en le tenure per graundserjeantie. Mes en tous cafes ou home tient per service de chivaler, tiel service trait all seignior gard et mariage.

or are come in England. And in many other cafes a man may hold by knights service, and yet he holdeth not by escuage, nor shall pay escuage, as shall be said in the tenure by grand serjeantie. But in all cafes where a man holds by knights service, this service draweth to the lord ward and mariage.

castellani, or constabularii castri, for keepers or constables of a castle.

Vide Mag. Chart. cap. 19. 20. W. 1. cap. 7. Brañt. lib. 5. fol. 363. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 43.

A garder un tower del castle, &c.

A tower, or a doore, or a bridge, or a sconce, or some other certaine part of the castle; for the tenure must be certaine. And this may be done by the tenant himselfe or his deputie.

Magna Chart. cap. 20.

Del seignior. For it cannot be of a castle of another.

Lord and tenant by castle-gard, the lord granteth over his seigniorie to another, [a] the castle-gard is gone because the grantee hath not the castle. [b] For the same reason it is, that if one holdeth of me, as of my manor of D. by fealtie and suit of

(2. Ro. Ab. 513.)

[a] Temps E. 2. tit. Aff. 399.

31. E. 1. tit. Aff. 441.

[b] 17. E. 3. 65. 72. 4. E. 3. 42.

court, if I grant over the services of this tenant, the suit is gone, because the grantee hath not the manor. [c] But if the castle be wholly ruined, Si castrum sit penitus dirutum, yet the tenure remaineth by knights service, and it goeth in benefit of the tenant, as to the garding of the castle, untill it be reedified. But ward and mariage belongeth to the lord in the meane time. For Littleton in the end of this section putteth it for a generall rule in all cafes where a man holdeth by knights service, it draweth ward and mariage.

[c] 4. Co. 88. Luttrell's case. 3. H. 8. Bendloes Capel's case. 4. E. 3. 55.

If the tenant make default in garding of the castle, the lord may distreine for it, and recover satisfaction in dammages.

Per reasonable garnishment. This warning must be given by the lord or some other for him, and the tenant need not to stirre untill he have such warning.

Enemies. Which is to be understood of any manner of enemies whatsoever. And though Littleton speakes of enemies, yet it seemeth that to keep a castle in time of insurrection and rebellion (albeit in propriete of speech rebels are no enemies) is a tenure by knights service. Vide Hill. 8. E. 1. Midd. Rott. 86.

Voylent vener. For preparation is to be made upon warning before the enemy be come indeed into England. This appeareth to be in time of hostilitie and warre, or for preparation therefore. But a tenure to keepe a castle in time of peace only is no knights service.

If the tenant by castle-gard doe serve the king in his warre, he shall be discharged against the lord, according to the quantitie of the time that he was in the king's host.

(2. Ro. Ab. 505.)

Fleta speaketh of an old word called wardswite, and (saith he) Significat quietanciam misericordie, in casu quo non invenerit quis hominem ad wardam faciendam in castro.

Fleta lib. 1. cap. 42.

Sect. 112.

ET si un tenant, que tient de son seignior per service de entier fee de chivaler, morust, son heire donquez esteant de plein age s. de 21 ans,

AND if a tenant, which holdeth of his lord by the service of a whole knight's fee, dieth, his heire then being of full age s. of 21 yeares, then Reliefe, relevium. Vide Sect. 103.

This word is derived from the originall before (1).

Nota, Reliefe [a] is no service, but an improvement of the service, or an incident to the service (2), for the which the lord may distreine (3), but cannot have an action of debt (4), but

[a] Temps E. 1. Reliefe. 13. 41.

E. 3. 22. 4. E. 2. Avowrie. 210.

7. H. 6. 13. 22. H. 8. Rot. 528.

34. E. 1. Avowrie 233. (3. Co.

66. Ante 47. b.)

(1) See ante 76. a. Lord Coke there cites a passage from Domesday book, in which reliefs are mentioned; and from this early use of the word, and from the terms of a law of Edward the Confessor and of two laws of Canute, some have inferred, that reliefs were known to the Saxons. This circumstance is much relied on by those, who insist, that feudal tenures were established in England before the Conquest; and therefore Sir Henry Spelman, who supports the contrary opinion, is very full in his observation on this part of the subject. The sum of what he advances is, that Domesday book at the utmost only proves the use of reliefs after the Conquest, which is not denied; that the supposed law of Edward the Confessor is either not genuine or belongs to William Rufus; that heriot, which is the word used in the original language of the laws of Canute, is improperly translated relief; and lastly, that however it might suit with the policy of the Normans to assimilate reliefs to heriots, there were the most essential differences between the two. According to Sir Henry Spelman, the heriot was paid out of the goods of the deceased possessor of the land, the relief by the heir, out of his own purse; the heriots at all events, the relief only in case of taking up the lands in succession. These two of the differences taken by Spelman are particularly stated here; because they apply but his executors or administrators may have an action of debt, and cannot distraine (1).

[6] Stat. de r. E. 2 de militibus. Vide 9. Co. 124. Anth. Lowe's case. (2. Inst. 596. Ante 69. b.)

And it [b] is to be understood, that feodum militis, a knight's fee, consisteth of twentieth pound land (2), and he payeth for his reliefe for a whole knight's fee the fourth part of his fee, viz. five pound, and so according to the rate.

Baronia, a baronie, or a baron's fee, consisteth of thirteene knights fees and the third part of a knights fee (3), which amounteth to foure hundred markes per annum; and the baron for an entire baronie payeth for his reliefe an hundred markes, which is the fourth part of the value of his baronie.

Comitatus, an earledome, or an earle's fee consisteth of a baronie, and the third part of a baronie, which includeth twenty knights fees amounting to foure hundred pound land per annum, and he payeth for his reliefe for an entire earledome the fourth part of his revenue, and that is an hundred pound. All which appeareth by the statute of Magna Charta cap. 2. made in the ninth yeare of Henrie the third, at which time there was neither duke, marquesse nor viscount in England, as before is said. But there be presidents in the exchequer, that a dukedome consisting of two earledomes, viz. eight hundred pound land by the yeare, payeth two hundred pound, and a marquesse consisting of two baronies, viz. eight hundred markes land per annum, and of an earledome and a halfe, payeth two hundred markes for his reliefe. What the viscount should pay in certaine I have not heard. Before the making of the statute of Magna Charta the king had rationabile relevium of noblemen, and it was not reduced to any certaintie (4), yet ought it to have been reasonable and not excessive.

I have seene the record of a charter made in 20. H. 6. to Henrie Beauchampe earle of Warwicke, whereby he was created king of the Ile of Wight, to him and the heires males of his bodie. His reliefe was incertaine, and not limited by the statute of Magna Charta.

It is to be observed, that the words of the statute of Magna Charta be Haeres comitis de comitatu integro et haeres baronis de baronia integra, &c. Now what an entire earledome and an entire baronie is, hath bene declared before.

It is also to be observed, that at and before the statute of Magna Charta all earledomes and baronies were derived from the crowne, and were holden of the king in capite, and the king would not suffer them to be divided, or severed. And such entire earledomes, and entire baronies are within the statute, but at this day earles and barons are without such earldomes and baronies of the kings gift in chiefe. For at the creation of an earle, he hath sometimes an annuitie granted unto him (5), and sometimes nothing; so as such earles and barons so created are cleere out of the statute of Magna Charta, and are to pay such reliefes as other men that hold of the king in capite. For as the heire of a knight shall not pay reliefe, unlesse he hath a knight's fee, &c. so neither the earle nor baron shall pay any reliefe by this statute, unlesse he hath an earledome, &c. or baronie, &c.

Son heire de pleine age f. de 21 ans. And yet in some case the heire shall pay reliefe when he was within age at the time of the death of his ancestor. As if a man holdeth lands of the king by knights service in capite, and of a common person other lands by knights service, and dieth, his heire being within age, the king hath all in ward by his prerogative untill the full age of the heire. In this case the heire shall pay reliefe to the other lord, for that the king had the wardship of bodie and lands. And the lord upon everie descent ought to have either wardship or reliefe.

But if there be lord and tenant by knights service, and the tenant dieth, his heire being within age, the lord wayveth his wardship as he may, and taketh himselfe to his feignorie, in this case the lord shall not have reliefe at his full age, because he might have had the wardship of the bodie and land. Lord and tenant of two manors by divers tenures by knights service, the tenant is disseised of the one, and the disseisor dieth seised, and the tenant dieth seised of the other, his heire within age, the lord seised the bodie and lands of that manor, and after the heire at his full age recovereth the other manor against the heire of the disseisor, he shall pay reliefe for that manor, and so one lord of the heire of one tenant shall have both wardship during his minoritie and reliefe at his full age.

(1) S. p. acc. ante 47. b. post 162. b. and 1. Show. 36.

(2) See ante 69. a. and note 3. there.

(3) As to this notion of there being a certain number of knights fees in a barony and earldom, see ante 69. a. note 5.

(4) See 2. Inst. 7. 8. and Wright's Ten. 99.

(5) This annuity is therefore called creation-money, and the grant of it usually expressed, that it was assigned in order to enable the grantee the better to sustain his newly-acquired dignity. Mr. Madox gives us various instances of such annuities; and it appears, that they were not confined to earls; for one of the letters patent in his book is a grant of 10 l. a year by Hen. 6. out of the crown-revenues in Cumberland to Sir Thomas Percy on creating him baron of Egremont. See Mad. Baron. Anglic. 143. In Dyer 2. a. notice is taken of an annuity of this kind, and it is there said to be so annexed to the dignity as not to be alienable. See further as to creation-money, Camd. Britann. ed. 1772. p. 125.

ply to heriots and reliefs as they are now distinguishable. See the Treat. on Feuds in Spelm. Polthum. 31. It is observable, that Bracton marks the distinction between reliefs and heriots very strongly, and in terms partly corresponding with the idea of Spelman; for after treating at large on reliefs Bracton adds, est quidem alia praestatio, quae nominatur herietum, et quae nullam comparationem habeat ad relevium; scilicet ubi tenens, liber vel servus, in morte sua dominum suum, de quo tenuerit, respicit de auctoritate

Glanvil, lib. 9. cap. 4. 6. Bracton, lib. 2. fol. 83. Britton, fol. 178. Ockam 42. F. N. B. 83. 256. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 17. Magna Charta, cap. 2.

Vide Bracton, fol. 84. 14. H. 4. in recordo longo. 10. H. 7. 19. 20. E. 3. Aff. 122. tit. Avowrie. 126. 18. Ad. pl. ultimo. 22. E. 3. 8.

16. E. 3. Exchange 2. 46. E. 3. Forfeiture 18.

24. E. 3. 24. 26. H. 8. 32. H. 8. ca. 2. in fine.

2. E. 3. 6. Pl. Com. 229. 33. E. 3. tit. Gard. Stathom.

Son heire. [k] And yet the successor of a bishop or abbot may pay reliefe by prescription or grant. [l] 3. E. 3. 13. 76. 8 R. 2. Re-liefe 14. 3. H. 4. 2. a. H. 3.
Avowrie 124.

If the tenant infeoffeth his heire apparent by collusion, and dieth, [l] his heire of full age, it is a question in our bookes, whether he shall have reliefe either by the common law, or by the statute of Marlebridge ca. 6. But now the statute [m] of 13. Eliz. ca. 5. hath cleared that question, and that the lord shall have reliefe where the conveyance is made to any person by collusion, &c. [n] 39. E. 3. tit. Reliefe 24. E.
3. Reliefe 11. Bracton lib. 2. 85.
[m] 13. Eliz. cap. 5.

Sect. 113.

This is evident, and needeth no explanation.

ITEM home poit tener son terre de son seignior per le service de deux fees de chivaler; et donque l'heire, esteant de pleine age al temps de mort son auncestre, paiera a son seignior x. l. pur reliefe. ALSO a man may hold his land of his lord by the service of two knights fees, and then the heire, being of full age at the time of the death of his ancestor, shall pay to his lord x. pound for reliefe (1).

Sect. 114.

NO T A si soit aiel pier et fits, et la mere morust vivant le pier de le fits, et puis laiel, que tient la terre per service de chivaler, morust seisie, et sa terre descendist al fits la mere come heire al aiel, que est deins age, en cest cas le seignior avera le garde de la terre, mes nemy le garde del corps del heire, pur ceo que nul serra en garde de son corps a ascun seignior vivant son pier, pur ceo que le pier durant son vie avera le mariage de son heire apparant, et nemy le seignior. Auterment est, ou le pier est mort vivant la mere, lou le terre tenus en chi-

NO T E, if there be grandfather father and sonne, and the mother dieth living the father of the sonne, and after the grandfather, which holds his land by knights service, dieth seised, and his land descend to the sonne of the mother as heire to the grandfather, who is within age, in this case the lord shall have the wardship of the land, but not of the bodie of the heire, because none shall be in ward of his bodie to any lord, living his father, for the father during his life shall have the marriage of his heire apparent, and not the lord (2). Otherwise it is, where the father dieth living the mother,

FI T Z. Yet the father shall have the marriage of his daughter if she be his heire apparent, and Littleton's reason extendeth to the daughter, for that (saith he) the father shall have the wardship of his heire apparent, within which words the daughter is included, so long as the continueth heire apparent.

Le seignior avera le gard del terre. Note that albeit in this case the law doth give the custodie of the body to the father, and barreth the lord thereof, yet the lord shall have the wardship of the land by force of the tenure at the first creation thereof. And so it is if the father marieth his heire within age and dieth, yet the lord shall have the wardship of the land.

Vivant son pier. This doth not extend to any collaterall heire, but only to the sonne or daughter being heire apparent; for albeit a man shall have an action of trespassse Quare consanguineum et hæredum caput, and albeit the words be Cujus maritagium ad ipsum pertinet, because the well bestowing of his Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 5. 16. E. 3. Discein, 6. 31. E. 1. Gard. 164. 8. E. 2. Tresp. 235. F. N. B. 243. Ambrosia Gorge's case. 6. Co. 22.

9. E. 2. 18. E. 3. 25. 29. Aff. 15. 29. E. 3. 37. 31. E. 3. Bar. 237.

(1) See further as to reliefs, Post 85. a. at the end of the note there, 90. b. 91. a. and b. 92. a. 93. a. 106. a. Wright's Ten. 97. and Vin. Abr. Tenures E. a. to O. a.

(2) So in the case of the king, the father shall have the custody of the body and the marriage. 7. Jac. Cur. Ward. Ley. n. 2. Unton's case. Hal. MSS. See Ley 1.

averio suo, vel de secundo meliori, secundum diversam locorum consuetudinem; quæ quidem præstatio magis fit de gratia quam de jure, et quæ hereditatem non contingit. See Bract. lib. 2. cap. 36. fo. 86. a. See further as to heriots, post 185. b.—(2) See acc. Ley on Wards and Liv. fol. ed. 17. W. Jo. 133. The distinction is not merely nominal; for lord Coke in another place assigns it as a reason, why a relief is not within the limitation of 50 years prescribed by the 32. H. 8. c. 2. in the case of avowry or conuface for suit or service. 2. Inst. 95. Note that in the book last cited forty years are mentioned as the limitation in the 32. H. 8. but Mr. Ruffhead in his edition of the Statutes says, that in the record the time is fifty years.—(3) But it is said, that if the relief is claimed, not

Lib. 2. Cap. 4. Of Knights Service. Sect. 115.

32. E. 3. Gard. 32. 30. E. 3. 17.
31. H. 6. 55. 12. H. 4. 16. F.
N. B. 143. 31. E. 3. Br. 357.
9. E. 4. 53.

was heire apparent in mariage is a great establisment of his house, yet that is to be understood as against a wrongdoer, but not against a gardian in chivalrie, and the mother valrie descendit al where the land holden sits de part son pier, in chivalrie descends to the son on the part of the father, &c.

shall have the like writ for taking away of her sonne and heire apparent. And yet the mother shall not barre the lord by knights service of his wardship of the bodie, as Littleton here saith, Qui tamen ex filia tua nascitur in potestate tua non est, sed patris ejus.

Vide Flet. lib. 1. cap. 6. See
W. 2. c. 35. (2. Ro. Ab. 39.)

A ascun seignior. Put the case there is lord, & feme tenant by knights service of a carve of land, the feme maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and taketh the lord to husband, and have issue a sonne, the wife dieth, the issue entreth for the condition broken, the lord entreth into the land as gardeine by knights service, and maketh his executors, and dieth, in this case, the executors shall have the wardship of the land during the minority of the heire, but not the wardship of the body; for albeit the lord seemeth to have a double interest in the wardship of the bodie, one as lord, and another as father, yet as father, and not as lord in judgement of law, he shall have the wardship of the bodie of his son and heire apparent, in respect of nature, which was before any wardship of respect of seigniorie by knights service began, and that wardship by reason of nature cannot be waived, and claime made in respect of the seigniorie. And the executors of the father shall not have such a wardship, which the testator had as father, neither can such a wardship be forfeited by outlawrie, because it is due to the father in respect of privitie of nature.

(3. Co. 39. a. post 88. b.) 33. H.
6. 55. 7. Co. 13. in Calvin's case. Vide Flet. lib. 1. c. 12. § cum Patr. de feodo, &c. (Ante 8.
a. 2. Ro. Ab. 39.)

De son heire apparent. And therefore if the father be attainted of felonie, &c. then cannot the sonne or daughter be an heire apparent, because the blood is corrupted between them, and consequently in the life of the father his sonne in that case shall be in ward.

A woman seised of lands in fee holden by knights service taketh husband an alien, and hath issue, and the wife dieth, the issue shall be in ward, and the father shall not have the custodie of him, for that in the eye of the law he is not his heire apparent, as Littleton here speaketh.

Sect. 115.

This section is an addition to Littleton (1), and therefore I passe it over; and the rather, for that the said statute of 4. H. 7. is become of no force, for that by the statute of 27. H. 8. cap.
10. all uses are transferred into possession.

NOTA, si home soit seisie de terre, que est tenuus per service de chivaler, et fait feoff-ment en fee a son use, et morust seisie del use, son heire deins age, et nul volunt per luy declare, le seignior avera brieve de droit de gard de corps et del terre, si-come tenant ust devie seisie del demesne. Et si le heire soit de pleine age al temps del morant son ancestor, en tiel case il payera reliefe, sicome il fuisset seisie del demesne. Et cest per lestatute de anno 4. H. cap. 17.

NOTE, if a man be seised of land which is holden by knight's service, and maketh a feoffment in fee to his own use, and dieth seised of the use, his heire within age, and no will declared by him, the Lord shall have a writ of right of the wardship of the bodie and land, as if the tenant had died seised of the demesne. And if the heire bee of full age at the time of the decease of his ancestor, in this case he shall pay reliefe, as if he had been seised of the demesne. And this is by the statute of 4 H. 7. cap. 17.

Sect.

(1) It was first introduced in Red.

not by reason of tenure, but by custom, there must be a prescription for the distress to warrant it. See W. Jo. 133.—(4) Ante ante 47. b. But there are some opinions to the contrary. See 2. Leon. 179. 2. Ro. Rep. 371.

Sect. 116.

NO T A, il y ad gardein en droit en chivalrie. et gardein en fait en chivalrie. Gardein en droit en chivalrie est, lou le seigniour per cause de son seignorie est seisie de gardi de ternes et del heyre, ut supra. Gardein en fait en chivalrie est, lou en tuel case le seigniour apres son seisin graunt, per fait ou sans fait, le gardi des terras, ou del heire, ou dambideux a un auter, per force de quel grant le grauntee est en possession. Donque est le grauntee appel gardein en fait.

NOTE, there is gardian in right in chivalrie, and gardian in deede in chivalrie. Gardian in right in chivalrie is, where the lord by reason of his seignory is seised of the wardshippe of the lands, and of the heyre, ut supra. Gardian in deede in chivalrie is, where in such case the lord after his seisin grants, by deed or without deed, the wardship of the lands, or of the heire, or of both, to another, by force of which grant the grauntee is in possession. Then is the grauntee called gardian in fait, or gardian in deede.

HERE Littleton divideth gardian in Chivalrie, into gardian in right, a gardian in fait. And this is evident, and needeth no explanation.

Per fait ou sans fait.

Here Littleton affirmeth, that the wardship of the body may be granted over without deed; and herein note a diversity betwene an originall chattell of a thing that properly lyeth in grant, and a chattell deriyed out of a freehold of any thing that lyeth in grant. As for example, if a man make a lease for years of a villeine, this cannot be done without deed, neither can the lessee assigne it over without deed, because it is deriyed out of a freehold that lyeth in Grant. But the wardship of the body is an originall chattell during the minority deriyed out of no freehold; and therefore as the law createth it without deed, so it may be assigned over without deed.

A corporation aggregate of many, cannot make a lease for years without deed, in respect of the quality of the incorporation; but their lessee may assigne it over without deed.

(2. Ro. Ab. 62.)

12. E. 3. tit. Grant. 59. 7. E. 3. 63. 26. E. 3. 65. 28. E. 3. 96. 14. E. 3. Act. for Left. 17. 25. E. 3. 40. 31. E. 3. Vouch. 5. 46. E. 3. 25. 20. E. 4. 16. 12. H. 4. 19. 5. H. 7. 17. 36. 22. El. Dyer 371. 35. H. 8. Br. tit. Grant. 85.

16. H. 8. tit. Grant. B. 125. 22. H. 6. 34. 19. H. 6. 33. (Post. 325. b.)

24. E. 3. 69. 70. 5. E. 3. 58. 43. E. 3. 15. 5. H. 7. 36. 14. H. 7. 16. 15. H. 8. 8. Bract. 366. 368. 246. 43. E. 3. 1. 6. 5. H. 7. 37. 11. H. 6. 4. 6. H. 7. 3. 18. H. 8. 16. Eli. Dyer 323.

C H A P.

(1) By the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. tenures by knight's service, whether of the king or of a common person, together with all its oppressive fruits and consequences, as also those of socage in capite, is wholly taken away; and every such tenure is converted into free and common socage. The same statute enacts, that all tenures, which should afterwards be created by the king, should be in free and common socage only. Nothing can be more full in expression, than this act; for besides generally abolishing tenure by knight's service, and the consequences peculiar to that tenure and socage in capite, it descends into particulars with a redundancy of words, which can only be accounted for by the extreme anxiety to extirpate completely the evils the legislature had under contemplation, for which purpose it might be deemed most safe to attack them in every shape. We have already observed in some former notes, that homage escuage and the aids pro filio marito and pro socore filii chivalier are expressly mentioned. It remains to add, that the statute, after taking away the count of wards and liveries, enumerates wardships, liveries, primer seisin or ousterlemains, values and forfeitures of marriages, and fines seisinures and pardons for alienation, and sweeps away the whole. But the act preserves rents certain, heriots, suits of court, and other services incident to common socage, and fealty; and also fines for alienation due by the customs of particular manors, unless such fines are for lands in capite. Reliefs for lands, of which the tenure is converted into common socage, are also saved in some instances; for the clause, which preserves rents certain, provides that such relief shall be paid in respect of such rents, as is paid on the death of a tenant in common socage. From this clause it seems, that there can be no relief out of lands which the statute changed into socage, unless where a quit-rent is also payable; and the reason of thus expressing the act will appear by considering, that a year's rent is the relief for lands holden by common socage, and consequently is never due out of lands, which are not subject to a rent. See post sect. 126.

It was intended to have continued the notes of fol. 64. a. in this place; but the annotator finds it convenient to postpone them to the end of the chapter of Villenage.

CHAP. 5. Sect. 117.

Socage.

Mirror ca. 1. sect. 3.

4. H. 7. ca. 19. 4. Co. Tiringham's case fo. 39. and 4. H. 7.
ca. 12.TENURE in Socage.(1)

Agriculture or Tillage is of great account in law, as being very profitable for the common wealth, wherein the goodnesse of the habit is best knowne by the privation: for by laying of lands used in tilth to pasture, six maine inconveniences do daily encrease. First idlenesse, which is the ground and beginning of all mischiefs. 2. Depopulation, and decay of townes; for where in some townes 200 persons were occupied, and lived by their lawful labors, by converting of tillage into pasture, there have beene maintained but two or three heardmen; and where men have beene accounted sheepe of God's pasture, now become sheep men of these pastures. 3. Husbandry, which is one of the greatest commodities of the realme, is decayed. 4. Churches are destroyed, and the service of God neglected by diminution of church livings, (as by decay of tythes, &c.) 5. Injury and wrong is done to patrons and God's ministers. And

6. The defence of the land against forraigne enemies is enfeebled and impaired, the bodies of husbandmen being more strong and able, and patient of cold, heat, and hunger, than of any other.

(a) 20. E. 3. Adm. surement 8.
14. Aff. 21. 24. E. 3. 25.
• Mirror.
Bracton fo. 217. Fleta. lib. 2. ca.
41. Regist. orig. 97. Ockam 38.
39. 4. E. 3. 1. a. 18. E. 2. tit.
action sur leitat. 45. Temps E. 1.
Avoury 230. 29. E. 3. 16. 17.

Cic. lib. 1. Offic.

Virgil. lib. 1. Georg.

Seneca in Epist.

The two consequents that follow of these inconveniences, are first the displeasure of Almighty God, and secondly the subversion of the policy and good government of the realm; and all this appeareth in our bookes. And the common law [a] giveth errable land (which anciently is called hyde and gaine) the prehemineny and precedency before meadows, pastures, woods, mynes, and all other grounds whatsoever: and • averia caruca the beasts of the plough have in some cases more priviledge than other cattell have. And amongst the Romans agriculture or tillage was of high estimation, insomuch as the senators themselves would put their hand to the plough, and it is said, that never prospered tillage better, than when the senators themselves plowed (such force hath the example of superiors) whereof three famous Romanes in their severall kinds spake.

Omnium rerum, ex quibus aliquid exquiritur, nihil agricultura melius, nihil uberius, nihil dulcius, nihil libero homine dignius.

*O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norunt
Agricolae, quibus ipsa procul discordibus armis
Fundit humo facilem victum iustissima tellus.*

Nullum laborem recusant manus, quæ ab aratro ad arma transferuntur, &c. fortior autem miles ex confragoso venit; sed ille unctus et nitidus in primo pulvere deficit. But now let us peruse our author's words.

Socage.

1) See Wright's Ten. 143. and 1. Blackst. Comment. 5th ed. 79.

Socagium. Littleton in this chapter section 119. fetcheth this word from the original.

Socagium idem est quod servitium focæ, et foca idem est quod caruca. s. un foke ou un carue. (1)

And Bracton agreeth herewith. Dicitur socagium (saith he) à focco, et inde tenentes dicuntur socmanni, [b] eo quod deputati sunt tantummodo ad culturam. And Benerth signifieth the service of plough and cart. It is to be observed, that in the booke of [c] Domesday land holden by knight's service was called Tainland, and land holden by Socage was called Reveland; which appeareth in that it is said there, hæc terra fuit terra regis Edwardi Tainland, sed postea conversa est in Reveland. (2) And in that booke they that held in Socage were called by severall names, as Sochemanni or Sokemanni, which still continueth; sometime *Coleberti. i. qui tenent in liberum socagium per redditum; and sometime they are called Radchenestres. i. liberi homines, qui tamen arabant, herciabant, falcabant, metebant, &c. And here it appeareth how necessary it is, that words be fetched from their originals, and our author est verus etimologus both in this and in many other places in his [d] three bookes. And it is to be observed once for all, that the legall termination of (agium) in composition signifieth service or duty, as homagium the service of the man, escuagium servitium scuti, [e] socagium servitium focæ, bidagium the duty to be paid for the hide or plough-land; and so of cornagium, coragium, carnagium, cariagium, burgagium, willenagium, and guidagium, (which one describeth thus) quod datur alicui, ut tuto conducatur per loca alterius, and the like.

Iffint que les services [f] ne sont pas services de chivaler. And in the next section he saith, and every tenure, that is not a tenant in chivalry, is a tenure in Socage. Ex donationibus autem, feoda militaria, vel magnam serjantiam non continentibus, oritur nobis quoddam nomen generale, quod est socagium. Here Littleton speaketh of tenures of common persons; for grand serjantie is not knight's service, and yet it is not a tenure in Socage, as shall be said hereafter. Also here he meaneth temporall services, and not frankalmoigne, as by the examples he put is manifest, and as in his proper place shall appeare more at large. Also here Littleton speaketh of socage largely taken, and so called ab effectu; that is, all tenures, that have the like effects and incidents belonging to them as socage hath, are termed tenures in socage, albeit originally service of the plough was not reserved. As if originally a rose, a paire of gilt spurs, a rent, and such like were reserved, or that the tenants in condemnatos ultroces manus mittant, ut alios suspendio, alios membrorum detractione, &c. puniant, these are said to be tenures in socage ab effectu; for that there shall be like gardein in socage, like reliefe, and such other effects and incidents as a tenure in socage hath, and are so termed to distinguish the same from knights service. Nay, the worst tenure that I have read of, of this kind, is to hold lands to be ultor sceleratorum condemnatorum, ut alios suspendio, alios membrorum detractione vel aliis modis juxta quantitatem perpetrati sceleris puniat, (that is) to be a hangman or executioner. It seemeth in ancient times such officers were not voluntaries, nor for lucre to be hired, unlesse they were bound thereunto by tenure. And so note that some tenures in socage are named à causa, and some and the greater part ab effectu.

Car homage de jøy ne fait service de chivaler. But it is a presumption where homage is due, that the land is holden by knights service, as hath beene said.

Bracton lib. 2. fol. 77.

[b] Glanvil. lib. 7. cap. 9. & 11. & lib. 9. ca. 4. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 8. & lib. 3. ca. 14. & 16. Britton fol. 164.

[c] Domesday, Herefordsc. Vid. devant sect. 1. Sudru. Wendesford. Westeserie.

* Mich. 10. E. 3. Coram rege Wiits in Thesaur.

[d] For etimologies vid. sect. 93. 154. 164. 204. 234. 267. 268. &c.

[e] Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14. Bracton lib. 2. cap. 16. Britton. fol. 164

[f] Mirror, ca. 2. sect. 18.

Fleta ubi supra.

Ockam, esp. quæ per solam consuetudinem, &c.

Ockam, fo. 31. a & b.

Sect. 118.

Item home poit tener de son seignior per fealty tantum, et tiel tenure est tenure en socage; car chescun tenure, que n'est pas tenure in chivalry, est tenure en socage.

Of this sufficiently hath beene said before.

ALSO a man may hold of his lord (4 Co. S.) by fealty only, and such tenure is tenure in socage: for every tenure, which is not tenure in chivalrie, is a tenure in socage.

Sect. 119.

ET il est dit, que la cause, pur que tiel tenure est dit et adle nome de tenure en socage,

AND it is said, that the reason, why such tenure is called and hath the name of tenure in socage,

TEMP S
de memory.
Time of memory is when no man alive hath had any prooffe

(1) Mr. Somner disapproves of this etymology, as not large enough to comprehend all the services of the tenure by socage, which may be and sometimes are totally unconnected with the plough. According to him socage is derived from the Saxon word soc, which signifies liberty or privilege, and with agium added to denote the agenda or service imported a free or privileged tenure; and this derivation is preferred by a writer of great judgment. Somn. Gavelk. 133. and 2. Blackst. Comment. 3th ed. 80. However Sir Martin Wright, though he confesses the ingenuity of Mr. Somner's derivation, endeavours to justify Littleton's, and thinks that the objection to it is obviated, when it is considered, that in the case of socage-tenures plough-service was the most ancient and usual reservation; to which observation one may add, that the propriety of a denomination is not always the proper test of etymologies. Wright's Ten. 143. It seems indeed, that both derivations have their share of probability, which is as much as can be expected on a subject so very uncertain.—(2) This explanation of Thane land and Reveland

Lib. 2.

Cap. 4.

Of Socage.

Sect. 119.

(6 Co. 59.)

Cap. Burgage. sect. 170.

Mirror. cap. 2. sect. 18. Vid.
19. E. 2. Avowrie. 224. 3. E. 2. action. sur leff. 24. 10. E. 3.
24. 20. E. 3. Avowrie. 124. 39. E.
3. 17. 39. Aff. p. 3. 20. Aff. 1.

Cap. Confirmation. sect. 539.

4. E. 3. 161. 6. E. 3. 283.

prooffe to the contrary, nor hath any conufance to the contrarie, as fhall be hereafter faid in his proper place. And of neceffity this change, hereafter fpoken of, muft be before time of memorie; for within time of memory, the fervices of the plough cannot be changed into money by confent of the tenant and the defire of the lords, .s. into an annuall rent, neither by releafe or confirmation or other conveyance, fo long as the feignior remaineth, as fhall be faid in his due place.

Devoient venger oue leur fokes.

The plough is named propter excellentiam; but the ficle, and the fyth, for the reaping in harveft and fuch like, are alfo included. For as carucata terra, a ploughland, may contain houfes, milles, paftures, meadow, wood, &c. as pertaining to the plough; fo under the fervice of the plough, all fervices of tillage or husbandry are included.

Uncore le nofme de focage demurt.

Altho' the caufe whereupon the name of focage firft grew be taken away, yet the name remaines the fame it hath beene, and is ufed to diftinguifh this tenure from a tenure by knights fervice. Nomina fi nefcis, perit cognitio

est ceo; quia focagium idem est quod servitium socæ, et soca idem est quod caruca, .s. un foke ouan carue. Et en ancient temps, devant le limitation de temps de memorie, grand part de les tenants, que tyendront de leur seigniors per socage, devoient venger oue leur fokes, chescun de les dits tenant pur certain jours per an pur arer et semer les demefnes le seignior. Et pur ceo que tielx overages fueront fait pur le viver et sustenance de leur seigniors, ils fueront quits envers leur seigniors de tous maners de services, &c. Et pur ceo que tielx services fueront faits oue leur fokes, tiel tenure fuit appel tenure en socage. Et puis apres tielx services fueront changes en denyers, per consent des tenants et per desire des seigniors, .s. en un annuall rent, &c. Mes uncore le nofme de socage demurt, et en divers lyeux les tenants uncore font tielx services oue leur fokes a leur seigniors; issint que tous maners de tenures, que ne sont pas tenures per service de chivaler, sont appels tenures en socage.

is this; becaufe focagium idem est quod servitium socæ, and soca idem est quod caruca, &c. a foke or a plough. In ancient time, before the limitation of time of memory, a great part of the tenants, which held of their lords by focage, ought to come with their ploughes, every of the faid tenants for certaine daies in the yeare to plow and fow the demefne of the lord. And for that fuch workes were done for the livelihood and sustenance of their lord, they were quit againft their lord of all manner of fervices, &c. And becaufe that fuch fervices were done with their ploughs, this tenure was called tenure in focage. And afterward thefe fervices were changed into money by the confent of the tenants and by the defire of the lords, viz. into an annual rent, &c. But yet the name of focage remaineth, and in divers places the tenants yet doe fuch fervices with their ploughes to their lords; fo that all manner of tenures, which are not tenures by knights fervice, are called tenures in focage.

land is opposed by Sir Henry Spelman, who investigates the subject very minutely. See Spelm. Posthum. 38. 39. In a former note we had occasion to hint at Sir John Dalrymple's opinion on the same subject and on the nature of the difference between bock land and folk land. See ante 6. a. note 6. Since the writing of that note a tract, intituled A Discourse on the Bock land and Folk land of the Saxons, hath been printed, the professed object of which is to examine and confute the notions advanced by Sir John Dalrymple. This tract, being at present only distributed amongst the author's friends, is difficult to be procured, and is mentioned here for the sake of such readers as may be curious to explore this dark and controverted subject. See further Fearn. Legigraphic. Chart. of Landed Property. ante 6. b. 7. a. 58. a. and 2. Whitak. Hist. Manchett. 154.

nitio rerum. Et nomina si perdas, certè distinctio rerum perditur. Therefore the names of things (as Littleton here teacheth) are for avoyding of confusion diligently to be observed.

Sect. 120.

ITEM si home tient de son seignior per escuage certaine, s. en tiel forme quant lescuage curge et est assesse per parliament a griender summe ou meinder summe, que le tenant paiera a son seignior forsque demy marke pur escuage, et nient plus ne meins, a quel graund summe ou a quel petite summe que lescuage curge, &c. tiel tenure est tenure en focage, et nemy service de chivalrie. Mes lou le summe, que le tenant paiera pur lescuage est non certain, s. lou il poit estre que le summe, que le tenant paiera pur lescuage a son seignior, poit estre a un foits le griender et a auter foits le meinder, solonque ceo que est assesse, &c. donques tiel tenure est tenure per service de chivaler.

certa servitia doe ever belong, so as the husbandman may the rather live in quiet.

Secondly, Escuage is to be paid at every time when it is assessed, and here it is not to be paid, but when it amounteth to forty shillings.

Sect. 121.

ITEM si home tient sa terre pur paier certaine rent a son seignior pur castle-garde, tiel tenure est tenure en focage.

ALSO if a man holdeth his land to pay a certaine rent to his lord for castle-gard, this tenure is tenure in focage (1). But

ESCUAGE (6. Co. 6. b.)

ESC certain is not in rei veritate servitium scuti, which is to be done by the body of a man, but it is servitium crumenæ of money, which is to be drawne out of the purse, and that is in effect a tenure in focage; wherein it is to be observed, that the service of payment of money is the more base, and lesse profitable for the commonwealth in this case, and hereof somewhat hath been said before in the chapter of Escuage, Sect. 98, 99.

If a man hold by homage, fealty and escuage, s. by an halfe penny, when escuage runs at fortie shillings, this is a tenure in focage, and no knights service, for two causes.

First, it is focage tenure, because of the certainty, for to the tenure in focage

15. E. 2. tit. Avowrie 215. 37.
E. 1. Aff. 441. 26. Aff. 66. 5.
E. 3. 6.

5. E. 4. 128. Vid. Rot. Parl. 4.
E. 3. nu. 19. Clavering's case excellently resolved in parliament.
Hill. 3. E. 2. coram Rege Rot.
34. Agnes Frowick's case.

Herein the difference standeth thus. If a rent be paid for castle-garde, it is cleere a focage tenure, as it is agreed

Vide sect. 98. 99.

(1) According to Fitzherbert such a tenure was knights service. This he infers from the form of a writ of livery sued out by an heir on attaining his full age, where he held of the king as of an honor in the king's hands by the service of rendering the rent of ten shillings a year towards guarding the castle of Dover; and Fitzherbert endeavours to account for the tenure's being knight's service, by suggesting, that the service might anciently have been guarding the castle, and that in modern times the king might take a rent in lieu of castle-guard, which taking of a rent, says Fitzherbert, would not alter the nature of the tenure. Fitzherb. Nat. Br. 256. However this opinion of the reverend judge is not delivered absolutely, but is accompanied with a quære; and indeed it seems very liable to exception. For—1. The form of the writ relied upon appears quite consistent with focage in capite; suing of livery by the heir at full age having been incident to that tenure as well as to knights service in capite, unless the heir was under fourteen at the death of the ancestor. See ante 77. a.—2. The propriety of the writ, in the case to which it is applied, may be suspected; for suing of livery by the heir, except in some few special cases distinguished by a kind of prescription of which lord Coke speaks doubtfully, was confined to tenure in capite, or to use the phrase preferred by

Lib 2.

Cap. 5.

Of Socage.

Sect. 122, 123.

Vide 4. Co. 88. in Lutterel's case.
19. R. 2. Gard. 195. 26. Aff.
66. F. N. B. 83. 256. 6. Co.
20. Gregorie's case.

ed in Lutterel's case according to Littleton's opinion. But if a summe in grosse, or other thing, be voluntarily paid or given by the tenant, and voluntarily

Mes lou le tenant doit per luy meme ou per un auter faire castle-garde, tiel tenure est tenure per service de chivaler.

received by the lord in lieu of castle-gard, yet the tenure by knights service remaineth. Vide Sect. 98. & 99.

where the tenant ought by himselfe or by another to doe castle-gard, such tenure is tenure by knights service.

Sect. 122.

IT is called rent service, because it is accompanied with some corporal service, as fealty at the least; in respect whereof the lord may distraine for it of common right. See more of this matter in the chapter of Rents.

ITEM en tous cases lou le tenant tient del seignior a paier a luy ascun certeine rent, cel rent est appelle rent service.

ALSO in all cases where the tenant holdeth of his lord to pay unto him any certaine rent, this rent is called rent service.

Sect. 123.

(2. Re. Abr. 40.)

EN tiels tenures en

focage. If a man be seised of a rent charge, rent secke, common of pasture, and such like inheritances, which doe not lie in tenure, and dyeth, his heire within age of 14 yeares; in this case, the heire may chose his gardein: but if he be of such tender yeares as he can make no choice, then (if the father hath made no disposition of the custody of the childe) it were moost fit, that the next of kin, to whom the inheritance cannot descend, should have the custody of him (2). And whosoever taketh the rent, &c. the heire shall charge him in an account. But if he hold any land in focage, in that case the

ITEM en tielx tenures en focage, si le tenant ad issue et devie, son issue esteant deins lage de 14 ans, donques le prochine amy del heire (1), a que lheritage ne poit descendre, a vera la garde de la terre et del heir jesque al age del heir de 14 ans, et tiel gardein est appelle gardein en focage. Car si la terre descendist al heire de part le pier, donques la mere, ou auter prochine cosen de part le mere, a vera la garde. Et si le terre descendist al heire de part la mere, donques le pier ou le prochein amy de part del pier a vera le garde de tielx terres ou tenements. Et quant lheire vient al age de 14 ans compleat, il poit enter et ouster le gardein en focage, et

ALSO in such tenures

in focage, if the tenant have issue and die, his issue being within the age of 14 yeares, then the next friend of that heire, to whom the inheritance cannot descend, shall have the wardship of the land and of the heire untill the age of 14 yeares, and such gardeine is called gardeine in focage. For if the land descend to the heire of the part of the father, then the mother, or other next cousin of the part of the mother, shall have the wardship. And if land descend to the heire of the part of the mother, then the father or next friend of the part of the father shall have the wardship of such lands or tenements.

Vide le statute de 4. & 5. Ph. & Marie. cap. 8.

(1) Here the word heir is significant, for it seems to import, that guardianship in focage can be of heirs only. However though it was always clear, that guardian in chivalry could only be on a descent, yet some have doubted whether wardship in focage might not be where the infant was in by purchase. This point was agitated so late as the 28th and 29th of Charles the Second, when the court held, that guardianship in focage was equally confined to a descent with guardianship in chivalry. 2. Mod. 176. Vin. Abr. Guardian 1.

(2) See post 88. b.

by Mr. Madox ut de corona, whereas the writ in Fitzherbert represents the tenure to have been ut de honore. See ante 73. a.—3. Fitzherbert's reason for considering the tenure as knights-service seems unwarranted by the terms of the writ. He supposes the service reserved to be castle-guard, and the rent to be merely taken by the king as a commutation in money; but the writ expressly

*occuper la terre luy valoir, si luy voit. Et tiel gardeine en socage
ne prendra ascuns issues ou profits de tiels terres ou tenements a son use de-mesne, mes tantselement al use et profit del heire; et del ceo il rendra account al heire, quant pleast al heire apres ceo que l'heire accomplish lage de xiiii ans. Mes tiel gar-dein sur son accompt avera allowance de tous ses reasnable costs et expences en tous choses, &c. Et si tiel gardein maria l'heire deins xiiii ans, il accomptera
al heire, ou a ses executors, de value del mariage, coment que
il ne prist riens pur
le value del mariage;
pur ceo que il serra rette sa folly de-mesne, que il luy voiloit marier sans prendre la value del mariage, sinon que il luy maria a tiel ma-riage, que est tant en value come le ma-riage del heire, &c.*

And when the heyre cometh to the age of 14 years complete, he may enter and oust the gardian in socage, and occupy the land him- selfe, if he will. And such gardian in socage shal not take any issues or profits of such lands or tenements to his own use, but only to the use and profit of the heire; and of this he shal render an account to the heire, when it pleaseth the heire after he accomplisheth the age of 14 yeares. But such gardian upon his account shal have allowance of all his reasonable costs and expences in all things, &c. And if such gardian marry the heire within age of 14 yeares, he shal account to the heire, or his executors, of the value of the marriage, although that he tooke nothing for the value of the marriage; for it shal be accounted his own folly, that he would marry him without taking the value of the marriage, unles that he marrieth him to such a marriage, that is as much worth in value as the marriage of the heire.

dye their issue within age of 14 yeares, the next of kin of the part of the mother shall have the custody of the body, and not the next of kin of the part of the father albeit he first seised it, because the mother was the cause of the gift. If a man be seised of lands holden in socage of the part of his father, and of other lands holden in socage of the part of his mother, and dyeth, his issue being within the age of 14 yeares, in this case such of the next of gardian in socage shall take into his custody as well the rent charges, &c. as the land holden in socage, because he hath the custody of the heire.

Si le tenant ad issue et devie.

The same law it is if the tenant hath no issue, but a brother or cousin within age of 14 yeares at the time of his death. [a] Also this doth extend as well to issue female, as to issue male.

Deins lage de 14

ans. Of this sufficient hath been spoken in the next preceding chapter.

Donques le prochain amy del heire, a que le enheritance ne

poit discender. The next friend of the heire, &c. Here amy or friend is taken for the next of blood. So the effect of it is, that the next of his blood to whom the inheritance cannot descend, whereby affinity without blood is excluded.

Le prochain. The next.

[b] If there be three brethren, and the youngest holdeth land in socage, and hath issue and dyeth his issue within age of 14 yeares, both the uncles are in equall degree, and yet the eldest shall be gardian; because in equall degree the law preferreth him. [c] And yet if lands holden in socage be given to a man and to the heirs of his body, and he dyeth his heire within age, the next cousin of the part of the father, albeit he be worthier, shall not be preferred before the next cousin of the part of the mother, but such of them as first seised the heire shall have his custody (1). But if lands be given in frankmarriage, and the donees have issue and

Glanvil lib. 7. cap. 11. Britton 163. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 9. Stat. de Hibernia, tit. Partition. (Plowd. 445.)

[b] Vid. 30. Aff. 47.

[c] Pl. Com. Carrel's case.

47. H. 3. Gard. 146. (2. Ro. Abr. 40. Ante 22. a.)

(1) This is according to the rule in aquali jure melior est conditio possidentis. Plowd. 296. in Carrel's case. See too Hawk. Abr of Co. Litt.

expressly states the rent to be the service. 4. If Fitzherbert, by saying that the king took the rent for the castle-guard, means that the latter was so changed into the former, that the castle-guard could no longer be demanded, then his idea of the tenure's continuing to be castle-guard and in chivalry is contradicted by Sir William Capell's case cited in Lord Coke's report of Luttrell's case; for in that the court held, that by such a perpetual change of the service the tenure was converted into socage. See 4. Co. 88. a.—5. The authority of Littleton is clearly against Fitzherbert's notion; and according to the opinion of the former, a case, in which the service reserved was a yearly rent in money for guard of the castle of Dover, was adjudged early in the reign of Charles the First. See Litt. Rep. 47. However it should not be concealed, that in this last case the court seemed inclined to think, that under special circumstances there might be a change of the castle-guard into rent by consent of the king and his tenant without altering the tenure, where evidence could be given of the manner in which the change was effected.

of kinne of either side, as first happeth the body of the heire, shall have him (1), but the next of blood of the part of the father shall enter into the lands of the part of the mother, and the next of kinne of the part of the mother, shall enter into the lands of the part of the father (2).

[d] F. N. B. 139. b. Regist.

[e] 7. E. 3. 46. 16. E. 3. ac. 52.

21. E. 3. 8. 31. E. 3. Enfant 9.

17. E. 2. Account 121. 26. E.

3. 63. 10. H. 6. 14. F. N. B.

118.

[f] Braet. li. 2. fo. 88.

[b] Flet. l. 1. ca. 10.

[d] If A be gardian in socage, of the body and lands of B within the age of fourteen years, A shall be gardian in socage per cause de Gard (3). But an infant within age, that [e] is not in the custody of another, cannot be gardian in socage; because no writ of account lyeth against an infant. And herewith agreeth Braet. [f] and yeeldeth this reason, alium regere non potest, qui seipsum regere non novit. And Fleta saith, [b] that minor minorem custodire non debet; alios enim presumitur male regere, qui seipsum regere nescit. And by like reason an ideot, a man non compos mentis, a lunaticke, a man cæcus & mutus, or surdus & mutus, or a leper removed by a writ de leproso amovendo, cannot be gardian in socage. But in the case of gard per cause de Gard, there lyeth an action of account against A in the case abovesaid.

[i] Lib. Rub. cap. 70.

[k] Glanv. lib. 7. ca. 11.

[l] Pl. Com. Carrel's case.

(2. Ro. Abr. 40. Cro. Eliz. 825.

Mo. 635.)

[m] Lit. lib. 1. fo. 2; 3.

A que le heritage ne poet descend. [i] Nullus hæredipeta suo propinquo vel extraneo periculosa sane (4) custodia committatur. Note [k] this word (poet) may or can. [l] And therefore this doth not onely exclude an immediate discent, but all possibility of discent. As if a man hath issue two sons by several venters, and having lands holden in socage of the nature of burgh English dyeth, the younger brother within age of 14 years, [m] the elder brother of the halfe blood shall not have the custody of the land (5); because by possibility the elder may inherit the land, for if the youngest dye without issue, and the land discent to an uncle, the elder brother of the halfe blood may be heire unto him: and herewith doth agree our ancient authors. [n] Hæres sokmanni sub custodia capitalium dominorum non erit, sed sub custodia consanguineorum suorum propinquorum, hoc est, eorum qui conjuncti sunt jure sanguinis, & non jure successionis, ex parte quorum non descendit hæreditas; & regulariter verum est, quod nunquam remanebit aliquis in custodia alicujus, de quo haberi possit suspitio, quod velit jus clamare in ipsa hæreditate, & unde si plures sint filia & hæredes & tenere debeant in socagio, nulla debet esse in custodia alterius. [o] And this is contrary to the civil law; for leges civiles impuberum tutelam proximis de eorum sanguine committunt, siue agnati fuerint, cognati, unicuique, videlicet, secundum gradum & ordinem, qui in hæreditate pupilli successurus est. But this the law of England saith, est quasi agnum lupo committere ad devorandum (6).

[n] Braet. lib. 2. fol. 87.

Erit. fol. 163. b. Flet. li. 1. c. 9.

28. E. 1. Stat. 1. Fortesc. c. 40.

[o] Fortesc. ubi supra. Statut. de

Homagio capiendo, temp. E. 1.

Donques la mere. Note, albeit land cannot discent to the mother from her sonne, (as hath beene said) because inheritance cannot ascend, yet here it appeareth by Littleton, that she is next of blood (7), for none (as hath beene said) can be gardian in socage, but the next of blood; and the like is to be said of the father, as hereafter next appeareth.

Donques le pier. By this it appeareth, that the father in case of a tenure in socage shall be gardian in socage, and shall not have the custody of his eldest sonne, in respect of his paternall naturall custody, (as he shall have in case of a tenure by knights service, as before appeareth) (8) but as gardian in socage. And the reason of the diversity is, for that in the case of a tenure in socage, the father must by law be accountable to the sonne both for his marriage, and also for the profits of his lands, which he should not be if he had the custody of his eldest sonne in this case as his father in respect of nature (9), and the act of law never doth any man wrong.

But no lord or other person, in respect of any tenure by knights service or otherwise, shall have the custody of any childe that is heire apparant to his father, but the father only during his life, as hath beene said before (10).

It is to be observed, that in the lawes of England, there are three manner of gardianships, viz. by the common law, by statute law, and by custome. By the common law there are foure manner of gardians, viz. gardian in chivalry (whom Littleton hath described before Sect. 103, &c.) (11) gardian by nature, as the father of the eldest son, of whom Littleton hath spoken Sect. 114, (12) gardian in socage treated of by Littleton in this Section, and gardian per cause de nurture; (13) all frequent in [a] our books. By statute, viz. the statute in 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. of women children, and that is in two manners, either of the father or mother (14) without assignation, or of any other to whom the father shall appoint the custody, either by his last will, or by any act in his life-time, whereof you shall reade at large [b] in Ratcliffe's case in my Reports (15). [c] Lastly, by custome, as of orphans by the custome of the city of London, and of other cities and boroughes (16).

[a] 3 E. 3. 43. S. E. 4. 5.

(5. Co. 37.)

[b] 3. Co. 57. Ratcliffe's

case.

[c] 32. E. 3. Gard. 31. S. R. 2.

Gard. 166.

(Cro. Jam. 99.)

Tantsolement al use et profit del heire. And therefore gardian in socage shall not forfeit his interest by outlawrie or attainder of felony or treason; because he hath nothing to his owne use, but to the use of the heire.

Also

(1) See ante 83. a. note 1.—(2) Mr. Serjeant Hawkins supposes an elder brother to purchase land and the land to descend to his younger brother being under 14; in which case the infant's paternal and maternal relations are equally of the blood of the first purchaser, and therefore equally capable of inheriting to them; and then Mr. Serjeant asks, who shall be guardian in socage. Hawk. Abr. of Co. Litt. Perhaps there may be some difficulty in solving this question. If Littleton's rule be understood strictly, there cannot be any guardian in socage in such a case unless the next friend is a father or mother or other lineal ancestor, or of the half blood; for all of the other relations may by possibility succeed as immediate heirs to the son. But if the next of blood on either side may be guardian, the mother's blood must be preferred, because they are the most remote from the succession.—(3) Guardian per cause de ward is, where one infant in wardship is guardian of another infant, in which case the wardship of the first infant intitles his guardian to the wardship of the second. But it seems, that only guardian in chivalry and in socage could be guardian per cause de ward. See 2. Ro. Abr. 35. 40. and Vaugh. 184.—(4) Sine instead of sane seems necessary to the sense of this passage.—(5) This point appears to have been adjudged contra in lord Coke's time, though it is not taken notice of by him. See Swan's case 2. Ro. Abr. 40. Ow. 128. Mo. 635. Cro. Eliz. 825. and 2. And. 171. However as lord Coke here decides against the half blood, the question was revived after the Restoration; but the case did not produce any opinion of the court. T. Jo. 17. The rule as expressed by lord Coke certainly excludes the half blood; because he extends it to all possibility of descent. But if the judgment in Swan's case was right, the rule should be confined to all possibility of immediate descent.—(6) Lord Chancellor Macclesfield very much disapproved of the rule of our law, which gives the guardianship in socage to the next of kin to whom the land cannot descend. He would not allow the exclusion of the heir to the land to be founded on reason, but deemed it the offspring of barbarous times and the effect of a cruel presumption. Therefore, when he was applied to on a like principle, for an order to remove a lunatick from the custody of Mr. Justice Dormer, who was the lunatick's uncle and next in remainder to him, but had with the consent of the nominal committee of the lunatick's person taken care of him for many years and treated him with the greatest tenderness, under these circumstances his lordship refused

Also if the mother be gardian in socage, and taketh husband, and dyeth, the husband shall Pl. Com. not have this custody by survivour; because the wife had it en auter droit, in the right of the (3. Co. 39.) heire.

A guardian in socage shall not [d] present to a benefice in the right of the heire; because he [d] 8. E. 2. Presentment 10. cannot be accomptable therefore, for that he can make no benefit thereof, for the law doth ab- 7. H. 27. 39. F. 3. 89. 29. E. horre simony or any corrupt contract for benefices; and therefore in that case the heire shall 3. 5. F. N. B. 33. 31. E. 3. E. present himselfe (1). And Britton speaking of these gardians said well, Les queux gardeins sont itoppel, 340. Britton 163. 164. plus serjants que gardeins, (that is) which gardians are rather servants then gardians. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 10.

Il rendra account, &c. apres que l'heire ad accomplishe l'age de 14 ans.

This point hath beene much controverted in our bookes, and the causes of the doubts have beene, first upon the words of the statute of [e] Merlebridge ca. 17. 2. Upon the originall writ of account against the gardian in socage. The words of the statute be cum ad legitimam etatem pervenerit sibi respondeat, &c. and legitima etas, [f] lawfull age is xxi yeares. Also the writ of account reciteth the said statute, quare cum de communi consilio regni nostri provisum sit, quod custodes terrarum & tenementorum, que tenentur in socagio, heredibus terrarum & tenementorum illorum, cum ad plenam etatem pervenerint, reddant rationabilem computum. [g] Whereupon it is gathered that no action of account did lye against the gardian in socage at the common law, untill the heire be of his lawfull age of 21 yeares. But as to the first (legitima etas) as the statute [h] speaketh, or plena etas (as the writ doth render it) are to be understood secundum subjectam materiam, that is of the heire of socage land, whose lawfull and full age as to the custody or guardianship is 14. And as to the recitall of the statute, [i] it is evident that an action of account did lye against gardian in socage at the common law. And that the statute was made in affirmance or declaration of the common law; for the statute speaketh onely de custodia parentum, that is of a gardian in right, but yet an action of account lyeth against him that occupieth the land as gardian, albeit he be not of the blood (as hereafter shall be said). And upon consideration had of the said statute and of all the bookes, it was adjudged in the court of Common Pleas, Pasch. 16. Eliz. Rot. 436. according to the opinion of Littleton, that the heire after the age of 14 yeares shall have an action of account against the gardian in socage, when he will at his pleasure; and so is an ancient question well resolved (2).

Britton was of opinion, that the statute of Merlebridge, which gave the capias in account, extended to gardian in socage, for he wrote before the statute of W. 2. c. 11. But later bookes have over-ruled this point, that no capias lyeth against gardian in socage, for the statute extendeth to bailifes only. Neither doth the statute of W. 2. extend to gardian in socage, for that speaketh onely de servientibus, balivis, camerariis, & receptoribus. Pasch. 16. Eliz. Rot. 436. in communi banco. Mirror ca. 2. Sect. 17. Britton fol. 163. b. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 64. 18. E. 2. Avowry 220. 17. E. 3. 59. Merlbr. ca. 29. W. 2. ca. 11.

Mes tiel gardien sur son account avera allowance de tous ses raisonable costs et expences en tous choses. (3) And this is due to all accountants by the common law (4); and so it is declared by the said statute of Merlebridge, salvis ipsis custodibus rationabilibus missis suis. The statute of Merlbr. intended by Littl. is ca. 17.

Allowance. What other allowances shall the gardian have? If the gardian receive the rents and profits of the lands, and be robbed of the same, whether shall he be discharged thereof upon his account? And it seemeth, that if he be robbed without his default or negligence he shall be discharged thereof (5). As if a bailife of a manor, or a receiver, or a factor of a merchant, or the like accountant, be robbed, he shall be discharged thereof upon his account. And seeing the gardian shall be charged as bailife after the heires age of 14 and be discharged upon his account, if he be robbed, pari ratione if he be robbed before the age of 14. But otherwise it is of a carier, for he hath his hire (6), and thereby implicitly undertaketh the safe delivery of the goods delivered to him, and therefore he shall answer the value of them if he be robbed of them (7). Note the diversity, and so it was resolved in the King's Bench.

So it is if goods be delivered to a man to be safely kept, and after those goods are stolen from him, this shall not excuse him; because by the acceptance he undertooke to keepe them safely, and therefore he must keepe them at his perill.

So it is if goods be delivered to one to be kept, for to be kept and to be safely kept is all one in law (9). But if the goods be delivered to be kept as he would keepe his owne, there if they be stolen from him without his default or negligence, he shall be discharged. So if goods be delivered to one as a gage or pledge, and they be stolen, he shall be discharged; because he hath a property in them (10), and therefore he ought to keepe them no otherwise then his owne; but if he that gaged them, tendred the money before the stealing, and the other refused to deliver them, then for this default in him he shall be charged.

If A leave a chest locked with B to be kept, and taketh away the key with him, and acquainteth (8. Co. 32. 5. Co. 13. b.)

(1) S. p. acc. ante 17. b. post 120. a. S. p. acc. as to guardian by nurture. Cro. Jam. 99. In another work lord Coke extends the doctrine so far, as to say that the infant shall present whatsoever his age may be. 3. Inst. 156. But some suppose the guardian to have the right of presenting in the name of the infant. Others again admit the right of the infant in general, but add, that if the infant be of such tender years as not to have any discretion, then the guardian should present for him. See Vin. Abr. Guardian Q. pl. 2. But the law seems now settled in the full extent of lord Coke's opinion by a determination of lord chancellor King. In a cause before him an advowson had been conveyed to trustees on trust to present such person as the grantor his heirs or assigns should by deed appoint; and on the principle that an infant of any age may present, his lordship confirmed an appointment by an infant-heir, though it appeared, that the child was not a year old, and that the guardian guided the child's pen in making his mark and putting his seal. 2. Eq. Caf. Abr. Infant B. pl. 3. Vin. Abr. Collation A. pl. 10. Watf. Clergy. L. ed. 1740. p. 140. See also 3. Atk. 710. — However, though this decision may remove all doubts about the legal right of an infant of the most tender age to present, still it remains to be seen, whether the want of discretion would induce a court of equity to controul the exercise, where a presentation is obtained from an infant without the concurrence of the guardian. — (2) But against a testamentary or other guardian, whose authority doth not determine till the infant is twenty-one, or being a female attains that age or marries, the infant cannot have action of account before; for the rule of the common law is, that account shall not lie whilst the guardianship continues. However in equity the infant may by prochein amy sue his guardian for an account during the minority. 2. Vern. 342. 2. P. Wms. 119. 1. Vef. 91. 3. Atk. 625. — (3) Therefore a guardian cannot be charged in account as a receiver; because then he would lose his costs and expences; these it is said being in general allowed only to guardians and bailiffs, and not to receivers. Post 172. a. — (4) The rule seems expressed too generally; lord Coke elsewhere telling us, that a receiver, who is one of the three denominations of accountants known to our law, cannot charge for costs and expences, except in some special cases in favour of trade and merchandise. Post 172. 1. Freem. 378. — (5) The rule is the same as to trustees, though for their greater security it is usual to insert special provisions in the instrument creating the trust. 2. Cha. Caf. 2. — (6) But the hire is not the only or principal ground, on which the carier is liable; for factors, though they also receive a reward, are not so, except for negligence or by reason of a special undertaking. The great cause of the law's charging the carier is the public employment he exercises. 1. Ld. Raym. 917. 1. Salk. 143. 12. Mod. 487. — (7) This is by the common law or general custom of the realm; and to recite it in the declaration, as is sometimes the practice both with respect to inn-keepers and carriers, seems not only unnecessary but even rather improper; because it tends to confound the distinction between special customs, which ought to be pleaded, and the general custom of the realm, of which the courts are bound to take notice without pleading. Accordingly it seems admitted in several books, that describing the defendant to be a common carrier, without anything more, is sufficient. Hob. 18. 1. Sid. 245. Hardr. 485. 3. Mod. 227. Wilf. v. 1. part 1. page 281. — (8) S. C. Mo. 462. Ow. 57. 1. Ro. Abr. 2. — (9) This doctrine was denied by the court in the great case of Coggs and Barnard; and it is now understood, that acceptance of goods to be kept generally is merely an undertaking to keep them as the party receiving receiving keeps his own. 2. L. Raym. 911. — In Coggs and Barnard the action was for so negligently carrying some hogheads of brandy that one of them was staved; and on motion in arrest of judgment, the court held that a sufficient consideration appeared in the declaration, though it was wholly grounded on a special undertaking to carry safely, without stating, either that the defendant was to have hire, or that he was a common carrier. — (10) Lord ch j. Holt thought this reason insufficient, to make such an order, 1. P. Wms. 260. See also 9. Mod. 142. and Cary's Rep. 137. 138. But notwithstanding this censure by one most quainteth not B what is in the chest, and the chest together with the goods of B are stolen away, B shall not be charged therewith, because A did not trust B with them as this case is (1). And that, which hath been said before of stealing, is to be understood also of other like accidents, as shipwracke by sea, fire by lightning, and other like inevitable accidents (2). And all these cases were resolved, and adjudged in the King's Bench. • And by these diversities are all the bookes concerning this point reconciled (3).

(Doct. & Stud. 129. b.)

* Pasch. 43. Eliz. inter Southcote & Benne in Detinue. (4. Co. 83. b.)

Note, reader it is necessary for any, that receiveth goods to be kept, to receive them in this speciall manner, viz. to be kept as his owne, or to keepe them at the perill of the owner (4). But now is Littleton to be further heard.

Et si tiel gardein maria le heire deins 14 ans, &c. For if he marry the heire after 14, he is out of his custody, and no account shall be made therefore.

Il accountera a luy. He shall account for the mariage of the heire, viz. for so much as any man bona fide had offered for the mariage; or would give in mariage unto him.

(1. Ro. Abr. 908. 910. Cro. Cha. 79.)

7. E. 3. 62. 19. E. 3. Account 56. 38. E. 3. 7. 31. E. 3. tit. Account 57.

3. E. 3. 10. 46. E. 3. Account 40. 2. R. 2. ibid. 45. 6. R. 2. Account 47.

Hill. 3. E. 2. Coram Rege, Rot. 34. Agnes Frowick's case. F. N. B. 139. l. & 140. 26. E. 3. 65. 1. E. 3. 19. 20.

Trin. 1. H. 5. Coram Rege, Rot. 1. Midd.

Ou a ses executors. Not (5) that an infant of the age of 14 may make his will (as some hereupon have collected); but the meaning of Littleton is, that if after his mariage he accomplish his age of 18 years, at what time he may make his testament (6), and constitute executors for his goods and chattells, and the words are so to be understood, as may stand with law and reason. Note, executors could not have an action of account at the common law, in respect of the privity of the account; but the statute of W. 2. ca. 23. hath given the action of account to executors, the statute of 25. E. 3. ca. 5. to executors of executors, and the statute of 31. E. 3. c. 11. to administrators.

Que il voile luy marier sans prendre le value. So as the gardian shall not account only for that which he shall receive in this case, but for that also which he might receive.

Si non que il luy marier a tiel mariage que est tant en value, &c.

This needeth no explanation.

If the heire in socage be ravished out of the custody of the gardian, and the ravisher marieth the heire, the gardian shall have a writ of ravishment of ward, and recover the value of the mariage, &c. and shall account to the heire for the same.

And the gardian in socage is bounden by law, that the heire be well brought up, and that his evidences be safely kept.

The grandmother of the sonne and heire of John Bernevill, who held the manor of Tootington in the county of Midd. in socage, recovered the heire in a ravishment of ward against Simon Chevin, which had married the stepmother of the heire; and by the rule of the court, the plaintife pro nutritura heredis et pro custodia evidentiarii invenit plegios.

Sect. 124.

ET si ascun auter home, que nest pas procheine amy, &c.

19. E. 2. Avowry 221. 39. E. 3. 16. 41. E. 3. Account 35. 49. E. 3. 10. 18. E. 3. 77. 28. Aff. p. 11. Pl. Com. 542. 6. E. 3. 38. F. N. B. 118.

If a stranger entreteth into the lands of the infant within age of 14, and taketh the profits of the same, the infant may charge him as gardian in socage. And this doth well agree with the writ of account against a gardian in socage, for the words be, Idem B prefato A rationabilem compotum suum de exitibus

ET si ascun auter home, que nest procheine amy, occupee les terres ou tenements del heire come gardeine en socage, il serra compell de render accompt al heire, auxi bien si come il fuisset prochein amy; car il nest pas plee pur luy en briefe dacompt adire, que il nest procheine amie, &c. mes il respondra le quel

AND if any other man, who is not the next friend, occupies the lands or tenements of the heire as gardian in socage, he shall be compelled to yeeld an account to the heire, as wel as if he had beene next friend; for it is no plea for him in the writ of account to say, that he is not the next friend, &c. but he shall answer sufficient, and justly as it seems. Other bailees have a property, that is, a special and limited one; and what hath the pawnee more? The only difference is in the degree; the pawnee's property, though not absolute, being rather more enlarged, and for some purposes a beneficial one. 2. L. Raym. 916. Com. Dig. tit. Mortgage and Vin. Abr. tit. Pawn. But whatever the difference may be in point of property, it is become immaterial so far as regards the use made of it by lord Coke; because now general bailees of goods are not deemed any farther chargeable for the loss of them than pawnees.

(1) In the case here stated, the not informing B what was in the chest is relied on as the material circumstance; but the modern doctrine would make it unnecessary to resort for aid from it, as according to that B would not be chargeable, though he had known the contents of the chest. However there are cases, which turn upon the giving of such information. All. 93. 1. Vent. 258. Carth. 486. 1. Stra. 145. Law of Nisi Prius ed. 1775. p. 71.—(2) Here lord Coke joins losses by shipwreck and lightning and other like inevitable accidents with those by stealing; but other authorities make a distinction, and according to them, neither carriers nor masters of ships are responsible for losses by acts of God or of the king's enemies. 2. Bulstr. 280. 2. L. Raym. 918. Vin. Abr. tit. Master of a Ship B. pl. 12.—(3) The old doctrine about bailment will be found at large in Southcote's case, which is cited by lord Coke in the margin. For the modern doctrine, the student should consult the famous case of Coggs and Barnard already cited. Lord chief justice Holt's argument in that case, as reported by Lord Raymond, particularly merits attention; it being a most masterly view of the whole subject of bailment. Another important case connected with the same subject is that of Lane and Cotton, in which three judges against Holt held, that action on the case will not lie against the Master of the General Post Office for the loss of a letter with Exchequer bills in it. 12. Mod. 472. See further the following books, which are citations from a note by the editor of the 11th edition.—21. E. 4. 55. 4. E. 3. 6. 2. H. 7. 11. Palm. 548. W. Jo. 179. Grot. de jur. bell. l. 2. c. 12. f. 13. Puffend. de jur. nat. l. 5. c. 4. f. 6. 7. and Dom. Loix Civ. l. 1. t. 5. f. 2. t. 6. f. 3. t. 7. f. 3.—(4) We have already observed, that in general this distinction is now exploded. Ante 89. a. note 9. See further tit. Bailment and Carrier in New Abr. tit. Bailment and Action for Negligence in Vin. tit. Action on the case for misfeasance in Com. Dig. Law of Nisi Prius ed. 1775. p. 69.—(5) It is note in all the former editions, but not is apparently the true reading.—(6) There is a great abundance of irreconcilable opinions in our books about the earliest age, at which a will most deservedly of high authority, the rule of our law in respect to guardianship in socage, considered as one settling the right by nearness of blood without regard to personal qualifications, which was the point of view in which lord Coke and those he follows extolled it, is surely very defensible; for it gives the custody of the infant's person to those, who in point of nearness of blood have equal il ad occupie les terres ou tenements come gardeine en socage ou nemy. Sed quære, si apres ceo que le heire ad accomplisb lage de 14 ans, et gardeine en socage continualment occupia la terre tanque l'heire vient a plein age, f. 21 ans, si le heire a son plein age avera action dacompt envers le gardein de temps que il occupia apres les dits 14 ans, come envers gardeine en socage, ou envers luy come son baylife.

when the heire will, either before his age of 21 yeares, or after (2).

whether he hath occupied the lands or tenements as gardian in socage or no. But quære, if after the heire hath accomplished the age of 14 yeares, and the gardian in socage continually occupieth the land until the heire comes to full age, f. of 21 yeares, if the heire at his full age shall have an action of account against the gardian, from the time that he occupied after the said 14 yeares, as gardian in socage, or against him as his bailife.

*provenientibus de terris et tenementis suis in N. quæ tenentur in socagio, et quorum custodiam idem B habuit dum præd. A infra ætatem fuit, ut dicitur. And true it is, that in judgement of law he had the custody of the lands: and he is called tutor alienus, and the right gardian in socage tutor proprius, and it is no plea for him to denie that he is prochein amy, but he must answer to the taking of the profits (1), as Littleton here saith.*

Sed quære, &c.

This quære came not out of Littleton's quiver; for it is evident, that after the age of 14 yeares he shall be charged as bailife at any time

13. E. 3. Account 77. 22. E. 3. 11. 41. E. 3. Account 35. 10. H. 7. 7. 4. H. 7. 6. b. 7. H. 7. 9. a.

6. E. 3. 38. 32. E. 3. Account 60. 7. E. 4. F. N. B. 118.

Sect. 125.

ITEM si gardein en chivalry face ses executors et devy, le heire esteant deins age, &c. les executors averoient le garde durant le nonage, &c. Mes si gardein en socage face ses executors et devy, le heire esteant deins lage de 14 ans, ses executors naveront pas le garde; mes un auter prochein amy, a que le heritage ne poyt my descend, avera la garde &c. Et la cause de diversity est, pur ceo que gardein en

ALSO if gardian in chivalrie makes his executors and die, the heire being within age, &c. the executors shall have the wardship during the nonage, &c. But if the gardian in socage make his executors and die, the heire being within the age of 14 yeares, his executors shall not have the wardship; but another next friend, to whom the inheritance cannot descend, shall have the wardship, &c. And the reason of this diversitie is be-

A Son proper use.

A tenant holdeth land of a bishop by knights service, which seigniorie the bishop hath in the right of his bishoprick, the tenant dieth his heire within age, the bishop either before or after seisure dyeth; neither the King, nor the successor of the bishop shall have the wardship, but his executors. For albeit the bishop hath the seigniorie, in auter droit, yet the wardship being but a chattell he hath in his owne right, and a chattell cannot goe in the succession of a sole corporation, unless it be in the case of the king (3).

And yet if a bishop have an advowson, and the church become void, and the bishop die, neither the successor nor the executors shall present, but the king; because it is but a chose in action (4). And so it is in case where the king hath wardship, but that

7. R. 2. Bre. 634. 40. E. 3. 14. 2. H. 4. 19. 10. Eliz. Dier 277. (Post 117. 4. Co. 64. b.)

7. H. 4. 41. 44. E. 3. 42.

24. E. 3. 26. 44. E. 3. F. N. B. 33. See more of this in the chapter of Warranty, sect. 740. (Cro. Jam. 248.)

a will may be made of personal estate. Here lord Coke states 18 to be the age; though the reasons and authorities in favour of that time do not appear.—Others mention 17, that being the age at which an administration during the minority of an executor determines. 1. Vern. 255. 2. Vern. 558. But this opinion was probably founded on an idea, that our spiritual courts make no difference between the time for acting as an executor and the time for making a will, which is clearly a mistaken notion. However it receives some countenance from the decisive manner in which a late chancellor of the first authority mentions 17, and the ambiguous terms in which he speaks of an earlier age. 1. Vef. 303. 3. Atk. 709.—According to others 15 is the age for males, if the party can be proved of sufficient discretion; but we are not informed why, and therefore little respect is due to this opinion, if that can be deemed one, which in fact was nothing more than a loose dictum. 2. Vern. 469.—Others doubt, whether any time before 21 is not too early; because none can be administrators till they have attained that age. 1. Vern. 326. The reasons usually assigned for not granting administration to any person under 21 are, that an administrator being created by statute his age should be according to the common law, and that the statute of distribution requires the security of a bond from an administrator, which an infant cannot give. See the books cited in Vin. Abr. Executors L. 3. pl. 6. This latter reason against an infant's being administrator is the most forcible; but both seem equally inapplicable to the other point; the power of making a will of personal estate not being derived from or regulated by any statute, and the giving of a bond being foreign to the case of a testator.—In Perkins four is said to be the age for making a will of personalty; but though this is the time mentioned in the old as well as the new editions of his book, yet, as Swinburne well observes, it appears to be an error of the press by omission of the figure x, and most probably xiii was the age intended. Perk. sect. 503. Swinb. Testam. part 2. sect. 2. Off. of Ex. cap. 18.—The last opinion on the subject, and that most to be relied upon, distinguishes between males and females, making the testamentary power to commence in the former at 14, and in the latter at 12. At these ages the Roman law allowed of testaments, and the civilians agree that our ecclesiastical courts follow the same rule: and to them we ought principally to resort for information on testamentary subjects; because these being so peculiarly of spiritual consueance, they speak more ex tripode juridico, to use the phrase of a great author, than our common lawyers. Swinb. on Testam. part 2. sect. 2. Godolph. Orph. Leg. 276. 2. Strah. Dom. 11. Harr. Justin. Instit. l. 2. t. 12. f. 1. But the doctrine is not sustained by the authority of civilians only. Some respectable books, written by common lawyers, mention 12 and 14 for the same purpose; prohibitions have been refused by the King's Bench, when applied for to restrain the ecclesiastical courts from allowing wills made at such early ages; and there are instances, in which the doctrine hath been recognized and adopted by the court of Chancery. Off. of Ex. cap. 18. Sheph. Touchst. 403. T. Jo. 210. 2. Show. 204. Comb. 50. Prec. in Cha. 316. Gilb. Eq. Rep. 74. Mos. 5. To conclude this point, it may be added, that as on the one hand the rule of the ecclesiastical courts, in holding 12 and 14 to be ages at which males and females according to the difference of sex first have the power of making wills of personalty, seems now well established; so on the other hand it is in some degree consonant to the doctrine of our common law; for though that is silent as to the age for wills of personalty, these being the subjects of a different law, yet it adopts the same standard of 12 and 14 for other purposes, and so far deems them the ages of discretion, as to give infants of those ages the power of choosing guardians, and to presume that they are doli capaces in respect to crimes. 1. Hal. H. P. C. 22.

(1) That is, whether he took the profits as guardian; for if he assumed to take them in that character, he shall answer for them accordingly, though he was not guardian de jure.—(2) Notwithstanding lord Coke's observation on the quære, it is in L. and M. Roh. P. and both of the MSS.—(3) Acc. ante 9. a. 46. b. post 388. a.—(4) This reason requires some explanation. It equal pretensions to the trust, without the same temptation in point of interest to abuse it. However in justification of the Roman that is a prerogative that belongeth to the king to provide for the church being void; for where the tenure by knights service is of a common person, the executors of the tenant shall present where the avoidance fell in the life of the tenant.

Le heire est sauns remede, &c. For albeit in an action of account against a gardian in socage, &c. the defendant cannot wage his law, yet in respect of the privity of the matters of account, and the discharge resting in the knowledge of the parties thereunto, an action of account neither lyeth against the executors of the accountant, nor at the common law for the executors of him to whom the account is to be made as is aforesaid (3); but that is holpen by statute (4). (*) It hath been attempted in parliament to give an action of account against the executors of a gardian in socage, but never could be effected (5).

Si non pur le roy solement.

[a] The reason of this is because the king's treasure is the finewes of warre, and the honour and safety of the king in time of peace, firmamentum belli, et ornamentum pacis; and therefore the death of the party shall not barre the king of his treasure due unto him upon the account, because it is intended, that the king was busied about the publike for the good of the common-wealth, and had not leisure to call his accountant to make his account, and nullum tempus occurrit regi (6). Littleton speakech of the king's prerogative but twice in all his bookes, viz. here, and Sect. 178. and in both places, as part of the lawes of England. Prærogativa is [b] derived of præ .i. ante, and rogare, that is, to aske or demand before-hand, whereof commeth prærogativa, and is denominated of the most excellent part, because though an act hath passed both the houses of the lords and commons in parliament, yet, before it be a law, the royall assent must be asked or demanded and obtained, and this is the proper sense of the word. But legally (*) it extends to all powers, preeminences, and privileges, which the law giveth to the crowne, whereof Littleton here speaketh of one. Bract. lib. 1. in one place calleth it libertatem, in another privilegium regis; [c] Britton [d] (following W. 1.) droit le roy; [e] registr. jus regium, and jus regium coronæ, &c.

Sect. 126.

CERTEINE rent.

A tenant holdeth of his lord certaine lands in socage, to pay yearely a paire of gilt spurs or five shillings in money at the feast of Easter. In this case the rent is uncertaine, and the tenant may pay which of them he will at the said feast, and likewise the tenant may pay which of them he will for reliefe; but if he pay it not when he ought, then may the

ITEM le seignior,

de que la terre est tenu en socage, apres le mort son tenant avera reliefe en tiel forme. Si le tenant, tient per fealtie et certain rent a paier annualment, &c. si les termes de paiment

ALSO the lord, of whom the land is holden in socage, after the decease of his tenant shall have reliefe in this manner. If the tenant holdeth by fealty and certaine rent to pay yeerely, &c. if the tearmes of

31. E. 3. Account 57. 19. E. 3. ibid. 156. 48. E. 3. 2. 2. H. 4. 13. F. N. B. 117. 19. H. 6. 5. 4. E. 4. 25. 43. E. 3. 21. 11. Co. 89. (2. Inst. 404.)

* Rot. Parl. 50. E. 3. nu. 123.

[a] Pl. Com. 321. Keyleway 131. 11. Co. 89.

Vid. Sect. 178. Stanf. Præ. 32.

[b] Fortescue fo. 45. Rot. Parl. 1. H. 4. nu. 188. Pl. Com. 236. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 162. b. Stanf. Præ. 1. a. & 10. b.

[*] Stanf. Præ. 5. 10.

[c] Westm. 1. cap. 50.

[d] Britton fol. 27.

[e] Regist. fol. 61. &c.

41. E. 3. Barre 294. 9. E. 4. 36. Bract. lib. 2. fol. 35. Glanvil lib. 9. cap. 4. (2. Ro. Abr. 519. Post 145. a.)

It is not, that choses in action are in their nature incapable of transmission to executors; for the contrary is known to be law, and some instances of it are here given: but it is, because in the case of a chose in action, so peculiar as a right of presentation, the law favours the king more than the bishop's executors, and therefore gives the king, as having in his custody the temporalities of the vacant bishoprick, that presentation, which executors in general are entitled to when they are opposed to an heir. See post 388. Bro. Abr. Presentation 34. Watf. Clergym. L. ed. 1747. p. 71. But then it may be asked, why the king should not have a like preference, in the case of the bishop's being intitled to a wardship by knight's service in right of his fee and dying before reducing it into possession by seisure. The answer may be, that the law distinguishes between an interest both of profit and trust, as wardship by knight's service is, and one merely of trust, such as a presentation. The law gives the former to the bishop's executors, for the benefit of his personal estate. It gives the latter to the king; because the presentation to a vacant church cannot lawfully be sold; and as the bishop's personal estate cannot derive any profit from the presentation, the law deems it more proper to follow the temporalities of the fee to which the advowson belongs. In a subsequent part of the commentary, where it is said, that the bishop's executors shall not present, because nothing can be taken for a presentation, lord Coke seems to hint at something of this kind. Post 388. a. However as a like reason might be urged against executors in favour of an heir, it is most safe to rely on the right of the king as settled by authorities and long practice.—This preference of the king's title by prerogative is carried so far, that even presentation and institution in the life-time of the bishop will not prevail, unless there hath been also an induction. Vin. Abr. Presentation C. a. E. a. Watf. Clergym. L. ed. 1747. p. 73.

(1) Fitzherbert cites two authorities, which make guardianship in socage grantable. F. N. B. 143. P. But Littleton's opinion militates strongly to the contrary; for if such a trust is so personal as not to be transmissible to executors, why should it be so to grantees? Accordingly in the arguing of a modern case it seems to have been taken for granted, that guardianship in socage cannot be assigned. Gilb. Eq. Rep. 177.—(2) Littleton must be understood to mean, that at common law account did not lie against executors; for in his time it did lie under several statutes against an executor in general, though they were deemed not to extend to the executor of guardian in socage. See the next note.—(3) This rule of the common law, which did not allow of actions of account against or for executors, had some exceptions. The latter part of the rule did not extend to the executors of merchants; and the king was not within either part. F. N. B. 117. 11. Co. 90. a. It should also be remarked, that though at the common law executors in general were not compellable to account, yet if they consented to settle an account, they were liable to an action of debt for the ballance. F. N. B. page 167. of 4to ed. in lord Hale's notes.—(4) The 13. E. 1. c. 23. gave account to executors; but this being construed to describe immediate executors only, other statutes were made to extend the remedy to the executors of executors and to administrators. 25. E. 3. ft. 5. c. 5. 31. E. 3. c. 11. 2. Inst. 404. Antc 98. b.—(5) Acc. Cott. Abr. Rec. 131. But now by 4. An. c. 18. s. 27. actions of account lie against the executors and administrators of every guardian bailiff and receiver.—(6) See post 119. a. and the note there.

Roman law it should be remembered, that their order of succession made it impossible to adopt a distinction like that of our law in the case of guardianship in socage; for by the Roman law, the relations both of the father's and mother's blood, being font a payer per deux termes del an, ou per quater termes del an, le seignior avera del heire son tenant tant, come le rent amount, que il paya per an. Sicome le tenant tient de son seignior per fealtie, et x. s. de rent payable a certaine termes del an, donques l'heire paiera al seignior x. s. pur reliefe, ouster les x. s. que il paiera pur le rent.

payment be to pay at two termes of the yeare, or at 4 termes in the yeare, the lord shal have of the heire of his tenant as much, as the rent amounts unto, which he payeth yearly. As if the tenant holds of his lord by fealty, and tenne shillings rent payable at certaine termes of the yeare, then the heire shall pay to the lord ten shillings for relief, beside the tenne shillings which he payeth for the rent.

lord distraine for which of (2. Co. 37. 2. Ro. Abr. 519) them he will. But if the tenure be to attend on his lord at the feast of Christmasse, or to pay ten shillings, there the reliefe must be ten shillings, because the other cannot be doubled; et sic de similibus.

A paier annuelment.

If the tenant holdeth of his lord by fealty, and to pay every two or three year ten shillings, albeit this be no annuall rent, yet shall he pay ten shillings for reliefe; et sic de similibus.

But it is to be noted, that beside reliefe, whereof Littleton here speaketh, there belongeth to a tenure in socage of common right aid for the making of his eldest son a knight at the age of fifteene years, and to marry his daughter at the age of 7 yeares (1).

Vid. Sect. 103. F. N. B. 82.
West. 1. cap. 35. 25. E. 3. stat.
5. cap. 11.

En mesme le manner est, si home soit seisie de certaine terre que est tenu en socage, et fait feoffement en fee a son use, et mourust seisie del use, (son heire del age de 14 ans, ou plus, et nul volunt per luy declare) le seignior avera reliefe del heire, sicome avant est dit. Et cest per le statute de Ann. 19. Hen. 7. cap. 15. (2)

In the same manner it is, if a man be seised of certaine land, which is holden in socage, and maketh a feoffement in fee to his owne use, and dieth seised of the use, (his heire of the age of 14 yeares or more, and no will by him declared) the lord shall have reliefe of the heire, as afore is said. And this by the statute of 19. H. 7. cap. 15.

This is an addition to Littleton, whereof I omit it the rather for that the statute of 19. H. 7. is for the cause above mentioned become of none effect.

Sect. 127.

ET en tiel cas apres la mort le tenant, tiel reliefe est due al seignior maintenant, de quel age que le heire soit; pur ceo que tiel seignior ne poit aver le garde de corps ne de terre

AND in this case, after the death of the tenant, such reliefe is due to the lord presently, of what age soever the heire be; because such lord cannot have the wardship of the body, nor of the land of the heire.

MAintenant, and as Littleton saith, he ought not to attend the payment of his reliefe according to the daies of payment of his rent; but he ought to have his reliefe presently, and for the same he may incontinently distraine after the death of the tenant.

And therefore in the case aforesaid, where the tenant holdeth by the rent of five shillings, or a paire of gilt spurres, 16. H. 7. 4. 18. E. 3. 26. p. 18.

Bracton lib. 2. fol. 85. dabit hæres una vice redditum suum unius anni duplicatum. Britton fo. 178. acc. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 8.
(2. Ro. Abr. 519)

(1) We have already had occasion to observe, that these aids are taken away by the 12. Cha. 1. c. 24. Ante 76. a. note 1.—
(2) This part about relief from the heir of cestuique use, as lord Coke truly observes, is an addition to Littleton; and it first appears in Redman. See post 117. a.

in equal degree, were equally capable of inheriting; and the Emperor Justinian having wholly destroyed the distinction between the agnati and cognati, there could not be proximity of blood without proximity to the succession. Novell. 18. c. 4. 5. Such being the difference of the two laws in point of succession, it is rather unfair to make a comparison between them in point of guardianship. Besides nearness of blood alone is at best a very exceptionable rule for settling the right of guardianship. It must frequently give a title to those, who are in every respect the least qualified for a trust so delicate and important. Nearness of blood ought to be greatly regarded; particularly in the case of parents, whose title by nature is so strong, that to wrest from them the custody and education of their children, except when there is any gross misconduct or the most apparent incapacity, would be very inhuman indeed. But personal qualities, situation of life, interest in the succession, and other circumstances, whether operating for or against, should also be attended to; and hence arises the necessity of a discretionary power in the choice of guardians. On this principle in many countries in Europe the father is now intrusted with the power of assigning guardians

(Ante 47. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 519.)

45. E. 3. 19. 35. H. 6. 52.
20. Eliz. Dier 361. Stanf. Præf.
13. b. F. N. B. 256. 259.

spurres, if the heire be not presently (that is, as presently and as conveniently as he may, all due circumstances considered) after the death of his ancestor ready upon the land to pay reliefe, the lord may distrain for which of them he will; and if the tenant tendred either of them according to the law, and none for the lord was ready there to receive it, yet the lord may distraine for that, which was tendred, at his pleasure (2).

De quel age que le heire soit.

And yet it appeareth in our bookes, that in this case the king in case of a tenure in socage in chiefe shall not have primer seisin unlessse the heire be of the age of 14 yeares at the death of his ancestor; for if he be under that age, he is in the gard and custody of his prochein amy.

But otherwise it is in case of a common person, as here it appeareth. And where in some impressions these words be added (issint que il passa lage de 14 ans), those words so added are against the law, and no part of Littleton's worke (3).

Sect. 128.

UN lib. de pepper ou cumyn.

Here it is to be observed, that the lord may reserve pepper, or any other things that be ex-actica, foreign of the growth of outlandish countreyes or beyond sea, as well as of the growth of England, where-by navigation (the life of every island) is employed. And where Littleton here putteth his case in the disjunctive, if the tenant doth hold by fealty and one pound of pepper or a pound of cummin, he shall pay for reliefe a pound of pepper or a pound of cummin, over and besides the rent. But if the tenant holdeth of his lord by doing of certaine worke dayes in harvest, or to attend at Christmasse, or such like, he shall not double the same; for of corporall service or labour or worke of the tenant, no reliefe is due, but where the tenant holdeth by such yearly rents or profits, which may be paid or delivered, whereof Littleton hath put his examples; and by them is manifestly proved, that corporall service, worke, or labour, shall not be doubled in this case (4).

Ou certaine bushels de frument. Here it appeareth, that the reliefe of bushels of corne is to be paid presently, though the tenant die in winter before corne be ripe.

(1) But here we must understand Littleton to be speaking of a relief due on the descent of a fee simple in fee tail in possession; for if only a remainder on reversion expectant on an estate for life descends on the heir, the relief is not leviable till the death of the tenant for life. Keilw. 83. b. Kitch. ed. 1592. fo. 146. b. As to the descent of a remainder or reversion expectant on an estate tail, it seems doubtful whether a relief is payable at any time in respect of such a descent. Keilw. 84. a.

(2) See ante 83. b. note 4.

(3) Accordingly the words objected to by lord Coke are neither in L. and M. or Rob. — They were first inserted in P.

(4) But Rolle tells us, that Master Herbert of the Inner Temple in his autumn reading 11 Cha. 1. held the contrary. 2. Ro. Abr. 515.

dians for his children by testament, and for want of a testamentary guardian some great magistrate or judicial officer is authorized to nominate; and in other countries guardians are wholly dative by a magistrate. Groenweg. de Leg. Abrogat. lib. 1. tit. 15. Voet Comment. ad Indect. l. 26. §. 3. 1. Strah. Dom. 264. Stair's Inst. of Law of Scotl. 3. ed. 46. In effect our law, as changed by statutes and regulated by the modern practice of the court of chancery, conforms very much to these modes of prescribing who shall have the guardianship. But this subject will be more fully opened in the succeeding notes. — (7) As to the construction of the words next of blood in other cases, see ante 10. b. and note 2. there. — (8) Ante 84. b. — (9) Lord Coke should le heire. Et le seignior en tiel case ne doit attendre a le payment de son reliefe, solonques les termes et jours de payment de rent; mes il doit aver son reliefe main-tenant, et pur ceo il doit incontinent (1) distraine apres le mort son tenant pur reliefe.

And the lord in such case ought not to attend for the payment of his reliefe, according to the terms and dayes of payment of the rent; but he is to have his reliefe presently, and therefore he may forthwith distreine after the death of his tenant for reliefe.

EN mesme le maner est, lou le tenant tient de son seignior per fealtie et un li. de peper ou cummin, et le tenant morust, le seignior avera pur relief un lib. de cummin, ou un lib. de peper, ouster le common rent. En mesme le maner est, lou le tenant tient a payer per an certaine number de capons, ou de gallines, ou un paire de gaunts, ou certaine bushels de frument; et hujusmodi.

IN the same manner it is, where the tenant holdeth of his lord by fealtie and a pound of pepper or cummin, and the tenant dyeth, the lord shall have for reliefe a pound of cummin, or a pound of pepper, besides the common rent. In the same manner it is, where the tenant holdeth to pay yearly a number of capons or hennies, or a paire of gloves, or certaine bushels of corne, or such like.

(Post 142. a.)

(2. Ro. Abr. 515.)

Note, here are examples put of five natures. 1. Aromatorum exoticum, of spices or drugs of outlandish growth. 2. Granorum, of corne of English growth. 3. Avium villaticarum, of poultry, as capons, hens, &c. 4. Artificiorum, of handicrafts, as a paire of gloves generally either of outlandish or English. 5. Aut similia, or such like, (that is) of like outlandish growth or of English growth, or of poultry, or of artifices outlandish or English, and like herein also, that they may be paid or delivered to the lord every year, or every second or third year, &c.

Sect. 129.

MES en ascun case le seignior doit demurrer a distreiner pur son reliefe jesque a certaine temps. Sicome le tenant tient de son seignior per un rose, ou per un bushel de roses, a paier al feast de Nativite de Saint John Baptist, si tiel tenant devie en yuer, donque le seignior ne poit distreiner pur son reliefe, tanque al temps que roses per le course del an poient aver leur creffer, &c. et sic de similibus.

BUT in some case the lord ought to stay to distreine for his reliefe untill a certaine time. As if the tenant holds of his lord by a rose, or by a bushell of roses, to pay at the feast of St. John the Baptist, if such tenant dieth in winter, then the lord cannot distreine for his reliefe, untill the time that roses by the course of the yeare may have their growth, &c. and so of the like.

PER le course del an. (Post 197. b.)

Lex spectat naturæ ordinem, the law respecteth the order and course of nature. Lex non cogit ad impossibilia, the law compells no man to impossible things. The argument ab impossibili is forcible in law. Impossibile est, quod naturæ rei repugnat. And here it is to be observed, that Littleton puts a diversity betwene corne and roses; for corne will last. And therefore the tenant must deliver the corne presently before the time of growth, (as before is said), and so of saffron, and the like. But roses, or other flowers, that are fructus fugaces, cannot be kept, and therefore are not to be delivered till the time of growing. Neither is the tenant driven by law artificially to preserve roses; for the law in these cases respecteth nature, and the course of the yeare, as Littleton here saith, et ars naturam imitatur, et sic de similibus.

Sect. 130.

ITEM si ascun voile demand, pur que home poit tener de son seignior per fealty tantselement pur tous maners des services, entant que quant le tenant ferra fealtie, il jurera a son seignior que il ferra a son seignior tous maners des services dues, et quant il ad

ALSO if any will aske, why a man may hold of his lord by fealty only for all manner of services, insomuch as when the tenant shall doe his fealty, he shal sweare to his lord that he will doe to his lord all manner of services due, and when he hath done fealty in

QUANT le tenant ferra fealty, il jurera a son seignior, &c.

Here it appeareth, that the doing of the fealty is both a performance of his service, and of his oath also when it is done, for that no other service is due; and that one oath of fealty is taken of all that hold, and is not to be changed for any noveltie or nicety of invention; for judges anciently and continually have suppressed innovations, and would in no case change the ancient common law.

31. E. 3. tit. Gager deliverance 5.
38. E. 3. 1. 42. Aff. p. 12. 4. E.
3. ca. 5. 18. E. 3. ca. 4. & 6.
4. H. 4. ca. 2. 2. H. 4. fo. 18.

II

should not be understood to assert that a guardian by nature is not accountable for the profits of the infant's estate; that being a doctrine, which seems inconsistent with the nature of every other kind of guardianship except guardianship in chivalry. It is therefore presumed, that lord Coke's meaning was, that the father shall be deemed guardian in socage, because in that character the law makes him accountable to the son for the value of his marriage as well as for the profits of his lands, whereas in

Il covient que il doit faire a son seignior ascun service. For there can be no tenure without some service; because the service maketh the tenure.

See of this in the chapter of Fee simple, sect. 4.
(1. Ro. Abr. 316. F. N. B. 144.
Ante 13. a.)

Son escheat de la terre. Eschaeta is derived of this word eschier, quod est accidere; for an escheat is a casuall profit, quod accidit domino ex eventu et ex insperato, which hapneth to the lord by chance and unlooked for. And of this word eschaeta commeth escheator, an escheator, so called, because his office is to inquire of all casuall profits, and them to seise into the king's hands, that the same may be answered to the king (1).

See more of this in the chapter of Warrantie, sect.

Lands may escheat to the lord two manner of wayes: one by attainder, the other without attainder. By attainder in three sorts. First, Quia suspensus est per collum. Secondly, Quia abjuravit regnum (2). Thirdly, Quia utlegatus est. Without attainder, as if the tenant dies without heire.

Ou per case auter forfeiture. As if the land be aliened in mortmaine, or when Littleton wrote, if the tenants had erected crosses upon their houses or tenements, in prejudice of the lords, that the tenants might claim the privilege of the Hospitlers to defend themselves against their lords, they had forfeited their tenancies. But since Littleton wrote, the Hospitlers are dissolved, and consequently that forfeiture is gone.

W. 2. ca. 33. Flet. li. 2. ca. 43.
& li. 5. ca. 34. 32. H. 3. ca. 24.
(F. N. B. 144.)

Ou profit. As relieve, aid pur file marrier, aid pur faire fitz chevalier, and the like.

fait fealtie en tiel case nul auter service est due: a ceo il poyt estre dit, que lou un tenant tient sa terre de son seignior, il covient, que il doit faire a son seignior ascun service; car si le tenant ne ses heires devoyent faire nul manner de service al seignior ne a ses heires, donque per long temps continue il serroit hors de memorie et de remembrance, le quel la terre fuit tenu de le seignior, ou de ses heires, ou nemy, et donques pluis tost et pluis rediment voilont homes dire, que la terre nest pas tenu del seignior ou de ses heires, que auterment; et sur ceo il seignior perdra son escheat de la terre, ou per case auter forfeiture ou profit que il poet aver de le terre. Issint il est reason, que le seignior et ses heires ont ascun service fayt a eux, pur prover et testifier, que la terre est tenu de eux.

this case no other service is due: to this it may be said, that where a tenant holds his land of his lord, it behooveth that he ought to do some service to his lord; for if the tenant nor his heires ought to do no manner of service to his lord nor his heires, then by long continuance of time it would grow out of memorie, whether the land were holden of the lord, or of his heires, or not, and then will men more often and more readily say, that the land is not holden of the lord, nor of his heires, than otherwise; and hereupon the lord shall lose his escheat of the land, or perchance some other forfeiture or profit which he might have of the land. So it is reason, that the lord and his heires have some service done unto them, to prove and testifie, that the land is holden of them.

Sect.

(1) See further as to escheat and escheator ante 13. and b. 18. b. and note 2. there. 4. Inst. 225. Mad. Excheq. chap. 10. f. 2.
(2) Abjuration, according to the ancient use of the word, had the effect of an attainder; because it was necessarily accompanied with the confession of a felony. But this kind of abjuration is not now in force; the privilege of sanctuary, of which it was consequential, having been taken away by a statute of James the First. See 21. Jam. c. 28. f. 7. 2. Inst. 629. and 2. Hawk. Pl. C. b. 2. c. 32. However the word abjuration is still in use in our law for some purposes. For—1. some statutes, in order to secure the established religion, require persons convicted of certain kinds of recusancy to abjure the realm, on pain of being adjudged guilty of a capital felony; and the word in this sense is similar to the ancient abjuration, and is attended with a like effect. 35. Eliz. c. 1. and 2. 13.—2. In order to secure the succession of the crown as settled at and since the revolution, other statutes make all persons, who refuse to take the oath prescribed for abjuring the pretender and his descendants, liable to various penalties and forfeitures; but this kind of abjuration differs both in object and effect from the ancient one. 13. W. 3. c. 6. 1. An. st. 1. c. 22. 1. G. 1. st. 2. c. 13. 6. G. 3. c. 53.

in the character of guardian by nature he is only accountable for the latter.—(10) Ante 84. a.—(11) Ante 74. b. Though guardian.

Sect. 131.

ET pur ceo que fealtie est incident a tous manners de tenures, forspris le tenure in frankalmoigne, (scome ferra dit en le tenure de frankalmoign) et pur ceo que le Seignior ne voiloit al commencement del tenure aver ascun auter service, forsque fealtie, il est reason, que home poet tener de son seignior per fealtie tant-solement; et quaut il ad fait son fealtie, il ad fait tous ses services.

AND for that fealtie is incident to all manner of tenures, but to the tenure in frankalmoigne (1), (as shall be said in the tenure of frankalmoigne) and for that the lord would not at the beginning of the tenure have any other service but fealty, it is reason, that a man may hold of his lord by fealty onely; and when he hath done his fealty, he hath done all his services.

Fealtie est incident.

(4. Co. 8. Post 143. 2.)

Of incidents there be two sorts, viz. separable, and inseparable.

Separable, as rents incident to reversions, &c. which may be severed; inseparable, as fealty to a reversion or tenure which cannot be severed: for as all lands and tenements within England are holden of some lord or other, and either mediately or immediately of the king; so to every tenure, at the least fealty is an inseparable incident, so long as the tenure remains; and all other services, except fealty, are severable. But where the tenure is by fealty only, there is no relieve due for the cause above said (2).

Sect. 132.

ITEM si un home lessé a un auter pur terme de vie certaine terres ou tenements, jauns parler de ascun rent render a le lessor, uncore il ferra fealtie a le lessor, pur ceo que il tient de luy. Auxy si un lease soit fait a un home pur terme de ans, il est dit, que le lessé ferra fealtie a le lessor, pur ceo que il tient de luy. Et ceo est prove bien per les parols del brief de wast, quaut le lessour ad cause de porter brieve de wast envers luy; le quel brieve dira, que le lessé tient les tenements de le lessor pur terme de ans.

ALSO if a man letteth to another lands or tenements for terme of life, without naming any rent to be reserved to the lessor, yet he shall do fealty to the lessor, because he holdeth of him. Also if a lease be made to a man for terme of yeares, it is said, that the lessee shall do fealty to the lessor, because he holdeth of him. And this is well proved by the words of the writ of wast, when the lessor hath cause to bring a writ of wast against him; which writ shall say, that the lessee holds his tenements of the lessor for terme of yeares. So the

SI un home lessé pur terme de vie jauns parler de rent, &c. il fera fealtie, &c.

And (Ante 67. a. 68. 2.) the reason is; because there is a tenure, and fealty (as hath been said) is incident to all manner of tenures; and it is to be noted, that the law, for the suretie of

(1) Tenure at will should be also excepted. See the next section and ante 67. b. note 2. 68. b. n. 5. However even to tenure at will fealty may be incident by the custom of a manor; and so generally, if not universally, it is to copyhold tenures. 10. H. 6. 13. 20. H. 6. 3. Kitch. on Co. ed. 1592 fol. 132.

(2) The reason is plain. Socage relief, being a year's rent, cannot be calculated, if an annual rent is not payable. See ante 85. a. note 1. But as by custom, or by express reservation on creating the tenure, a payment wholly different from and unconnected with the yearly rent may be due for relief; so it may be presumed, that by the same means a relief may be payable, where there is no yearly rent; because the relief is ascertained, without reference to a yearly rent, in both cases equally. See Kitch. on Co. ed. 1592. fo. 103. Here it may not be amiss to advert to some other differences between the several kinds of relief payable by socage-tenants. 1. The proper socage relief, that is, the relief incident to the tenure by socage by the general custom of the realm, is a year's rent, and consequently can never be payable, except where there is an annual rent; but the improper socage-relief, that is, the relief due either by special custom or by express reservation, may be more or less than the annual rent, or may be payable, where there is no annual rent. 2. The socage-relief by common law is only payable on a descent and by a natural person; but the two other reliefs may be due, where the tenant comes in by purchase, or where he takes as a sole corporation by succession. Ante 84. a. 2. Ro. Abr. 517. 518. 3. If the relief claimed is one at common law, it is presumed to be due, till the contrary appears; that is, unless it can be proved, that the relief hath been released, or that the tenure was reserved guardianship in chivalry is now taken away by act of parliament, it may be useful to recollect some general things concerning it;

of the lord, that his tenant shall be faithfull and loyall to him, doth create such a service as the tenant shall be bound thereunto by oath.

40. E. 3. 34. 9. H. 6. 41. 10. H. 6. 13. 9. E. 4. 1. 21. E. 4. 29. 5. H. 5. 12. 5. H. 7. 11.

Auxi si lease soit fait pur ans, &c. le lessee ferra fealty. For there also is a tenure between them. And Littleton's opinion in this case is holden for good law at this day (1).

Vid. Sect. 84.

Et ceo est prove bien per les parols de brieve, &c. Nota, the original writs are (as it were) the foundations and grounds of the law, and, as it appears here by Littleton, are of great authority for the proove of the law in particular cases (2).

(Ante 63. a. 5. Co. 10.)

Pur ceo que nil nad fuer estate. Therefore tenant at will shall not do fealty (as hath been said before); because the matter of an oath must be certaine. The rest of this section needs no explanation (3).

Issint le brieve prova un tenure enter eux. Mes celuy, que est tenant a volunt solonque le cours del common ley ne ferra fealtie; pur ceo que il nad ascun sure estate. Mes autrement est de tenant a volunt solonque le custome del manor; pur ceo que il est oblige pur faire fealtie a son seignior pur deux causes. L'un est per cause del custome; et l'auter est, pur ceo que il prist son estate en tiel forme pur faire a son seignior fealty.

Writ proves a tenure betweene them. But he, which is tenant at will according to the course of the common law, shal not do fealty; because he hath not any sure estate. But otherwise it is of tenant at will according to the custom of the manor; for that he is bound to do fealty to his lord for two causes. The one is, by reason of the custome, and the other is, for that he taketh his estate in such form to do his lord fealty.

CHAP. 6. Sect. 133.

Frankalmoigne.

Brañ. lib. 2. cap. 5. and lib. 4. ca. 2. Britton fo. 164. 165. Mirror ca. 2. Sect. 18. Glanvil. lib. 7. ca. 1. & lib. 12. ca. 3. & 25 Fleta lib. 3. ca. 5.

21. H. 7. 39. 29. E. 3. 14.

40. E. 3. 20. 8 H. 6. 23. 7. E. 4. 12. 12. H. 8. 8.

UN abbe, prior, auter home de religion, ou de saint eglise. It is to be observed, that of ecclesiasticall persons some be regular, and some be secular. They be called regular, because they live under certain rules, and have vowed three things; true obedience, perpetuall chastity, and wilfull poverty. And when a man is professed in any of the orders of religion, he is said to be home dereligion, a man of religion, or religious. Of this sort be all abbots, priors, and others of any of the said orders regular. Secular are persons ecclesiasticall; but because they live not under certain rules of some of the said orders, nor are votaries

Tenant en frankalmoigne est, lou un abbe, ou prior, ou un auter home de religion ou de saint eglise, tient de son seignior en frankalmoigne; que est a dire en Latin en liberam eleamofynam. Et tiel tenure commençoit adeprimes en auncient temps en tiel forme; quant un home en auncient temps fuit seise de certain terres ou tenements en son demesne come de fee,

Tenant in frankalmoigne is, where an abbot, or prior, or another man of religion or of holy church, holdeth of his lord in frankalmoigne; that is to say in Latine in liberam eleamofynam, that is, in free almes. And such tenure beganne first in old time, when a man in old time was seised of the lands or tenements in his demesne as of fee, and of the same land infeoffed et served with an express exemption from relief. 3. Lev. 145. Vin. Abr. Evidence A. b. 28. pl. 5. But if the relief be claimed by special custom or special reservation, the onus probandi must necessarily fall upon the lord. 4. If the relief is by the common law, it is merely a fruit incident to the service; but if the relief is by express reservation, it is a part of the service. This distinction, however nice it may appear, may be deemed an essential one. Relief, when only an incident to the service, is not within the limitation of 50 years prescribed for seisin of it by the 32. H. 8. c. 2. as hath been observed in a former note; nor will acceptance of rent stop the lord afterwards from claiming such a relief. Ante 83. a. note 2. Cro. Eliz. 885. But the law seems to be to the contrary in both these particulars, where the relief is part of the service. 5. If the relief is by the common law, or by special reservation, the remedy by distress follows of course; but it is said, that for relief by special custom, distress is not warranted without a prescription. W. Jo. 133.—These differences between the three kinds of socage-reliefs lie scattered in the books; and thus bringing them into one point of view may be useful. The learned reader will judge of their propriety. The diligent student may add to their number. See further Co. Copyhold. chap. 2. Survey. Dial. 4th edit. 95. and the case of Hungerford and Havyland in W. Jo. 132. 2. Bulstr. 323. Latch 37. 94. 129. 2. Ro. Rep. 370. O. Bendl. 180.

(1) See ante 67. b. note 2.—(2) See ante 73. b.—(3) It may be proper to conclude this chapter of socage, by pointing out the

it; and for the ease of the student in that respect, the following particulars, selected principally from the chapter of knights-service.

et de mesmes les terres ou tenements enfeoffa un abbe et son covent, ou un pryor, &c. a aver et tener a eux et leur successeurs a tous jours en pure et perpetual almoigne ou en frankalmoigne; [ou pertielx parols, a tener de le grantor, ou de le feoffor, et de ses heires en frankalmoigne:] (1) en tiels cases les tenements sont tenus en frankalmoigne.

an abbot and his covent, or prior and his covent, to have and to hold to them and their successors in pure and perpetuall almes, or in frankalmoigne; or by such words, to hold of the grantor or of the lessor and his heires in free almes: in such case the tenements were holden in frankalmoigne.

they are for distinction sake called secular, as bishops, (4. Co. 104.) deanes and chapters, archdeacons, prebends, parsons, vicars, and such like. All which Littleton here includeth under these general words, de saint eglise, of holy church; and none of these are in law said to be homes de religion, or religious.

Where Littleton saith (infeoffa un abbe et son covent) his meaning is, that the abbot only is infeoffed; for he is only a person capable, and the covent are dead persons in law, and have power of assent only, and that they thereunto assent. But since Littleton wrote, all abbeyes, priories, monasteries, and other religious houses of

See the statutes of 27. H. 8. not printed, but in the abridgement, 31. H. 8. cap. 13, and 32. H. 8. ca. 24. &c. Vide sect. 530.

monkes canons friers and nuns &c. have been dissolved, and their possessions given to the crowne (2).

The ecclesiasticall state of England, as it standeth at this day, (which is necessary for our student to know) is divided into two provinces, or archbishopricks, (viz.) of Canterbury, and of Yorke. The archbishop of Canterbury is styled Metropolitanus et Primas totius Angliæ, and the archbishop of Yorke Primas Angliæ. Each archbishop hath within his province suffragan bishops of severall diocesses (3). The archbishop of Canterbury hath under him within his province, of ancient foundations, viz. Rochester his principall chaplaine, London his deane, Winchester his chancellor, Norwich, Lincolne, Ely, Chichester, Salisbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Worcester, Coventry and Litchfield, Hereford, Landaffe, St. David, Bangor, and St. Asaph, and four founded by king Henry 8. erected out of the ruins of dissolved monasteries (that is to say) Gloucester, Bristow, Peterborow, and Oxford. The archbishop of Yorke hath under him four, (viz.) the bishop of the county palatine of Chester newly erected by king H. 8. and annexed by him to the archbishopricke of Yorke, the county palatine of Durham, Carlisle, and the tle of Man annexed to the province of Yorke by H. 8. but a greater number this archbishop anciently had, which time hath taken from him. The extent of every diocesse you may elsewhere read, the which for brevity I here omit. All the said archbishopricks, and bishopricks of England were founded by the kings of England, to hold by barony, as hereafter shall be said (4). And every archbishop and bishop hath his deane and chapter, whereof more shall be said hereafter. The archbishop of Canterbury hath the pre-dencie, next to him the archbishop of Yorke, next to him the bishop of London, and next to him the bishop of Winchester (5), and then all other bishops of both provinces after their ancientnesse.

(4. Inst. 321.)

Math. Parker de vitis archiepiscoporum. Linwood. Camden Britannia. Vid. Rot. parliam. anno 36. H. 8. 1. E. 6. 5. E. 6. &c. Westminster also was newly erected a bishopricke by H. 8. but by queene Mary it was restored to be an abbey, and by queene Eliz. created a deanry collegiate. Chester had been anciently a bishop's see, and long since translated to Coventry. 33. H. 8. ca. 31. Camden ubi supra. 26. H. 8. first fruits and tenths. Vid. Sect. 137.

3. Co. 73. deane and chap. of Norwich case. Vide Sect. 134. 201. 31. H. 8. cap. 10.

Every diocesse is divided into archdeaconries, whereof there be 60; and the archdeacon is called oculus episcopi; and every archdeaconry is parted into deanries; and deanries again into parishes, townes and hamlets. And thus much, for the better understanding of our author, and how the state ecclesiasticall standeth at this day, shall suffice.

Vide more hereof, sect. 180. 528. 648. &c.

Frankalmoigne, que est a dire en Latine, in liberam eleemosinam.

In English in free almes. There is an officer in the king's house called eleemosinarius, vulgarly called the king's almoner (whose office and duty is excellently described in ancient authors), viz. Fragmenta diligenter colligere, et diligenter distribuere singulis diebus egenis; agrotos et leprosos, incarceratos, pauperesque viduas, et alios egenos vagosque in patria commorantes charitative visitare: item equos relictos, robas, pecuniam, et alia ad eleemosinam largita recipere, et fideliter distribuere. Debet etiam regem super eleemosinæ largitione crebris summotionibus stimulare, præcipue diebus sanctorum, et rogare ne robas suas, quæ magni sunt pretii, histrionibus, blanditoribus, accusatoribus, seu menistrallis, sed ad eleemosinæ suæ incrementum, jubeat largiri (6).

Fleta lib. 2. cap. 23.

All ecclesiasticall persons may hold in frankalmoigne be they secular or regular; and no lay person can hold in frankalmoigne. This adjective (liber) doth distinguish many things in law from others; as here libera eleemosina are words appropriated to this case, and doth distinguish it from a tenure by divine service; liberum tenementum from a tenure in villenage or by copyhold or base tenure; liberum feudum franke fee from a tenure in ancient demeané; liberum

Vide Sect 1. Bract. lib. 4. c. 37. 38. Britton cap. 32.

the several changes made in the tenure of socage by the statute of the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. so often mentioned. 1. It takes away the aids pur fide marier and pur faire fize chevalier, which were incident to all socage-tenures. 2. It relieves socage in capite from the burthen of the king's primer seisin and of fines of alienation to the king; to both of which socage in capite was equally liable with tenure by knights service in capite, though not so to wardship. It extends the father's power of appointing guardians by deed or will, which by the 4. and 5. Phil. and Mar. the first statute conferring such a power was restricted to female children, to children of both sexes, and thus supplied the means of still further preventing guardianship in socage. In all other respects the tenure in socage seems to be under the same circumstances, and attended with the same consequences, as it was before the Restoration. But the statute of Charles the Second goes further than the mere alteration of socage; and having thus reformed and improved this favourite tenure, in the next place provides for the extension of it throughout the kingdom. This the statute effectually secures, by converting into socage all tenures by knights service, and by taking from the crown the power of creating any other tenure than socage in future.

(1) The words between brackets are in L. and M. but not in Roh.—(2) The student will find a good history of the dissolution of monasteries in England in the excellent preface to that most valuable work the Notitia Monastica, by bishop Tanner.—(3) Here bishops are styled suffragans in respect of their relation to the archbishop of their province; but formerly each archbishop and bishop had also his suffragan, to assist him in conferring orders and in other spiritual parts of his office within his diocese. These in our ecclesiasticall law are called suffragan-bishops, and resemble the chorepiscopi or bishops of the country in the early times of the christian church. How this inferior order of bishops may be elected and consecrated is regulated by the 26. H. 8. c. 14. but notwithstanding this statute, it is not usual to appoint them.—They should not be confounded with the co-adjutors of a bishop; the latter being appointed in case of the bishop's infirmity to superintend his jurisdiction and temporalities; neither of which was within the interference of the former. See fully on this subject in Gibb. Cod. 1st ed. v. 1. p. 155.—(4) See ante 70. b. note 2. post 164. a.—(5) This is a mistake; for the statute, by which precedency is principally regulated, gives the bishop of Durham place between the bishop of London and the bishop of Winchester. See 31. H. 8. c. 10. f. 3.—(6) The office of king's almoner is usually given to the archbishop of York, with the title of lord high almoner.

service, are brought into one point of view.—Guardianship in chivalry could only be where the estate vested in the infant by descent.

Britton cap. 66. Bract. lib. 4. f. 288. 247. 292. Britton fol. 245. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 11. Fortescue c. 26. 24. E. 3. 34. 43. E. 3. Conspir. 11. 27. Ail. 59. Stanf. 175. Vide Sect. 199. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 47.

Glanvil. lib. 7. ca. 1. fo. 44. 45. acc.

Britton ca. 66. fol. 164. Bract. lib. 2. cap. 5. & 10. F. N. B. 211.

Fleta lib. 1. cap. 42.

7. E. 4. 12. 33. H. 6. 6. 7.

39. H. 6. 29.

[a] Mortmaine.

Britton fol. 32. & 90. Bracton

lib. 2. cap. 5. Fleta lib. 3. cap.

5. 11. H. 7. 12.

(2. Ro. Abr. 61.)

39. H. 6. 30. b.

(1. Ro. Abr. 832.)

Vid. Litt. in the chapter of Fee simple. Sect. 1. 2.

39. H. 6. 30.

35. H. 6. 56. 7. E. 4. 11. Vid. Bracton lib. 2. ca. 10.

35. H. 6. 56. 7. E. 4. 11. Bract. ubi. supr. 44. E. 3. 24.

20. H. 6. fol. 36.

38. E. 3. 4. 3. 14. H. 6. 12. 10. H. 7. 13. 16. H. 7. 9. 18. E. 3. Consilans 39. 33. H. 6. 22. 17. E. 3. 51. 6. E. 3. 54. & c. Tr. 5. H. 3. Rot. 4. in Scaccario. The prior of Donstable's case.

(1) See Wright's Ten. 167.

(2) See post sect. 140.

(3) In general a corporation aggregate cannot take or pass away an interest in land, or even do any acts of importance, without deed; but there are several exceptions to the rule. See ante 66. b. Vin. Abr. Grants D. a. Corporation K. Com. Dig. Franchises F. 12. 13. 14. New Abr. Corporation E. 3.

(4) Contra 1. Ro. Abr. 832.—Also in the following annotation by lord Hale, which he gives at the bottom of fol. 8. b. several authorities are cited to the contrary. Vid. 7. E. 3. 41. 11. H. 4. 84. Gift to abbot and monks passeth fee simple. If an abbot makes lease reddendo rent nobis, it enures to the successor. 20. H. 6. 8. Land granted to the abbot of S and his heirs is only for life. 9. H. 5. 9. Hal. MSS. See further the authorities cited in Vin. Abr. Estate L. pl. 1.

(5) Acc. ante 8. b. But some take a distinction between describing a sole corporation both by his natural and politick name, and describing him by his politick name only; and it hath been resolved, that a visitatorial power, granted to the bishop of Ely over Trinity College Cambridge in the latter way, ought to be construed as a grant to the bishop of Ely for the time being, and therefore extended to successors. This point was adjudged in Dr. Bentley's case. See 2. Stra. 913. Fitz-Gibb. 308. 312. 1. Barnard. 453.

descent.—All males under 21 at the ancestor's death were liable to it; but not females, unless they were then under 14.—It extended not only to the person of the infant, but also to all such of the infant's lands or tenements as were within the guardian's feignory; and if the king was guardian in respect of a tenure in capite, then to the whole of the infant's estate, of whomsoever holden, what.

berum maritagium from other estates taile; libera firma frank ferme, when an estate is changed from knights service to socage; liberum socagium from a tenure by service in chivalrie; francus bancus to distinguish it from other dowers, for that it cometh freely without any act of the husband's or assignement of the heire; libera lex to distinguish men, who enjoy it, and whose best and freest birthright it is, from them, that by their offences have lost it, as men attainted in an attain, in a conspiracie upon an indictment, or in a premunire, &c. And so of libera capella, francus plagius frankpledge, libera chasea free chase, liber burgus, liber aper, liber taurus, and the like. But in a matter (some will say) of curiosity, this shall suffice; and yet seeing it tends to the better understanding (others say) it is tolerable.

By the ancient common law of England, a man could not alien such lands as he had by descent, without the consent of his heire; (1) yet he might give a part to God in free almoigne, or with his daughter in free marriage, or to his servant in remuneratione servitii. Our old bookes described frankalmoign thus; when lands or tenements were bestowed upon God, (that is) given to such people as are consecrated to the service of God. In our ancient bookes these gifts of devotion were called churchfett, or churchseed, quasi semen ecclesie; but in a more particular sense it is described thus. Certam mensuram bladi tritici significat, quam quilibet olim sancte ecclesie die sancti Martini, tempore tam Britonum quam Anglorum, contribuerunt. Plures tamen Magnates, post Romanorum adventum, illum contributionem secundum veterem legem Moysi nomine primitiarum dabant, prout in brevi regis Knuti ad summum pontificem transmissa continetur, in quo illam contributionem Churchsed appellant quasi semen ecclesie.

Et tiel tenure. For albeit neither fealty, nor any other temporall service, is due, yet it is a tenure.

En ancient temps. [a] That is to say before the statutes of mortmaine, viz. magna charta, cap. 36. and 7. E. 1. de religiosis, &c. and before the statute of quia emptores terrarum, as shall be hereafter in his proper place said in this chapter (2).

Enfeoffa un abbe et son covent, &c. Albeit the covent be dead persons in law, and the abbot only capable (as before is said) yet if the feoffment be made to an abbot and covent, the feoffment is good, and the state vesteth only in the abbot. And note a man may infeoffe an abbot, a bishop, a parson, &c. or any other sole body politique, by deed or without deed, in free almes; and so may a gift in frankmarriage be made without deed also; but if lands be given to a deane and chapter, or any other corporation aggregate of many, there the gift must be by deed (3).

A ver et tener a eux et a leur successors. For in case an abbot or prior and covent regularly a fee simple doth not passe without these words (successors); (4) for the diversity standeth thus betwene a corporation aggregate of many capable persons, and a sole corporation. As if lands be given to a deane and chapter, they have a fee simple without these words (successors) for that the body never dies; but if lands be given to a bishop, parson, or any other sole corporation, who after their deceases have a succession, there without these words (successors) nothing passeth unto them but for life (5). But of corporations aggregate of many, there is a diversity when the head and body both are capable, as in the case of deane and chapter, and when one (as hath been said) is onely capable, as in case of abbot or prior and covent; but yet out of the generall rules, the case of frankalmoign is excepted, as hereafter shall be said. Also lands must be given to a corporation aggregate of many by deed; but to a sole corporation it may be granted without deed.

Bracton lib. 2. cap. 10. Potest donatio fieri in liberam elemosinam ecclesiis cathedralibus, conventualibus, parochialibus, et viris religiosis.

En pure et perpetuall almoigne. Here it appeareth, that a tenure in frankalmoigne may be created without the word (libera) for pura implyeth as much.

Ou en frankalmoigne. But one of these words, either pura or libera, must be used, or else it is no tenure in frankalmoigne.

Ou per ceux parolx a tener de le grantor ou feoffor et ses heires en frankalmoigne. Here it appeareth, that by these words a fee simple passeth without these words (successors), albeit it be in case of a sole corporation. For as in case of a gift in frankmarriage, an estate taile passeth to the donees without words of heires of their two bodies, as hath been said in the chapter of Fee taile; so in case of a gift in frankalmoigne (which may be resembled to a divine marriage), a fee simple passeth, as hath bin said, though it be in case of a sole corporation, without this word (successors). And besides, grants in frankalmoigne are ancient grants as hath been said, and therefore shall be allowed, as the law was taken, when such grants were made.

Sect.

Sect. 134.

EN mesme le man- IN the same manner ner est, lout terres it is, where lands or ou tenements fueront tenements were grant-grant en ancient ed in ancient time to temps a un deane et a deane and chapter chapter et a leur suc- and to their succescessors, ou a un par- sors, or to a parson of son dun esglis et a ses a church and his sucsuccesseurs, ou a ascun cessors, or to any other auter home de saint man of holy church esglis et a ses succes- and to his successors, sors, en frankal- in frankalmoigne, if moigne, si il avoit he had capacite to capacity dapprender take such graunts or tiels grants ou feoff- feoffments, &c.
ments, &c.

clericorum congregatio sub uno decano in ecclesia cathedrali (2). And chapters be twofold, viz. the ancient, and the later. And the later be also of two sorts. First, those which were translated or founded by king Henry the Eight, in place of abbots and convents, or priors and convents, which were chapters whiles they stood; and these are new chapters to old bishopricks. Secondly, where the bishopricke was newly founded by Henry the Eight (as Chester, Bristol, &c.) there the chapters are also new (3). There is a great diversitie betweene the commings in of the ancient deane, and of the new. For the ancient come in, in much like sort as bishops doe; for they are chosen by the chapter, by a conge de eslier, as bishops be, and the king giving his royall assent they are confirmed by the bishop. But they, which are either newly translated or founded, are donative, and by the king's letters patents are installed, which are matters necessarie to be knowne (4).

Sil avoit capacite a prender. For ecclesiasticall persons have not capacite to take in succession, unless they be bodies politique, as bishops, archdeacons, deanes, parsons, vicars, &c. or lawfully incorporate by the king's letters patents, or prescription, as deanes and chapters, colledges, &c. But a colledge of religious persons, chauntry priests, and such like, that are not lawfully incorporated, but onely consist in vulgar reputation, have no capacity to take in succession. Therefore Littleton added materially (sil ad capacite a prender.)

Sect. 135.

ET tiels, que teig- AND they, which nont en franke- hold in frankalalmoigne, sont oblige moigne, are bound of de droit devant Dieu right before God, to de faire orisons, prai- make orisons, prayers, mess. et autres di- ers, masses, and other vine services, pur les divine services, for the almes de leur grantor soules of their grantor ou feoffor et pur les or feoffor, and for the almes de leur heires soules of their heires

EN mesme le man- IN this section there ap-ner, &c. Here Lit- peareth a division of te-tleton, having put an exam- nures, that is to say, some ple of bodies incorporate ag- be spirituall, and some be gregate of many, whereof temporall. And of spirituall the head is only capable, some be incertain, as tenures now putteth examples both in frankalmoign; and some of bodies incorporate, aggre- be certain, as tenures by gate of many (all being capa- divine service. Again, divine ble) and of sole corporations service certaine is two fold, of secular persons.

Deane. Decanus is derived of the Greek word δεκα that signifieth Ten; for that he is an ecclesiasticall secular governour, and was anciently over ten prebends, or canons at the least in a cathedral church, and is head of his chapter (1).

Chapter. Capitulum est (3. Co. 73.)

IN this section there ap-peareth a division of tenures, that is to say, some be spirituall, and some be temporall. And of spirituall some be incertain, as tenures in frankalmoign; and some be certain, as tenures by divine service. Again, divine service certaine is two fold, either spirituall, as prayers to God, or temporall, as distribution of almes to poore people.

Oblige

(1) Various kinds of deans, besides deans of chapters, are known to our law; and it requires more divisions than one to distinguish them properly. Considered in respect of the difference of office, deans are of six kinds. 1. Deans of chapters, who are either of cathedral or collegiate churches; though the members of churches of the latter sort may more properly be denominated colleges than chapters. 2. Deans of peculiars, who have sometimes both jurisdiction and cure of souls, as the dean of Batel in Sussex, and sometimes jurisdiction only, as the dean of the Arches in London, and the deans of Bocking in Essex and of Croydon in Surrey. 3. Rural deans. 4. Deans in the colleges of our universities, who are officers appointed to superintend the behaviour of the members and to enforce discipline. 5. Honorary deans, as the dean of the Chapel Royal at St. James's, who is so styled on account of the dignity of the person over whose chapel he presides. As to the chapel of St. George Windsor, there being canons as well a dean, it is something more than a mere chapel, and, except in name, resembles a collegiate church. 6. Deans of provinces, or, as they are sometimes called, deans of bishops. Thus the bishop of London is dean of the province of Canterbury, and to him as such the archbishop sends his mandate for summoning the bishops of his province, when a convocation is to be assembled; which perhaps may account for calling the dean of the province dean of the bishops. What the other parts of his office are, the books we have been able to consult do not explain; nor do they mention whether there is a dean for the province of York. See Lyndw. Oxf. ed. 317. Gibf. Synod. Anglican. 17. Ante 94. a.—Another division of deans arises from the nature of the office, and is into deans of spiritual promotions and deans of lay promotions. Of the former kind are deans of peculiars with cure of souls, deans of the royal chapels, and deans of chapters; though as to these last a contrary opinion formerly prevailed. Perhaps too rural deans may be added to the number. Of the latter kind are deans of peculiars without cure of souls, who therefore may be and frequently are persons not in holy orders.—In respect of the manner of appointment, whatever the tenure, and whether lying in tenure or not.—If the infant heir held lands by knights service of several lords, each

Oblige de droit. That is they are compellable by the ecclesiasticall law to doe it; and therefore it is said that they are bound of right, (for want of remedy, and want of right is all one) and the common law (as here it appeareth) taketh knowledge of the ecclesiasticall law in that behalfe.

De faire orisons, prayers, messes, et autres divine services.

Since Littleton wrote, the lyturgie or booke of Common Praier and of celebrating divine service is altered. This alteration notwithstanding, yet the tenure in frankalmoigne remaineth; and such prayers and divine service shall be said and celebrated, as now is authorised; yea, though the tenure be in particular, as Littleton

[a] hereafter saith, viz. A chaunter un messe, &c. ou a chaunter un placebo et dirige,

yet if the tenant saith the praier now authorised, it sufficeth. And as Littleton [b] hath said before in the case of socage, the changing of one kinde of temporall services into other temporall services altereth neither the name nor the effect of the tenure; so the changing of spirituall services into other spirituall services altereth neither the name nor effect of the tenure. And albeit the tenure in frankalmoigne is now reduced to a certaintie contained in the booke of Common Prayer, yet seeing the originall tenure was in frankalmoigne, and the change is by generall consent by authority of parliament, [c] whereunto every man is party, the tenure remaines as it was before.

Ne ferront ascun fealtie. Herein tenant in frankalmoigne differeth from a tenant in frankmariage; for tenant in frankmariage shall doe fealty, as hath beene said in the chapter of Fee taile, but tenant in frankalmoigne shall not doe any, or any other thing, but devota animarum suffragia.

Tiel divine service est melieur pur eux. And it is also said in our bookes, [d] que frankalmoigne est le plus haute service, and this was confessed by the heathen poet.

— fuit hac sapientia quondam

Publica privatis discernere, sacra profanis.

And certaine it is, that nunquam res humana prosperè succedunt, ubi negliguntur divinae.

Sect. 136.

LE seigniour ne ET si tiels, que AND if they, which poet eux disfrei- teignent leur hold their tene-ner pur cest non fea- tenements en frank- ments in frankalmoign, sant, &c. almoigne, ne voilont will not or faile to do Disfreine. The ou failont de faire tiel such divine service (as di-

pointment, deans are, 1. Elective, as deans of chapters of the old foundation; though they are only so nominally and in form, the king being the real patron, which will appear from the next note but one. 2. Donative, as those deans of chapters of the new foundation, who are appointed by the king's letters patent, and are installed under his command to the chapter, without resorting to the bishop either for admission or for a mandate of installment; if that mode of promoting still prevails in respect to any of the new deaneries. See the next note but one. Deans of the royal chapels are also donative, the king appointing to them in the same way. So too may deans of peculiars without cure of souls be called, as the dean of the Arches, who is appointed by commission from the archbishop of Canterbury; but this must be understood in a large sense of the word donative, it being most usually restrained to spiritual promotions. 3. Presentative, as some deans of peculiars with cure of souls, and the deans of some chapters of the new foundation if not of all. Thus the dean of Battel is presented by the patron to the bishop of Chichester, and from him receives institution. Thus too the dean of Gloucester is presented by the king to the bishop with a mandate to admit him and to give orders for his installment. See the next note but one. 4. By virtue of another office, as the bishop of London is dean of the province of Canterbury, and the bishop of St. David is dean of his own chapter.—Again in respect of the manner of holding, deans are so absolutely, or in commendam. But this division applies only to spiritual deaneries.—In thus pointing out the several denominations of deans, we have attempted a more comprehensive as well as a nicer general discrimination and arrangement, than the books usually resorted to furnish; though to them we are indebted for most of the materials, and to them we refer the student for a competent idea of the nature of each kind of deanery. See Decanus and Deanery in Spelm. Gloss. Cow. Dict. Ayl. Parerg. Nelf. Rights of the Clerg. Burn. Eccles. L. and the Index to Gibb. Cod.—(1) But the name of chapter is not confined to each lord had the wardship of the land within his feignory; and as to the body, the wardship of it belonged to that lord, of whom divine service (come est dit) le seignior ne poit eux distraire pur cel non fesant, &c. pur ceo que nest mis en certaine, quelx services ils doivent faire. Mes le seignior de ceo poit complaine a lour ordinary ou visiteur, luy preyant, que il voiloit mitter punishment et correction de ceo, et auxy de provider que tiel negligence ne soit plus avant fait, &c. Et lordinary ou visiteur de droit ceo doit faire, &c.

is said) the lord may not distraine them for not doing this, &c. because it is not put in certainty what services they ought to do. But the lord may complaine of this to their ordinary or visiteur, praying him, that he will lay some punishment and correction for this, and also provide that such negligence be no more done, &c. And the ordinary or visiteur of right ought to doe this, &c.

word distresse is a French word. In Latine it is called distressio, sive angustia; because the cattell distrained are put into a strait, which we call a pown.

Pur ceo que nest mise en certaine quelx services ils doivent faire.

It is a maxim in law, that no distresse can be taken for any services, that are not put into certainty [e] nor can be reduced to any certainty; for, id certum est, quod certum reddi potest; for [f] oportet quod certa res deducatur in iudicium; and upon the avowry, damages cannot be recovered for that, which neither hath certainty, nor can be reduced to any certainty. And yet in some cases there may be a certainty in uncertainty; as a man may hold of his lord to sheere all the sheepe depasturing within the lord's manor; and this is certaine

[e] 35. H. 6. 37. Br. tit. Off. fic. 4. 8 E. 3. 3. 66. 20. E. 3. Avowry 131. (Cro. Cha. 383. Cro. Jam. 585. 1. Sid. 263.) [f] Bracton fol. 230. & 328. (Post 142.)

7. E. 3. 38.

enough, albeit the lord hath sometime a greater number, and sometime a lesser number there; and yet this incertainty, being referred to the manor which is certaine, the lord may distrain for this uncertainty. Et sic de similibus.

Poit complayner. That is, to complaine in course of justice, according to the ecclesiasticall law. (5. Co. 73. a.)

A lour ordinarie. Ordinarius, and so he is called [g] in the ecclesiasticall law, quia habet ordinariam jurisdictionem in jure proprio, et non per deputationem. The name we have anciently taken from the canonists, and doe apply it onely to a bishop, or any other that hath ordinary jurisdiction in causes ecclesiasticall. In this case of Littleton it is to be observed, that the law doth appoint every thing to be done by those, unto whose office it properly appertaineth; and forasmuch as it belongeth to the office of the ordinary in this case to see divine service said, and to compell them to doe it by ecclesiasticall censures, therefore complaint is to be made unto him. Here and in the next section it appeareth, that for deciding of controversies, and for distribution of justice within this realme, there be two distinct jurisdictions. The one ecclesiasticall, limited to certaine spirituall and particular cases (of the one whereof our author here speaketh) and the court wherein these causes are handled, is called forum ecclesiasticum. The other jurisdiction is secular and generall; for that it is guided by the common and generall law of the realme. Quæ pertinet ad coronam et dignitatem regis, et ad regnum in causis et placitis rerum temporalium, in foro seculari. So as in this case put by our author, the lord hath remedy for his divine service (albeit they issue out of temporall lands) in foro ecclesiastico, by the ecclesiasticall law; otherwise the lord should be without remedy. Yet the common law, to the intent that ecclesiasticall persons might the better discharge their duty in celebration of divine service, and not to be intangled with temporall businesse, hath provided, that if any of them be chosen to any temporall office, he may have his writ de clerico infra sacros ordines constituto non eligendo in officium, &c. and thereof be discharged.

[g] Mirror ca. 5. sect. Bracton lib. 5. fo. 405. &c. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 50. & 55. & lib. 6. ca. 38. Britton fo. 69. 70. W. 2. ca. 19. 17. E. 2. Bre. 822. Regist. 141. Lindwood, tit. de Constit. cap. ext. Bract. lib. 5. ca. 2. fo. 400. & 401. and the other Authors above aid. (Post 344. 9. Co. 37. 2. Inst. 398.)

Regist. Orig. 187.

Ou visiteur. That is, where the king or any of his progenitors is founder of the house, there the ordinary regularly shall not visit them, but the chancelour of England is appointed by law to be visiteur of them; or where a speciall visiteur is appointed upon the foundation, the complaint must be made to that visiteur.

27. E. 3. 84. 85. Regist. 40. F. N. B. 42. 10. Eliz. Dier 273. 16. E. 3. Bre. 660. 21. E. 3. 60. 6. H. 7. 13. 8. Ass. 29. Brooke tit. Premunire 21.

De droit doit ceo faire. De droit, of right, (that is to say) he ought to doe it by the ecclesiasticall law in the right of his office.

And here is implied a maxime of the common law, that where the right (as our author here speaketh) is spirituall, and the remedy therefore onely by the ecclesiasticall law, the consue- (5. Co. 66. b. 2. Co. 43. Plowd. 277.)

Sect.

to cathedrals, the prebendaries and canons of collegiate churches being also styled chapters; though rather improperly, as we have before hinted.—(3) The new deaneries and chapters to old bishopricks are eight; namely, Canterbury, Norwich, Winchester, Durham, Ely, Rochester, Worcester, and Carlisle. The new deaneries and chapters to new bishopricks are five; namely, Peterborough, Chester, Gloucester, Bristol, and Oxford. See Will. Cathedr.—(4) In this account of the old and new deaneries, many particulars, relative to the manner of coming to the possession of them, are omitted; and therefore we shall add some general things historically in respect to both.

As to the old deaneries, it will be very difficult to trace the subject, with any tolerable degree of precision, higher than the reign of king John, or to ascertain what was the legal mode of constituting deans of chapters before. If our ancient chronicles are to be depended upon, nothing could be more variable than the practice for several reigns after the Conquest. Thus in the church of York, we find sometimes the archbishop collating to the deanery, sometimes the king conferring, and sometimes the chapter electing; and it is probable, that a like uncertainty prevailed in other cathedrals. See Drake's Antiq. York 557. to 565. 1 Will. Surv. Cathedr. 64. At length however after many struggles the elective mode of constituting deans, as well as bishops, abbots, and priors, was established throughout the kingdom; for king John by a charter of the 16th of his reign grants, ut de cetero, in universis et singulis ecclesiis et monasteriis cathedralibus et conventualibus totius regni nostri Anglia, libera sint in perpetuum electiones quorumcunque praelatorum majorum et minorum; and deans of chapters clearly fall within the description of minor prelates. See king John's charter in 1. Coll. Eccles. Hist. Append. No. 33. and as to the word praelatus, consult Lyndw. Oxf. Ed. 41. and whom the tenure was most ancient, he being styled the lord by priority, and the others lords by posterority. But this must be under-

217.

Sect. 137.

2. E. 3. 27. 28.

(5. Co. 72. b. F. N. B. 209. L.)

33. H. 6. 26. 27.

2. E. 6. ca. 13. versus finem.
 13. E. 3. ca. 5. 11. H. 7. c. 8.
 1. El. ca. 2. 13. El. ca. 1. 23.
 El. ca. 1. 1. Ja. c. 11. & 12.

(4. Co. 20.)

PER certaine divine service destre fait, sicome a chaunter un messe, &c. ou de distributer en almoign,

&c. Here be the two parts above mentioned, of divine service; and for this divine service certaine, the lord hath his remedy, as here it appeares by our author in foro seculari: for here it appears, that if the lord distreine for not doing of divine service, which is certaine, he shall upon his avowry recover damages at the common law, that is, in the king's temporal court, for the not doing of it. And if issue be taken upon the performance of the divine service, it shall be tried by a jury of twelve men; because albeit the service be spirituall, yet the damages are temporall, and so is the feignory also.

And here is implied another maxime of the law, that where the common or statute law giveth remedy in foro seculari, (whether the matter be temporall or spiritual) the confusions of that cause belongeth to the king's temporall courts only; unlesse the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court be saved or allowed by the same statute, to proceed according to the ecclesiastical lawes.

Ou de distributer en almoigne al cent poves homes. Here note, that the almes and reliefe of poore people, being a worke of charity, is accounted in law divine service; for what herein is done to the poore for God's sake, is done to God himselfe.

Poet distrein, &c.
 Here (&c.) includeth many

MES si un abbe, ou prior, tient de son seignior per certaine divine service, en certaine destre fait, sicome a chaunter un messe chescun vendredie en le semaine pur les almes, ut supra, ou chescun an a tiel jour a chaunter placebo et dirige, &c. ou de trover un chapleine de chanter messe, &c. ou de distributer en almoigne al cent poves homes cent deniers a tiel jour; en tiel case, si tiel divine service ne soit fait, le seignior poet distreiner, &c. pur ceo que le divine service est mise en certaine per lour tenure, que le abbe ou prior devoit faire. Et en tiel case le seignior avera fealtie, &c. come il semble. Et tiel tenure nest passe dit tenure en frankalmoigne; eins est dit tenure per divine service; car en tenure en frankalmoigne nul mention est fait d'aucun manner de service; car nul poet tener en frankal-

BUT if an abbot, or prior, holds of his lord by a certaine divine service, in certaine to be done, as to sing a masse everie Friday in the weeke, for the soules, ut supra, or every yeare at such a day to sing a placebo et dirige, &c. or to finde a chaplain to sing a masse, &c. or to distribute in almes to an hundred poore men an hundred pence, at such a day; in this case if such divine service be not done, the lord may distreine, &c. because the divine service is put in certaine by their tenure, which the abbot or prior ought to doe. And in this case the lord shall have fealtie, &c. as it seemeth. And such tenure shall not be said to be tenure in frankalmoigne, but is called tenure by divine service; for in tenure in frankalmoigne no mention is made of any manner of service; for none can hold in frankalmoigne, if there be expressed any manner moigne

217. But notwithstanding the strong terms, in which the freedom of canonical election is provided for by this charter, and the repeated confirmation of it by various statutes, the election of a dean by the chapter is by long practice converted into a mere form, and the king is in reality as much the patron of the old, as he is both in name and substance of the new deaneries. For two centuries past at least, the king's congè d'élire, which by the charter of John must precede every election of a prelate and was in use long before, hath been invariably accompanied with the king's letter missive, as it is styled, recommending a particular person, whom the chapter of course elect their dean. In the case of the old bishopricks, which are filled in the same form, the election of the person named by the crown is secured by a statute of the 25th of Henry the Eighth, which compels the chapter to yield to the recommendation by the pains of a premunire, and if they refuse authorizes the king to appoint a bishop by letters patent. See Post 134. a. But no such statute hath been yet made in respect to the old deaneries; and therefore the right of the crown over them rests wholly on the charter of king John and the subsequent practice. Here then it may be asked, how the crown, without the aid of a statute, can enforce its claim of patronage; and what are the means, by which the nomination would be made effectual if the chapter should disregard the royal recommendation, and persevere in a free exercise of the right of electing? This question may be resolved, by considering, that even the charter of king John requires the king's confirmation of the choice made by the chapter; and therefore by refusing to confirm he may always prevent the effect of their election. Nay it hath been said, that the election is so wholly a ceremony as not even to be essential, and that even before any act of parliament to dispense with it the king might nominate to the old bishopricks by letters patent, without resorting to the chapter for the form of their concurrence; and the old deaneries are within the same reason. See the case of Revan O'Brian in Cro. Jam. 552. Palm. 22. and 2. Ro. Rep. 101. 130. and f. c. cited in F. N. B. 4to ed. 396. note (a). This doctrine, it must be owned, notwithstanding the positive terms in which it was asserted, and the reverence due to the judges by whom it was recognised, seems as repugnant to the letter of king John's charter, as the mode of electing in conformity to the letter missive certainly understood with an exception of the king; for if any lands of the infant were holden of the king by knights service in capite, he *moigne, si soit ex- of certaine service that presse ascun manner he ought to doe, &c.

de certain service que
il doit faire, &c.*

excellent things, as when,
where, and what may be distreynd, of all which there is a taste given in their proper places.

En tiel case le seignior avera fealtie, &c. come semble. For, as it hath beene said, fealty is incident to every tenure, saving the tenure in frankalmoigne; and where the lord may distreine, there is fealty due. And Britton calleth this tenure (by divine service) Brit. fo. 164.
aumone, and not libera elemosina. And, saith he, tenure en aumone est terre ou tenement que est dene a aumone, douant ascun service est retenue al seoffor.

&c. And here (&c.) implyeth distresse, escheat, and the like.

Et tiel tenure nest passe dit tenure en frankalmoigne, eins est dit tenure per divine service, &c. And therefore our old bookes divided spirituall service into free almes, (which was free from any limitation of certainty) and almes, because the tenants were bound to certaine divine services.

Sil soit expresse ascun manner de certaine service. This holdeth where the certainty is reserved upon the original grant. If lands were given to hold in libera elemosina, reddendo a rent, it seemeth the reservation of the rent to be void; * because it is repugnant and contrary to the former grant in libera elemosina.

Vide Trin. 4. E. 3. and F. N. B. 231. f. That an abbot or prior that hold in frankalmoigne, shall not be charged with a corody. Also lands holden in frankalmoigne cannot [1] be ancient demesne, in respect of charges incident thereunto.

Que il doit faire, &c. Here by (&c.) is understood temporall or spirituall service also, which he ought to doe corporally, or render, or pay.

There were within this realme of Englande one hundred and eightene monasteries, founded by the kings of Englande; whereof such abbots and priors, as were founded to hold of the king per baroniam, and were called to the parliament by writ, were lords of parliament, and had places and voices there. * And of them there were twenty-seven abbots and two priors, as by the rolles of parliament appeares. But since our author wrote, all these (as hath beene said) (1) are dissolved. King Stephen did found the abbey of Feversham in Kent, et dedit abbati & monachis, et successoribus suis, manerium de Feversham in com. Kancie, simul cum hundredo, &c.
tenendum per baroniam, &c. who albeit he held by a barony, yet because he was never (that I [m] finde) called by writ, he never sat in parliament.

All the archbishops and bishops of England have beene founded by the kings of England, and doe hold of the king by barony (as before hath beene said) (2) and have beene all called by writ to the court of parliament, and are lords of parliament. As (amongst many) taking one notable record, [a] mandatum est omnibus episcopis, qui conventuri sunt apud Gloucestriam, die Sabbathi in crastina. sancte Katherina, firmiter inhibendo, quod sicut baronias suas, quas de rege tenent, diligunt, nullo modo presumant consilium tenere de aliquibus, quæ ad coronam regis pertinent, vel quæ personam regis, vel statum suum, vel statum consilii sui contingunt, scituri pro certo, quod si fecerint, rex inde se capiet ad baronias suas. Feste rege apud Hereford, 23 Novemb. &c. And the bishopricks in Wales were founded by the princes of Wales; and the principality of Wales was holden of the king of England, as of his crowne; and when the prince of Wales committed treason, rebellion, &c. the principality was forfeited, and the patronages of the bishops annexed to the crowne of England, so as the king is to have pensions for his chaplaines, and corodies for his vadelets, of them, as of bishops founded by himselfe (3). And vide Mich.
10. H. 4. Rot. 60. Wallia coram rege, that the judgment was given accordingly against the bishop of St. David's in Wales, per iusticiarios de utroque banco & alios de perito concilio domini regis. And the bishops of Wales are also called by writ to parliament, and are lords of parliament, as bishops of England be.

33. H. 6. fol. 6.
Brit. ca. 66.

(2. Inst. 460.)
13. E. 1. Count de Vouch. 118.
* 13. H. 4. tit. Meine 74.
30. E. 3. 30. 19. E. 2. Avowrie
224. 32. E. 1. Taille 31.
26. Aff. 66. 4 H. 6. 17.
Trin. 4. E. 3. F. N. B. 252. f.
15. E. 3. Corody 4.
11. Aff. 22. 50. Aff. Pl. 6.
[1] 32. E. 1. Ant. Dem. 39.
8. E. 3. 5.

(F. N. B. 232. a.
* For example, Rot. Parl.
5. H. 8. & 21. H. 8. &c.

[m] Cant. Pas. 30. E. 1.
cor. rege this foundation is so pleaded.
(Post 134. a. 344. a.)

[a] Ex rot. pat. de anno 18. H. 3.
M. 17.

10. H. 4. fo. 6. b.

V. scil. 87. 136. 201. 265. 440.
478. 665. 722.

Sect. 138.

Item si soit demande, si tenant en frankmariage ferra fealtie in frankmariage shall a le donor ou a do fealtie to the do-

LE quel ferra inconvenient, &c.

An argument, drawne from an inconvenience, is forcible in law, as hath beene observed

tainly is to the genuine spirit and intention. But the latter having the sanction of a practice too ancient to be now drawn into question, it can be of little use to deny the former; and accordingly in the reign of Charles the First we find some instances, in which the king actually appointed to some of the old deaneries by letters patent without the least appearance of opposition on the part of the chapter. See Kym. Fæd. vol. 8. part 3. page 166. vol. 9. part 1. page 82. To fix the time when the letter missive, in respect either to the old deaneries or the old bishopricks first came into use; to explain how from a mere recommendation it grew into a royal mandate; and more particularly to determine, whether it operated as such before the Reformation, or whether that, in consequence of the assertion of the king's supremacy, was the æra of implicit obedience to it; might be both curious and useful. Probably the letter missive was not generally used, to controul the freedom of election, till after the time of Edward the First. At least Mr. Prynne, hostile as he was to canonical election, he deeming it an usurpation to the prejudice of the royal prerogative, gives us a congè d'lire of Edward the First for the election of a bishop, which concludes, with a recommendation to the chapter in general terms to chuse a person duly qualified; but he takes no notice of its being accompanied with a letter missive; a circumstance, which had it occurred, would scarce have escaped his observation. See 3. Pryn.
Rec. 1255. The earliest precedent of such a letter, we have hitherto met with since the charter of king John, is of the year 1347, when Philip de Weston is said to have been elected to the deanery of York on exhibiting a letter from Edward the Third. Drak. Antiq. York, 563. Another instance of a letter missive relative to the same deanery occurs in 1344, Henry the Eighth signifying it to be his pleasure that Dr. Wootton should be elected, and the chapter electing him accordingly. Drak.
Antiq. York, 565. and Append. 81. These few facts may give some idea of the gradation, by which the crown hath possessed itself of the complete patronage of the old deaneries. We are not prepared for a more ample discussion; and if we were, this would not be the proper place for a subject so extensive.—The remainder of this note is necessarily postponed to 97. b.

(1) See ante 94. a.—(2) See ante 70. b. and note 2. there.—(3) It seems however, that it is not now the practice of the crown

he was intituled to the wardship both of the infant's body and all his lands held of the crown in capite, or of others by knights-

40. Aff. 27.

Littleton fo. 50. b. 42. E. 3. 5.
28. E. 3. 395. 20. H. 6. 28.

(Ante 23. a.)

ved before, and shall be often hereafter. Nilil, quod est inconveniens, est licitum. And the law, that is the perfection of reason, cannot suffer any thing that is inconvenient.

It is better, saith the law, to suffer a mischief that is peculiar to one, then an inconvenience that may prejudice many. See more of this after in this chapter.

Note, the reason of this diversity, between frankalmoigne and frankmariage, standeth upon a maine maxime of law, that there is no land, that is not holden by some service spirituall or temporall; and therefore the donee in frankmariage shall do fealty, for otherwise he should doe to his lord no service at all; and yet it is frankmariage, because the law createth the service of fealty for necessity of reason, and avoiding of an inconvenience. But tenant in frankalmoigne doth spirituall and divine service, which is within the said maxime, and therefore the law will not cohort him to do any temporall service. See the next section.

Et encounter reason.

And this is another strong argument in law, nilil quod est contra rationem est licitum. for reason is the life of the law, nay the common law itselfe is nothing else but reason; which is to be understood of an artificiall perfection of reason, gotten by long study, observation, and experience, and not of every man's naturall reason; for, nemo nascitur artifex. This legall reason est summa ratio. And therefore if all the reason, that is dispersed into so many severall heads, were united into one, yet could he not make such a law as the law of England is; because by many succession of ages it hath beene fined and refined by an infinite number of grave and learned men, and by long experience growne to such a perfection, for the government of this realme, as the old rule may be justly verified of it, neminem oportet esse sapientiores legibus: no man (out of his own private reason) ought to be wiser than the law, which is the perfection of reason.

ses heires devant le quart degree passe, &c. il semble que cy. Car il nest pas sem- ble quant a cel entent a tenant en frankalmoigne; pur ceo que tenant en frankalmoigne ferra, per cause de sa tenure, divine service pur son seignior, come devant est dit, et ceo il est charge a faite per la ley del saint esglise, et pur ceo il est excuse et dischARGE de fealtie: mes tenant en frankemariage ne ferra pur son tenure tiel service, et sil ne ferra fealtie, dunque il ne ferra a son seignior aucun manner de service, ne spirituall ne temporal, le quel seroit inconvenient et encountre reason, que home ferra tenant de state denheritance a un auter, et encore le seignior avera nul manner de service de luy. (1) Et issint il semble, que il ferra fealtie a son seignior devant le quart degree passe. Et quant il ad fait fealty, il ad fait tous ses services.

nor or his heires before the fourth degree be past, &c. it seemeth that he shall. For he is not like as to this purpose to tenant in frankalmoign; for tenant in frankalmoign by reason of his tenure shall do divine service for his lord, as is said before, and this he is charged to do by the law of holy church, and therefore he his excused and discharged of fealty: but tenant in frankmariage shall not no for his tenure such service, and if he doth not fealty, he shall not do any manner of service to his lord, neither spiritual nor temporall, which would be inconvenient, and against reason, that a man shall be tenant of an estate of inheritance to another, and yet the lord shall have no manner of service of him. And so it seemes he shall do fealty to his lord before the fourth degree be past. And when he hath done fealty he hath done all his services.

Sect.

crown to exert this right of incumbering bishops with pensions and corodies. Should the student wish for any particular information concerning either, whether belonging to the king or to a common person, they not being peculiar to the former, the more ancient books must be referred to; as those of modern date, except bishop Gibson's Codex, either wholly pass over the subject, or treat of it very slightly. See Fitz. N. B. 230. to 232. and title Corody in Fitzh. Abr. Bro. Abr. Ash. Prompt. and the Index to Gibf. Cod.

(1) Come il semble. L and M.

Continuation of the note left unfinished in 97. a.

As to the deans of the new foundation, though the king nominates by letters patent, yet some, if not all, of the new deans of cathedral churches are now deemed presentative and not donative, the practice being to present the letters patent to the bishop for institution and a mandate of installment. It hath indeed been a question, whether they are donative or presentative; for the understanding of which we shall shortly state the principal facts, on which the case, so far as relates to the deanery of Gloucester, depends. The new deaneries were erected by Henry the Eighth under powers given by act of parliament, which also authorized him to make statutes for their regulation by letters patent or writing under the great seal. In the charter for founding the deanery of Gloucester, being one of the new foundation, the king reserved the nomination of the deans to himself, and directed, that the deans and chapters should be governed according to such rules and statutes as the king should appoint by indenture. The king afterwards by commissioners named for the purpose formed a body of statutes, amongst which one required, that the king should upon every vacancy nominate a dean by letters patent, and that he should be presented to the bishop, and being instituted by him should be admitted by the chapter. The commissioners signed these statutes; but they were neither knights-service.—It continued over males till twenty-one, over females till sixteen or marriage.—When it determined, if the tenure

Sect. 139.

ET si un abbe tient de son seignior en frankalmoigne, et labbe et le covent south lour common seale alien mesmes les tenements a un seculer home en fee simple, en ceo cas le seculer home ferra fealtie a le seignior; pour ceo que il ne poit tener de son seignior en frankalmoigne. Car si le seignior ne doit aver de luy fealtie, donque il avera nul manner de service, que serroit inconvenient, ou il est seignior, et le tenement est tenu de luy.

AND if an abbot holdeth of his lord in frankalmoign, and the abbot and convent under their common seale alien the same tenements to a secular man in fee simple, in this case the secular man shall do fealty to the lord; because he cannot hold of his lord in frankalmoigne. For if the lord should not have fealty of him, he should have no manner of service, which should be inconvenient, where he is lord, and the tenements be holden of him.

THIS case is worthy of great observation; for hereby it appeareth, that albeit the alienors held not by fealty nor any other terrene service, but onely by spirituall services and those incertaine, yet the alienee shall hold by the certaine service of fealty, (and of this opinion is Littleton, agreeable with our bookes in former authorities) for the law createth a new temporall service out of the land to be done by the alienee, wherewith the abbot was not formerly charged, for the avoyding of an inconvenience, viz. that the feoffee should doe no manner of service, and consequently that the land should be holden of no man. Wherein it is to be remembered, that (as hath bin said before) all the lands and tenements in England, in the hands of any subject, are holden of some lord or other, and that every tenant must do some kinde of service; and that all lands and tenements are holden either mediately

31. E. 3. Cessavit 22. 33. H. 6. 67. 21. E. 4. 11. 9. Co. 123. Anth. Lowe's case. (2. Inst. 502. 3. Co. 3. b.)

(Ante 1. 2. Inst. 501.)

9. Co. 123. in Anth. Lowe's case.

42. Aff. Pl. 6. Britton 164. b.

or immediately of the king, for originally all lands and tenements were derived from the crowne. And it is to be observed that when the law createth any new tenure, it is the lowest, (viz. tenure in socage) and with the least service that can be done, and neereſt to the freedome of the former service; as in this case a tenure in socage by fealty only is created by the law, which is the lowest and least service the law can create, because fealty is incident to every tenure except tenure in frankalmoigne, for if it should create any other service, it must create fealty also. And the law, according to equity and justice, giveth this fealty to the lord, of whom the land was before holden in frankalmoigne. And lastly, the law so abhorreth an inconvenience, as that it createth out of the land a new service for avoyding thereof. It appeareth by our bookes, that a seignior in frankalmoigne may be granted over, and consequently the tenant shall hold of the grantee by fealty only; and therefore Britton said well, that no service could be demanded of a tenant in frankalmoigne, tant come les terres remaine en les maines les feoffees.

Sect. 140.

ITEM si home graunta a cel jour a un abbe, ou a un prior, terres ou tenements en frankalmoigne, ceux parolx (frankalmoigne) sont

ALSO if a man grant at this day to an abbot, or to a prior, lands or tenements in frankalmoigne, these words (frankalmoign) are void; for it is or-

Ordeine per lestatute. Here it appeareth by the authority of Littleton, that this is a statute, and yet the king alone speaketh, viz. dominus rex in parlamento suo, &c. ad instantiam magnatum regni sui concessit, providit & statuit.

But

under the great seal nor indented; and on account of this deviation both from the act of parliament and the commission, they were considered as invalid, and powers were given by other acts to Mary and Elizabeth successively to form other statutes. However nothing final being done under these powers, some of the statutes framed by Henry the Eighth's commissioners, for want of others more regularly made, were adopted; but the particular statute, which made the deanery presentative, was never practised after the Restoration, and only in one instance before, the deans being constituted by mere grants from the crown. In this state of things came the 6. Ann. c. 21. which established such of the statutes of the cathedral and collegiate churches founded by Henry the Eighth, as had been usually received and practised in the government of the same respectively since the Restoration, and were not inconsistent with the constitution of the church of England or the laws of the land. But this act, made to remove doubts, created a very important one; which was, whether the act confirmed the whole body of statutes where any of them had been practised since the Restoration, or only such statutes or parts of statutes as had been individually received. Amongst other cases, which depended on the solution of this doubt, one was the mode of constituting the dean of Gloucester; for if receiving a part of Henry the Eighth's statutes necessarily was followed with a confirmation of the whole, then the cathedral church of Gloucester being under this predicament, it was become essential to conform to the particular statute, which required a presentation of the dean to the bishop, though that form had hitherto been disregarded. It being of importance to have this point settled, the crown in 1720 referred it to Sir Philip Yorke and Sir Robert Raymond the then attorney and solicitor-general, who were of opinion, that it was intended by the act of queen Anne to confirm the whole body of statutes where any part had been received, and therefore that in the case of the particular deanery of Gloucester a presentation was become necessary; though they tenure was of a subject, the heir might enter on the lord immediately; but if the king had the wardship, then the heir was not

Vid. 8. Co. the Prince's case.

But because it is dominus rex in parlamento, &c. concessit, it is as much in this case (being an ancient statute) as dominus rex autoritate parliamenti concessit. Secondly, it is (amongst other acts of parliament) entred into the parliament roll, and therefore shall be intended to be ordained by the king, by the consent of the lords and commons in that parliament assembled. Thirdly, it is a generall law, whereof the judges may take knowledge, and therefore it is to be determined by them, whether it be a statute or no. (1) Now for the divers formes of acts of parliament, you may read them in the Prince's case, ubi supra.

(Fol. 143. 2. Inst. 500.)

Appel quia emptores terrarum. This statute is called so; because the statute beginneth with these words, Quia emptores terrarum.

Nul poet aliener, &c. terres in fee simple de tener de luy mesme.

This is justly inferred upon the statute; but the letter of the statute is, that seoffatus teneat terram illam de capitali domino, &c. So as by the authority of Littleton, he, that citeth a statute, is not bound to recite the very words thereof, so long as he misseeth not of the substance and necessary consequence thereupon; and yet the safer way is to vouch the words of a law, as they be.

Granta per licence mesme les tenements, &c. Here Littleton speaketh of a licence, or a dispensation within the said statute of quia emptores terrarum (and mentioneth no other statute) which may be done by the king and all the lords immediate and mediate, for it is a rule in law, alienatio, licet prohibeatur, consensu tamen omnium, in voides; pur ceo que il est ordeine per lestatute, que est appelle quia emptores terrarum (que lestatut fuit fait anno 18 Ed. 1.) que nul poet aliener ne graunter terres ou tenements en fee simple, a tener de luy mesme. Issint si home seisie de certaine tenements, queux il tient de son seignior per service de chivaler, et a cel jour il, &c. granta per licence mesmes les tenements a un abbe, &c. en frankalmoigne, labbe tiendra immediatment mesmes les tenements per service de chivaler de mesme le seignior, de que son graunter tenoit, et ne tiendra my de son grantor en frankalmoigne, per cause de mesme lestatute. Issint que nul poet tener en frankalmoigne, si non que soit per title de prescription, ou per force de graunt fait a ascun de ses predecessors devant que mesme lestatute fuit fait. Mes le roy poet doner terres ou tenements en fee simple, a tener en frankalmoigne, ou per autres services; car il est hors de cas del estatute.

dained by the statute which is called quia emptores terrarum, (which was made anno 18. E. 1.) that none may alien nor grant lands or tenements in fee simple to hold of himselfe. So that if a man seised of certain tenements, which he holdeth of his lord by knights service, and at this day he, &c. granteth by licence the same tenements to an abbot, &c. in frankalmoigne, the abbot shall hold immediately the tenements by knights service of the same lord of whom his grantor held, and shall not hold of his grantor in frankalmoigne, by reason of the same statute. So that none can hold in frankalmoigne, unless it be by title of prescription, or by force of a grant made to any of his predecessors before the same statute was made: but the king may give lands or tenements in fee simple to hold in frankalmoigne, or by other services; for he is out of the case of that statute.

13. E. 3. tit. Release 33. 27. H. S. F. N. B. 211. 1.

they allowed the question to be one of great doubt and difficulty. See Burn. Ecclef. L. tit. Deans and Chapters. To this opinion was added the form of a presentation; and it is presumed, that the deanery of Gloucester hath ever since been treated by the crown as presentative. Probably too under the same sanction the example may have been followed in respect to such other of the new deaneries, as at the time of the act of queen Anne were in the same circumstances; that is, had statutes of doubtful authority from Henry the Eighth or any of his successors, some of which between the Restoration and the act of Anne had been usually practised, though not the particular one directing a presentation of their deans. But whether this construction of the act of Anne hath ever been judicially recognized, we cannot inform the reader. As to those new deaneries, which had statutes requiring a presentation and usually complied with after the Restoration, there cannot be the least doubt of their being legally presentative. But if there are any of the new deaneries, the rules and statutes of whose churches are wholly silent as to presentation, it is most likely that they always have been donative, and still continue so; and we guess, that the church of Westminster may fall under this description, it being collegiate and not for any other purpose subject to the jurisdiction of any bishop.—From this detail about appointing to deaneries of the new foundations, it seems that lord Coke was fully justified in styling all of them donative; for it is said, that none of the charters for founding the new deaneries mention presentation, and that the subsequent statutes prescribing it were equally liable to the objection of informality as those of the church of Gloucester, and there was no act for establishing them in lord Coke's time. On the other hand, bishop Gibson might be equally warranted in calling all the new deaneries presentative, if we except the collegiate church of Westminster; because in 1713, when the first edition of his book on Ecclesiastical Law was published, they were become so by the operation of the act of queen Anne. This distinction of time did not strike the bishop, though a writer in general well informed and much to be relied on, when he animadverted on those, who like lord Coke denominated the new deaneries donative. 1. Gibb. Cod. 197.—The continuation of this note on the old and new deaneries will be found in fol. 100. b.

(1) This observation on general or publick statutes points at two important rules distinguishing between them and particular not intitled to take possession of the land without suing to the crown for livery, which was a process both nice and expensive.

quorum favorem prohibita est, potest fieri, and quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto: and the licence of lords immediate and mediate in this case shall enure to two intents, viz. to a dispensation both of the statute of Quia emptore terrarum, and of the statutes of mortmain, as Littleton here implyeth; because their deedes shall be taken most strongly against themselves (1). But it is a safe and good policy in the king's licence to have a non obstante also of the statutes of mortmain, and not only a non obstante of the statute of Quia emptores terrarum. But it appeareth by Littleton (which is a secret of law,) that there needeth not any non obstante by the king of the statutes of mortmain, for the king shall not be intended to be misconusant of the law, and when he licenseth expressly to alien an abbot, &c. which is in mortmain, he needs not make any non obstante of the statutes of mortmain, for it is apparent to be granted in mortmain, and the king is the head of the law, and therefore presumitur rex habere omnia jura in scrinio pectoris sui, for the maintenance of his grant to be good according to the law, for which cause of purpose Littleton maketh no mention of any licence in mortmain. Dispensatio est mali prohibiti provida relaxatio, utilitate seu necessitate pensata.

Labbe tiendra, &c. per service chivaler. For although by the death of (Ante 70. b.) Lit. fol. 20. a. the abbot there is neither ward, marriage, nor reliefe due, yet he holdeth by knight's service, albeit the lord cannot have the fruit of it; and if the abbot, with the consent of the covent, alien the land over to a man and his heires, there is the ward, marriage, and reliefe revived. But by prescription (as it hath been said) the successor of an abbot may pay reliefe. An abbot or prior, &c. that holdeth lands by knights service, albeit he ought not in respect of his profession to serve in warre in proper person, yet must he find a sufficient man, conveniently arrayed for the warre, to supply his place. And if he can find none, then must he pay escuage, &c. for his profession doth not privilege him, but that the king's service in his warre must be done, that belongeth to his tenure.

Nota (reader) since Littleton wrote, a man might either in his life time, or by his last will in writing [m] give lands, tenements, &c. to any spirituall body politick, or corporate, to be holden of himselfe in frankalmoigne, or by divine service, as by the statute of 1 & 2 Phil. & Marie (which indured for twenty years) appeareth; which statute, since that time, hath bene favourably and benignely expounded.

Iffint que nul poet tener en frankalmoigne, si non que soit per tittle de prescription, &c. It is to be understood, that a man seised of lands may at this day give the same to a bishop, parson, &c. and their successors in frankalmoigne, by the consent of the king, and the lords mediate and immediate, of whom the land is holden; for the rule is, quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto.

So if an ecclesiasticall person hold lands by fealty and certaine rent, the lord at this day may confirme [n] his estate, to hold to him and his successors in frankalmoigne; for the former services be extinct, and nothing is reserved but that he holds of him, and so he did before.

Mes le roy poet, &c. car il est hors de case del statute.

It is cleere that the king is out of the case of the statute; for the statute is quod feoffatus teneat terram illam, &c. de capitali domino feodi, &c. and this cannot be intended of the king, who is superior to all, and interior to none, but where the king is bound by acts of parliament, and where not, vide 11 Co. 66. Magdalen Colledge case.

Sect. 141.

ET nota que nul AND note that none poit tener terres ou tenements en frankalmoigne, forspise del grantor, ou de ses heires. Et pur ceo il est dit, que si soit seignior mesne et tenant, et le tenant est un abbe, que tient

FORspise del grantor, ou de ses heirs.

The tenure in frankalmoigne is an incident to the inheritable blood of the grantor, and cannot be transferred nor forfeited to any other, no more than a foundership of a house of religion, (which is intended to be in frankalmoigne, or homage ancestrel, or the writ of contra formam feoffamenti, or the writ of contra

or private statutes.—According to the first, which relates to their several degrees of notoriety, the judges may and ought to take notice of public acts without pleading; but private acts must be pleaded. But there are some exceptions to both parts of this rule. See Law of Nisi Prius ed. of 1775. p. 322. and 1. Sid. 209.—The second rule imports a difference in the mode of trial; for the existence of a public act must be tried by the judges, who are to inform themselves in the best manner they can; but a private act may be put in issue and shall be tried by the record. See Hal. Hist. C. L. 15. and Com. Dig. Parliament R. 5.—A third difference, which hath been taken between a general and a particular act, is, that the latter will not bind strangers, though it is without a saving of their rights. However well founded this last difference may be, it certainly is usual in modern private acts to insert a special saving clause, explaining how far the rights of strangers are intended to be affected.—A fourth difference relates to offering statutes in evidence to a jury; for it is said, that a public act, printed by the king's printer or other person authorized by the crown, is good evidence to a jury; but that of a private act, there must be either an exemplification under the great seal, or a copy sworn to be compared with the parliament roll. Some authorities however do not correspond with this last difference; and others except out of it private acts concerning a whole county. See Vin. Abr. Evidence A. b. 1. Law of Nisi Pri. ed. 1775. p. 225. 1. Stra. 446. It should also be remarked, that there is a difference between proving private acts to a jury, and proving them on the issue of nul tiel record, which never goes to a jury; nothing less than an exemplification under the great seal being sufficient in the latter case, 2. Salk. 566. For these and other differences, between general and particular statutes, see further in Vin. Abr. Statutes D. E. 2. 3. and Hatt. Treat. on Stat. cap. 2. p. 11. Though the book last cited is published with the name of Sir Christopher Hatton, lord chancellor to queen Elizabeth, some doubt, whether he was really the author. Nicholl. Engl. Histor. Libr. 2d. ed. 192. However it is at all events a treatise well worth consulting. As to the different forms of statutes, besides the Prince's case in 8 Co. see Pryn. on 4. Inst. 13. Hal. Hist. Com. L. 13. Vin. Abr. Statutes A. Com. Dig. Parliament R. 3. and the Preface to Ruffhead's edit. of Stat.

(1) Here lord Coke explains the king's power of granting licences to alien in Mortmain, notwithstanding the old statutes against

See ante 77. a.—It had a preference with respect to the custody of the infant's body over every other species of wardship.

15. E. 3. confirm. 8.

contra formam collationis, or any other incident to their inheritable blood. But it is no incident inseparable; for the lord may release to the tenant in frankalmoigne, and then the tenure is extinct, and he shall hold of the lord paramount by fealty, as in the case of Littleton, Sect. 139.

Ou de ses heires.

Here (or) hath the sense of (and); for a man cannot at this day grant lands in taile and reserve a rent to his heires, and exclude the grantor himselfe; for the heire cannot take any thing in the life of the ancestor, neither can the heire take any thing by descent, when the ancestor himselfe is seclused. But if a man had granted lands at the common law to hold of his heires, these words (to hold of his heires) are void, and he shall hold of the grantor as he held over, which he should have done, if he had made no reservation at all.

And albeit Littleton saith, that no man can hold lands in frankalmoign but of the grantor or his heires, yet might an abbot by assent of his covent, or a bishop with assent of his chapter, and such like, by license as is aforesaid, have given lands in frankalmoigne, to hold of them and their successors; and as Littleton himselfe agreeth, the king may give land in frankalmoigne, in which case the land shall be holden of him, his heires and successors.

Et pur ceo est dit; si soit seignior mesne et tenant, et le tenant est un abbe, &c. By this it appeareth, that if the feignory be transferred by an act in law to a stranger, and thereby the purity is altered, that the tenure in frankalmoigne is changed to a tenure in socage by fealty, as well as it appeareth before when the feignory or tenancy is granted to another, and the law in this case also createth a new fealty, wherewith the land was not charged before.

Donques le mesnaltie deviendra per escheat al dit seignior paramont.

This new tenure, created by law, shall upon the escheate drowne the feignory; for alwaies the feignory neerer to the land drownes the feignory that is more remote off: and yet the lord in this case, to whom the mesnalty is escheated, shall hold by the same services that he held before the escheat.

Sect. 142.

HOME de religion.

And yet this case extendeth to all ecclesiasticall persons, that hold in frankalmoigne, be they secular or regular; for the mesne ought to acquite all of them: for they be bound [a] to make prayers for their founder, and his heires; and in consideration of those prayers, the founder, &c. is bound to pay to the chiefe lord all rents and services issuing out of that land, as it appeareth by that which followeth.

De luy acquiter.

ET nota, que loutiel home de religion tient ses tenements de son seignior en frankalmoign, son seignior est tenu per la ley de luy acquitter de chescun manner de service, que ascun seignior paramont de luy voet aver ou demander de mesmes les tenements; et fil ne

AND note, that where such man of religion holds his tenements of his lord in frankalmoigne, his lord is bound by the law to acquite him of every manner of service, which any lord paramont will have or demand of him for the same tenements; and if he doth not acquite luy

[a] Pl. Com. 306. b. in Sio-rington's case.33. H. 6. 6. 39. H. 6. 29.
14. E. 3. Meine 7.

against such alienations, on a principle, which makes the licence rather the waiver or remission of a forfeiture, than a dispensation. The licence being considered in the former way, it is attributing to the king no greater power as lord paramount, than subjects, being mesne lords, may exercise in respect of the forfeitures to which they are intitled on alienations in mortmain. In other words it is construing the statutes, so as not to bring the case of a licence within them; and consequently dispensation became unnecessary. It should also be remembered, that the king's power of granting such licences seems recognized by a statute of Edward the Third. See 18. E. 3. st. 3. c. 3. However the pretended power of suspending statutes by regal authority, without consent of parliament, being declared illegal at the Revolution; and it having been usual to grant licences to alien in mortmain in a manner, which imported an exercise of suspending or dispensing power, that is, with a non obstante of the statutes of Mortmain and quia emptores; under these circumstances a jealousy of any thing, in the least connected with an assumption of dispensing power, might have influenced many to have confounded such licences with dispensation; and therefore it was deemed prudent to give them a parliamentary sanction. See 7. and 8. W. 3. c. 37. It is observable, that the statute made for this purpose authorizes the king to grant mortmain-licences, without any regard to the person of whom the lands were held; and declares, ship, except only that of the father where the infant was his heir apparent; even the mother being excluded.—It intitled the lord

luy acquita pas, mes suffra luy destre distraire, &c. donque il avera envers son seignior un brieve de mesne, et recoversa envers luy ses damages et ses costes de son fuit, &c.

him, but suffereth him to be distreyned, &c. he shall have against his lord a writ of mesne, and shall recover against him his damages and costs of fuit, &c.

acquiter is compounded of ad, and the old verbe quietare, and signifieth in law [b] to discharge, or keepe in quiet, and to see that the tenant be safely kept from any entries, or other molestation for any manner of service, issuing out of the land to any lord, that is about the mesne. [c] And hereof commeth [d] acquitall, and quietus est, (that is) that he is discharged; and

[b] Fleta lib. 2. ca. 43. Britton fol. 58. 59. Vide hereafter in this Sect. in brieve de Mesne.

[c] Vide Sect. 142. 540.

[d] 8. E. 2. Corone 424. 20. E. 2. Ibid. 232. Stanf. Pl. Corone 105.

he, that is discharged of a felony, &c. by judgement, is said to be acquitted of the felony, acquietatus de felonis; and if he be drawne in question againe, he may plead [e] auterfoits acquite. And therefore if such a tenant, as Littleton here speaketh of, be distrained by any lord paramount, the mesne (to keep the tenant quiet) may put his beasts in the powne, instead of the beasts of the tenant.

There be three kinds of acquittals. 1. An acquitall by Deed. 2. An acquitall by prescription. 3. An acquitall by tenure: and by tenure foure manner of wayes. 1. By owelty of services, for service acquits service. 2. Tenure in frankalmoigne, whereof Littleton here speaketh. 3. Tenure in frankmariage. 4. Tenure by reason of dower.

De chescun manner de service. [f] And yet not of services onely, as homage, fealty, rent workes, and other services, but also of improvement of services, as if he be distreyned for reliefe, Aide pur filemarier, aide pur faire fitz chevalier, &c. Also for suite service to a hundred. [g] But for fuit reall in respect of refiance within any hundred, leet, or turne, the mesne shall make no acquitall, for that is in respect of his person and refiance.

Brieve de mesne. Breve de medio, a writ of mesne, so called by reason of the words of the writ of mesne, which are, Unde idem A. qui medius est inter C. et prefatum B. A. who is mesne between C. that is the lord paramount, and B. that is the tenant paravaile. And note, that there be six writs in law, that may be maintained, quia timet, before any molestation, distresse, or impleading, as 1. A man may have his writ of mesne (whereof Littleton here speaketh) before he be distreyned. 2. A warrantia cartæ, before he be impleaded. 3. A monstraverunt, before any distresse or vexation. 4. An audita querela, before any execution sued. 5. A curia claudenda, before any default of inclosure. 6. A ne injuste vexes, before any distresse or molestation. And these be called brevia anticipantia, writs of prevention.

Et recoversa vers luy ses damages. It is to be knowne, that there be two severall judgements in a writ of mesne, one at the common law, another by the statute of W. 2. ca. 9. At the common law he shall have judgment to recover his acquitall, and if he be distreyned or damnified, his damages and costs: and the processe at the common law was summons, attachment and distresse infinite, in the same county where the writ is brought. * The judgement by the said statute of W. 2. is a forejudger of the mesnalty, and that in two severall cases. One upon processe given by the said statute, viz. Summons, attachment, and grand distresse, and if he commeth not, and the writ be returned, he shall be forjudged. The other case is, where the tenant recovereth his acquitall in a writ of mesne, if he be not acquitted afterwards, he shall have a writ of disfringas ad acquietandum against the same mesne, and if he commeth not, he shall be forejudged by his default of the mesnalty; and so if he commeth, and it be found against him by verdict, he shall be forejudged: but forjudger in that case is not given against his heire, for that the statute speaketh onely of the mesne, and not of his heires. And the judgment in case of forjudgement is, quod T. (le mesne) amittat servitium de A. (le tenant) de tenementis predictis, et quod omisso predicto T. prefatus R. (le seignior paramount) modo sit attendens et respondens per eadem servitium per quod T. tenuit. The said statute, in case of forjudgement, doth not bind a feme covert; and yet if such a judgement be given against a baron and feme, it is not void, but erroneous, and to be reversed in a writ of error. And so a forjudgement against a tenant in taile shall binde the issue in taile in an avowry, untill he reverseth it by error. If two joyntenants bring a writ of mesne, and the one is summoned and severed, the other cannot forjudge the mesne; for he ought to be attendant to the lord paramount, as the mesne was, and that cannot be alone. And so it is if there be two joyntenants mesnes, and in a writ of mesne brought against them, one maketh default, and the other appeares, there can be no forjudger.

[e] 4. E. 3. 35. 17. E. 3. 44. 7. H. 4. 18. 34. H. 6. 47. 13. E. 4. 6. F. N. B. 136. 9. Co. 110. 111. in Tresham's case.

3. E. 3. 14. 77. 5. E. 3. 11. 4. H. 6. 28. 39. E. 3. 19. 11. H. 4. 52. 12. H. 4. 9. 14. H. 4. 17. F. N. B. 136. b. h. 39. H. 6. 30. 33. H. 6. 7. F. N. B. 135. m. 4. E. 4. 35. 12. H. 4. 9. 28. E. 3. 95. 17. E. 3. 39.

[f] 39. H. 6. 31. 2. 9. E. 4. 27. F. N. B. 136 m. 17. E. 2. Mesne. 5. E. 3. 49. * Bracton lib. 2. fol. 84.

[g] 4. E. 3. 42. For this writ see the register fol. and F. N. B. fol. 135. Mirror cap. 2. sect. 13. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 84. Britton fol. 58. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 43. Westm. 2. cap. 9.

W. 2. ca. 9. Vide 8. Co. 134. Mary Shepley's case.

* Bracton lib. 2. fol. 84. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 43.

46. E. 3. 31. 18. E. 2. tit Mesne. F. N. B. 136. 2. H. 4. 7. 17. E. 3. Contra formam Collat. 1. F. N. B. 121.

(Post 233. b.)

7. E. 3. 41. tit. Mesne 18. 9. E. 2. ibid. 67. 14. E. 2. ibid. 70. 9. Co. 73. b. Doct. Husley's case.

(10. Co. 134.)

If

declares, that they shall not be subject to any forfeiture. Before this last act the king's licence only prevented the forfeiture to himself; and if there was any mesne lord, he might take advantage of the mortmain statutes notwithstanding the royal licence. See Fitzh. Nat. Br. 221. O. But the act of William seems to be expressed, so as to extend the operation of the king's licence, and to render it effectual universally, by preventing a forfeiture to other lords as well as to the king himself. Another thing deserving of notice is, that the statute is quite silent as to the writ of ad quod damnum; which anciently was thought an essential preliminary to the licence, in order that the king might know what prejudice would arise to himself or others from granting it. Fitzherbert indeed tells us, that in his time it was become a common practice to purchase licences to alien in mortmain without suing an ad quod damnum, and instead of it to add to the patent, granting the licence, special words to signify that it should be good without any writ. But he adds, that it seems dubious, whether such patents were good, if they turned out to be prejudicial and disadvantageous to the king or others. See Fitzh. N. B. 222. D. Whether since the statute of William writs of ad quod damnum previous to licences from the crown to alienate in mortmain are necessary, may deserve consideration;

lord to make a sale of the marriage of the infant, subject only to the restriction of not disparaging; and if the infant refused

If the tenant be disseised, and the disseisor in a writ of mesne forjuge the meane, this shall not bind the disseisee. And so if the mesne be disseised, and a forjudgement is had against the disseisor, this doth not bind the disseisee; for the words of the said statute are, Quando tenens sine præjudicio alterius quam medii attornare se potest capitali Domino.

But if the daughter, the sonne being in venter sa mere, be forjudged, it shall bind the son that is borne afterwards; because he had no right at the time of the forjudgment. And so if the tenant enter in religion, and his heire forejudgeth the mesne, and then the ancestor is deraigned, he shall be bound causa qua supra. If there be lord, prior mesne, and tenant, the mesne cannot be forjudged; because he alone can doe nothing to the prejudice or the ditherison of his church: and the like law is of a bishop, parson, and the like.

No forjudgement can be, but when there is but one meane betweene the lord distreyning and the tenant; because the tenant, upon the forjudgement, cannot be attendant to the lord distreyning, in respect there is a meane between them, and so the said statute provideth for in expresse termes.

Nota, the plaintife, in a writ of mesne, may chuse either proceffe at the common law, or upon the said statute of W. 2. Forjudgment is called forisjudicatio, and he that is forejudged foris judicatus. And Bracton hath this writ, rex vicecomiti, &c. et non permittas, quod A. capitalis dominus feodi illius habeat custodiam hæredis, quia in curia nostra foris judicatur de custodia, &c. Fleta calleth it abjudicationem, and thereupon commeth abjudicatus; for he saith, Poss proclamationem, &c. factam, abjudicetur medius de feodo et servitio suo (1).

16. E. 3. Judgm. 117.
(7. Co. 8. a.)

W. 2. ca. 9.

50. E. 3. 23. F. N. B. 137.
Bract. l. 4. 256. b. Brit. f. 58.
b. Flet. li. 2. ca. 43.

CHAP. 7. Sect. 143.

Homage Auncestell.

PER title de prescription en le tenancy, en le sanke le tenant, et auxy en le seignior en le sanke le seignior. Here Littleton doth not define what homage auncestell is, but putteth an example in one case. For in the 146. Section, it appeareth, that blood is not alwayes necessary on the lord's side. In this example here put, there must be a double prescription, both in the blood of the lord, and of the tenant, and therefore I think there is little or no land at all at this day, holden by homage auncestell.

And hereof it is sayd, Autant est le seignior tenus a son homage, come le homage a son seignior, forsque solcment en reverence. And herewith agreeth Bracton, Est tanta et talis connexio per homagium inter dominum et tenentem, quod tantum debet dominus tenenti, quantum tenens domino, præter solam reverentiam.

Trait a luy garranty auxy en le seignior

TENURE per homage auncestell est, lou un tenant tient sa terre de son seignior per homage, et mesme le tenant et ses auncestors, que heire il est, ont tenus mesme le terre del dit seignior et de ses auncestors, que heire le seignior est, de temps dont memorie ne court, per homage, et ont fait a eux homage. Et ceo est appel homage auncestell, per cause de continuance, que ad este, per title de prescription, en le tenancie en le sanke le tenaunt, et in the seigniorie

TENANT by homage auncestell is, where a tenant holdeth his land of his lord by homage, and the same tenant and his auncestors, whose heire he is, have holden the same land of the same lord and of his auncestors, whose heire the lord is, time out of memorie of man, by homage, and have done to them homage. And this is called homage auncestell, by reason of the continuance, which hath beene, by title of prescription, in the tenancie in the blood of the tenant, and also in the seigniorie

9. H. 3. Vouch. 277. 47. H. 3. Garr. 99. Temps E. 1. Garr. 90.
4. E. 2. Vouch. 245. 45. E. 3. 43. 11. H. 4. 50. 4. H. 6. 26.

Brit. fol. 170. a.

Bract. fol. 78. Glanv. li. 9. ca. 4. 5. 6.

sideration; for which purpose it may be material to inquire, what the practice hath been — Since writing the former part of this note, we are well informed, that writs of ad quod damnum have not been usual on granting mortmain licences since the statute of William.

(1) There is not any thing in the 12th of Charles the Second, which in the least varies the tenure in frankalmoine, it being expressly saved by the statute. See 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. f. 7. Indeed had the saving been omitted, we do not see, how any of the other provisions in the statute could have affected this tenure; and therefore it is presumed, that the saving was merely the effect of an abundant caution. The statute adds, that it shall not subject tenures in frankalmoine to any greater or other services; but what was intended to be guarded against by these latter words is not very obvious.

Continuation of the note concerning the old and new deaneries, which was left unfinished in fol. 98. b.

What we have hitherto observed, as to the manner of constituting the old and new deans, must be confined to England; those of Wales and Ireland being under different circumstances, and therefore reserved for a separate consideration.

Of

fused the marriage tendered by the lord, or married after such a tender and against the lord's content; in the former case, rie en le sanke le seignior. Et tiel service de homage auncestrel traite a luy garrantie, cestascavoir, que le seignior, que est en vie et ad receive le homage de tiel tenant, doit garranter son tenant, quant il est implede de la terre tenus de luy per homage auncestrel.

the blood of the lord. And such service of homage auncestrel draweth to it warrantie, that is to say, that the lord, which is living and hath received the homage of such tenant, ought to warrant his tenant, when he is impleaded of the land holden of him by homage auncestrel.

Hereby appeareth, what a reverend respect the law hath to ancient inheritances continued in the blood of the lord and of the tenant; for in this example put, if the continuance hath not bin in the blood of both sides, no warrantie belongeth to homage auncestrel; but if ancient continuance hath been on both sides, [m] then such homage auncestrel draweth to it warranty; so as ancient continued inheritance on both parties hath more priviledge and account in law, then inheritances lately, or within memory acquired.

Vide Britton ubi supra. 14. H. 6. 25. 18. H. 6. 2. b. Glanvil. lib. 9. c. 4. 5. and 6. 9. H. 3. Voucher 277. 47. H. 3. Voucher 270. 271. 43. E. 3. 3. 4.

(F. N. B. 134. f.)

[m] See the second part of the Institutes upon the 6th chapter of the statute of Bigamis.

(Post 384. a.)

18. H. 6. 2. b. per Newton.

If the lord grant the services of his tenant by homage auncestrel, the tenant shall not be compelled in a per quæ servitia to attorne, unlesse the conusee will grant in court to warrant the land unto him.

If the tenant vouch by force of this warrantie in law, it is a good counterplea, that the tenant (or any one of his ancestors) recessit de servitio suo & fecit servitium suum A. B. sine aliqua coactione de sua propria voluntate. 9 H. 3. vouchers 277.

Et ad receive homage de tiel tenant. [a] So as before homage received, the tenant could not absolutely bind the lord to warranty, and therefore of ancient time there lay [b] a writ de homagio capiendo, for the tenant against the lord, to compell him to receive his homage for the benefit of his warranty. Which writ you shall read in Bracton and [c] Britton, and the proccesse, and manner of triall thereupon, and the same you shall finde in 47. H. 3.

[a] 9. H. 3. Voucher 277. Temp. E. 1. Gar. 90. 45. E. 3. 23.

[b] Glanvil. lib. 9. c. 4. 5. and lib. 1. cap. 3. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 83.

[c] Britton fol. 172. 173. 47. H. 3. garrantie 59.

Sect. 144.

ET auxy tiel service per homage auncestrel traite a luy acquital. s. que le seignior doit acquiter le tenant envers tous autres seigniors paramont luy de chef-cun manner de service.

AND also such service by homage auncestrel draweth to it acquittal, s. that the lord ought to acquite the tenant against all other lords paramont of him of every manner of service.

Trait a luy acquital. Of acquital somewhat hath beene said in the chapter of Frankalmoigne.

Sect. 142. and 540. (Ante 100.)

Sect. 145.

ET il est dit, que si tiel tenant soit emplede per un præcipe quod reddat, &c. et il vouche a garrantie son seignior, que vient eins per proces, et demanda del tenant que il ad de luy lier a

AND it is said, that if such tenant be impleaded by a præcipe quod reddat, &c. and vouch to warrantie his lord, who cometh in by process, and demands of the tenant what he hath to binde

UN præcipe quod reddat. This is understood of the king's writ directed to the sherife of the county where the land lyeth, whereby the sherife is authorised to command the tenant of the land to yeeld the same to the demandant; and of these words of the writ (præcipe quod reddat) the writ is so called. Writs of

Of the four Welsh cathedrals, two are without deans; or rather the dignities of bishop and dean unite in the same person, the bishop being deemed quasi decanus, and having, it is said, both an episcopal throne and a decanal stall allotted to him in the choir. The cathedral churches of St. David's and Landaff are of this kind. St. Asaph and Bangor, the other two Welsh cathedrals, have the dignity of dean distinct from that of bishop; but the patronage of both deaneries is in the respective bishops, they being neither elective by the chapter, nor donative by the crown. See Ect. Theaur. ed. of 1742. and Will. Parochial. Anglic.

In respect to Ireland, as we are informed, before the Reformation the deaneries of the cathedral churches there were elective by the respective chapters, under a congè d'élire from the crown, in much the same manner as the old English deaneries. But since the Irish act of the 2d of Elizabeth, which takes away the election of bishops in Ireland and declares them wholly donative by the king, and hath never been repealed as the English statute of Edward the Sixth to the same effect was, the form of electing to the old deaneries hath been also discontinued, and the king appoints to them by letters patent as to bishopricks. This change, so far as regards the Irish old deaneries, not having yet had a parliamentary sanction, its legality depends on a notion, that the patronage of deaneries as well as of bishopricks was an ancient right of the crown, that the election by the chapter was a mere ceremony, and that the statute for putting an end to it in the case of the bishopricks was a provision of caution and the infant was liable to the payment of a sum equal to the value of the marriage, that is, to the profit which the lord

(Post 139. b.)
Regist. 159.

of præcipe be of foure kindes, præcipe quod reddat, præcipe quod faciat, præcipe quod permittat, et præcipe quod non permittat, &c. as appeareth by the register.

Et il vouche a garrantie. Avoucher, (in [d] Mir. cap. 5. sect. 1. and 5. Bract. li. 5. fo. 380. 381. Brit. c. 75. de Gar. Vouch. Fleta l. 6. c. 23, 24, 25, 26. &c. optime. Lamb. Expli. Verb. Advocare.

(Post 365. 389. Hob. 3. 28. Noy 131. 2. Ro. Abr. 738.)

Latin vocatio, or advocatio) is a word of art, made of the verbe voco, and is in [d] the understanding of the common law, when the tenant calleth another into the court that is bound to him to warrantie, that is, either to defend the right against the demandant, or to yeeld him other land &c. in value, and extendeth to lands or tenements of an estate of freehold or inheritance, and not to any chattel real personall or mixt, saving only in case of a wardship granted with warranty (as shall be said more at large in the chapter of warranties) for in the other cases concerning chattels, the partie, if he hath a warrantie, shall not vouche, but have his action of covenant, if he hath a deed, or if it be by parol then an action upon his case, or an action of deceit, as the case shall require. Now seeing that one Latin, French, or English word, can have this particular signification, therefore the common lawyer (that I may speake once for all) is driven, as the professors of other liberall sciences use to doe, to use significant words framed by art, which are called vocabula artis, though they be not proper to any language. He that voucheth is called the voucher

(Cro. Jam. 307.)

[e] V. Reg. Jud. for all these judicial writs.

[f] V. Vet. N. B. 179. 186. 39. E. 3. 28. 14. H. 6. 7. 17. E. 3. 41. 3. H. 4. 4. 11. H. 4. 72. 45. E. 3. 19. F. N. B. 134. 135. (Post. 393. a.)

vocans, and he that is vouched is called vouchee warrantus. [e] The proces, whereby the vouchee is called, is a summonas ad warrantizandum, whereupon if the sherife returneth that the vouchee is summoned, and he make default, then a [f] Magnum cape ad valentiam is awarded, when if he make default againe, then judgement is given against the tenant, and he over to have in value against the vouchee. If the vouchee doe appeare, and after make default, then parvum cape ad valentiam is awarded, and if he make default againe, then judgement as before. But if the sherife returne, that the vouchee hath nothing, then after writs of alias and pluries, a writ of sequatur sub suo periculo shall be awarded; and if the like returne be made, then shall the demandant have judgement against the tenant; but he shall not have judgement to recover in value, because the vouchee was never warned, and it appeareth, that he hath nothing. But in the grand cape ad valentiam, it appeareth that he hath assets, and his making default after summons is an implied confession of the warranty. And it is called a sequatur sub suo periculo; because the tenant shall lose his land and not one of necessity; and this notion, little consonant as it may appear to some of the facts we have stated in our historical account of the old English deaneries, is not only supported by practice since the reign of Elizabeth, but seems to have been judicially recognized and acted upon in the case of the Irish bishoprick already cited from Croke James and other books. See ante 96. b. in the notes. Such, we are told, is the state of the patronage of the Irish old deaneries in general; but it must be added, that the right of the crown over one or two of them, which either are or are supposed to be under peculiar circumstances, is denied by the chapters. Suits on this subject have been depending between the crown and the chapter of St. Patrick, one of the two cathedrals of the archbishoprick of Dublin; the crown claiming the deanery as a royal donative, and the chapter insisting that the dean is elective by them on a congé d'élire, not from the king, but from the archbishop of Dublin, and that it is so in the true sense of the word, and not in name only like our English deaneries of the old foundation. See in 17. E. 3. 40. a case in which the deanery of York is pleaded to be elective in this form. One amongst other grounds, on which the chapter are said to defend their title, is, that the deanery was founded by an archbishop of Dublin. See War. Irel. by Harr. vol. 1. p. 302. But it seems, that both this fact and the inference from it are denied on the part of the crown. We have also heard, that the chapter of Kildare, which is another of the Irish old deaneries, claim a right of electing their own dean in the same way. As to the Irish new deaneries, we are told that all of them are unquestionably royal donatives. The only one, about which there hath lord might have made by the sale of it; in the latter case, the heir female paid the same sum as for a refusal, but the garranty, et il monstre, comment il et ses auncesters, quel heire il est, ount tenus sa terre del vouchee et de ses auncesters de temps dont memorie ne curt; et si le seignior, que est vouche, ne avoit resceivre pas homage del tenant, ne dascun de ses auncesters, le seignior (il voit) poit disclaimer en le seigniorie, et ifint ouste le tenant de son garrantie. Mes si le seignior, que est vouche, ad receive homage de le tenant, ou de ascun de ses auncesters, donques il ne disclaimera, mes il est oblige per la ley degarranter le tenant; et donque si le tenant perd sa terre en default del vouchee, il recouvrera en value envers le vouchee de terres et tenements, que le vouchee avoit al temps de le voucher, ou unques puis.

him to warranty, and he sheweth, how he and his ancestors, whose heire he is, have holden their land of the vouchee and of his ancestors time out of minde of man; and if the lord, which is vouched, hath not received homage of the tenant, nor of any of his ancestors, the lord (if he will) may disclaim in the seigniorie, and so ouste the tenant of his warranty. But if the lord, who is vouched, hath received homage of the tenant, or of any of his ancestors, then he shall not disclaim, but he is bound by the law to warrant the tenant; and then if the tenant loseth his land in default of the vouchee, he shall recover in value against the vouchee of the lands and tenements, which the vouchee had at the time of the voucher, or any time after.

land without any recompence in value, unlesse he upon that writ can bring in the vouchee to warrant the land unto him: and if, at the sequatur sub suo periculo, the tenant and the vouchee make default, and the demandant hath judgment against the tenant, and after brings a scire facias to have execution, the tenant may have a warrantia carte, and if he were impleaded by a stranger, he may vouche againe; but if he had judgment to recover in value, he shall never have a warrantia carte, or vouche againe, for by this judgement to recover in value he hath benefit of the warrantie. And you shall finde in bookes a recovery with a single voucher, and that is when there is but one voucher; and with a double voucher, and that is when the vouchee voucheth over, and so a treble voucher, &c. Againe, you shall finde there also a foraine voucher, and that is, when the tenant, being impleaded within a particular jurisdiction, (as in London or the like) voucheth one to warranty, and prayes that he may be summoned in some other county out of the jurisdiction of that court. This is called a foraine voucher, but might more aptly be called a voucher of a forainer de forinsecis vocatis ad warrantizandum. Note, that by the civill law every man is bound to warrant the thing that he selleth or conveyeth, albeit there be no expresse warrantie; but the common law bindeth him not, unlesse there be a warranty, either in deed or in law for caveat emptor, as shall be said more at large in the chapter of warrantie in the third booke.

Glouc. ca. 12. F. N. B. 6. c.

(Cro. Jam. 4. 1. Ro. Abr. 96. F. N. B. 94.)

Brit. 174.

Le seignior (fil voet) poet disclaymer en le seignorie. Disclaimer, disclamare, is compounded of de and clamo, and signifieth utterly to renounce the seignorie.

[a] Note there be divers kinds of disclaymer, that is to say, a disclaimer in the tenancie; a disclaimer in the blood; and a disclaimer in the seignorie; whereof Littleton here putteth his case.

[b] But if the tenant in frankalmoigne bring a writ of mesne against his lord, the lord cannot disclayme in the seignorie; because he cannot hold of any man in frankalmoigne, but of his donor and his heires. And so note a diversity between a tenure in frankalmoigne, whereby divine service is maintained, and homage ancestrell which respecteth temporall service. But if the lord will not disclayme in the seignory, in the case of homage ancestrell, then albeit he hath not received homage, he shall warrant the land.

Si le seignior que est vouche ad receive homage, &c. il ne disclaymera.

Therefore it is good for the tenant, to the intent to oust the lord of his disclaymer, in his voucher to allege, that the lord hath taken homage of him; and if he alledge it not, and the lord offer to disclayme, the tenant may counterplead the same by acceptance of homage. And the reason that the lord cannot disclayme in that case is; for that he hath accepted his humble and reverent acknowledgement, to become his man of life and member and terrene honour, and to be faithfull and loyall to him, for the tenements which he holds of him, and against the acceptance hereof the lord cannot disclayme.

Que il avoit al temps del voucher. Hereby it appeareth, that the tenant shall not be driven to recover in value only those lands, which the lord had from that ancestor, which created the seignory; for that were in manner impossible, for that the seignory must be created before time of memory, and the first creation of the seignory did not create the warranty, but the continuance of both sides time out of minde created the warranty. And that is the reason that a writ of annuity shall not [c] lye against the heire by prescription; because it cannot be knowne, whether he hath any land by descent from the said ancestor, that first granted the annuity. And here is a point worthy of observation, that in the case of homage ancestrell, (which is a special warranty in law) by the authority of Littleton, the lands generally, that the lord hath at the time of the voucher, shall be liable to execution in value, whether he hath them by descent or purchase. But in the case of an expresse warrantie the heire shall be charged but only for such lands as he hath by descent from the same ancestor, which created the warranty.

Note, what privilege this ancient warranty (created by operation of law) hath more than the expresse warranty. And so you may observe, that in this case firmior est potentior est operatio legis quam dispositio hominis.

Al temps de voucher ou unques puis. This is evident and worthy of diligent observation, viz. that the lands of the vouchee shall be liable to the warranty, that the vouchee hath at the time of the voucher; for that the voucher is in lieu of an action, and in a warrantia carte, the land, which the defendant hath at the time of the writ brought, shall be lyable to the warranty.

Upon a judgment in debt, the plantife [d] shall not have execution, but only of that land which the defendant had at the time of the judgment; for that the action was brought in respect of the person, and not in respect of the land. But if an action of debt be brought against hath been any contest, is the deanery of Dromore, the collation of which was some years ago claimed by the bishop under letters patent from king James the First; but the patent not being warranted by the king's letter, on which it passed, the crown prevailed.

We shall close this note about the old and new deaneries of cathedral and collegiate churches, with some general observations on the various modes of constituting them. From the inquiries we have made into the subject, it seems to us, that the right to appoint such deans and the mode must generally depend almost wholly upon charters usage or acts of parliament, and very little on arguments drawn from the nature of the office or from foundership, however common those topicks may be. The former indeed can scarce have influence on any case, which may arise as to the appointment of deaneries. What is there in the nature of the office, which is inconsistent with its being elective presentative donative or collative, or which renders either of those modes so incongruous as to be contrary to any principle of our law? What is there in the office, which imports, that the patronage should necessarily be in the crown, though it usually is? The facts we have stated shew, that in England some deaneries are nominally elective under the royal congè d'élire, and the rest really presentative or donative by the crown; and that the only two deaneries of the Welsh cathedrals are collative by bishops. Nay, if it can be proved, that election under a congè

their male was charged the double value, which was called a forfeiture of marriage. — The gardian in chivalry was

no

[a] 47. H. 3. Disclaim. 35. 16. H. 7. 1. 20. E. 2. tit. Nuper Ob. 14. F. N. B. 197. & 151. b. 45. E. 3. 19. 21. E. 3. 50. E. 3. 23. &c. (Doctr. Plac. 131.)

[b] 14. H. 3. tit. Disclaim. B. 33.

47. H. 3. Disclaim. 35. Vide Bract. l. 4. 252. b. 16. H. 7. 1. Brit. 173. 174. (Doctr. Plac. 131.)

[c] 46. E. 3. 5. b. 10. E. 4. 10. b. 19. H. 6. 74. 37. H. 6. 19. 5. H. 7. F. N. B. 152.

28. E. 1. Vouch. 291. 9. Ed. 2. War. Car. 20. 19. Fines 127.

29. E. 3. 3. 18. E. 3. 1. 2. H. 4. 10. 23. E. 3. Recov. in valu. 3. 16. E. 3. Vouch. 85. 19. Ed. 3. Vouch. 24. 22. E. 3. Fitz. Nat. Bre. 134. f.

[d] 2. H. 4. 14. 42. E. 3. 1. 42. All. 17. 9. E. 2. tit. Execut. 249. (1. Ro. Abr. 898. 891. 892.)

Lib. 2.

Cap. 7. Of Homage Aunceftrel. Sect. 146.

[c] 22. Aff. pl. 32.
(Finch. L. 353.)

32. E. 1. Voucher 292.
(2. Ro. Abr. 771.)

Vide Britton fol. 58. 110.

(Doctr. Plac. 133.)

[f] 45. E. 3. 7. 22. E. 4. 35.

Vide Sect. 143.

14. H. 6. 12. 2. H. 6. 9. 38.
Aff. p. 22. 37. Aff. 6. Co. 3.
73. See Deane and Chapter de Norwich case.

against the heire, and he alieneth, hanging the writ, yet shall the land, which he had at the time of the original purchase, be charged; for that the action was brought against the heire in respect of the land. [e] If a man be nonfuit, the land only, which he had at the time of the amerciament assessed, shall be charged, and not that which he had at the finding of the pledges. For the amerciament is not in respect of the land, but of his want of prosecution, which was a default in his person. But the issues of a juror shall be levied upon the feoffee, albeit they were not lost before the feoffment; because he was returned and sworn in respect of the land. Note the diversity.

If a man give lands in fee with warranty, and binde certaine lands specially to warranty, the the perfon of the feoffor is hereby bound, and not the land, unlesse he hath it at the time of the voucher.

Sect. 146.

SON feignorie est extinct, et le tenant tiendra de feignior prochain paramount, &c. Here two things are to be observed: first that by this disclaymer in the feignory, the feignory is [f] extinct in the land.

Secondly, that after the disclaymer the tenant shall hold of the next lord paramount, by the same services, as the mesne so disclayming held before.

Si un abbe ou prior soit vouch, &c. uncore, &c. uncore il ne poet disclaymer, &c.

Here it appeareth of the lords side, that continuance of blood is not necessary; but yet there must be privy of succession time out of minde in one politique body, for if that body be once dissolved, though a new be founded of the same name, and all the possessions be granted to them, yet the homage ancestrell is gone. But if a prior and convent be translated, concurrentibus hiis que in jure requiruntur, to an abbot and convent, or to deane and chapter, there the homage ancestrell remaines; for though the name be changed, yet the body was never dissolved, but in effect it remaineth still. If the body politique were founded within time of memory, there cannot be homage ancestrell, for that continuance faileth, and though ancestor is ever properly applied to a naturall body, yet it is called homage ancestrell when the tenure is of a body politique, for that it is ancestrell of the tenants side. But on the other side, an abbot or prior cannot hold by homage ancestrell; for as appeareth by Littleton's examples, it must ever be ancestrell of the tenants side. And where Littleton putteth his case of an abbot or prior, the same law is of a bishop, deane, archdeacon, prebend, parson, vicar, and the like. Another thing here to be observed is, that an abbot or prior cannot disclaime, &c. for regularly it is true, quod meliorem conditionem ecclesie sue facere potest praelatus, deteriozem nequaquam, and againe, ecclesie sue conditionem meliorem facere possunt congè d'elire from a bishop, instead of one from the king, is an established mode of appointing to any deanery in Ireland, we do not see any legal objection to it merely as a mode, however singular it may be. The argument from foundership will also for the most part be found inconclusive. Several of the English old deaneries were certainly endowed by bishops, either with their own private possessions, or by dismembering those of their respective sees; and yet all are elective under a congè d'elire, not from bishops, but from the king. 1. Stillingf. Ecclef. Caf. 341. But should a case ever happen, in which there is neither charter usage nor statute prescribing a rule, then some general principle of law must be appealed to for a direction; and in such a case, which is barely a possible one, foundership seems to be the true and indeed only criterion of the title to the patronage and right of constituting.

It is feared, the reader will think, that we have dilated too much on the modes of constituting deans of cathedral and collegiate churches; but as there is little of digested matter upon the subject in other books, this may excuse us for detaining him so long here.

For the different instruments and other forms made use of in appointing deans both of old and new chapters in England, see 2. Ought. Ord.—Note, that on promotion to a bishoprick, deaneries, as well as other spiritual preferment, becoming void after consecration, and in consequence of it, the king being by prerogative intitled to the next turn, therefore in this particular instance the English deaneries of the old foundation are not even nominally elective.

not accountable for the profits made of the infant's land during the wardship, but received them for his own private emolument, possunt sine consensu, deteriorum non possunt sine consensu. And therefore an abbot, prior, bishop, deane, archdeacon, prebend, parson, vicar, or any other sole corporation, that is seised in auter droit, cannot disclaime; because, as Littleton saith, they alone cannot devesit any fee which is vested in their house or church. For the wisdom of the law would never trust one sole person, with the disposition of the inheritance of his house or church. But an abbot, and prior had their covent, the bishop his chapter, the parson and vicar their patron and ordinarie, and the like of other sole corporations, without whose assent they could passe away no inheritance.

Ils ne poient anienter ou devesiter chose de fee, &c. These generall words have certaine exceptions; for in a quo warranto, at the suit of the king, against a bishop, abbot, or prior, for franchises and liberties, if the bishop, abbot, or prior, disclaime in them, this should binde their successors. If an abbot or prior had acknowledged the action in a writ of annuitie, this should have bound the successor; because he cannot falsifie it in an higher action, and there must be an end of suits. Expediit reipublica, ut sit finis litium. But if the abbot levie a fine, or acknowledge the action in a præcipe quod reddat, the successor shall be bound pro tempore, but he may have a writ of right, and recover the land.

Per force de homage auncestrell, &c. Here (&c.) implyeth or by any other warrantie [i], as by the reason, which our authour here yeeldeth, appeareth.

Chose de fee. [k] For if in an action of debt upon an obligation against an abbot, the abbot acknowledgeth the action, and dieth, the successor shall not avoid execution, though the obligation was made without the assent of the covent; for he cannot falsifie the recoverie in an higher action, et res judicata pro veritate accipitur, and this is but a chattell. And so it is of a statute or recognisance, acknowledged by an abbot or prior.

40. E. 3. 27. 5. E. 4. 1. 6. E. 3. 51, 52. (7. Co. 10. 11.)

10. E. 4. 2. 2. 21. H. 7. 20.

6. E. 3. 51, 52.

38. E. 3. 33. 16. E. 3. tit. Abbot 13. 19. E. 3. tit. Abbot. 12. 7. R. 2. Abbot. 7. 12. H. 4. 11. 20. H. 6. fo. ultimo. 4. H. 7. 2. 2. H. 4. 6. 34. Aff. p. 7. 14. E. 4. tit. Abbot. B. 8. E. 3. 28. 12. H. 8. 7.

[i] 12. H. 8. 7.

[k] 7. R. tit. Abbot. 7. See the bookes next above. (6. Co. 8. 2.)

Sect. 147.

ITEM si home, que tient son terre per homage auncestrel, alien a un auter en fee, le alienee ferra homage a son seignior: mes il ne tient de son seignior per homage auncestrel; pur ceo que le tenancie ne fuit continue en le sanke de les auncesters lalienee; ne lalienee navera jammes garrantie de la terre de son seignior; pur ceo que le continuance del tenancie en le tenant et a son sanke per lalienation est discontinued. Et sic vide, que si le tenant, que tient la terre per homage auncestrell de son seig-

ALSO if a man, which holds his land by homage auncestrel, alien to another in fee, the alienee shall doe homage to his lord: but he holdeth not of his lord by homage auncestrell; because the tenancie was not continued in the blood of the auncestors of the alienee; neither shal the alienee have warrantie of the land of his lord; because the continuance of the tenancie in the tenant and to his blood by the alienation is discontinued. And so see, that if the tenant, which holdeth his land of his lord

ALIEN a un auter en fee. For hereby the privy of the estate is altered, and the continuance of it in the blood of the tenant is dissolved. But if the tenant maketh a lease for life, or a gift in taile, this is a continuance of the privy and estate in the tenant in respect of the reversion, that remaineth in him; for the fee, whereof Littleton heere speaketh, was not out of him. But if the tenant maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and dieth, his heire performeth the condition, and re-enteth, the homage auncestrell is destroyed in respect of the interruption of the continuance of the privy and estate; and this case was put and not denied in the argument [m] of the case betwene the Lord Cromwell and Andrewes, Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz. which I myselfe heard and observed. As if cestuy que use had made a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entred for the condition broken, he should have detained the land against

(Post 202. 2.)

[m] 1. Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz.

5. H. 7.

ment, subject only to the bare maintenance of the infant. At least it doth not appear in any work we have seen, what means were provided for enforcing the guardian out of the profits of the estate in wardship to support and educate the infant in a style and manner suitable to his rank and fortune.—Lastly, guardianship in chivalry, being deemed more an interest for the profit of the guardian than a trust for the benefit of the ward, was saleable and transferrable, like the ordinary subjects of property, to the best bidder, and if not disposed of was transmissible to the lord's personal representatives. Thus the custody of the infant's person, as well as the care of his estate, might be devolved upon the most perfect stranger to the infant, one prompted by every pecuniary motive to abuse the delicate and important trust of education, without any ties of blood or regard to counteract the temptations of interest, or any sufficient authority to restrain him from yielding to their influence. This explication of the nature of wardship in chivalry, general as it is, may well excite a strong idea of the horrid evils necessarily incident to it. On the first reflection it is natural to wonder, how it happened, that a species of guardianship, so constituted on principles repugnant to the voice of nature, so founded in inhumanity, so retarding to the progress of science and literature amongst persons of high birth and with great hereditary estates, and so seemingly replete with mischiefs both public and private, should, in a country distinguished for continual struggles to preserve the valuable and to annihilate the oppressive parts of its constitution, be patiently endured for several centuries after the Conquest, and even remain unreformed by any effectual checks to soften its rigour, till it was wholly taken away at the Restoration. Perhaps however on further consideration of the subject, the wonder may in some measure cease; for the facility of evading guardianship in chivalry, which could

(F. N. B. 135.)

gainst the feoffees for ever; for that the estate and privitie was for the time taken out of the feoffees, and thereby dissolved for ever. But if the land were recovered against the tenant upon a faint title, and the tenant recover the same againe in an action of higher nature, there the homage auncestell remains; for the right was a sufficient meane for the continuance. So it is, if he had reverfed it in a writ of error. [n] If the alienee be impleaded in Littleton's case, and vouche the alienor that held by homage auncestell, albeit he commeth in by fiction of law to many purposes in privitie of his former estate, yet to this purpose he cannot come in as tenant by homage auncestell; because of the discontinuance of the estate and privitie, and, as Littleton saith, the tenancie was not continued in the blood. [o] And Britton saith, et come ascun nequedent soit vouche per homage, et le seignior tende de averrer, que le tenement, dount il vouche, fuit translate hors del sanke del primer purchaser, per seoffment ou per ascun auter translation, en tel case soit le tenant charger de voucher son seoffor ou ses beires.

[n] 5. E. 3. per Cantrel.

[o] Britton fol. 170. a.

38. E. 3. 20. 11. H. 4. 22. 17.
E. 3. 4. 59. 73. 74. 26. E. 3.
56. 18. E. 3. 56. 16. E. 3.
Voucher 87. 18. 1. 3. 50. 44.
E. 3. Litt. fol. 169.

Comment que il reprist estate del alienee en fee, &c. For the cause aforesaid, in respect of the interruption of the privitie and continuance of the estate. And herewith agreeth our bookes in cases of warranties in deed, or warranties in law. See more of this in the chapter of warranties.

Sect. 148.

NE ferra homage al

fitz. If A. holdeth of B. as of the manor of Dale, whereof B. is seised in taile; B. discontinueth the estate taile, and taketh backe an estate in fee simple; A. doth homage to B. B. dieth seised, the issue in taile entreteth; A. shall doe homage againe to the heire in taile of B. because he is remitted to the estate taile, and the state in fee, that his father had, in respect whereof the homage is done, is vanished, and the heire in taile is in of a new estate, in respect whereof he ought to doe a new homage. [p] But regularly it is true,

(Post 343. 2.)

[p] Britton 175. 176.

ITEM il est dit, que si home tient sa terre de son seignior per homage et fealty, et il ad fait homage et fealty a son seignior, et le seignior ad issue fits, et devy, et le seigniorie descendist a le fits, en ceo cas le tenant, que fist homage al pere, ne ferra homage al fits; pur ceo que, quant un tenant ad fait un foits homage a son seignior, il est excuse pur terme de sa vie de faire homage a ascun auter heire del seignior. Mes uncore il ferra fealtie al fits et heire le seignior, comment que il fist fealty a son pere.

ALSO it is said, that if a man holds his land of his lord by homage and fealty, and he hath done homage and fealty to his lord, and the lord hath issue a son and dies, and the seigniorie descendeth to the sonne, in this case the tenant, which did homage to the father, shall not doe homage to the sonne; because that, when a tenant hath once done homage to the lord, he is excused for terme of his life to doe homage to any other heire of the lord. But yet he shall doe fealtie to the sonne and heire of the lord, although he did fealtie to his father.

which Littleton saith, that when a tenant hath done once homage to his lord, he is excused for terme of his life to make homage to any other heires of the lord. But he shall doe fealtie to his sonne, albeit he hath done fealtie to the father.

Sect.

only be on a descent, may account both for its being so long submitted to, and for its producing consequences less extensively pernicious than seem almost necessarily incident to it. Various modes of preventing the descent were practised. One was entailing the heir in the ancestor's life time; and another was enfeoffing strangers on condition to pay a sum, far exceeding the value of the land, at a time so fixed as to correspond with the heir's coming of age, who might then enter for breach of the condition. See stat. Marlebridge 52. Hen. c. 6. and 2. Inst. 109. When these modes were declared to be fraudulent, and therefore checked by the statute of Marlebridge, a third, still more fit to attain the same end, succeeded; for uses and trusts being invented, and guardianship in chivalry being only of legal estates, it became the fashion to make feoffments to uses, as well for preventing wardship, as for avoiding reliefs and forfeitures, and indirectly exercising the power of devising; and thus the heir taking only the use of the land on a descent instead of becoming legal tenant, he of course escaped being in wardship. This evasion continued in practice till 4. Hen. 7. when the legislature thought proper once more to interfere in favour of the lord, and made the heir of cestuy que use equally liable to wardship in chivalry with the heir of one dying seised of the legal estate. See 4. Hen. 17. c. 17. Ante 84. b. and 2. Inst. 110. Indeed for some time after 4. Hen. 7. there seem to have been no other means of preventing wardship in chivalry, than the ancestor's making a lease for life with remainder to his heir apparent in fee. But this protection of wardship in chivalry was soon followed by a great diminution of its profits; for, in the succeeding reign, the statutes of wills gave the power of devising so as to deprive the lord of the wardship in two thirds of the land holden by knight's service; in which contracted state this odious species of guardianship was suffered to languish, till it was entirely abolished.

Sect. 149.

ITEM si le seignior, apres le homage a luy fait per son tenant, grant le service de son tenant per le fait a un auter en fee, et le tenant attorna, &c. dunque le tenant ne ferra my compel de faire homage. Mes il ferra fealty, coment que il fist fealtie devant a le grauntor; car fealtie est incident a chescun attournement del tenant, quant le seignorie est graunt. Mes si ascun home soit seisie dun mannor, et un auter home tient de luy la terre come del mannor avantdit per homage, le quel tenant ad fait homage a son seignior que est seisie del mannor, si apres un estrange port Præcipe quod reddat envers le seignior del mannor, et recovers le mannor envers luy, et fust execution, en cest case le tenant ferra auterfoits homage a celui, que recovers le mannor, coment que il fist homage devant; pur ceo que lestat celui, que receivoit le primer homage, est defeated per le recovery, et ne girra en le bouche le tenant a fauser ou defeat le recovery, que fuit envers son seignior. Et sic vide diversitatem en

ALSO if the lord, after the homage done unto him by the tenant, grant the service of his tenant by deed to another in fee, and the tenant atturneth, &c. the tenant shall not be compelled to doe homage. But he shall doe fealty, altho' he did fealty before to the grantor; for fealty is incident to every atturnment of the tenant, when the seignory is granted. But if any man be seised of a mannor, and another holds of him the land, as of the mannor aforesaid by homage, which tenant hath done homage to his lord who is seised of the mannor, if afterwards a stranger bringeth a Præcipe quod reddat against the lord of the mannor, and recovereth the mannor against him, and sues execution, in this case the tenant shall againe doe homage to him, which recovered the mannor, although he had done homage before; because the estate of him, which received the first homage, is defeated by the recovery, and it shall not lye in the power of the tenant to falsifie or defeat the recovery, which was against his lord. And so see a

ITEM si le seignior, &c. grant le service de son tenant per fait, &c.

Note a diversitie, 13. E. 1. tit. Per quæ servitia, when the lord a- 22. & tit. Gar. 91. (8. Co. 102.)

lieneth the seignorie, and when the tenant alieneth the tenancy; for when the tenant hath done homage, and the seignory is transferred to another, either by the act of the party as alienation, or by act in law as descent, yet the tenant shall not iterate homage, as he shall do fealty; but when the tenant doth homage, and alieneth the tenancy, there is a new tenant, which never did homage, and therefore he ought to doe homage to the lord, albeit his alienor had done it before. And it is to be observed, that none shall doe homage, * S. E. 4 27. b. but the tenant of the land to the lords of whom it is holden; and therefore if homage be due to be done by the tenant, if the tenant alieneth the land to another, the alienor cannot be compelled to doe homage.

Attorne, &c.

Here by (&c.) is to be understood, that albeit he pay his rent, performe his annual services, and doe fealty, which abolished by the famous statute of Charles the Second, together with the other oppressive appendages of military tenures. 2. Inst. 110, 111. The curious reader may see further on this subject in Smith's Commonwealth, Engl. ed. b. 3. cap. 5. Staundf. Prærog. 4. Inst. 183. Ley on Wards and Liv. & ante passim in the chapter of Knight's service and the books there cited, the titles Garde and Guardian in the Abridgments Crompt. Jurisd. of Co. 112. a. to 125. and Mad. Excheq. fol. ed. 222. — (12) Many of our books, especially some of modern date, are very indiscriminate, when they mention guardianship by nature. Sometimes the father is styled guardian by nature of his heir apparent for the time in general terms, such as at first appear to intimate, that by our law no other ancestor, except the father, not even the mother, is intitled to the guardianship in that right; and accordingly lord chief baron Comyns makes this inference from the language of the books, though as we conceive too hastily. See Com. Dig. Guardian C. 3. Co. 38. a. 6. Co. 22. b. there cited. At other times we are told, that, the father being dead, the mother may have a writ of trespass quare consanguineum et hæredem cepit; which imports, that she may also be guardian by nature of her heir apparent. But then the silence in one book as to other ancestors, and the expresse exclusion of the grandfather in another book without the necessary explanation, tend to an opinion, that all ancestors, except the father and mother, are really excluded.

Ant:

which is a part of homage, yet homage he shall not doe.

Mes si ascun home soit seise dun man-nor, &c. Here it appeareth, that the case of the recovery of the feignorie differeth from the alienation of the lord, which is his owne act, or the descent of the feignory to the heire, which is an act in law. And the reason of this diversitie is, for that by the recovery the state of him, that received the homage, is defeated; for it shall not lie in the mouth of the tenant to falsifie, or to frustrate or defeat the recovery, which was against his lord of the manor or feignory, for that the tenant had nothing therein, and every man by law ought to meddle in such cases with that, which belongeth unto him, which is worthy of observation concerning falsifying of recoveries.

Note that to falsifie, in legall understanding, is to prove false, that is, to avoyd, or as Littleton here saith, to defeat, in Latine falsare, seu falsificare, [i] falsum facere.

But since Littleton wrote, it is recited by act of parliament, that whereas divers, &c. have suffered recoveries against them of divers manors, &c. for the performance of their wills, for the suretie of their wives joyntures, &c. and the recoverors had no remedy to compell the freeholders and tenants, &c. to attourne unto them, nor could by order of law attaine to the rents, services, &c. that act doth give the recoverors power to distreyn and avow; whereupon many have thought, that this doth impugne Littleton's case of the recovery. But distinguendum est. Littleton intendeth his case, either upon a recovery by title, (for he saith, that the state of the tenant in the recovery is defeated) or without any consent upon pretence of title, which is all one; for the tenant cannot falsifie, and the lord should avow as one that came in of a former title. And Littleton hath good authority in law to warrant [a] his opinion, and the statute of 7. H. 8. extendeth to common recoveries had by consent and agreement, as appeareth by the act it selfe, which then was, and yet is a common assurance and conveyance, whereof the law taketh notice, and whereupon (as appeareth by the act) an use might be limited. So as it is apparant, that such recoverors came in meere under the state of the lord, &c. and had no remedy (as the statute saith) to compell the freeholders and tenants to attourne, and without attournement could neither distreyn nor avow. Wherefore this statute gave recoverors remedy to distreyn, and a forme to avow and justifie, which they had not before, as it appeareth by the Doctor and Student, who lived at that time. The bodie of the act is, That such recoverors may distreyn and make avowrie, &c. as those persons, against whom the said recovery is, should have done, &c. if the same recovery had not been had, and have like remedie, &c.

If a man had made a lease for yeares to begin at Michaelmas, reserving a rent; and before Michaelmas he had suffered a common recovery, the recoveror should distreyn for that rent, which the lessor before the recovery could not. But if the recovery had not beene had, then he might have distreyned, and so it is within the statute. But if a fine had beene levied of a manor, and before attournment the conusee had suffered a common recovery, the recoveror should not distreyn, &c. because the conusee, against whom the recovery was had, could not.

But this act extended onely to distresses and avowries for rents, services, and customes, and gave also a forme of a quare impedit. But upon this statute it was holden, that the recoveror could not have an action of debt against the lessee for yeares, nor an action of waite against tenant for life or yeares; and therefore remedy was provided in these cases, by the statute of 21. H. 8.

Sect. 150.

VIENT a son seignior. The tenant ought to seeke the lord to doe him homage, if the lord be within England; for this service is personall as well of the lord's side, as of the tenant's side, for law requi-

ITEM si un tenant, que doit per son tenure faire a son seignior homage, vient a son seignior, et dit a

ALSO if a tenant, which ought by his tenure to doe his lord homage, cometh to his lord, and saith unto him, Sir, I

Vide Sect. 558. 33. E. 3. Avowrie 255. 37. H. 6. 33. 39. H. 6. 34. 7. H. 7. 11. Doct. & Stud. fol. 45. 28. H. 8. Dyer 41.

[i] 7. H. 8. cap. 4.

[a] 39. H. 6. 22. 37. H. 6. 38. 35. H. 6. 22.

28. H. 8. Dyer 41.

(Post 215. a. 321. a.)

21. H. 8. cap. 25.

Ante 34. b. 6. Co. 22. b. However in another place we find, that no such opinion was intended to be conveyed; and we are informed, that the grandfather and other ancestors may be guardians by nature of their heirs apparent, as well as the father and mother; tho' being liable to be postponed to others, where the father is not, both they and the mother have a title distinguishable from his in point of inferiority. 3. Co. 38. a. Further some modern books do not confine guardianship by nature to heirs apparent, but denominate the father and mother the natural guardians of all their children; and sometimes even the parents of illegitimate issue seem to have been treated as their natural guardians. 1. Ves. 158. 2. Atk. 15. 70. 9. Mod. 117. Sometimes also the guardianship of female children under 16, as given to the father and mother by the statute of Philip and Mary, is said to be jure natura. 4. & 5. Phil. & Mar. c. 8. and 3. Co. 38. b. This various and indefinite manner of expression concerning guardianship by nature must create the most distressing confusion in the minds of students; and for their benefit therefore, we shall attempt to rescue the subject from a part of the obscurity in which it is involved, by offering some few distinctions calculated to reconcile the seeming contrariety of the books, so far as they are capable of being made consistent with each other.

luy, sir, jeo doy a vous faire homage pur les tenements que jeo teigne de vous, et jeo sue icy prist a vous faire homage pur mesmes les tenements; pur que jeo vous pry, que ore ceo voiles recevoir de moy.

ought to doe homage unto you for the tenements which I hold of you, and I am here ready to doe homage to you for the same tenements; and therefore I pray you, that you would now receive the same from me.

reth order and decency. And therefore Bracton saith, et sciendum, quod ille, qui homagium suum facere debet, obtentu reverentiae quam debet domino suo, adire debet dominum suum ubicunque inventus fuerit in regno, vel alibi si possit commode adiri, et non tenetur dominus querere suum tenentem, et sic debet homagium ei facere. And the same law it is for fealty; and the diversity between these services and the rent is, because that these are Bracton fol. 80. a. And Britton fol. 171. agreeth herewith.

personall, and the rent may be payd and received by other, and upon the land is sufficient.

Sect. 151.

ET si le seignior adonques refusa de ceo recevoir, donque apres tiel refusall le seignior ne poet distreiner le tenant pur le homage adere, devant que le seignior requiroit le tenant de faire a luy homage, et le tenant a ceo faire refusa.

AND if the lord shall then refuse to receive this, then after such refusall the lord cannot distreine the tenant for the homage behinde, before the lord requireth the tenant to doe homage unto him, and the tenant refuse to doe it.

AND the reason hereof is; for that when the tenant hath done his endeavour and duty to offer his corporal service, and the lord refuseth the same, or doe not accept his service upon his tender thereof, (which is a refusall in law) then the law, in respect of the lord's fault, requireth, that before the lord can distreine for it, that he doth require the tenant to doe that service, and if he either refuse to doe it, or doe it not when he is required, it is a refusall in law.

Vide Bracton fol. 83. Britton 171. 172. 21. E. 3. 24. 21. Aff. p. 73. 20. E. 3. Avowry 223. 45. E. 3. 9. 7. E. 4. 4. 21. E. 4. 17. 20. H. 6. 31. (9. Co. 79.)

Sect. 152.

ITEM home poit tener sa terre per homage auncestrel, et per escuage, ou per auter service de chivaler, auxibien sicome il poyt tener sa terre per homage auncestrel en socage.

ALSO a man may hold his land by homage auncestrell, and by escuage, or by other knights service, as well as he may hold his land by homage auncestrell in socage.

SO as homage auncestrel may belong as well to a tenure by escuage or knights service, as to a tenure in socage, or to a tenure in nature of socage; whereof there hath somewhat been spoken in the chapter of Socage (1).

CHAP.

(1) The statute of 12. Cha. 2. having taken away all tenure by homage in general words, without any exception either express or implied of homage auncestrel, the latter, though not particularly named, yet as being one species of homage was virtually included. See 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. s. 1. 2. But most probably it had expired before the statute; for lord Coke doubted, whether even in his time there was any relique of this tenure. Ante 100. b. An early extinction of homage auncestrel is easily accounted for, by recollecting, that a double prescription, one in the lord's blood and another in the tenant's, or a privy of succession time out of mind, which was much the same in effect, was essential to homage auncestrel; and consequently, that if one alienation either of the feigniory or the tenancy had been made within time of memory, the homage auncestrel was destroyed, and it became simple homage. In a former note we had occasion to make a general observation on the reason for discharging tenures from homage, and on the advantages arising from it, whilst it remained, both to the lord and tenant, particularly to the latter, where the homage was auncestrel. Ante 67. b. note 1. We have only to add here, that though amongst us homage of every kind, so far it relates to tenures, is now wholly at an end, yet so intimately blended are the various branches of one system, and in subjects of jurisprudence so dependant is a knowledge of the present state of things on a reference to the ancient one, that the remnant of tenures in this country can never be duly comprehended, without the aid of a general outline, as well of homage and its effects, as of the other perished parts of the same venerable structure.

other. 1. It seems, that not only the father, but also the mother and every other ancestor, may be guardians by nature, tho' with

H h h

CHAP. 8. Sect. 153.

Grand Serjeantie.

TENURE per grand serjeanty.

Serjeanty commeth of the French word (serjeant) i. satelles, and [a] serjeantia idem est quod servitium. And it is called magna serjeantia, or serjanteria,* or magnum servitium, great service, as well in respect of the excellency and greatnesse of the person to whom it is to be done, (for it is to be done to the king only) as of the honour of the service it selfe; and so Littleton him selfe in this section saith, that it is called magna serjeantia, or magnum servitium, because it is greater and more worthy than knights service, for this is revera servitium regale, and not militare onely. Fleta saith, magna autem serjeantia dici poterit, cum quis ad eundum cum rege in exercitu, cum equo cooperto, vel hujusmodi, ad patriæ tuitionem fuerit feoffatus.

De nostre seignior le roy. This tenure hath seven speciall properties. 1. To be holden of the king only. 2. It must be done, when the tenant is able, in proper person. 3. This service is certaine and particular. 4. The reliefe due in respect of this tenure differeth from knights service. 5. It is to be done within the realme (1). 6. It is subject to neither aïd pur faire fitz chivaler, or file marier. And 7. it payeth no escuage.

Come de porter le banner de nostre seignior le roy ou de amesner son host. This great service to the king may (as it appeareth hereby) concerne the warres and matters mi-

TENURE per graund serjeantie est,

lou un home tient ses terres ou tenements de nostre seignior le roy per tiels services, que il doit en son proper person faire al roy; come de porter le banner de nostre seignior le roy, ou sa lance, ou de amesner son hoste, ou destre son marshal, ou de porter son espee devant luy a son coronement, ou destre son sewer a son coronement, ou son carver, ou son butler, ou destre un de ses chamberlains de le rescieit de son eschequer, ou de faire auters tiels services, &c. Et la cause, que tiel service est appell grand serjeanty est, pur ceo que il est plus grand et plus digne service, que est le service en le tenure descuage. Car celui, que tyent per escuage nest pas limite per sa tenure, de faire ascun plus especial service que ascun auter, que tyent per escuage, doit faire. Mes celui, que

TENURE by grand serjeanty is, where a man holds his lands or tenements of our sovereign lord the king by such services as he ought to do in his proper person to the king, as to carry the banner of the king, or his lance, or to lead his army, or to be his marshall, or to carry his sword before him at his coronation, or to be his sewer at his coronation, or his carver, or his butler, or to be one of his chamberlains of the receipt of his exchequer, or to do other like services, &c. And the cause, why this service is called grand serjeanty, is, for that it is a greater and more worthy service, than the service in the tenure of escuage. For he, which holdeth by escuage, is not limited by his tenure to do any more especiall service, then any other, which holdeth by escuage, ought to doe. But he, which holdeth by grand

[a] Glanvil lib. 9. ca. 4.
[b] Bracton lib. 2. 35. & 84. 85. lib. 1. cap. 10.
• Fleta lib. 1. cap. 10. lib. 2. cap. 9. in fine.
[c] Britton cap. 66. fol. 164. 165. Ockam cap. quod non absolvitur.

45. E. 3. 25. per Finchden. Fleta, ubi supra.

Bracton lib. 2. 84. 11. H. 4. 34.
10. H. 4. Avowry 167. F. N. B.
83. 10. H. 6. Ant. Demesne 11.

27. H. 3. tit. Gard. Stat. de Ward. & Relev. 28. E. 1.

(1) Generally the service of grand-serjeanty was of such a kind as necessarily to be within the realm; but some services, which amount to grand-serjeanty, might be due out of the realm as well as within, and both Littleton and Coke give us instances of such reservations. See sect. 153. b. here, and post 106. b.

with considerable differences, such as denote the superiority of the father's claim. The father hath the first title to guardianship by nature, the mother the second; and as to other ancestors, if the same infant happens to be heir apparent to two, as to both a paternal and a maternal grandfather, perhaps in this equality of rights priority of possession of the infant's person may decide the preference, according to the general rule in aquali jure melior est conditio possidentis. But this difference merely respects the order of succession to guardianship by nature. But whilst the tenure by knight's service continued, there was another difference, which more strongly marked the superiority of this guardianship when claimed by the father; for he was intitled to the custody of the infant's person, even against the lord in chivalry; but the mother and other ancestors were not allowed to have the same preference.

tient per grand serjeanty, doit faire un especial service al roy, que il, que tient per escuage, ne doit faire.

serjeanty, ought to doe some speciall service to the king, which he, that holds by escuage, ought not to doe.

litary; for some grand serjeanties are to be done in the time of war for the safety of the realme; and some in time of peace, for the honour of the realme.

Ou destre son marshall. * If the king giveth

(4. Inst. 123.)
* Fleta lib. 1. cap. 10. 11. Eliz.
Dier 285. Camd. Brit. 286. 287.
* Ockam cap. Officium constabularii.

lands to a man, to hold of him to be his marshall of his host, or to be marshall of England, or to be constable of England, or to be high steward of England, or the like, these are grand serjeanties; and these and such like grand serjeanties are of great and high jurisdiction, and some of them concerne matters military in time of war, and some services of honour in time of peace. And this is to be observed, that though there were divers lords marshalls of England before the reign of [2] R. 2. yet king R. 2. created Thomas Mowbrey duke of Norfolk, and first earle marshall of England per nomen comitis marischalli Angliæ.

[2] In Rot. Patent. de anno 20. R. 2.

Ou de porter son espee, &c. ou destre son sewer a son coronement, &c. These and such like grand serjeanties at the king's coronation are services of honour in time of peace.

Destre un de ses chamberlaines, &c. ou de faire autiels services.

It is also a tenure by grand serjeanty to hold [a] by any office to be done in person concerning the receipt of the king's treasure; Quia thesaurus regis respicit regem et regnum; and census regis est anima reip. So it is firmamentum belli, et ornamentum pacis.

(4. Inst. 106.)
[a] Vid. 51. H. 3. statut. 5. 10.
E. 3. c. 11. 14. E. 3. c. 14. 26.
H. 8. ca. 2. 34. & 35. H. 8. c. 16. 11. E. 4. fo. 1. Pl. Com. 207. 208.

Miles camerarii dicuntur, quia pro camerariis ministrant; and concerning their office, this is the effect as Ockam [b] saith, officium camerariorum in recepta consistit in tribus, scilicet, claves arcarii, &c. bajulant, pecuniam numeratam ponderant, et per centenas libras in forulas mittunt. But discontinuance in effect hath worne out their office. And yet they continue their name, and keepe the keyes of the treasure where the records doe lye.

[b] Ockam cap. Quid sit Scaccarium. Gervasius Tilburienfis in Libro Nigro sub custodia camerariorum.

And another saith, camerarius dicitur à camera, quia camera est locus, in quem thesaurus reconditur, vel conclave in quo pecunia reservatur. So as camerarius in legall signification est custos regii census: and Willielmus de Bellocampo comes Warwici held officium camerarii in scaccario.

Rot. claus. 6. E. 1. memb. 1.

Or by any office concerning the administration of justice, quia justiciā firmatur solium.

Ex lectura Marrowe.

It appeareth by an ancient record, [c] that Varianus de sancto Petro tenuit de domino rege in capite medietatem serjantie pacis per servicium inveniendi decem servientes pacis ad custodiendam pacem in Cestria.

[c] Ex inquisitione post mortem Variani de sancto Petro, 4. E. 2. Cestr. Vm. 7. Ass. 12. 7. E. 3. 57.

See Ockam of the first institution and ancient order of the exchequer, Dier 4. Eliz. 213. the usherie of the exchequer holden by grand serjeanty.

Tiels services, &c. Here by (&c.) is to be understood other like services not expressed, as partly appeareth by that which hath beene said, viz. to be steward of England, constable of England, chamberlayne of England, and other honourable services, whereof more shall be said in this chapter.

Ou un especial service al roy. That is to say, that this great service be specially set downe; for it may consist of divers branches, as to goe with the king in his warre in the foreward, and to returne in the reareward; and also to pay rent, &c. but yet it must be certaine and particular.

Sect. 154.

ITEM si tenant, que tient per escuage moruist, son heire esteant de pleine age, sil tenoit per un fee de chivaler, le heire ne paiera forsque C. s. pur reliefe, come est ordaine per le statute de Magna Charta, cap. 2. Mes si celuy, que tient de roy per grand

ALSO if a tenant, which holds by escuage, dyeth, his heire being of full age, if he holdeth by one knight's fee, the heire shall pay but a C. s. for reliefe, as is ordained by the statute of Magna Charta, c. 2. But if he, which holdeth of the king by grand serjeantie

(Ante 83. 2.)

It is by this last diversity, that lord Coke in another place reconciles the books, which appear to exclude the mother and all other ancestors except the father from guardianship by nature; it being observed by him, that they only apply to cases, in which the right to the infant's person was in contest with the lord in chivalry. 3. Co. 38. b. Rutcliffe's case. 2. According to the strict language of our law, only an heir apparent can be the subject of guardianship by nature; which restriction is so true, that it hath even been doubted, whether such a guardianship can be of a daughter, whose heirship, though denominated apparent, yet, being liable to be superseded by the birth of a son, is in effect rather of the presumptive kind. 3. Co. 38. b. Ante 84. a. Therefore when guardianship by nature is extended to children in general, or to any besides such as are heirs apparent, it is not conformable to the legal sense of the term amongst us, but must be understood to have reference to some rule independent of the common law. Thus when in chancery the father and mother are styled the natural guardians of all their children born in marriage, or of any of their illegitimate issue, we should suppose those, who express themselves so generally, to refer to that sort of guardianship, which the order and course of nature, as far as we are able to collect it by the light of reason, seems to point out, and to mean, that it is a good rule to regulate the guardianship by, where positive law is silent, and it is in the discretion of the lord chancellor to settle the guardianship. So too when lord Coke says, that the custody of a female child under sixteen, to which the father, and after his death the mother, is intitled by the provisions of the statute of the 4. and 5. Philip and Mary, is jure natura, we should understand him to mean, not that such a custody was a guardianship by nature recognized by our common law, but merely that it was a statutory guardianship adopted by the legislature in conformity to the dictates of nature, serjeantie morust, son heire es-teant de plein age, le heire paie-ra al roy pur reliefe le value de les terres ou tenements per an (ouster les charges et reprises) queux il tient del roy per grand serjeantie (1). Et est ascavoir, que serjeantia en Latin idem est quod servitium, et sic magna serjeantia idem est quod magnum servitium.

dieth, his heire being of full age, the heire shall pay to the king for reliefe one yeares value of the lands or tenements which he holdeth of the king by grand serjeantie over and besides all charges and reprises. And it is to be understood, that serjeantia in Latine is the same quod servitium, and so magna serjeantia is the same quod magnum servitium.

11. H. 4. 72. b.

Paiera al roy pur reliefe le value de ses terres, &c. And herewith agreeth

11. H. 4. 72. b.

Serjeantia idem est quod servitium. Hereby it appeareth that the explanation of ancient words and the true sence of them are requisite, and to be understood per verba notiora.

Sect. 155.

TENANTS *per es-cuage doient faire
leur service hors del roialme.*

F. N. B. 83. E.
(4. Co. 88.)

For he, that holdeth by cornage or castle-guard, holdeth by knights service, and is to doe his service within the realme; but he holdeth not by escuage, and therefore Littleton materially saide tennant per escuage, and not tenant by knights service (2).

ITEM *ceux, que teignent per es-cuage, doient faire
leur service hors de roialme; mes ceux, que teignent per graund serjeantie, pur le greinder part doient faire leur services
deins le roialme.*

ALSO they, which hold by escuage, ought to doe their service out of the realme; but they,
which hold by grand serjeantie, for the most part ought to do their services within the realme.

Pur le greinder part. For to bear the king's banner, or his lance, or to lead his host, and to be his marshall, &c. may be as well without the realme; and therefore Littleton saide (for the greatest part.)

Sect. 156.

4. H. 5. cap. 7. 22. E. 4. cap. 8.
Camden in Britannia.

EN les marches de Scotland. Marches is either a Saxon word, and sig-nifieth limites, bourdours, or an English word, viz.
Markes. Nota, for that it lyeth neere to Scotland, it is sayd in the marches of Scotland, and yet the land

ITEM *il est dit, que en les marches de Scotland ascuns teignent de roy per cornage, cesta-scavoir, pur ventier un cornu, per garner homes
de pais, quant ils oyent que le Scottes ou auters enemies veignent ou voient enter en Engle-terre; quel service est*

ALSO it is said, that in the marches of Scotland some hold of the king by cornage, that is to say, to winde a horne, to give men of the countrie warning, when they heare that the Scots or other enemies are come or will enter into England; which service is grand serjeanty.
graund

(1) See as to reliefs ante 69. b. 76. a. 83. a.

(2) Here lord Coke shews, that escuage, though usually an incident to knight's service, is not always so; that is, that knight's service may be without escuage. On the other hand, escuage, if uncertain, which we must understand it to be when mentioned generally, cannot be without knight's service. To express this in fewer words, escuage is inseparable from knight's service, but knight's service is not so from escuage. This tends to confirm what we observed in a former note, that escuage ought to be considered rather as an incident to the tenure by knight's service, than as a distinct tenure. However, it at the same time seems to point out the reason for calling some tenures by knight's service tenures by escuage; because such a denomination distinguished that species of knight's service, to which escuage was incident, from cornage, castle-guard, and such other tenures by knight's service as were not liable to escuage. We think this a more satisfactory way of justifying Littleton against the censure of Mr. Madox for using the term of tenure by escuage, than resorting to the distinction suggested by Sir Martin Wright; who, as we have formerly hinted, attempts to prove, that though generally escuage was an incident to tenure by knight's service, yet sometimes it was a tenure of itself. Ante 73. note 2. But still we must confess the justice of Mr. Madox's animadversion, so far as it applies to the calling homage and fealty tenures; because the former being incident to every species of knight's service, except where the tenant was exempt from it by profession, and the latter being an incident to all tenures except tenures at will or at sufferance, it could answer no purpose of discrimination thus to denominate any tenure.

nature, and upon principles of general reasoning. But though what our law calls guardianship by nature is thus confined to
the

graund serjeanty. Mes si ascun tenant tient d'ascun autre seignior, que de roy, per tiel service de cornage, ceo nest pas grand serjeantie, mes est service de chivaler, et trait a luy garde et mariage; car nul poit tener per grand serjeanty si non de roy tanselement.

But if any tenant hold of any other, lord then of the king, by such service of cornage, this is not grand serjeanty, but it is knights service, and it draweth to it ward and marriage(2); for none may hold by grand serjeanty, but of the king only.

whereof Littleton here speaketh, lieth in England (1).

Per cornage.

Cornagium is derived (as cornuare also is) à cornu, and is as much (as before hath beene noted(3) as the service of the horne. It is also called in old bookes bornageld.

Note a tenure by 27. H. tit. Gard. 148. 3. E. 3. cornage of a common person is 66. in fine. 16. E. 3. Avoine 90. F. N. B. 83.

knights service, of the king it is grand serjeanty; so as the royall dignity of the person of the lord maketh the difference of the tenure in this case (4). And I find that there were cornicularii amongst the Romans, et dicti fuerunt cornicularii quia cornu faciebant excubias militares, and magna serjeantia is appropriated only to this tenure.

Sect. 157.

ITEM home poit veier anno 11.

H. 4. que Cokayne, adonque chiefe baron deschequer, vient en le common banke, portant ovesques luy la copie dun recorde in hæc verba. Talis tenet tantam terram de domino rege per serjeantiam, ad inveniendum unum hominem ad guerram ubicunque infra quatuor maria, &c. Et il demaunda, sil fuit graund serjeanty ou petite serjeantie. Et Hanke adonques disoit, que il fuit graunde serjeantie; pur ceo que il ad service a faire per corps dun home, et sil ne purra trover nul home a faire le service pur luy, il mesme doit faire. Quod alii

ALSO a man may see in anno 11. H.

4. that Cokayne, then chiefe baron of the exchequer, came into the common place, and brought with him the copy of a record in these words. Talis tenet tantam terram de domino rege per serjeantiam ad inveniendum unum hominem ad guerram ubicunque infra quatuor maria, &c. And he demanded, if this were grand serjeanty, or petite serjeanty. And Hanke then said, that it was grand serjeanty; because he had a service to do by the bodie of a man, and if he cannot find a man to doe the service for him, he himselfe ought to doe it(5). Quod alii alii justiciarum concess-

ET sil ne purra trover nul home a faire le service pur luy, &c. Hereby it appeares, that tenant by grand serjeantie may in some cases make a deputy, and therefore the diversitie is, that, where the grand serjeanty is to be done to the royall person of the king, or to execute one of those high and great offices, there his tenant cannot make a deputie without the king's licence, and therefore Littleton hath said before that such services are to be done in proper person. But he, that holdeth to serve him in his warre within the realme or by cornage, may make a deputie.

(*) Johannes de Archier qui tenet de domino rege in capite per serjeantiam archerie, &c. in comitatu Glouc. hæres in custodia.

Infra quatuor maria. That is within the kingdome of England, and the dominions of the same kingdome (6).

Now it is good to be seene what persons that hold by grand serjeantie may doe and performe that honorable service in person, and who ought not to be received thereunto

11. H. 4. 72. 24. E. 3. 32. V. d. Hill. 8. E. 1. Middle inter Pleita de Banco. Sir John Moyle's case.

11. H. 4. 72.

(*) Claus. 18. H. 3. M. 5.

Rot. Escheator. 41. H. 2. nu. 23. Stephen Haringdon's case.

nure. In fact it was not the practice to call any tenure a tenure either by fealty or by homage, except in the case of homage auncetrel; and though Littleton begins his account of tenures with homage and fealty, yet we may very well suppose his previous explanation of them and escuage, or at least of the former, to have been made merely as an introduction to the description of knight's service. We should not be thus prolix in observing on a controversy, which is more verbal than any thing else, if it was not for the sake of convincing the reader, that however properly Mr. Madox guards against confounding the incidents of a tenure with the tenure itself, still it would be an injustice both to Littleton and Coke to impute any such misconception to them; and therefore, that so far as Mr. Madox's animadversion hath this tendency, respectable as his writings are, it ought to be rejected. Indeed it is highly improbable, that grave and learned authors, like Littleton and Coke, to both of whom, particularly the former, the whole doctrine of tenures was so much more familiar than it can possibly be in modern times, when the practice in respect to tenures is confined to a very narrow circle and we are mere theorists as to the greater part of the subject, should adopt an error so fundamental.

(1) See further as to the marches of Scotland 4. Inst. 281. and Nicholf. Leges March.—(2) This passage seems rather to imply, that wardship and marriage were not incident to tenure by cornage, when it was of the king and therefore called grand serjeanty. But this was not the meaning of Littleton, as appears from a subsequent section, in which he is more explicit and expressly tells us, that all tenures by grand serjeanty were liable both to ward and marriage. See sect. 158.—(3) See ante 69. b.

—(4) See

the heir apparent, yet we must not from thence conclude, that parents have not a right to the custody of their other children;

Lib. 2. Cap. 8. Of Grand Serjeantie. Sect. 158.

[a] 1. R. 2. Rot. Claus. m. 45.

unto, but ought to make a sufficient deputy. At the coronation of [a] king R. 2. John Wilshire citizen of London exhibited his petition to the high steward of England in his court, that where the said John held certain lands in Hayden in the county of Essex of the king by grand serjeantie, viz. to hold a towell when the king should wash his hands before dinner the day of his coronation, &c. and prayed that he might be accepted to doe this office of grand serjeantie, the judgement followeth. Et quia apparet per record' de Scaccario domini regis in curia monstrat' quod predicta tenementa tenentur de domino rege per servitium predictum, ideo dictus Johannes admittitur ad servitium suum hujusmodi faciendum per Edmundum comitem Cantabrigie deputatum suum, et sic id. n. com. in jure ipsius Johannes manutergium tenuit, quando dominus rex lavabat manus suas dicto die coronationis sue ante prandium.

By which record it appeareth, that the said John Wilshire, being of his quality and having not any dignity, could not doe and performe this high and honorable service to the royall person of the king, but did make an honorable deputy, who performed it in his right; which is worthy of observation.

Vid. 1. R. 2. Memb. 45.

At the same coronation William Furnevall exhibited his petition in the same court, that where he held the manor of Farnham, in the county of Buck, with the hamlet of Cere in the same county, by the service to find to the king at his coronation a glove for his right hand, and to support the king's right hand the same day, while he held in his hand the verge royall, the judgement followeth. Qua quidem petitione debite intellecta, et facta publica proclamatione, si quis clameo ipsius Willielmi in ea parte contradicere vellet, nemineque ei contrariante, consideratum fuit, quod idem Willielmus, assumpto per eam primitus ordine militari, ad servitium predictum admitteretur faciendum; et postmodo (videlicet) die Martis proximo ante coronationem predictam dominus rex ipsum Willielmum apud Kenington honorifice prefecit in militem, et sic idem Willielmus servitium suum predictum dicto die coronationis juxta, considerationem predictam, perfecit et in omnibus adimplevit. By which it appeareth, that a knight is of that dignity, that he may performe this high and honorable service in his owne person; and although this William Furnevall was descended of an honorable family, yet before he was created knight he could not performe it.

And Sir John de Argentine Chivalier performed the service of grand serjanty, to be the king's cup-bearer at the same coronation.

[m] Vid. 1. R. 2. m. 45.

[m] Anne, which was the wife of Sir John Hastings earle of Pembroke, who held the manor of Ashley in Norfolk of the king by grand serjantie, viz. to performe the office of the napery at his coronation, was adjudged to make a deputy; because a woman cannot doe it in person, and thereupon she deputed Sir Thomas Blount knight, who performed the same in her right. John, sonne and heire of John Hastings earle of Pembroke, exhibited in the same court his petition, shewing that by his tenure he was to carrie the great spurs of gold before the king at his coronation, &c. The judgement is, Audita et intellecta billa predicta, pro eo quod dictus Johannes est infra etatem, et in custodia domini regis, quanquam sufficienter ostenditur per recorda, et evidencias, quod ipse servitium predictum facere deberet, consideratum extitit, quod esset ad voluntatem regis, quis dictum servitium ista vice in jure ipsius Johannis faceret; et super hoc dominus rex assignavit Edmundum comitem Marchie ad deferendum dicto die coronationis predicta calcaria in jure prefati heredis, salvo jure alterius cujuscunque. Et sic idem comes Marchie calcaria illa predicto die coronationis coram ipso domino rege deferbat. By which it appeareth, that the heire, before he hath accomplished his age of one and twenty yeares, cannot performe his great and honourable service, but during the minoritie the king shall appoint one to performe the service.

Vid. 1. R. 2. m. 45.

Sect. 158.

46. E. 3. 15. a. per Finchden.

HERE Littleton saith, that he, that holds by grand serjeantie, doth hold by knights ET nota, que AND note, that all, which hold of nont de roy per grand the king by grand ser-

—(4) See post 108. b. where for a like reason a service, which if it was to be done to a subject, would be seage, is distinguished by the denomination of petit serjeanty.—(5) Particular respect is due to the opinions of ancient times on the subject of tenures; but in the instance of the case here mentioned to be put to the judges, their resolution seems so inconsistent with the nature of grand serjeanty, as described both by Littleton and Coke, that it may be allowable to doubt the propriety of the opinion. Littleton states the doing the service to the king in proper person as a thing essential to grand serjeanty; and lord Coke enumerates it amongst the special properties of this tenure, with the exception only of performing the service by deputy when the tenant himself is incapable. Ante 106. b. But if this be so, how can a service, expressly reserved to be done by any person, fall within the description? It is observable indeed, that Littleton recites the opinion of the judges without the least approbation; and that even they themselves, when pressed to declare, what the relief ought to be, whether 5 l. as for a tenure by escuage, or a year's value of the lands as for a grand serjeanty, avoided answering; from which hesitation it seems, as if they were not disposed to adhere to their first opinion in all its consequences. On the other hand, if the tenure in question was not grand serjeanty, but mere knight's service, it tends to prove, that though the personal service, in lieu of which escuage was payable, was in general due only on foreign expeditions, yet by special reservation it might be due within the realm. However, reserving service in war within the realm was a thing so unusual in practice, that the service, for which escuage was a commutation, was called servitium forinsecum; a denomination, which according to lord Hale, is founded on the circumstance of its being due out of the realm. See ante 69. b. note 3. In a former note on escuage, we adopted lord Hale's opinion as to the reason of calling knight's service servitium forinsecum; because we thought his conjecture a probable one. Ante 74. a. note 1. But for our law gives the custody of them to their parents till the age of fourteen by the guardianship of nurture, which species of guardians-serjeanty, teignent de roy per service de chevalrie; et le roy per ceo avera garde, mariage, et reliefe; mes le roy n'averá de eux escuage, s'ils ne teignent de luy per escuage.

serjanty, hold of the king by knights service; and the king for this shall have ward, marriage and reliefe; but he shall not have of them escuage, unless they hold of him by escuage.

service, which is so said of the effects. And therefore Littleton doth add, that the king shall have ward marriage and reliefe, which are the effects of knights service, &c.

Sometimes in ancient records, servitium militare is called servitium hauberticum, or servitium brigandinum, or servitium loricatedum. And a haubert or brigandine signifieth a coat of mail (1).

CHAP. 9. Sect. 159.

Petit Serjeantie.

TENURE per petit serjeanty est, lou home tient sa terre de nostre seignior le Roy de render al Roy annualment un arke, ou un espee, ou un dagger, ou un cuttel, ou un launce, ou un paire de gants de ferre, ou un paire de spoures d'ore, ou un jete, ou divers fetes, ou de render autres tiels petit choses touchants le guerre.

TENURE by petite serjeanty is, where a man holds his land of our soveraigne lord the king, to yeeld to him yearly a bow, or a sword, or a dagger, or a knife, or a lance, or a paire of gloves of maile, or a paire of gilt spurs, or an arrow, or divers arrowes, or to yeeld such other small things belonging to warre

DE nostre seignior le roy. And so Littleton concludeth this chapter, that a man cannot hold by grand serjeanty or petite serjeanty, but of the king, and of the king as of his person, and not of any honour or manor. (2) And it is to be observed, that regularly a tenure of the king as of his person is a tenure in capite, so called ex capite propter excellentiam: because the head is the principall part of the body, and he that holdeth of any common person as of his person, he in truth holdeth in capite; but againe ex capite it is only in common understanding applyed to the king, and that feigniorie of a common person is called a tenure in grosse, that is, by itselfe, and not linked or tied to any manor, &c.

Britton fol. 164. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 35. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 9. Ockam cap. Quid be avibus oblati.

(6. Co. 6.)

And this tenure of the king in capite, is said [a] to be a tenure of the king as of his crowne, that is, as he is king. [b] And therefore if one holdeth land of a common person in grosse as of his person, and not of any manor, &c. and this feigniorie escheateth to the king (yea though it be by attainder of treason) he holdeth of the person of the king, and not in capite; because the originall tenure was not created by the king. And therefore it is directly said, that a tenure of the king in capite, is when the land is not holden of the king as of any honor, castle, or manor, &c. but when the land is holden of the king as of his crowne (3).

[a] Bracton lib. 2. fol. 87. (2. Ro. Abr. 504.) [b] 3. E. 3. Tenures B. 94. 10. H. 8. 41. 28. H. 8. Livery B. 57. 29. H. 8. ibid. 58. 6. H. 8. Dier. 58. Vide Lestrate de 1. E. 6. cap. 4. F. N. B. 5. K. (2. Ro. Abr. 72, 73.)

Note that an honor is the most noble feigniorie of all others, and originally created by the king, but may afterward be granted to others. See for the creation of an honor, 13 H. 8. cap. 5. 33 H. 8. cap. 7. 38. 37 H. 8. cap. 18. (4)

And it is to be observed, that a man may hold of the king in capite, or of his crowne, as well in socage, as by knight's service (5).

De render al roy annualment un arke, ou un espee, &c. As grand serjeanty must be done by the body of a man, so petite serjeanty hath nothing to do with the body of a man, but to render some things touching warre; as a bow, a sword, a dagger, a knife, a launce, a pair of gantlets of iron, or shafts and such like.

Magna Chart. cap. 27.

It is to be observed that grand serjeanty or knights service is not in law called liberum servitium, as socage is, but per feodum unius militis, &c. But to finde the king so many ships for Regist. fo. 2. F. N. B. fo. 1.

But the reader should recollect, that others explain the denomination in a different way. Ante 74. b.—(6) On many occasions it may be of importance thoroughly to understand the phrase of infra, or as according to classical style it ought to be, infra quatuor maria; for there are various subjects, as well of the law of nations, as of municipal law, which are necessarily connected with it. Of the former kind are the sea dominion claimed by our king and its incidental rights; especially the right of salutation by striking of the flag and lowering the top-sail to our ships of war; a ceremony, which, however it may be construed by foreigners as a mere compliment, is considered by ourselves as a recognition of sovereignty. Of the latter sort are the doctrine concerning effoins de ultra mare, and all those cases, which turn upon the allegation of being beyond sea; as questions of legitimacy, of outlawry, and on the statutes of limitation particularly may. But notwithstanding the necessity of knowing, for such a variety of purposes, what is the sense of the term of being within the four seas, we do not find the subject sufficiently enlarged upon, either by lord Coke, or indeed scarce any other writers deserving of being called original; except Mr. Selden, who is very copious upon it; and Sir Philip Medows, who, though not so favourable to our claim of sea dominion, nor so generally known as the former, is well intitled to notice. See Seld. Mar. Claus. lib. 2. per tot. but more particularly in cap. 1. & 24. and Medows's Observat. concerning the Dominion, &c. of the Seas, in a small tract, which was published in 1689. In this scarcity of information on the subject, it may be acceptable to the reader to be assisted in his enquiries by a short but pointed view of the subject; for which purpose we shall first mention the origin of the phrase of the four seas, and explain its most general and extended sense.

The continuation of this note will be found after the note at the end of the notes to 108. b.

(1) The tenure by grand serjeanty still continues, though it is so regulated by the 12. of Cha. 2. as to be made in effect free and common socage, except so far as regards the merely honorary part of grand serjeanty; for the first part of the statute, which destroys the incidents to tenures by knight's service, of which grand serjeanty was the highest species, is expressed with a generality sufficient to reach grand serjeanty; but then a proviso follows, by which the honorary services of this tenure are expressly saved. It is observable, that the proviso for this purpose is penned with an inaccuracy, which leads to a very mistaken idea of the incidents to grand serjeanty. The honorary services are preserved with a cautious exception of several burthenome properties, such as marriage wardship and voyages royal; to which are added escuage and the aids pur faire fitz chevalier et fille marier, though these latter were certainly quite foreign to grand serjeanty. See ante 105. b. From this undistinguishing mode

of

guardianship, though it differs from that by nature not only in name but also in duration and some other particulars, as will appear

Bract. li. 2. fo. 35.

9. H. 3. Gard. 145.

for his passage is called liberum servitium; and therefore it is said, per liberum servitium ad inveniendum nobis quinque naves ad transitum nostrum ad mandatum nostrum. And therefore clearly such a tenure is neither grand serjeanty, nor knights service; because nothing is to be done by the body of any man, nor in that case touching war, but ships to be found. And this is the reason, that Littleton yeeldeth of the examples he doth here put, because that such a tenant by his tenure ought not to go, nor to do any thing in his person, touching war. And here-with agreeth Bracton, ex parvis serjeantiis, quæ non respiciunt regem nec patriæ defensionem, nullum competere debet maritagium nec custodiam, &c.

If a man holdeth land of the king, to finde an horse of such a price and a saddle and a bridle by forty dayes, or any other time, when the king goeth with his army against Wales, this is petite serjeanty, and no grand serjeanty for the cause aforesaid.

Sect. 160.

TIEL service nest
forsque focage, &c.

But as it hath beene said, the dignity of the person of the king giveth the name of petite serjeanty, which in case of a common person should be called plain focage ab effectu: for it shall have such effects or incidents as belong to focage, and neither ward nor marriage, &c. for they belong to knights service.

9. H. 3. Gard. 145.

Mog. Chart. ca. 28.
Vide Stat. de Wardis & Relevis
28 E. 1.

Of this tenure the great charter in the person of the king faith thus. Nos non habebimus custodiam heredis, &c. occasione alicujus parvæ serjeantie, quam tenet de nobis per servitium reddendo nobis cultellos, sagittas, &c.

ET tiel service ne
est forsque focage en effect; pur ceo que tiel tenant per son tenure ne doit
aler, ne sayre ascun chose, en son proper person, touchant le guerre, mes de render & payer annual-ment certaine choses
al roy, sicome home
doit payer un rent.

AND such service is but focage in effect; because that such tenant by his tenure ought not to goe, nor doe any thing, in his proper person, touching the warre, but to render and pay yearly certaine things to the king, as a man ought to pay a rent.

Sect. 161.

OF this sufficient hath beene sayd before, saying that parva
serjeantia is only appropriate to this tenure (1).

Vide Sect. 1.

ET nota, que home ne poyt tener per grand serjeantie, ne per petit serjeanty, sinon de roy,
&c.

AND note, that a man cannot hold by grand serjeanty, nor by petite serjeanty, but of the king,
&c.

CHAP. 10. Sect. 162.

Tenure en Burgage.

Bracton lib. 3. Traet. 2. Britton fol. 164. Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18.
10. Co. 123, 124. The Mayor of Lynn's Case. 40. All.
p. 27. 43. E. 3. 32. 21. E. 4.
53. & 54. 21. H. 7. 15. 2. E.
3. cap. 3.

[6] Bracton lib. 3. fo. 124.
Fleta lib. 1. cap. 47.

BURGAGE, in Latine
burgagium, is derived of this word burgus, which is vicus, pagus, or villa, a towne (2); and it is called a burgh (3), because it sendeth burgesses to parliament.

Of burghs some be incorporate, and some not; and some be walled, and some not. [6] It

TENURE en burgage est, lou an-tient burgh est, de que le roy est seignior, &

TENURE in burgage is, where an ancient burrough is, of which the king is lord,

of expression, and from the confusion and redundancy so conspicuous in most parts of the statute, we are inclined to infer, that those, who attribute the framing of it to lord chief justice Hale, found themselves on a loose report, very injurious to the memory of that shining ornament of his profession. See Gilb. Eq. Rep. 176.—(1) In a former note we mentioned Mr. Madox's disapprobation of calling any tenures of the king by way of distinction tenures ut de persona. We shall here explain his reasons for rejecting the phrase more fully. The phrase seems unnecessary; for that of ut de corona fully answers the same purpose of distinction. It also seems injudicious, and to tend to an erroneous idea of tenures; because it supposes, that some tenures are not of the person, whereas in truth all are, and none can hold feudally of an inanimate thing, or otherwise than of a man's person. Mad. Baron. Ang. 167. This is the substance of Mr. Madox's objections to the phrase; and we still think, that in strict propriety of speech, his animadversion on those, who use it, is justifiable. However in justice to lord Coke it should be remembered, that he was not the inventor of the phrase; Mr. Madox himself tracing its origin to the latter end of the reign of Henry the Eighth.—(2) Mr. Madox is not less adverse to thus distinguishing tenure in capite from tenure ut de honore, than to the distinction of ut de persona; nor are his reasons less convincing. Tenore in capite, in its genuine sense, signifies a tenure of another sine medio, that is, immediately and without the interposition of any mesne or intermediate lord; and therefore when an honor or other feignior came into the hands of the crown by escheat or otherwise, its tenants were as much tenants in chief to the king, as those who were so by original grant from the crown. In proof of this Mr. Madox selects from ancient records a great variety of instances between the 8th of Richard I. and the 20th of Henry VI. in which tenures ut de honore are expressly styled tenures in capite; and as Mr. Madox adds no instances of a later time than Henry the Eighth and queen Elizabeth, in which the words in capite are omitted, it may be conjectured, that the error complained of by Mr. Madox originated soon after the time of Henry the Sixth. Mad. Baron. Angl. 181. The design of excluding tenures ut de honore from the description of tenures in capite was to distinguish those estates, which were held of the king by a tenure originally created by the king, from those held of him by a tenure commencing by the subinfeudation of a subject; between which there were many differences in point of incident very essential both to the lord and tenant. Mad. Baron. Angl. 12. But it should have been recollected, that the distinction aimed at was already marked, with equal sufficiency and more correctness, by denominating tenures of the first sort tenures ut de corona, and those of the second tenures ut de honore. The influence of this mistaken notion of tenancy in capite is very evident, as well throughout the statute of Charles the Second for taking away the oppressive fruits of knight's service and tenure in capite, as in those grants from the crown, which in the tenendum are expressed to be ut de honore et non in capite. See Mad. Excheq. fol. ed. 432. But great as this error about tenure in capite may be, lord Coke is excusable for conforming in his language to it; because before his time it had been adopted by the legislature. See 37. H. 8. c. 20. f. 2. 3. 4. 1. E. 6. c. 4. f. 1. 2. & 3. and Mad. Baron. Angl. 233.

[6] For the remainder of the notes to 108. a see fol. 110. a.

(1) The tenure of petit serjeanty is not named in the 12. of Cha. 2. but the statute is not without its operations on this tenure.

appear by the next note, is founded on a like conformity to the order of nature. It being thus explained, who are intitled to ceux, que ont tenements deins le burgh, teignent del roy leur tenements, que chescun tenant per son tenement doit payer al roy un certain rent per an, &c. Et tiel tenure nest forsque tenure en socage.

and they, that have tenements within the burrough, hold of the king their tenements; and every tenant for his tenement ought to pay to the king a certaine rent by yeare, &c. And such tenure is but tenure in socage.

was in former times taken for those companies of ten families, which were one anothers pledge; and therefore a pledge in the Saxon tongue a borhoe, whereof some take it that a burgh came, whereof also commeth headborough or borrowhead, capitalis plegius, a chiefe pledge, viz. the chiefe man of the borhoe, whom Bracton called frithburgus; and hereof also commeth burgbote, which, as Fleta saith, signifieth quietanciam reparationis murorum civitatis aut burgi.

Every city is a burgh, but every burgh is not a city; whereof more shall be said hereafter. And the termination of this word burgagium, (as before hath beene noted) signifieth the service whereby the burgh is holden. And of this word (burgh) two ancient and noble families take their names, viz. de Burgo, and de Burgo caro, Burchier.

De que le roy est seignior. But it may be holden of another, as by that, which F. N. B. 64. d. immediately followeth, appeareth.

Sect. 163.

ET mesme le manner est, lou un autre seignior espectral ou temporall est seignior de tiel burgh, et les tenants de tenements en tiel burgh teignent de leur seignior a payer, chescun de eux, un annuel rent.

AND the same manner is, where another lord spirituall or temporall is lord of such a burrough, and the tenants of the tenements in such a burrough hold of their lord to pay, each of them yearly, an annual rent.

THIS is evident, and needeth no explanation. Only this by the way is to be observed, that bishops, being lords of parliament, have not been called lords spirituall &c. so lately, as some have imagined. 16. R. 2. ca. 5. 1. H. 4. ca. 2.

Sect. 164.

ET est appel tenure en burgage; pur ceo que les tenements deins le burgh sont tenus del seignior del burgh per certaine rent, &c. Et est ascarvoire, que les antient villes, appel

AND it is called tenure in burgage; for that the tenements within the burrough be holden of the lord of the burrough by certaine rent, &c. And it is to wit, that the ancient townes, called burroughes, be

PER certaine rent, &c. By (&c.) here is implied fealty, or other service, as to repaire the house of the lord, &c.

Les ancient villes appel burghes.

So as a burgh is an ancient towne, holden of the king or any other lord, which sendeth burgesses to the parliament.

And it is to be observed, that Burgh and Burie have all one signification; as Canterburie, Burie Saint Edmond, Sudburie, Salisbury, Baeburie, Hoyesburie, Malmesburie, Sbastesburie, Toukef-

It being necessarily a tenure in capite, though in effect only so by socage, livery and primer seisin were of course incident to it on a descent; and these are expressly taken away by the statute from every species of tenure in capite, as well socage in capite as knights service in capite. See ante 77. a. But we apprehend, that in other respects petit seignior is the same as it was before; that it continues in denomination, and still is a dignified branch of the tenure by socage, from which it only differs in name on account of its reference to war.—(1) For the difference between town and borough, see post 115. b.—(2) For the etymology of borough, besides Spelman, Du Fresnoie, and the other glossarists, see Whitt. on Parliam. 497. Brad. on Bor. 1. and Mad. Firm. Burg. 2.—(3) Mr. Madox cautions his readers against this derivation of borough. Mad. Firm. Burg. 2. His reason, we presume, was, that borough was a word far more ancient than the practice of sending burgesses to parliament. However it is possible, that some boroughs might be denominated towns, till they were allowed to chuse representatives in parliament; and that they acquired the name of boroughs from the circumstance of having that privilege. If any towns did become boroughs in this way, it in some degree accounts for lord Coke's explication of the word, though it will not wholly justify him as an etymologist.

Continuation of the note about the Four seas from 108. a.

The appellation of the four seas takes its rise from the four parts, into which the sea encompassing Great Britain, by reference to the four cardinal points of the globe, is divided. All these parts taken together are sometimes called the British seas; but considered separately each varies in its denomination with the coasts of the island. To the West our sea is by ancient writers called Vergivian, not only including the sea between Great Britain and Ireland, but extending over the Atlantick ocean, which washes the western coast of the latter; and this western part of our sea is subdivided; for so much as runs between England and Ireland is called St. George's Channel, or the Irish sea, and the sea on the west coast of Scotland is sometimes named the guardianship by nature, and what infants are its objects, we shall conclude with some few other particulars concerning it.—This guardianship continues till the infant attains the age of twenty-one.—The books inform us, that it extends no further than the custody of the infant's person; a peculiarity, we did not sufficiently advert to, when we were writing a preceding note, which in the last sentence is unguardedly expressed, as if receiving the profits of lands might be part of the office of guardian

Teukisbury, and others send Burgeses to the parliament. Vide pro villis, parochiis et hamlettis postea, section 171.

Cities. Civitas, whereof commeth the word city. A city is a borough incorporate (2); which hath, or have had a bishop; and though the bishopricke be dissolved, yet the city remaineth.

In the time of William the conquerour it is declared in these words. Item nullum mercatum, vel forum fit, nec fieri permittatur, nisi in civitatibus regni nostri, et in burgis clausis et muro vallatis, et castellis, et locis tutissimis, ubi consuetudines regni nostri, et jus nostrum commune, et dignitates coronæ nostræ, quæ constitutæ sunt à bonis prædecessoribus nostris, deperire non possunt, nec defraudari, nec violari, sed omnia rite et per judicium et justitiam fieri debent: et ideo castella et burgi et civitates sunt et fundatæ et edificatæ; scilicet ad tuitionem gentium, et populorum regni, et ad defensionem regni, et idcirco observari debent cum omni libertate et integritate et ratione. So as by this it appeareth, that cities were instituted for three purposes. First, Ad consuetudines regni nostri, et jus nostrum commune, et dignitates coronæ nostræ conservandæ. 2. Ad tuitionem gentium et populorum regni. And thirdly, Ad defensionem regni. For conservation of laws, whereby every man enjoyeth his owne in peace; for tuition and defence of the king's subjects; and for keeping the king's peace in time of sudden uprores; and lastly for defence of the realme against outward or inward hostility.

Civitas et urbs in hoc differunt, quod incolæ dicuntur civitas, urbs verò complectitur ædificia; but with us the one is commonly taken for the other. Villeins sont coultiviers de fief demurrans in villages upland; car de ville est dit villeine, et de boronghes burgeses, et de cities citizens.

Every borough incorporate, that had a bishop within time of memory, is a citie, albeit the bishopricke be dissolved; as Westminster had of late a bishop, and therefore it yet remaines a city (3). The burgh of Cambridge, an ancient city, as it appeareth by a judicall record (which is to be preferred before all others) where mos civitatis Cantabrigiæ is found by the oath of twelve men the recognitors of that assise; which (omitting many others) I thought good to mention, in remembrance of my love and duty almæ matri academia Cantabrigiæ.

There be within England two archbishopricks, and twenty-three other bishopricks. Therefore so many cities there be; and Cambridge and Westminster being added, there are in all twenty-seven cities within this realme, and may be more, than at this time I can call to memory.

It is not necessary, that a city be a county of itselfe; as Cambridge, Ely, Westminster, &c. are cities, but are no counties of themselves, but are part of the counties where they be.

Counties. Or shires, the one taken from the French, the other from the Saxon, in Latine comitatus. Counties are certaine circuits or parts of the kingdome, into the which the whole realme was divided for the better gouvernement thereof, so as there is no land, but it is within some county. And every of them is governed by a yearly officer, which we call a Shireve; which name is compounded of these two Saxon words Shire and reve, [i] præpositus or præfectus comitatus. But hereof more hereafter in his proper place shall be spoken. There be in England forty-one counties, and in Wales twelve.

Veignent les burgeses al parliament, &c. Parliament is the highest and most honourable and absolute court of justice in England, consisting of the king the lords of parliament and the commons. And againe, the lords are here divided into two sorts, viz. spirituall and temporall. And commons are divided into three parts, viz. into knights of shires or counties, citizens out of cities, and burgeses out of burroughes; the words of the writ to the sherife for the election being, duos milites gladiis cinctos magis idoneos et discretos comitatus tui, et de qualibet civitate comitatus tui duos cives, et de qualibet named the Caledonian, Deucalidonian, or Scottish sea, and sometimes the North sea. On the North side of our island there is also the Scottish or North sea. To the East we have the German ocean, which is bounded principally by the opposite coasts of Germany and the United Provinces. Lastly, to the South there is the British Channel, or sea, as some denominate it; which runs along the French coast, and, comprehending the bay of Biscay, ends with the northern coast of Spain. See Seld. Mar. Claus. lib. 2. cap. 1. and the introductory account of the British ocean prefixed to the description of Ireland in Camd. Britan. Such is the description of the four seas, as we have it principally from Mr. Selden. But it should be observed, that the description is framed with a view to the whole island of Great Britain, as in Mr. Selden's time it became united under the government of the same king; and not to England, as distinct from Scotland, according to the sense of our English law-books before the reign of James the First; for in them the four seas were understood with more restriction, and to be those, which encompassed England only. See Medows's Observ. on the Domin. of the Seas, 11. Seld. Mar. Claus. lib. 2. cap. 31. and Justice's Treat. on Sea-Laws 1st ed. 165. Another thing, very necessary to be attended to, is the very large and comprehensive terms of the description, so far as they regard the West and North parts of the British seas; the former seeming to reach to the eastern shore of the continent of America, and the latter to be in some measure without any certain limits. Even the two other parts do not seem to be marked out with that nice precision, the want of which, as the reader will readily conceive, may under some circumstances be the cause of considerable embarrassments, both in transactions with foreign states, and in the exercise of judicial authority amongst ourselves. See Seld. Mar. Claus. lib. 2. c. 30. 31. 32. The difficulties arising from this uncertainty will be best understood, by considering what the extent of the phrase of the four seas is in some particular instances. But this illustration shall be attempted in another place, where lord Coke gives the opportunity of resumming the subject. See post 244. a.

(1) See ante 108. b. note 4.—(2) This implies, that unless a borough is corporate, it cannot be a city. But if this was lord Coke's idea, it is not quite accurate; for though in general the description may be true, yet it is not universally so. Westminster is a city and also a borough, so far at least as the sending members to parliament can intitle it to that denomination;

guardian by nature. See ante note 8. of 88. b. Carth. 386, ante 84.—It yields as to the custody of the person to guardianship in focage, where the title to both guardianships concur in the same individuals as they necessarily do in the case of father or mother, if lands held by a focage-tenure descend on the heir apparent being an infant, and may in the case of other ancestors; the reason of which is explained elsewhere. See fol. 88. b. note 8. But guardianship in focage ending at fourteen, we presume, that after that age the father, or other ancestor having a like title to both guardianships, becomes guardian by nature till the infant's

Lamb. fol. 125.

Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18. Britton fol. 87.

Mich. 7. R. 1. Rot. 1. (which was in Anno Dom. 1195.) in an Ass. of Darreine Presentment for the Church of St. Peter's in Cambridge.

(Post. 168. a.)

10. Co. 123, 124. Vid. Devant sect. 97.

quolibet burgo duos burgenſes de discretioribus, et magis ſufficientibus, &c. all which have voyces and ſuffrages in parliament. You ſhall reade in the parliament rolls, that (as hath beene ſaid) there is lex et conſuetudo parliamenti, quæ quidem lex quærenda eſt ab omnibus, ignorata à multis, et cogita à paucis. Of the members of this court ſome be by deſcent, as ancient noblemen; ſome by creation, as nobles newly created; ſome by ſucceſſion, as biſhops; ſome by election, as knights, citizens, and burgeſſes.

It is called parliament; becauſe every member of that court ſhould ſincerely and diſcreetly parler la ment (1) for the general good of the common wealth; which name it hath alſo in Scotland (2); and this name before the Conqueſt was uſed in [a] the time of Edward the Confeſſour, William the Conquerour, &c. (3) It was anciently before the Conqueſt called miſhel ſnoth, miſhel gemote, calla witenage mote; that is to ſay, the great court or meeting of the king and of all the wiſemen, ſometime of the king with the counſell of his biſhops nobles and wiſeſt of his people. This court the Frenchman called les eſtates, or laſſemble des eſtates. In Germany it is called a diet. For thoſe other courts in France that are called parliaments, they are but ordinary courts of juſtice; and (as Paulus Jovius affirmeth) were firſt eſtabliſhed by us.

The king of England is armed with divers counſels, one whereof is called commune concilium, and that is the court of parliament, and ſo it is legally called in writs and judicial proceedings commune concilium regni Angliæ. And another is called [b] magnum concilium: this is ſometime applied to the upper houſe of parliament, and ſometime out of parliament time to the peers of the realme lords of parliament, who are called magnum concilium regis; for the prooſe whereof take one [c] record for many in the fiſt yeare of king H. 4. at what time there was an exchange made betweene the king and the earle of Northumberland, whereby the king promiſeth to deliver to the earle lands to the value, &c. per advice et aſſent des eſtates de ſon realme et de ſon parliament (pareſſi que parliament ſoit devant le feaſt de St. Lucy) ou autrement per advice de ſon grand counſell, et auters eſtates de ſon realme, que le roy ferra aſſembler devant le dit feaſt, in caſe que le parliament ne ſoit. And herewith agreeth the act of parliament in 37 E. 3. cap. 18. where it is ſaid, before the chancellour treaſurer and great counſell. (4) Thirdly (as every man knoweth) the king hath a privy counſell for matters of ſtate; (as for example) [d] Henricus de bello monte baro de magno et de privato concilio regis juratus, and many others before and after. The fourth counſell of the king are his judges of the law for law matters; and this appeareth frequently in our [e] bookes, and muſt be intended, when it is ſpoken generally by the counſell it is to be underſtood ſecundum ſubjectam materiam; for example, if it be legal, then by the king's counſell of the law, viz. his judges (5).

Now for the antiquity of this high court of parliament, whereof Littleton here ſpeaketh, it appeareth, that divers parliaments have beene holden long before and untill the time of the Conqueror, which be in print, and many more appearing in ancient records and manuſcripts (6).

[f] Le roy Alfred aſſembler les counties, &c. et ordeina pur uſage perpetual, que deux foitz per an ou plus ſovent pur miſter in temps de peace ſe aſſemblerent a Londres, a parlerment ſur le guidament del people de Dieu, et coment ſoy garderent de pecher, viveront en quiet, et receiveront droit per uſages et ſanits judgements. Per ceſteſtate ſe fieront pluſors ordinaſces per pluſors roys jeſque a temps le roy que ore eſt, que ſuit le roy E. 1. (7) The concluſion of that great parliament holden by king Ethelſtan at Grately is very remarkable, which I have ſcene in theſe words. All this was enacted in that great ſynod or counſell at Grately, whereat was the archbiſhop Wolfeſelme, with all the noblemen and wiſe men, which king Ethelſtan called together.

There have beene in the time of, and ſince the Conqueſt, in the reignes of H. 1. king Stephen, H. 2. R. 1. king John, H. 3. &c. 280 ſeſſions of parliament, and at every ſeſſion divers acts of parliament made, no ſmall number whereof are not in print (8).

The juriſdiction of this court is ſo tranſcendent, that it maketh, enlargeth, diminiſheth, abrogateth, repealeth and reviveth lawes, ſtatutes, acts and ordinances, concerning matters eccleſiaſtical, capitall, criminall, common, civill, martiall, maritime, and the reſt. None can begin, continue, or diſſolve the parliament, but by the king's authority. Of which court it is ſaid, [a] Que il eſt de tresgrand honor et juſtice, de que nul doit imaginer choſe diſhonorable. [b] Habet rex curiam ſuam in concilio ſuo in parliamentis ſuis, preſentibus prelatibus, comitibus, baronibus, proceribus, et aliis viris peritis, ubi terminatæ ſunt dubitationes judiciorum, et novis injuriis emerſis nova conſtituuntur remedia, et unicuique juſtitia prout meruerit retribuetur ibidem. But this properly doth belong to the juriſdiction of courts, and therefore this little taſte hereof ſhall ſuffice.

Sect.

nation; and yet it certainly is not corporate. Mr. Madox mentions Weſtmiſter as a borough not corporate; and we ourſelves have ſeen papers in the archives of the dean and chapter of Weſtmiſter, which confirm his idea. Mad. Firm. Burg. 49. This fact is material to another purpoſe. Weſtmiſter not being corporate, and yet having, as we apprehend, firſt ſent members to parliament in the reign of Edward the Sixth, is an inſtance, that the inhabitants of a town may acquire the right of having repreſentatives in parliament within time of legal memory without being incorporated, and therefore ſeems inconſiſtent with the doctrine of lord chief juſtice Holt on this ſubject in Aſhby and White. See 3. Pryn. Brev. Parl. ſect. 7. p. 188. 1. Will. Notit. Parl. 7. and 21. of the preface. Car. Rights of Eleſt. part 2. page 233. 1. Stow's Survey Strype's ed. of 1720. p. 8. and 10. of the 2d appendix, and 2. Dougl. Hiſt. of Caſ. of Controv. Eleſt. 296. 297. 298. It is with great pleaſure, that we cite Mr. Douglas's work, as it affords the opportunity of congratulating the ſtudent, on the acceſſion of a collection of excellent reports on the law of parliamentary election, accompanied with an inſtructive hiſtorical preface, and very judicious annotations. This is the only work of the kind, except one lately published from Mr. Glanville's manuſcript; and they are both particularly valuable, on account of their tendency to diffuſe the knowledge of a branch of law, which before was too much confined to the narrow circle of the few favourites in poſſeſſion of the præſice.—(3) This is rather an unapt example of the truth of lord Coke's poſition; for Weſtmiſter, as we have already ſtated, is not a borough incorporate. See ſupra note 2. As to Weſtmiſter's being a city, it became ſo by expreſs creation, and not ſingly by making it the ſee of a biſhop, however ſufficient that of itſelf might have been; the letters patent, which erected the biſhoprick, ordaining, quod tota villa noſtra Weſtmonaſterii extunc et deinceps in perpetuum ſit civitas, ipſamque civitatem Weſtmonaſterii vocari. See the letters patent in 1. Burn. Reform. page 246. of the Appendix.

The continuation of the notes to 108. a. intended to be introduced here, is neceſſarily poſtpoſed to fol. 111. a.

(1) The latter part of this etymology is juſtly exploded; but it is ſome excuſe for lord Coke, that it did not firſt come from him, it being to be found in preceding authors of eminence. See Lamb. Archeion in the chapter of Parliament, and 1. Whitl. on Parliament 174. A learned writer of the preſent time ſuggeſts, that perhaps parliament may be a compound of parly and ment, two Celtick words, the former anſwering to parler in French, and the latter ſignifying abundance, and both together importing the ſame as great talk amongſt the Indians of North America. Barringt. Obſ. on Ant. Stat. 2d ed. 56. But though we do not doubt, that there are two ſuch words in the Celtick language, we are ſcarce more ſatisfied with this derivation, than with that expreſſed by lord Coke. The opinion adopted by Mr. Lambard ſeems far the moſt probable; and this is, that parliament is not a compound word, but ſimply derived from the French verb parler, with the addition of ment in the termination; which mode of converting verbs into nouns as well as into adverbs is common in the French tongue. Lamb. Archeion in the chap. of Parliament. A like practice prevailed in the formation of the Roman language; and thence infant's age of twenty-one. See Carth. 384.—Laſtly the father may diſappoint the mother and other anceſtors of the guardian-ſhip

4 H. 8. cap. 8.

[a] Treatif. de Modo tenend. Parliam. 21. E. 3. fo. 60. a. Johannes de Rupicella tempore regis Johannis. Pol. Virgil. li. 3. tempore H. 1. W. 1. 3 E. 1. in the title.

(Doct. & Stud. 164. 3. Inſt. 125, 179. 4. Inſt. 53.)

[b] Bracton lib. 1. cap. 2. Regiſt. 280.

[c] 27. Aug. 5. H. 4.

[d] In Doct. Clauf. 16. E. 2.

M. 5.

(7. Co. 36.)

[e] 43. Aſſ. 15. 27. H. 6. 5. 1.

R. 3. 11. Regiſt. 191, 123, 123.

4. E. 3. 2. 39. E. 3. 35. 3. Aſſ.

15. 19. E. 3. Judgement 174.

W. 1. ca. 1. Laſtat de Templar.

16. R. 2. Stat de Præmunire.

See the ſame published by Mr. Lambert.

[f] Mirror ca. 1. ſect. 2. Vide

Statutes de 4. E. 3. ca. 14. & 36.

E. 3. ca. 10.

Mirr. ca. 2. ſect. 4. 7. 10. 14.

ca. 4. de Defaults, & cap. de Homicide cap. 1. ſect 13. cap. 4. de

Poyns. Ockam quid cum Ven.

Math. Pariſ. 212, 213.

[a] Pl. Com. 398. b. Doct. &

Stud. ca. 55. fol. 164.

[b] Fleta lib. 2. ca. 2. Fortescue

de Laudibus legum Angliæ, Brac-

lib. 1. ca. 2.

(Doct. & Stud. 32.)

Sect. 165.

CUSTOMES et usages. Consuetudo, is one of the maine triangles of the lawes of England; those lawes being divided into common law, statute law, and custome. Of which it is said, * that consuetudo quandoque pro lege servatur in partibus, ubi fuerit more utentium approbata, et vicem legis obtinet; longævi enim temporis usus et consuetudinis non est vilis auctoritas. [c] Longa possessio (sicut jus) parit jus possidendi, et tollit actionem vero domino.

Of every custome there be two essentiall parts, time and usage; time out of minde, (as shall be said hereafter) and continuall and peaceable usage without lawfull interruption (2).

Que nont pas autres villes. It is necessary to be knowne what customes may be

(Post. 115. b.)

(*) Bract. lib. 1. ca. 3. fol. 2.

[c] Idem lib. 2. fol. 52.
(Dav. 33. a.)

(Doct. Plac. 104. 5. Co. 84. a.)

(*) 44. E. 3. 33. 40. Aff. 4. 27.
41. 21. E. 4. 54. 43. E. 3. 32.

[d] 21. E. 4. 53. 54.
(6. Co. 59. b.)

(*) 21. E. 4. 54. 15. E. 4. 29.
11. H. 7. 14. 44. E. 3. 18. 21.
H. 7. 40.

[c] Bract. lib. 4. 271. 34. E. 1.
Detinue 60. 17. E. 2. Detinue
58. 3. E. 3. Dett. 156. 30. E. 3.
25. 39. E. 3. 6. 9. 10. 31. E. 3.
Render 6. 17. E. 3. 27. 21. E.
4. 28. 22. E. 4. 8. 7. E. 3. 51.
30. E. 3. 23. 34. H. 8. Dier 54.
F. N. B. 122. 5. E. 3. Treas.
13.

Vide Glagvil lib. 7. ca. 3. 9.

Bract. lib. 4. Tract. 6. ca. 13.
F. N. B. 150. o. Pl. Com. 413.
(Ante 33. b.)

AND this is called frank banke, francus bancus. Consuetudo est in partibus illis, quod uxores maritorum defunctorum habeant francum bancum suum de terris sockmannorum teneat nomine dotis (7).

thence the true source of derivation for testamentum, and other similar Latin words; though an injudicious desire to render them more significant and expressive of the qualities of the subjects to which they are applied, than their true deduction would warrant, gave birth to a forced and fanciful kind of etymology, like that now so properly rejected in the instance of the word parliament. This false taste in respect to etymology is of a very ancient date; nor were lord Coke and his contemporaries more chargeable with it, than some of the most admired and pure classical writers of antiquity, not excepting even Cicero. See Menag. Jur. Civil. Amœn. cap. 39. particularly in his observations on the word testamentum, and Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 7. It seems to have originated from not attending to the real office of etymology, and confounding it with the definition of the subject to which a word is applied; two things quite distinct in their nature, though it frequently happens, that they reflect light on each other.—(2) For a history of the origin and constitution of the parliament in Scotland before the Union of the two kingdoms in the reign of queen Ann, and of the change made by the establishment of one parliament for Great Britain, see the Treatise on the Laws of Election for Scotland, with which Mr. Wight hath lately obliged the public.—(3) Mr. Lambard guesses, that the word parliament was introduced here soon after the Conquest. He cites Westminster the first, as the most ancient statute in which he had observed the word to be used; though from a passage in the statute of Edward the Second, mentioning parliaments in the times of that king's progenitors, he infers, that the word had been adopted several reigns before. Lamb. Archeion cap. Parliament, and Westminster. 1. 3. E. 1. and Articuli Cleri 9. E. 1. One of Mr. Prynne's arguments against the great antiquity of the modus tenendi parliamentum is the frequent use of the word parliament; he insisting, that it was never applied to denote the great council of the nation in any of our ancient records or writings prior to the reign of Hen. 3. See Pryn. on 4. Inf. 2. See further Brad. Introduct. to Engl. Hist. 71.—(4) In the controversy about the origin of the Commons in parliament, Mr. Tyrrel contends, that anciently commune consilium sometimes denoted an assembly distinct from parliament, and one composed of fewer persons; and particularly, that the commune consilium, mentioned in the clause of king John's Magna Carta about assenting of- cuage, which enumerates only archbishops bishops abbots counts and the greater barons, was of this sort. Tyrrel. Biblioth. Politic. 311. 314.

For the remainder of the notes to 110. a. see fol 112. a.

(1) Another thing essential to a good custom is, that it be reasonable; which doctrine, together with the other general rules concerning customs, is well explained and applied in the famous Irish case of Tanistry reported by Sir John Davies. See Dav. 31. b.

ship by nature, by appointing a testamentary guardian under the statutes of Philip and Mary and of Charles the Second, which

ITEM per le-greinder part ti-elx burghes ont divers customes et usages, que nont pas autres villes. Car ascuns burghes ont ti-el custome, que si home ad issue plujors fits et morust, le puisne fits enheritera tous les tenements, que fueront

a son pere deins meme le burgh come heire a son pere per force de custome; et tiel cus-tome est appel burgh English.

ALSO for the greater part such boroughes have divers customes and usages, which be not had in other towns. For some boroughes have such a custome, that if a man have issue many sonnes and dyeth, the youngest son shall inherit all the tenements, which were his father's within the same borough, as heire unto his father by force of the custome; the which is called borough English (1).

Sect. 166.

ITEM en ascun burghes, per le custome, feme avera pur sa dower tous
les tenements, que fue-ront a sa baron, &c.

ALSO in some boroughes, by custome, the wife shall have for her dower all the tenements, which were her husbands.

Que

Que fueront a sa baron, &c. Here is implied by (&c.) that in some places the [1] F. N. B. 150. (Ante 33. b.) wife shall have the moiety of the lands of her husband, so long as she lives unmarried; as in gavelkinde. And of lands in gavelkinde a man shall be tenant by the curtesie without having 10. E. 3. Aude 129. of any issue. (1) In some places the widow shall have the whole, or halfe, dum sola & casta vixerit, and the like.

Sect. 167.

ITEM, en ascuns burghes, per le custome, home poit deviser per son testament sesterres & tenements, que il ad en fee simple deins mesme le burgh al temps de son morant; & per force de tiel devise, ce-luy, a que tiel devise est fait, apres le mort le devisor, poit entrer en les tenements issint a luy devises, a aver & tener a luy, solon-que la forme & effect del devise, sans ascun liverie de seisin destre fait a luy, &c. (4)

ALSO in some boroughs, by the custome, a man may devise by his testament his lands and tenements, which he hath in fee simple within the same borough at the time of his death; and by force of such devise, he, to whome such devise is made, after the death of the devisor, may enter into the tenements so to him devised, to have and to hold to him, after the forme and effect of the devise, without any liverie of seisin thereof to be made to him, &c.

Devise. This is a (5. Co. 73. b.)

French word, and signifieth sermocinari to speake, for testamentum est testatio mentis, & index animi sermo (2). So as a devise per son testament is to speake by his testament, what his minde is to have done after his decease.

Per son testament.

Testamentum est [m] duplex, [m] Vide sect. 58

1. In scriptis. 2. Nuncupativum, seu sine scriptis. And in some cities and boroughs, lands may [n] passe as chattels by will nuncupative or paroll without writing (3). Revera [o] terminatum est, quod [o] Brañ. lib. 4. fol. 272. potest legari, ut catallum, tam Fleta lib. 5. cap. 5. & lib. 2. hereditas, quam perquisitum, cap. 50. per barones London' & burgenses Oxon. Ideo verum est, quod in burgis non jacet assisa mortis antecessoris. But in law most commonly ultima voluntas in scriptis is used, where lands or tenements are devised, and testamentum when it concerneth chattels.

Ses terres ou tenements. And by the same custome he may devise a rent out of the same lands and tenements (5).

Que il ad en fee simple. For lands in taile are not devisable by will; and therefore he in this place necessarily added (que il ad en fee simple) and purposely omitted the same in the clause concerning borough English; because there an estate taile is included.

Poit entrer. Note, the custome of a city or borough concerning the devise of lands is, quod licet unicuique civi sive burgenfi, &c. ejusdem civitatis sive burgi tenementa sua in eadem civitate sive burgo in testamento suo in ultima voluntate sua, tanquam catalla sua, legare cuicunque voluerit, &c. [p] Now if a man deviseth, either by speciall name or generally, goods or chattels reall or personall, and dyeth, the devisee cannot take them without the assent of the executors (6). But when a man is seised of lands in fee, and deviseth the same in fee, in taile, for life, or for yeares, the devisee shall enter; for in that case the executors have no meddling therewith. And in the case of a devise by will of lands, whereof the devisor is seised in fee, the freehold or interest in law is in [q] the devisee before he doth enter, and in that case nothing [r] (having regard to the estate or interest devised) descendeth to the heire. But if the heire of the devisor entreth and holdeth the devisee out, he may either enter as Littleton here saith, or have his writ called ex gravi querela; and this writ (without any particular usage) is incident to the custome to devise; for otherwise, if a descent were cast before the devisee did enter, the devisee should have no remedy. After an actuall possession this writ lyeth not; for then the devisee may have his ordinary remedy by the common law.

And

31. b. — (3) This doctrine, about the restriction of customs to places of a particular denomination, will appear more satisfactory, by considering the reason of having some restraint, and the nature of that, which lord Coke points out as the established one. The policy of some restraint is founded on the uncertainty and confusion, which would ensue from an infinite diversity of customs, if every place, however small and inconsiderable, should be allowed to set up special customs in direct opposition to the general custom of the realm. On this principle the privilege of having special customs, derogating from the common law, is in general denied to inferior places, such as upland towns, not being either cities or boroughs, and hamlets; though it is allowed to larger or more important districts, such as counties, manors, hundreds, honors, cities, and boroughs. The special cases, hinted at by lord Coke as an exception to this restraint, seem to be those, in which the custom tends to advance some right recognized by the common law. Thus a town's having a church, being a right at common law, a custom for a way to or repairing the church operates by rendering the exercise of that right more effectual. See Robins. Gavelk. 31. & 225. However the case of dower by custom, mentioned by lord Coke in the chapter on dower, seems to be an instance within the exception, without being within the reason of it. But of this example lord Coke writes doubtfully; for, after inferring from the text of Littleton, that customary dower may be within a town, he observes, that it is safer to alledge it within a manor. See ante 33. b. — (4) But this extension of Borough English to the collateral line must be specially pleaded. See Robins. on Gavelk. 38. 43. 93. and in the Appendix. — (5) See acc. as to estates tail in Gavelkind land, though expressly limited to the heirs male of the body at common law. Dy. 179. b. See also ante fol. 10. a. note 3. But as Borough English may be extended by special custom, so may it be restrained; and therefore the customary descent may be confined to fee simple. See Appendix to Robins. Gavelk. and March 54. there cited. — (6) See as to the denomination of Borough English and the subject in general, Append. to Robins. Gavelk.

(1) Accord. ante 30. a. All the differences, between curtesy and dower of Gavelkind land and the same estates at common law, are minutely explained and commented upon in Mr. Robinson's book on Gavelkind. See page 135. and 139. — (2) See ante fol. 110. a. note 1. — (3) But now by the 29. Cha. 2. c. 3. a will of lands devisable by custom is not good, unless it is in writing and signed and attested in the same manner as a will of lands devisable by statute. See post. 111. b. Nuncupative wills of personalty, except those of soldiers in actual service and mariners at sea, are also newly regulated by the same statute. — (4) The &c. is not in L. & M. — (5) But it was formerly much controverted, whether a rent-charge in esse, issuing out of such lands and having commenced within time of memory, was within the custom of devising; and it was not settled to be so, till the case of Randal and Jenkins in the time of lord Hale. See 1 Mod. 112. and Robins. on Gavelk. 79. to 84. As to rents-service, they of course followed the nature of the reversion or feignory, to which they were incident; nor was there any doubt as to the custom's extending to other rents, if they had existed immemorably. — (6) Acc. Perk. sect. 488. 570 and 572. to 576. The other authorities relative to this doctrine will be found in Vin. Abr. Devise A. a. and Com. Dig. Administration C. 5.

Continuation of notes to fol. 108. a. from fol. 108. b.

(4) The first book of Mr. Madox's Baronia Anglica is principally employed in explaining the nature of an honor. He objects to the propriety of the statutes of Hen. 8. referred to by lord Coke; and as they only create titular honors and therefore cannot give a just idea of the nature of the genuine honor, which is a land barony, blames lord Coke for his reference. Mad. Bar. Angl. 8. 9. 10. and 236. — (5) See Mad. Baron. Angl. 238. 239. where the learned author observes on the inaccuracy of language in the 12. Cha. 2. about tenure in capite. The title of the act expresses, that it was made for taking away tenure in capite; and the first enacting clause proceeds on the same idea. But had the act been accurately penned, it would simply have discharged such tenure of its oppressive fruits and incidents; which would have assimilated it to free and common socage, without the appearance of attempting to annihilate the indelible distinction between holding immediately of the king and holding of him through the medium of other lords. See ante note 3.

which will be the subject of a subsequent note. See infra, note 14. — (13) Here we shall bring into one point of view some few [f] 27. H. 8. cap. 10. Britton fol. 212. 78. b. 164. Vide before in this sect. 32. H. 8. cap. 2. 34. H. 8. ca. 5.

[r] Vide 3. Co. 25. &c. in Butler and Baker's case. 6. Co. 16. & 76. 8. Co. 84. 85. 9 Co. 133. 10. Co. 82. 83. 84. 11. Co. 24. 1. Co. 25. a.
[u] Dier 4. & 5. Phil. & Mar. 155. an. 6. Eliz. Dalison. Pasch. 20. Eliz. betweene Barber and his wife plaintife, and William Long defendant in a writ of partition. Bendloe's adjudged. (9. Co. 133.)

[x] 6. Co. 17. 18. Sir Edward Clere's case. 3. Co. 34. b. Butler and Baker's case.

10. Co. 80. 81. Leon. Lovey's case.

Leon. Lovey's case, and Butler and Baker's case. Ubi supra.

(1. Sid. 56.) Leon. Lovey's case. Ubi supra, fol. 81.

8. Co. 84. 85. Sir Richard Pexhal's case. 3. Co. 33. Butler and Baker's case.

6. Co. 17. 18. in Sir Edward Clere's case.
(8. Co. 173. Post 271. Cro. Cha. 38.)

And well said Littleton, that lands and tenements were devisable in burghes by custome; for that [f] at the common law no lands or tenements were devisable by any last will and testament, (1) nor ought to be transferred from one to another, but by solemn livery of seisin, matter of record, or sufficient writing (2); but as Littleton here saith, that by certain private customs in some burghes they are devisable. But now since Littleton wrote, by the statutes of 32. and 34. H. 8. lands and tenements are generally devisable (3) by the last will in writing of the tenant in fee simple, whereby the ancient [r] common law is altered, whereupon many difficult questions, and most commonly disherison of heires (when the devisors are pinched by the messengers of death) doe arise and happen. But [u] these statutes take not away the custome to devise, (4) whereof Littleton speaketh: for though lands devisable by custome be holden by knights service, yet may the owner devise the whole land by force of the custome, and that shall stand good against the heire for the whole. But the devise of lands holden by knights service by force of the statute is utterly void for a third, and the same shall descend to the heire. If he hath any lands holden by knights service in capite, and lands in socage, he can devise but two parts of the whole; but if he hold lands by knights service of the king, and not in capite, or of a meane lord, and hath also lands in socage, he may devise two parts of his land holden by knights service, and all his socage lands. If he holds any land of the king in capite, and by act executed in his life-time he conveyeth any part of his lands to the use of his wife, or of his children, or payment of his debts, though it be with power of revocation, he can devise by his will [x] no more, but to make up the land so conveyed two parts of the whole. And if the lands to conveyed amount to two parts or more, then he can devise nothing by his will. But if he hath land onely that is holden in socage, then he may devise by his will all his socage lands; so as it is apparent, that the benefit of the lords was more carefully provided for, than the good of the heire. But if a man, holding some land of the king by knights service in capite, convey two parts of his land to the use of his wife for life, now (as hath beene said) he can devise no part of the residue, but yet he may by his will devise the reversion of the two parts so conveyed to his wife: for the intention of the act is to give power to dispose of two parts intirely.

If the devisor leave a full third part of the land immediately to descend in fee simple or in taile, he may devise the other two parts in fee simple. If a third part be not left, it shall be made up according to the act. But hereditaments, that are not of any yearly value, as bona & catalla felonum & fugitivorum, waives, estrayes, and the like, can neither be left to descend for any part of the third part, or devised as part of the two parts. But yet if such franchises of uncertaine value be holden of the king in capite, they shall restrain the devise of all his lands and make it void for a third part. So it is, if a man hath a reversion expectant upon an estate taile dry and fruitlesse holden of the king by knights service in capite, yet that shall restrain him to devise but two parts of his lands onely. And where the statute speaks of a remainder, it is to be intended only of such a remainder, as may draw ward and marriage by the common law. As if a reversion upon a state for life be granted to one for life, the remainder in fee, during the life of the grantee for life it is not within the statute; but if he dyeth, this is such a remainder, as is within the statute, although it be dry and fruitlesse. If a gift in taile or a lease for life be made, the remainder in fee, this remainder in fee is not within the statute. But if a man hath lands holden by knights service in capite in possession, reversion, or remainder, and also seised of socage land, and devise by his will all his lands, and after he selleth away the capite land, or that land is recovered from him, the will is good for the whole socage land. The values both of the third part and the two parts of the lands shall be taken, as they happen to be at the time of the death of the devisor; for then his will takes effect.

He, that holds by knights service in chief, deviseth by his will a rent, common, or other profit as shall amount to the value of two parts out of all his lands: this rent issueth only out of the two parts, and the third part is free of it. And if he hath lands holden by knights service, and not in capite, he may charge two parts of the knight service land as is aforesaid, and all his socage land, &c. And if he hath onely socage land, he may by his will charge it at his pleasure, so as the king's and lord's third part is free, and the heire's two parts charged; and this is onely by force of the statute of 34. H. 8.

If a man make a feoffment in fee of his lands holden by knights service to the use of such person and persons, and of such estate and estates, &c. as he shall appoint by his will, in this case, by operation of law the use and state vests in the feoffor, and he is seised of a qualified fee. In this case, if the feoffor limit estates by his will by force and according to his power, there the uses and estates growing out of the feoffment are good for the whole, and the last will is but directory. (.) But in that case, if the feoffor had devised the land (as owner thereof) without any reference to the feoffment and power thereby given, then taking effect by the will, it is void for a third part. But if he had formerly conveyed two parts to the use of his wife, &c. and after devised the residue by his will without any reference to his power by the feoff-

(1) The testamentary power over land was certainly in use among our Anglo Saxon and Danish ancestors; though it seems to have been rather adopted from the remnant of the Roman laws and customs they found here, than brought from their own country: for, as Tacitus, writing of the ancient Germans, says, successores sui cuique liberi et nullum testamentum. Spelm. Posthum. 21. 127. After the Norman Conquest, the power of dividing land ceased, except as to socage lands in some particular places, such as cities and boroughs, in which it was still preserved; and also except as to terms for years or chattel interests in land, which, on account of their original imbecility and insignificance, were deemed personalty, and as such were ever disposable by will. This limitation of the testamentary power proceeded, partly from the solemn form of transferring land by livery of seisin introduced at the Conquest, which could not be complied with in the case of a last will; partly from a jealousy of death-bed dispositions; but principally from the general restraint of alienation incident to the rigors of the feudal system, as it was established or at least perfected by the first William. See Wright's Ten. 172. In the reign of Edward the first, the statute of Quia emptores removed in great measure this latter bar to the exercise of testamentary power; that is, in respect to all freeholders, except the king's tenants in capite. But the two former obstructions still continued to operate; though indeed this was in name and appearance only; for soon after the statute of Quia emptores, feoffments to uses came into fashion, and, last wills were enforced in Chancery as good declarations of the use; and thus through the medium of uses the power of devising was continually exercised in effect and reality. But at length this practice was checked, not accidentally, but designedly, by the 27th of Hen. 8. which, by transferring the possession or legal estate to the use, necessarily and compulsively consolidated them into one, and so had the effect of wholly destroying all distinction between them, till the means to evade the statute, and, by a very strained construction, to make its operation dependant on the intention of parties, were invented. However the bent of the times was so strong in favour of every kind of alienation, that the legislature, in a few years after having interpolated to restrain an indirect mode of passing land by last wills, expressly made it devisable. This great change of the common law was effected by the statutes of the 32. and 34. of Henry 8. which taken together gave the power of devising to all having estates in fee simple, except in joint tenancy, over the whole of their socage land, and over two thirds of their lands holden by knights service. The operation of these statutes, was further extended by the conversion of knights service into socage in the 12. Cha. 2. But still copyhold lands, and also, as the best opinion seems to have been, estates pur autre vie in freehold lands, remained undevisable. On the one hand they were not devisable at common law; because they came within the description of real estate. On the other hand, they, or at least the former, are not within the statutes of Henry 8. these requiring, that the tenure should be socage, which a copyhold is not, and that the party should have an estate in fee simple, which is more than a tenant pur autre vie can be said to have. See as to copyhold lands 2. Ro. Rep. 383. and as to estates pur autre vie in freehold lands Cro. Eliz. 804. Mo. 625. 1. Saund. 261. 1. Saik. 619. This defect of provision in the statutes of wills is now supplied as to estates pur autre vie by the 29. Cha. 2. c. 3. which makes them devisable in the same manner as estates in fee simple. But no provision is yet made in respect to copyhold estates; and therefore the power of devising is now indirectly exercised over these by an application of the doctrine of uses, similar to that which was antiently resorted to in respect to freehold lands; for the practice is to surrender to the use of the owner's last will; and on this surrender, the will operates as a declaration of the use and not as a devise of the land itself. See 2. Ro. Rep. 383. 2. Atk. 37. Gilb. on Uses 36. From this deduction it appears, that the testamentary power is now exercisable, either directly or indirectly, over land of every tenure now in use, and also over every few general things relative both to guardianship by socage and that by nurture.

Guardianship by socage, like the one in chivalry springs wholly out of tenure. Therefore the title to it cannot arise, unless the infant is seized of lands, or other hereditaments lying in tenure, holden by socage. Ante fol. 87. b.—Like guardianship in chivalry feoffment, yet this will shall enure to declare the use upon the feoffment; because he had no power as owner of the land to devise any part of it. (1) But if the feoffment had been made to the use of his last will, although he deviseth the land with reference to the feoffment, yet it taketh effect only by the will, and not by the feoffment. (2) All which and many other points of intricate and abstruse learning you shall more largely read in my Reports.

Sauns aucun liverie de seisin destre fait a luy, &c. For in his life time livery of 40. Ass. 38. seisin could not be made; because his will is ambulatorie till his death, and no estate passeth during his life; neither can livery be made after his decease, for then it cometh too late. Here (&c.) (3) implyeth that the devise is good without any attornment of any lessee or tenant.

Sect. 168.

Nota, coment que home ne poit granter, ne doner, ses tenements a sa feme, durant le coverture; pur ceo que sa feme et luy ne sont forsque un person en ley: uncore per tiel custome il poit deviser per testament ses tenements a sa feme, a aver et tener a luy en fee simple, ou en fee taile, pur terme de vie ou pur terme des ans; pur ceo que tiel devise ne prist effect forsque apres la mort le devisor, car tous devises ne preignent effect forsque apres la mort le devisor. Et si home fait a divers temps divers testaments, et divers devises, &c. uncore le darrein devise et volunt fait per luy estoiera, et lauters sont voides (4).

ALSO, though a man may not grant, nor give, his tenements to his wife during the coverture; for that his wife and he be but one person in the law: yet by such custome he may devise by his testament his tenements to his wife, to have and to hold to her in fee-simple, or in fee taile, or for tearme of life, or yeares; for that such devise taketh no effect, but after the death of the devisor. And if a man at divers times makes divers testaments, and divers devises, &c. yet the last devise and will made by him shall stand, and the others are voyd.

HOME ne poit granter, ne doner, ses tenements a sa feme, &c.

This opinion is [a] cleere, for by no conveyance at the common law a man could during the coverture, either in possession reversion or remainder, limit an estate to his wife. But a man may by his deed covenant with others to stand seised to the use of his wife, or make a feoffment or other conveyance to the use of his wife; and now the state is executed to such uses by the statute [b] of 27. H. 8. for an use is but a trust and confidence, which by such a mean might be limited by the husband to the wife. But a man cannot covenant with his wife to stand seised to her use; because he cannot covenant with her, for the reason that Littleton here yeeldeth (5).

Durant le coverture. That is, during the continuance of the marriage. For to cover in English is tegere in Latine, and is so called, for that the wife is sub potestate viri, and she is disabled to contract with any without the consent of the husband. [c] Omnia, quæ sunt uxoris, sunt ipsius viri. Non habet uxor potestatem sui, sed vir.

Un person en ley.

Vir & uxor sunt quasi unica persona, quia caro una, & sanguis unus. Res licet sit propria uxoris, vir tamen ejus custodit, cum sit caput mulieris. Idem lib. 5. Tract. 5. cap. 25. (Hob. 2. Cro. Eliz. 129. Plowd. 414.) 10. H. 7. 20.

If Cesey que use had devised, that his wife should sell his land, and made her executrix and dyed, and she tooke another husband, she might sell the land to her husband, for she did it in auter droit, and her husband should be in by the devisor (6).

Per testament. Testamentum is (as is said before) testatio mentis, and is favourably to be expounded according to the meaning of the testator. In contractibus benigna, in sort of interest in land, which, not being fettered with intails, can be transferred by alienation taking effect in the owner's lifetime.

The remainder of the notes to fol. 111. b. will be found in fol. 114. b.

(1) This was the point adjudged in Sir Edward Clere's case; and though, as the whole of the land is now devisable, the doctrine of that case is no longer of consequence in respect to the extent and exercise of the power of devising, yet it may be material for other purposes; for it comprehends a general rule, settling how an act shall operate, where it may take effect in two ways, that is, either as the execution of a power derived from interest, or as the execution of a power not arising from interest but specially reserved. In the great case of Commendams the doctrine is well explained by lord Hobart, and finely applied. Hob. 160. — (2) The distinction here made, between a feoffment to the use of a last will, and one to such uses as the feoffor should appoint by last will, seems extremely subtle. However lord Coke reports it as adopted by the judges in Sir Edward Clere's case; and according to Moore the same point was adjudged in Bathey and Trevilian. Mo. 278. But then as to the former of these cases, the opinion on this point must have been extra-judicial, the feoffment having been to such uses as should be appointed by will, and not to the use of the will itself; and as to the latter case, it went off finally on another point. The reasoning in support of the distinction will be found post 271. b. and more at large in Mo. 516. — (3) See note 4. of fol. 111. a. — (4) The words & lautres sont voides are not in L. and M. Roh. or P. — (5) See further on this subject ante note 1. fol. 3. a. — (6) Acc. post 187. b. It is agreed in the books, that a wife may, without her husband, execute a naked authority, whether given before or after coverture, and though no special words are used to dispense with the disability of coverture; and in the case put by lord Coke the devise gives no more. The rule is the same, where both an interest and an authority pass to the wife, if the authority is collateral to and doth not flow from the interest; because then the two are as unconnected, as if they were vested in different persons. Rep. temp. Finch 346. As too a feme covert may without her husband convey lands in execution of a mere power or authority, so may she with equal effect in performance of a condition, where land is vested in her on condition to convey to others. W. Jo. 137, 138. The reason, why in these instances the wife may convey without her husband, seems to be, that he can receive no prejudice from her acts, but a great one might arise to others, if his concurrence should be essential. Yet if the legal estate of lands is vested in a married woman on trust for another, some hold, that she cannot pass it to cessuque trust, unless the husband joins; and therefore that if she makes feoffment or fine without him, the first will be void, the latter voidable. This was the opinion of judge Jones in the case of Daniel and Upley; but the judges Whitlock and Dodridge dissented from Jones, and held, that the husband's joining was not any more requisite than in the other cases. W. Jo. 137. Perhaps however Jones's opinion may be most conformable to strictly legal doctrine; and his thus distinguishing a trust from a power and a condition may be accounted for. Trusts are properly the subjects of consideration for the courts of equity only; and though in them the legal estate is made subservient to the trust, yet the courts of law take notice of trusts for very few purposes; nor will it be easy to find an authority for departing from any rule about the effect of legal conveyances, merely in respect of their being a performance of trusts. See further as to acts by a feme covert without her husband, under the titles Baron and Feme Executor and Administration in the Abridgements. — (7) See the note on this sort of etymology in fol. 110. a.

Continuation of notes to fol. 110. a. from fol. 110. b.

(5) Lord Coke in another place repeats the expression, that for matters of law the judges are the king's counsel. Post. 304. a. But chivalry, it is deemed to take place on a descent only; though some have argued to the contrary. Ante note 1. fol. 87. b. — The [d] 4. E. 2. tit. Devise 23.

[e] 44. Aff. p. 36. 44. E. 3. 33.
18. E. 3. 8.
[f] Britton 264.

2. H. 5. 8. 2. R. 3. 22.
(Cro. Eliz. 9. Cro. Jam. 49. 290.
649.)

in testamentis benignior, in restitutionibus benignissima interpretatio facienda est.

A son feme. And Littleton himselfe yeeldeth the reason; [d] because the devise doth not take effect till after the decease of the devisor. And in some [e] places the custome is generall, that he may devise any lands, &c. in some [f] places land onely which the devisor purchased; in some place that he may devise any estate; in some places for life onely, &c.

But albeit the last will doth not take effect untill after his decease, yet if a feme covert be seised of lands in fee, she cannot devise the same to her husband; because at the making of her will she had no power being sub potestate viri to devise the same, and the law intendeth it should be done by coercion of her husband.

Divers testaments. For voluntas testatoris est ambulatoria usque ad mortem (as hath beene said before) and the later will doth countermand the first. And it is truly sayd that the first grant and the last will is of greatest force.

Divers devises, &c. Here by (&c.) is to be understood as well devises of chattels reall or personall, as of freehold and inheritance: also that in one will where there be divers devises of one thing the last devise taketh place. Cum duo inter se pugnancia reperiuntur, in testamento ultimum ratum est (1).

Sect. 169.

*QUE ses executors poient aliener ou
vender ses tenements.*

And that, which in Littleton's time a man might doe by custome, in some particular places, he may now doe by the statutes of 32. & 34. H. 8. generally.

32. H. 8. cap. 2. 34. H. 8. ca. 5.

Les executors a-pres le mort leur testator poient vender.

Here it appeareth, that the executors having but a power, as Littleton putteth the case, to sell, they must all joyn in the sale. Then put the case, that one dies, it is regularly true, that being but a bare authoritie, the survivour cannot sell. But if a man deviseth his land to A. for terme of life, and that after his decease his lands shall be sold by his executors generally, (as Littleton here putteth his case) and make three or foure executors, and during the life of A. one of the executors dieth, and then A. dieth, the other two or three executors may sell; because the land could not be sold before, and the plurall number of his executors remaine. But if they had beene named by their names, as by I. S. I. N. I. D. and I. G. his executors,

49. E. 3. 16. 29. Aff. 17. 39.
Aff. 17. 9. H. 6. 24. 15. H. 7.
12. 21. 14. H. 8. 6. 30. H. 8. tit.
Devise Br. 31. 2. Eliz. Dyer 177.
(6. Co. 16. 1. Ro. Abr. 328. Mo.
61. 62. 147. Cro. Cha. 382.)

*ITEM per tiel cus-tome home poit deviser per son testament, que ses executors poient aliener et vender ses tenements,
que il ad en fee simple, per certaine summe de money a distributer per son alme (2). En cest cas, coment que le devisor devie seisie de les tenements, et les tenements descendant a son heire; un-core les executors, a-pres le mort leur testator, poient vender les tenements issint a eux devises, et ouster l' heir, et ent faire seoff-ment alienation et estate per fait, ou sans fait, a eux, a queux le vend est fait.
Et issint pois veier icy un cas, ou home poit faire loial estate, et un-cor il navoit riens en*

ALSO by such cus-tome a man may devise by his testament, that his executors may alien and sell the tenements that he hath in fee simple, for a certaine sum, to distribute for his soule. In this case, though the devisor die seised of the tenements and the tenements descend unto his heire; yet the executors after the death of the testator may sell the tenements so devised them, and put out the heire, and thereof make a seoffment alienation and estate by deed, or without deed, to them to whom the sale is made. And so may ye here see a case, where a man may make a lawful estate,

But he omits explaining, whether they are so called, on account of their judicial opinions in the king's courts, of their opinions in parliament when advised with by the lords, or any extra-judicial opinions the king may be intitled to demand from them. As to the latter, they were not favoured by lord Coke, as appears by his behaviour in the great case of Commendams in the reign of James the first, when the king severely reprimanded the judges, for disobeying his mandate to postpone proceeding in a cause concerning the prerogative till they were consulted by him. Though lord Coke was deserted by the other judges, who asked pardon for having remonstrated against the king's command; and though the privy council decided, that the command was agreeable to law; yet lord Coke bluntly refused either to retract or apologize. See lord Coke's life in the Biograph. Britann. One thing much relied on by those, who justified the king's order, was the oath of the judges, which is printed in the statute book as a statute of Edward the third, and expressly requires them to counsel the king in his business. See 18. E. 3. stat. 4. But what is thus called a statute lord Coke denies to be one, and indeed very properly; for it has not the least resemblance of a statute, being simply the form of an oath. 3. Inst. 146. 224. However, it must be admitted, there are various instances of the king's consulting the judges and of their giving their opinions extra-judicially. Several of these instances are referred to in the reports of lord Fortescue, who endeavours to shew, that even in the case of ship-money the extra-judicial opinion first given was condemned, not because it was extra-judicial, but because it was grossly contrary to law. Fortesc. Rep. 386. 389. Rushw. vol. 3. Append. 212. Some instances of such consultations have happened since the Revolution, particularly some few years after in Sir John Fenwick's case, and in the reign of George the first, when it was made a question whether the education and marriage of the prince of Wales's children belonged to the king or to their father, and still more recently in the case of admiral Byng during the last reign. See Fortesc. Rep. 385. But however numerous and strong the precedents may be in favour of the king's extra-judicially consulting the judges on questions in which the crown is interested, it is a right to be understood with many exceptions, and such as ought to be exercised with great reserve; least the rigid impartiality, so essential to their judicial capacity should be violated. The anticipation of judicial opinions on causes actually depending should be particularly guarded against; and therefore a wise and upright judge will ever be cautious, how he extra-judicially answers questions of such a tendency. So far one may venture to qualify the right: because even the house of lords have declined taking the opinion of the judges for a reason of this sort, though their attendance on that assembly is confessedly for assisting the lords in matters of law. See Fortesc. Rep. 384. 385. But it would be a presumption in us, if we were to be more particular on a subject of so much delicacy, by attempting to mark the bounds to a right, the extent of which we do not find clearly ascertained by precedent or authority. See further on this subject Folt. 199. 241.—(7) The statutes of Edward the third cited by lord Coke in the margin require a parliament to be holden once every year; but it seems doubtful, whether they were meant to limit the duration of each parliament, or merely the intermission of holding parliaments. The 16. Cha. 2. c. 1. which directs, that the sitting of parliaments shall not be discontinued above three years, is certainly for the latter purpose, and therefore still continues in force, notwithstanding the modern statutes for making parliaments first triennial and afterwards septennial, these being for the former purpose. See 6. W. & M. c. 2. 1. Geo. 1. c. 38.—(8) See Pref. to Ruffhead's stat. 21.

(1) There is a great contrariety in the books, on the effect of two inconsistent devises in the same will. Some hold with lord Coke,

The title to this guardianship is in such of the infant's next of blood, as cannot have by descent the socage estate, in respect of which les tenements al and yet he hath naught temps del estate fait. in the tenements at Et le cause est, pur the time of the estate ceo que la custome et made. And the cause usage ad este tiel (1). is, for that the cu-Quia consuetudo, ex stome and usage is certa causa rationa- such. For a custome, bili usitata, privat used upon a certain recommunem legem. sonable cause, depriveth,

the common law.

then in that case the survivors could not sell the same, because the words of the testator could not be satisfied; and I myself knew this case adjudged. A speciall verdict was found, that A. was seised of certaine lands in fee, and devised the same in taile; and if the donee died without issue, that his said land should be sold by his sons in law; he in truth having five sons in law. One of his sons in law died in the life of the donee, and

(1. Co. 173.)
• Mill. 26. El. inter. Vincent & Lee in the King's Bench.
(Cro. Eliz. 26. 1. Leon. 285.
Mo. 147. 4. Co. 68. Cro. Cna.
382. 1. Rel. Ab. 328.)

after the donee dyed without issue, and then the sours of the sonnes in law sold the land, and it was adjudged that the sale was good; because they were named generally by his sonnes in law, and the lands could not be sold by them all, and the words of the will in a benigne interpretation are satisfied in the plural number, albeit that they had but a bare authority: but if they had bin particularly named, it had beene otherwise. But if a man deviseth lands to his executors to be sold, and maketh two executors, and the one dieth, yet the survivor may sell the land; because as the state, so the trust shall survive, and so note the diversity between a bare trust, and a trust coupled with an interest. In both those cases the executors may [a] sell part of the land at one time, and part at another, as they may finde purchasers.

39. Aff. p. 17. 4. Eliz. Dier 210.
23. El. 2. Dier 371. Pasch. 32.
Eliz. Ro. 1307. in Communi Banco, and so resolved in Vincent's case. (1. Sid. 6. Post 181.
b. 236. a. 315. b.)

In Littleton's case admit that one executor had refused to sell, then, as the law stood when Littleton wrote, it was cleare, that the others could not sell. But now by the statute [b] of 21 H. 8. it is provided, that where lands are willed to be sold by executors, that though part of them refuse, yet the residue may sell. And albeit the letter of the law extendeth only where executors have a power to sell, yet being a beneficiall law, it is by construction extended where lands are devised to executors to be sold. Yet in neither of those cases, albeit one refuse, can the other make sale to him that refused; because he is party and privy to the last will, and remains executor still. Mine advice to them that make such devises by wills, to make it as certaine as they can, as that the sale be made by his executors or the survivors or survivor of them, if his meaning be so, or by such or so many of them, as take upon them the probate of his will, or the like. And it is better to give them an authority then an estate; unlesse his meaning be they should take the profits of the lands in the meane time, and then it is necessary that he deviseth, that the meane profits till the sale shall be affets in their hands, for otherwise they shall not be so. But hereof thus much shall suffice (2).

[a] 1. Co. 173. in Digge's case.
[b] 21. H. 8. cap. 4.

Et ent faire feoffment. For albeit the executors in this case have no estate or interest in the land, but only a bare and naked power, yet this feoffment amounteth to an alienation, to vest the land in the feoffee, as it appeareth here, and the feoffee shall be in by the devisor.

(1. Leon. 60)
Tr. 27. H. 8. in the Common Place, Serjeant Bendic's Report.
(1. Rol. Abr. 329. 1. Leon. 87.
225.)

Per fait ou sauns fait. And therefore if by the custome a man deviseth, that a reversion or any other thing that lyeth in grant shall be sold by the executors, they may sell the same without deed (3); for the vendee shall be in by the devisor, and not by executors, as hath beene said.

49. E. 3. 16. 38. Aff. 3. 39. Aff.
17. 13. E. 3. Devise 3. 14. H.
8. 10. 15. H. 7. 12. b.
(9. Co. 77. a.)

Consuetudo ex certa causa rationabili usitata privat communem legem.

Quia consuetudo, contra rationem introducta, potius usurpatio, quam consuetudo, appellari debet. Consuetudo prescripta & legitima vincet legem.

Privat communem legem. For no custome or prescription can take away the force of an act of parliament (4); and therefore Littleton materially speaketh here of the common law.

19. H. 6. (1. Leon. 31.)

Sect. 170.

ET nota, que nul AND note, that no custome est a- custome is to bee lowable, mesque tiel allowed, but such cucustome, que ad este use stome, as hath bin used

Prescription. Pre- scription is a title taking his substance of use and time allowed by the law. Prescriptio est titulus ex usu & tempore substantiam capiens

(4. Co. Luttrell's case. 9 Co. 57.
2. Rol. Abr. 265. 266. 1. Sid.
161. 1. Rol. Abr. 560. 566. Cro.
Cha. 175.)

Coke that the second devise revokes the first. Plowd. 541. Others think, that both devises are void on account of the repugnancy. Ow. 84. But the opinion, supported by the greatest number of authorities, is, that the two devisees shall take in moieties. The authorities, for and against lord Coke's opinion, are well collected and arranged in a note in the English edition of Plowden. See page 541. — Also amongst those, who think, that both devises shall operate, there is some difference as to the manner, in which the two devisees ought to take. In some of the old books it is said generally, that there shall be a jointenancy. But according to the modern opinion, and, as it seems, the best, there will be a jointenancy or a tenancy in common, according to the words used in limiting the two estates; by which we presume it is meant, that, if the two estates given by the will have the unity or sameness of interest in point of quantity essential to a jointenancy, the devisees shall be joint-tenants, but otherwise shall be tenants in common. See 3. Atk. 493. — (2) The distribution here meant probably was giving money to the church to have masses for the testator's soul; a superstition very common in the time of Littleton, and than not inconsistent with any law. Afterwards indeed uses and trusts of land for such purposes were restrained by the 23. of Hen. 8. c. 11. commonly called the statute of superstitious uses, though not wholly, the statute allowing them if they were not appointed for more than twenty years, and without any limitation of time in the instance of cities and towns corporate having customs to devise in mortmain. But now we apprehend, that, independently of the statute of Henry the eighth, devises of this kind could not have effect: for either they would be void by the mortmain statutes, or, when not within the reach of any of them, would be deemed superstitious by our courts of equity; which would therefore direct the money to be applied to some use really charitable, at the court's discretion, or, should the determined cases not be thought strong enough to warrant the exercise of a discretion so large, would consider the devisee as a trustee for such as would be intitled if there was no devise. See the cases referred to in Vin. Abr. Charitable Uses D.

(1) &c. in L. and M. — (2) What my lord Coke advances in this and the preceding folio, about the effect of a will devising that executors shall sell land, is open to a variety of observation. — He first supposes, that such a devise passes no interest or estate to the executors, but merely a power or authority; and thence he infers, that, like common naked authorities, it will not survive. But these positions seem at least controvertible, having been expressly contradicted by decisions since lord Coke's time: and though both should be admitted to be true in point of law, they would not avail in a court of equity; as this jurisdiction, notwithstanding the extinction of the power at law, would compel it's execution in favour of those, for whose benefit the power was given. As to the power's not surviving for want of an interest, lord Coke himself, both here and in other places, concedes, that if one devise lands to be sold by his executors, an interest will pass. See post 181. b. 236. a. Now such a devise so resembles devising that executors shall sell the land, as to give the distinction made between them the appearance of too curious and overstrained a refinement; such as rather consists in the formal arrangement of words, than of any thing substantial. But the subtlety of the distinction is not the only objection to it; lord Hale, whilst he was chief baron of the exchequer, referring to a case, in which it was adjudged against the distinction. Hardr. 419. However it has been adopted in cases since the first publication of the Coke upon which the guardianship arises, by descent, without any distinction between the whole and half blood. If there are two or more

(4. Co. 36.)

(6. Co. 60. a. 65. b. 66.)
 12. E. 4. 1. 2. Mariae, Br. Prefec.
 100. 6 E. 6. Dyer 71. 14. Ed. 3.
 Bar. 277. 43. E. 3. 32. 7. H. 6.
 26. 22 H. 6. 14. 16. E. 2. tit.
 Prescript. 53. 45. Aff. 8. 40. Aff.
 27. 41. 21. E. 4. 53, 54.

(9. Co. 57.)

Bract. fo. 51, 52.

capiens ab autoritate legis. In the common law a prescription, which is personal, is for the most part applied to persons, being made in the name of a certain person and of his ancestors, or those whose estate he hath; or in bodies politique or corporate and their predecessors, for, as a naturall body is said to have ancestors, so a body politique or corporate is said to have predecessors. And a custome, which is locall, is alledged in no person, but layd within some mannor or other place.

As taking one example for many. I. S. seised of the mannor of D. in fee prescribeth thus: that I. S. his ancestors, and all those whose estate he hath in the sayd mannor, have time out of minde of man had and used to have common of pasture, &c. in such a place, &c. being the land of some other, &c. as pertaining to the sayd mannor. This properly we call a prescription. A custome is in this manner. A copyholder of the manor of D. doth plead, that within the same mannor, there is and hath been such a custome time out of mind of man used, that all the copyholders of the said mannor have had and used to have common of pasture, &c. in such a wast of the lord, parcell of the sayd mannor, &c. where the person neither doth or can prescribe, but alledgeth the custome within the mannor. But both to customes and prescriptions, these two things are incident inseparable, viz. possession or usage, and time. Possession must have three qualities, it must be long, continual and peaceable, longa, continua, & pacifica: for it is said, transferruntur dominia, sine titulo & traditione, per usucapionem, s. per longam, continuam, & pacificam possessionem. Longa. i. per spatium temporis per legem definitum, of which hereafter shall be spoken. Continuum dico, ita quod non sit legitime interrupta.

per title de prescription s. de temps dont memorie ne curt. Mes divers opinions ont este de temps dont memory, &c. & de title per prescription, que est tout un en ley. Car ascuns ont dit, que temps de memory serra dit de temps de limitation en un brieve de droit; scilicet de temps le roy R. le i. puis le conquest, come est done per le statute de Westminster 1. pur ceo que le brieve de droit est le plus haut brieve en sa nature, que poit estre, et per tiel brieve home poit recover son droit de la possession son auncestors de puis auncient temps, que home purroit per ascun brieve per le ley, &c. Et entant que il est done per le dit estatute, que en brieve de droit nul soit oye a demander de le seisin son auncestors de puis longe temps, que de temps le roy R. avantdit, issint ceo est prove, que continuance de possession, ou auters customes et usages uses puis le dit temps, est le title de prescription, &c. et loc certum est. Et auters

by title of prescription, that is to say, from time out of minde. But divers opinions have beene of time out of mind, &c. and of title of prescription, which is all one in the law. For some have said, that time out of mind should bee said from time of limitation in a writ of right; that is to say, from the time of king Richard the first after the Conquest, as is given by the statute of Westminster the first, for that a writ of right is the most highest writ in his nature, that may be. And by such a writ a man may recover his right of the possession of his ancestors, of the most ancient time, that any man may by any writ by the law, &c. And in so much that it is given by the said estatute, that in a writ of right none shall be heard to demand of the seisin of his ancestors of longer time, than of the time of King Richard aforesaid, therefore this is proved, that continuance of possession, or other customs and usages used after the same time is the title upon Littleton. Thus in the case of Hovel and Barnes in the 12th of Charles the first, though the judges held that such a power of selling given to two executors survived, yet they disavowed founding themselves on the will's passing an interest. See W. Jo. 352. and Cro. Cha. 381. Nay, even in a case of much later date, lord chancellor King acted, as if he deemed the distinction settled at law; for he directed the heir to join in a sale, in which his concurrence would otherwise have been unnecessary. See Yates and Compton 2. P. Wms. 308. In respect to the operation of such a devise, considered as a mere authority, the strict notion about naked powers is certainly with lord Coke; and some of the old books, besides those cited by him, very much favour it's application to the case of executors. Dy. 119. ed. 1688. the case in marg. and Mo. 61. But there are some respectable authorities the other way: for Perkins is of opinion, that the power of selling may be exercised by the surviving executor; and Brooke infers the same doctrine to be the point adjudged in a case of Edward the third; and further it was held accordingly, by three judges in the reign of Charles the first, on a reference to them out of chancery. Perkins sect. 550. Bro. Abr. Devise 50. and the case of Hovell and Barnes Cro. Cha. 381. W. Jo. 352. This latter opinion seems most likely to conform to the meaning of a will in cases of this sort; for it can scarce be imagined, that a testator, when he intrusts his executors with a power of selling land, should mean to have those, for whose benefit he directs the sale, disappointed by the death of one of the persons invested with an authority, which the survivor is equally capable of executing. Perhaps too it may be possible to justify the opinion, by proving a power of selling thus given to executors to be something more than the case of a naked power. Where a naked power is vested in two or more nominatim, without any reference to an office in it's nature liable to survivorship, as an executorship is, it without doubt would be a contradiction of the general rule to allow the power to survive. But where a power of selling is given to executors, or to persons nominatim in that character, it is not wholly irreconcilable with the rule to deem a surviving executor a person within the description; for by the death of one executor the whole character of executors becomes vested in the survivor, and the power being annexed to the executors ratione officii, and the office itself surviving, why should not the power annexed to it also survive, as well as where it survives by reason of being coupled with an interest? This manner of accounting for the opinion, that a power of selling annexed to an executorship may survive, is only a conjecture, hazarded for the sake of reconciling a particular case with a general rule; the reasons, which influenced those who adopted the opinion, not appearing in any book we have seen. However the conjecture is agreeable to the manner, in which lord Hale, in a manuscript

in equal degree, he, who first gains possession of the heir, shall have the custody of him; except where they happen to be brothers or sisters, or to be the infant's lineal ancestors, the law preferring the eldest in the former case, and the father or other male ancestor in the latter. But if the infant derives lands by descent both ex parte paternâ and ex parte maternâ, in which case it may be possible not to find any next of kin incapable of inheriting to the infant, the next of kin on either side, first seising the infant, is intitled to the custody of his person, and the custody of the lands coming ex parte paternâ goes to the maternal heir, and so vice versa, as to the lands coming ex parte maternâ. Should however the infant derive lands by descent in such a way, ont dit, que bien et verity est, que seisin et continuance puis le dit limitation (1) est un titre de prescription, come est avantdit, et per cause avantdit. Mes ils ont dit, que il y auxy un auter titre de prescription, que fuit a la common ley devant ascun estatute de limitation de brieve, &c. et ceo fuit lou un custome, ou un usage, ou auter chose, ad este use de temps dont memorie des homes ne curt a le contrarie. Et ils ont dit, que il est prove per le pleder, lou home voit pleder un titre de prescription de custome (2). Il dirra, que tiel custome ad este use, de tempore cujus contrarium memoria hominum non existit, etc. est autant a dire quant tiel matter est plede, que nul home adonque en vie ad oye ascun prooffe a le contrary, ne avoit ascun conusans a le contrary; et entant que tiel titre de prescription fuit a le common ley, et nient ouste per ascun estatute, ergo il demurt come il fuit a le common ley, et le plus tost, entant que la dit limitation de brieve de droit (3) est de cy long temps passe (4). Ideo of prescription, and this is certaine. And others have said, that well and truth it is, that seisin and continuance after the limitation &c. is a title of prescription, as is aforesaid; and by the cause aforesaid. But they have sayd, that there is also another title of prescription that was at the common law, before any estatute of limitation of writs, &c. and that it was, where a custome or usage, or other thing, hath beene used, for time whereof mind of man runneth not to the contrary. And they have said, that this is proved by the pleading, where a man will plead a title of prescription of custome. Hee shall say, that such custome hath beene used from time whereof the memory of men runneth not to the contrary, that is as much to say, when such a matter is pleaded, that no man then alive hath heard any prooffe of the contrary, nor hath no knowledge to the contrary; and insomuch, that such title of prescription was at the common law, and not put out by an estatute, ergo, it abideth as it was at the common law, and the rather, insomuch that the said limitation of a writ of right, is of so long time passed, Ideo quære de hoc. And pacificam dico, quia si contentiosa fuerit, idem erit quod prius, si contentio fuerit iusta. Ut si verus dominus statim cum intrusor vel disseisor ingressus fuerit seisinam, nitatur tales viribus repellere, et expellere, licet id, quod inciperit, perducere non possit ad effectum, dum tamen cum defecerit, diligens sit ad impetrandum & proseguendum. Longus usus, nec per vim, nec clam, nec precario, &c. Idem fol. 222. b.

If a man prescribeth 13. E. 4. 6. to have a rent, and likewise to take a distress for the same, it cannot bee avoyded by pleading, that the rent hath beene alwayes paid by cohercion, albeit it began by wrong.

Un titre de (Dr. & Stud. 16. 5. Co. 72.)

prescription. Seeing that prescription maketh a title, it is to be seene; first to what things a man may make a title by prescription without charter; and secondly, how it may be lost by interruption.

For the first, as to 21. H. 6. Prescrip. 44. 21. E. 4. such franchises and liberties as cannot be seized as forfeited, before the cause of forfeiture appeare of record, no man can make a title by prescription; because, that prescription being but an usage in pais, it cannot extend to such things as cannot bee seized, nor had, without matter of record; as to the goods and chatels of traitors, felons, felons of themselves, fugitives, of those that be put in exigent, deodands, conufance of pleas, to make a corporation, to have a sanctuary, to make a coroner manuscript note on a Coke upon Littleton we have been favoured with, is represented to have considered the power's surviving when given to two executors, as in the case of Lovel and Barnes. The words of the note are these. Hales chief baron says, it is so, because they were to sell by reason officii; yet the law stands, that authorities shall not survive; and perhaps it had been otherwise, if he had ordered his land to be sold by A. and B. not being named executors, and one of them had died, for that seems to be a personal trust. The conjecture also receives great countenance from some books, in which it is said, that such a power of selling given to executors shall pass to their executors and administrators; for if an authority, not being coupled with an interest, becomes transmissible in the way of succession in infinitum till executed, by reason of it's being given to executors, much more may it survive for a like reason. Kelw. 44. 2. Brownl. 194. If indeed the doctrine in the books we refer to is well founded, it will prove a power of selling land given to executors capable both of transmission and survivorship. But whether lord Coke's notion of the power's not surviving, or the opposite one, most conforms to strictness of law, is not now of any great importance; as such a power, though extinct at law, would certainly be enforced in equity. This has long been the practice of our courts of equity; these rightly deeming the purpose, for which the testator directs the money arising from the sale to be applied, to be the substantial part of the devise, and the persons named to execute the power of selling to be mere trustees; which brings the case within the general rule of equity, that a trust shall never fail of execution for want of a trustee, and that if one is wanting the court shall execute the office. The relief is administered by considering the land, in whatever person vested, as bound by the trust, and compelling the heir, or other person having the legal estate, to perform it. There are many printed precedents of thus executing not only powers actually extinct at law, or supposed to be so, but also such as, in point of law, either for want of the will's naming by whom they should be executed, or because those named have died before the testator, never could exist or take effect. Some of these precedents are as early as the reign of Charles the first. See Locton and Locton 2. Freem. 136. and 1. Cha. Caf. 179. Garfoot and Garfoot 1. Cha. Caf. 35. Gwilliam and Rowel Hardr. 204. Pit and Pelham 2. Freem. 134. 1. Cha. Rep. 283. and 1. Cha. Caf. 176. T. Jo. 25. 1. Lev. 304. See also Mar. of Eq. 37. and Vin. Abr. Devise Q. c. and S. c. Nor do the courts of equity appear ever to have confined this relief, as they certainly do many kinds of aid, to persons of particular and favoured descriptions, such as wife children or creditors; for though in some of the old cases, the persons relieved were of one or other of these descriptions, yet in others nearly of the same time the parties are

For the notes to this side of fol. 114. a. see 114. b. and for the remainder of the notes to 222. a. see 222. b.

way, as lets in both the paternal and maternal blood successively to the inheritance, but with a preference of the former, as where

(1. Ro. Abr. 270. 9. Co. 29. Post 195. a.) [e] 22. E. 3. Coron. 241. 9. H. 7. 11. 20. 18. H. 6. Prefec. 45. 11. H. 4. 10. 21. H. 7. 33. 9. E. 4. 12. 39. E. 3. 35. 46. E. 3. 16. 11. H. 6. 25. F. N. B. 91. 1. H. 7. 24. Stamf. Pl. Cor. 38. 44. E. 3. 4. 22. E. 4. 43. 44. 3. E. 3. Brook Prefec. 57. 44. Aff. pl.
(*) 8. H. 6. 16.
[f] 12. E. 4. 16. 32. H. 6. 25. 12. Eliz. Diet. 288, 289.

11. E. 3. tit. Issue 40.
(2. Ro. Abr. 271. 2. Inst. 19. Cro. Jam. 155, 156. 454.)
15. E. 3. tit. Judgment 133. 14. E. 3. ibid. 155.

(2. Ro. Abr. 271. 278.)

(*) Mich. 43. & 44. Eliz. in a prohibition between Nowell pl. and Hicks vicar of Edmonton defendant in the King's Bench.
(2. Co. Bishop of Winton's case. 6. Co. 69. 3. Co. 9. 2. Ro. Abr. 292.)

(Dr. & Stud. 17. a.)
[e] Bracton fol. 314.

(1. Ro. Abr. 685.)
[f] Regist. 158. Bract. fo. 373. 5. Aff. p. 2. 34. H. 6. 40.
[g] Stat. de Mert. 20. H. 3. ca. 8.
[h] Westl. 1. an. 3. E. 1. c. 8.
Vide W. 2. 13. E. 1. ca. 46.
[i] Mirror ca. 5. sect. 1.

ner, &c. to make conservators of the peace, &c. (1).

[e] But to treasure

trove, waifes, c-
straies, wrecke of sea, to hold pleas, courts of leets, hundreds, &c. infange thiefe, outfange thiefe, to have a parke, warren, royall fishes, as whales, sturgions, &c. Fayres, markets, franke foldage, the keeping of a gaole, tolle, a corporation by prescription, and the like, a man may make a title by usage and prescription onely without any matter of record. (*) Vide Sect. 310. where a man shall make a title to lands by prescription.

But it is to be observed, [f] that although a man cannot, as is aforesaid, prescribe in the said franchise to have bona & catalla proditorum, felonum, &c. yet may they and the like bee had obliquely or by a meane by prescription; for a county palatine may be claimed by prescription, and by reason thereof to have bona & catalla proditorum, felonum, &c.

As to the second, by what meanes a title by prescription, or custome, may be lost by interruption. It is to be knowne, that the title, being once gained by prescription or custome, cannot be lost by interruption of the possession for ten or twenty yeares, but by interruption in the right, as if a man have had a rent or common by prescription, unity of possession of as high and perdurable estate is an interruption in the right.

In a writ of mesne the plaintife made his title by prescription, that the defendant and his ancestors had acquited the plaintife and his ancestors, and the terre-tenant time out of minde, &c. the defendant tooke issue, that the defendant and his ancestors had not acquited the plaintife and his ancestors and the terre-tenant; and the jury gave a special verdict, that the grandfather of the plaintife was enfeoffed by one Agnes, and that Agnes and her ancestors were acquitted by the ancestors of the defendant time out of minde before that time, since which time no acquittal had beene; and it was adjudged and affirmed in a writ of error, that the plaintife should recover his acquittal, for that there was once a title by prescription vested, which cannot be taken away by a wrongfull cesser to acquite of late time, and albeit the verdict had found against the letter of the issue, yet for that the substance of the issue was found viz. a sufficient title by prescription, it was adjudged both by the court of Common Pleas, and in the writ of error by the court of King's Bench for the plaintife, which is worthy of observation.

a modus decimandi was alledged (*) by prescription time out of minde for tithes of lambes; and thereupon issue joyned; and the jury found, that before twenty yeares then last past there was such a prescription, and that for these twenty yeares he had paid tithes in specie, and it was objected, first that the issue was found against the plaintife, for that the prescription was generall for all the time of prescription, and twenty yeares faile thereof. 2. That the party by payment of tithes in specie had waived the prescription or custome. But it was adjudged for the plaintife in the prohibition; for albeit the modus decimandi had not bin paid by the space of twenty yeares, yet, the prescription being found, the substance of the issue is found for the plaintife. And if a man hath a common by prescription, and taketh a lease of the land for twenty yeares, whereby the common is suspended, after the yeares ended he may claime the common generally by prescription; for that the suspension was but to the possession, and not to the right, and the inheritance of the common did alwayes remaine, and when a prescription or custome doth make a title of inheritance (as Littleton speaketh) the partie cannot alter or waive the same in pais (2).

Temps dont memory, &c. & de title per prescription, que est tout un en ley. So as the time prescribed or defined by law is, time, whereof there is no memorie of man to the contrary. [e] Omnis querela, & omnis actio injuriarum, limitata infra certa tempora.

Temps de limitation. Limitation, as it is taken in law, is a certaine time prescribed by statute, within the which the demandant in the action must prove himselfe or some of his ancestors to be seised.

Enbrieve de droit. In [f] ancient time the limitation in a writ of right was from the time of H. 1. whereof it was said à tempore regis Henrici senioris. After that by the statute of [g] Merton the limitation was from the time of H. 2. and by the statute [h] of W. 1. the limitation was from the time of R. 1. And this is that limitation, that Littleton here speaketh of. Whereof in the Mirror in reproofe of the law it is thus said, [i] Abusio est de counter cylonge temps, dont nul ne poet tesmoigner de vier & de oyer, que ne dure my generalment ouster 40 ann. Time are not stated to have fallen within either of them, and we have not heard of any case, in which relief has been refused on that account. See Lofton and Lofton already cited, and the case of Tenant and Browne cited in 1. Cha. Caf. 180. The reason of not favouring particular persons in this instance will appear evident, when it is considered, that testamentary powers to sell are deemed to be in the nature of trusts, and trusts are executed in equity for all persons indiscriminately. +

(1) See an observation on this doctrine against prescribing to make conservators of the peace, in 2. Hawk. Pl. C. b. 2. c. 8. f. 10 — (2) It is observable, that Mr. Serjeant Rolle has incorporated most of the preceding passages relative to prescription into his abridgment. See Ro. Abr. tit. Prescription and the additional matter in Vin. Abr. same title R. — S. — T.

Notes to 114. a.

(1) &c. in L. & M. and Roh. — (2) &c. in L. & M. and Roh. — (3) &c. in L. & M. and Roh. — (4) &c. in L. & M. and Roh.

Continuation of notes to 111. b. from fol. 112. a.

(2) See note 1. — (3) But a statute, made since lord Coke's time, requires a number of forms, besides writing, in a will of lands or tenements devisable by the statute of wills; for by the statute against frauds and perjuries a will of such property is void, unless it is signed by the testator, or by some person for him in his presence and by his direction, and is also attested and subscribed in his presence by three witnesses. See 29. Ch. 2. c. 3. Also by the last mentioned statute the same forms are required, as well in devises by custom as in those of estates pur autre vie. But these regulations do not extend to copyhold estates and terms for years; the statute of frauds and perjuries, so far as it regulates devises of land, being expressly confined to the three former kinds of devises. As to copyholds, a devise of them operates only as a declaration of uses on the surrender to the use of the will; and therefore if the form required by the surrender, which is usually nothing more than a testamentary declaration in writing, is observed, it is sufficient without any witness; and even a nuncupative will of copyholds was an effectual declaration of the uses, where the surrender was silent as to the form, till the 29. of Cha. 2. required all declarations of trusts to be in writing. See 2. Atk. 37. and Barnad. Ch. Rep. 9. In respect to terms for years, they, falling within the description of personal estate, are deviseable by will accordingly. But this must be understood with some distinction. Thus if they are terms, not in gross, but vested in trustees to attend the inheritance, they so follow the nature of the latter, that if the owner devises the land generally by a will not so attested as to pass the inheritance, not even the trust of the term will pass. See 2. P. Wms. 236. Also as to terms in gross, though a testator being possessed of such may transmit them by the same unsolemn kind of will as other personalty, yet he cannot create them by will, without observing all the forms essential to a devise of real estate; because where the infant derives lands by descent from a brother who was the first purchaser, and there is no next of kin but such as may inherit from the infant, it seems unsettled, who should have the guardianship. — If the person intitled to be guardian in socage is himself under custody of a guardian, the latter is intitled to the custody of both; to the former in his own right, and to the latter pur cause de ward, that is, in right of his wardship of the former. — Being wholly for the infant's benefit, and not in any respect for the guardian's profit, it is not a subject either of alienation for forfeiture or succession, as wardship in chivalry was; and consequently if the guardian in socage becomes incapable or dies, the wardship devolves upon the person next in degree of kindred to the infant.

+ For the remainder of the notes to 113. a. see 116. b.

Time of limitation is twofold, first, in writs, and that is by divers acts of parliament; secondly to make a title to any inheritance, and that (as Littleton here saith) is by the common law.

Limitation of times in writs are provided by the said statute of Merton (1), and after by the said statute of W. 1. which Littleton here citeth, and which was in force when he wrote, but is since altered by a profitable and necessary statute [k] made anno 32. H. 8. and by that act, the former limitation of time in a writ of right is changed and reduced to threescore yeares next before the teste of the writ, and so of other actions, as by the statute at large appeareth. But it is to be observed, that this act of 32. H. 8. extendeth [l] not to a formedon in the descender (2); [l] Mich. 10. & 11. Eliz. Dyer 278. Fitzwilliam's case. nor to the services of escheage homage and fealty (3), for a man may live above the time limited by the act. Neither doth it extend to any other service, which by common possibility may not happen or become due within sixty yeares, as to cover the hall of the lord, or to attend on his lord when he goeth to warre or the like; nor where the seisin is not traversable or issuable (4). Neither doth it extend to a rent created by deed (5), nor to a rent reserved upon any particular estate; for [m] in the one case the deed is the title, and in the other the reservation; nor to [m] 8 Co. 65. Sir Wil. Foster's case. any writ of right of advowson, quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment (for there was a parson of one of my churches that had been incumbent there above fifty yeares, and dyed but lately) or any writ of right of ward, or ravishment of ward, &c. but they are left as they were before the statute of 32. H. 8 (6). But hereof thus much for the better understanding of Littleton shall suffice (7). 1. Mar. Parliam. 2. cap. 5. Vide 17. E. 3. 11. Pl. Com. 371. b.

De temps le roy R. 1. And that was intended from the first day of his raigne; for (from the time) being indefinitely, doth include the whole time of his raigne, which is to be observed. Vide 34. H. 6. 36.

Briefe de droit. Breve de recto, a writ of right, so called, for that the words in the writ of right are, quod sine dilacione plenum rectum teneas.

Title de prescription al common ley, &c. de temps dont memorie des homes ne curge al contrarie. Docere oportet longum tempus, & longum usum illum, viz. qui excedit memoriam hominum; tale enim tempus sufficit pro jure. Braet. lib. 4. fol. 230. Fleta lib. 4. cap. 24. (5. Co. 72. Dr. & Stud. 16. b.)

Ascun prooffe al contraire. For if there be any sufficient prooffe of record or writing to the contrary, albeit it exceed the memory, or proper knowledge of any man living, yet is it within the memory of man: for memory or knowledge is twofold. First, by knowledge by prooffe, as by record or sufficient matter of writing. secondly, by his owne proper knowledge. A record or sufficient matter in writing are good memorialls; for litera scripta manet. And therefore it is said, when we will by any record or writing commit the memory of any thing to posterity, it is said tradere memorie. And this is the reason, that regularly a man cannot prescribe or alledge a custome against a statute; because that is matter of record, and is the highest prooffe and matter of record in law. But yet a man may prescribe against an act of parliament, when his prescription or custome is saved or preserved by another act of parliament. (8. Co. 121.) 28. Aff. 25. 38. Aff. 18. 45. E. 3. 26. 5. H. 7. 10. 8. H. 7. 7. 11. H. 7. 21. Dyer 23. Eliz. 273.

There is also a diversity betweene an act of parliament in the negative and in the affirmative; for an affirmative act doth not take away a custome (8); as the statutes of wills of 32. and 34. H. 8. doe not take away a custome to devise lands, as it hath beene often adjudged. Moreover, there is a diversity betweene statutes that be in the negative; for if a statute in the negative be declarative of the ancient law, that is in affirmance of the common law, there aswell as a man may prescribe or alledge a custome against the common law, so a man may doe against such a statute; for as our author saith, consuetudo, &c. privat communem legem (9). As the statute of Magna Charta provideth, that no leet shall be holden but twice in the yeare (10), yet a man may prescribe to hold it oftener, and at other times (11); for that the statute [n] was but in affirmance of the common law (12). (2. Ro. Abr. 266. 4. Inff. 274. 298. 303. 2. Inff. 20. 11. Co. 63. 12. Co. 22. Plow. 207. Cro. Jam. 313. 2. Rol. Abr. 266.)

So the statute [o] of 34. E. 1. (13) provideth, that none shall cut downe any trees of his owne within a forest without the view of the forrester: but inasmuch as this act is in affirmance of the common law (14), a man may prescribe to cut downe his woods within a forest without the view of the forrester (15). And so was it adjudged in 16 Eliz. in the exchequer by Sir Edward Sanders chiefe baron, and other the barons of the exchequer, as Sir John Popham chiefe justice of the King's Bench reported to me. [n] 6. H. 7. 2. 8. H. 4. 34. 12. H. 7. 18. 31. H. 6. Lect 11. 18. H. 6. 13. [o] 34. E. 1. tit. Forest. Rast. 1. E. 3. cap. 2. (Doc. Plac. 342. 2. Rol. Abr. 266. Ante 2. Post. 165. b. 233. a. Cro. Jam. 155. Dr. & Stud. 164.)

In the cire of the forest of Pickering, before Willoughby Hungerford and Hanbury justices itinerants there, anno 8. E. 3. I reade [p] a claime made by Henry de Percy, lord of the mannor of Semor within the said forest. The forestors, verderours, and regarders found his claime to be true, viz. Quod predictus Henricus de Percy, & omnes antecessores sui tenentes manerium

because the interest, in right of which the testator creates the term, is real estate, and creating the term is a partial devise of it. Besides appointing new forms of executing wills of real estate, the 29. of Cha. 2. prescribes how devises shall be revoked.—(3) See note 1.—(4) Whilst the power of devising depended wholly on the statutes of Henry the eighth, it was frequently of importance to resort to the custome of devising, as being most beneficial for the devisee. The power by custome might be larger than the statutory power; the former sometimes enabling to devise the whole, where the latter could only be exercised over two parts. 2. Sid. 153. There was also an essential difference between the two powers in the mode of execution; for a will in writing was conceived to be necessary to a devise under the statutes, but a nuncupative will might be sufficient under the custome. 2. Sid. 154. But these differences do not now subsist any longer. As on the one hand the 12. of Cha. 2. by communicating to all freehold lands the qualities of the tenure by common socage, has rendered the power of devising the whole under the statutes of Henry the eighth universal: so on the other hand the 29. of Cha. 2. against frauds and perjuries requires the same solemnities of writing, signing, and attestation to a devise by custome, as to one under the statutes. See ante fol. 111. b. note 1. and 111. a. note 3. The two powers of devising being thus assimilated, and made for the most part commensurate, it can seldom happen, that it should be necessary to call the power by custome in aid; though it is possible, as where the custome enables an infant of fourteen or a feme covert, neither of which is capable of devising under the statutes. As to the infant, see 37. Hen. 6. 5. Perk. sect. 504. 2. And. 12. 5. Co. 84. and as to the feme-covert 5. Com. Dig. 14. where it is said, that by the custome of London the may devise to her husband, but without citing any authority.—(5) Adjudged acc. in Mytton and Lutwich W. Jo. 7.

(1) See cap. 39. and lord Coke's Commentary upon it in 2. Inff. 238.—(2) The statute mentions formedons in remainder and reverter, and limits them to fifty yeares; but omits formedon in descender. Nor is the latter deemed to be comprehended within the clause of the statute relative to writs of right: for a formedon is not in the strict sense a writ of right; though it certainly is in the nature of one, the mere right being equally triable in both. Accordingly, in the case cited by lord Coke from Dyer, three judges held, that a formedon in descender was not within the statute. The other judge doubted. See also the additional case infant, not being inheritable to him. Fitzherbert indeed in his Natura Brevium cites two cases of Edward the third; in which guardian in socage granted the wardship to a stranger, and the grant was awarded good. F. N. B. 143. P. The same author too in his abridgment gives another case of the same reign, according to which a lease of guardianship in socage was pleaded. Fitzh. Abr. Garde 161. But possibly these cases import, only that a guardian in socage may place the body of the infant under the custody of another, and that such placing will be a good answer to an action for ravishment of the ward; not that the guardianship itself

(8. Co. 136. Cro. Jam. 155.)

manerium prædictum, à tempore quo non extat memoria, & sine interruptione aliquali, tenuerunt prædictum manerium cum pertinentiis extra regardum forestæ, & habuerunt woodwardum portantem arcum & sagittas ad præsentandum præsentanda de venatione tantum, &c. & habuerunt in boscu suis de Semere forgeas & mineras, & amputarunt, dederunt, & vendiderunt boscu suum infra manerium prædictum, sine visu forestariorum pro voluntate sua, & fugarunt & ceperunt vulpes, lepores, capriolos, &c. sicut idem Henricus Percy superius clamat. Which claime by prescription, and found as is aforesaid, the justices doubted onely of two points. The first, forasmuch as the said manor was within the limits of the forest, it should not onely be contra assisam forestæ, for his woodward to beare bow and arrowes, where by law he ought to beare but an hatchet, and no bow nor arrowes within the forest, but also de facili cedere possit in destructionem ferarum, &c. and therefore doubted whether it might bee claimed by prescription. Their second doubt was concerning fugationem, & captionem capriolorum in boscu suis prædictis, eo quod est bestia venationis forestæ; & transgressores inde convicti finem facerent ut pro transgressionem venationis: and for that difficulty, the claime was adjourned into the King's Bench. But of the other parts of the prescription no doubt at all was made; and the like had been allowed in the same eyre, as in the case of Thomas lord Wake of Lydell, and of Gilbert of Acton, in the same eyre, Rot. 37. and of others.

(Post 126. a. 283. a. ante 17. a. 10. Co. 88. 1. Sid. 336.)

Il est prove per le pleader. Note one of the best arguments or proofes in law is drawne from the right entries or course of pleading; for the law it selfe speaketh by good pleading, and therefore Littleton here saith, it is proved by the pleading, &c. as if pleading were ipsum legis viva vox.

Entant que tiel title per prescription fuit al common ley, &c. Note all the prescriptions, that were limited from a certaine time, were by act of parliament, as from the time of H. 1. which was the first time of limitation set downe by any act of parliament, and so from the raigne of R. 1. &c. But this prescription of time out of memory of man was (as Littleton here saith) at the common law, and limited to no time. Also here is implied a maxime of the law, viz. that whatsoever was at the common law, and is not ousted or taken away by any statute remaineth still.

(Ante 110. b. Post 344. a.)

Common ley. The law of England is divided, as hath beene said before, into three parts; the common law, which is the most generall and ancient law of the realme; of part whereof Littleton wrote; 2. Statutes or acts of parliament; and 3. Particular customes (whereof Littleton also maketh some mention.) I say particular, for if it be the generall custome of the realme, it is part of the common law.

(Pref. to 8th. Co.)

The common law hath no controller in any part of it, but the high court of parliament; and if it be not abrogated or altered by parliament, it remaines still, as Littleton here saith. The common law appeareth in the statute of Magna Charta and other ancient statutes (which for the most part are affirmations of the common law) in the originall writs, in judicall records, and in our bookes of termes and yeares. Acts of parliament appeare in the rolls of parliament, and for the most part are in print. Particular customes are to be proved.

Sect. 171.

(2. Inst. 669.)

Ville. Villa quasi ve- hilla, quod in eam con-uebantur fructus. And it is called viens, because it is pro- pe viam. Villa est ex pluribus mansionibus vicinata, & collata ex pluribus vicinis. If a town be decayed so as no houses re-maine, yet it is a towne in law. And so if a borough be decayed, yet shall it send burgesses to the parliament, as old Salisbury and others doe. It cannot be a towne in law, unlesse it hath, or in time past hath had, a church and celebration of divine service, sacraments and burials. What alteration hath beene made in townes, heare what a great lawyer saith. In Anglia nullula tam parva inveniri non poterit, in qua non est miles, armiger, vel paterfamilias, &c. magnis ditatus possessionibus, nec non liberi tenentes alii & valescent plurimis suis patrimoniis sufficientes, &c. And it appeareth by Littleton, that a towne is the genus, and a borough is the species; for hee saith that every borough is a towne, but every towne is not a borough. Et sub appellatione villarum continentur burgi & civitates.

Vid Linwood verbo Vicus. Bract.
lib. 5. fol. 434. & lib. 4. fol. 211.
Fortescue cap. 29. 7. E. 6. Fines levie de terre. Br. 91.

34. E. 1. Quare imp. 187.

Fortescue cap. 29.

Fortescue cap. 24.

ITEM, chescun ALSO, every bo-burgh est un ville, mes nemy è con-verso. Plus serra dit de custome en le tenure
de villenage. rough is a towne,
but not è converso.
More shall bee sayd of custome in the tenure of villenage.

case in the margin of Dy. ed. 1688. fol. 278. a. But as the 21. Jam. 1. c. 16. requires formedons of every kind to be brought within twenty years after the descent of the title, this defect of the former statute is now of no consequence.—(3) Acc. 3. Lev. 21.—(4) The reason is plainly this. The limitation in the 32d. of Henry the eighth is wholly referable to seisin; the statute requiring a seisin within a certain time according to the nature of the writ; that is, sixty years for writs of right, fifty for possessory writs founded on an ancestor's possession, thirty for possessory writs founded on the party's own possession, and so on. Now the limitation being thus dated from a seisin, it would be absurd to extend the statute to actions, in which seisin, not being issuable, can never become the subject of evidence or trial.—(5) This was the point adjudged in Sir William Foster's case cited by lord Coke in the margin; and there is a much earlier adjudication to the same effect in Moore. See Mo. 31. The reason of this exemption of rents created by deed out of the statute is of the same kind as is explained in note 4; the statute pointing at rents, to which the title is by seisin. But according to Sir William Jones, such exemption should be understood with this qualification; that the certainty of the rent should appear in the deed: because otherwise the quantum or quality of the rent is no more ascertained by the deed, than if there was not one existing. Therefore if the rent is created by reference to something out of the deed, as by reserving such rent as the person reserving pays over without expressing what that is, and the latter rent not having commenced by deed is one, of which seisin is the proper proof; in such a case, seisin, as Sir William Jones thought, is equally requisite to both rents, and consequently both ought equally to be deemed within the limitation of the 31. of Hen. 8. See W. Jo. 238.—(6) It was doubtful whether the several writs, here mentioned in respect to advowsons and wardship, were not within the statute of Henry the eighth; and to remove this doubt a statute of Mary cited by lord Coke was made, declaring, that the former statute should not extend to them. The reasons of that statute are fully explained in Plowden. See fol. 371. But so far as regards advowsons, this statute of Mary is no longer of any use: it being enacted by the 7th. of Anne, c. 18. that no usurpation shall displace the estate of the patron, and that he may present on the next avoidance, as if there had not been any usurpation; which provision in effect takes away all limitation of suits about the right of patronage. See 3. Blackit. Comm. 5th. ed. 250.

For the continuation of the notes to 115. a. see 116. a.

itself may be transferred by bargain and sale. However should these ancient authorities not bear the former construction, they seem sufficiently answered by the doctrine and practice of later times; for in them, the acknowledged qualities of guardianship in socage being, that it is a personal trust wholly for the infant's benefit, and neither transmissible by succession nor devisable, are not consistent with its being assignable; and we have lord chief justice Vaughan's authority for saying, that even in his time common experience proved the contrary. See Plow. 293. Vaug. 181. See too Post 90. b. note 1.—It extends not only to the person and socage estates of Berevica, or berewit, in Domesday signifieth a towne. He berevica pertinent ad Berchley. Domesday. Glouc.

(Et sic recitat plus quam viginti villas.)
There be in England and Wales eight thousand, eight hundred and three townes, or thereabouts.
See more of villis, parochiis, & hamlettis, in the ancient authors of the law, and plentifully in our other bookes. But let us now heare what Littleton saith (1).

Bract. ubi sup. Flet. li. 4. c. 15.
& lib. 6. ca. 49. Brit. fo. 124. & 274. &c.

CHAP. II.

Villenage.

Sect. 172.

TENURE en villenage est plus properment, quant un villain tient de son seignior, a que il est villain, certaine terres ou tenements solongue le custome del manor au auterment a la volunt son seignior, & de faire a son seignior villain service; come de porter & de carier le fme le seignior hors del city ou del manor (1) son seignior, jesques a le terre son seignior, en gisant ceo (2) sur le terre, & hujusmodi. Et ascuns franke homes teignent lour tenements, solongue le custome del certaine manors, per tiels services. Et lour tenure auxy est appel tenure en villenage, et uncore ils ne sont pas villeines; car nul terre tenu en villenage, ou villeine terre, ne ascun custome surdant de la terre, ne unques ferra

TENURE in villenage is most properly, when a villeine holdeth of his lord, to whom he is a villeine, certaine lands or tenements according to the custome of the manor, or otherwise at the will of his lord, and to doe to his lord villeine service; as to carry and recarry the dung of his lord out of the city, or out of his lord's manor, unto the land of his lord, and to spread the same upon the land, and such like. And some free men hold their tenements, according to the custome of certaine manors, by such services. And their tenure also is called tenure in villenage, and yet they are not villeines; for no land holden in villenage or villein land, nor any custome arising out of the land, shall ever make a free man villeine. But a

TENURE en villenage. Villeine is the French word villaine, and that a villa, quia villa adscriptus est; for they, which are now called villani, of ancient times were called adscriptitii. And in the common law he is called nativus; quia pro maiore parte natus est servus: and this is hee which the civilians call servus. [a] Thryn in the Saxon tongue is liber, and then servus. Theme (sometimes written theame corruptly) is an old Saxon word, and signifieth potestatem habendi in nativos sive villanos, cum eorum sequelis, terris, bonis et catallis. But teame sometime corruptly written theam is of another signification; for it is also an old Saxon word, [b] and signifieth, where a man cannot produce his warrant of that which hee bought according to his voucher.

Lib. Rub. 76. & 77. Glanv. li. 5. ca. 1. & 2. &c. Vide Bract. li. 1. ca. 6. &c. Brit. fo. 77. & 67. 82. 97. 98. 125. 126. 147. Flet. li. 1. c. 3. Flet. li. 2. cap. 44. Idem li. 4. cap. 11. & 12. Mir. ca. 2. sect. 18. Ockam.

(F. N. B. 77. a.)
[a] Flet. li. 1. ca. 24.

[b] Vide Lamb. inter leges Sancti Edw. fo. 132. nu. 25.

Villenage. Villenagium, (as in like cases hath beene sayd where the termination is in age;) is the service of a bondman. And yet a free man may doe the service of him, that is bond. And therefore a tenure in villenage is twofold; one, where the person of the tenant is bond, and the tenure servile; the other, where the person is free, and the tenure servile. [c] Servus terra, liberos de sanguine existentes, villanos facere non potest. And therefore it is said, [d] est enim ratio et regula generalis in istis duobus casibus, quod liber homo nihil libertatis propter perso-

(F. N. B. 12. 2. Rol. Abr.

[c] Servus terra, liberos de sanguine existentes, villanos facere non potest. [d] Bract. li. 4. fo. 170.

(1) We do not observe, that there is any thing in the statute of Charles the second for taking away military tenures, which in the least varies the tenure by burgage. For further information about burgage and boroughs, See Brad. on Bor. Mad. Firm. Burg. Squire's Anglo-Sax. Gov. 1st. ed. tit. Boroughs in the index, and Wright's Ten. 205.—(2) In L. and M. and Rob. the words are del cite (which seems used in the same sense as scite) del maner.—(3) Instead of en gisant ceo, the words in L. and M. and Rob. are gisant coarrette & de spreader le fyne le signour.

Continuation of notes to 115. a. from 115. b.

(7) See further as to the statute of 32. Hen. 8. Brooke's reading upon it. Since the 32. of Hen. 8. there have been various statutes for limitation of the time for bringing actions; of which the principal and general one is the 21. of Jam. c. 16. See tit. Temps in Com. Dig. and tit. Limitation in the other abridgments.—(8) This rule about affirmative statutes is very common in the books. See the references in the margin of Plowd. Engl. ed. 112. In another place lord Coke lays down a like rule as to their not taking away the common law, but with more particularity; for his words are, that a statute made in the affirmative without any negative expressed or implied, doth not take away the common law. 2. Inst. 200. This seems to be the justest way of stating the rule both as to common law and customs. See further Plowd. 113. and the references in the margin of Engl. edit. Hatt. on Stat. 83. 4. Com. Dig. 339. 432. Elmes's case 1. And. 71. and Dy. 373. pl. 13. and Jones and Smith 2. Bullst. 36.—(9) This appears to be a good rule; for if a statute is merely declaratory of the common law, the latter should be construed as it was before the recognition by parliament; and consequently its operation should not be extended to the destruction of prescriptions and customs, which were before allowable. As to the use of negative words in such a case, they may either arise from the subject, or be a mode of expressing what the common law is; in either of which cases, there cannot be any colour of reason for giving more effect to negative than belongs to affirmative words. In short to say, that a statute merely declaratory of the common law, being expressed in negative words, shall operate on subjects to which the common law is not applicable, seems to be a direct contradiction; for how can a statute be merely declaratory, if it is in any degree introductive of a new law? However there are books, in which lord Coke's distinction, in respect to negative statutes declaratory of the common law, is denied. See W. Jo. 270, 271, 289. If those, who oppose his of the infant; but also to his hereditaments not lying in tenure; and even to his copyhold estates unless there is a special custom for the lord's appointing a guardian of them. Ante 87. b. and Eggleton's case, 1. Ro. Abr. 40. See also Hutt. 17. and 2. Lutw. 1181. But whether the guardian in focage is intitled to take into his custody the infant's personal estate, we have not yet been able to ascertain by any express authority. However we are inclined to think, that personality is included, except where by the custom of a particular place it happens to be liable to a different custody; our idea being, that the custody of the infant's person draws

[e] Idem. lib. 1. ca. 6. Brit. c. 31. & 66. Flet. li. 1. ca. 3.

[f] Brañ. fol. 26. 43. E. 3. 5. acc.

[g] Brañ. li. 4. fo. 208. Brit. ca. 31.

[h] Brañ. li. 1. fo. 7.

[i] Fortesc. ca. 42.

[k] Brit. ca. 31.

[l] Brañ. li. 1. ca. 6. Flet. li. 1. ca. 3. & ca. 5. Mir. cap. 2. sect. 18.

[F. N. B. 77. f.]
Brañ. li. 1. cap. 6. Britton ca. 31.
& ubi supr. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 2. & 3.
[m] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18.

[n] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18. Genes. 9. vers. 10, 11. &c.

Ambrose.

personam suam liberam confert villenagio; nec liberum tenementum e contrario mutat statum aut conditionem villani.

And againe, [e] villenagium vel servitium nihil detrahit libertati; habita tamen distinctione, utrum tales sint villani, & teneant in villano socagio de dominico domini regis. And againe, [f] Tenementum non mutat statum liberi non magis quam servi; poterit enim liber homo tenere purum villenagium, faciendo quicquid ad villanum pertinebit, & nihilominus liber erit, cum hoc faciat ratione villenagii, & non ratione personæ suæ: & ideo poterit, quando voluerit, villenagium deferere, & liber discedere, nisi illaqueatus sit per uxorem nativam ad hoc faciendum, ad quam ingressus fuit in villenagium, & quæ præstare poterit impedimentum, &c. And againe, [g] Purum villenagium est, à quo præstatur servitium incertum & indeterminatum, ubi scire non poterit vespere, quale servitium fieri debet mane, viz. ubi quis facere tenetur, quicquid ei præceptum fuerit. And another faith to the same intent, [h] Fuerunt in conquestu liberi homines, qui libere tenebant tenementa sua per libera servitia, vel per liberas consuetudines; & cum per potentiores ejusdem essent, postmodum reversi receperunt eadem tenementa sua tenenda in villenagio, faciendo inde opera servitia, sed certa et nominata, &c. & nihilominus liberi, quia, licet faciunt opera servitia, cum non faciunt ea ratione personarum, sed ratione tenementorum, &c.

How villenage or servitude began, and for what cause, it is said, [i] Ab homine & pro vicio introducta est servitus, sed libertas à Deo hominis est indita natura, quare ipsa ab homine sublata semper redire gliscit, ut facit omne, quod libertati naturali privatur. And another faith, [k] that the condition of villeines, from freedom unto bondage, of ancient time grew by constitutions of nations. [l] Fiant etiam servi liberi homines captivitate de jure gentium; and not by the law of nature, as from the time of Noah's flood forward, in which time all things were common to all, and free to all men alike, and lived under the law naturall, and by multiplication of people, and making proper and private those things that were common, arose battels. And then it was ordained by constitution of nations, that none should kill another; but that he, that was taken in battell, should remain bond to his taker for ever, and to doe with him, and all that should come of him, his will and pleasure, as with his beast, or any other chattell, to give, or to sell, or to kill: and after it was ordained for the cruelty of some lords, that none should kill them, and that the life and members of them, as well as of free men, were in the hands and protection of kings, and that he that killed his villeine, should have the same judgment as if he had killed a freeman. Thereupon they were called servi, quia servabantur à dominis & non occidebantur, & non à serviendo. He is called natus à nascendo, quia plerumque natus est servus; and he is called villanus, for that he doth his villeine service in villis.

Est autem libertas naturalis facultas ejus, quod cuique facere libet, nisi quod de jure, aut vi prohibetur. Servitus est constitutio de jure gentium, qua quis domino alicui contra naturam subijcitur. And againe, [m] Et tout soyt que tous creatures dussent estre franks selonque le ley de nature, per constitution nequidant, & fait de homes sont auters creatures enservies, sicome est dit beafts en parkes, pissons en servors, & oyseaux en cages.

[n] This is assured, that bondage or servitude was first inflicted for dishonouring of parents; for Cham the father of Canaan (of whom issued the Canaanites) seeing the nakednes of his father Noah, and shewing it in derision to his brethren, was therefore punished in his sonne Canaan, with bondage. And herewith agreeth the divine. Ante vini inventionem inconculsa libertas. Non esset hodie servitus, si ebrietas non fuisset.

Hors del citie ou del mannor, &c. This is false printed, for the original his opinion, had meant only to say, that in the instances, by which he illustrates his rule, the negative words of the statutes not only import something more than a declaration of the common law, but were also intended to annihilate all particular customs clashing with it; or that on other accounts the instances were not apt, there might possibly be some colour for their dissenting from lord Coke. But what is professed to be controverted is the distinction itself; which, as we understand it, seems to be perfectly unexceptionable.—(10) It is observable, that Magna Charta distinguishes between tourns or the leets of sheriffs and the view of frank-pledge; limiting the former to twice a year and the latter to once. In the more ordinary sense frank-pledge and leet are synonymous; as appears from the style of tourns and other leets, which in court rolls are usually denominated curia or visus franci plegii. But when free-pledge is used, as in Magna Charta, it should be understood in a strict and particular sense; according to which it meant only that part of the business of a court leet, which related to the taking of sureties or free pledges for every person within the jurisdiction; a practice, which had fallen into disuse long before lord Coke's time. See 8.H.7.4. and 2.Inst. 72. (11) Adjudged acc. 2. Leon. 28. But it may be doubted, whether the prescription for holding a leet oftener than twice a year, when examined into, will appear a fit example to prove the rule, that negative statutes in affirmance of the common law may be prescribed against. The only words of Magna Charta, which relate to the holding of tourns or leets are these. Nec aliquis vicecomes, vel ballivus, faciat turnum suum per hundredum, nisi bis in anno; & non nisi in loco consueto, videlicet semel post Pascha et iterum post festum Sancti Michaelis; & visus de franco plegio tunc fiat ad illud terminum sancti Michaelis sine occasione. See Blackitt. ed. of Magn. Chart. But this provision or declaration seems wholly confined to the tourns or leets of sheriffs, and not to include the leets of private persons; though it must be owned there are some authorities to the contrary. Acc. Bro. Abr. Leaf 23. and the opinion of Periam in 2. Leon. 74. Contra 2. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 71. and the opinion of Rhodes 2. Leon. 74. See also 2. Hawk. Pl. C. 56. Therefore should this provision in Magna Charta be only in affirmance of the common law, which as we shall mention in the next note is a point controverted, the instance would still be liable to exception. See 2. Hawk. Pl. 56. But the draws after it the custody of every species of property, for which the law hath not otherwise provided. This idea receives some countenance from the instances of copyholds, and of hereditaments not lying in tenure; for including which, it will be difficult to account by any other reason, than the one we give for including personalty. It is also strongly confirmed by the manner, in which the 12. of Cha. 2. c. 24. regulates the powers of the guardian, which it enables a father to appoint. After authorizing such guardian to take the custody of the infant's personal estate, as well as of his lands tenements and hereditaments, it provides, that he may bring such action or actions in relation thereunto, as by law a guardian in common socage might do: words almost necessarily importing, originall is, bors del seite del mannor, and so would it be amended at the impressions of the booke hereafter.

The continuation of the notes to 113. a. intended to be introduced here, is postponed to 118. b.

Et ascuns frank homes teignont, &c. This is apparent enough, especially Mirror ca. 2. sect. 18. acc. upon that which hath beene said.

Ou un villeine purchase terre en fee simple. Yet the villeine may purchase some kinde of inheritances in fee simple, which the lord of the villeine cannot have. As if a villeine purchase a common sauns nombre, the lord shall not have it; for the lord may surcharge the same, which should be a prejudice to the terre-tenant: and the same law of a corodie incertaine granted to a villeine, and such like inheritances. And therefore Littleton materially said, purchase terre. When the villeine hath an estate of any thing certaine, the lord shall have it; as a rent granted to the villeine, commons certaine, estovers certaine, and such like. [e] But that, which lyeth in action, as a warranty made to the villeine his heires and assignes, the lord shall not take advantage of by voucher; because it is in lieu of an action. Neither shall the lord take advantage of any obligation or covenant, or other thing in action made to the villeine: because they lye in privity, and cannot be transferred to others.

[p] If a man be lessee of a villeine for life, for yeares, or at will, and the villeine purchase lands in fee; if the lessee entred into the lands, he shall hold the lands as a perquisite to him and his heires for ever. But if a bishop hath a villeine in the right of his bishopricke, and he purchase lands, and the bishop entred, the bishop shall have this perquisite to him and his successors, and not to him and his heires; for the law respecteth the quality, and not the quantity of his estate. So if executors have a villeine for yeares, and the villeine purchase lands in fee, and the executors enter, they shall have a fee simple, but it shall be affets.

Fee taile. By this it is apparant, that if lands be given to a villeine, and to the heires of his body, the lord may enter and put out the villeine and the heires of his body; for quicquid acquiritur servo acquiritur domino (1). And in this case the lord gaires a fee simple determinable upon the dying of the villeine without heire of his body; and the absolute fee simple remaineth still in the donor. And if the lord enter, and after infranchise the donee, and after the donee hath issue, yet that issue shall never have remedy either by formedon or entry, to recover this land, by force of the statute of donis conditionalibus; for that statute giveth remedy to the issues of the donee, that have capacity and power to take and retaine such a gift; and the title of the lord remaines, as it did at the common law, for the statute restraineth acts done only by the tenant in taile. And so it is, if lands be given to an alien, and to the heires of his body, upon office found, the land is seised for the king, afterwards the king makes the alien a denizen, who hath issue and dyeth, the king shall detain the land against the issue (3).

Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18.

22. Aff. p. 37.

[e] Doct. and Stud. ca. 43.

[3. Co. 62, 63. 2. Ro. Abr. 740. Post 120. a.)

[p] L. 5. E. 4. 61. 18. E. 3. 29. 21. H. 6. 37. Broo. tit. Vil. 70. (Plow. 235. 2. Ante 90. 2.)

15. E. 4. 9. b. Pl. Com. 555. in Walsingham's case.

Sect. 173.

ET nota, si feoffment soit fait a certaine person ou persons en fee, al use d'un villeine; ou si un villeine, ove auters persons, soient enseoffes al use le villeine; quel estate que le villeine ad en le use, en fee taile, pur terme de vie ou d'ans, le seignior del villeine poit entrer en tous ceux terres et tenements, sicome le villein ust este sole seisie del demesne. Et cest per lestatute de anno 19. H. 7. cap. 15. (2).

AND note, if a feoffment be made to a certaine person or persons in fee, to the use of a villeine; or if a villeine, with other persons, be infeoffed to the use of the villein; what estate soever that the villein hath in the use, in fee taile, for terme of life or years, the lord of the villein may enter into all those lands and tenements, as if the villein had been sole seised of the demesne. And this is given by the statute of anno 19. H. 7. cap. 15.

THIS is an addition to Littleton; and the statute of 19. H. 7. ca. 15. therein mentioned, for the cause that hath beene aforesaid, hath lost his force (3).

Sect.

the strongest objection is, that, in the same chapter of Magna Charta, there is a general and expresse reservation of ancient liberties; there being added this qualification, ita scilicet quod quilibet libertates suas, quas habuit & habere consuevit tempore regis Henrici avi nostri, vel quas postea perquisivit: which words, even in the opinion of those, who extend Magna Charta to all leets, suffice to save prescriptions. 2. Leon. 75. What renders lord Coke's thus applying the case of leets the more remarkable is, that he himself in his Second Institute, when commenting on this part of Magna Charta, agrees, that leets of private persons, so far as regards the negative words of Magna Charta, are not within it, and takes particular notice of the reservation of ancient liberties. 2. Inst. 72. See further 4. Com. Dig. 122. Perhaps lord Coke might intend to assert, that, notwithstanding Magna Charta, it is lawful to prescribe for holding a sheriff's tourn oftener than twice a year; which indeed seems to be admitted by judge Rhodes, who construed all leets to be within Magna Charta. But we do not observe, that the authorities, lord Coke cites, mention any such prescription — (12) Some think, that Magna Charta, so far as regards the time for holding tourns and leets, was introductive of a new law. See 2. Hawk. Pl. C. 56. — (13) The 34. E. 1. is not printed in the modern editions of the statutes. Indeed it seems doubtful, whether it is intitled to the denomination; for lord Coke in another of his works treats it as an ordinance, and to prove it such cites Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium. 4. Inst. 298. F. N. B. 167. A. See also 12. Co. 23. If it be true, that the 34. E. 1. is only an ordinance, lord Coke's case should be put on the 1. E. 3. ft. 1. c. 2. or the Charta de Foresta of the 9. H. 3. c. 4. both of which laws provide to the same effect as the 34. E. 1. and are certainly acts of parliament. See also a like negative provision in the consuetudines et assisa de foresta, printed as a statute of uncertain time in Ruffh. ed. Append. 25. and cited by Noy in W. Jo. 270. 291. — (14) Acc. Manw. Forr. L. 111. ed. 41. a. and Fitzh. Abr. Trespas 239. there cited.

For the remaining note to 115. a. see 118. a.

(1) This rule about slaves holds in some degree in respect to apprentices and servants, particularly the former; though with a great difference in point of extent and application. All acquisitions of property real and personal made by the villein, in whatever way arising, with no other exception than what is allowed of to prevent prejudice to third persons, belonged to his lord; because an incapacity to acquire any thing for his own benefit was one of the harsh characteristics of the villein's condition. But the relation of the apprentice and servant to his master is more mild and limited; for it only imports, that the master shall be intitled to their personal labour during the term stipulated, either in a particular way or generally according to the nature of the service or apprenticeship. Consequently the master cannot claim any other acquisitions, than such as are the result of that labour. What the apprentice or servant earns by his labour, whilst he remains with the master or is actually working for him, falls so clearly within this principle, that there can be no room for doubt. Nor can there be any, where the apprentice or servant is employed by another person with the knowledge and consent of the master, without any circumstances indicating a waiver of their earnings. The books contain several adjudications founded upon this latter idea. Most of them indeed relate

to importing, that the personal estate is equally an object of the custody of guardian in socage with the infant's real property. Yet we

Sect. 174.

*APaier un fine pur
le mariage, &c.*

[9] 15. E. 3. tit. Aid. 33. Bracton, lib. 2. fo. 26. Mirror, ca. 2. sect. 18.

See more of this after in this chapter, sect. 194.
(Dr. & Stud. 66. b.)

[7] Fleta lib. 3. cap. 13. Mir. cap. 2. sect. 18.

[9] And this villeine and servile tenure is called in old bookes marcbetum, or merchet. Marchetum verò pro filia dare non competit libero homini, inter alia, propter liberi sanguinis privilegium, &c. And this is true de communi jure, sed medus et conventio vincunt legem. And as Littleton here saith, it is the folly of such a freeman to take such mannors, lands or tenements, to hold of the lord by such bondage. And yet this doth not make such a freeman a villeine, [r] Quia hujusmodi prestationes sunt ratione tenementi, & non ratione persone in donatione comprehensæ & reservatæ; non enim unum & idem est, sed longe aliud, tenere libere, et per liberum servitium, &c. for the signification of this word, vide sect. 194. 74. 441.

MES si ascun franke home voile prendre ascun terres ou tenements, a tener de son seignior per tiel villein service, f. a payer un fine a luy (1) pur le mariage de ses firs ou files, donque il paiera tiel fine pur le mariage; & nient obstant, que il est le folle de tiel frank home de prendre en tiel forme terres ou tenements a tener de le seignior per tiel bondage, uncore ceo ne fait le franke home villeine (2).

BUT if a free man wil take any lands or tenements, to hold of his lord by such villeine service, viz. to pay a fine to him for the marriage of his sonnes or daughters, then he shall pay such fine for the marriage; and notwithstanding, though it be the folly of such free man to take in such forme lands or tenements to hold of the lord by such bondage, yet this maketh not the free man a villeine.

Sect. 175.

CHescun villeine ou est villein per title de prescription, &c.

(2. Ro. Abr. 732.)
Lib. Rub. cap. 76, 77. Bracton, lib. 1. cap. 6. Bract. fol. 77.

(Post 120. a.)

[f] Bract. lib. 1. cap. 6. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 3. 8. Aff. p. 13. 11. Aff. 12. 24. Aff. 1. 73. Aff. 1. 37. E. 3. 78, 79. 27. E. 3. 89. 38. E. 4. 25. 27. H. 8. 7. b. Le statute de 17. E. 3. 17.

[r] 17. E. 3. 23. 11. H. 4. 26. 37. H. 6. 21. Dier Mich 7. & 8. Eliz. 242. Pl. Com. 79. &c.

[u] Glanvil lib. 9. cap. 8. Bracton lib. 3. fo. 156. Britton fol. 321.

[x] 6. Co. 11. & 12. in Gentleman's case.

(3. Inst. 71. F. N. B. 138. Post 328. 260. a. 4. Co. 71. a. 8. Co. 38. 1. Rol. Abr. 527. 2 Rol. Abr. 862, 863. Plow. 491. b. 1. Sid. 94. 2. Rol. Abr. 573. 376. 1. Sid. 314.)

Every villeine is, either by prescription, or confession. Servi autem nascuntur, aut fiunt. By prescription, either regardant to a mannor, &c. or in grosse. In gross either by prescription, or by granting away a villeine that is regardant, or by confession. [f] Fit etiam servus liber homo per confessionem in curia regis facta (3).

En court de record.

Record is derived of the Latine word recordor, that is to keep in minde as the poet saith, Si rite audita recordor. And therefore a record or inrolment is a memoriall or monument of so high a nature, [2] as it importeth in it selfe such an absolute verity, as if it be pleaded (4), that there is no such record, it shall not receive any triall by witnesse, jury, or otherwise, but onely by it selfe. [u] And every court of record is the king's court, albeit another may have the profit, wherein, if the judges doe erre, a writ of error doth lye. [x] But the county court, the hundred court, the court baron, and such like are no courts of record; and therefore the proceedings therein may be denied, and tried by jury, and upon their judgements a writ of error lyeth not, but a writ of false judgement.

ITEM chescun villeine, ou est un villeine per title de prescription, cestascavoir, que il & ses auncestors ont este villeins de temps dont memorie ne curt; ou il est villein per son confession demesne en court de record.

ALSO every villeine is, either a villeine by title of prescription, to wit, that hee and his ancestors have beene villeines time out of mind of man; or he is a villeine by his owne confession in a court of record.

to apprentices in the seafaring way; whose wages and prize money as seamen, though earned whilst in another service, have been recovered by those to whom they were bound. But the principle, which governs them, seems to apply to apprentices and servants in general. See 6. Mod. 69. 12. Mod. 415. Comberb. 450. 1. Stra. 581. 1. Barnard. Rep. 312. 1. Vef. 48. 83. Some of the cases go so far, as to give the master a right to the wages or earnings, whether the service is performed by the apprentice with or without the master's licence; and even though the earnings accrue in a trade or service different from that to which the apprentice is bound. 6. Mod. 69. 12. Mod. 83. 1. Vef. 83. But though the rule should be so large in respect to apprentices, it may be doubted, whether it is equally so in the case of other servants. There is a case of the reign of James the first, in which a judgment against the master appears to be principally founded on the want of his consent and privacy to the retainer. Cro. Jam. 653. 2. Rol. Rep. 269. Independently too of authority, the master's proper remedy in all cases, except those in which the servant is intentionally employed on his master's account, seems to be an action, either against the employer for loss of service if he knew of the first retainer, or against the servant himself for breach of his contract; such a case rather importing the master's right to damages for injury sustained by the consequences of the second retainer, than a right to the profits accruing from it. We have already mentioned, that most of the cases, which occur in the books, relate to the apprentices of watermen and seafaring persons. It may therefore be proper to add, that in 31. Geo. 2. c. 10. one object of which is to regulate the pay of seamen in the royal navy, there is a provision, that in particular cases the master shall not be intitled to the wages of his apprentice. See sect. 10. Note also the 17th. section in the 2. & 3. Anne c. 6. from which it seems, as if the framers of that law doubted, whether the master of an apprentice, who goes into the royal navy, would be intitled to his wages without an expresse provision.—(1) This section was first introduced in Redman's edition.—(3) The cause meant is, that the 27. of H. 8. transfers uses into possession. See lord Coke's note on sect. 115. fol. 84. b.

(1) In Roh. the words per son marriage ou come in here.—(2) This section in L. and M. stands the last in the chapter of Villenage.—(3) From our law's thus permitting a person to be a villein by acknowledgment in a court of record, some have argued, that it is a legal mode of creating personal bondage; with a view to prove, that there is not any thing so repugnant in our law to domestic slavery, as is generally imagined, and thence to lay a foundation for more easily inferring the lawfulness of importing slavery from our colonies. But in another place we have had occasion to object to this way of considering the acknowledgment, and to explain, why it should be deemed merely a confession of that immemorial antiquity in the villein's slavery, which was otherwise necessary to be proved. See the editor's Argument in the Case of Somersett a Negro, 60 to 65. and Hob. 99.—(4) The words if it be pleaded are material; for in evidence before a jury the copy of a record will be a sufficient proof of its existence and contents. See Law of Nif. Pri. 226. ed. 1775. Com. Dig. tit. Certiorari.

We must apprise the reader, that there is an expression of lord chief justice Vaughan in his reports, which conveys or seems to convey ment, for that they are no courts of record, because they cannot hold plea of debt or trespass, (14. H. 3. 13. 1. Rol. Abr. 543.)

if the debt or damages doe amount to forty shillings, or of any trespass vi & armis (1).
Monumenta, quæ nos recorda vocamus, sunt veritatis & vetustatis vestigia.

Sect. 176.

MES si frank home ad divers issues, & puis il confesse luy meme estre villein a un auter en court de record; uncore les issues, que il avera devant le confession sont franks, mes les issues, que il avera apres le confession, serront villeines.

BUT if a freeman hath divers issues, and afterwards he confesseth himselfe to be a villaine to another in a court of record; yet those issues, which he hath before the confession are free, but the issues, which he shall have after the confession, shall be villaines.

This is so evident as it needeth no explication.

Sect. 177.

ITEM, si le vil- lein purchase terre, et alien la terre a un auter devant que le seignior enter, donques le seignior ne poit enter; car il sera adjudge son follie, que il n'entra pas, quant la terre fuit en le maine le villein. Et issint est dez biens. Si le villeine achate biens, et eux vend ou done a un auter, devant que le seignior seijst les biens, adonques le seignior ne poit eux seiser. Mes si le seignior, devant ascun tiel vender ou done, vient deins la ville la lou tielx biens sont, et la, overtment enter les vicines, claima les biens, et seijst parcel

AL SO, if a villaine purchase land, and alien the land to another before that the lord enter, then the lord cannot enter; for it shall be adjudged his folly, that he did not enter, when the land was in the hands of the villaine. And so it is of goods. If the villaine buy goods, and sell or give them to another, before the lord seiseth them, then the lord may not seise the same. But if the lord, before any such sale or gift, cometh into the towne where such goods be, and there, openly amongst the neighbors, claime the goods, and seise part of the goods, in the name of seisin

IN this case before the lord doth enter, hee hath neither ius in re nec ius ad rem, but onely a possibilitie of an estate, which estate he must gaine by his entry; and therefore if the villaine doth by way of prevention alien before the lord doth enter, the lord is barred of the possibility, which he had to the land, for ever. [a] Si autem servus vendiderit feodum, quod sibi & hæredibus perquisiverit, antequam dominus seisinam inde ceperit, valet donatio, et dominus sibi ipsi imputet, quod tantum expectavit. But [b] if the villaine of the king purchase land, and alieneth, before the king (upon an office found for him) doth enter, yet the king after office found shall have the land; quia nullum tempus occurrit regi, as Littleton himselfe saith in the next section (2). And yet, after office found, the king shall not have the meane profits; because the title is by the seisure.

(Dr. & Stud. 140. 2. Rol. Abr. 735.)

[a] Fleta lib. 3. ca. 13. Britton fol. 98. a. 19. E. 2. Dower 17.

[b] 35. E. 3. tit. Villenage 22; 9. H. 6. 21. per Babington. 12. H. 7. 12.

(8. Co. 170. 7. Co. 28. 2. Rol. Abr. 734.)

Purchase terre.

The like law is of feignories, advowsons, reversions, remainders, rents, commons certaine and such like certaine inheritances, wherein the villaine hath

(1) See post 160. a.—(2) See post 119. a.

Continuation of notes to 115. a. from 117. a.

(13) It having been denied by persons of considerable respect, that such a prescription is good, we shall give some account of the state of the arguments for and against it.—The general ground, on which lord Coke asserts the prescription to be lawful, is, first, that a statute, though expressed in negative words, yet, if it is a mere affirmation or declaration of the common law, may be prescribed against; and secondly, that the statute against cutting down trees in a forest without view of the forester, are negative statutes of this sort. As to the first of these propositions, we have endeavoured to evince it's reasonableness in a former note; in which also the reader is referred to the various authorities on the subject, for the purpose of shewing, that they greatly preponderate in favour of lord Coke. See note 13. In respect to the second proposition, the authorities not only support it, but are so uniform, that we do not find it any where controverted. See note 14. The particular argument for the prescription consists principally of various allowances of it at eyres of the forest, and of two express adjudications of the point on demurrers in courts of common law. The cited instances of allowances are not few; for, besides the three cases of Henry de Percy Thomas lord Wake of Liddel and Gilbert de Alton here mentioned by lord Coke, he in his fourth Institute cites another, which was in the 8th. of Edward the third on a claim by Thomas Pickering and Margaret his wife. See 4. Inst. 197. The cases at common law are Sellinger's, and lord Hatton's. The former is stated by lord Coke to have been before the Exchequer in the time of Elizabeth, and to have been adjudged upon argument and long advisement; and probably is the same case he here cites as one of the 16th. of Elizabeth. See 4. Inst. 197. and 12. Co. 22. The latter is taken notice of by judge Croke, who reports lord Coke to have cited it as a judgment on demurrer in the King's Bench. Cro. Jam. 155. To these authorities we may add an extrajudicial opinion of all the judges, on being consulted by James the first; the words of which seem to imply, that a custom for cutting wood in the king's forests without view of the forester may be good. See the third resolution of the judges in 4. Inst. 199. It is said too, that in a case of the 19. of E. 1. between the prebend of Chichester and the earl of Arundel, issue was joined on such a custom; from which it may be inferred, that in those ancient times the goodness of the custom was not doubted. W. Jo. 290.—On the other hand lord Lovelace's case, whose claim came before an eyre in the 8th of Charles the first, is a direct decision against the allowance of a prescription for cutting wood without view of the forester; and in that case lord chief justice Richardson, when this part of the Commentary upon Littleton was referred to, denied lord Coke's general doctrine about negative statutes declaratory of the common law. W. Jo. 270. Two other adjudications, to the like effect, appear to have been made at eyres in the same reign; one of which was on a claim by the tenants of the manor of Bray, who, in proof of the custom they alledged, offered in evidence an inquisition of the reign of Edward the second. W. Jo. 289, 290, 348. The principle, on which Noy attorney-general argued in these cases, was a general one, that negative statutes, such as those which occur against cutting wood in the king's forest without licence, cannot be controuled by custom or prescription. To prove this he appealed to a case from a year-book of Henry the sixth;

convey a different opinion; for, speaking of the guardian under the statute of Charles the second, he says, this new guardian hath hath any estate or interest. If the villaine purchase land, either in fee simple, fee tail, or for life, if the villaine doth alien before the lord doth enter, hee doth prevent the lord. But yet the issue of the villaine shall recover the land entailed in a formedon, and then the lord may enter.

Alien la terre. Alien commeth of the verbe alienare, id est, alienum facere, vel ex nostro dominio in alienum transferre, sive rem aliquam in dominium alterius transferre.

If a freeman hath issue, and afterward by confession becommeth bond, and purchase lands in fee, and, before the lord enter, he dieth seised, and the land descends to his issue which is free; in this case the lord shall not enter upon the heire, and yet this is a descent and no alienation. The like law it is, if the land so purchased by the villaine doth escheate to the lord of the fee before any entry made by the lord of the villaine: so as the act of the law, that is, the descent or escheat may as well prevent the lord of his entry, as the act of the party by alienation.

If a villaine be disseised before the lord doth enter, the lord may enter into the land in the name of the villaine, and thereby gaine the inheritance of the land; but if there be a descent cast, so as the entry of the villaine be taken away, then the villaine must recontinue the estate of the land by judgement and execution, before the lord of the villaine can enter. And this word alien doth not onely extend to alienations of land in deed, but also to alienations in law, as if the villaine purchase land and dyeth without heire, and the land escheate, or if there be a recovery against the villaine in a cessavit or the like.

(2. Rol. Abr. 732. 5. Co. 119.
2. Rol. Abr. 58. Cro. Eliz. 386.)

Et issint est des biens, &c. Biens, bona, includes all chattels, as well real as personall. Chattels is a French word, and signifies goods, which by a word of art wee call catalla. Now goods, or chattels, are either personall or reall. Personall, as horse and other beasts, household stuffe, bowes, weapons, and such like, called personall, because for the most part they belong to the person of a man, or else for that they are to be recovered by personall actions. Reall, because they concerne the reality, as tearmes for years of lands or tenements, wardships, the interest of tenant by statute staple, by statute merchant, by elegit and such like.

Bona dividuntur in mobilia & immobilia. Mobilia rursus dividuntur in ea, quæ se movent, & quæ ab aliis moventur. But, by the common law, no estate of inheritance or freehold is comprehended under these words bona or catalla (3). And it is to be observed, that as the title of the lord to his villaine's lands beginneth by his entry, so his title to the goods beginneth by the seisure of them. And here againe it is to be observed, that where our author, in this branch concerning goods, useth these words (sell or give) that the same extendeth as well to gifts in law, as gifts in deed. And therefore if a neile hath goods, and taketh baron, by this gift in law by force of the marriage, the lord is barred. And so it is if a villaine make his executors and dieth, by this gift in law the lord is barred, as shall be said hereafter.

3. H. 4. 15. 46. E. 3. Barre
17. Doct. and Stud. cap. 43. fol.
139. 22. E. 3. 6. Baldwin
Freuil's case.
(Ante 88. Post. 145. b.)

[c] 18. H. 6. 23. b. per Afcrough.
3. H. 4. 16. 46. E. 3. Barre 217.

Et claime les biens et seijst parcel des biens. For a claime onely of the goods of the villaine is not sufficient in law, but he must seise some part in the name of all the residue, as here it appeareth; or that the goods be within the view of the lord, for the claime and his view amount to a seisure, as the clayme of a ward being present by word is a sufficient seisure, albeit the gardian layeth no hands of him. See hereafter sect. 321. And so note a diversity betweene a claime of lands or tenements, and goods. [c] In an action of trespassse or detinue brought by the villaine, a release made to the defendant by the lord is a good barre; for that amounts to a seisure and grant. If the villaine doth buy goods and make his executors, and dieth before the lord doth seize them, the executors shall detain them against the lord of the villaine.

Ad ou aver poit, &c. Here (&c.) doth imply an excellent point of learning; for that such a claime doth not onely vest the goods, which the villaine then hath, but also which he after that shall acquire and get (4). But otherwise it is of lands of freehold or inheritance; for there such a generall entry or claime extends only to the lands the villaine hath at that time

sixth; which, he considered as directly in point, and as a judgment that tithe of timber cannot be prescribed for against the statute of sylva cadua, though only an affirmance of the old law, merely because the statute is negative. See W. Jo. 270. 290. and 25. E. 3. c. 3. The year book reported to have been cited by Noy is the 10th. of Hen. 6. but we do not meet with any case of that year relative to the statute of sylva cadua, and therefore the 9. of Hen. 6. 56. which is to the point, was probably meant; though if it was, it contains no judgment, but only a query, which Brooke, in abridging the case, by mistake calls the reporter's opinion. Bro. Prescription 2. Noy also cited the earl of Arundel's case from a record of the 16. of Edward the second, as a decision, that a prescription to cut wood against the forest statutes was not good. W. Jo. 270. As to the cases urged against him, he observed, that the case between the prebend of Chichester and the earl of Arundel was of a chace, and the statutes only related to forests; that in Percy's case the forest was not in the hands of the crown when the statutes were made; and that the case of the reign of Elizabeth, which lord Coke reports from lord Popham, was of a chace, of which the king was seised in right of his duchy of Lancaster. W. Jo. 290, 291. It is observable however, that Mr. Noy leaves the two cases of lord Wake and Gilbert de Alton wholly unanswered, though they were cited against him. As to the other authorities we have stated for a prescription against the forest statutes, or those against negative statutes in general being declaratory, they do not appear to have been urged against Mr. Noy. But besides the authorities relied on by Noy, there is one more; for judge Croke, after taking notice of the judgment for the prescription in lord Hatton's case, reports Popham to have said, that it was adjudged otherwise about the same time in the Exchequer. Cro. Jam. 155. However this is irreconcilable with lord Coke's representation of the judgment of the Exchequer both here and elsewhere, unless we suppose him to mean a different case.—Having thus brought together and digested, what we found scattered in the books on this much litigated subject, we shall dismiss it, leaving the reader to his own judgment, with this single remark. If the greater number of authorities, which, unless the cases we have referred to are misstated or misunderstood, is in favour of the prescription, shall be thought to be of equal or nearly of equal weight with the more modern decisions on the other side; then probably, as the subject strikes us, the good sense of lord Coke's distinction as to negative statutes, together with a consideration of the multiplicity of books, which favour his general doctrine, will so strongly turn the scale in this particular instance of forest-law, as scarce to leave any doubt. Indeed it was for the sake of explaining, how far the general doctrine may be affected by the decision on this point of forest law, that we have detained the reader so long upon it.

(1) The words, que le villein ad ou aver poit, not in L. & M. or Roh.—(2) Instead of les biens it is ley in L. & M. and Roh.—(3) See farther as to chattels, Bro. Abr. tit. Chattels, Com. Dig. tit. Biens and Affets, and Vin. tit. Executors U—Y—Z.—(4) Contra, as to the goods afterwards acquired, Dr. and Stud. dial. 2. chap. 4.

Continuation of notes to 113. a. from 114. b.

—Lord Coke next takes for granted, that if there is a devise to A. for life, and that after his decease the land shall be sold by the testator's hath the custody, not only of the lands descended or left by the father, but of lands and goods any way acquired or purchased by the testator.

Sect. 178.

BUT if the king hath a villeine, who purchaseth land, and alien it before the king enter; yet the king may enter, into whose hands soever the land shal come. Or if the villeine buyeth goods, and sell them before that the king seizeth them; yet the king may seize these goods, in whose hands soever they be. Because nul- lum tempus occurrit re- gi (1).

Ou si tiel villeine achata biens, &c. If the king's villaine acquire any goods or chattels, the propertie of them is in the king before any seifure or office; and it is well said of an ancient author, [d] Al roy, quant al [d] Mirror cap. 3. droit de la corone ou a franchise, ne poet nul temps occurre; and another [e] speaking [e] Britton fol. 88. Bract. lib. in the person of the king saith, 1. que res dari possint. Nul temps nest limit quant a mes droitz.

Sect. 179.

ALSO if a man let certaine land to another for terme of life, saving to himselfe the reversion, and a villeine purchase of the lessor the reversion; in this case it seemeth, that the lord of the villeine may presently come to the land, and claime the reversion as the lord of the said villeine, and by this claime the reversion is forthwith in him. For in other forme or manner he cannot come to the reversion. For he cannot enter upon the tenant for life. And if he should stay untill after the death of the tenant for

For he cannot claime the reverſion but upon the land, and he by his comming upon the land for that purpoſe is no trefpaſſor; becauſe the law giveth him power to claime the reverſion, leſt he ſhould be prevented, and claime he cannot unleſs he commeth to the land. So likewiſe if the villeine purchaſe a feignory, rent, common, or any other freehold or inheritance, out of any lands or tenements of another, the

(1) See Acc. 41. b. 57. b. 90. b. 118. a. 194. b. and for instances, Plowd. 243.—But the rule of nullum tempus occurrit regi is subject to various exceptions, both at common law and by statute.—1. There are many cases, in which the subject may make title against the king by prescription, as to treasure-trove, waifs, estrays, and such other things as may be seized without matter of record. Ante fol. 114. a and b.—2. In some cases the king's right necessarily fails for want of exertion in due time, either because the subject of his right determines before he claims it, or because it is especially limited in point of time by its creation. An instance of this is, where the land of tenant for life is found to be forfeited, and he dies before seizure by the king; for it is then too late to seize for the king, who, as Staundford expresses it, hath forfeasted his time, the estate forfeited being determined, and the right of entry being in him in reversion. Staundf. Prærog. 32. b. The law is the same, where the king is intitled to, and the right of entry being in him in reversion. Staundf. Prærog. 32. b. The law is the same, where the king is intitled to the next presentation, in which case, if another presents, and the incumbent dies, the king cannot have the second or any subsequent presentation. This was the opinion of Browne justice against Weston in Willion and Berkeley, Plowd. 243. 249. and was so adjudged in Baskerville's case 7. Co. 28. a. Lord Chancellor Egerton finds fault with the doctrine of this last case; but his objections do not appear in the least satisfactory. See his observations on lord Coke's Reports 8.—3. Sometimes lapse of time drives the king to a suit. Thus by the statute of the 13th. of Richard the 11d. and according to lord Coke by the common law, if the king presents to a benefice already full with an incumbent, the king's presentee shall not be received by the ordinary, till the king has recovered his presentment by due process of law. 13. R. 2. ft. 1. c. 1. Staundf. Prærog. 32. b. 1. Inst. 358. Post. 344. b. See also Cro. Jam. 385. 4. H. 4. c. 22. Gibf. Cod. 1st. ed. 802.—4. There are several statutes, which wholly extinguish the king's title, if not exerted within a limited number of years. By a statute of the 14th. of Edward the third, the king lost his presentment, where he was intitled by having in his hands the temporalities of a bishoprick or the lands of a person within a year, unless he presented within three years after the voidance. But this statute was soon repealed. See 14. E. 3. ft. 3. c. 2. 25. E. 3. ft. 3. c. 2. 1. Gibf. Cod. 1st. edit. 800. The chief statutes, for limiting the king's title to a certain time, now in force, are the 21. of Jam. 1. c. 2. and the 9. of Geo. 3. c. 16. By the former the king is disabled from claiming any manors lands or hereditaments, except liberties and franchises, under a title accrued 60 years before the beginning of the then session of parliament, unless within that time there has been a possession under such title. But the efflux of time rendering this provision continually more ineffectual, the latter statute introduced one of a permanent kind, by limiting the king to sixty years before the commencement of the suit or proceeding for recovery of the estate claimed. See further a Commentary on the 21. Jam. in 3. Inst. 188. See also something relative to the rule of nullum tempus occurrit regi, in Hob. 153. 154. 347.

which the guardian in socage had not. Vaugh. 186.—It is superseded both as to the body and lands, if the father exercises his power

Vide 41. E. 3. tit. Audita que-rela 18. 12. H. 4. tit. Execution.
28. F. N. B. 104. 1. H. 7.
25. b.

the lord may lawfully come to the land to make his claime to the feig-niory, rent, or other profit out of the land. But if the villeine purchase a feigniorie, or a rent, common, or other inheritance issuing out of the land of the lord himselfe, it is said, that the feigniorie, rent,
common, or such other inheritance, is extinguished in the lord's possession without any claime.

Grant. Here must be intended an attornment; for after the grant and before attorne-ment the lord may not (1) claime the reversion (2).

En la vie del tenant per vie, &c. Here by (&c.) is included tenant in taile, tenant per auter vie, tenant by statute marchant, staple, elegit, and for yeares; for during all these estates the lord may claime the reversion, as well as in case of the tenant for life.

de vie, donques per cas life, then perchance he il viendra trope tarde. should come too late. For Car peraventure le vil- peradventure the villeine leine voile granter ou will grant or alien the aliener le reversion a un reversion to another, in auter, en le vie le tenant the life of the tenant for a terme de vie, &c. life, &c.

Sect. 180.

Advowson. Advocatio
so called; because the right of presenting to the church was first gained by such as were founders, benefactors, or maintainers of the church; viz. rationi funda- tionis, as where the ancestor was founder of the church; or ratione donationis, where he endowed the church; or ratione fundi, as where he gave the foile, whereupon the church was built. And therefore they were called advocati. They were also called patroni, and thereupon the advowson is called jus patronatus. And in one word, advowson of a church is the right of presentation or collation to the church. Advo-
catus est ad quem pertinet jus advocationis alicujus ecclesie, ut ecclesiam nomine proprio, non alieno, possit presentare. Every church is either presentative, collative, donative, or elective. Vide section 645. 648.

EN mesme le ma- ner est, lou un villein purchase un advowson, dun esglise
plien dun incumbent,
le seignior del villein poit vener al dit esglise, & claime le dit advowson, & per cel claime l'advowson est en luy. Car sil doit attendre tanque apres
le mort l'incumbent, & adonque a presenter son clerke a le dit esglise, donque, en le meane temps, le villeine poit aliener le advowson (3), & if-sint ouster le seignior
de son presentment.

IN the same manner
it is, where a villeine purchases an advowson of a church full of an incumbent, the lord of the villeine may come to the said church, and claime the said advowson, and by this claime the advowson is in him. For if he will attend till after the death of the incumbent, and then to present his clarke to the sayd church, then,
in the mean time, the villein may alien the advowson, and so oust the lord of his presentment.

23. H. 14. b.

Fleta lib. 5. cap. 140

24. E. 3. 30. 25. E. 3. 47. 38.
E. 3. 9. 44. E. 3. 3. 9. H. 6.
31. 22. H. 6. 27. 21. E. 4.
34. b. Vide sect. 648.
(Post. 344. a.)

10. H. 6. 7.

Plein dun incumbent, If the church be presentative, the church is full by admission and institution against any common person; but against the king it is not full until induction.

Incumbent. Commeth from the verbe incumbo, that is to be diligently resident, id est, obnixè operam dare; and when it is written incumbent, it is falsely written, for it ought to be incumbent, as Littleton doth here (4). And therefore the law doth intend him to be resident on his benefice.

(1) This is apparently an error of the press, the sense requiring the omission of not. Accordingly the 1st edition is without
it. But the error appears in all the subsequent editions.

(2) But now by the 9. Ann. c. 16. f. 9. the grant of a reversion is perfect without attornment.

(3) &c. L. & M.

(4) However in L. & M. and Roh. the word is encoment.

power of appointing a testamentary or other guardian according to the statute of 12. Cha. 2. See chap. 24.—Regularly it ends when the infant, whether male or female, attains fourteen; though some say, that this must be understood, only where another guardian, either by election of the infant or otherwise, is ready to succeed, and that the guardianship in socage continues in the mean time. Andr. 313.

As to guardianship by nurture, it only occurs, where the infant is without any other guardian; and none can have it, except the father or mother. 8. E. 4. 7. b. Br. Guard. 70. 3. Co. 38.—It extends no further than the custody and government of the infant's person, and determines at fourteen in the case both of males and females. Ibid.—Lord chief baron Comyns refers to Fleta, as if according to that ancient book grandfathers and great grandfathers might be guardians by nurture. Com. Dig. v. 3.
p. 421. But the passage cited doth not point at this species of guardian, it describing the patria potestas in general, and being apparently borrowed from the text of the Roman law; nor will it bear the least application to guardianship, as our own law regulates it.—(14) The direct object of the 4. & 5. Ph. & M. was to prevent the taking away or marrying maidens under sixteen against the consent of their parents. But the statute prohibited it in terms, which implied, that the custody and education of such females should belong to the father and mother, or the person appointed by the former. It is observable on this statute, that, though the title is confined to maidens being inheritors, and the preamble speaks only of such as be heirs apparent, or have real or personal estate, yet the enacting part mentions maidens under sixteen generally. For other cases on this statute besides Ratcliff's, see Poph. 204. Cro. Cha. 465. 1. Sid. 362. 2. Mod. 128. 3. Mod. 84. 168.—(15) There is now another statute in respect to the appointment of guardians; for the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. after taking away guardianship in chivalry, enables the father by deed or will attested by two witnesses to appoint, who shall be guardians of his children after his decease. The substance of this parliamentary regulation is, 1. That the father shall have the power, though under twenty-one. 2. That he shall have it as to all his children under twenty-one and unmarried at his decease, or born after. 3. That he may appoint any persons, except popish recusants. 4. That the appointment may be either in possession or remainder. 5. That he may appoint the guardianship to last till twenty-one, or for any less time. 6. That the appointment shall be effectual against all claiming as guardians in socage or otherwise. 7. That the guardian so appointed shall have ravishment of ward on trespass, and recover damages for the ward's benefit. 8. That such guardian shall have the custody of the infant's estate both real and personal, and have the same actions in relation to them as a guardian in socage. 9. That the statute shall not prejudice the custom of London or any other city or corporate town.—For cases on the constitution of this statute, see tit. Guardian in Vin. Abr. and Com. Dig.
and

Le seignior del villeine poit vener al eglise & claime le dit advowson.

Note, albeit the advowson is a thing incorporeall, and not visible, yet, because the principall duty of the presentee of the patron is to be done in the church, the claime of the lord of the villeine must be made there; and by that claime the inheritance of the advowson shall be vested in the lord; for every claime or demand to develt any estate or interest must be made in that place, which is most apt for that purpose.

Après la mort del incumbent. Nota, a church presentative may become void five manner of wayes, viz. by death, whereof Littleton here speaketh. 2. By creation. 3. By resignation. 4. By deprivation. 5. By cession, as by taking a benefice incompatible. Doct. & Stud. lib. 2. ca. 31. 5. E. 3. 180. 10. E. 3. 482. 25. E. 3. 49. 9. E. 3. 462. 11. H. 4. 37. 59. & 76. 41. E. 3. 5. F. N. B. 31, 32.

Et donques a presenter son clerke al dit eglise, &c. A presentation is derived a presentando; quia presentare nihil aliud est, quam præsto dare, seu offerre. And Littleton here briefly expresseth the effect of a presentation; for it is the act of the patron offering his clerke to the bishop of that diocesse, to be instituted to such a church, in these or the like words directed to the bishop, presento vobis A. B. clericum meum ad ecclesiam de Dale, &c. This may be done as well by word, as by writing; and if it be by writing it is no deed, for the presentation is of the clerke, and the direction to the bishop, so as this writing is in nature of a letter to the bishop: and this is the reason, that the king himselfe may present by word, as elsewhere is said. A villein at this day purchaseth an advowson in fee, the church becomes void, the lord for one hundred pound given by A. B. clerke presents him to the church, and his clerke is admitted, instituted, and inducted; yet this gaineth not the advowson to the lord. [d] And so it is in that case, if any on the behalfe of A. B. had given or contracted with the lord in consideration of any valuable thing to present A. B. to the said church, albeit it had been without the consent or knowledge of A. B. yet it should not have vested the advowson in the lord. But this was not law when Littleton wrote. [e] But now by the statute of 31. Eliz. the presentation, admission, institution, and induction in both the said cases and in the like are made void (1), where before the said statute they were but voidable by deprivation (2). And if a man present by usurpation to a benefice, by reason of any corrupt contract, agreement, &c. that presentation, and the institution and induction thereupon are void; for that act extends to all patrons as well by wrong as by right. But where any presents by usurpation, the rightfull patron, and not the king, shall present; for otherwise every rightfull patron may lose his presentation. And such an incumbent, that commeth in by reason of any such corrupt agreement, is so absolutely disabled for ever after to be presented to that church, as the king himselfe, to whom the law giveth the title of presentation in that case, cannot present him againe to that church; for the act, being made for suppression of symony and such corrupt agreements, so bindes the king in that case, as he cannot present him that the law hath disabled (3), for the words of the act be, shall thereupon and from thenceforth be adjudged a disabled person in law to have or enjoy the same benefice. [f] And the party being disabled by the act of parliament (which being an absolute and direct law) cannot be dispensed withall by any grant, &c. with a non obstante; as it may be, when any thing is prohibited sub modo, as upon a penalty given to the king (4). And the said act doth not onely extend to benefices with cure, but to dignities, prebends, and all other ecclesiasticall livings. (2. Ro. Abr. 353.) [d] Adjudge in communi banco. Mich. 41. & 42. Eliz. inter Baker & Rogers. [e] Adjudged in the King's Bench. Mich. 13. Ja. in a quar. imp. brought by the king against the bishop of Norwich, Thomas Cole and Robert Secker clerks for the vicarage of Haverell in Suffolke. (Cro. Jam. 385. Hob. 75. Hob. 165. 12. Co. 100. 73. 3. Inst. 153. 1. Ro. Abr. 370. Cro. Jam. 385. 513. Cro. Cha. 477. 7. Co. 32. Post. 234. 11. Co. 68. Cro. Cha. 331.) [f] Pl. Com. 502. 27. H. 8. 2. H. 7. 6. 11. H. 7. 11. 13. H. 7. 8. b. 11. H. 4. 76. 5. E. 3. 29. F. N. B. 211. E.

Clerke. Clericus is twofold, ecclesiasticus (which Littleton here intendeth) and he is either secular, or regular, so called because he is servus & hereditas domini; and laicus, and in this sense is signified a pen-man, who getteth his living in some court or otherwise by the use of his pen. 4. H. 4. ca. 12.

Note, if the church becommeth void, albeit the present avoidance be not by law grantable over, yet may the lord of the villeine present in his owne name, and thereby gaine the inheritance of the advowson to him and his heires; for albeit it be not grantable over, yet it is not meerly a chose in action; [g] for if a feme covert be seised of an advowson, and the church becommeth void, and the wife dyeth, the husband shall present to the advowson; [b] but otherwise it is of a bond made to the wife; because that is meerly in action. (Ante 117. a.) [g] 14. H. 4. 12. 38. E. 3. 35. 13. E. 3. quare imp. 57. [b] 43. E. 3. 10. 39. E. 3. 5. 4. H. 6. 5. (Post. 351. a. 1. Ro. Abr. 345)

Sect. 181.

ITEM il y ad vil- ALSO there is a vil- Villein regardant.
leine regardant, leine regardant, He is called regar& villeine en gros. and a villein in grosse. nour; because he hath the

(1) Though the person presented is not privy to the simony, yet the presentation is void, the statute making no distinction in this respect, but giving the turn to the king as a punishment of the patron. Adjudged 12. Co. 100. Agreed 12. Co. 73.

(2) The effect of the difference between void and voidable, in the instance of a simoniacal presentation, may be seen in Windsor's case, 5. Co. 102. and Winchcombe's case Hob. 165. the judgment in both turning upon it.

(3) Adjudged accordingly in the king against the bishop of Norwich Hob. 75. Cro. Jam. 385. In Sir Arthur Ingram's case on the 5. E. 6. against the sale of offices, there was a like decision, that the king could not dispense with a disability created by statute. Post. 234. a. Hob. 75. Cro. Jam. 385. 3. Inst. 154. When the famous case of Sir Edward Hales in the reign of James the second was argued, these two cases were urged to prove, that the king could not dispense with the disability for not taking the oaths and sacrament according to the 25. Cha. 2. usually called the test act; and lord Coke himself in his Third Institute applies them to a like case on the 5. Eliz. in respect to the oath of supremacy. 3. Inst. 154. The principal judicial authority relied on for the dispensation was the case in the year-book of 2. H. 7. 11. a. in which, notwithstanding the statutes making void a grant of the office of sheriff for more than a year, the judges are represented to have held a grant for life with a non obstante to be good. But trusting to such an authority only exposed the weakness of the cause it was intended to sustain. The book cited, so far from containing any judgment of the point, ends with an adjournment of the case, accompanied with this remarkable declaration, that both judges and counsel agreed, what they had then said should be taken for nothing. As far too as appears, the grant in question might have been adjudged good on the ground of being within an exception of the statutes. The king also had been specially enabled by the 9. H. 5. c. 5. to dispense with the statutes for four years on account of the wars and a pestilence. But, lastly and principally, it was an insuperable objection to the authority of this case, that the 23. H. 6. to remove all doubts, provides, that the king's grant for more than a year should be void notwithstanding any non obstante. What respect could be due to a judicial opinion, declaring a dispensation good, which the legislature itself had positively enacted should be void? Yet it is not to be concealed, that in the report of Calvin's case, Lord Coke justifies the king's dispensation in this instance on the principle of its being beyond the power of parliament to take away his right to the service of his subjects. Calvin's case 7. Co. 15. This strange language is the more unaccountable; as it is inconsistent with his own doctrine here, and in the case on the statute against the sale of offices.

(4) But by the bill of rights, 1. W. & M. it was declared, that, from the then session of parliament, no dispensation with any statute should be valid, unless such statute allows it, and except in such cases as should be specially provided for the then session. 1. W. & M. sess. 2. c. 2. f. 12. The occasion of this excellent provision was the equally extravagant and unwarrantable exercise of and the continuation of the latter book. The nature of this new kind of guardianship, which the statute professedly models after Bract. li. 2. fo. 26. Mir. ca. 2. sect. 18.

Vide sect. 84.

[1] 20. E. 3. tit. Issue 30.

charge to do all base or villenous services within the same, and to gard and keep the same from all filthie or loathsome things that might annoy it: and his service is not certaine, but he must have regard to that which is commanded unto him. And thereupon he is called regardant, a quo praestandum servitium incertum & indeterminatum, ubi scire non poterit vespere, quale servitium fieri debet mane, viz. ubi quis facere tenetur quicquid ei praeceptum fuerit, as before hath bene observed. And Littleton sayth hereafter, that no other thing is said to be regardant, but onely a villeine: [1] yet in old bookes it was sometimes applyed to services.

In grosse: Is that which belongs to the person of the lord, and belongeth not to any mannor, lands, &c.

Villein regardant est, siccome, home est seisi dun mannor, a que un villein est regardant, & celui, que est seisi del dit mannor, ou ceux, que estate il ad en mesme le mannor, ont este seisis de le dit villein & de ses auncestors, come villeins & niefs (1) regardants a mesme le mannor, de temps dont memorie ne curt. Et villeine en grosse est, lou un home seisi dun mannor, a que un villeine est regardant, & il graunt mesme le villein per son fait a un autre, donques il est villein en grosse, & nemy regardant.

A villein regardant is, as if a man be seised of a mannor, to w ich a villeine is regardant, and he which is seised of the said mannor, or they whose estate he hath in the same mannor, have bene seised of the villein and of his ancestors as villeins and niefs regardant to the same mannor time out of memory of man. And villein in grosse is, where a man is seised of a mannor wherunto a villein is regardant, and granteth the same villein by his deed to another, then he is a villein in grosse and not regardant.

Sect. 182.

Mir. ca. 2. sect. 18.

THIS needeth no explanation, but to adde the saying of an ancient author. Servage de home est subjection, issuant de cy grand antiquite, que nul franke cep poet estre troye per humane remembrance.

ITEM si un home & sez auncestors, que heire il est, ont este seisis dun villeine et de ses auncestors, come des villeins en grosse, de temps, dont memorie ne curt, tiels sont villeines en grosse.

ALSO if a man and his auncestours, whose heire he is, have bene seised of a villeine, and of his auncestors as of villeines in grosse, time out of memorie of man, these are villeines in grosse.

Sect. 183.

Vid. sect. 441. 194. 174. 74. [1] Bract. li. 5. tract. 5. c. 28. (Post. 262. a.)

[2] Glan. li. 8. ca. 1.

OU fine. In Latine, finis. [1] Ideo dicitur finalis concordia; quia imponit finem litibus, & est exceptio peremptoria. [2] Finis est amicabile compositio & finalis concordia, ex consensu & licentia

ET hic nota, que tiels choses, que ne poient estre grants, ne alienees, sans fait ou fine, home, que voile aver tiels choses per

AND heere note, that such things, which cannot be granted, nor aliened, without deed or fine, a man, which will have pre-

(1) Et niefs not in L. & M.

of the dispensing power by James the second, who, having procured the sanction of a judicial opinion to a dispensation with the test act in favour of Sir Edward Hales, madly proceeded to a suspension of the principal laws for the support of the established religion; an excess, in which, monstrous as it was, several of the judges, to the great scandal of Westminster hall, gave him countenance, the priests of the temple of justice treacherously aiding to pollute it, instead of manfully opposing the sacrilege. Till the time of this prince the doctrine of dispensation was received with very important qualifications, of which the principal were these.—1. It was said, that the king could not dispense with the common law; though lord chief justice Vaughan seems to deny this position. Dav. 75. 3. Inst. 154. Vaugh. 334.—2. It appears to have been generally agreed, that the king could not dispense with a statute, which prohibited what was malum in se.—3. Malum prohibitum was not deemed universally dispensable with; for some held, the king could not dispense with a statute, if the prohibition was absolute, and not sub modo, as under a penalty to the king, or as others express it, where the statute was made for the general good, and not with a view merely to the king's profit and interest.—4. None contended, that the royal dispensation could diminish or prejudice the property or private right of the subject.—5. It was understood, that the king could dispense, not generally, but only in favour of particular persons, and, according to some, for these only in particular instances.—But some of these distinctions had great uncertainty and subtlety in them, and were so open to controversy, that they only tended to create embarrassment; and though the others greatly restricted the largeness of the claimed prerogative, yet they were far from obviating the chief objection to so formidable a pretension. Had the boundary of the dispensing power been ever so clearly marked, still it was wise and prudent to annihilate it. So far as it resembled the power of repealing laws, it was an intolerable corruption, wholly irreconcilable with the first principle of our constitution, by which the power of legislation cannot be exercised by the king without the two houses of parliament. So far as it did not fall within this idea, it was unnecessary; for, those acts, which were the fruits of it, might have derived their force from other acknowledged powers of the crown, such as the right of waiving penalties and forfeitures belonging to itself, and the prerogative of pardoning.—It is worthy notice, that, the declaration of rights, which the lords and commons made on tendering the crown to William and Mary, distinguishes between suspending laws by regal authority, and dispensing with them. The former, being a general and absolute abrogation for a time, is condemned without any exception; but the latter, being only a special exemption of certain individuals, is merely declared illegal, as it had been exercised of late. Also the bill of rights, though it declares against the future exercise of a dispensing power in any case, except where the king is specially authorized by act of parliament, yet contains a proviso saving from prejudice all prior charters grants and pardons. 1. W. & M. sess. 2. ch. 2. sect. 12. & 13. If the condemnation of the dispensing power for the time past had been unqualified, it might have destroyed the titles under numberless subsisting grants from the crown, the validity of which it was deemed most equitable to leave to the decision of the courts of justice in the ordinary way.—Such as wish to go more deeply into the controversy about the dispensing power, may after that in focage except as to duration, is particularly discussed in Bedell and Constable. Vaugh. 177. and in Lord Shaftesbury's case prescription, ne poet auterment prescriber forsque en luy, & en ses auncestors, que heire il est, & nemy per ceux parols, en luy & en ceux que estate il ad; pur ceo que il ne poet aver lour estate sans fait ou auter es-cripture, le quel covient destre monstre a le court, si il voile aver escun advantage de ceo. Et pur ceo que le grant et alienation dun villeine en gros (3) ne gist sans fait ou autre escripture, home ne pout prescriber en un villein en gros sans monstrans d'escripture, sinon en soy mesme que clame le villeine, et en ses auncestors que heire il est. Mes de tiels

choses, que sont regar-dants ou appendants a un mannor ou a au-ters terres et tenements, home poet pre-scriber, que il, et ceux que estate il ad, queux fueront seises de le manner, ou de tiels
terres et tenements, &c. ont este seises de tiels choses come regardants ou appendants a le mannor, ou
a tiels terres et tenements (4) de temps
dont memorie, &c. (5)
Et la cause est pur ceo que tiel manor,

such things by prescription, cannot otherwise prescribe, but in him and in his aunces-tors, whose heire he is, and not by these words, In him and them whose estate he hath;
for that he cannot have their estate without deed or other writing, the which ought to be shewed to the court, if he will take any advantage of it.
And because the grant and alienation of a villeine in grosse lyeth not without deed, or other writing, a man cannot prescribe in a villein in grosse, without shewing forth a writing, but in himselfe which claims the villeine, and in his auncestours whose heire he is. But if such things, which are re-gardant or appending to a mannour, or to other lands and tenements, a man may prescribe, that he and they whose estate he hath, who were seised of the mannor, or of such lands and tenements, &c. have been seised of those things, as regardant or ap-
pendant to the manor, or to such lands and tenements time out of mind of man. And the domini regis, vel ejus justiciarii (1). [2] Talis con- [3] 9. Co. cap. 3. Statut. de mocordia finalis dicitur, eo quod do levandi fines. Pl. Com. 357.

finem imponit negotio, adeo ut neutra pars litigantium ab eo de cetero poterit recedere (2).
Of the severall parts of a fine,
and many incidents to the same, you shall reade in my
(3. Co. 84. 8. Co. 51.)
Reports. 5. Co. fol. 38. Teye's case.

Que estate, &c.

Quorum statum, as much as to say, whose estate he hath.
Here Littleton declareth one excellent rule, [6] that a man cannot prescribe in any thing by a que estate, that lyeth in grant, and cannot passe without deed or fine; but in him and his auncestors he may, because he comes in by descend without any conveyance.
Neither can a man plead a que estate in himselfe, of any thing, that cannot passe without deed; [p] but in another he may, as, in barre of an avowry, the plaintife may plead a que estate in the feiniory in the avowant. But Littleton's words are to be observed, (home que voile aver tiels choses per prescription). Therefore [q] when a thing, that lyeth in grant, is but a conveyance to the thing claimed by prescription, there a que estate may be alledged of a thing that lyeth in grant, as a man may prescribe, that he and his auncestors, and all those whose estate he hath in an hundred, have time out of minde, &c. had a leet, &c.
this is good, &c.

[r] Regularly the plaintife shall not intitle him by a que estate, but he must shew how he came by it; but after avowry made, the plaintife shall plead a que estate, because he is now become as a defendant.

[s] A man may plead a que estate of a tenancy in taile or of an estate for life, so as he averreth the life of them;
but he cannot plead a que estate of a lease for yeares (6), or at will.

[t] A disseisor, abatour, [7] 22 H. 6. 74. 6. E. 4. 12.
intruder, recoveror, or any other that cometh in the possi- shall H. 6. 14. 9. H. 6. Estop. 25.

may find the following references useful.—For the history of dispensations, see Dav. 69. b. Pryn. on 4. Infl. 128. to 133. Atkyns on power of dispens. with pen. stat.—For the cases on the subject, see the case of the merchants of Waterford in 2. R. 3. 11. 1. H. 7. 2. the sheriff's case in 2. H. 7. 6. b. the doctrine in 11. H. 7. 11. b. 12. a. Grendon and the bishop of Lincoln Plowd. 502. case of the aulnager Dy. 303. Calvin's case 7. Co. 15. the Prince's case 8. Co. 29. b. case of the taylors of Ipswich 11. Co. 53. case of monopolies ibid. 84. Irish case of commendam Dav. 68. case of customs 12. Co. 18. the cases cited ante note 3. Colt and Glover v. the bishop of Litchfield, or English case of commendam Mo. 898. 1. Rol. Rep. 151. Hob. 146. Evans and Kiffins v. Alkwith, W. Jo. 158. Palm. 457. Latch 31. 233. Noy 93. 2. Rol. Rep. 430. case of clerk of the court of wards Hob. 214. Needler and the bishop of Winchester Hob. 230. Lord Wentworth's case Mo. 713. case of dispensation with 3. Jam. 1. c. 5. against a recusant's holding an office Hardr. 110. cases of dispensation with statutes against retailing wine without licence; namely, Young and Wright 1. Sid. 6. Thomas and Waters Hardr. 443. 2. Keb. 425. Thomas and Boys, Hardr. 464. Thomas and Sorrell Vaugh. 330. 1. Lev. 217. 1. Freem. 85. 115. 128. 137. 2. Keb. 245. 280. 322. 372. 416. 790. 3. Keb. 76. 119. 143. 155. 184. 223. 233. 264. Sir Edward Hales's case on the test act of 25. Ch. 2. in 2. Show. 475. Comberb. 21. State tri. v. 7. p. 612. 4. Bac. Abr. 179. and case of the seven bishops in the reign of Jam. 2. State tr. 4th. ed. v. 5. p. 303. Of these cases, Thomas and Sorrell and Sir Edward Hales's are the principal. The former was argued with the greatest solemnity in the Exchequer-chamber, the delivery of the opinion of the judges, of whom the majority was for the dispensation, taking up a day in four several terms. The latter was treated with less form; but gave occasion to some considerable publications on the subject; particularly lord chief-justice Herbert's account of the authorities on which the judgment was given in Sir Edward Hales's case, Mr. Atwood's answer to it, and a tract by lord chief-baron Atkyns against the king's power of dispensing with penal statutes. In a manuscript report of Sir Edward Hales's case, Sir Bartholomew Shower is mentioned to have replied to lord chief-baron Atkyns. But we have not yet met with any such piece. Mr. Hume's state of the arguments for and against the dispensing power, though written with an evident bias in favour of the crown's prerogative, is worth consulting. Hume's Hist. 8vo. ed. v. 8. p. 242. 254. See also Tyr. Bibliothec. Politic. 589. to 597.—For the proceedings in parliament after the Revolution, in respect to Sir Edward Hales's case and the dispensing power, see Gray's Deb. v. 9. p. 297. to 307. 314. to 332. 336. to 344. 396. Chandl. Deb. of the Lords, v. 1. p. 394.

(1) This, though a just description of fines, considered according to their original and still apparent import, yet gives a very inadequate idea of them in their modern application. In Glanville's time they were really amicable compositions of actual suits. But for several centuries past, fines have been only so in name, being in fact fictional proceedings, in order to transfer or secure real property, by a mode more efficacious than ordinary conveyances. What the superiority of a fine in this respect consists of will best appear, by stating the chief uses to which it is applied.—One use of a fine is extinguishing dormant titles, by shortening the usual time of limitation. Fines, being agreements concerning lands or tenements solemnly made in the king's courts, were deemed case. 1. P. Wms. 102. Gilb. 172.—(16) Another species of customary guardianship is, where by the special custom of a manor the lord

[u] 11. H. 4. 81. 27. H. 6. 32.
9. E. 4. 3. 2. E. 6. tit. Que estate 8. 1. E. 6. Que estate Br.
49. (Cro. Cha. 54. 1. Lev. 190.)

shall plead a que estate.

[u] A que estate must be alleged in the tenant or defendant himselfe, and not in one in the meane conveyance, from whom he claimeth;
and yet some bookes be to the contrary.

ou terres et (1) tenements poyent passer per alienation sans fait, &c.

reason is, for that such manor or lands and tenements may passe
by alienation without deed, &c.

Le quel covient destre monstre al court. The reason wherefore a deed, that is pleaded, ought to be shewed to the court is; because every deed must prove itselfe to have sufficient words in law, whereof the court must adjudge, and also to be proved by others, as by witnesses or other prooffe if the deed be denied, which is matter of fact.

Per alienation sans fait, &c. Here by (&c.) is implied, that whatsoever passeth by livery of seisin, either in deed or in law, may passe without deed; and not only the rents and services parcell of the manor shall with the demeanes, as the more principall and worthy, passe by livery without deed, but all things regardant, appendant, and appurtenant to the manor, as incidents or adjuncts to the same, shall, together with the manor, passe without deed, all which, as here it appeareth, and elsewhere is said, shall passe, without saying cum pertinentiis (2).

Sect. 184.

*REgardant : Vide sect.
181.*

Appendants. Appendant is any inheritance belonging to another, that is superior or more worthy.
In law it is called pertinens, quasi invicem tenens, holding one another, a word indifferent both to things appendant, and things appurtenant. The quality and nature of the things do make the difference. But regardant (as our author faith) is only applied to a villeine. (*) Ap-

*ET est ascavoir, que nul chose est nosme regardant a un mannor, &c. for-que villeine. Mes certeine auters choses come advowson et common de pasture,
&c. sont nosmes ap-pendants al man-nor ou al terres et (3) tenements, &c.*

AND it is to be understood, that nothing is named regar-dant to a mannor, &c.
but a villeine. But certaine other things, as an advowson and common of pasture, &c. are named appendant
to the mannor, or to the lands and tenements, &c.

Vide sect. 1.

(*) 5. Aff. 9. 8. H. 7. 4. 5. 28.
H. 8. Dier 30. b. Pl. Com. 381.
F. N. B. fol. 181. (2. Ro. Abr.
60. 5. Co. 17. b.)

[x] 43. Aff. p. 10. 42. E. 3. 22.
(10. Co. 64. 65. 2. Ro. Abr.
185.)

[y] Hill and Grange's case. Pl.
Com. 168.

(1. Rol. Abr. 230.)

[z] 1. H. 7. 24. Pl. Com. 169.

[a] 5. Aff. 9. (1. Sid. 354.)

[b] 10. E. 3. 5. 37. H. 6. 34.

26. H. 8. 4. 4. Co. 36. 37. in Tirringham's case.

pendants are ever by prescription (4); but appurtenances may be created in some cases at this day.
(5) As if a man at this day grant to a man and his heires common in such a moore for his beas leaving or couchant upon his mannor, or if he grant, to another, common of estovers, or tur-bary in fee simple, to be burnt or spent within his mannor; by these grants these commons are appurtenant to the mannor, and shall passe by the grant thereof. In the civill law it is called adjunctum (6).

[x] If A. be seised of a mannor, whereunto the franchise of waife and stray and such like are appendant, and the king purchaseth the mannor with the appurtenances, now are the royall franchises reunited to the crowne, and not appendant to the mannor. But if he grant the mannor in as large and ample manner as A. had, &c. it is said, that the franchises shall be appendant (or rather appurtenant) to the mannor.

Concerning things appendant and appurtenant, two things are implied [y],

First, that prescription (which regularly is the mother thereof) doth not make any thing appendant or appurtenant, unlesse the thing appendant or appurtenant agree in quality and nature to the thing, whereunto it is appendant or appurtenant; as a thing corporeall cannot properly be appendant to a thing corporeall, nor a thing incorporeall to a thing incorporeall (7). But things incorporeall, which lye in grant, as advowsons, villeins, commons, and the like, may be appendant to things corporeall, as a mannor house or lands; or things corporeall to things incorporeall, as lands to an office. [z] But yet (as hath been said) they must agree in nature and quality; for [a] common of turbary or of estovers cannot be appendant or appurtenant to land, but to a house to be spent there. [b] Nor a leet, that is temporall, to a church or chappell, which is ecclesiasticall. Neither can a nobleman, esquire, &c. claime a seat in a church by prescription

For notes to this side of fol. 121. b. see 126. a.

deemed to be of equal notoriety with judgments in writs of right; and therefore the common law allowed them to have the same quality of barring all, who should not claim within a year and a day. See Plowd. 357. Hence we may probably date the origin and frequent use of fines as feigned proceedings. But this puissance of a fine was taken away by the 24. E. 3. and this statute continued in force till the 1. R. 3. and 4. H. 7. which revived the ancient law, though with some change, proclamations being required to make fines more notorious, and the time for claiming being enlarged from a year and a day to five years. See 24. E. 3. c. 16. 1. R.
3. c. 7. 4. H. 7. c. 24. The force of fines on the rights of strangers being thus regulated, it has been ever since a common practice to levy them merely for better guarding a title against claims, which, under the common statutes of limitation, might subsist, with a right of entry for twenty years, and with a right of action for a much longer time.—Another use or effect of fines is barring estates tail, where the more extensively operative mode by common recovery is either unnecessary or impracticable. The former may be the case when one is tenant in tail with an immediate reversion or remainder in fee; for then none can derive a title to the estate except as his privies or heirs, in which character his fine is an immediate bar to them. The latter occurs, when one has only a remainder in tail, and the person, having the freehold in possession, refuses to make a tenant to the precise for a common recovery, which would bar all remainders and reversions; for, under such circumstances, all which the party can do is to bar those claiming under himself by a fine. How this power of a fine over estates tail commenced, has been vexata quaestio. The statute de donis, after converting fees conditional into estates tail, concludes with protecting them from fines, there being express words for that purpose. But the doubt is, when this protection was withdrawn, whether by the 4. H. 7. or the 32.
H. 8. It is a common notion, into which some of our most respectable historians have fallen, that the 4. H. 7. was the statute which first loosened entails; and thus opening the door for a free alienation of landed property has been attributed to the deep policy of the prince then on the throne. See Hume's History 8vo. ed. v. 3. p. 400. But this is an error proceeding from a strange inattention to the real history of the subject. Common recoveries had been sanctified by a judicial opinion in Taltarum's case, as early as the twelfth of Edward the fourth: and from them it was, that entails received their death wound; for, by this fiction of common recoveries, into the origin of which we mean to scrutinize in some other place, every tenant in tail in possession was enabled to bar intails in the most perfect and absolute manner; whereas fines, even now, being only a partial bar of the issue of the persons who levy them, must in general be an inefficacious mode. In respect to the 4. H. 7. it was scarce more than a repetition of the 1. R. 3. the only object of which indisputably was to repeal the statute made the 32. E. 3. in favour of non claims, and against them to revive the ancient force of fines, but with some abatement of the rigor in point of time and other improvements, as we have already hinted; a provision of the utmost consequence to the security of titles. Accordingly lord Bacon, whose discernment none will question, in his life of Henry the seventh, commends the statute of the 4th of his reign, merely as if aimed at non claims. Bac. Hen. 7. in Ken. Comp. Hist. 2d. ed. v. 1. p. 596. Nor indeed could there have been the least lord names, or is himself the guardian of an infant copyholder. See 2. Com. Dig. 399. The nature of this guardianship depends wholly on the custom of the particular manor; and though it is not expressly saved by the 12. Cha. 2. yet it has been held, that

tion as appendant or belonging to land, but to a house; for that such a seat belongeth to the house in respect of the inhabitancy thereof; and therefore, if the house be part of a manor, yet in that case he may claime the seat as appendant to the house for the reason aforesaid.

Secondly, that nothing can be properly appendant or appurtenant to any thing, unlesse the principall or superior thing be of perpetuall subsistence or continuance. For example, an advowson, that is said to be appendant to a manor, is in rei veritate appendant to the demesnes of the manor, which are of perpetuall subsistence and continuance, and not to rents or services, which are subject to extinguishment and destruction (1).

An advowson is appendant to the manor of Dale, of which manor the manor of Sale is holden, the manor of Sale is made parcel of the manor of Dale by way of escheat, the advowson is only appendant to the manor of Dale.

And where it is said, that a chamber may be parcell of a corody, and passe by the name of the corody, which may be extinguished, there he, that hath the corody, hath but his habitation in the chamber; as a fellow of Trinity colledge in Cambridge hath in his chamber, or as one, that had a corody and a chamber in an house of religion, he had but his habitation only. As for offices of fee, whereunto land may appertain, they are of perpetuall subsistence, either being in esse, or in that they are grantable over.

Note that an advowson at one turne may be appendant, and at another turne in grosse. As if the manor be divided betweene coparceners, and every one hath a part of the manor without saying any thing of the advowson appendant, the advowson remains in coparcenary, and yet, in every of their turnes, it is appendant to that part, which they have; and so it is, if they make composition to present against common right, yet it remains appendant. But if upon such a partition an expresse exception be made of the advowson, then the advowson remains in coparcenary and in grosse, and so are the bookes reconciled.

Common de pasture. [c] Communia, it cometh of the English word common, because it is common to many; and thereupon and accordingly is here called by Littleton common of pasture, for that the feeding of beasts in the land wherein the common is to be had belongs to many.

[d] There be foure kinds of common of pasture, viz. common appendant, which is of common right, (and therefore a man need not prescribe for it) (2) for beasts commonable (that is) that serve for the maintenance of the plough, as horse and oxen to plough the land, and for kine and sheepe to competer the land, and is appendant to arable land (3).

[e] The second is common appurtenant, that is, for beasts not commonable; as swine, goats, and the like. [f] If a man purchase part of the land, wherein common appendant is to be had, the common shall be apportioned, because it is of common right; but not so of a common appurtenant, or of any other common of what nature soever. But both common appendant and appurtenant shall be apportioned, by alienation of part of the land, to which common is appendant or appurtenant; and for common appurtenant one must prescribe (4).

[g] The third is common per cause de vicinage, which differeth from both the other commons; for that no man can put his beasts therein, but they must escape thither of themselves by reason of vicinity, in which case one may inclose against the other, though it hath beene so used time out of mind, for that it is but an excuse for trespass.

The last is common in grosse, which is so called, for that it appertaineth to no land, and must be by writing or prescription. Of common appendant, appurtenant, and in grosse, some be certaine, that is, for a certaine number of beasts; some certaine by consequent, viz. for such as be levant and couchant upon the land; and some be more incertaine, as common sauns number in grosse, and yet the tenant of the land must common or feed there also (5).

There be also [h] divers other commons, as of estovers, of turbary, of piscary, of digging for coles, minerals and the like. [i] If common appendant be claymed to a manor, yet in rei veritate it is appendant to the demesnes, and not to the services; and therefore if a tenancy escheate, the lord shall not encrease his common by reason of that.

[k] If a man claime by prescription any manner of common in another man's land, and that the owner of the land shall be excluded to have pasture, estovers or the like, this is a prescription or custome against the law, to exclude the owner of the foyle; for it is against the nature of this word common, and it was implied in the first grant, that the owner of the foyle should take his reasonable profit there, as it hath beene adjudged. * [l] But a man may prescribe or alledge a custome to have and enjoy solam vesturam terræ, from such a day till such a day, and hereby the owner of the foyle shall be excluded to pasture or feed there (6); and so he may prescribe to have separalem pasturam, and exclude the owner of the foyle from feeding there. Nota diversitatem. [m] So a man may prescribe to have separalem piscariam in such a water, and the owner of the foyle shall not fish there; but if he claim to have communiam piscariam, or liberam piscariam, the owner of the foyle shall fish there (7). And all this hath beene

For the notes to this side of fol. 122. a. see 126. b.

least pretence to extend the meaning of the law further, if it had not been for some ambiguous expressions in the latter end of it. Like the 1. R. 3. after declaring a fine with proclamation to be an universal bar, it saves to all, except parties, five years to claim after the proclamations of it. But this saving did not suit the case of the issue in tail, or of those in remainder or reversion; because during the life of the immediate tenant in tail, these could have no right to the possession, and it was possible, that he might live more than five years from the proclamation of the fine. The framers of the 4. H. 7. foresaw this; and therefore like the 1. R. 3. it contains an additional saving of five years for all persons, to whom any title should come after the proclamation of the fine by force of any intail subsisting before; words, which as strongly apply to the issue of the tenant in tail levying a fine, as to those in remainder or reversion. Had therefore the 4. H. 7. stopped here, what the learned and instructive observer on our ancient statutes writes would be strictly just, that, instead of destroying estates tail, the statute expressly saves them. Barringt. on. Ant. Stat. 2d. ed. p. 337. But a subsequent part of the statute, in declaring how a fine shall operate on such as have five years allowed, if they do not claim within that time, expresses, that they shall be concluded in like form as parties and privies; and another clause, in regulating, who should be at liberty to aver against a fine quod partes nihil habuerunt, saves this plea for all persons, with an exception of privies as well as parties. From these two clauses, though the former of them was copied from the 1. R. 3. grew a doubt, whether the statute did not enable tenant in tail to bar his issue by a fine. The arguments for it were, that the issue were privies both in blood and estate; and that if the statute meant to bind them, when the tenant in tail had not any estate in the land at the time of the fine, it was highly improbable, there should be a different intention, when he really had one. 2. Show. 114. On the other hand it might be said, that, as the word privies in the statute de modo levandi fines and in the 1. R. 3. was not deemed sufficient to reach heirs in tail, and to control the statute de donis, why then should the same word in the 4. H. 7. include them; more especially, when it was considered, that it was as much the professed scope of the 4. H. 7. as it was of the 1. R. 3. to revive the operation of fines against non claims, and that both contained the same express saving for persons claiming under intails? 2. Inst. 317. Pollexf. 502. By such contrariety of reasoning, the judges in the 19. H. 8. became divided in opinion; three holding, that the 4. H. 7. was not a bar to the issue, and four that it was. See 19. H. 8. 6. b. Dy. 2. b. pl. 1. Br. Abr. Fines, 1. 121. 123. Bro. N. C. 144. Pollexf. 502. To remove the doubt the legislature passed the 32. H. 8. by which the heirs in tail are expressly bound. 32. H. 8. c. 26. But the last named statute, though entitled an exposition of the 4. H. 7. and though made to operate retrospectively, contained several exceptions, particularly one of fines of lands, of which the reversion is in the crown. Consequently room was still left for contesting the effect of the 4. H. 7. independently of the 32. H. 8. and in the reign of Charles the second a case arose, which made a discussion of the point almost unavoidable. It was the case of the earl of Derby against one claiming under a fine by the earl's father, who was tenant in tail with reversion in the crown, and so within an exception in the 32. H. 8. Two points were made, of which the first was whether this fine, thus depending wholly on the 4. H. 7. was a bar to the issue in tail; and on adjournment of the case into the Exchequer-chamber, eight judges against three held, that the fine of tenant in tail was a bar to the

that the father's appointment of the custody of his child under that statute will not extend to copyhold estates. Church and Cudmore, 2. Lutw. 1181. 3. Lev. 395. and Comberb. 253.—But besides the several kinds of guardians enumerated by lord Coke, and

Lib. 2. Cap. 11. Of Villenage. Sect. 185, 186.

(*) Inter Chiner and Fishen in le Corn. Banke in repievin & Mich. 29. & 30. Eliz. inter Shirland and White in com. Oxon. Et inter Foiston & Craeh. rode eodem termino in Essex. (2. Rol. Abr. 267.)
[u] 19. H. 6. 33.
[e] Vide sect. 541.
(4. Co. 31. a. Post. 307. 349. b. 363. b.)

beene resolved. (*) And therefore it is necessary for every man by learned advice to plead according to the truth of his case; for parols font plea.
[u] A man seised of land, whereunto common is appendant, and is disseised, the disseisee cannot use the common, untill he entreteth into the land whereunto it is appendant. [o] But if a man be disseised of a manner, whereunto an advowson is appendant, he may present unto the advowson, before he enters into the manor; and the reason of this diversitie is, because in the case of the common it should be a prejudice to the tenant of the soile, for if the disseisee might do it, the disseisor also might put on his cattle, which should be a double charge to the tenant, but not so of the advowson.

Sect. 185.

Bract. lib. 1. cap. 6. Britton fol. 78. Fleta li. 1. c. 3. 43. E. 3. 4. b. 19. E. 2. tit. Vill. 34. 18. E. 4. 29.
[p] 19. H. 6. 32. 26. Aff 63. 37. Aff 17. 11. H. 4. 16. in appeale. (2. Ro. Abr. 732.)

THIS is intended in some action brought against him that made such confession, [p] or where he is brought into court by course of law; for if he commeth into the court extrajudicially and not by any due course of law, such confession is without warrant of law, and bindeth not the partie, because the court had no warrant to take it. But if a præcipe be brought against one, he may confesse himselfe villeine to an estranger, and that he holds the land in villenage of him, and this is good and shall bind him. And if in that case the demandant reply, that he the day of his writ purchased was a freeman (2), and thereupon issue is taken, and he is tryed to be free, yet he shall remaine villeine to the stranger in respect of his confession.

ITEM si home voile en court de record soy conufter desire villeine, que ne fuit villein adevant, tiel est villeine en grosse.

ALSO if a man will acknowledge him selfe in a court of record to be a villeine, who was not a villein before, such a one is a villeine in grosse (1).

If a writ of namore habendo be brought against one, and the plaintiffe, as he ought, offereth in his count to prove the villenage by the cousins and kindred of the defendant, and therupon produceth the uncles of the defendant, who upon examination confesse themselves to be villeines to the demandant, this confession, being entred of record, doth so bind, that, albeit they were so free before, they and the heires of their bodies are by this confession bond and villeines for ever, for the uncles came in by due course of law in an action depending in court.

Sect. 186.

Niese. Or naife is in Latine naturalis, seu nativa, because for the most part nieces are bond by nativitie.

Feme que est ut-lage est dit waive.

Waive, waviata, and not utlagata or exlex; for that women are not sworne in leets, or tornes, as men, which be of the age of twelve yeares or more be; and therefore men may be called utlagati, id est, extra legem positi, but women are waviatae, id est, derelictæ, left out or not regarded, because they were not sworne to the law; wherein it is to be noted, that of ancient time a man was not said to be within the law, that was not sworne to the law, which is intended of the oath of allegiance in the leet (4).
And the outlawrie of a woman is legally called waviataria mulieris.

ITEM home que est villein est appelle villeine (3), et feme que est villein est appelle niese: si come home que est ut-lage est dit utlage, et feme que est utlage est dit waive.

ALSO a man which is a villeine is called a villeine, and a woman which is villein is called a niese: as a man which is outlawed is called outlawed, and a woman, which is outlawed is called waived.

F. N. B. 161. a. Regist. 132. & 277. Britton fol. 20. Bract. 1. 3. tract. 2. ca. 12. 13. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 28. 3. H. 5. tit. Utlawry Statutum.

Regist. orig. 132. (2. Rol. Abr. 804.)

Sect.

For notes to this file of fol. 122. a. see 126. b.

the issue before the 32. H. 8. great streis however being laid by those of this opinion on the exposition of the former by the latter. See Murrey on the demise of the earl of Derby against Eyton and Price, Patch. 31. Ch. 2. in Scacc. T. Raym. 260. 286. 319. 318. Pollexf. 491. Skinn. 95. 2. Show. 104. T. Jo. 137. It is observable, that both lord keeper North and lord chief-justice Saunders, the lateness of whose promotions prevented their publicly giving their opinions, concurred with the majority of the judges in the construction of the 4. H. 7. and further, that Pollexten, who as counsel argued most ably for the earl of Derby the issue in tail, afterwards declared his private sentiments to be against the earl on that statute. But it should be adverted to, that, though the majority of the judges were against lord Derby on this point, they gave judgment for him on a secondary one, which was, that the entail, being of the gift of the crown, fell within the protection of the 34. H. 8. Therefore their opinion on the 4. H. 7. finally proved to be wholly extrajudicial. But we do not know of any case, in which the controversy has been again agitated.—A third effect of fines is passing the estates and interests of married women in the inheritance or freehold of lands and tenements. Our common law bountifully invests the husband with a right over the whole of the wife's personality, and entitles him to the rents and profits of her real estate during the coverture. It further gives him an estate for his own life in her inheritance, if the husband is actually in possession, and there is born any issue of the marriage capable of inheriting. But the same law, which confers so much on the husband, will not allow her, whilst a feme-covert, to enlarge the provision for him out of her property, or to strip herself of any claims which the law gives her on his. On the contrary, jealous of his great authority over her, and fearful of his using compulsion, it creates a disability in her to give her consent to any thing, which may affect her right or claims after the coverture, and makes all acts of such a tendency absolute nullities. By the rigour of the ancient law, we take this rule to have been so universally applicable, that a married woman could in no case bind herself or her heirs by any direct mode of alienation. But accident gave birth to two indirect modes, namely, by fines and common recoveries. Though it might be proper to incapacitate the wife, from being influenced by the husband to prejudice herself by any conveyances or agreements during the coverture, yet justice to others required, that such, as might have any claim on the wife's freehold or inheritance, should not be forced to postpone their suits till the marriage was determined; for if they should, then, to use the words of Bracton, in explaining why the husband's infancy would not warrant the parol to demur in a suit for the wife's land, mulier implacitata de jure suo si propter minorem ætatem viri posset differre judicium, ita posset qualibet mulier in fraudem nubere. Bract. lib. 5. tract. 5. c. 21. fo. 423. a. Probably it was on this principle, the common law allowed a judgment against husband and wife in a suit for her land to be as conclusive, as if given against a feme sole; which was carried so far, that, till the statute of Westminster the second, even judgment against them, on default in a possessory action for the wife's freehold, drove the wife after the husband's death to a writ of right to recover her land. 2. Inst. 342. From enabling the husband and wife to defend her title, and making the judgment on such defence to be conclusive, permitting them to compound the suit by a final agreement of record, in the same manner as other suitors, was no great or difficult transition; more especially when its considered, that in the case of femes covert fines are never allowed to pass, without the court's secret examination of them apart from their husbands, to know, whether their consent is the result of a free choice, or of the husband's compulsive influence. Such, we conceive is the true source, whence may be derived the present force of fines and common recoveries as against the wife, who joins in them; for, whatever in point of bar and conclusion was their effect, when in suits really adverse, of course attended them, when they were feigned, and in that form gradually rose into modes of alienation, or, as the more usual phrase is, common assurances. The con-

and those we have already mentioned in addition, there are four others which still remain to be noticed.
The first of these is guardian by election of the infant himself. But the right of making such an election only arises, when from

Sect. 187.

ITEM si un villein prent frank feme a feme, et ad issue enter eux, lis-sues ferront villeines.
Mes si niese prent franke home a sa baron, lour issues serra franke.

* Et cest contrarie
a le ley civil; car la est dit, partus sequitur ventrem * (1).

ALSO if a villeine taketh a free woman to wife, and have issue betweene them,
the issues shall be villeines. But if a niese taketh a freeman to her husband, their issue shall be free.

* This is contrarie to the civill law; for there it is said, partus sequitur ventrem *.

man is enfranchised during the coverture (3); and therefore by the issue is free (4).

[1] Si mulier serva copulata sit libero, &c. quod partus habebit hereditatem, & mater nullam dotem, quia mortuo viro suo libero redit in pristinum statum servitutis, nisi haeres ei dotem fecerit de gratia (5). And when a bondman marieth a free woman, they are all one person in law, and duae animae in carne una, and uxor subiecta est viro, & sub potestate viri (6).

[2] Observatur in com' Cornubiae de tali consuetudine, quae talis est, quod si liber homo ducat nativam aliquam in uxorem ad liberum tenementum & liberum thorum, si ex ea duae procreantur filiae, una erit libera & altera villana, quia ibi partiti sunt pueri inter liberum patrem & dominum uxoris villanae.

[3] Qui vero procreantur ex nativa unius & nativo alterius, proportionabiliter inter dominos sunt dividendi. [x] Glanvill lib. 5. cap. 6.

Et ceo est contrarie al ley civil. (7) For true it is, that by that law partus sequitur ventrem, as well where a free man takes a bond woman to wife, as where a bondman takes a free woman to wife. In the first case the issue is by the civill law bond, and in the other free; both which cases are contrarie to the law of England. But this is no part of Littleton; and therefore we in this manner pass it over.

Sect. 188.

ITEM nul bastard poit estre
villein, si non que il voile sey conuster es-tre villeine en court de record; car il est en ley quasi nullius filius, pur ceo que il ne
poit enheriter a nulluy.

ALSO no bastard
may be a villeine, unless he will acknowledge himselfe to be a villeine in a court of record; for he is in law quasi nullius filius, because he cannot be heir to any.

Nullius [a] filius. [a] Vide sect. 399. 13. E. 1. tit.
Cui pater est populus,
pater est sibi nullus &
omnis.

Cui pater est populus, non habet ille patrem.

[b] Some hold that the [b] Bract. lib. 1. fo. 5. a. Fleta bastard of a niese shall be a lib. 1. cap. 3. Britton fol. 78.
villeine. [c] And others hold, [c] 39. E. 3. 34. 43. E. 3. 4.
that if a villeine hath a bastard by a woman, and after marieth the woman, that this bastard is a villeine. But the common law is a bastard, law is contrary in both cases; for in both cases, the issue by the common law is a bastard, and consequently, quasi nullius filius, as Littleton here saith. [d] Though a bastard be a [d] 23. Eliz. Dyer 374.

reputed sonne, yet is he not such a sonne, in consideration whereof an use can be raysed, for the reason that Littleton here yeelds; because in judgment of law he is nullius filius. [e] (8) And, [e] 13. Eliz. Dier 296.
for

(1) The sentence between the stars is not in L. & M. Roh. or P.—(2) Siens, or, according to the modern spelling, cion, signifies the shoot of a tree, and is derived from the French word seion, which is the same as furculus in Latin.—(3) According to Fitzherbert, the marriage enfranchises the woman for ever; and he cites as an authority Britton, who considers it as a negligence in the lord not to have prevented the marriage. F. N. B. 78. G. Brit. 79. b. But Bracton, in the passage cited by lord Coke two or three lines further, confines the enfranchisement to the coverture; and there are several authorities, which concur with him. Bro. Villenage 23. Pasch. 33. E. 3. Statham tit. Villenage. Fitzh. Abr. Villenage 21. 30. 46. Lord Coke was aware of this contrariety in the books; for in a subsequent part he takes notice of it, but calls the opinion, that the enfranchisement ceases with the coverture, the better one. Polt. 136. b. 137. b. However he inclines to except the case of the nief's marrying with her own lord. But even this is denied by Perkins. Perk. sect. 314. It is a strong argument against this latter writer, that, in other cases of constructive manumissions, though in some the ground of inference was not so strong as the lord's marriage with his nief, the enfranchisement was perpetual. It is a still more forcible reason, that reviving the slavery on the lord's death, if he left an heir by his nief, would have necessarily induced the unnatural consequence of making the mother the slave of her own issue.—(4) It was unnecessary to resort to this reason to prove the issue of such a marriage free. The rule of our law being, that the child shall follow the father's condition, consequently, whether the nief was free or bond during the coverture, made no difference to her issue.—(5) In the chapter of Dower lord Coke represents a nief marrying a free-man to be dowable. Ante 31.
a. But this passage from Bracton is direct to the contrary. Perkins distinguishes, allowing dower to the nief from a stranger, but not from her lord. Perk. sect. 314.—(6) Here lord Coke omits explaining what effect the marriage of a villein with a free woman has on his condition. As Britton writes, if the villein marries his own lady, it enfranchises him for ever. Brit. 78. b.
If the marriage is with any other woman, it is clear from Littleton's declaring the issue villeins, that the father remained a slave as before.—(7) This difference between our and the civil law is the subject of the chapter in Fortesc. de Laud. Leg. Angl.
cited in the margin. See also Mr. Selden's and Mr. Gregor's notes in the 8vo. ed. of 1775.—(8) This point was so held in Worfeley's case of 23. Eliz. in Dyer, which lord Coke refers to in the margin. According to Dyer judge Periam was of a contrary opinion. But Anderson, who reports the same case, informs us, that the judges were agreed. 1. And. 75.
In the queen against an illegitimate son of sir John Perrot, and in Frampton against Gerrard, two subsequent cases of the same reign, the judges recognized the doctrine. 2. Rol. Abr. 785. 791. and Mo. 735. However it should be observed, that, though a bastard is not a son, for whom the consideration of blood will raise an use, yet, on an estate otherwise effectually passed, an use may be as well declared to a bastard being in esse and sufficiently described as to another person; and so Rolle in his Abridgment, states the law to be, but at the same time cites the case of Frampton and Gerrard as determined to the contrary. 1. Ro. Abr. 791. Gilb. on Uses 207. The reason, why the use to the bastard is good in the first instance and bad in the second, depends on the common, but perhaps obscure, distinction, between uses raised by transmutation of the possession, as on a feoffment grant fine or common recovery, and those raised without, as a covenant to stand seised or bargain and sale; or, to express it in more intelligible terms, between declaring uses on a possession or estate actually transferred to a third person, and declaring them on a possession or estate retained in the party himself. In the former case the estate is passed completely

Continuation of notes to 121. a.

jecture we have thus hazarded to illustrate, how it happens, that a married woman may alienate her real rights by fine, though
not from a defect of the law, the infant finds himself wholly unprovided with a guardian. This may happen to be the case, either from

14. Eliz. Dier 313. 18. Eliz. Dier 345.

[f] Trin. 18. E. 1. rot. 61. Bedf. coram rege. (Cro. Jam. 541. 1. Rol. Abr. 536. Godb. 281. Palm. 9.)

4. Eldras 4 41. Vide Panciroll, Nova report, pag. 485. &c.

for the same reason, where the statute of 32. H. 8. of wills, speaketh of children, bastard children are not within that statute, and the bastard of a woman is no child within that statute, where the mother conveys lands unto him.

[f] It was found by verdict, that Henry the sonne of Beatrice, which was the wife of Robert Radwell deceased, was borne per undecim dies post ultimum tempus legitimum mulieribus constitutum. And thereupon it was adjudged, quod dictus Henricus dici non debet filius prædicti Roberti secundum legem & consuetudinem Angliæ constitut (1). Now legitimum tempus in that case appointed by law at the furthest is nine moneths, or forty weeks (2); but she may be delivered before that time, which judgement I thought good to mention. And this agreeth with that in Eldras. Vade & interroga prægnantem, si quando impleverit novem menses suos, adhuc poterit matris ejus retinere partum in semetipsa? & dixi, non potest, domine.

Sect. 189.

CHescun villeine est able & franke

[g] Bract. lib. 4. fol. 196. Britton cap. 49. fo. 125.

[h] 14. E. 4. 6. b. 15. E. 4. 32. 20. E. 3. tit. Villein 10. 38. E. 3. 21.

[i] Fleta lib. 2. cap. 4.

de fuer, &c. [g] In an action brought by a villeine, versus non dominum, non valebit ei exceptio, quia est servus alienus, ex quo nihil ad ipsum utrum liber sit an servus. [h] And it is to be observed, that he, that hath but a particular estate in a villeine, as tenant for life or for years, shall disable the villeine, if he brings an action against him; but the lessor shall not (as it is said) disable him. [i] Examinatio villenagii non tenet, nisi ex ore veri domini fuerit pronunciata.

Appeale. Appellum commeth of the French word appeller, that signifieth to accuse or appeach. An appeach. [k] An appeale is an accusation of one upon another; with a purpose to attain him of felonie by words ordained for it.

(1. Inst. 131.) [k] Brit. cap. 22. fo. 38. Bracton lib. 1. fo. 6.

[l] 18. E. 3. 32. 11. H. 4. 93. 1. H. 4. 6. 29. H. 6. tit. Coron. 17. [m] Fleta li. 1. c. 5. 1. H. 4. 6

De mort [l] for a villeine shall not have an appeale of robbery against his lord; for that he may lawfully take the goods of the villein as his own. [m] And if in an appeale of death it be found for the plaintife, he is enfranchised for ever. Hinc enim est, quod eo ipso sunt hujusmodi domini servos suos amitturi, cum de injuriis fuerint convicti. And there is no difference herein, whether he be a villein regardant, or in grosse, although some have said the contrary.

Sect. 190.

R A P E. [n] Raptus is, when a man hath carnall knowledge of a woman by force and against her will.

Appeale de rape. By the generall purview of the statutes, (*) that give the appeale of rape, the niese shall have an appeale of rape against the lord. [o] And it seemeth by the ancient authors of the law, that this so heinous an offence was severely punished by losse of eyes, and privy members; but of old time it was felony, which you may reade at large in the second part of the Institutes W. 1. ca. 13.

[n] Mirror ca. 1. sect. 12. cap. 3. de Rape & cap. 4. de Homicide. (3. Inst. 60.)

(*) W. 1. ca. 13. W. 2. ca. 35. 6. R. 2. ca. 6. 11. H. 4. cap. 13. 1. E. 4. cap. 1. [o] 29. H. 6. tit. Coron. 17. Bract. lib. 3. fol. 147.

A U X Y un niese, que est ravie per sa seignior, poit aver un appeale de rape envers luy.

ALSO a niese, that is ravished by her lord, may have an appeale of rape against him.

[p] And

pletely from the grantor or donor, without the aid of a court of equity; and therefore it is immaterial, whether the use declared on the estate is gratuitous or not, it being sufficient, that the grantee or donee receives it coupled with a trust or use. But in the latter case, the transaction rests in covenant or agreement between the covenantor or bargainer and the cestuique use; and if the covenant or agreement was not founded on the consideration of blood or a valuable consideration, such as marriage or money, our courts of equity, which till the 27. of H. 8. had the sole cognizance of uses, would not interpose to compel the performance. In fewer words, Chancery would enforce uses annexed to a perfect gift, however gratuitous they might be, but not those resting only on a naked contract, without even so much as the consideration of blood to maintain them. The authorities in proof of this distinction are abundant; nor do we know of any seeming to impeach it, except the single case of Frampton and Gerrard already cited from Rolle, which, if it did turn on such a point, is sufficiently controlled by other cases to make the doctrine indisputable. Mo. 102. Ow. 40. 1. Leon. 197. 1. Co. 176. b. W. Jo. 346. Cart. 143. 12. Mod. 161. Gilb. on Uses 113. 207. Add to this the disfavour of our law to bastardy, in not recognizing any but legitimate blood to be a good consideration, and the whole secret of the rule as to uses to bastards will be disclosed. On a covenant to stand seized, an use will not rise to a bastard; because, the use depending on contract, some consideration is requisite, and lawful blood and marriage are the two considerations peculiar to such a covenant, which necessarily excludes bastardy. But on bargains and sales of land, in which the essential consideration to raising an use is money or a price, or on any conveyances, on which, the estate being passed out of the grantor and therefore not depending on his contract, uses may be declared without any consideration, bastards stand precisely on the same footing with other persons, and are equally capable of having uses limited to them. To give the sum of this elucidation in one sentence, where the use will not rise without the consideration of blood, if derived through any but the pure channel of marriage, however near the blood may be, it will not avail.

(1) Lord Hale, in a note on a passage about legitimacy in fol. 8. a. gives a fuller extract of this case from the record, than is here expressed. His words are these:

Trin. 18. E. 1. Coram rege, rot. 13. Bedford, et M. 23. 23. E. 1. rot. 2. In assise by John Radwell against Henry son of Beatrice,

Continuation of notes to 121. a.

not by any instrument or act strictly and nominally a conveyance, leads to proving, that the common notion of a fine's binding femes covert merely by reason of the secret examination of them by the judges is incorrect. If the secret examination of itself was so operative, the law would provide the means of effectually adding that form to ordinary conveyances, and so make them conclusive to femes covert equally with a fine. But it is clearly otherwise; and, except in the case of conveyances by custom, there must be a suit depending for the freehold or inheritance, or the examination being extrajudicial is ineffectual. In the second Institute before fourteen, when the infant has no property such as attracts a guardianship by tenure, and the father is dead without having

[p] And this word rape, which our author here useth, is so appropriated by law to this case, [p] 9. E. 4. 26. Mirror ca. 2. as without this word (rapuit) it cannot be expressed by any periphrasis or circumlocution; for sect. 13. carnaliter cognovit eam or the like, will not serve.

Sect. 191.

AUXY si un vill soit fait executor a un autre, & le seignior del villeine fuit en dette a le testator en un certeine somme dargent, que nest my paie, en ceo case, le villeine, come executor de le testator, avera action de det envers son seignior; pur ceo que il ne recovers le det a son use demesne, mes al use le testator.

ALSO if a villeine be made executor to another, and the lord of the villeine was indebted to the testator in a certeine sum of mony, which is not paid, in this case, the villein, as executor of the testator, shall have an action of debt against his lord; because he shall not recover the debt to his owne use, but to the use of the testator.

OF this matter (Doc. Plac. 388.) sufficient hath been spoken in this chapter before. The villein shall have an action as executor against his lord, and it is no plea for the lord, to say, that the plaintife is his villeine; for he shall not be enfranchised by the user of this action; because he hath it by a gift in law to the use of the testator, and not to his owne use.

Sect. 192.

ITEM le seignior ne poist prendre hors del possession de tiel villein, que est executor, les biens le mort; et sil face, le villeine come executor avera action de trespassse de mesmes les biens issint prises envers son seignior, & recoupera damages al use le testator. Mes en tous tielx cases il covient, que le seignior, que est defendant en tielx actions, face protestation, que le plaintife est son villein; ou autrement le villeine sera enfranchise, co-

ALSO the lord may not take out of the possession of such villeine, who is executor, the goods of the deceased; and if he doth, the villeine as executor shall have an action for the same goods so taken against his lord, and shall recover damages to the use of the testator. But in all such cases, it behoveth, that the lord, which is defendant in such actions, maketh protestation, that the plaintife is his villein; or otherwise the villeine shall be infran-

LE seignior ne poist prendre hors del possession, &c. Of this also sufficient hath been said before.

Et recoupera damages al use del testator.

[g] Note damages recovered by the executor in an action of trespassse shall be assents; and yet they were never in the testator. And so it is in other like cases, as by our bookes it appeareth.

[r] If an executor hath a villeine for yeares, and the villein purchases land in fee, the executor entreteth, he shall have the whole fee simple; but because he had the villein in autre droit, viz. as executor to the use of the dead, it shall be assents in his hands. Note a diversity between the quantity of the estate, and the quality of it; for the law respecteth not the quantity of the estate, for not onely who was wife of Robert Radwell, quia compertum est, quod dictus Henricus fuit natus per 11 dies post 40 septimanas, quod tempus est utatum mulieribus pariendi, ex quo predictus Robertus non habuit accessum ad predictam Beatricem per unum mensem ante mortem suam, presumitur dictum Henricum esse bastardum, ideo judgment for the plaintiff. Hal. MSS.

[s] tenant

If this state of the case is correct, lord Coke's is erroneous in several particulars of consequence. 1. He is short in not expressing, that the record mentions forty weeks, and so leaving it to be deemed an inference of his own, as which it has been accordingly treated. 2. He exceeds the record, by representing it to stile that time the latest for a woman's going with child, when the record only calls it the usual period. 3. He wholly omits the husband's having had no access to the wife for one month before his death; a fact very material, it being very easy to allow eleven days after the usual time, but requiring a strong case to warrant

Continuation of notes to 121. a.

Institute lord Coke represents this to be the general law, and, amongst many authorities cited to prove it, refers to a case of Hen. 7. reported by Keilwey, in which, whether the examination of a feme covert, on the inrolment of a bargain and sale to the king, sufficed to bind her, was largely debated. 2. Inst. 673. Keilw. 4. a. to 20. a. The just explanation therefore of the subject is, that the pendency of a real action for the freehold of the land, in consequence of previously taking out an original writ, without which preliminary even at this day a fine is a nullity, should be deemed the primary cause of the fine's binding a feme covert; and that the secret examination of her, on taking the acknowledgment of the fine, is only a secondary cause of this operation.

Such are the three chief effects, by reason of which, fines, no longer used, according to their original, as recorded agreements for conclusion of actual suits, have been changed into, and are still retained as feigned proceedings; and being thus accommodated to answer purposes, to which ordinary conveyances cannot be applied, it is no wonder, that they should not only be considered as a species of conveyance, but also be deemed a principal guard to the titles to real property, and as such be ranked amongst the most valuable of the common assurances of the realm.

In this digression on the properties of a fine, we have purposely omitted to consider its operation, either as an stoppel, except so far as it may be said to be one to the issue in tail by force of the 4. H. 7. and 32. H. 8. or as a discontinuance, or lastly in respect of the consor's warranty, which is always inserted in it. The virtues of a fine, in the three points of view we have examined it, namely to extinguish dormant titles, to bar the issue in tail, and to pass the interests of femes covert; these constitute the more peculiar qualities, on account of which it is most usually, if not always, resorted to. As to the three other effects, it may be enough to observe here, that they are equally incident to feoffments, or any other deeds having warranties annexed. The distinct consideration of them is reserved for another occasion.—(1) If binding the parties, or even privies, exclusive of heirs in tail, was the only effect of a fine, it would scarce be preferable to less solemn agreements; for, without doubt they also are so far binding. The most distinguishable properties of a fine are barring strangers unless they claim within five years, barring the issue in tail immediately, and binding femes covert, as we have explained in the foregoing note.—(2) En gros not in L. and M. or R. h.—(4) &c. in L. and M. and Rob.—(5) Court instead of &c. in L. and M. and Rob.—(6) But see 1. Lev. 100. and 1. Sid. 298.

ing executed his power of appointing a guardian for his child; or after fourteen, when the custody of the guardian by force terminates

[s] L. 5. E. 4. 61.

[s] 21. H. 3. 6. 37.
(Ante 117. a.)

[u] 41. E. 3. 21.

[x] 18. E. 3. 29.

Vide sect. 193.

[y] Pl. Com. 276. b. In Greif-brook's case.

[s] tenant in taile, and tenant for life of a villeine, shall have the perquisite of the villeine in fee, but [s] tenant for yeares, and tenant at will also shall have it in fee.

But the law respecteth the quality, for in what right he hath the villeine, in the same right shall he have the perquisite; as in the case of the executor abovesaid, and in the case of the bishop [u] that hath the villeine in right of his church, he shall have the perquisite in the same right.

[x] So if a man hath a villeine in the right of his wife, he shall have the perquisite also in her right. But if the purchase be after issue had, then the baron shall have the perquisite to him and his heires; because by the issue he is intituled to be tenant by the curtesie in his owne right.

Protestation. [y] Protestatio is an exclusion of a conclusion that a party to an action may by pleading incur; or it is a safeguard to the party, which keepeth him from being concluded by the plea he is to make, if the issue be found for him. But in this case without a protestation, albeit the issue be found for the lord, the villeine shall be enfranchised, as it appeareth hereafter in this section.

Sect. 193.

Brit. fol. 79. 125. b. 126. a.

CEO serra trie en le countie, &c.

Be tryed, that is, as it is intended by the verdict of twelve men, that is called in law a triall triatio.

[a] 7. E. 50. 26. E. 3. 73. 38. E. 3. 34. 40. E. 3. 36. 43. E. 3. 4. 31. 44. E. 3. 36. 47. E. 3. 26. 22. H. 6. 52. 35. H. 6. 12. 39. H. 6. 24. Vide sect. 534.

[a] In this case the law doth favour the villein in the issue; for otherwise by the rule of law in like cases he ought to answer to the speciall matter, viz. to the regardancy; but in favour of liberty he may reply, that he is free and of free estate, and consequently this issue concerning the person shall be tryed where the writ is brought. [b] The like law it is, if issue be joyned upon the ideocy of the plaintife or defendant, it shall be tryed where the writ is brought; because it concerneth the person.

In favorem libertatis.

It is commonly said, that three things be favoured in law; life, liberty, dower.

[c] Impius & crudelis iudicandus est, qui libertati non favet. Anglia jura in omni casu libertati dant favorem.

Tryall is to finde out by due examination the truth of the point in issue or question betweene the parties, where-

(F. N. B. 77. f.)

[c] Fortescue cap. 42.

(1) &c. in L. and M. and Roh.

rant extending such liberality to nearly six weeks. 4. The word presumitur, which lord Coke passes over, is of importance; for it indicates, that, notwithstanding the great excess of time, it was conceived to create only a presumption for the bastardy, and consequently, if very cogent circumstances, to account for the protraction of the birth, and in favour of the wife's chastity, had occurred, the judgment might have been for the legitimacy.

So far we had advanced, when on looking into Rolle's Abridgment, we found this same ancient case of Radwell more at large, than either in lord Coke or lord Hale. But Rolle agrees with the former as well in respect to the record's not mentioning the forty weeks, as to its stating the birth to be eleven days after the latest time in law for a woman's going with child; and as from Rolle's particularity he seems to have most minutely attended to the record, his authority, till the whole record appears, seems most decisive. However the two last particulars, in which lord Coke differs from lord Hale, still remain, to which Rolle adds these further circumstances, that the husband languished of a fever a long time before his death; that on the taking of an inquisition afterwards in the court of a lord, of whom he held lands by knight's service, the wife swore she was not pregnant, and to prove it uncovered herself in open court; and that, in consequence of all this, the lord received a collateral relation as heir. The words describing the wife's exposure of her person are remarkable; for the record states, that she, being interrogated, juramento asseribat, se non esse pręnantem; et, ut hoc omnibus manifeste liqueret, vestes suas ad tunicam exuebat, et in plena curia sic se videri permisit. 1. Ro. Abr. 356. pl. 3. and 18. E. 1. rot. 13. in B. R. there cited. It reflects great discredit on the lord's court, which permitted such a gross indecency; and still more on the king's judges, who suffered it to be recorded as one of the grounds for a verdict before them. How laudably contrariant is the proceeding on the writ de ventre inspiciendo. This remedy for the heir against the pretence of pregnancy, so well known to be of earlier date than the reign of Edward the first, as it was framed in the times of Bracton Britton and Fleta, delicately requires the widow to be inspected by a jury of her own sex; and though in subsequent times the sheriff was ordered to summon a jury composed both of men and women, yet still the search was to be made by the latter only. Bract. 69. a. Brit. 165. b. Flet. lib. 1. c. 15. Reg. Br. Orig. 227. a. What harsh ideas of the times might we be led to adopt, if the early introduction of the writ de ventre inspiciendo did not demonstrate, that the unseemly record we are observing upon was a singularity, and so many other testimonies of a more advanced refinement in judicial proceedings did not concur, to rescue the age of our English Justinian, from the suspicion of a general practice of such barbarism.

Let us then suppose the record to be as it is in Rolle, which is the more probable to be the truth; because a contemporary judge, who reports its having been produced on a trial of legitimacy, represents it much in the same way. Cro. Jam. 541. But still it will not warrant lord Coke's inferring from it, that forty weeks constitute the latest time our law allows for a woman's going with child. On the contrary no particular time being mentioned, what period was meant, must be found out through some other medium; and as the record states other unfavourable circumstances besides the excess of time, and that the jury presumed

terminates, and from the want of the father's appointment there is no other ready to succeed to the trust and to take care of the infant ment que le matter chifed, although the soit trove pour le seignior, & encounter the lord, and against le villein, come est dit. the villein, as it is said.

ITEM si villeine fust un action de trespasse, ou un autre action envers son seignior en un county; et le seignior dit, que il ne serra respondus, pur ceo que il est son villein regardant a son manor en autre county (1); & le plaintife dit, que il est franke et de franke estate, et nemy villeine; ceo serra trie en le county lou le plaintife avoit conceive son action, et nemy en le county lou le manor est: et ceo est in favorem libertatis. Et pur cel cause un estatute fuit fait an. 9. R. 2. cap. 2. le tenor de quel ensuist en tiel forme. Item pur la ou plusors villeins; et neises, sibien des graundes seigni-

ALSO if a villeine sueth an action of trespasse, or any other action, against his lord in one county; and the lord saith, that he shall not be answered, because he is his villeine regardant to his mannour in another county; and the plaintife saith that he is free, and of a free estate, and not a villein; this shall be tryed in the county where the plaintife hath conceived his action, and not in the county where the mannour is: and this is in favour of liberty. And for this cause a statute was made anno 9. R. 2. ca. 2. the tenor whereof followeth in this forme. Also for that where manyvilleins and neises, ors, come des auters gentes, sibi en spirituals come temporals, s'enjuent, deins cities,

villes, & lieux en-franchise, come en la citie de Londres, & autres semblables, & seignont divers suits
envers leur seigniors, a cause de eux faire
franks per le respons de leur seigniors: accorde est et assentus, que les seigniors, ne autres, ne soyent my forbarres de leur villeines per cause
de leur respons en
ley. Per force de quel estatute, si ascun villeine voylloit fuer ascun maner de action a son use demesne en ascun county, ou
il est fort a trier envers son seignior, le seignior, poyt eslyer de pleader, que le plaintife est son villeine, ou de faire protestation, que il est son villeine, & de pleder son auter matter en barre. Et si ils sont a issue, & l'issue soit trove pur le seignior, dunque le villein est villein, come il fuit devant per force
de mesme lestatute.
Mes si le issue soit
trove pur le villeine, dunque le villeine est franke; pur ceo que le aswell of great lords as of other men, aswell of spirituall and tem-porall, flye and go into cities, townes, and places franchised, as into the city of London and other like places, and feine divers suits against their lords, because they would make themselves free by the answer of their lords: it is accorded and assented, that lords nor others shall not be fore-barred of their villeins by reason of their answer in law. By force of which statute, if any villeine will sue any manner of action to his own use in any countie, where it is hard to try against his lord, the lord may chuse whether he will plead, that the plaintife is his villeine, or make protestation that he is his villeine, and plead his other matter in bar. And if they be at issue, and the issue be found for the lord, then the villeine is a villeine, as he was before by force of the same statute. But if the issue be found for the villeine, then the villeine is free; because that the lord tooke

upon judgement may be given. And as the question be-twene the parties is twofold, so is the triall thereof:
for either it is questio juris, Vide sect. 234.
(and that shall be tried by the judges either upon a de-murrer, special verdict or exception, for cuiuslibet sua arte perito est credendum; Et quod quisque norit in hoc se exerce-at; and it is commonly and truly said, ad questionem juris non respondent juratores) or it is questio facti (1). And the triall of the fact is in divers sorts, whereof a light touch is given before, sect. 10. Of these Vide sect. 102.
a triall by xii. men (here intended by Littleton) is the most frequent and common.
And some few rules of law,
are necessary here to be re-membred (for the better understanding of the bookes of law hereafter) where and from what place, viz. de quo Vide sect. 234. more of this mat-vicinito, out of what neighbourhood the jury shall come, a necessarie poynt to be knowne; for if there be a (6. Co. 47. 5. Co. 36. b. Cro. mis-triall, (that is) if the Cha. 480.)
jury commeth out of a wrong place, or returned by a wrong officer and give a verdict, judgement ought not to be given upon such a verdict.
[d] Wherein the most general rule is, that every tryall shall be out of that towne, parish, or hamlet, or place known out of the towne, &c. (2. Rol. Abr. 618. Cro. Jam.
150. 326. 513. 676. Hob. 76.
9. Co. 66. b. 11. Co. 25. b. 6.
Co. 14.)
within the record, within which the matter of fact issuable is alledged, which is most certaine and neere thereunto, the inhabitants whereof may have the better and more certaine knowledge of the fact (2). As if the fact be alledged in quadam platea vocat' King-street in civitate Westm. in com' Midd. In this case the visne cannot come out of platea; because it is neither town, parish, hamlet, nor place out of the neighbourhood whereof a jury may come by law. But in this case it shall not come out of Westminster, but out of the parish of St. Margaret, because that is the most certaine. But therein

sumed against the child's being the issue of the deceased husband, it seems fair to suppose, that the law was understood, not to be so strict in the time alluded to, whatever that time might be, as indiscriminately to condemn as illegitimate all children not born within it, but rather to consider every excess, unless very extraordinary indeed, as only raising a presumption against them. This construction is clearly most consistent with the terms of the record in question. In the next note, we shall attempt to satisfy the reader, that the rule resulting from it is most conformable to other precedents and authorities, as well as to the reason of the thing.

After the case of Radwell from the record of E. 1. lord Hale gives the four following cases.—Rot. Parl. 9. E. 2. m. 4. Gilbert de Clare comes Glouc. obit 30. Junii 7. E. 2. in parlamento tent. quindena, Hil. 9. E. 2. the sisters and coheirs pray livery. Matilda, quæ fuit uxor comitis, pretends to be big by the earl, which was accordingly found per inquisitionem. The coheirs reply, that, si comitissa prægnans esset, tantum tempus elapsum est, ut secundum cursum pariendi non potest dici imprægnari a comite. Yet they could not obtain livery till Pasch. 10. E. 2. but the question hung in deliberation.—Note 18. R. 2. where a woman in such a case immediately after the death of the first husband took a second husband, and had issue born forty weeks and eleven days after the death of the first husband, and it was held to be the issue of the second husband.—M. 17. Jac. B. R. Allop and Stacey. Andrews dies of the plague. His wife, who was a lewd woman, is delivered of a child forty weeks and ten days after the death of the husband. Yet the child was adjudged legitimate and heir to Andrews; for partus potest protrahi ten days ex accidente.—M. 4. Car. in Cur. Ward. and afterwards P. 5. Car. B. R. Thecar marries a lewd woman, but she doth not cohabit with him, and is suspected of incontinency with Duncomb; Thecar dies; Duncomb within three weeks after the death of Thecar marries her; two hundred and eighty-one days and sixteen hours after his death she is delivered of a son. Here it was agreed, 1. If she had not married Duncomb, without question the issue should not be bastard, but should be adjudged the son of Thecar. 2. No averment shall be received that Thecar did not cohabit with the wife. 3. Though it is possible, that the son might be begotten after the husband's death, yet, being a question of fact, it was tried by a jury, and the son was found to be the issue of Thecar. Hal. MSS.

Lord Hale's case of E. 2. appears very extraordinary, the time from 30. June 7. E. 2. when the earl of Gloucester died, to the quindena of Hilary, or 29. Jan. 9. E. 2. when the livery to his sister was further postponed in parliament, being within one day of a year and seven months; which is a much later date for the delivery of a live child, than the most liberal in their calculations have hitherto assigned. However, on reading the printed copy of the original record, in the rolls of parliament lately published, we find lord Hale's note quite accurate. See Rot. Parl. v. 1. p. 353. As to the case of R. 2. it confirms the doubt we have elsewhere stated of the opinion, that, if a widow marries again and has a child within nine months after the death of the first husband, the child may choose his father; and is an authority for deciding according to the proof of the woman's condition when her first husband died. Ante fo. 8. a. note 7. Terms of the Law, first edit. tit. Bastard, and Cowel Inst. lib. 1. t. 9. Lord Hale's two other cases are reported in several books, Allop and Stacey being in Cro. Jam. 341. Godb. 281. Palm. 9. 1. Ro. Abr. 356. and Thecar's in Cro. Jam. 685. Winch. 71. Litt. Rep. 177.

For the remainder of the notes to 123. b. see 129. a.

(1) See Post. 155. b. 328. a. (2) Both in civil and criminal suits the common law is very nice in requiring every issuable fact to be alledged, not only within a county, but also within a parish, town, or hamlet, or, for want of either of these, some other known place of the same county, not being a hundred, which probably was excluded as too large a division; and if this rule was not observed, it might be pleaded in abatement, or otherwise taken advantage of, by either party, according to the stage of the suit. Cro. Eliz. 260. Thel. Dig. Br. lib. 2. c. 15. to 18. Com. Dig. Abatement H. 13. Pleader C. 20. The necessity of having the county infant or his property. Lord Coke only takes notice of such an election, where the infant is under fourteen, and as to this omits

(7. Co. 1. 1. Sid. 9. 88. Hob. 89. 1. Sid. 10. 2. Ro. Abr. 609. 1. Roll. Rep. 369. Cro. Eliz. 818.)

[c] 4. E. 3. 30. 8. E. 3. 68. 39. H. 6. 13. Brooke Pleading 61.

[f] 4. E. 4. 41. 5. E. 4. 20. 22. E. 4. 2. 35. H. 6. 30. 22. H. 6. 47. 1. Co. 162. Digges case 11. Co. 25. 6. Co. 14.

(Hob. 190. 2. Rol. Abr. 616.)

[g] 1. E. 3. 8. 7. H. 6. 38.

[h] 22. E. 4. tit. Visne f. 27. 6. H. 7. 3. b. 11. H. 7. 22. b.

E. 4. 3. a. 3. E. 4. 26. 39. H. 6. Treip 93. 4. E. 3. 30.

(Hob. 89. 266. 6. Co. 65. b. 1. Leon. 109. Cro. Car. 17. Cro.

Jac. 302, 303. 308.)

[*] 6. Co. 14. Arundel's case.

[i] 45. E. 2. 5. a. 46. E. 3. 6. &

7. Gernon's case. 18. E. 3. 58.

11. H. 4. 56. b. 57. 17. E. 3.

36. b. 39. Aff. 10. 38. Aff. 30.

35. Aff. 7. (Cro. Jac. 239.)

[k] Mich. 31. & 32. Eliz. Ro.

365. in the King's Bench, inter

Edan & Frankline, adjudge 3.

Mar. Dier 129. 18. Eliz. Dier

353. 17. Eliz. Dier 342.

(1. Rol. Abr. 604. Plowd. 232.

Cro. Jam. 239. 9. Co. 47. a.)

[l] 8. E. 4. 24. 9. H. 6. 46. 47.

21. H. 6. 4. 18. Aff. 7. 30. E. 3.

16. 17. 7. E. 4. 31. 27. H. 8. 30.

11. H. 4. 68.

[m] 15. E. 4. 25. b. 9. H. 6. 46.

26. E. 3. 7. E. 4. 31. 39. E. 3.

16. 17. (Cro. Jac. 134. 1.

Sid. 76. Hob. 54. 66. Noy 144.

2. Rol. Abr. 103.)

[n] 9. H. 6. 46. 39. E. 3. 16, 17.

[o] 10. Co. 54. and the bookes

there cited.

[p] Mich. 21 & 22. Eliz. Dier

367. 5. Co. 36. b. Binham's case. 39. E. 3. 2. b. 44. E. 3. 6.

11. H. 6. 13. 5. Co. 40. Dorner's case. (5. Co. 36. b. Hob.

5. 1. Sid. 193. 2. Rol. 625. 1. Sid.

339.)

county named is very obvious; as otherwise it could not be known, whether the court had jurisdiction, who was the proper officer to direct the process of the court to, or whence the jury was to come, and consequently the cause could not go on. Nor is it difficult to account for stating a particular place in the county. One reason might be, that, if there was no other explanation of the case where the cause of action or ground of defence arose, than by reference to the extensive limits of a county, the allegation might fail in that certainty so essential to its being either well understood or properly controverted; and the rule, so far as it may have this foundation, still continues unchanged. But the other and principal reason was, that, if issue was taken on the fact alleged, it might be tried by a jury of the visne or neighbourhood, which our ancestors conceived to be more likely to be qualified to investigate and discover the truth, than persons living at a distance from the scene of the transaction. For this purpose the venire facias always directed the sheriff to summon a jury from the neighbourhood of the parish or place, within which the fact to be tried was alleged; and this was not mere form; for it was the sheriff's duty to attend to the direction; and if at least four of the hundred, in which the place was situate, were not included in the panel returned by him, it was a good cause of challenge to the array or whole panel; or if four such persons did not attend to be sworn, the polls, or particular jurors, might be challenged for the same default. Post. 157. a. 48. E. 3. 30. 48. Aff. 5. 7. H. 4. 46. 21. E. 4. 59. b. Nay, so very essential did the common law deem the having some of the neighbours on the jury, that, if the visne appeared on the record to be from a wrong place, whether in consequence of the party's alleging the fact in a place not proper for a visne, or of the court's mis-awarding it, in both cases it was equally a mis-trial, and a good ground for a motion to arrest the judgment or for reverting it by error. Cro. Eliz. 260. Hob. 5. But thus restricting every visne to a particular part of the county, though well intended, was followed with great inconveniences. It encouraged the losing party after a trial, to make trivial objections to the visne, in order to disappoint his adversary of the fruits of a just verdict; and either because the rules for laying the visne were in themselves vague, or because they were perverted by an over curious interpretation, such objections not only became very common, but often succeeded, as appears from the profusion of cases and learning to be met with on the subject in our reports. See Roll.

Abr. and Vin. Abr. tit. Trial. At length the grievance became so intolerable to suitors, that parliament interposed to relieve them; for which purpose several statutes were made. The 21. Jam. c. 13. gives aid after verdict, where the visne is partly wrong, that is, where it is awarded out of too many or too few places in the county named. The 16. & 17. Cha. 2. c. 8. goes further;

and cures the defect of the visne wholly, so that the cause was tried by a jury of the proper county, without any regard to the part of the county from which the jury came. Still, however, either party was at liberty to object to the default of hundredors at the trial, which was found to be very troublesome on account of the difficulty of always having four jurors so qualified. The

4. & 5. An. c. 16. therefore directs, that every venire facias shall be awarded from the body of the county, in which the action is triable. But these statutes do not extend to indictments or other criminal suits; nor has any act been yet made to include any such, except the 24. G. 2. c. 18. which only applies to actions on penal statutes. Why a regulation so convenient should be thus confined principally to civil cases, seems unaccountable. However, though the ancient law continues in force as to trials for therein also it is to be noted, that if it had been alleged in Kingstreet in the parish of St. Margaret in the county of Middlesex, then should it have come out of Kingstreet, for then should Kingstreet have been esteemed in law a towne[e]; for whensoever a place is alleged generally in case it is) it shall be taken for a towne. [f] And albeit parochia generally alleged is a place

incertaine, and may (as we see by experience) include divers townes; yet, if a matter be alleged in parochia, it shall be intended in law, that it containeth no more townes than one, unless the party doth shew the contrary. [g] But when a parish is alleged within a city, there without question the visne shall come out of the parish, for that is more certaine then the city.

[h] If a trespassse be alleged in D, and nul tiel ville is pleaded, the jury shall come out de

corpore comitatus; but if it be alleged in S and D and nul tiel ville de D is pleaded, the jury shall come out de vicineto de S, for that is the more certaine. So if a matter be alleged within a mannor, the jury shall come de vicineto manerii; but if the mannor be alleged within a towne, it shall come out of the towne, because that is most certaine, for the mannor may extend into divers townes. And all these points were resolved by all the judges of England upon conference betweene them in the case of John Arundel esquire indited for the death of William Parker *.

[i] In a reall action, where the demandant demands land in one county, as heire to his father, and alleges his birth in another county, if it be denied that he is heire, it shall not be tryed where the birth was alleged, but where the land lyeth, for there the law presumes it shall be best knowne who is heire. But if the defendant make himself heire to a woman, for that is the surer and more certaine side, and the mother is certaine, when perhaps the father is incertaine, and therefore there it shall be tryed, where the birth is alleged; because they have more certaine conuance then where the land lyeth. And so it is where generally bastardy is alleged, the tryall shall be in like case mutatis mutandis. [k] If a man plead the king's letters

patents, and the other party plead non concessit, it shall not be tryed where the letters patents bear date, for they cannot be denied, but where the land lyeth.

Every tryall must come out of the neighbourhood of a castle, mannor, town or hamlet, or place known out of a castle, mannor, town or hamlet, as some forrests and the like, as before

and by the authorities thereupon quoted appeareth.

Every plea concerning the person of the plaintife, &c. shall be tryed where the writ is brought, as it appeareth before.

When the matter alleged extendeth into a place at the common law, and a place within a franchise, it shall be tryed at the common law.

[l] In an action against two, the one pleads to the writ, the other to the action, the plea to the writ shall be first tryed; for, if that be found, all the whole writ shall abate, and make an

end of the businesse.

[m] In a plea personall against divers defendants, the one defendant pleads in barre to par-

cell, or which extendeth only to him that pleadeth it, and the other pleads a plea which goeth

to the whole, the plea, that goeth to the the whole, (that is) to both defendants, shall be first tryed; and of this opinion was Littleton in our bookes, for the tryall of that goeth to the whole;

and the other defendant shall have advantage thereof, for in a personall action the discharge of one is the discharge of both. As for example, if one of the defendants in trespassse pleade a release to himselfe, (which in law extends to both) and the other pleads not guilty (which extends but to himselfe) or if one pleads a plea which excuses himselfe onely, and the other plead

another plea which goeth to the whole, the plea, which goeth to the whole, shall be first tryed; for, if that be found, it maketh an end of all, and the other defendant shall take advantage hereof, because the discharge of one is the discharge of both. But in a plea reall it is otherwise; for every tenant may lose his part of the lands. [n] As if a præcipe be brought as

heire to his father against two, and one plead a plea which extendeth but to himselfe, and the other pleads a plea which extends to both, as bastardy in the demandant, and it is found for him, yet the other issue shall be tryed, for he shall not take advantage of the plea of the other,

because one joyntenant may lose his part by his misplea. [o] But where an issue is joyned for part, and a demurrer for the residue, the court may direct the tryall of the issue, or judge the demurrer first at their pleasure.

[p] If a venire fac. be awarded to the coroners where it ought to be to the sherife, or the visne commeth out of a wrong place, yet if it be per assensum partium, and so entered of record,

it

seignior ne prist al not at the beginning commencement pur son for his plee, that the plee, que le villeine villeine was his vil-fuit son villeine, mes leine, but tooke this ceo prist per protesta- by protestation, &c.
tion, &c.

place is alleged generally in pleading (without some addition to declare the contrary, as in this case it is) it shall be taken for a towne. [f] And albeit parochia generally alleged is a place

incertaine, and may (as we see by experience) include divers townes; yet, if a matter be

alleged in parochia, it shall be intended in law, that it containeth no more townes than one, unless the party doth shew the contrary. [g] But when a parish is alleged within a city, there without question the visne shall come out of the parish, for that is more certaine then the city.

[h] If a trespassse be alleged in D, and nul tiel ville is pleaded, the jury shall come out de

corpore comitatus; but if it be alleged in S and D and nul tiel ville de D is pleaded, the jury shall come out de vicineto de S, for that is the more certaine. So if a matter be alleged within a mannor, the jury shall come de vicineto manerii; but if the mannor be alleged within a towne, it shall come out of the towne, because that is most certaine, for the mannor may extend into divers townes. And all these points were resolved by all the judges of England upon conference betweene them in the case of John Arundel esquire indited for the death of William

Parker *.

[i] In a reall action, where the demandant demands land in one county, as heire to his father, and alleges his birth in another county, if it be denied that he is heire, it shall not be

tryed where the birth was alleged, but where the land lyeth, for there the law presumes it shall be best knowne who is heire. But if the defendant make himself heire to a woman, for that is the surer and more certaine side, and the mother is certaine, when perhaps the father is incertaine, and therefore there it shall be tryed, where the birth is alleged; because they have more certaine conuance then where the land lyeth. And so it is where generally bastardy is alleged, the tryall shall be in like case mutatis mutandis. [k] If a man plead the king's letters

patents, and the other party plead non concessit, it shall not be tryed where the letters patents bear date, for they cannot be denied, but where the land lyeth.

Every tryall must come out of the neighbourhood of a castle, mannor, town or hamlet, or place known out of a castle, mannor, town or hamlet, as some forrests and the like, as before

and by the authorities thereupon quoted appeareth.

Every plea concerning the person of the plaintife, &c. shall be tryed where the writ is brought, as it appeareth before.

When the matter alleged extendeth into a place at the common law, and a place within a franchise, it shall be tryed at the common law.

[l] In an action against two, the one pleads to the writ, the other to the action, the plea to

the writ shall be first tryed; for, if that be found, all the whole writ shall abate, and make an

end of the businesse.

[m] In a plea personall against divers defendants, the one defendant pleads in barre to par-

cell, or which extendeth only to him that pleadeth it, and the other pleads a plea which goeth

to the whole, the plea, that goeth to the the whole, (that is) to both defendants, shall be first

tryed; and of this opinion was Littleton in our bookes, for the tryall of that goeth to the whole;

and the other defendant shall have advantage thereof, for in a personall action the discharge of one is the discharge of both. As for example, if one of the defendants in trespassse pleade a release to himselfe, (which in law extends to both) and the other pleads not guilty (which extends but to himselfe) or if one pleads a plea which excuses himselfe onely, and the other plead

another plea which goeth to the whole, the plea, which goeth to the whole, shall be first

tryed; for, if that be found, it maketh an end of all, and the other defendant shall take advantage hereof, because the discharge of one is the discharge of both. But in a plea reall it is otherwise; for every tenant may lose his part of the lands. [n] As if a præcipe be brought as

heire to his father against two, and one plead a plea which extendeth but to himselfe, and the other pleads a plea which extends to both, as bastardy in the demandant, and it is found for

him, yet the other issue shall be tryed, for he shall not take advantage of the plea of the other,

because one joyntenant may lose his part by his misplea. [o] But where an issue is joyned for

part, and a demurrer for the residue, the court may direct the tryall of the issue, or judge the

demurrer first at their pleasure.

[p] If a venire fac. be awarded to the coroners where it ought to be to the sherife, or the

visne commeth out of a wrong place, yet if it be per assensum partium, and so entered of record,

it

to state how and before whom it should be made, nor have we yet met with any prior or cotemporary writer who, supplies the defect

it shall stand; for omnis consensu tollit errorem. (1) And thus much of these excellent points of learning: and if you desire to know the institution and right use of this trial by twelve men, and of the antiquities thereof, and more of this matter, read the 234. section hereafter, which is worthy of your observation.

Esstatute. Or statute. This cometh of the Latine word statutum, which is taken for an act of parliament made by the king, the lords and commons, and is divided into two branches generall and speciall. This statute here mentioned is a generall statute, and darkely and obscurely penned.

Et filis sont a issue. [9] Issue, exitus, a single, certaine, and materiall point issuing out of the allegations or pleas of the plaintife and defendant, consisting regularly upon an affirmative and negative to be tried by twelve men. And it is twofold, a speciall issue, as here in the case of Littleton; or generall, as in trespassse, not guilty, in assise, nil tort nil disseisin, &c. And as an issue naturall cometh of two severall persons, so an issue legal issueth out of two severall allegations of advers parties.

And to make our bookes more easie to be understood concerning this point, it is good to set downe some necessary rules (among many other) concerning joyning of issues. An issue being taken generally referreth to the count, and not to the writ. As in an account the writ chargeth him generally to be his receiver, the count chargeth him specially to be his receiver by the hands of T; the defendant pleaderth, that he was never his receiver in manner and forme, &c. this shall referre to the count, so as he cannot be charged but by the receipt of the hands of T.

[r] A speciall issue must be taken in one certain materiall point, which may be best understood, and best tried.

[s] An issue shall not be taken upon a negative pregnant, which implyeth another sufficient matter, but upon that, which is single and simple. As ne dona pas per le fait imply a gift by parol; therefore the issue must be de dona pas modo & forma.

[t] An issue joyned upon an absque hoc, &c. ought to have an affirmative after it. Two affirmatives shall not make an issue unlesse it be, lest the issue should not be tried.

[u] Some issues be good upon matter affirmative and negative, albeit the affirmative and negative be not in precise words. As in debt for rent upon a lease for yeares, the defendant pleades, that the plaintife had nothing at the time of the lease made; the plaintife replyeth that he was seised in fee, &c. this is a good issue.

[w] Where the issue is joyned of the part of the defendant, the entry is et de hoc ponit se super patriam; but if it be of part of the plaintife, the entry is et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam.

[x] There be some negative pleas, that be issues of themselves, whereunto the demandant, or plaintife, cannot reply, no more than to a generall issue, which is, et prædictus A. similiter. As if the tenant do vouch, and the demandant counterplead that the vouchee or any of his auncestors had any thing, &c. whereof he might make a feoffment, he shall conclude, et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam, & prædictus tenens similiter. So in a fine pleaded by the tenant, &c. the demandant may say, quod partes finis nihil habuerunt, & hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam, & prædictus tenens similiter. And so in a writ of dower, the tenant pleades unques seise que dower, he shall conclude, et de hoc ponit se super patriam, et prædictus petens similiter; and so in many other cases; and of this opinion was Littleton in our bookes.

[y] A man leaves his wife enseint with a child, issue shall not be taken, that she was not enseint by her husband on the day of his death, for filiatio non potest probari; but the issue must be, whether she was enseint the day of his death (2).

[z] A protestation availeth not the partie that taketh it, if the issue be found against him; and therefore if the issue be found for the villeine, he is enfranchised for ever. And yet in some special case, albeit the issue be found against him that maketh the protestation, yet he shall take benefit by his protestation. (*) As if a man entreteth into warrantie, and taketh by protestation the value of the land, albeit the plea be found against him, yet the protestation shall serve him for the value.

Sect. 194.

ITEM le seignior ne poet mayhemer son villeine; car fil maihema son villein, mayme his villeine,

ALSO the lord mayhemer, [a] or mebaigner, a French word, of which cometh mayhim, mabemium (id est) membri mutilatio, and serves to create delay and embarrassment in the distribution of criminal justice, whenever an accused person may chuse captiously to exert his right of challenging for default of hundredors.

[a] Stamf. lib. 1. ca. 42. Glab. vil. lib. 14. ca. 7. Bract. lib. 3. fol. 144. 145. Brit. cap. 25. fol. 48. 49. Flet. lib. 1. ca. 38. (Post. 288. 1. Sid. 215.)

(1) The cases to this point disagree; but the most modern are with lord Coke. See Vin. Abr. Trial S. a. 2.—(2) The case cited from the Year Book of 41. E. 3. is a direct authority to this purpose. However it may be doubted, whether the doctrine continues to be law. At least it fails in principle, if it is founded on the notion that the presumption of the husband's being the father of every child, the wife bears or conceives during the marriage, cannot be repelled by evidence to the contrary. Such a position indeed is asserted more than once by lord Coke in the present work, and may be met with in other books. Post. 244. a. 373. a. Vin. Abr. Bastard A. 2. & B. But it never was a universal rule, lord Coke and all the authorities agreeing, that, if the husband is beyond sea during the whole time of the wife's going with child, the issue is a bastard. Nor is the position in any degree true at present; for ever since Pendrell's case in the 5. G. 2. it has been settled, that not only proof of being out of the kingdom, but also every other kind of evidence, tending to prove the impossibility or even improbability of the husband's being the father, is admissible. 1. Blackst. Comment. 5. edit. 457. 2. Stra. 925. 3. P. Wms. 365. Bott's Poor Laws, 2d. ed. 105. Our books do not state on what grounds Pendrell's case was determined. But very ancient authorities are not wanting to justify overruling the doctrine, which prevailed in lord Coke's time. Bracton taking notice of the presumption, that marriage proves legitimacy, adds, et semper statitur huic presumptioni, donec probetur contrarium, ut, ecce, maritus probatur non concubuisse aliquamdiu cum uxore, infirmitate vel alia causa impeditus, vel erat in ea in valetudine ut generare non possit. Bract. fo. 6. a. In another place the same author is still more explicit, for he states it to be a violent presumption against the child's legitimacy, if the husband is proved, propter aliquam infirmitatem, vel frigiditatem, vel aliam impotentiam coeundi, per multum tempus non concubuisse cum uxore, or si probetur, quod extra regnum vel provinciam per biennium & ultra longe extiterit, quod vehementer presumi possit, quod ad uxorem accessum habere non potuit. Bract. fo. 63. b. There are also other passages to a like effect both in Bracton and Fleta. Bract. fo. 70. b. 278. a. Flet. lib. 1. c. 15. It is worthy remark too, that not only these limitations of the rule of pater est quem nuptia demonstrant, but even the words of them are in a great degree borrowed from the text of Justinian. See Dig. lib. 1. tit. 6. l. 6. But this by no means ought to lessen their value with our common lawyers. On the contrary, it should be deemed an additional reason for deferring to them; because the trial of general bastardy belongs to the ecclesiastical courts, and these, in this instance, as well as in others, are much swayed by the authority of the Roman law. See further on this subject Godolph. Repertor. Canon. 477. Bryd. Law of Bastard. 83. Voet ad Pandect. lib. 1. tit. 6. sect. 6. Ayl. Parerg. tit. Bastardy, and same title in the Abridgments.

Notes to fol. 121. b.

(1) Or instead of et in L. and M.—(2) But by the 17. E. 2. de prerogativa regis, the king's grant of a manor will not pass an advowson appendant without express mention of it. Yet there are some cases, which have been deemed not within the reason of the statute; such as the crown's restitution of lands to wards at their full age and to the heirs of idiots, or of temporalities to new bishops. Staundf. Prærog. 43. a. Doder. Advowls. 36. Even words of reservatio have been held sufficient; as where the king granted a manor with all its appurtenances, as fully as the same came to and were possessed by the crown, and an advowson was appendant to the manor. Adjudged in Whistler's case, 10. Co. 63. 2.—It is agreed in our old books, that before the statute de prerogativa regis, the king's grant of a manor would pass an advowson appendant, without naming it, or so much as using the word appurtenances. Staundf. Prærog. 43. a. 10. Co. 64. a. But in the History of Westmorland, lately published by Mr. Nichol-

son

defect. Ante 87. b. As to a guardian after fourteen, it appears from the ending of guardianship in socage at that age, as if the common

Mirror cap. 1. sect. 9.

Vide sect. 1. (4. Co. 39. b.)

[b] Lamb. Just. of Peace.

[c] Vide 1. H. 4. 6. b.

(4. Co. 43.)

[d] Fleta lib. 1. cap. 40. Britt. cap. 25. Bract. 145. Mirror cap. 3.

[e] Regist. Judic. 25. 8. Co. 59. Beecher's case. (8. Co. 38.)

[f] Vide sect. 74. 174. 441. (11. Co. 42.)

[g] 8. Co. 59. Beecher's case. F. N. B. 76.

(1. Ro. Abr. 238.)

[h] Glanvil. lib. 9. cap. 11. Magna Charta cap. 14. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 43. & 60. & lib. 1. cap. 43. Bract. lib. 3. fol. 116.

[i] 22. E. 3. 1. & 2. 14. E. 3. Amerciam. 16. 8. R. 2. ibid. 26. &c.

[k] Pl. Com. 401. Cole's case. 37. H. 6. 21. 5. Co. 49. Vaughan's case.

[l] Vaughan's case ubi supra. Beecher's case ubi supra. (1. Roll. Rep. 11.)

son and Dr. Burn, the record of a case of darrein presentment of the 15. E. 1. is cited, in which the court adjudged, that a grant of the manor of Burgh, with its appurtenances, being from the crown, would not pass the advowson of the chapel though appendant to the manor; and thence the 17. E. 2. is concluded to be only declaratory of the common law. See vol. i. p. 564, 565. The case appealed to seems full in point. But then there is a strong current of authorities the other way; for the case of 43. E. 3. 23. is to the contrary, and so are the instances of things appendant not within the statute. Staundf. Prærog. 43. a. 10. Co. 64. a.—(3) Ou for et in L. and M.—(4) See note 1. to 122. a.—(5) Acc. 1. Ventr. 407.—(6) Adjunctum is rather a term of the logicians. The accessorium of the civil law answers best to our terms of regardant, appendant, appurtenant, and incident. How these differ from that, which is part or parcel of a thing, is explained in judge Doderidge's Treatise on Advowsons. See p. 38.—(7) This position is not universally true. It sometimes fails as to things appurtenant. Return of writs or a let may be appurtenant to an hundred; so may waif and stray to a leet; and yet in these instances both subjects are incorporeal. Ante 121. a. 8. H. 7. 1. a. 3. Rast. Entr. 128. The true test seems to be the propriety of relation between the principal and the adjunct; which may be found out, by considering, whether they so agree in nature and quality, as to be capable of union without any incongruity. See 1. Ventr. 386.

Notes to 122. a.

(1) Acc. Dy. 70. b. and two adjudged cases in marg. of ed. 1688. Acc. also by Dyer in 2. Leon. 222. The same point was agitated in Long and Heming, 31. Eliz. of which case the reports differ so much, that it is difficult to say, what was decided by the court. But it rather seems to have ended with an opinion consonant to lord Coke's. Sav. 103. Cro. Eliz. 209. 1. Leon. 207. 4. Leon. 216. Doder. Advowf. 42.—(2) This may at first seem to clash with the doctrine before, that appendants are ever by prescription. Ante 121. b. n. 4. But they may be reconciled; for, as appendancy cannot be without prescription, the former always implies the latter; and therefore if one pleads common appendant, it is unnecessary to add the usual form of prescribing.—(3) See Fulb. Prepar. 68. b. and 1. Saund. 351.—(4) But not if there is a grant to shew; common appurtenant being claimable by grant, as well as by prescription. Adj. Cro. Cha. 483.—(5) It has been denied, that common in gross can be sans nombre. 1. Saund. 346. But see Fulb. Prepar. 70. a. and the books there cited.—(6) For the cases about sola vestura see ante 4. b. n. 1. As to several pastura, whether a prescription for it can be made against the owner of the soil, has been the subject of argument in three different cases since lord Coke's time. In the first the court of Common Pleas was equally divided. North and Cox, Mich. 20. Cha. 2. Vaugh. 251. 1. Lev. 253. In the second the court of King's Bench inclined to think such a prescription good; but the demurrer, on which the point arose, being over-ruled by consent, in order to try the fact, and a verdict being found against it, a decision of the question of law became unnecessary. Potter and North, Easter 21. Cha. 2. 1. Ventr. 383. 1. Saund. 347. 1. Lev. 268. But in the third case, which was on a motion to arrest judgment, the whole court of King's Bench adjudged for the prescription. Hopkins and Robinson, East. 23. Cha. 2. Pollexf. 13. 1. Mod. 74. a. Saund. 314. 2. Leon. 2. Since this last case lord Coke's doctrine seems to have been generally acquiesced in.—(7) According to this passage, ownership of the soil is not necessarily included in a several fishery, and common of fishery and free fishery are the same thing. But one, whose works will be admired, as long as a good taste for literary compositions or gratitude for the pleasure and instruction derived from them shall

Notes to 122. b. are postponed to 127. b.

common law deemed a guardian afterwards unnecessary. However, since the 12. of Cha. 2. enabling the father to appoint a guardian and membrum est pars corporis habens destinatum operationem in corpore. Mayhemum vero dici poterit, ubi aliquis in aliqua parte sui corporis effectus sit inutilis ad pugnandum. And the law hath so appropriated this word mayhem, which our author here useth, to this offence, as mayhemavit cannot be expressed by any other word, as, mutavit, truncavit, or datruncavit, or the like.

Il ferra indite, or rather endite, and so is the original; for it commeth of the French word enditer, and signifieth in law an accusation found by an enquest of 12 or more upon their oath; and the accusation is called indictamentum. And, as the appeale is ever the suit of the partie, so the inditement is alwaies the suite of the king, and as it were his declaration.

[b] Some derive it from the Greeke word indiximus to accuse.

[c] Navera &c. appeale de mayhem. Because in that appeale he shall recover but damages, which the lord after execution might take againe, and so the judgement inutile and illusory, and sapiens incipit à fine. And the law never giveth an action, where the end of it can bring no profit or benefit to the plaintife. But here it is to be observed, that, albeit the party grieved can have no action for the mayhem, yet at the king's suite he shall be punished therefore, for the reason hereafter expressed in this section. [d] And in ancient time there were appeales de plagis & de imprisonment; but they are out of use and turned to actions of trespass.

Fine, finis. Here fine signifieth a pecuniarie punishment for an offence, or a contempt committed against the king, and regularly to it imprisonment appertaineth. And it is called finis; because it is an end for that offence. [e] And in this case a man is said facere finem de transgressionem, &c. cum rege, to make an end, or fine with the king for such a transgression. It is also taken for a summe given by the tenant to the lord for concord, and an end to be made.

[f] It is also taken for the highest and best assurance of lands, &c.

Here it is good to see, what a fine differeth from an amerciamment. [g] Amerciamment in Latine is called miseriordia; for that it ought to be assessed mercifully. And this ought to be moderated by assereement of his equals, or else a writ de moderata misericordia doth lie. And thereof Glanvill saith thus. [h] Est autem misericordia domini regis, qua quis per juramentum legalium hominum de vicineto catenus amercandus est, ne aliquid de suo honorabili contentamento amittat.

[i] The cause of an amerciamment in plea reall, personall or mixt (where the king is to have no fine) is, for that the tenant or defendant ought to render the demand (as he is commanded by the king's writ) the first day: which, if he do, he shall not be amerced. So as for the delay, that the tenant or defendant doth use, he shall be amerced. [k] And albeit the amerciamment cannot be imposed, nor the king fully intitled thereunto, untill judgement be given, because by the judgement the wrong is discerned; yet a pardon before judgement, after judgement given, shall discharge the party, because the originall cause, viz. the delay, &c. is pardoned. [l] What then if a præcipe be brought against an infant, and, hanging the plea, he commeth of full age?

He

he shall be amerced for the delay after his full age. So likewise if the demandant or plaintiff be nonsuit or judgement given against him, hee shall be likewise amerced pro falso clamore. (5. Co. 49. a. Cro. Cha. 410. S. Co. 62. b.)

[m] And for the payment of this amercement the defendant or plaintiffe, &c. shall finde pledges; and those demandants or plaintiffes, that shall find no pledges, (as the king, the queene, an infant, &c.) shall not be amerced. And therefore when such are demandant or plaintiffe, the writ shall not say, Si rex, &c. fecerit te secum de clamore suo prosiquendo.

[n] If a writ doe abate by the act of the demandant or plaintiffe, or for matter of forme, the demandant or plaintiffe shall be amerced; but if it abate by the act of God, as by the death of one, where there is two or the like, there shall be no amercement. And to an amercement, imprisonment belongeth not, as it doth to a fine or ranfome. If you desire to read more of fines and amercements, Vide 8. Co. 38. 39. &c. Grellye's case. & 11. Co. 43. 44. Godfrey's case (1).

[o] It is to be knowne that wit, wit, is an old Saxon word, and signifieth an amercement, as fledwite an amercement for fleeing or being a fugitive, and so is flemiswite, blockwite an amercement for drawing of blood, ferdwite concerning warfare, and so lethberwite, chilkwite, swardwite, and the like. Sometime it signifieth forfeiture, sometime freedom, or acquittall.

[p] And bote is also an ancient Saxon word, and sometime signifieth amercement, or compensation, as theftbote, manbote; or freedome from the same, as brigbote, castlebote, burghbote.

Wera or were [q] sometime signifieth amercement or compensation, but properly Wera Anglice idem est in Saxonis lingua viz. pretium vite hominis appetitum; which and the like words you shall often reade in ancient charters.

Ranfome. [r] Redemptio is here taken for a grand summe of money for redeeming of a great delinquent from some heynous crime, who is to be captivate in prison untill he payeth it. Some hold it to amount to his whole estate, and others hold that ranfome is a treble fine. [s] But in legall understanding a fine and ranfome are all one; for, upon the statute of Merlebridge, cap. 3. upon these words Non ideo puniatur dominus per redemptionem, the tenant shall not have (where the lord distraineth within his fee where nothing is behind) an action of trespass quare vi & armis against his lord; for therein the lord should be punished by redemption, that is, by fine, and in that action the fine is very small. And this is manifest by many authorities in all succession of ages: and this appeareth by our author in this place, for he saith, Il ferra pur ceo un grievous fine & ranfome, where fine and ranfome must of necessity, in his opinion, be taken for all one; for if the fine and ranfome were divers, then should the party, that mahemed the villeine, pay two summes, one for a fine, and another for a ranfome, which never was done. And aptly a redemption and a fine is taken to be all one; for, by the payment of the fine, he redeemeth himself from imprisonment, that attendeth the fine, and then there is an end of the businesse.

It signifieth properly a summe of money paid for the redemption of a captive, and is compounded of re and emo, that is to redeeme or buy again. And it is to be knowne, that [u] by the ancient law of England, if the defendant in an appeale of mayhem had been found guilty, the judgement against the defendant had beene, that he should lose the like member, that the plaintiffe lost by his means; as if the plaintiffe had lost an hand, the defendant also should lose one, & sic de ceteris, in respect whereof the writ saith, [w] felonice mahemavit, for that the defendant should lose a member.

Alwaies at the common law, when the defendant should lose life or member, the writ saith felonice, &c. And now albeit the law be changed (for at this day, the plaintiffe shall, as our author saith, recover but damages) yet the writ of appeale saith still felonice.

Note the life and members of every subject are under the safeguard and protection of the king, for, as Bracton [x] saith, Vita & membra sunt in potestate regis. And therewith agreeth a notable record, Pasch. 19. E. 1. coram rege Rot. 36. Northt. vita & membra sunt in manu regis, to the end that they may serve the king and their countrie, when occasion shall be offered. Nay, the lord of the villeine, for the cause aforesaid, cannot mayheme the villeine, but the king shall punish him for mayheming of his subject (for that hereby he hath disabled him to do the king service) by fine, ranfome, and imprisonment untill the fine and ranfome be paid. So as there is a manifest diversity between a ranfome and an amercement; for ranfome is ever when the law inflicted a corporal punishment by imprisonment, (and so is also a fine) but otherwise it is of an amercement, as hath bin said. And [y] ancients have said, that ranfome nest forfque redemption de paine corporel per fine des deniers. This offence of mayhem is under all felonies deserving death, and above all other inferior offences; so as it may be truly said of it, that it is, Inter crimina majora minimum, & inter minora maximum (2). And in my circuit in anno 11. Jacobi regis, in the county of Leicester, one Wright, a young strong and lustie rogue, shall have any influence, gives a very opposite explanation; for, according to him, ownership of soil is essential to a several fishery; and a free fishery differs both from several fishery and common of fishery, from the former by being confined to a public river and not necessarily comprehending the soil, from the latter by being exclusive. 2. Blackst. Com. 8. ed. 39. But we doubt, whether this distinction may not be in a great degree questionable.—1. In respect to a several fishery, where is the inconsistency in granting the sole right of fishing with a reservation of the soil and its other profits? Bracton expressly takes notice of such a grant; for his words are, that one may servitutem imponere fundo suo, quod quis possit piscari cum eo, et ita in communi, vel quod alius per se ex toto. Bract. fo. 208. b. There are also numerous other authorities for it; the old books of entries agreeing, that one may prescribe for a several fishery against the owner of the soil, to which should be added the three cases of Elizabeth cited by lord Coke. See Lib. Intrat. 162. b. 163. a. Rast. Entr. 597. b. and the books cited under the letter d in fol. 4. b. and under m here, and the cases referred to under the * on the other side. Nor do we understand, why a several piscary should not exist without the soil, as well as a several piscary, as to which latter we have already shewn the doctrine to be settled. Supra note 6. The chief reasons, which occur against lord Coke, seem to be these.—Several writs, never applicable except to the soil, lie for a piscary; such as a præcipe quod reddat, monstraverunt de rationabilibus divisis, and trespass, which latter writ is particularly insisted upon by lord chief justice Holt. Dav. 55. b. Hugh. Comm. Orig. Wr. 11. W. Jo. 440. 1. Ventr. 122. 2. Salk. 637. Skinn. 677. Suum liberum tenementum is a good plea to trespass for fishing in a several piscary. 17. E. 4. 6. 18. E. 4. 10. H. 7. 24. 26. 28. The soil will pass, as it is said, by the grant of a piscary. Plowd. 154.—But all these objections may be repelled.—The writs relied on will not always lie for a piscary. Thus if a præcipe quod reddat is brought of a piscary in the water of another person, the writ is bad, and a quod permittat is the proper remedy. Fitz. Abr. Briefe 861. F. N. B. 23. i. and note b. of the 4to. ed. Besides, in the cases of actions for trespass in a several piscary, or at least in some of them, the writ seems in effect to state a several piscary in the plaintiff's own soil, which therefore proves nothing as to the sense of several piscary without further explanation. Reg. Br. Orig. 95. b. Carth. 285. Skin. 677. The plea liberum tenementum may be replied to by prescribing for a several piscary. See the books before cited as to such a prescription. Though the grant of a piscary generally may, perhaps, pass the soil, yet it will not, if there are any words to denote a different intention; as where one seized of a river grants a several fishery in it, which is the case put by lord Coke in another place; and much less will the soil pass, when there is an express reservation of it. Ante 4. b. & n. 2. there.—Hence, as it should seem, the arguments are short of the purpose; for at the utmost they only prove, that a several piscary is presumed to comprehend the soil, till the contrary appears, which is perfectly consistent with lord Coke's position, that they may be in different persons, and indeed

For notes to this side of fol. 127. see 127. b.

guardian to his children till twenty-one, it has been usual for want of such a guardian to allow the infant to elect one for himself; and according to one book, this practice seems to have prevailed in some degree before the Restoration. Phil. Tenend. non Tollend. 199. Such election is said to be frequently made before a judge on the circuit. 1. Vef. 375. But we do not conceive this form to be essential. The last lord Baltimore, when he was turned of eighteen, having no testamentary guardian, and being under the necessity of having one for some special purposes relative to his proprietary government of Maryland, named a guardian rogue, to make himselfe impotent, thereby to have the more colour to begge or to be relieved without putting himselfe to any labour, caused his companion to strike off his left hand; and both of them were indited, fined, and ransomed therefore, and that by the opinion of the rest of the justices for the cause aforesaid.

Voyde, &c. Here by (&c.) is implied a maxime in law, quod inutilis labor & sine fructu non est effectus legis. And againe, Non licet, quod dispendio licet. And sapiens incipit à fine, and lex non præcipit inutilia. [z] Therefore the law forbiddeth such recoveries, whose ends are vaine, chargeable, and unprofitable.

Section 195.

DEmaundant, petens, is hee which is actor in a reall action, because hee demandeth lands, &c. And plaintife, querens in actions personals and mixt, quia queritur de injuria, &c. Tenant, tenens in reall actions, and defendant, defendens in actions personall and mixt.

Defence. (2) Cometh of the word defendo, so called of the manner of the pleading, viz. prædict. A. B. defendit vim & injuriam, &c.

For example, in a personall action brought by A. B. against C. D. the defence is, & prædictus C. D. defendit vim & injuriam quando, &c. & damna, & quicquid quod ipse defendere debet, &c.

In this defence there be three parts to be considered. First, when he defendeth the wrong and the force, this hath a double effect, viz. to make himselfe partie to the matter, and this is the reason, that the defendant in this and the like actions can plead no plea at all, before he makes himselfe partie by this part of the defence, as it appeareth here by Littleton, that [a] if the defendant will plead in disability of the person of the plaintiffe, he must first make himselfe partie by this first part of the defence. Neither can he plead to the jurisdiction of the court without this part of the defence (3). Secondly [b] by the defence of the damages, he affirmeth that the plaintiffe is able to sue, and (upon just cause) to recover damages. (4) Thirdly, and by the last part, viz. and all that which he ought defend, when and where he ought, he affirmeth the jurisdiction of the court, & sic de similibus. And of such necessitie it is for the tenant or defendant to make a lawfull defence, as [c] albeit he appeareth and pleads a sufficient barre without making defence, yet judgement shall be given against him.

[d] If villenage be pleaded by the lord in an action reall, mixt or personal, and it is found that he is no villaine, the bringing of a writ of error is no enfranchisement; because thereby he is to defeat the former judgement; and if, in the mean time, the plaintiffe or demandant bring an action against the lord, he need make no protestation, so long as the record remains in force, for at that time he is free, but the lord shall be restored to all by a writ of error.

Sect. 196.

[e] Bract. lib. 5 fol. 421. Bait. ton. cap. 49. fol. 125. Minor. cap. 2. Sect. 18.

UN est lou villeine suist action, &c. Littleton here

ITEM 6 maners
de homes y sont,
(5) queux, s'ils suont ac-

ALSO there are fixe manner of men, who,
if they sue judgement

indeed appears to us the true doctrine on the subject.—2. Both parts of the description of a free fishery seem disputable. Though, for the sake of distinction, it might be more convenient to appropriate free fishery to the franchise of fishing in public rivers by derivation from the crown; and though in other countries, it may be so considered; yet, from the language of our books, it seems, as if in our law practice had extended this kind of fishery to all streams whether private or public, neither the Register, nor other books, professing any discrimination. Ro. 95 b. Fitzh. N. B. 88. Fitzh. Abr. Aff. 222. 4. E. 4. 28. 17. E. 4. 6. b. 7. a. 7. H. 7. 13. b. Cro. Cha. 554. 1. Ventr. 122. 3. Mod. 97. Carth. 285. Skinn. 677. Again, it is true, that in one case the court held free fishery to import an exclusive right equally with several fishery, chiefly relying on the writs in the Reg. 95. b. and the 41. E. 3. 24. But then this was only the opinion of two judges against one, who strenuously insisted, that the word libera, ex in termini, implied common, and that many judgments and precedents were founded on lord Coke's so construing it. 1 Salk. 637. Carth. 285. That the dissenting judge was not wholly unwarranted in the latter part of his assertion, appears from two determinations a little before the case in question. See Upton and Darwkins 3. Mod. 9. and Peake and Tucker cited in Carth. 286. in marg. We may add to this the three cases cited by lord Coke as of his own time; and that there are passages in other books, which favour his distinction. See Cro. Cha. 554. 17. E. 4. 6. b. 7. a. 7. H. 7. 13. b.—These remarks on several and free fishery may serve the student as a notice of the doubts on the subject, and also assist in any future discussion for removing them; which, in truth, is the whole scope of the annotation.

(1) It should be full.—(2) It has been well observed, that defence, as applied in our law pleadings, means, not a justification, which is the ordinary signification, but a denial. 3. Blackst. Comm. 8th. ed. 296. Had this occurred to the author of the book on real actions, he would not have been at a loss for the reason of the tenant's defending the demandant's right in a writ of right. Booth on Real Actions 112.—(3) Held contra by three judges against Holt chief justice. Carth. 220.—(4) Adjudged Acc. on Demurrer, Carth. 229.—(5) In L. & M.—Roh.—P.—& Red. the reading is contre queux.

Notes to 127. a.

(1) In very ancient times amercements were a considerable object in our law, as appears by the Great Charter's prohibiting their exorbitancy, and the writ of moderata misericordia for relieving against excessive amercements in courts not being of record. F. N. B. 75. a. But so far as regards amercements on judgments in civil suits in the king's courts of record, they have long been mere form. Yet in lord Coke's time it was error to omit the entry of them. 5. Co. 49. a. Now indeed by the 16. & 17. Ch. 2. c. 8. such an error is amendable.—(2) Since lord Coke's time, premeditated maiming, accompanied with laying in wait, has been made a capital felony. See 22. & 23. Ch. 2. c. 1. commonly titled the Coventry act.

Notes to 122. b.

(1) See ante 117. b. n. 3.—(2) This replication was given by the 37. E. 3. c. 16. before which statute the plea of being a villein to a stranger to the writ could not be denied.—(3) Et nief in L. & M.—& Roh.—(4) See ante 68. b. n. 1. 2. to which add Post. 172. b. Spelm. Gloss. voc. fidelitas 2. Init. 73. Britt. cap. 29. Cow. Inst. 1. 2. t. 3. f. 14. Flet. 1. 2. c. 52. l. 3. c. 16. Mirr. c. 3. sect. 35. 7. Co. 6. b. 7. a. Calvin's case 1 yrr. Biblioth. Polit. 4th. ed. 907. Ellesmere's argument in Calvin's case 76.

a guardian by deed. This mode was adopted by the advice of two eminent barristers; for though one of them at first doubted, whether

tion, judgement poit estre demand, sils fer-ront respondus, &c.
Un est, lou villeine
suist action envers son seignior, come en le cas avantdit.

may be demanded, if they shall be answered, &c. One is, where a villeine sueth an action against his lord, as in the case aforesaid.

rehearseth six kind of disabilities of the person, disabling him to sue any action reall, personall, or mixt.

Sils ferront responus. This is the legall (Post. 352. b.) conclusion of the plea, when the plea is in disability of the person. And of the verbe respondere came responsalis often used in the ancient authors of the law. [f] Responsalis was he, that was appointed by the tenant or defendant, in case of extremity and necessity, to alleage the cause of the parties absence, and to certify the court upon what tryall he will put himselfe, viz. the combat or the country. So as his power was more than the essoinor, which casteth an essoine only to excuse the absence of the party, as an estranger, which casteth a protection, doth. For by the common law, the plaintife or defendant, demandant, or tenant, could not appeare by attorne without the king's special warrant by writ or letters patent, but ought to follow his suite in his owne proper person (by reason whereof there were but few suites.) [g] Abu- son est a retener attorney sans breve de la chancerie. And therefore Bracton saith truly, [h] Abu- attornatus hac omnia facere potest (that is, plead all manner of pleas). Est igitur magna dif- ferentia inter attornatum & responsalem. So as the statutes, that give the making of attorneyes, have worne out responsales. Now what manner of men attorneyes ought to be, or rather what they ought not to be, heare what antiquity hath said, [i] attorneyes poient estre tous ceux, aux queux ley voile suffer. Feme ne poient estre attorneyes, ne enfans, ne serfs, ne nul que est en garde ou autrement fait de foy, ne nul crimineux, ne nul essoine, ne nul que n'est a le foy le roy, ne nul que ne poest estre counteur, &c.

Section 197.

LE 2. est, lou un
home est utlage
sur action de det, ou trespas, ou sur autre action, ou indiet-ment, le tenant, ou defendant, poit mon-strer tout le matter de record, & lutlagarie, & demaunder judgement, sil serra respon-due; pur ceo que il est hors de la ley de suer ascun action durant le temps que il soit utlage.

THE 2. is, where a man is outlawed upon an action of debt or trespass, or upon any other action or indictment, the tenant, or the defendant may shew all the matter of record, and the outlawry, and demand judgement if he shall be answered; because he is out of the law to sue an action during the time that he is outlawed.

LE 2. est [k] lou un
home est utlage,
&c. But these generall words receive a distinction, viz. [l] if an executor or an administrator sueth any action, utlary in the plaintife shall not disable him:

because the suit is in auter droit, that is, in the right of the testator, and not in his owne right. And for the same reason, [m] a maior and communalty shall have an action, though the maior be outlawed. [n] In a writ of error to reverse an utlary, utlawry in that suit, or at any strangers suite, shall not disable the plaintife, because if he in that action should be disabled, if he were outlawed at [k] Bracton. l. b. 5. fol. 421.

Britton ca. 22. fol. 39. Mirr. ca.
3. de exceptions a provors ca. 4. defaults punishable.

[l] 21. E. 4. 49. b. 21. H. 6.
30. b. 14. H. 6. 15.

[m] 12 E. 4. fol. 12.

[n] 7. H. 4. 40.

[o] 23. H. 8. c. 3. 2. H. 7. 7.
(1. Sid. 43. Cro. Jam. 425. 616.)
[p] Mirr. ca. 3. acc. 12. E. 4.
16. 33. H. 6. ca. 2.
[q] Bract. lib. 3. fo. 125. 3. H.
5. Utlary 11. 38. E. 3. 5.
[r] Britton fo. 39.
[s] 20. E. 2. Coron. 232. 19.
Aff. p. 10. 3. H. 6. 15. b. 37. H.
6. 23. 5. H. 7. 6. Eliz. Dyer
228. F. N. B. 244. Stanf. Pl.
Coro. 105.
shew (Noy. 74. 143.)

several mens suits, he should never reverse any of them. [o] In an attain outlary in the plaintife cannot be pleaded in disability of the person (1). [p] Outlary in Chester or Durham shall not disable the plaintife in any court at Westminster, &c. [q] Minor vero, & qui infra atatem 12 annorum fuerit, utlagari non potest, nec extra legem poni; quia ante talem atatem non est sub lege aliqua nec in decemna. [r] He that is abjured the realme may be disabled; for that he is extra legem; and yet he is not properly outlawed.

Monstrer tout le matter de record. Here note two things first by this word, (monstrer) that, [s] when any man pleads an utlary in disability of the person, hee must

(1) Rot. Parl. 20. H. 6. n. 18. c. 2. Hal. MSS.

whether the administration of the government of the province was not devolved upon the crown during the infancy, yet he afterwards retracted this idea, and concurred in thinking, that the guardian named by the infant might act as lord proprietor.
Indeed it seems, as if there was no prescribed form of an infant's electing a guardian after fourteen, any more than there is before; and therefore election by parol might perhaps be sufficient, though it would be wrong to trust to a mode so unsolemn.
But we do not wonder at the deficiency; because guardianship by election of the infant is of very late origin, it being, we believe, not only unnoticed by any writer before lord Coke, except Swinburn, but there still being no cases in print to explain the powers incident to it, or whether the infant may change a guardian so constituted by himself. Swinb. Testam. ed. 1590. fol.
97. b. Even lord Coke, we see, though professing to enumerate the different sorts of guardianship, and though he had before mentioned this latter one, omits it here; whence it may be probably conjectured, that, in his time, it was in strictness scarcely recognized as legal.

The second is guardian by appointment of the lord chancellor. How this jurisdiction was acquired by him is not easy to state.
The usual manner of accounting for it appears to us quite unsatisfactory. See Gilb. Eq. Rep. 172. Saying, that his jurisdiction over idiots and lunatics is undoubted, furnishes an argument against his having any over infants; for he derives the former from a separate commission under the sign manual, but there is not any such to warrant the latter. The writs of ravishment of seard and de recte de custodia prove as little: for were not these returnable in the courts of common law; or, though they had not

(5 Co 142. b.)

[1] 28 Aff. 49. 12. E. 3. Utlawrecord; and the judgement after the quinto exactus given by the coroners in the county court,
 227. 38. E. 3. 13.
 (Post. 283. b. 3. Co. 111.)

shew forth the record of the outlawrie maintenant sub pede sigilli, (because the plea is but dilatorie) unlesse the record be in the same court. But if he plead an outlawrie in barre, if it be denied, he shall have a day to bring it in.

Secondly [1] before the defendant can disable the plaintife, the outlawrie must appeare of record; and the judgement after the quinto exactus given by the coroners in the county court, is not sufficient, untill the writ of exigent be returned, and the outlawrie appeare of record: which is manifest by Littleton's owne words, (viz.) matter de record, whereof see more hereafter, sect. 503.

[2] Tr. 44. El. in Com. Banc.
 inter Mare & Dolbure. 33. H.
 6. 1. 11. H. 4. 34. Dyer 3. El.
 192. 5. El. 223. 4. H. 4. le 1.
 case. 8. H. 4. 1. 7. 37. H. 6. 17.
 33. E. 3. Err. 77. 21. H. 6. 20.
 (Mo 77.)
 [3] 33. H. 6. 19. b. &c.

[4] 41. E. 3. 27.
 (D. Ctr. Plac. 162. 396.)

It is to be observed, that there be two kind of appearances before the quinto exactus, to avoid the outlawry, viz. an apparence in deed, that is, to render himselfe, &c. And the other is by an apparence in law, [u] that is, by purchasing a superfedeas out of the court where the record is, which is an apparence of record: and therefore, though it be not delivered to the sherife before the quinto exactus, yet it shall avoid the outlawrie; and so are the bookes, that speake hereof, to be intended.

[20] If a man be outlawed at the suit of one man, all men shall take advantage of this personall disability. And so it is in case of alien uce, and of excommungement. But otherwise it is in case of villenage; for that disability is onely given to the lord.

Durant le temps que il est utlage. [x] If the defendant plead an outlawrie in the plaintife, in disability of his person, and the plaintife after that plea pleaded purchase a charter of pardon; because the charter hath restored him to the law, the defendant shall answer. So note, the disability abateth not the writ, but disinableth the plaintife, untill he obtaineth a charter of pardon, and so it appeareth here by Littleton.

[5] 9 El. Dyer 262. 7. H. 4. 4.
 b. 5. aff. Pl. Coron. 188. 5. Co.
 109. in Foxley's case. 28. E. 3.
 12. 29. Aff. p. 47. 63. 30. H.
 6. 5.
 (Doct. Plac. 305.)
 [6] Mir. c. 1. f. cl. 7. & c. 3. &
 4. hope cap. 5. Sect. 1.

Judgement fil ferra respondue. [y] If the ground or cause of the action bee forfeited by the outlawry, then may the outlawry bee pleaded in barre of the action; as in an action of debt, detinue, &c. But in reall actions, or in personall, where dammages be incertaine, (as in trespass of batterie, of goods, of breaking his clofe, and the like) and are not forfeited by the outlawry, there outlawry must be pleaded in disability of the person.

[z] And it is to be observed, that, in the reign of king Ælfred, and untill a good while after the conquest, no man could have been outlawed but for felonie, the punishment whereof was death. But now the law is changed, as it appeareth by that which hath beene sayd. And hereby you shall understand old bookes and records, which say, that an outlawed man had caput lupinum; because he might be put to death by any man, as a wolfe that hateful beast might.

[7] Fleta lib. 1. ca. 27. Bract.
 li. 5. fol. 421. Britton fol. 30. b.

[8] Mir. ca. 4. f. cl. 4. defaults punishable.

[9] Lamb. fol. 128.

[10] 2. Aff. Pl. 3. 2. E. 3. tr. Co.
 100. 148.

[*] Utlagatus & waiviata capita gerunt lupina, que ab omnibus impune poterunt amputari; merito enim sine lege perire debent, qui secundum legem vivere recusant. And another faith, [a] utlage pur felonie teigne leu pur loup, & est criable woolfesbered, pur ces que loutre est beaft bay de tous gents, & de ceo en avant list al ascun de le occider al foer del loup, dont chascun soloit estre de porter les testes al chiefe lieu del county, ou de la franchise, & soloit la avoir avec mark del countie pur chescun teste de utlage & de loupe. And this agreeth with the law before the conquest, [b] utlagus lupinum gerit caput, quod Anglice woolfeshead dicitur; & hec est lex communis & generalis de omnibus utlagatis. [c] But, in the beginning of the raigne of king Edward the third, it was resolved by the judges, for avoyding of inhumanity, and of effusion of Christian blood, that it should not be lawfull for any man, but the sherife onely, (having lawfull warrant therefore) to put to death any man outlawed, though it were for felonie; and if he did, he should undergoe such punishments and paines of death, as if he had killed any other man; and so from thenceforth the law continued untill this day. (Nota, woolfeshead, and swulfesfol is all one). [*] And after in Bracton's time, and somewhat before, procelle of outlawry was ordained to lie in all actions, that were quare vi & armis, which Bracton calleth delicta; for there the king shall have a fine (1). But since, by divers statutes, procelle of outlawry doth lie in account, debt, detinue, annuity, covenant, action sur le statute de 5. Rich. 2. action sur le case, and in divers other common or civill actions. But now let us heare what Littleton will say unto us.

[11] Bracton. lib. 5. fo. 421. 8.
 li. 6. 9. b. 40. E. 3. 5. 35. li.
 6. 6. 40. E. 3. 2.

Section 198.

[12] Bract. li. 5. fol. 415. 427.
 Mir. c. 1. f. cl. 3. c. 5. sect 1. &
 ca. 3. except a p. ovors. Fleta. li.
 6. c. 47. Brit. fo. 29. 13. E. 3.
 Bre. 677. 25. E. 3. de N. tis ut tra mare. 31. E. 3. Collage 5.
 42. E. 3. 2. 9. E. 4. 7.

ALIEN. [a] Alieni- gena is derived from the Latine word alienus, and according

LE 3. est un a- THE third is an alien, que est née lien, which is born hors de la ligeance out of the ligeance of nostre

(1) Whether the common law gives procelle of outlawry against crimes, being merely constructive breaches of the peace, was questioned in a late case before the King's Bench on a libel. But the chief justice, in delivering the court's judgment, spoke at large to prove, that such procelle lies against crimes universally. Mr. Wilkes's case 4. Burr. v. 2. page 2537. However, the reasoning, on which this opinion is grounded, stands opposed by a former judgment of the Common Pleas on a prior case relative to the same gentleman. 2. Willf. 151. But it was adopted by both houses of parliament, when, in his case, they resolved, that privilege of parliament doth not extend to libels. See Annual Reg. for 1764. The arguments for the contrary opinion are forcibly expressed in a protest by some of the lords, who were against making such a resolution. Journ. Dom. Proc. 29. Nov. 1763.—(2) Ubi natus in partibus transmarinis shall not be an alien, see Hill. 13. E. 1. rot. 1. Hal. MSS.

not been so, how doth a jurisdiction, to decide between contending competitors for the right of guardianship, prove a power of appointing a guardian, where it happens, that one is wanting? The writs de custode admittendo, in the Register, only relate to guardians ad litem. Reg. Br. Orig. 198. a. The assertion, that the appointment of guardians belonged to the chancellor before the erection of the Court of Wards, remains to be proved; or at least we, after a diligent search, do not find any authority in print. The passage referred to in Fleta and the doctrine in Beverley's case 4 Co. by no means warrant the use made of them; for in neither is any notice taken of infants. Though the case of infants, as well as of ideots and lunatics, should be admitted to belong nostre seignior le roy, si tiel alien voile suer un action reall ou personall, le tenant ou defendant poit dire, que il fuit née en tiel pais, que est hors de la ligeance le roy, & demaunder judgement si il serra respondue.

our soveraigne lord the king, if such alien will sue an action reall or personal, the tenant or defendant may say, that he was borne in such a country, which is out of the king's allegiance, and aske judgement if he shall be answered.

to the etymologie of the word, it signifieth one borne in a strange country, under the obedience of a strange prince or country, (and therefore Bracton saith, that this exception, propter defectum nationis, should rather be propter defectum subjectionis) or as Littleton saith, (which is the surest) out of the liegeance of the king. Note, here Littleton saith not Hors del realme, but hors de ligeance; for he may be borne out of the realme of England, yet within the

11. H. 4. 26. 14. H. 4. 19, 20. 3. H. 6. 55. 22. H. 6. 38. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 197. a. 7. Co. 1. Calvin's case. Pl. Com. 268. per Sanders. Vid. sect. 1. 439. 440. 441.

liegeance. And he that is borne within the king's liegeance is called sometime a denizen, quasi deus née, borne within, and thereupon in Latine called indigena, the king's liegeman; for ligens is ever taken for a naturall borne subject. But many times in acts of Parliament, denizen is taken for an alien borne, that is enfranchised or denized by letters patent, where- by the king doth grant unto him, [b] quod ille in omnibus tractetur, reputetur, habeatur, te- neatur, & gubernetur, tanquam ligens noster, infra dictum regnum nostrum Angliæ oriundus, & non aliter, nec alio modo. But the king may make a particular denization: [c] as he may grant to an alien, quod in quibusdam curiis suis Angliæ audiat ut Anglus, & quod non repe- latur per illam exceptionem, quod sit alienigena & natus in partibus transmarinis, to enable him to sue onely. The severall senses of which word must be gathered, ex antecedentibus, adjunctis, & consequentibus; and they that take him in that sense, derive the word from donaison (i. e.) donatio, because his freedome is given unto him by the king.

(2. Inst. 741.) [d] 9. E. 4. f. 8. Pl. Com. 130. b. [e] Rot. Parl. 22. E. 1. Elias de Daubenie.

There is another kind, and that is an alien naturalized, and that must be by act of Parli- ment. And this alien naturalized to all intents and purposes, is as a naturall borne sub- ject (1), and differeth much from denization by letters patent; for if he had issue in England before his denization, that issue is not inheritable to his father; but if his father be natural- ized by parliament, such issue shall inherite. So if an issue of an Englishman be borne be- yond sea, if the issue be naturalized by act of Parliament (2), he shall inherit his father's lands; but if he be made denizen by letters patent, he shall not; and many other differences there be betweene them.

(Cro. Cha. 60r.)

Ligeance. A ligando, being the highest and greatest obligation of dutie and obe- dience that can be. Ligeance is the true and faithfull obedience of a liegeman or subject, to his liege lord, or soveraigne. Ligeantia est vinculum fidei, ligeantia est legis essentia.

Vide Calvin's case ubi supra.

Ligeantia domi- no regi debita est duplex.

Perpetua.

1. Originaria, sive naturalis, sive nata, [d] and this is al- ways absolute and incident inseparably. Nemo patriam, in qua natus est, exure, nec ligeantia debitum ejurare possit.
2. Data, aut per denizationem, aut per naturalizationem (ut supradictum est) & ista ligeantia per denizationem potest esse sub conditione.

[d] 13. El. Dierfo. 300. b. Doc- tor Storie's case.

Temporanea aut

- Localis, quia quilibet alienigena, qui in hoc regno sub pro- tectione regis degit, domino regi ligeantiam debet.* And if he be indicted of high treason, the indictment shall say, [e] contra ligeantia sue debitum; & ideo dicitur tem- poranea & localis, quia non durat, nisi quousque infra regnum moratur.
- Limitata*, as when one is made denizen for life, or in taile. [f] But one cannot be naturalized, either with li- mitation for life, or in taile, or upon condition: for that is against the absoluteness, puritie, and indebilty of na- turall allegiance.

(Hob. 271.)

[e] 3. & 4. P. & M. Di. 144. 7. Co. 6. &c. Calvin's case.

[f] 9. E. 4. 7. Calvin's case ubi supra.

(Cro. Jam. 539. 2. Ro. Rep. 95.)

[*] 13. E. 3. Br. 264. 20. E. 3. Annuity 24. 17. E. 3. 21. 40. E. 3. 10. 27. Aff. 48. 14. H. 4. 37. 22. E. 4. 44. 21. H. 7. 7. Stanf. Præf. 54. L'estat. de Carlisle. but 35. E. 1.

[*] An abbot, prior, or prioress alien, shall have actions reall, personall, or mixt, for any thing concerning the possessions or goods of his monastery here in England, though hee bee an alien borne out of the king's liegeance; because hee bringeth it, not in his owne right,

(1) But now by the 12. & 13. W. 3. c. 2. naturalized persons are incapacitated from being of the privy council, members of either house of parliament, or enjoying any office or place of trust, civil or military, or from having any grant of lands or other hereditaments. The 1 G. 1. goes still further; for it enacts, that no bill of naturalization shall be received without a clause to this effect. 1. G. 1. ft. 2. c. 4. f. 2. But when any foreigner, distinguished by eminence of rank or services, is naturalized, it is usual, first to pass an act for the repeal of these statutes in his favour, and then to pass an act of naturalization without any exception.—(2) This imports a special act of parliament to be necessary. But, whatever the law might be in lord Coke's time, now, by several modern statutes, persons born beyond sea, if their fathers, or paternal grandfathers, were natural born sub- jects, are likewise made so, though with an exclusion of some unfavoured persons. 7. Ann c. 3. 4. G. 2. c. 21. 13. G. 3. c. 21. See ante fo. 8. a. note 1.

Continuation of notes to 123. b. from 125. a.

(2) If our law was really as strict in point of time, as is here represented, it would not sufficiently conform to the course of nature. The physicians, it is true, generally call nine months, each being of thirty days, the usual period for a woman's going with child. But then they allow, that, as a delivery may be accelerated by accidental causes, so it is frequently protracted, not only for ten days beyond the nine months, but to the end of the tenth month, and sometimes for a considerably longer time. See Zacch. Quæst. Medico legal. lib. 1. tit. 2. Justice therefore requires, that, in the case of posthumous children, an excess of the usual time should not operate further, than by raising a proportional presumption against the legitimacy. The Roman law was very liberal in this respect; for the decemviri allowed, that a child may be born in the tenth month; and though a law of the Digest excludes the eleventh, yet the emperor Adrian, after consulting with the philosophers and physicians, decreed even for this, where the mother was of good and chaste manners. See Dig. 1. 4. 12. Paul. Sentent. lib. 4. t. 9. f. 3. Nov. 39. c. 2. t. 1. with belong to the crown, yet something further is necessary to prove, that the chancellor is the person constitutionally delegated to act but in the right of his monastery, and not in his naturall but in his politique capacity (1).

X x x

(Doctr. Plac. 8. Dy. 2. b.)

[4] Bracton 426. 427. 430. 8. E. 3. 51. 5. E. 2. Aiel 8. 13. E. 3. Bre. 677. 22. E. 3. 14. 20. 21. E. 3. Cufinage 5. 42. E. 3. 2. 13. E. 4. 9. 11. H. 4. 26. 9. E. 4. 7. 10. E. 4. 7. 20. E. 4. 6. 13. E. 4. 6. 10. 32. H. 6. 23. 33. H. 8. Br. Denizen 10. 1. E. 6. Nonhab. Br. 13. & 62. Vid. 4. H. 3. Dower 179. 6. E. 3. 263. 31. H. 6. ca. 4. Livre de Entries in c. 67. 7. 6. H. 8. Dier 2. 6. H. 7. 15. [*] 29. E. 3. Br. Denizen 15. Vid. Stanf. Pl. Co. 197. a.

[i] Livre d' Entries Alien r. (Doctr. Plac. 89. Dy. 2. b.)

Reall ou personall.

[b] In this case the law doth distinguish between an alien, that is a subject to one that is an enemy to the king, and one that is subject to one that is in league with the king; (2) and true it is that an alien enemy, shall maintaine neither reall nor personall action, donec terræ fuerint communes, that is untill both nations be in peace (3); but an alien, that is in league, shall maintaine personall actions, for an alien may trade and traffique, buy and sell, and therefore of necessity he must be of ability to have personall actions; but he cannot maintaine either reall or mixt actions. An alien, that is condemned in an information, shall have a writ of error to relieve himselfe, et sic de similibus.

[*] If an alien be made a prior or abbot, the plea of alien née shall not disable him to bring any reall or mixt action concerning his house; because he is in auter droit, as before is said (4).

Hors del ligeance nostre seignior le roy.

Here Littleton doth not say, out of the realme or beyond the sea, (5) (as he doth sect. 437. 440. 441. 677.) but out of ligeance; for (as hath beene said before) a man may be borne out of the realme, viz. of England, as in Ireland, Jersey, and Gernsey, &c. (6) and yet seeing he is not borne out of the ligeance of the king, as Littleton here speaketh, he is no alien. But hereof there is so much, and so plentifully spoken in our bookes, and especially in the case of Calvin ubi supra, as this shall suffice.

Et demaunder judgement sil serra respondue.

So as the tenant or defendant shall neither plead alien née to the writ or to the action, but in disability of the person, as in case of villenage and outlawrie before. [i] And Littleton is to be intended of an alien in league; for if hee be an alien enemy, the defendant may conclude to the action.

Sect. 199.

(3. Inst. 119.)

For Statutes.

Vid. 35. E. 1. stat. de Carlisle. 25. E. 3. c. 22. 25. E. 3. stat. de Provitors. 27. E. 3. c. 1. 38. E. 4. c. 3. 2. R. 2. c. 12. 3. R. 2. c. 3. 12. R. 2. c. 5. 16. R. 2. c. 5. 2. H. 4. c. 3. & 4. 6. H. 4. c. 1. 24. H. 8. c. 12. 25. H. 8. ca. 19. 20. 26. H. 8. c. 16. 1. Eliz. ca. 1. 5. Eliz. c. 1. 13. Eliz. ca. 1. 2. 8. 27. Eliz. ca. 2. 39. Eliz. ca. 18.

For Presidents.

Vide Mich. 29. E. 3. coram Rege in Thesaur. Pasch. 44. E. 3. ibid. Melbourne's case, Mich. 38. H. 6. ibid. The case of Rich. Beauchamp and others, Hil. 25. H. 8. Coram rege. The case of Nic. Bishop of Norwich, Trin. 36. H. 8. Rot. 9. coram Rege. The case of the Bishop of Bangor, Mich. 26. & 27. Eliz. coram Rege, Perrot against D. Bevan and other, booke of Entries, fo. 429. & 430. & ibid. Mich. 9. H. 7. f. 23.

Booke cases.

21. E. 3. 40. B. 18. H. 6. 6. 9. E. 4. 2. 35. E. 3. 7. 24. H. 8. 11. Præmunire 19. 10. H. 4. 12. 27. E. 3. 84. 6. H. 7. 14. 44. E. 3. 36.

PRæmunire.

Some hold an opinion that the writ is called a præmunire; because it doth fortifie jurisdictionem jurium regiorum coronæ sue of the kingly lawes of the crown against fo-reine jurisdiction, and against the usurpers upon them, as by divers acts of Parliaments appeare. But in truth it is so called of a word in the writ; for the words of the writ be præmunire facias præfatum A. B. &c. quod tunc sit coram nobis, &c. where præmunire is used for præmonere, and so doe divers interpreters of the civill and canon law use it; for they are præmuniti that are præmoniti. By the statutes before quoted in the margin you shall perceive what statutes were made before Littleton wrote, and what have beene ordained since to make offences in danger of a præmunire.

Hors del protection le Roy. The judgement in a præmunire is, that the defendant shall bee from thence forth out of the king's protection, and his lands and tenements, goods and chattels

LE 4. est un home,

que per judgment done envers luy sur un brieve de præmunire facias, &c. est hors de protection le roy. Si il fuist ascun action, & le tenant oule def. monstra tout le record envers luy, il poit demaunder judgement sil serra respondue; car la ley le roy, & les briefs le roy sont les choses, per queux home est protect & aide, et issint, durant le temps que home en tiel cas est hors de la protection le roy, il est hors de estre aide ou protect per la ley le roy, ou per brief le roy.

THE 4. is a man, who by judgement given against him upon a writ of præmunire facias, &c. is out of the king's protection. If he sue any action, and the tenant or defendant shew all the record against him, he may aske judgement if he shall be answered; for the law and the king's writs be the things, by which a man is protected and holpen; and so, during the time, that a man in such case is out of the king's protection, he is out of helpe and protection by the king's law, or by the king's writ.

(1) Here, as also generally where lord Coke mentions professed persons, he must, we conceive, be understood to write, as of the law before the dissolution of monasteries, and the consequent establishment of the protestant faith. See ante 3. b. note 7 — (2) Et nota it shall be tried by the record, if he be in amity or not, viz. a proclamation of war. But a proclamation prohibiting commerce, as anciently between the emperor and the queen, doth not disable a German in a personal action. Trin. 41. Eliz. C. B. — Hal. MSS. — (3) But now, on declaring war, the king usually, in the proclamation of war, qualifies it, by permitting the subjects of the enemy resident here, to continue so long as they peaceably demean themselves; and, without doubt, such persons are to be deemed alien friends in effect. — (4) A feme alien shall have dower. Rot. Parl. 8. H. 5. n. 15. 9. H. 5. n. — pro comitissa Arundell. Hal. MSS. — See ante 31. b. note 9. — (5) See ante 107. a. n. 6. there and post. 244. a. — (6) Rot. Parl. 9. H. 6. n. 20. indulgentia of one born in Wales. Simile Rot. Parl. 23. H. 6. n. 26. Co. 2. Inst. 741. on stat. 2. H. 4. — Hal. MSS.

with Gothofred's learned notes on those two texts of the Roman law. Cod. lib. 6. t. 29. leg. 7. Aul. Gell. lib. 3. cap. 16. Huber. Prælect. in Dig. lib. 1. tit. 6. A like liberal discretion probably prevails in most countries of Europe; for an instance of which, we appeal to a writer of great authority, who reports a decision by a majority of judges in the supreme court of Frieland, by which a child was admitted to the succession, though not born till three hundred and thirty-three days from the day of the husband's death, which period wants only three days of twelve lunar months. Sand. Decis. lib. 4. tit. 8. Definit. 10. Nor will our own law, notwithstanding what lord Coke advances, if the authorities are duly collected and considered, be found deficient on this interesting subject. Indeed there is a passage in Britton, which gives countenance to lord Coke's limitation of forty weeks; for this writer excludes from act for the king. It is no wonder therefore, that lord chancellor Hardwicke took occasion to disapprove of comparing the court's jurisdiction over infants with that over idiots and lunatics. 2 Atk. 315. As to the writs relative to the appointment and removal of guardians in the Regifter, they merely relate to suits; which is of very different consideration from general guardians. See Index to Reg. Brev. Orig. tit. Custodes. Nor will it answer the purpose, to attempt including guardianship in the idea of trusts, which are the peculiar objects of equitable jurisdiction, as it must be seen, that this is an overstrained refinement; for, though forfeited to the king, and that his body shall remaine in prison at the king's pleasure. So odious was this offence of præmunire, that a man, that was attainted of the same, might have bin slaine by any man, without danger of law; because [k] it was provided by law, that a man might doe to him as to the king's enemy, and any man may lawfully kill an enemy. But queene Elizabeth and her parliament [*], liking not the extreme and inhumane rigor of the law in that point, did provide, that it should not be lawfull for any person to slay any person in any manner attainted in or upon any præmunire, &c. Tenant in taile is attainted in a præmunire, he shall forfeit the land but during his life; for albeit the statute of 16. R. 2. ca. 5. enacteth, that in that case their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, shall be forfeit to the king, that must bee understood of such an estate as he may lawfully forfeite, and that is during his owne life. And these generall words doe not take away the force of the statute de donis conditionalibus, but hee shall forfeit all his fee simple lands, states for life, goods and chattels; and so was it resolved in Trudgin's case.

Car la ley le roy & les briefes le roy, &c. There be three things, as here it appeareth, whereby every subject is protected, viz. rex, lex, & rescripta regis, the king, the law, and the king's writs. The law is the rule, but it is mute. The king judgeth by his judges, and they are the speaking law, lex loquens. The processe and the execution, which is the life of the law, consisteth in the king's writs. So as he, that is out of the protection of the king, cannot be aided or protected by the king's law, or the king's writ. Rex tuetur legem, & lex tuetur jus. [1] Besides men attainted in a præmunire, every person, that is attainted of high treason, petit treason, or felony, is disabled to bring any action: for he is [*] extra legem positus, and is accounted in law civiliter mortuus.

It is to be understood, that there is a generall protection of the king, whereof Littleton here speaketh; and this extends generally to all the king's loyall subjects, denizens and aliens within the realme, whose offences have not made them incapable of it, as before it appeareth. And there is a particular protection by writ, which is one of the king's writs, that Littleton here speaketh of. This particular protection is of two sorts; one, to give a man an immunity or freedom from actions or suits; the second for the safetie of his person, servants and goods, lands and tenements, whereof he is lawfully possessed, from violence, unlawfull molestation or wrong. The first is of right, and by law; the second are all of grace, (saving one) for the generall protection implyeth as much. Of the first sort some are cum clausula (volumus) so called, because the writ hath this word (volumus) in it, viz. volumus quod interim sit quietus de omnibus placitis & querelis, &c. and the other a protection cum clausula (nolumus) so called for the like reason. Of protections cum clausula (volumus) for staying of pleas and suites there be foure kindes, viz. quia profecturus (so called by reason they are part of the words of the writ). 2. Quia moraturus (so named for distinction for the like cause). 3. Quia indebitatus nobis existit of the matter. 4. When any sent into the king's service in warre is imprisoned beyond sea. The former are for staying of actions and suits in generall. The third is for staying of suits of the subject for debts and duties due by the king's debtor to them. Of the fourth you shall reade hereafter in this place. For the former two these nine things are to be observed. First, for what cause they are to be granted. 2. For what persons they are allowable. 3. A three fold time is to be considered, viz. the time of the purchase of them, the time of the continuance of them, and the time when they shall be cast. 4. In what place the service is to be performed. 5. In what actions these protections are allowable. 6. Under what seale and to whom they are directed. 7. Who is to allow, or disallow of them. 8. By whom they are to be cast, and in what manner. 9. How upon just cause they may be repealed or disallowed. I must but point at these matters to make the studious reader capable of them, and referre him to the bookes and other authorities at large being excellent points of learning.

As to the first, it is of two natures, the one concerne services of war as the king's souldier, &c. the other wisdom and counsell, as the king's ambassador or messenger pro negotiis regni. Both these being for the publique good of the realme, private mens actions and suites must be suspended for a convenient time; for, jura publica anteferenda privatis; and againe, jura publica ex privatis promissis decidi non debent. [a] And the cause of granting of the protection must be expressed in the protection, to the end it may appeare to the court that it is granted pro negotiis regni & pro bono publico, [b] or as some others say, pur le common profit del realme. And Britton saith, nostre service, sicome estre en nostre force, & le defence de nous & de nostre people, &c. [*] A man in execution in salva custodia shall not be delivered by a protection.

[c] To the second, these protections are not allowable onely for men of full age, but for men within age, and for women (1), as necessary attendants upon the campe, and that in three cases, quia latrix, seu nutrix, seu obstetrix.

[d] Corporations aggregate of many are not capable of these two protections either pro-futuræ, or moraturæ; because the corporation it selfe is invisible, and resteth onely in [d] 30 E. 3. 1. 21. E. 4. 36. con- 21. E. 3. 97.

(1) A respectable writer, considering women as not requisite in a camp, thinks, that here lord Coke mistakes protections for efforts. Barr. on Ant. Stat. Ir. ed. 154. But, as we apprehend, those, who have been accustomed to a camp-life, will bear testimony to the necessity of each of the three capacities mentioned by lord Coke.

the inheritance posthumous children not born within forty weeks from the husband's death. Britt. 166. a. However, even this writer seems to extend in some degree beyond the forty weeks; unless he meant to make the wife's conception exactly of equal date with the husband's death, which surely is not a very reasonable construction. But without dwelling on such a nicety, it is sufficient, that the principal of the few other authorities in our books are against so rigid a rule. Bracton is very cautious, illegitimizing only the issue born so long after the husband's death, as to create an improbability of its being his child, without naming any fixed period. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 417. b. As to the determined cases, the only authorities of this sort, we meet with, are enumerated in the preceding annotation; and these duly weighed, will not be found, it is apprehended, to warrant lord Coke's conclusion. In Radwell's case, the finding against the issue is expressed to have been grounded merely on presumption; and besides, if we construe the record properly, the presumption arose from proof of the husband's non-access to the wife for a month before his death. The case of 9. E. 2. is an instance of allowing so much time beyond forty weeks, that it seems too strong to have much weight; but so far as it can claim any, it counts against lord Coke. The case of 18. Rich. 2. at first seems full for lord Coke's rule, the child, though born only eleven days beyond the forty weeks having been declared not the issue of the deceased husband. But when it is further considered, there will be found nothing to prove a positive general rule; for it was very special, the widow having married a second husband the day after the death of the first, so that the question was, not though guardianship in the common acceptance of the word trust may be properly so denominated, yet it as surely is not so in the technical

11. H. 7. tit. Præmunire, p. 5.
17. H. 7. Justice Spilmans in Turberville's case. Kelwey, fo.
195. Doct. & Stud. Lib. 2. cap.
32. Brooke, tit. Præmunire, 21.
Temps E. 6. Bishop Barloe's case.
[k] 24. H. 8. Brooke Coron.
196.
[*] 5. Eliz. ca. 1. Hil. 21. El.
Trudgin's case resolved per les Justices. 7. H. 4. 20. Simon Beverley's case.
(Post. 391. 2. Ro. Abr. 177.)

[1] 4. E. 4. 8. 1. E. 4. 1. b. 30.
E. 3. 4. 8. Eliz. Dier 245.
[*] Mich. 9. E. 3. coram rege
Rot. 84. Warw.

Protection. { General.
Particular.
Of the general, vid. 7. Co. Calvin's case per totum.
(F. N. B. 28. B. 1. Leon. 185.
Mo. 239. 2. Ro. Abr. 32.)

[a] 39. H. 6. 39. 3. H. 6. tit.
Protection 2. 13. R. 2. ca. 16.
[b] Mirror cap. 3. Sect. 23. Britton fo. 281. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 7.
8. &c. Bracton.

[*] 5. Marie Dyer 162.

(Cro. Cha. 389.)

[c] 19. H. 6. 51. 30. E. 3. 21.
F. N. B. 28. l. 11. E. 3. Rot.
pat. 3. part for the Countesse of Warw.

[d] 30 E. 3. 1. 21. E. 4. 36.
con- 21. E. 3. 97.

[c] 35. H. 6. 3. 43. E. 3. 23. consideration of lawe. [e] Protection for the husband shall serve also for the wife.

48. E. 3. 7. 4. H. 5. Protection

107.

[f] 45. E. 3. Protection. 37. 3. II

6. 18. 40. 8. H. 6. 16. 9. H. 6.

36. 40. E. 3. 48. 32. E. 3. Protection 44. 21. E. 3. 14. H. 4. 16.

45. E. 3. tit. protection. 40. 14. E.

3. Protection. 66.

(2. Ro. Abr. 324.)

[g] 24. E. 3. 26. 47. E. 3. 5.

5. H. 5. 38. E. 3. 1. F. N. B.

28. g. 20. R. 2. Protection. 106.

22. H. 6. 28. 9. H. 6. 36. 43. E.

3. 36. 17. E. 3. 24. 25. E. 3. 43.

24. E. 3. 26. 13. E. 3. Protection

71. 14. E. 3. ibid. 65. 63. 20. E.

3. ibid. 84.

[h] 7. H. 4. 3. a.

[i] 9. E. 3. protection. 80. 81.

32. E. 3. ibid. 55. 16. E. 2. ibid.

77. 13. E. 3. ibid. 70. 41. E. 3.

ibid. 95. 41. E. 3. 32. 42. E. 3. 9.

5. H. 5. 7. 3. H. 4. 15. 2. R. 2.

Protection. 45. 43. E. 3. ibid. 31.

2. H. 6. 22. 21. H. 6. 41. 38. E.

3. 12. 7. H. 6. 21. 33. E. 3. Protection. 116. 4. H. 4. 4. 29. E. 3.

41. 45. E. 3. 24. 28. 11. E. 4. 7.

F. N. B. 28. k. (11. Co. 5. b.)

[k] 3. H. 6. Protection. 2. 39. H.

6. 39. 44. E. 3. 12. 13. R. 2. ca.

16. 5. H. 4. 16. 11. H. 4. 7.

7. E. 4. 27. 28. H. 6. 1. 17. H.

6. protection. 56. 10. E. 3. 54. 13.

E. 3. Amerciament. 18. 7. Co. 7.

8. Calvin's case. 13. R. 2. cap. 16.

(2. Ro. Abr. 322. Ante 69. b.)

[l] 4. H. 6. 22. 17. E. 3. 76.

33. E. 3. tit. Protection. 115. 34. E.

3. ibid. 124. 27. E. 3. 79. 29. E.

3. Protection. 85. 88. 2. E. 4. 15.

19. E. 3. Protection. 82. 79. 13. E.

3. ibid. 72. 9. E. 3. 21. 3. H.

6. 55. 4. H. 6. 22. 11. H. 6. 14.

14. H. 6. 22. 21. H. 6. 10. 27.

H. 6. 4. 28. H. 6. 1. 35. H. 6.

58. 44. E. 3. 2. 16. 48. E. 3. 8.

7. H. 4. 5. 14. H. 4. 23. 27. E.

3. 78.

[m] 22. E. 3. 4. 16. E. 3. Protection. 47. 44. E. 3. 16. 3. E. 3.

Amerciament. 18. 34. E. 3. Protection. 121.

[n] 39. H. 6. 39. F. N. B. fol.

28. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 8. Temps.

E. 1. G and cape 26.

(Post. 254. b.)

[o] Brit. 10. 282. 283. & 280.

Fleta lib. 6. cap. 8. Accord.

[p] 7. E. 3. 25.

[q] 7. Co. 8. Calvin's case. 7. E.

4. 29. F. N. B. 38. c. g. h. 7. H.

4. 14. 19. H. 6. 35. 38. H. 6.

3. 32. H. 6. 3. R. 2. Rot. Parliament. nu. 21. 22. E. 4. Protection. 18. 8. R. 2. ibid. 125. 11.

H. 4. 57. Regist. judic. 14. 36.

H. 6. tit. Protection. 27. 6. R. 2.

ibid. 14. Regist. orig. 38. fape.

[r] Bract. lib. 5. 139. 140. Brit.

ten 181. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 7. 8.

&c. 14. E. 2. Protection. 109. 34.

E. 3. ibid. 122. 19. E. 3. ibid.

78. 33. E. 3. ibid. 99. 21. E.

3. 12.

[s] 10. H. 6. Protection. 105.

[f] Albeit the vouchee, tenant by reſceit, preſee in aide, or garniſhee, bee no parties to the writ, yet before they appeare a protection may be caſt for them; becauſe when the demandant grants the voucher or reſceit, in judgment of law they are made privie. But if the demandant counterplead the voucher or receit, then untill it be adjudged for them, and ſo privie in law, a protection cannot be caſt for them. And ſo it is of the garniſhee, a protection may be caſt for him at the day of the returne of the ſcire facias. [g] No protection can be caſt for the demandant or plaintife; becauſe the tenant or defendant cannot ſue a re-ſommons, or a re-attachment, but the plaintife onely, that ſued out the ſummons or attachment, &c. muſt ſue alſo the re-ſommons or re-attachment. And ſo it is of an actor in nature of a plaintife, &c. as the garniſhee after appearance, and an avowant, and the like. [h] An officer of the king's receit, or any other officer in any court of record, whoſe attendance is neceſſary for the king's ſervice or adminiſtration of juſtice, being ſued, cannot have a protection caſt for him.

